Scope

This chapter deals with agreements with real estate brokers and agents. The Legal Background discusses the regulation of brokers and salespersons and the nature of the agency relationship between brokers and sellers or buyers of real property. Further, it examines in detail the requirements governing listing agreements. The Legal Background also covers broker-salesperson and finder's agreements. The Transaction Guide includes lists of information and documents needed to draft listing and broker-salesperson agreements, important transactional and contractual determinations the attorney should make before drafting or approving these agreements, and procedures for drafting and executing the agreements and satisfying related reporting requirements. The Forms part contains several complete listing agreements prepared by the California Association of Realtors and additional provisions and related forms that may be incorporated into or used in conjunction with those complete agreements. Other forms included in this chapter include disclosures of agency relationships, a complete broker-salesperson contract, finder's agreements, and official forms that may be used to report changes affecting brokers and salespersons.

For discussion of employment contracts in general, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements . For discussion of the legal status of employees and independent contractors, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors , and Ch. 85, Employment Contracts . For discussion of real estate brokers, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, chs. 60- 64 (Matthew Bender).

Related topics not discussed in detail in this chapter are options to purchase real property, agreements to sell real property, and exchanges of real property. These topics are discussed in Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property , Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements , and Ch. 24, Exchanges of Real Property .

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.10

§ 21.10 Real Estate Brokers

[1] Definition and Activities

A real estate broker is a person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation (regardless of the form or time of payment), does (or negotiates to do) one or more of the following acts for another or others:

(1) Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, solicits prospective sellers or purchasers of, solicits or obtains listings of, or negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property or a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a)].

(2) Leases or rents or offers to lease or rent, or places for rent, or solicits listings of places for rent, or solicits for prospective tenants, or negotiates the sale, purchase, or exchange of leases on real property, or on a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10167.2(a) (broker may operate prepaid rental listing service); see also Ch. 34A, Prelease Forms].

(3) Collects rents from real property, or improvements on real property, or from business opportunities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(b)].

(4) Assists or offers to assist in filing an application for the purchase or lease of, or in locating or entering on, lands owned by the state or federal government [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(c)].

(5) Solicits borrowers or lenders for or negotiates loans, or collects payments or performs services for borrowers or lenders or note owners in connection with loans secured directly or collaterally by liens on real property or on a business opportunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(d); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10240, 10241 ("mortgage broker" must give written disclosure statement to borrower); see also Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans].

(6) Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, or exchanges or offers to exchange, a real property sales contract or a promissory note secured directly or collaterally by a lien on real property or on a business opportunity, and performs services for the holders thereof [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(e); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10232-10232.2 (annual filing requirements of brokers who conduct transactions pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131(d), (e), 10131.1); see also Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans].

Real estate brokers may also engage in other business activities that are beyond the scope of this chapter, such as selling or exchanging real property sales contracts or promissory notes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1]; receiving or collecting advance fees in connection with advance fee listings or contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.2]; and issuing, or soliciting buyers or sellers for, noncorporate securities, such as interests in limited partnerships, joint ventures, and unincorporated associations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3; see Corp. Code § 25206]. They may also sell mobilehomes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.6(a); see Ch. 40, Mobilehomes].

A real estate broker employed as a broker must be licensed as such by the State of California [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10136, 10137, 10151; see § 21.12; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1 (persons or entities exempt from licensing requirements)].

[2] Business Entities as Real Estate Brokers

Certain business entities may act as brokers. A corporation may, for example, be licensed as a broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10158, 10211]. A license issued to a corporation entitles one officer of the corporation to engage in the business of real estate broker on behalf of the corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10211]. The designated officer is licensed to act as a broker, but only while employed by the corporation and only in his or her capacity as an officer of the corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10159]. The authorized officer must be designated in the corporation's license application [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10211]. Additional fees are required if more than one officer is to engage in the real estate business on behalf of the corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10211].

Partnerships may perform acts for which real estate broker's licenses are required, but every partner through whom the partnership performs such acts must be individually licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137.1].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Regulation and Activities of Brokers, Salespersons, and Finders

§ 21.11 Real Estate Salespersons

A real estate salesperson is a natural person who, for compensation (or in expectation of compensation), is employed by a licensed real estate broker to do one or more of the acts that real estate brokers are authorized to do [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10017 ("salesman" means "salesperson"); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131-10131.4, 10131.6 (real estate brokers' activities); § 21.10]. A salesperson is the broker's agent and cannot act independently of the broker [Grand v. Griesinger (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 397, 406, 325 P.2d 475] . Every broker who employs a salesperson has a duty to exercise reasonable supervision over the salesperson's activities; and, if the broker fails to exercise reasonable supervision, the broker's license may be suspended or revoked [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. A salesperson may not be employed by, or accept compensation from, any person other than the broker under whom the salesperson is at the time licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137].

As used in the Real Estate Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq.] and in the regulations of the Real Estate Commissioner, the word "salesman" means "salesperson" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10017]. Any real estate licensee [see § 21.12] may choose to refer to his or her licensed status as "real estate salesman," "real estate saleswoman," or "real estate salesperson" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10017].

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.11A

§ 21.11A Persons Who Assist Brokers With Mortgage Loan Transactions

Certain individuals who assist brokers with regard to mortgage loan transactions are excluded from the definition of real estate broker. This includes persons who solicit borrowers or lenders, negotiate loans, collect payments, or perform services for borrowers or lenders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(1)]. Specifically, a real estate broker's employee who, on behalf of the broker, assists the broker in meeting the broker's obligations to customers in residential mortgage loan transactions, when the lender is an institutional lender [see Fin. Code § 50003], is not treated as a real estate broker, provided the employee does not participate in any negotiations occurring between the principals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(1)]. However, a broker must exercise reasonable supervision and control over the activities of the nonlicensed employees and must comply with the branch office licensing requirements for each location where the nonlicensed persons are employed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10163]. In any case, these provisions do not restrict the ability of the Real Estate Commissioner to discipline a broker or corporate broker licensee or its designated officer, or both the corporate broker licensee and its designated officer, for misconduct of a nonlicensed employee, or to adopt, amend, or repeal rules or regulations governing the employment or supervision of an employee who is a nonlicensed person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 21 AGREEMENTS WITH REAL ESTATE BROKERS AND AGENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Regulation and Activities of Brokers, Salespersons, and Finders

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.12

§ 21.12 License Requirements and Penalties

[1] In General

Real estate brokers [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10012, 10015, 10131-10131.6; see also § 21.10] and real estate salespersons [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10013, 10016, 10017, 10132; see also § 21.11] must be licensed by the Department of Real Estate [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10136, 10137, 10151; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1 (persons or entities exempt from licensing requirements)]. Any person who acts as a real estate broker or salesperson (or who advertises using words indicating that he or she is a real estate broker) without a license is guilty of a public offense punishable by a fine and/or imprisonment in the county jail [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10139]. Similarly, any person who pays any other person for performing acts for which a real estate broker's or salesperson's license is required is guilty of a misdemeanor if the person paid is not known to be (or does not present evidence that he or she is) a regularly licensed real estate broker at the time the compensation is earned [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10138]. In addition, the commissioner may fine (up to $10,000) any real estate broker who, following a license disciplinary hearing, is found to have violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137 by employing or compensating a person not licensed as a real estate broker or a real estate salesperson to solicit borrowers or lenders for or negotiate loans secured directly or collaterally by liens on real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10139.5].

No one engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a real estate broker or salesperson in California may collect compensation for the performance of any acts for which a license is required without first alleging and proving that he or she was duly licensed at the time the cause of action arose [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136]. The purpose of this rule is to protect the public from the perils of dealing with incompetent or untrustworthy persons [Cline v. Yamaga (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 239, 246, 158 Cal. Rptr. 598] . However, the rule will not be construed so literally as to permit the avoidance of a just obligation [Estate of Baldwin (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 596, 605, 110 Cal. Rptr. 189] . A broker who was licensed when he or she performed the services for which compensation is claimed may, for example, recover even though the broker was not licensed when the claim to the compensation matured [see Cline v. Yamaga (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 239, 245-246, 158 Cal. Rptr. 598] . Similarly, recovery is allowed when a corporation conducting a real estate brokerage was not duly licensed, provided the corporate officer who actually performed the services was duly licensed [see Estate of Baldwin (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 596, 605, 110 Cal. Rptr. 189] .

[2] Denial, Suspension, or Revocation of License

A real estate license may be denied, suspended, or revoked for any of the causes specified by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480, 490, 10177]. For example, these statutes authorize denial, suspension, or revocation if a licensee or applicant has done any of the following:

- Procured or attempted to procure or renew a license (for the applicant, the licensee, or for another person) by fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or material misstatement of fact [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(a)].

- Entered a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to, or been found guilty of, or been convicted of, a felony, or a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a real estate licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480(a), 490, 10177(b); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2910(criteria of substantial relationship)].

- Done any act involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or dishonest dealing [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480(a)(2), 10177(j)].

- Willfully disregarded or violated any of specified provisions of the Business and Professions and Corporations Codes relating to real estate or the rules and regulations of the Real Estate Commissioner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(d), (m)].

- Had a license issued by another agency of California, another state, or the federal government that was revoked or suspended for acts that, if done by a real estate licensee, would be grounds for the suspension or revocation of a California real estate license, if the action of denial, revocation, or suspension was taken after giving the licensee or applicant fair notice of the charges, an opportunity for a hearing, and other due process protections [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(f); see Berg v. Davi (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 223, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803 (Department of Real Estate properly rejected application for real estate salesperson's license based on applicant's disbarment as attorney)].

- Violated the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.] or the regulations of the Commissioner of Corporations pertaining to that law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(n)].

- Demonstrated negligence or incompetence in performing any act for which a license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(g)].

- As a broker, failed to exercise reasonable supervision of the activities of his or her salespersons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)].

- Violated provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10237 et seq., concerning the claim of exemption from securities qualification, and governing sale of or offer to sell a series of notes secured directly by an interest in the same real property, or the sale of undivided interests in a note secured directly by real property equivalent to a series transactions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(p)].

- Violated, or failed to comply with, the provisions of Civ. Code § 2920 et seq., related to mortgages [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(q)].

A license may be denied only if the act alleged to constitute grounds for denial is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the real estate business or profession [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 480(a)(3)(B)]. For purposes of denial, suspension, or revocation, a "conviction" includes a plea of guilty or a conviction following a plea of nolo contendere [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480(a)(1), 490, 10177(b)]. However, if conviction of a crime is the alleged ground for denial, suspension, or revocation, competent evidence must show that the present qualification of the applicant is in some manner rationally and substantially related to the earlier offense [Pieri v. Fox (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 802, 807, 158 Cal. Rptr. 256 ; see Arneson v. Fox (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 440, 451, 170 Cal. Rptr. 778, 621 P.2d 817 (evidence sufficient to show substantial relationship)]. Proof of commission of a crime, even a crime involving turpitude, is not enough, unless there is additional evidence establishing this rational and substantial relationship [Pieri v. Fox (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 802, 807, 158 Cal. Rptr. 256] .

In addition, the Real Estate Commissioner may suspend or revoke a real estate license held by, or may deny the issuance of a license to, a corporation if an officer, director, or person owning or controlling 10 percent or more of the stock of the corporation commits any of the acts prohibited by Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177].

Further, a real estate license may be suspended or revoked if the licensee, while acting as an agent for a buyer of real property, fails to disclose to the buyer the nature and extent of any direct or indirect ownership interest of the licensee in the real property. The licensee must also disclose the direct or indirect ownership of the property by (1) a person related to the licensee by blood or marriage, (2) an entity in which the licensee has an ownership interest, or (3) any other person with whom the licensee occupies a special relationship [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o); see § 21.213].

If a real estate broker that is a corporation has not done any act specified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177, either directly or through its employees, agents, officers, directors, or persons owning or controlling 10 percent or more of the corporation's stock, the Real Estate Commissioner may not deny the issuance of a real estate license to, or suspend or revoke the real estate license of, the corporation, if any offending officer, director, or stockholder who has done the prohibited acts individually, and not on behalf of the corporation, has been completely disassociated from any affiliation or ownership in the corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177].

An investigation into the conduct of a real estate licensee may be initiated by the Department of Real Estate (DRE) on its own information or by any person alleging in a verified, written complaint that the licensee's actions constitute grounds for license suspension or revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177.5]. A contested case may be originally heard by the DRE or, at the discretion of the DRE, by an administrative law judge [Gov. Code § 11517(a)]. If a contested case is originally heard by the DRE, an administrative law judge must be present during the consideration of the case and, if requested, must assist and advise the DRE in the conduct of the hearing. In addition, no member of the DRE who did not hear the evidence may vote on the decision, and the DRE must issue its decision within 100 days of submission of the case [Gov. Code § 11517(b)]. If a contested case is originally heard by an administrative law judge alone, the judge must prepare a proposed decision within 30 days after the case is submitted to him or her, and must follow all other statutory requirements governing the timing and form of the decision [Gov. Code § 11517(c); see § 64.90[1]].

A real estate licensee against whom an investigation is pending or an accusation has been filed pursuant to Gov. Code § 11503 may petition the Commissioner to voluntarily surrender his or her license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10100.2]. The surrender of a license becomes effective on acceptance by the Commissioner. The former licensee may be relicensed only by petitioning for reinstatement pursuant to Gov. Code § 11522. When deciding a petition for reinstatement, the Commissioner may consider all relevant evidence, including affidavits [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10100.2]. For additional discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 64, Licensing and Discipline of Brokers (Matthew Bender).

[3] Legal Presence

[a] Required of All Applicants

An applicant for an original real estate broker license (or other type of real estate license, including a real estate broker officer license, a real estate salesperson license, a prepaid rental listing service license, and a mineral, oil, and gas broker license), and a renewal of any of these licenses that has not been previously qualified pursuant to the regulatory requirements discussed throughout this subsection [see [d], below], must provide the Department of Real Estate with proof of the applicant's legal presence in the United States [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. A similar requirement applies to applicants for payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account [see § 21.13[6]]. These requirements became operative on August 1, 1998, and were promulgated by the Department of Real Estate (DRE) pursuant to federal legislation that eliminated certain public benefits for illegal immigrants [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718; see 8 U.S.C. § 1621; see also 8 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.].

[b] Required Documents

To satisfy the DRE requirements, the applicant must submit the "State Public Benefits Statement" (DRE Form 205) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(1)], on which the applicant must declare himself or herself to be one of the following:

- A citizen of the United States;

- A qualified alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(d) (definition of "qualified alien," which includes alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence or granted asylum under Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.)];

- A nonimmigrant alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(e) (adopting definition of this term set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15))]; or

- An alien paroled into the United States for less than one year under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5) (Section 212(d)(5) of the Immigration and Nationality Act).

An alien not in one of these categories is not eligible for a real estate license [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(b)].

In addition, the applicant must present documents that are acceptable to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), formerly called the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), and are included in List A or List B of DRE Form 205 (List A sets forth acceptable documents to establish U.S. citizenship, such as a birth certificate; List B identifies documents that may be submitted by an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence under the Immigration and Nationality Act, such as a "green card"). These documents will serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(2); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(g), (i) (circumstances under which documents must be submitted to USCIS for verification through Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements (SAVE) system or alternative verification-related procedures must be followed)]. The applicant may present the documents before applying for the license [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(h)].

When the documents presented appear on their face not to be genuine or not to relate to the individual presenting them, the government entity that originally issued the documents must be contacted for verification. With regard to naturalized citizens and derivative citizens presenting certificates of citizenship and aliens, the DRE will request verification from USCIS. If the applicant has lost the original documents, presents expired documents, or is unable to present any documents evidencing his or her immigration status, the applicant will be referred to the local USCIS office to obtain documentation [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(3), (j); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(k) (requiring acceptance of USCIS verification, and denial of benefits if USCIS cannot verify applicant's status)].

When an alien has completed and signed the State Public Benefits Statement under penalty of perjury and has presented documents issued by the USCIS that serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status, eligibility for a real estate license must not be delayed, denied, reduced, or terminated while the status of the alien is verified [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(l)].

Any denial of a real estate license or license endorsement pursuant to the above provisions will be subject to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act [Gov. Code § 11340 et seq.] governing formal hearings [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(o); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10100; see also Gov. Code § 11500 et seq. (hearing provisions)].

[d] Proof of Legal Presence for License Renewal or Extension

Any applicant for a license renewal who has not already satisfied the proof of legal presence requirements set forth in the Real Estate Commissioner's regulations must do so in order to obtain a renewal [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718; see § 21.12[3][a]-[c]]. A qualified alien without permanent status must provide this proof for each renewal of a license [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(c)]. United States citizens and aliens with permanent status need to submit this proof only once [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. The applicant may present the required documents before applying for the renewal [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(h)].

If an applicant for a timely renewal of a license has submitted, in good faith, evidence of eligibility pursuant to the regulatory requirements that the applicant has reason to believe would qualify him or her for renewal, but the Department finds that the evidence submitted may not qualify, the Department may extend the license for 90 days in order to allow the applicant to submit additional evidence of eligibility that satisfies the regulatory requirements [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(n)(1)].

If an applicant has received an extension, the Department may grant an additional extension not to exceed 60 days in order to allow the applicant to submit additional evidence of eligibility, provided (1) the applicant submits a written request for such an extension, (2) the request establishes good cause, and (3) the applicant provides proof that he or she has complied with the statutory continuing education requirements [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(n)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10170 et seq.].

When the license is issued during or at the end of one of these extensions, it will expire four years from the date otherwise applicable as if no extension had been granted [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(n)(3)].

[4] Real Estate Licensing Laws Not Applicable to Certain Persons Advertising or Disseminating Information on Internet

A Department of Real Estate regulation specifies when the real estate licensing laws do not apply to persons who advertise or disseminate information about "services" over the internet, the world wide web, or similar electronic common carrier systems [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2770]. For these purposes, "services" means any activity for which a real estate license is required and that is offered or provided to a customer located in California [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2770(a)(2); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2770(a)(1) ("customer" means person located in California on whose behalf service is provided or offered or to whom advertisement is directed)].

These persons will not be deemed to be engaged in the business of, acting in the capacity of, advertising as, or assuming to act as a real estate broker in California if any of the following apply [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2770(b)]:

- The advertisement or information involves a service, but it (1) is not directed to any particular person or customer located in California, (2) is limited to general information about the services offered to customers or the public in general, and (3) includes the following legend: "The services referred to herein are not available to persons located within the State of California."

- The advertisement or information does not involve a service provided in connection with activity for which a real estate license is required.

- The advertisement or information is not being published, circulated, or transmitted on behalf of another or others.

- The person is engaged exclusively in advertising and performs no other acts requiring a real estate license; and (1) the person conducting the advertising does not compile or represent that he or she will compile information about specific parties in a real estate transaction; (2) the fee charged for the advertising is consistent with fees charged for similar advertising services; and (3) the advertisements provide for direct contact between prospective parties to a real estate transaction or contact through a licensed California real estate broker.

A person who advertises or disseminates information with respect to providing a service is not required to have a real estate broker license if any of the following apply [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2770(c)]:

- The person publishing, circulating, or transmitting the advertisement or disseminating the information is acting within the exemptions from the definition of real estate broker contained in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10133 and 10133.1.

- The services provided do not include any of the acts within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131, 10131.1, 10131.2, 10131.3, 10131.4, 10131.45, and 10131.6 (that is, acts that require a license).

- Both of the following requirements are met:

  - Before any direct electronic communication or any response or contact with a specific customer, barriers or other implemented policies and procedures are in place, designed to ensure that before the response or contact, the person making it is appropriately licensed under the Real Estate law or qualifies for an exemption from real estate broker licensure.

  - There is a legend in all advertising and information disseminated about services offered, indicating whether the person making the advertising or disseminating the information is a licensed California real estate broker. If the person is not a licensed broker, the following additional legend must be included: "The services are not available to persons located within the State of California."

[1] In General

The Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq.] was established under authority of the Real Estate Commissioner to provide indemnification for certain losses suffered by victims of fraud and other misconduct perpetrated by real estate brokers and salespersons [see Froid v. Fox (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838, 183 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; Circle Oaks Sales Co. v. Smith (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 682, 685, 94 Cal. Rptr. 232] . It is funded from license fees [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10450.6, 10470] supplemented, when necessary, with transfers from the Real Estate Fund [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470.1].

For a general consideration of recovery from the Real Estate Fund, refer to California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 63, Duties and Liabilities of Brokers (Matthew Bender). For forms and procedure for recovery, refer to California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 103, Brokers (Matthew Bender)

[2] Applications for Payment

An application for payment from the Recovery Account may be made by an aggrieved person who has obtained a final judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction (including, but not limited to, a criminal restitution order issued pursuant to Penal Code § 1202.4(f) or 18 U.S.C. § 3663) or an arbitration award against a licensed broker or salesperson based on the licensee's fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit, made with intent to defraud, or conversion of trust funds arising directly out of a transaction that (1) did not violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137 (prohibiting the employment by brokers of unlicensed persons for the performance of acts requiring a license and placing related restrictions on the employment and compensation of salespersons) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 10138 (making it a misdemeanor for a person to pay for acts for which a real estate broker's or salesperson's license is required, if person paid is not known to be licensed as a real estate broker at the time the compensation is earned), and (2) involved the performance by the licensee of acts for which the license was required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10137, 10138]. A "court of competent jurisdiction" includes the federal courts, but does not include the courts of another state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471]. For this purpose, misrepresentation includes both intentional and negligent misrepresentation [Andrepont v. Meeker (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 878, 884-886, 204 Cal. Rptr. 887] . Whether a broker's misrepresentation was negligent is a question of fact based on the particular circumstances of the case. The determination must take into account the broker's statutory duty to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent inspection of the property for sale as well as the broker's duty to place a listing or give information that is accurate and based on the knowledge that the broker had or should have had at the time [Furla v. Jon Douglas Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1077, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911 ; see Civ. Code §§ 1088, 2079(a)].

The language "performed acts for which that license was required" in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a) limits recovery to transactions that fall within the purview of the specific license held by the judgment debtor. In other words, a broker must perform acts for which a broker's license is required, and a salesperson much perform acts for which a salesperson's license is required. If the defendant's acts exceed the scope of his or her license, recovery is not permitted from the Recovery Account [Davis v. Harris (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 507, 511-512, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591 (judgment creditors not entitled to recovery because judgment debtor was salesperson and performed acts for which broker's license was required)].

Applications for payment from the Recovery Account may also be based on a stipulated judgment [Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] . This is so because relief will be granted under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471, unless to do so is clearly forbidden by statute, and nothing in the Recovery Account statutes prohibits applications from being based on a stipulated judgment [Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] .

The application for payment must, among other things, set forth a detailed narrative statement of the facts upon which the judgment is based [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(4)], a statement that the underlying complaint was prosecuted "conscientiously and in good faith" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(5)(A)], and a statement that the applicant has complied with statutory requirements for recovery from the Fund [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(B)].

For the purpose of an application based on a criminal restitution order, the claimant must make all of the following statements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(5)(B)]:

- The claimant has not intentionally and without good cause failed to pursue any person potentially liable to the claimant in the underlying transaction, other than a defendant who is the subject of the criminal restitution order.

- The claimant has not intentionally and without good cause failed to pursue in a civil action for damages all persons potentially liable to the claimant in the underlying transaction who otherwise reasonably appeared capable of responding in damages, other than a defendant who is the subject of a criminal restitution order.

- The claimant employed no other procedural means contrary to the diligent prosecution of the complaint in order to seek to qualify for the Recovery Account.

The application must also contain a description of searches and inquiries conducted by or on behalf of the claimant with respect to the judgment debtor's assets liable to be sold or applied to satisfaction of the judgment, an itemized valuation of the assets discovered, and the results of actions by the claimant to have the assets applied to satisfaction of the judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(D)]. It must contain a statement that the claimant has diligently pursued collection efforts against other judgment debtors and all other persons liable to the claimant in the transaction that is the basis for the underlying judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(E)], a statement that the underlying judgment has not been discharged in bankruptcy or declared nondischargeable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(F); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(d)], and a statement that the application was mailed or delivered to the Department of Real Estate no later than one year after the underlying judgment became final [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(G)]. An application for payment from the Recovery Account that is based on a criminal restitution order must comply with all requirements specified above. For the purpose of an application based on a criminal restitution order, "judgment" means the criminal restitution order, "complaint" means the facts of the underlying transaction on which the criminal restitution order is based, and "judgment debtor" means any defendant who is the subject of the criminal restitution order [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(e)].

The application must be mailed or delivered to the Department of Real Estate no later than one year after the underlying judgment became final [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(G)].

[3] Amount of Recovery

Recovery from the fund is limited by statute according to the date on which the cause of action arose and the number of transactions and licensees for which claims are made. The statutory limitations apply regardless of the number of persons aggrieved, the number of parcels of real estate involved in a transaction, or the number of judgments against a particular licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474].

The liability of the Recovery Account will not exceed $50,000 for any one transaction and $250,000 for any one licensee, for causes of action occurring on or after January 1, 2009, or $20,000 for any one transaction and $100,000 for any one licensee, for causes of action occurring before that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(a),(b)]. Recovery is limited in every case to the amount unpaid on the judgment that represents an actual and direct loss to the claimant in the transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)]. Accordingly, exemplary or punitive damages that were included in the underlying judgment may not be included in an award against the Fund [Circle Oaks Sales Co. v. Smith (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 682, 685, 94 Cal. Rptr. 232] . Similarly, if the claimants received tax benefits in the transaction, the tax benefits must be deducted from the claimed loss to determine the appropriate amount of recovery from the Fund [Froid v. Fox (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838-839, 183 Cal. Rptr. 461] .

When multiple licensed real estate personnel are involved in a transaction and the individual conduct of two or more of the licensees results in a judgment triggering the right to apply for payment from the Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a); see also § 21.13[2]], the claimant may seek recovery from the Recovery Account based on the judgment against any of the licensed real estate personnel [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(c)]. This right is subject to (1) the monetary limitations based on the date the cause of action arose [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(a), (b)], and (2) the requirement that the claimant diligently pursue, prior to the application for payment from the Account, collection efforts against other judgment debtors and all other persons liable to the claimant in the transaction that is the basis for the underlying judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(E)].

Because the purpose of the Recovery Account is to protect innocent members of the public from the misconduct of real estate licensees [see Edmonds v. Augustyn (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1056, 1062, 238 Cal. Rptr. 704] , certain persons are barred from recovery. Neither the spouse of the judgment debtor nor a personal representative of the spouse may recover [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)(A)]. Similarly, there may be no recovery from the Fund when both the claimant and the judgment debtor are real estate licensees, and the only basis for recovery is a dispute as to the division of fees [Middelsteadt v. Karpe (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 297, 302-304, 124 Cal. Rptr. 840] . There can be no recovery when the judgment debtor was acting as a principal rather than an agent at the time of the alleged misconduct [Stout v. Edmonds (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 66, 69-70, 225 Cal. Rptr. 345 ; Froid v. Fox (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 832, 840-842, 183 Cal. Rptr. 461] .

Although the fact that the claimant is a real estate licensee will not of itself bar that claimant from recovery against another licensee who was acting as a licensee at the time of the alleged misconduct, the claimant's license and real estate experience will be germane to the issues of lack of knowledge and justifiable reliance [Buccella v. Mayo (1980) 102

Cal. App. 3d 315, 327 n.7, 162 Cal. Rptr. 369] .

[5] Effect of Recovery on License of Broker or Salesperson

Payment of any amount from the Recovery Account will automatically suspend the license of the broker or salesperson whose misconduct gave rise to the payment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10475]. The license cannot be reinstated until the licensee has fully reimbursed the Fund for the amount of the payment plus interest at the prevailing legal rate applicable to a court judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10475]. A discharge in bankruptcy will not relieve a person from the suspension [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10475].

[6] Proof of Legal Presence

In addition to satisfying the requirements set forth in § 21.13[1]-[5], an applicant for a payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account must provide the Department of Real Estate (DRE) with proof of the applicant's legal presence in the United States [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. A similar requirement applies to applicants for a real estate license [see § 21.12[3]]. These requirements became operative August 1, 1998, and were promulgated by the DRE pursuant to federal legislation that eliminated certain public benefits for illegal immigrants [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718; see 8 U.S.C. § 1621; see also 8 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.].

To satisfy the DRE requirements, an applicant for payment must submit the "State Public Benefits Statement" (DRE Form 205) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(1)], on which the applicant must declare himself or herself to be one of the following:

- A citizen of the United States;
- A qualified alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(d) (definition of "qualified alien," which includes alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence or granted asylum under Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.)];
- A nonimmigrant alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(e) (adopting definition set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15))]; or
- An alien paroled into the United States for less than one year under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5) (Section 212(d)(5) of the Immigration and Nationality Act).

An alien not in one of these categories is not eligible to receive a payment from the Recovery Account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(b)].

In addition, the applicant must present documents that are acceptable to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), formerly called the Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS), and are included in List A or List B of DRE Form 205 (List A sets forth acceptable documents to establish U.S. citizenship, such as a birth certificate; List B identifies documents that may be submitted by an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence under the Immigration and Nationality Act, such as a "green card"). These documents will serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(2); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(g), (i) (circumstances under which documents must be submitted to USCIS for verification through Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements (SAVE) system or alternative verification-related procedures must be followed)].

When the documents presented appear on their face not to be genuine or not to relate to the individual presenting them, the government entity that originally issued the documents must be contacted for verification [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(3), (j)]. With regard to naturalized citizens and derivative citizens presenting certificates of citizenship and aliens, the DRE will request verification from the USCIS. If the applicant has lost the original documents, presents expired documents, or is unable to present any documents evidencing his or her immigration status, the applicant will be referred to the local USCIS office to obtain documentation [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(3), (j); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(k) (requiring acceptance of USCIS verification, and denial of benefits if USCIS cannot verify applicant's status)]. The applicant may present documents that serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status before applying for payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(h)].

Any denial of a payment application pursuant to the above provisions will be subject to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act [Gov. Code § 11340 et seq.] governing formal hearings [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(o); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10100; see also Gov. Code § 11500 et seq. (hearing provisions)].

A. Regulation and Activities of Brokers, Salespersons, and Finders

"Finders" are persons who bring together others (including buyers, sellers, borrowers, and lenders) so that they may negotiate for and eventually enter into contracts [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . A finder is not an agent; a finder is in business for himself or herself and owes no obligation to any principal [Zalk v. General Exploration Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 786, 793, 164 Cal. Rptr. 647] . Thus, no fiduciary relationship is created between a finder and his or her employer, and the finder may well be employed as a finder by both buyer and seller [McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 811, 285 P.2d 261] .

A finder's only duty and power under his or her contract of employment is to find and introduce a prospective purchaser or a prospective seller to his or her employer. A finder does not have the power to negotiate the terms on which his or her employer or employers will deal [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] .

A finder need not be licensed as a real estate broker [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . In California, the courts have long permitted finders to recover fees for their services in real estate transactions without first obtaining real estate licenses [see Shaffer v. Beinhorn (1923) 190 Cal. 569, 573-574, 213 P. 960 ; Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 ; Grant v. Marinell (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 617, 619, 169 Cal. Rptr. 414 ; but see Civ. Code § 1624; Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258 n.6, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 (fee agreement must be in writing, signed by party to be charged)]. To recover a finder's fee, however, an unlicensed person must limit his or her services to bringing other parties together, and must leave negotiation and completion of the transaction to others [see Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 12, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . The distinction between a finder (who need not be licensed) and a broker or salesperson (who must be licensed) frequently turns upon whether the finder has been given authority or has undertaken duties beyond merely bringing the parties together [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 ; see § 21.10 (real estate broker)].

§ 21.15 Discriminatory Practices Prohibited by California Fair Employment and Housing Act

Under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], it is unlawful to engage in specified discriminatory practices in housing accommodations or employment on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or sexual orientation [see Gov. Code § 12955]. Discrimination on these bases is against public policy [Gov. Code § 12920], and the opportunity to seek, obtain, and hold housing without discrimination is a civil right [Gov. Code § 12921(b); see Civ. Code § 51]. The Department of Fair Employment and Housing is authorized to take remedial and preventive actions [Gov. Code § 12901], such as to use the services of all governmental departments and agencies, including conciliation councils with regard to housing discrimination, and to receive, investigate, and conciliate complaints alleging discriminatory practices [Gov. Code § 12930(d), (f)]. For example, with regard to real estate transactions, it is unlawful for any person, organization, or entity to do any of the following [Gov. Code § 12955(i)-(k)]:

- Discriminate against any person in making available a transaction, or in the terms and conditions of a transaction, based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics;

- Deny a person access to, or membership or participation in, a multiple listing service, real estate brokerage organization, or other service based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics; or

- Otherwise make unavailable or deny a dwelling based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics.

Any real estate licensee who negotiates or arranges, or attempts to negotiate or arrange, or otherwise offers to perform, a modification or any other form of lender forbearance respecting a loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on residential real property containing four or fewer dwelling units, for which a fee or other compensation is paid by the borrower, must provide the following statement to the borrower, as a separate document, in not less than 14-point bold type, before entering into any fee agreement with the borrower: "It is not necessary to pay a third party to arrange for a loan modification or other form of forbearance from your mortgage lender or servicer. You may call your lender directly to ask for a change in your loan terms. Nonprofit housing counseling agencies also offer these and other forms of borrower assistance free of charge. A list of nonprofit housing counseling agencies approved by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is available from your local HUD office or by visiting www.hud.gov" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.6(a), (d); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.6(c) (violation of code section is offense); see also Civ. Code § 2944.6 (same provisions as Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.6 but applicable to all persons)]. If the loan modification or other lender forbearance services are offered or negotiated in one of the languages set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 1632, a translated copy of the statement must be provided to the borrower in that language [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.6(b)].

Until January 1, 2013 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10085.6(d)], notwithstanding any other provision of law, it is unlawful for any real estate licensee who negotiates or arranges, or attempts to negotiate or arrange, or otherwise offers to perform, a modification or any other form of lender forbearance respecting a loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on residential real property containing four or fewer dwelling units, for which a fee or other compensation is paid by the borrower, to do any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10085.6(a), (c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10085.6(b) (violation of code section is offense); *see also Civ. DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Agency Relationship

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.20

§ 21.20 Nature of Relationship

[1] Broker as Agent

The relationship between a broker and his or her client ordinarily is that of principal and agent, with the broker being a form of special agent [Rhode v. Bartholomew (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 272, 278, 210 P.2d 768 ; see Civ. Code § 2297 ("special agent" is an agent for a particular act or transaction)]. A special agent has only the authority actually or ostensibly conferred upon him or her by the principal [Civ. Code § 2315; see Civ. Code §§ 2316, 2317 (actual and ostensible authority)]. Other general principles of agency law are also applicable to real estate brokers [see Civ. Code § 2295 et seq.].

An agency relationship in a real estate context is a strict fiduciary relationship that requires the broker to act in the principal's best interest [Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 733, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800 ; see Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . Further, a broker/agent in a residential real property transaction must comply with various statutory requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.12-2079.24] that, among other things, specify permissible types of agency relationships [see § 21.20[2]] and impose disclosure obligations [see § 21.20[3]]. Under the applicable statutes, an "agent" is a person acting under the statutes in a real property transaction, and includes a person who is licensed as a real estate broker, and under whose license a listing is executed or an offer to purchase is obtained [Civ. Code § 2079.13(a)]. A "real property transaction" is a transaction for the sale of real property in which an agent is employed by one or more of the principals to act in that transaction, and includes a listing or an offer to purchase [Civ. Code § 2079.13(k)]. "Real property," as used in the foregoing statutes, means (1) an estate of inheritance or life estate in property containing one to four dwelling units, (2) any leasehold in this type of property exceeding one year's duration, and (3) mobilehomes that are offered for sale or sold through a real estate broker [Civ. Code § 2079.13(j)].

A real estate salesperson who acts for a principal owes the same fiduciary duties to that principal as a broker [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 64-65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353] .

The actual relationship between a broker/agent and the parties to a real estate transaction [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(k)

("real property transaction" defined)] is initially defined by the agreement between the broker and the parties [see Civ. Code §§ 2299 (actual agency), 2300 (ostensible agency); see also §§ 21.30-21.36]. The payment of compensation (or the obligation to pay compensation) is not necessarily determinative of a particular agency relationship [Civ. Code § 2079.19].

[2] Permitted and Prohibited Relationships

A real estate agent may act in different capacities in different transactions and have different relationships with his or her principals. An agent in a residential real property transaction [see [1], above] may select a specific form of agency relationship as a condition of the agent's employment, provided the following apply: (1) the relationship is not specifically prohibited [see discussion, below]; and (2) the agent (i) furnishes the required "Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationship" [Civ. Code § 2079.16; see §§ 21.21, 21.220], (ii) discloses the agent's actual relationship to the party, and (iii) furnishes the required confirmation of disclosure [Civ. Code § 2079.20; see Civ. Code § 2079.17; see also §§ 21.21, 21.221].

A "listing agent," that is, one who has obtained a listing of real property to act as an agent for compensation [Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)], may act in a particular transaction exclusively as the seller's agent or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b)]. A "selling agent" may act in a particular transaction exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a)]. For these purposes, a selling agent is a listing agent who acts alone, or an agent who acts in cooperation with a listing agent, and who sells or obtains a buyer for the real property, or an agent who locates property for a buyer or who finds a buyer for a property for which no listing exists and presents an offer to purchase to the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.13(n)]. A listing agent may also act as a selling agent, and the combination of both of these functions in one agent does not, of itself, make the agent a dual agent [Civ. Code § 2079.22]. However, a listing agent (whether or not that agent is also a selling agent) may not act as an agent for the buyer only [Civ. Code §§ 2079.17(b), 2079.18].

[3] Dual Representation

A "dual agent" is an agent acting, either directly or through an associate licensee, as agent for both the seller and the buyer in a real property transaction [Civ. Code § 2079.13(d)]. A broker may not act for more than one party in a transaction without the knowledge or consent of all parties to the transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(d); see Civ. Code § 2079.17 (requiring listing or selling agent to disclose whether agent is acting as a dual agent or exclusively as buyer's agent or seller's agent); see also § 21.21]. A broker who does not disclose the fact that he or she is acting as a dual agent is barred from recovering a commission [L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305, 306 n.4, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680 (commission barred under public policy that prohibits gain from contract that is conducive to bad faith and double-dealing); McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 810, 285 P.2d 261 (commission from either party barred unless both parties knew and approved of dual representation)]. In addition, a broker's or salespersons's failure to disclose a dual agency relationship may result in the buyer's or seller's recovery of damages caused by the nondisclosure [Brown v. FSR Brokerage, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 766, 778] .

A broker who represents both parties to a real estate transaction has the same fiduciary duty of utmost care, integrity, honesty, and loyalty in dealing with both the buyer and the seller as does a broker who represents only one party to a transaction [see Civ. Code § 2079.16]. Further, a dual agent may not, without the express permission of the seller, disclose to the buyer that the seller will accept a price less than the listing price [Civ. Code § 2079.16; see Brown v. FSR Brokerage, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 766, 777] . Similarly, a dual agent may not, without the express permission of the buyer, disclose to the seller that the buyer will pay a price greater than the price offered [Civ. Code § 2079.16].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 21 AGREEMENTS WITH REAL ESTATE BROKERS AND AGENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Agency Relationship

§ 21.21 Required Disclosures

So that buyers and sellers will understand their relationships to their agents, listing and selling agents involved in residential real property transactions [see § 21.20[1]] must (1) provide the seller and buyer with a copy of the statutory disclosure form set forth in Civ. Code § 2079.16 [see § 21.220[2] ("Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationships")], and (2) obtain a signed acknowledgment of receipt from the seller and buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.14]. The statutory form describes the different types of agency relationships a seller or buyer may have with a real estate agent, and generally informs the recipient of the agent's affirmative obligations in the transaction.

In addition to providing the foregoing disclosure, the agent must also disclose whether he or she is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, exclusively as the buyer's agent, or as a dual agent, and must confirm the disclosure in writing [Civ. Code § 2079.17]. These disclosures must be made before the transaction has been consummated; that is, disclosure of a dual agency relationship after an offer has been made does not satisfy the disclosure requirement [see Brown v. FSR Brokerage, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 766, 778] . A statutory form must be used for the written confirmation [see Civ. Code § 2079.17(c); see also § 21.221].

For further coverage of these disclosure requirements and disclosure forms prepared by the California Association of Realtors, see §§ 21.220 and 21.221.

When an agent undertakes to arrange financing in connection with a sale, lease, or exchange of real property, or when a person or entity arranging financing in connection with the sale, lease, or exchange of real property undertakes to act as an agent with respect to that property, that agent, person, or entity must, within 24 hours, make a written disclosure of those roles to all parties to the sale, lease, or exchange, and any related loan transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177.6; see Civ. Code § 2079.13(a) (definition of agent in this context)].

Nothing in the statutory rules requiring disclosure of agency relationships diminishes the duty of disclosure that sellers and their agents owe to buyers, nor do the statutory rules relieve agents (or their associate licensees, subagents, or employees) from liability for their conduct otherwise imposed by law [Civ. Code § 2079.24]. For discussion of the duties of disclosure owed to buyers by sellers and their agents, refer to Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements.

In response to the passage of "Megan's Law" requiring law enforcement authorities to maintain a database of the locations of registered sex offenders and to provide that information to the public [see Penal Code §§ 290, 290.4, 290.46], certain written real estate contracts must contain a notice related to that database [see Civ. Code § 2079.10a]. Effective July 1, 1999, the notice requirement applies to every contract of sale for residential real property comprising one to four dwelling units, including installment land sales contracts [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a); see Civ. Code § 2985 (definition of real property sales contract)].

The contract must contain the following notice, printed in at least eight-point type [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a)(3) (applicable on and after April 1, 2006); see Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a)(1), (2) (this notice may be used in contracts before April 1, 2006, in lieu of notice that formerly was required; contract forms containing notice that formerly was required may be used until April 1, 2006)]:

> Notice:
> Pursuant to Section 290.46 of the Penal Code, information about specified registered sex offenders is made available to the public via an Internet Web site maintained by the Department of Justice at www.meganslaw.ca.gov. Depending on an offender's criminal history, this information will include either the address at which the offender resides or the community of residence and ZIP Code in which he or she resides.

The information in the notice is deemed adequate to inform the transferee about the existence of the statewide database and information from the database regarding the locations of registered sex offenders [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. On delivery of this notice, the seller is not required to provide any further information in addition to that contained in the notice regarding the proximity of registered sex offenders, and making those disclosures cannot give rise to any cause of action against the seller by a registered sex offender [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. However, providing the statutory notice regarding the existence of the database of registered sex offender locations does not alter any other existing duty that a seller has to make disclosures [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(c)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 21 AGREEMENTS WITH REAL ESTATE BROKERS AND AGENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Agency Relationship

§ 21.22 Broker as Principal

[1] Limitations

Although the right of real estate brokers to act in the dual capacity of principal and agent has been upheld in California [see Estate of Baldwin (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 596, 605-606, 110 Cal. Rptr. 189] , the right is subject to stringent limitations. At the minimum, a broker who undertakes to act both as agent and as principal must make a full disclosure of all material facts concerning the transaction that might affect the other principal's decision [Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 223, 169 P.2d 371 ; Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 793, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242] . However, if the listing is a net listing, the agent may properly buy the property at the net price without disclosing whether any other offers have been made for the property [Pascal v. Cotton (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 597, 600-601, 23 Cal. Rptr. 357 ; Allen v. Dailey (1928) 92 Cal. App. 308, 313-314, 268 P. 404 ; see § 21.200]. Nevertheless, when the agent has agreed to obtain the "highest possible" or "best" price for the property, the agent has a higher duty [see Pascal v. Cotton (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 597, 600, 23 Cal. Rptr. 357] . A broker who has obtained such a listing must disclose to the principal all offers to buy the property [Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 793, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 312, 298 P.2d 667] .

A broker cannot acquire indirectly a property that the broker could not acquire directly [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . Thus, for example, a corporation in which the agent has a large concealed interest may not acquire property listed with the agent in the absence of full disclosure of the connection between the agent and the corporation [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675-676, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . A listing agent may not use a third-party nominee to buy property for the broker's own account [see Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 310-313, 298 P.2d 667] . A broker who conceals from a seller the fact that the seller's land has been sold to the state for taxes may not later make a profit by buying the land at a tax sale [Skopp v. Weaver (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 432, 441, 128 Cal. Rptr. 19, 546 P.2d 307] .

When an agent's acts have been questioned by the agent's principal, the agent has the burden of proving that he or she acted with the utmost good faith toward the principal [Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 793, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; Timmsen v. Forest E. Olson, Inc. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 860, 871, 86 Cal. Rptr. 359] . Similarly, when a listing agent buys the listed property for the agent's own account, the burden is upon the agent to show affirmatively that he or she acted in highest good faith and without concealment [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; see Civ. Code § 2079.13(f) ("listing agent" defined)].

[2] Denial of Commission Based on Lack of Disclosure

As mentioned above [see § 21.20 [3]], a broker who does not disclose the fact that he or she is acting as a dual agent is barred from recovering a commission [L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305, 306 n. 4, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680 (commission barred under public policy that prohibits gain from contract that is conducive to bad faith and double-dealing)]. Since similar conflicts of interest may arise when brokers act in the dual capacity of principal and agent as arise when brokers act as dual agents, it appears likely that a broker acting as both principal and agent might also be denied a commission based on lack of disclosure [see L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680 (undisclosed dual agency puts real estate agent in position in which duty to one party conflicts with duty to other party and agent's own interests tempt him or her to be unfaithful to parties)]. However, this area has not been the subject of much litigation, and case law has yet to establish the extent to which a broker who does not disclose that he or she is acting as principal and agent is barred from recovering a commission. Caution should, nevertheless, be exercised to avoid any conflict of interest in transactions where brokers act as both principals and as agents.

[3] Statutory Requirements

The broker is required to obtain the written permission of the client approving in advance any profit the broker may receive from the transaction [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)]. Whenever a broker has been given an option to purchase the subject property by his or her principal, prior to or coincident with the election to exercise that option, the broker must reveal, in writing, to the principal the full amount of the broker's profit and must obtain the principal's written consent approving the amount of such profit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(h)]. For a form of disclosure, see § 21.222[2].

With respect to a commitment to make a mortgage loan that is accepted by the applicant, when the broker represented to the applicant that the broker was the lender or was authorized to issue the commitment on behalf of the lender or lenders in the mortgage loan transaction, the broker must not fail to disburse funds in accordance with the commitment [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(k)]. The broker must not intentionally delay the closing of a mortgage loan for the sole purpose of increasing interest, costs, fees, or charges payable by the borrower [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(l)].

The license of a broker may be suspended or revoked if the broker has generated an inaccurate opinion of the value of residential real property, requested in connection with a debt forgiveness sale, in order to manipulate the lienholder to reject the proposed debt forgiveness sale or in order to acquire a financial or business advantage, including a listing agreement, that directly results from the inaccurate opinion of value, with regard to the property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(m)].

A listing is a written contract between an owner of property and an agent, authorizing the agent to sell the property or to find a buyer [Civ. Code § 1086(f)]. There are four types of listings: (1) an exclusive right to sell listing [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]; (2) an exclusive agency listing [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)]; (3) an open listing [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]; and (4) a probate listing [Civ. Code § 1089.5; see Prob. Code § 10150]. Each type is subject to specific statutory regulation, discussed in Section 21.32. A "listing agent" must be a real estate licensee [see Civ. Code § 1086(g); see also § 21.31].

§ 21.31 Related Terms Defined

For purposes of the regulated listing provisions of the Civil Code [Civ. Code §§ 1086 et seq.],the following terms have the meanings set forth below [Civ. Code § 1086]:

- "Property" means real property or a mobilehome [see Health & Safety Code § 18008 ("mobilehome" defined); see also Ch. 39, Mobilehome Parks ; Ch. 40, Mobilehomes].

- "Sell" and "sale" include lease and exchange.

- "Buyer" includes a tenant and a party with whom property is exchanged.

- An "agent" is one who is authorized by law to act in that capacity for that type of property, and who is either (1) licensed as a real estate broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131-10131.6; see also § 21.10 (real estate broker)], or (2) a "licensee" under the Manufactured Housing Act of 1980 [Health & Safety Code § 18000 et seq.; see Health & Safety Code § 18006; see also Ch. 40, Mobilehomes].

- A "listing agent" is one who has obtained a listing of property and who is authorized by law to act as an agent for compensation with regard to that kind of listing [see Civ. Code § 1090 (listing agent may also be selling agent).]

- A "selling agent" is an agent participant in a multiple-listing service who acts in cooperation with a listing agent and who sells, or finds a buyer for, the property [see Civ. Code § 1087 ("multiple listing service" defined); see also § 21.34].

- An "appraiser" is one licensed or certified under the Real Estate Appraisers' Licensing and Certification Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11300 et seq.].

- "Sold" includes "leased" and "exchanged." A property is sold when a legally binding commitment to sell the property comes into existence.

§ 21.32 Regulated Listings

[1] Exclusive Right to Sell

Under an "exclusive right to sell listing," the owner grants to an agent, for a specified period of time, the exclusive right to sell or to find a buyer for the property [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. The agent is entitled to the agreed compensation if during that time the property is sold by anyone, or the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. This type of listing may provide for compensation of the listing agent if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)].

[2] Exclusive Agency

Under an "exclusive agency listing," as under an exclusive right to sell listing, the owner grants to an agent, for a specified period of time, the exclusive right to sell or to find a buyer for the property [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1), (2)]. The agent is entitled to the agreed compensation if during that time the property is sold by anyone, or the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1), (2)]. However, unlike an exclusive right to sell listing, under an exclusive agency listing, the owner reserves the right to sell directly (but not through any other agent) and, in that event, without obligation to pay compensation to the agent [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)].

[3] Open Listing

An "open listing" does not grant the listing agent any exclusive rights or priorities. Rather, the agent receives a commission only if the agent procures and presents to the owner an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on the terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner, before the property is otherwise sold either through another agent or by the owner directly and before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]. An open listing may contain an agreement by the owner to pay the listing agent compensation in any amount, at any time, and for any services, other than for selling the property or finding a buyer [Civ. Code § 1089].

Open listings placed in multiple-listing services are subject to additional requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 1087, 1088; see also § 21.34].

[4] Probate Listing

A contract between a personal representative of a decedent and a licensed broker authorizing the broker to find a purchaser for property of the decedent's estate is governed by Prob. Code § 10150 [Civ. Code § 1089.5]. The contract is also subject to the Civil Code provisions regulating listings [see Civ. Code § 1086 et seq.] if the subject property falls within the definition of "property" set forth in the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 1089.5; see Civ. Code § 1086(a) ("property" defined); see also § 21.31].

§ 21.33 Unregulated Listings

Certain types of listings are not subject to statutory regulation. For example, a "net listing" is a listing that provides that an agent may retain as compensation for the services rendered all sums received over and above a net price to the owner [see Loughlin v. Idora Realty Co. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 619, 626-627, 66 Cal. Rptr. 747 , citing Pascal v. Cotton (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 597, 600, 23 Cal. Rptr. 357] . Employment of an agent by a prospective purchaser or lessee to locate property for purchase or lease may also be considered a listing [see § 21.14 (finders); see also § 21.35 ("finder's agreement" defined)].

A "multiple listing service" is a facility of cooperation of agents and appraisers [see Civ. Code § 1086(e) ("appraiser" defined); see also § 21.31], operating through an intermediary that does not itself act as an agent or appraiser, through which agents establish express or implied legal relationships with respect to listed properties, or that may be used by agents and appraisers, pursuant to the rules of the service, to prepare market evaluations and appraisals of real property [Civ. Code § 1087]. Thus, in the case of member agents, the service enables them to pool their listings and permits any member to seek a buyer for the property listed with the service.

If an open listing is placed in a multiple-listing service, the total commission paid by the owner goes to the selling agent who obtains an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1087]. An open listing may, but is not required to, specify the compensation to be paid to the selling agent; it may also state that the compensation is to be negotiated between the selling agent and the owner [Civ. Code § 1087].

No listing may be placed in a multiple-listing service unless authorized or directed by the owner in the listing [Civ. Code § 1088]. An agent or appraiser who places a listing or other information in such a service will be responsible for the truth of all representations and statements made by the agent or appraiser of which that agent or appraiser had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge, to anyone injured by their falseness or inaccuracy [Civ. Code § 1088].

A finder's agreement is a written contract to bring together persons so that they may negotiate for and eventually enter into contracts [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 ; Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 668, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 ; McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 810, 285 P.2d 261] . The parties who may be brought together by a finder in a real estate transaction include, among others, buyers, sellers, borrowers, and lenders [*see Shaffer v. § 21.36 Statute of Frauds

[1] Writing Required

An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate, supported by consideration, is an enforceable contract subject to the principles of contract law [see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. Thus, such an agreement comes within the statute of frauds and, accordingly, must be in writing, signed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624]. Finder's fee agreements, like broker's commission agreements, are also subject to the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624; Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258 n.6, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] .

A memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds requirement need not be a formal document, but must "unequivocally show on its face the fact of employment of the broker" or agent seeking to receive the real estate commission [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 ; see Franklin v. Hansen (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 570, 573, 30 Cal. Rptr. 530, 381 P.2d 386 , disapproved on other grounds, Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 757, 770 ; Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] . Thus, a broker's contract will not be declared void merely because of a defect, ambiguity, or uncertainty in the description of the property to be sold, when the defect can be cured by allegations and proof of extrinsic facts and circumstances [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

It is a question of fact whether the writing constitutes an agreement or memorandum sufficient to comply with the statute of frauds [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] . A brief notation on the back of a business card covering the essential terms of the agreement and date and initialed by the seller has been held to suffice [Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 568, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170] . However, a writing setting forth the price, terms and description of the property offered for sale by the signor of the writing, delivered to real estate brokers but not expressly addressed to them, was held insufficient as not bearing written evidence of a contract of employment or authorization [Kleinsorge & Heilbron v. Liness (1911) 17 Cal. App. 534, 539, 120 P. 444 ; see Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 566, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170] .

Thus, insofar as the statute of frauds is concerned, at a minimum, a listing agreement must contain evidence of a contract of employment or authorization [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 ; Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 566, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170] . See §§ 21.110 and 21.112 for other matters to consider including in a listing agreement.

Although a broker must have written authorization in order to recover a commission on the sale of real property [see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)], the statute of frauds is not a defense if the broker reasonably relies on the misrepresentations of the seller that a written authorization exists [see Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1270, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] . An affirmative misrepresentation as to the existence of a writing will support an action by the broker in equitable estoppel [Owens v. Foundation for Ocean Research (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 179, 183, 165 Cal. Rptr. 571 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] .

A written listing agreement may be modified only by the following: (1) a written agreement; (2) an oral agreement that has been fully executed by both parties; or (3) unless the agreement otherwise provides, an oral agreement that satisfies the statute of frauds, supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698(a)-(c)]. However, the statute does not preclude application of rules of law concerning estoppel, oral novation and substitution of a new agreement, rescission of a written agreement by an oral agreement, waiver of a provision of a written agreement, or oral independent collateral agreements, when appropriate [Civ. Code § 1698(d)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Provisions of Listing Agreement

§ 21.50 Duration of Listing

[1] Setting Expiration Date

The Real Estate Commissioner may temporarily suspend or permanently revoke a real estate license at any time if (1) the licensee claims, demands, or receives compensation or a commission under any exclusive agreement authorizing or employing the licensee to perform the acts of a licensed real estate broker for compensation or commission, and (2) the agreement does not contain a definite, specified date of final and complete termination [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 (licensed real estate broker's acts defined)]. Although illegal contracts or contracts against public policy are generally not enforceable, there is a judicial exception in the case of an executed exclusive listing agreement that violates the statutory rule requiring a definite termination date. In this case, the courts permit the broker to collect his or her commission provided (1) the transaction has been completed, (2) the public cannot be protected by refusing enforcement of the agreement, (3) no moral turpitude was involved, and (4) the seller would be unjustly enriched if the agreement were not enforced [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

A party will normally be permitted to complete his or her performance within a "reasonable" time even though the performance is subsequent to the date specified in the contract [see Civ. Code § 1492; Katemis v. Westerlind (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 799, 804-805, 299 P.2d 383] .

However, if time is made of the essence, a party who fails to perform on time will not be permitted to complete his or her performance nor will he or she be entitled to restitution [see Glock v. Howard & Wilson Colony Co. (1898) 123 Cal. 1, 13, 55 P. 713 ; see also Amoruso v. Carley (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 422, 427, 209 P.2d 139] , unless the provision making time of the essence has been waived [Gonzalez v. Hirose (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 213, 216-217, 200 P.2d 793] , or unless injustice would result [Barkis v. Scott (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 116, 118-124, 208 P.2d 367 ; Major-Blakeney Corp. v. Jenkins (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 325, 332-333, 263 P.2d 655] .

[3] Termination of Listing Agreement

A real estate listing creates an agency between the broker and the owner [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131; Civ. Code § 2295]. Unless coupled with an interest, the agency may be terminated by revocation by the principal, by the principal's death, or by his or her incapacity to contract [Civ. Code § 2356(a)]. If the broker has an exclusive and "irrevocable" listing for a designated period and the principal exercises his or her power to revoke the listing prior to its expiration, the principal is liable to the broker for the amount of the expected commission, even though the property was sold by another broker, if the agreement provides for compensation to the original broker for any sale during the exclusive period [Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 891 ; see Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 505, 509-511, 272 P.2d 552] , but only if the broker has been diligent in seeking out a purchaser [see Coleman v. Mora (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 137, 146-147, 69 Cal. Rptr. 166 ; see also Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 594, 601, 78 Cal. Rptr. 302] . If the principal dies during the exclusive listing period, the exclusive right to sell terminates by operation of law, and the executor who subsequently sells the property during the listing period has no contractual liability under the agreement [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 612, 614, 98 Cal. Rptr. 559] . If the broker sells the property after the death of the principal but before learning of it, the broker apparently still is entitled to his or her commission [see Civ. Code § 2356(b)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 21 AGREEMENTS WITH REAL ESTATE BROKERS AND AGENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Provisions of Listing Agreement

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.51

§ 21.51 Compensation

[1] Required Disclosure of Amount

The license of a real estate agent may be suspended or revoked if the agent fails to disclose to the principal the full amount of his or her compensation, prior to or coincident with the signing of the listing agreement or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g).]

[2] When Compensation Is Due

Under an open listing, the agent will receive a commission only if the agent procures a person who is ready, able, and willing to acquire the owner's property on the same terms authorized by the listing (1) before the property is otherwise sold either through another agent or by the owner directly, and (2) before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)].

Under an exclusive agency listing, the agent named in the listing is entitled to the agreed compensation or commission if the owner sells or exchanges the property through other brokers [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)]. However, if the owner sells or exchanges the property directly, and not through any other agent, the owner is not required to pay a commission to the agent holding the exclusive agency listing [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)].

Under the exclusive right to sell listing, the agent named in the listing will receive the agreed compensation if, during a specified time period, the property is sold to anyone, or the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)].

Even when a listing agreement has expired, if a seller and a buyer have made a written agreement to pay the broker a commission, the seller would violate the implied covenant of good faith by entering into an agreement with the buyer on substantially the same terms as contemplated in the original agreement but without paying the originally agreed on commission to the broker [Torelli v. J. P. Enterprises (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1256, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76] .

The courts have held that the provisions giving a broker the unqualified right to be paid a commission when a person is procured who is ready, able, and willing to acquire the owner's property on the terms of the listing or on other unqualified terms acceptable to the owner will not be defeated by the failure of the parties to consummate the transaction and to have evidence of the transfer of title recorded [Meyer v. Selggio (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 161, 164, 181 P.2d 690] . The owner may not have to pay the broker a commission, however, if the right to a commission is expressly and unequivocally qualified by providing in the listing, or in a subsequent agreement containing other terms acceptable to the owner, that no commission will be earned until the transaction is consummated and the deed or other evidence of the transfer of title is recorded, and the parties fail to consummate the transaction through no fault of the owner [Cotton v. Jewell Theatre Corp. (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 243, 247-248, 303 P.2d 593 ; Dale v. Raines (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 309, 310-311, 252 P.2d 22] .

[3] Amount of Compensation; Required Notice

The amount or rate of real estate commissions is not fixed by law; real estate commissions are set by each broker individually and may be negotiable between the seller and broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5(a)]. Further, any printed or form agreement that establishes, intends to establish, or alters the terms of any agreement that previously established a right to compensation to be paid to a real estate licensee for the sale of residential real property containing not more than four residential units, or for the sale of a mobilehome, must contain the following statement in not less than 10-point boldface type immediately preceding any provision relating to compensation: "Notice: The amount or rate of real estate commissions is not fixed by law. They are set by each broker individually and may be negotiable between the seller and broker" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5(d) ("alters the terms of agreement previously establishing right to compensation" defined)]. Moreover, the amount or rate of compensation must not be printed in any such agreement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5(b)]. However, failure to comply with these requirements will not affect the validity of a transfer of title to real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5(c)].

An exclusive right to sell listing may provide for compensation of the listing agent if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. "Negotiation" means that the efforts of the broker to interest a buyer must have proceeded to the point where the buyer would be considered a likely purchaser; whether negotiations have proceeded to that point is a question of fact [Delbon v. Brazil (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 461, 464, 285 P.2d 710] . If the listing requires that the owner pay the commission if the property is sold or conveyed to persons who had been "introduced" to the property by the broker during the listing period, "introduce" is commonly construed to mean that the broker must do something more than incidentally show the property, along with other properties, to a prospective buyer [Korstad v. Hoffman (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 805, 809, 35 Cal. Rptr. 61 ; see Torelli v. J. P. Enterprises (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1256, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76] . Furthermore, there must be a causal connection between the broker's act and the sale [Korstad v. Hoffman (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 805, 809-810, 35 Cal. Rptr. 61] .

The statute governing the exclusive agency and open listings does not expressly authorize (or prohibit) the inclusion of a provision for compensation of the listing agent if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)]. However, these listing agreements often include such a provision.

[5] Compensation for Other Services

An open listing may contain an agreement by the owner to pay the listing agent compensation in any amount, at any time, for specified services other than for selling the property or procuring or finding a buyer [Civ. Code § 1089]. It appears that the exclusive right to sell, exclusive agency, or probate listings may contain a similar clause, although there is no express statutory authorization for such a provision [see Civ. Code § 1089; Korstad v. Hoffman (1963) 221 Cal.

App. 2d Supp. 805, 808-810, 35 Cal. Rptr. 61] .

§ 21.52 Cooperation of Other Brokers in Multiple Listings

The listing broker may delegate his or her powers to another agent only under any of the following circumstances [see Civ. Code § 2349]:

- The act to be done is purely mechanical.
- The act is such that the listing broker cannot, but the cooperating broker can, lawfully perform it.
- It is the usage of the place to delegate the powers.
- The delegation is specifically authorized by the owner of the property.

If a cooperating broker is lawfully appointed to represent the owner of the property, that cooperating broker is the agent of the owner and represents the owner in the same manner as the listing broker [see Civ. Code § 2351]. If, however, the cooperating broker is not authorized to represent the owner of the property, no privity of contract and no fiduciary relationship is established between them, and the cooperating broker is considered solely and exclusively the agent of the listing broker [see Civ. Code §§ 2022, 2350; Goodwin v. Glick (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 936, 939-941, 294 P.2d 192 ; see Colbough v. Hartline (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1516, 1523-1524, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213 (seller's payment of full commission through escrow precluded cooperating broker's action against seller for cooperating broker's claimed share of commission when there was no written agreement between the brokers and listing broker was only authorized to cooperate with subagents, not to divide commission with cooperating brokers)]. Thus, if the listing broker seeks the cooperation of other brokers, the listing broker and the cooperating brokers should enter into a separate agreement regarding the division of the commission to be paid by the owner under the terms of the listing agreement [see Goodwin v. Glick (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 936, 939-941, 294 P.2d 192] .

A real estate broker is authorized to deposit trust funds into an interest-bearing account in a bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or industrial loan company whose accounts are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, if all of the following requirements are met [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10145(d)]:

- The deposit is requested by the owner of the trust funds or by the principals to a transaction from whom the broker has received trust funds.
- The account is in the broker's name as trustee for the specified beneficiary or principal.
- All of the deposited funds are covered by insurance provided by a federal governmental agency.
- The funds are kept separate, distinct, and apart from other funds.
- The broker discloses to the provider of funds and to any beneficiary whose identity is known to the broker at the time the account is established the nature of the account, how interest will be calculated and paid under various circumstances, whether service charges will be paid to the depository and by whom, and possible notice requirements or penalties for withdrawal of funds from the account.
- No interest earned on the funds inures directly or indirectly to the benefit of the broker or to any person licensed to the broker.
- In an executory sale, lease, or loan transaction in which the broker accepts funds in trust to be applied to the purchase, lease, or loan, the parties to the contract specify in the contract or by collateral written agreement the person to whom interest earned on the funds is to be paid or credited.

A broker may reject a request that funds be placed in an interest-bearing account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10145(e)].

A real estate broker collecting payments or performing services for note owners or investors in connection with loans secured by a first lien on real property may deposit trust funds in an out-of-state depository institution insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, if the note owner or investor is any one of a number of persons or institutions specified by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10145(a)(2)]. A real estate broker who deposits funds held in trust in such a manner must make available, in California, the books, records, and files pertaining to the trust accounts to the Commissioner or his or her representative, or pay the reasonable expenses for travel and lodging incurred by the Commissioner or his or her representative to conduct an examination at any out-of-state location [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10145(a)(3)].

§ 21.71 Characterization of Salesperson as Employee or Independent Contractor

[1] In General

A real estate broker and a real estate salesperson licensed under that broker may contract between themselves as independent contractors or as employer and employee, for purposes of their legal relationship with and obligations to each other [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032(b)]. However, all obligations created under the Real Estate Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq.], all regulations issued by the Real Estate Commissioner relating to real estate salespersons, and all other obligations of brokers and real estate salespersons to members of the public will apply regardless of whether the real estate salesperson and the broker to whom the salesperson is licensed have characterized the salesperson as an employee or an independent contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032(a)]. Nevertheless, the correct characterization of a salesperson as an employee or as an independent contractor is important for purposes of tort liability, unemployment and workers' compensation insurance, and withholding and employment taxes [see [2]-[5], below].

In general, in determining whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor, the most important factor is whether the employer has the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the result desired [Rogers v. Whitson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 662, 671, 39 Cal. Rptr. 849] . Although this determination is a question of fact [Rogers v. Whitson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 662, 672, 39 Cal. Rptr. 849] , it may vary according to the legal context in which the decision is made [see [2]-[5], below]. Therefore, caution should be exercised in determining whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor, and specialized counsel should be consulted, as needed.

In a broker-salesperson relationship, the broker is required by law to exercise reasonable supervision over the activities of his or her salespersons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. This requirement, in the context of tort liability, led one court to decide that a salesperson, insofar as his or her relationship with the employing broker is concerned, cannot be classified as an independent contractor [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 207, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253] . In Gipson, the court held that the determination that a salesperson does not qualify as an independent contractor for tort liability purposes is unaffected by the fact that, under California case law, a salesperson might qualify as an independent contractor for purposes of unemployment insurance [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 207, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see Cal. Emp. Stab. Com. v. Norins Realty Co. (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 419, 422, 175 P.2d 217 ; California Emp. Stab. Com. v. Morris (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 812, 818-820, 172 P.2d 497] . Moreover, in Gipson, the court stated that any contract that purports to change the broker-salesperson relationship to that of agent to independent contractor for purposes of tortious liability to third parties is invalid as being contrary to the provisions of the Real Estate Law [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 207, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see Stats. 1991, ch. 679, § 2 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032 does not affect holding in Gipson)]. For further discussion of the characterization of an individual as an employee or an independent contractor in this context, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors , and Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

[3] Unemployment Insurance and Workers' Compensation

Characterization of a real estate salesperson as an employee or an independent contractor for unemployment and Workers' Compensation insurance purposes is governed by the following statutes: Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 650 (unemployment insurance), 13000-13054 (withholding taxes on wages); Lab. Code §§ 3200-6149 (workers' compensation).

For purposes of unemployment insurance, a real estate salesperson is not considered an employee if (1) the salesperson is licensed under California law; (2) substantially all the remuneration (whether or not paid in cash) for the services performed by that individual is directly related to sales or other output (including the performance of services) rather than to the number of hours worked by that individual; and (3) the services performed by the individual are performed pursuant to a written contract between that individual and the person for whom the services are performed, and the contract provides that the individual will not be treated as an employee with respect to those services for state tax purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 650].

The term "employee" under the Workers' Compensation Act includes every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, whether lawfully or unlawfully employed [Lab. Code § 3351], and every person rendering service for another is presumed to be an employee unless he qualifies as an independent contractor [Lab. Code § 3357]. The term "independent contractor," for workers' compensation purposes, is defined as any person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result, under the control of his or her principal as to the result of his or her work only and not as to the means by which the result is accomplished [Lab. Code § 3353]. Whether a particular salesperson is an employee or an independent contractor for purposes of workers' compensation coverage is a question of fact [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; Payne v. White House Properties, Inc. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 465, 471, 169 Cal. Rptr. 373] . For further discussion of the characterization of an individual as an employee or an independent contractor in this context, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors , and Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

[4] Federal and State Withholding Taxes

For federal income tax withholding purposes, an individual is an employee if the individual is either a corporate officer or a common law employee [I.R.C. § 3401(c); Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1]. An individual is a common law employee if the person for whom the services are performed has the right to control and direct the performance, not only as to the result to be accomplished, but also as to the details and means by which the result is accomplished [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(b)]. In doubtful cases, the facts will be examined to determine whether or not an employer-employee relationship exists [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(d)]; and if that relationship is found to exist, the designation of the employee as something else, such as an independent contractor, is immaterial [Treas. Reg. § 31.3401(c)-1(e)]. If the individual performing the services is not a common law employee, that individual is an independent contractor [see [1], above].

In distinguishing employees from independent contractors for state purposes, common law rules apply in determining the existence of an employer-employee relationship [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. The right of the principal to control the manner and means of accomplishing a desired result is the most significant factor in making this determination [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. An employer-employee relationship exists if the principal has the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the desired result, whether or not that right is exercised [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. The principal's right to discharge at will is another strong indication that control exists [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1 (other indications of right to control)]. For further discussion of the characterization of an individual as an employee or an independent contractor in this context, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses , Ch. 84, Independent Contractors , and Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

[5] Federal Employment Taxes

There are two types of federal unemployment taxes: Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) [I.R.C. §§ 3101-3128], or social security and medicare taxes, and Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) [I.R.C. §§ 3301-3311], or federal employment taxes [see I.R.C. §§ 3121(a)(1), (2), 3301, 3306(b)(1)]. For both FICA and FUTA tax purposes, employees include corporate officers, common law employees, and statutory employees [I.R.C. § 3121(d)]. A common law employee is the same for FICA and FUTA tax purposes as for income tax withholding [see I.R.C. § 3121(d); see also [4], above; but see I.R.C. § 3121(d)(3) (statutory employees)]. Thus, for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act [I.R.C. §§ 3101-3128] and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act [I.R.C. §§ 3301-3311], the distinction between an "employee" and an "independent contractor" depends on the right of control, and if the relationship of employer and employee exists, the designation or description of the relationship by the parties as anything other than that of employer and employee is immaterial [see I.R.C. §§ 3121(d)(2), 3306(i)(1)]. For further discussion of the characterization of an individual as an employee or an independent contractor in this context, see Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses .

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.110

§ 21.110 Transactional Determinations for Listing and Finder's Agreements

1. Determine necessity of retaining real estate agent.

NOTE:

Counsel should independently determine whether retaining an agent is consistent with the client's desires and intentions, taking into consideration the following: Whether the client owns the subject property or is a prospective purchaser of it; whether the client has the time, knowledge, and ability to complete each step of the transaction; and the complexity of the transaction.

a. Consider benefits of retaining agent:

(1) Expertise of professional, if sale or exchange is complex.

(2) Greater exposure of property or to properties, if sale, exchange, or purchase must be completed expeditiously.

NOTE:

Sales and exchanges can often be concluded much faster when the listing broker cooperates with those brokers in the area who are members of a multiple-listing service. See § 21.34 for discussion of multiple-listing services.

b. Determine whether conditions exist that may make it desirable for owner or purchaser to act as own agent, such as:

(1) Owner or purchaser knows of interest of prospective parties.

(2) Interested and prospective parties can be easily reached.

(3) Owner or purchaser has time, knowledge, and ability to complete each step of transaction.

(4) Property is desirable and subject to strong demand.

2. Determine type of agent best suited for client.

a. Finder.

NOTE:

"Finders" are persons who bring together others (including buyers, sellers, borrowers, and/or lenders) so that they may negotiate for and eventually enter into contracts [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . A finder is not an agent; a finder is in business for himself or herself and owes no obligation to any principal [Zalk v. General Exploration Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 786, 792, 164 Cal. Rptr. 647] . Thus, no fiduciary relationship is created between a finder and his or her employer, and the finder may well be employed as a finder by both buyer and seller [McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 810-811, 285 P.2d 261] .

A finder's only duty and power under the contract of employment is to find and introduce a prospective purchaser or a prospective seller to his or her employer. A finder does not have the power to negotiate the terms on which his or her employer or employers will deal [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] .

A finder need not be licensed as a real estate broker and is not required to have a real estate broker's license to enter into a finder's agreement with either a prospective purchaser or a prospective seller of property [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] .

b. Broker.

NOTE:

In contrast to a finder, a broker employed as a broker does have authority to participate on behalf of his or her employer in negotiations for the purchase or sale by the employer of real property. A broker, in addition to performing the duties of a "middleman" (or finder), is employed to use discretionary authority for the benefit of his or her employer and to act for the employer's best interests [see Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . Thus, a confidential or fiduciary relationship is created between a broker employed as a broker and his or her employer [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . As a result, unlike a finder, a broker (employed as a broker) cannot represent both parties to a real estate transaction and still receive a commission from either party unless both parties knew of the dual representation and approved of it [McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 810, 285 P.2d 261] . Finally, although a finder need not be licensed, a real estate broker employed as a broker must be licensed as such by the State of California [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10136, 10137, 10151; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1 (persons or entities exempt from licensing requirements); see §§ 21.10, 21.12 (real estate brokers), 21.14 (finders)].

c. Salesperson.

NOTE:

A real estate salesperson is a natural person who, for compensation (or in expectation of compensation), is employed by a licensed real estate broker to do one or more of the acts that real estate brokers are authorized to do [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10132; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10017 ("salesman" means "salesperson"); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131-10131.4, 10131.6 (real estate broker's activities); § 21.10]. A salesperson is the broker's agent and cannot act independently of the broker [Grand v. Griesinger (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 397, 406, 325 P.2d 475] . Every broker who employs a salesperson has a duty to exercise reasonable supervision over the salesperson's activities; and, if the broker fails to exercise reasonable supervision, the broker's license may be revoked [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(h)]. A salesperson may not be employed by, or accept compensation from, any person other than the broker under whom the salesperson is at the time licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137].

3. Determine finder's, broker's, or salesperson's qualifications.

a. Experienced in various types of properties and areas.

b. Member of multiple-listing service, if applicable.

c. Active and good standing status of real estate license, if applicable.

(1) Individual broker.

(2) Corporation.

(3) Brokers in partnership.

4. Verify factual and legal capacity of parties to enter into listing or finder's agreement by determining the following:

a. Contractual capacity.

b. Marital status.

c. State of title of real property.

5. Determine if and how property should be bought, sold, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of, e.g.:

a. Conditional sale.

b. Sale and leaseback.

c. Lease with option to buy.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.113

§ 21.113 Contractual Determinations for Broker-Salesperson and Salesperson-Assistant Agreements

1. Determine status of salesperson or assistant for purposes of California unemployment insurance coverage.

NOTE:

For purposes of unemployment insurance, a real estate salesperson is not considered an employee if (1) the salesperson is licensed under California law; (2) substantially all the remuneration (whether or not paid in cash) for the services performed by that individual is directly related to sales or other output (including the performance of services) rather than to the number of hours worked by that individual; and (3) the services performed by the individual are performed pursuant to a written contract between that individual and the person for whom the services are performed, and the contract provides that the individual will not be treated as an employee with respect to those services for state tax purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 650; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032(b)].

2. Determine whether salesperson or assistant is covered by Workers' Compensation Act.

NOTE:

Characterization of a real estate salesperson as an employee or an independent contractor for purposes of workers' compensation is governed by the Workers' Compensation Act [Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10032(b); see also § 21.71[3]].

3. Determine status of salesperson or assistant for purposes of federal and state withholding and employment taxes [see § 21.71[4]].

4. Determine extent of potential tort liability for acts of salespersons within scope of employment [see § 21.71[2]].

NOTE:

A common area of tort liability involves salespersons' business use of automobiles. When a salesperson causes an automobile accident in which another person is injured, the employing broker may be liable for the salesperson's accident despite an attempt to create independent contractor status [see Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

5. Determine that relationship agreement complies with applicable federal and state maximum hour and minimum wage laws.

NOTE:

For a discussion of maximum hour and minimum wage laws, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

6. Determine method of resolving disputes between parties.

NOTE:

Arbitration is typically chosen. For discussion of arbitration and sample arbitration provisions that may be adapted for use in a broker-salesperson agreement, see § 21.210.

2. Deliver one fully executed copy of agreement to each party.

NOTE:
When a real estate licensee prepares or has prepared an agreement that employs the licensee to perform any acts for which the licensee is required to hold a license, or when a licensee secures the signature of any person to any contract pertaining to such services, the licensee must deliver a copy of the agreement to the person signing it at the time the signature is obtained [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10142].

3. Ascertain that all principals are fully informed regarding all compensation, commissions, and profits that real estate licensee will (or expects to) obtain as a result of transaction.

NOTE:
Any real estate licensee who takes or claims any secret or undisclosed compensation, commission, or profit is subject to investigation and discipline by the Department of Real Estate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)]. Similarly, failure of a licensee to reveal to the licensee's employer the full amount of the licensee's compensation, commission, or profit prior to or coincident with the signing of an agreement is grounds for investigation and discipline [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)].

[2] Broker-Salesperson and Salesperson-Assistant Agreements

[1] Listing and Finder's Agreements

NOTE:

The California Association of Realtors (CAR) prints and supplies its members with copyrighted standard listing forms. Many of the local real estate boards throughout California sell these forms to their members and to the public at a nominal charge. The members of multiple-listing services throughout California also have their own printed listing forms, and many real estate brokers have listing forms drafted for their own use. However, caution should be exercised in ascertaining that a printed form meets the specific needs of the parties.

1. Negotiate with client, as needed, form and content of listing or finder's agreement.

2. Review selected listing agreement [see §§ 21.200-21.202] or finder's agreement [see §§ 21.240, 21.241], and confirm that it:

a. Is consistent with desires and intentions of client.

b. Complies with following mandatory requirements [see § 21.36]:
(1) Is or will be signed by party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624].

(2) Contains authorization or evidence of contract of employment [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 ; Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 566, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; see § 21.36[1]].

(3) Is for definite term.

NOTE:

The Real Estate Commissioner may temporarily suspend or permanently revoke a real estate license if the licensee claims, demands, or receives compensation or a commission under any exclusive agreement authorizing or employing the licensee to perform the acts of a licensed real estate broker for compensation or commission if the agreement does not contain a definite, specified date of final and complete termination [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 (licensed real estate broker's acts defined); see also § 21.10].

[2] Broker-Salesperson and Salesperson-Assistant Agreements

NOTE:

A "listing agent" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)] must provide the seller with this form [see *Civ. PART IV. FORMS

9- California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide

NOTE:

Use of standard form agreements has become increasingly popular, because having agreements drafted by an attorney can be time-consuming and costly. The California Association of Realtors (CAR) prints and supplies its members with copyrighted standard listing forms, and many of the local real estate boards in California sell these forms to their members and to the public for a nominal charge. The members of various multiple-listing services throughout California also have their own printed listing forms. Although brokers commonly use the foregoing agreements, some brokerage offices have listing forms drafted for their own use. The most commonly used standard form listing agreements are included in this Part [see §§ 21.200-21.202]. These forms are reproduced here for illustrative purposes with the permission of the California Association of Realtors. Endorsement is not implied. The printed forms should satisfy the requirements of all but the most complex transactions. Section 21.200[1] discusses alternative provisions that may be used, as needed.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Listing Agreements
1. Complete (Standard) Agreements

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.200

§ 21.200 Exclusive Authorization and Right to Sell [CAR Form RLA]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Residential Listing Agreement (Exclusive Authorization and Right to Sell) [CAR Form RLA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. Participation in a multiple-listing service may be required of the broker [see [2], P 6, below; see also § 21.34]. Under the exclusive listing agreement, the broker is entitled to a commission if, during the term of the agreement (1) the property is sold by anyone, or (2) the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. However, if the owner of the property desires to retain the right to sell the property directly (but not through any other agent), without becoming obligated to pay his or her broker a commission, the owner should use an "exclusive agency" agreement rather than the CAR exclusive listing form [see § 21.201]. If the owner wants several brokers to attempt to sell the property, the "open listing" should be used, with the successful broker being the only one entitled to a commission [see § 21.202].

PRACTICE TIP:

Getting in Touch With the California Association of Realtors. The California Association of Realtors has offices throughout California. Their headquarters are located at 525 South Virgil Ave., Los Angeles, CA. 90020, (213) 739-8200, www.car.org. Generally, the Association will sell their forms in packages to both members and non-members. Some local Associations, however, will not sell to non-members. By Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[b] "Right to Sell" Defined

A provision in a listing agreement that gives the broker the "right to sell" gives him or her the right to solicit offers and submit them to the owner for the owner's acceptance; it does not, per se, give the broker the right to bind the owner on any contract of sale that could be specifically enforceable by the purchaser. If the owner intends to make a definite offer that need only be accepted by the purchaser, this intent must be clearly and definitely stated in the listing [Lyne v. Bonner (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 743, 746, 277 P.2d 941 ; Mason v. Mazel (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 769, 772-773, 187 P.2d 98] . See § 21.211 for discussion of the agent's authority to solicit acceptance and the appropriate form.

[c] Writing Required

An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate, for compensation, is invalid, unless the agreement, or some note or memorandum relating to the agreement, is in writing and signed by the party to be charged or by his or her agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. For discussion of the requirements necessary to satisfy the statute of frauds, see § 21.36[1].

A written listing agreement may be modified only by the following [Civ. Code § 1698(a)-(c)]: (1) a written agreement; (2) an oral agreement that has been fully executed by both parties; or (3) unless the agreement provides otherwise, an oral agreement that satisfies the statute of frauds, supported by new consideration. However, the statute does not preclude application of rules of law concerning estoppel, oral novation and substitution of a new agreement, rescission of a written agreement by an oral agreement, waiver of a provision of a written agreement, or oral independent collateral agreements, if appropriate [Civ. Code § 1698(d)].

[e] Termination of Agreement on Death of Principal

If the principal dies during the exclusive listing period, the exclusive right to sell terminates by operation of law and the executor who subsequently sells the property during the listing period will have no contractual liability under the agreement [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 612, 614, 98 Cal. Rptr. 559] . If the broker sells the property after the death of the principal but before learning of it, apparently the broker is still entitled to a commission [see Civ. Code § 2356]. For further discussion of the termination of a listing agreement, see § 21.50[3].

[f] Sale or Exchange of a Business Opportunity Property

In situations involving the sale or exchange of a business together with the real property, the Real Estate Commissioner is authorized to suspend or revoke a broker's license if the broker, without first having obtained from the owner of the property a written authorization to offer the property for sale or exchange, has a purchaser sign an agreement in which it is provided that the purchaser either transact the purchase or exchange of the property through the broker or pay a compensation to the broker if the property is purchased or exchanged [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(j)].

[g] Modification of Printed Forms

To the extent that specific terms of the agreement between the parties vary from the terms of the printed agreement (or that additional terms must be added to those set forth in the printed form), specific clauses or provisions can be drafted as riders to the printed form. However, riders should not be attached to the printed form if they are so numerous or so extensive as to make the resulting agreement ambiguous, unclear, contradictory, or cumbersome. If such a result appears likely, a new agreement should be drafted, using the form reproduced below as a reference for provisions that need not be varied.

[h] Specific Provisions

[i] Nature of Listing

Paragraph 1 of the following form sets forth the type of listing agreement as an "exclusive" right to sell [see [a], above].

Despite the fact that the listing agreement purports to be "irrevocable" [see [2], P 1, below], it is revocable at the will of the principal unless it is "coupled with an interest," that is, unless the agent has an interest in the property listed and not merely an expectation of a commission on the sale of the property [Glazer v. Hanson (1929) 98 Cal. App. 53, 59, 276 P. 607] .

Nonetheless, although the principal may have the power to revoke the listing agreement, this does not mean that he or she may exercise that power without incurring a liability to pay a commission or damages for breaching the agreement. The grant of an "irrevocable" right to sell the listed property for a specified period is commonly given in consideration for the broker's promise to use diligence in procuring a purchaser [see [2], P 8, below]. The agreement may further provide that the broker will receive a specified commission if the property is withdrawn from sale (that is, transferred, conveyed, leased, rented, or made unmarketable) by the seller before the expiration of the listing period [see [2], P 4(A)(3), below]. Thus, if the owner of the property exercises his or her power to revoke the listing agreement or to withdraw the property from sale prematurely, the broker is entitled to damages for a breach of the agreement or to the commission provided for in the agreement if he or she has been diligent in seeking a purchaser for the property, even though the property was sold by another broker, if the agreement provides for compensation to the original broker for any sale during the exclusive period [Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 891 ; see Baumgartner v. Meek (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 505, 509-511, 272 P.2d 552] . If, on the other hand, the broker fails to use diligence to find a purchaser, there is a failure of consideration, which entitles the owner to revoke at will without liability to the broker despite the grant of an irrevocable agency [Coleman v. Mora (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 137, 148-152, 69 Cal. Rptr. 166 ; Whitney Inv. Co. v. Westview Dev. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 594, 601, 78 Cal. Rptr. 302] . For further discussion of the broker's and seller's duties, see [x], below.

[iii] Expiration Date

An exclusive agreement authorizing a licensee to perform the acts of a real estate broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131] for compensation must contain a definite, specified date of termination [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f)]. See [xv], below, for discussion of a provision making time of the essence and § 21.50 for further discussion of the duration of the listing.

Paragraph 1 of this form provides for the inclusion of the expiration date.

[iv] Description of Property

An exclusive listing agreement should contain a sufficient description to identify the property listed. Both a legal and common description are usually included. If the description of the property is defective because of a mistake, ambiguity, or uncertainty, the defect may be cured by resort to extrinsic facts and circumstances, and when the property can be sufficiently identified by that additional information, the agreement may be enforced [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

In this form, the property description is to be set forth in Paragraph 1.

Paragraph 3 of this form provides the listing price and the terms of sale. If the listing agreement gives the agent the authority to solicit offers, the terms of sale need not be as detailed as those appearing in other types of real estate agreements where offers are to be presented to others for their acceptance [see [b], above]. Even in agreements where the agent has the authority to solicit an acceptance, it is recommended that the terms of the sale be included in a separate document (such as a sales agreement or escrow instructions) that is incorporated by reference into the body of the listing agreement, rather than in the body of the listing agreement itself. By physically dividing the terms of the transaction into two separate parts (the listing agreement and the sales agreement), the two sets of terms can be examined and considered independently to avoid confusion and the inadvertent omission of significant terms peculiar to either the listing or the sale. For a contract of sale or escrow instructions, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements , or Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

[vi] Inclusion of Personal Property

This form includes provisions applicable to the specific items that are to be included in and excluded from the listing agreement [see [2], P 2, below]. Unless otherwise specified in the space provided, all fixtures and fittings that are attached to the property are included, and all personal property items are excluded, from the purchase price. A Property Checklist may be used if the list (or descriptions) of the items of property for either inclusion or exclusion is too extensive to fit in the allotted space. If a Checklist is used, it should be noted in the applicable space provided as an attached exhibit.

[vii] Multiple-Listing Service

Paragraph 6 of this form states that the listing will be provided to a specified multiple-listing service. See § 21.34 for discussion of multiple-listing services.

[viii] Required Disclosure of Amount of Compensation

The license of a real estate agent may be suspended or revoked if he or she fails to disclose to the principal, prior to or coincident with the signing of the agreement evidencing the meeting of the minds of the contracting parties, the full amount of the agent's compensation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)].

Paragraph 4 of this form governs the broker's compensation. For further discussion of compensation, see § 21.51.

An exclusive right to sell listing may provide for compensation of the listing agent if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. This type of provision is commonly referred to as a safety clause and is contained in Paragraph 4(A)(2) of this form. For further discussion of safety clauses, see § 21.51[4].

[x] Broker's and Seller's Duties

Paragraph 8 of this form sets forth the obligation of the broker to exercise reasonable effort and due diligence to achieve the sale of the property. It also authorizes the broker to order reports and disclosures and advertise and market the property in any medium selected by the broker, including the Internet. In addition, Paragraph 8 sets forth the obligation of the seller to consider offers and to act in good faith to accomplish the sale of the property. Further, it sets forth in bold-faced letters the agreement of the seller to indemnify the broker from claims arising from incorrect information supplied by the seller or from any material facts the seller knows but fails to disclose.

[xi] Agency Relationships

Paragraph 10 of this form discusses further agency relationships, including provisions addressing an agent's possible dual agency with both the buyer and seller [see [2], P 10(A)-(E), below]. For discussion of these relationships and related duties of disclosure, see §§ 21.220[1], 21.221[1]. For a form disclosing that the agent is also acting as a principal in a particular real estate transaction, see § 21.222.

[xii] Deposit Money

Paragraph 9 of this form contains the deposit money provision. See § 21.54 for rules relating to deposit money.

[xiii] Dispute Resolution

Paragraph 19 contains provisions for the mediation and arbitration of disputes and claims arising under the agreement and sets forth the matters specifically excluded from mediation and arbitration, such as unlawful detainer actions and the filing of a mechanics' lien. Paragraph 19(B) contains the statutory heading and notice that must accompany a provision for binding arbitration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1298; see also § 21.210].

[xiv] Payment of Attorneys' Fees

Paragraph 15 of this form contains a provision entitling the prevailing party in any legal proceeding arising out of this agreement to reasonable attorneys' fees. In any action on a contract that contains a provision for attorneys' fees, the party prevailing on the contract will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to other costs, whether or not the provision specifically applies to that party [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. With certain exceptions, the party prevailing on the contract will be the party who recovered a greater relief in the action on the contract, as determined by the court [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) (exceptions)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

A party will normally be permitted to complete his or her performance within a "reasonable" time even though the performance is subsequent to the date specified in the contract [Civ. Code § 1492; see Katemis v. Westerlind (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 799, 804-805, 299 P.2d 383] . If time is made of the essence, however, a party who fails to perform on time will not be permitted to complete his or her performance and will not be entitled to restitution [see Glock v. Howard & Wilson Colony Co. (1898) 123 Cal. 1, 13, 55 P. 713 ; see also Amoruso v. Carley (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 422, 426-428, 209 P.2d 139] , unless the provision making time of the essence has been waived [see Gonzalez v. Hirose (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 213, 216-217, 200 P.2d 793] , or unless injustice would result [Barkis v. Scott (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 116, 118-124, 208 P.2d 367 ; Major-Blakeney Corp. v. Jenkins (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 325, 332-333, 263 P.2d 655] .

The form agreement reproduced below does not make time of the essence, although a time of the essence clause may be added to Paragraph 16 ("Additional Terms") of this form.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Residential Listing Agreement (Agency Authorization and Right to Sell) [CAR Form RLAA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. Participation in a multiple-listing service may be required of the broker [see [2], P 6, below; see also § 21.34].

Under an "exclusive agency listing," as under an exclusive right to sell listing [see § 21.200], the owner grants to an agent, for a specified period of time, the exclusive right to sell or to find a buyer for the property [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1), (2)]. The agent is entitled to the agreed compensation if during that time the property is sold by any other agent, or if the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [see Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1), (2)]. However, unlike an exclusive right to sell listing, under an exclusive agency listing, the owner reserves the right to sell directly (but not through any other agent) and, in that event, without obligation to pay compensation to the agent [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)].

If the owner of the property does not desire to retain the right to sell the property without becoming obligated to pay his or her broker a commission, the owner should use an "exclusive right to sell listing agreement" rather than the CAR exclusive agency listing form [see § 21.200[2]]. If the owner wants several brokers to attempt to sell the property, the "open listing" should be used, with the successful broker being the only one entitled to a commission [see § 21.202].

For coverage of other clauses in this form, see § 21.200[1].

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.202

§ 21.202 Non-Exclusive ("Open") Agency Authorization and Right to Sell [CAR Form RLAN]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Residential Listing Agreement--"Open" (Non-Exclusive Authorization and Right to Sell) [CAR Form RLAN, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. Participation in a multiple-listing service may be required of the broker [see [2], P 6, below; see also § 21.34].

An "open listing" does not grant the listing agent any exclusive rights or priorities. Rather, the agent receives a commission only if the agent procures and presents to the owner an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on the terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner, before the property is otherwise sold either through another agent or by the owner directly and before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]. An open listing may also contain an agreement by the owner to pay the listing agent compensation in any amount, at any time, and for services other than for selling the property or finding a buyer [Civ. Code § 1089].

An open listing differs from the exclusive right to sell and the exclusive agency agreements in §§ 21.200 and 21.201, respectively. Under the exclusive listing agreement, the broker is entitled to a commission if the property is sold or withdrawn from the market during the term of the agreement, whether the sale results from the efforts of the broker personally, another broker, or the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. If this type of agreement is desired, refer to § 21.200 for further discussion and the appropriate form. If the owner of the property desires to retain the right to sell the property directly (but not through any other agent), without becoming obligated to pay his or her broker a commission, the owner should use an "exclusive agency" agreement [see § 21.201].

For coverage of other provisions of this form, see § 21.200[1].

§ 21.204 Buyer Broker Agreement--Exclusive Right to Represent [CAR Form BBE]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Exclusive Buyer Broker Right to Represent Agreement [CAR Form BBE, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The representation agreement is irrevocable and exclusive [see [2], P 1, below]. CAR also publishes two other Buyer Broker Agreements: (1) a Non-Exclusive Right to Represent with compensation provisions for the broker [CAR Form BBNE; see § 21.205], and (2) a Non-Exclusive/Not for Compensation agreement [CAR Form BBNN; see § 21.206].

Under the exclusive authorization agreement, the broker is entitled to a commission if [see [2], P 3(B), below]:

- During the representation period, the buyer enters into an agreement to acquire any property as described in the agreement;

- Within a specified number of days after expiration of the representation period, the buyer enters into an agreement to acquire property that was introduced to the buyer by the broker or for which the broker acted on the buyer's behalf; or

- Within a specified number of days after expiration of the agreement, broker gives buyer a written notice of those properties that broker introduced to buyer, or for which broker acted on buyer's behalf.

If the buyer wants to retain the right to locate properties himself or herself or wants several brokers to attempt to locate property, the non-exclusive right to represent should be used, with the successful broker then being the only one entitled to a commission [see § 21.205].

[b] Purchase or Exchange of Business With Real Property

In situations involving the purchase or exchange of a business together with the real property, the Real Estate Commissioner is authorized to suspend or revoke a broker's license if the broker, without first having obtained a written authorization from the owner of the property concerned to offer the property for sale or exchange, has a purchaser sign an agreement in which it is provided that the purchaser will either transact the purchase or exchange of the property through the broker or will pay a compensation to the broker if the property is purchased or exchanged [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(j)].

A real estate license may be suspended or revoked if the licensee, while acting as an agent for a buyer of real property, fails to disclose to the buyer the nature and extent of any direct or indirect ownership interest of the licensee in the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)]. The licensee must also disclose the direct or indirect ownership of the property by (1) a person related to the licensee by blood or marriage, (2) an entity in which the licensee has an ownership interest, or (3) any other person with whom the licensee occupies a special relationship [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)]. See § 21.213 for a form to be used to set forth any of the above disclosures.

[d] Broker's Duty to Inspect

The broker's fiduciary duty with regard to inspections may be much broader than the statutory duty to visually inspect the property imposed on brokers selling to a buyer with whom there is no contractual or fiduciary relationship [Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 26 ; see Civ. Code § 2079]. For example, the broker's fiduciary duty may include the duty to inspect public records or permits. Paragraph 6 of the form defines the scope of the broker's duty with regard to inspections, and Paragraph 7(D) advises the buyer to read the buyer's Inspection Advisory attached to the agreement for a list of the items and other concerns that typically warrant inspections by the buyer or other professionals.

[e] Specific Provisions

[i] Nature of Agreement

Paragraph 1 of the form provides that the broker has the exclusive and irrevocable right to represent the buyer in acquiring real property. Despite the fact the agreement purports to be "irrevocable," it is revocable at the will of the principal unless it is "coupled with an interest" [see Glazer v. Hanson (1929) 98 Cal. App. 53, 59, 276 P. 607] . Nonetheless, although the buyer may have the power to revoke the authority of the broker, this does not mean that the buyer may exercise that power without incurring liability to pay a commission or damages for breaching the agreement [see [2], P 3, below].

[ii] Expiration Date

An exclusive agreement authorizing a licensee to perform the acts of a real estate broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131] for compensation must contain a definite, specified date of termination [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f)]. Paragraph 1 of this form provides for the inclusion of the expiration date. See § 21.50 for further discussion of the duration of the agreement.

[iii] Description of Property

Paragraph 4 of this form provides for a description of the type of acquisition, including the price range.

[iv] Broker Authorizations and Obligations

Paragraph 5(A) of this form states that the broker is authorized to locate and present properties to the buyer, present offers, and assist the buyer in negotiations for acceptance of those offers. The broker is also authorized to obtain a credit report on the buyer at the buyer's expense and to assist the buyer in other ways, including in the financing process and by providing the buyer with a list of professionals who perform inspection related services.

Paragraph 5(B) of this form sets forth the obligations of the broker with regard to the acquisition of a specific property, including an obligation to conduct a visual inspection of accessible areas for a residential property containing one-to-four dwelling units, an obligation to deliver or communicate disclosures, and an obligation to facilitate the escrow process. The scope of the broker's duties is described in Paragraph 6 of this form.

[v] Buyer Obligations

Paragraph 7 of this form sets forth the obligations of the buyer. The buyer must view or consider properties selected by the broker and act in good faith in the negotiation and completion of any contract entered into in furtherance of the agreement. Within five (or another number filled in by the parties) days from the date of execution, the buyer must provide the broker with personal and financial information to assure the broker of the buyer's ability to acquire the property. The buyer must notify the broker in writing of any material issue to the buyer, including buyer's requests for information on any particular interest of importance to the buyer. In addition, Paragraph 7(D) advises the buyer to read the buyer's Inspection Advisory attached to the agreement for a list of the items and other concerns that typically warrant inspections by the buyer or other professionals.

[vi] Agency Relationship

Under Paragraph 2(C)(1) of this form, if the buyer is shown property listed with the broker, the buyer consents to the broker becoming a dual agent for both the buyer and the seller with regard to those properties. If the broker is to act as the exclusive agent of the buyer, then the applicable box in Paragraph 2(C)(2) must be checked depending on whether the broker's firm lists or does not list properties for sale.

[vii] Disclosure of Compensation

The license of a real estate agent may be suspended or revoked if he or she fails to disclose to the principal, before or coincident with the signing of the agreement evidencing the meeting of the minds of the contracting parties, the full amount of the agent's compensation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)]. Paragraph 3 of this form governs the broker's compensation and includes a "safety clause" [see [2], P 3(B)(2), below]. For further discussion of compensation, see § 21.51.

[viii] Dispute Resolution

Paragraph 8 contains provisions for the mediation and arbitration of disputes and claims arising under the agreement. Paragraph 8(B) contains the statutory heading and notice that must accompany a provision for binding arbitration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1298; see also § 21.210]. The matters specifically excluded from mediation and arbitration, such as unlawful detainer actions and the filing of a mechanics' lien, are set forth in Paragraph 8(B)(2).

Paragraph 11 of this form contains a provision entitling the prevailing party in any legal proceeding regarding the obligation to pay compensation under the agreement to reasonable attorneys' fees. However, if a party commences an action without first attempting to resolve the matter through mediation as provided in Paragraph 8(A), then the party is not entitled to recover attorneys' fees, even if they would otherwise be available to that party in the action. For further discussion of attorneys' fees, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Non-Exclusive Buyer Broker Right to Represent Agreement [CAR Form BBNE, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. CAR also publishes two other Buyer Broker Agreements: (1) an Exclusive Right to Represent with compensation provisions for the broker [CAR Form BBE; see § 21.204], and (2) a Non-Exclusive/Not for Compensation agreement [CAR Form BBNN; see § 21.206].

The non-exclusive authorization in this form does not grant the broker any exclusive rights or priorities. The broker receives a commission under this agreement only if [see [2], P 3(B), below]:

- A buyer enters into an agreement to acquire specified property on those terms or any other terms acceptable to the buyer during the term of the representation period if the property was introduced to the buyer by the broker or was one for which the broker acted on the buyer's behalf; or

- Within a specified number of days after expiration of the representation period, the buyer enters into an agreement to acquire the specified property that broker introduced to buyer, or for which broker acted on the buyer's behalf.

The non-exclusive authorization differs from the exclusive authorization under which the broker is entitled to a commission if the buyer acquires property during the term of the agreement, whether the acquisition results from the efforts of the broker personally, another broker, or the buyer. If this type of agreement is desired, see § 21.204.

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard Non-Exclusive/Not for Compensation Buyer Broker Agreement [CAR Form BBNN, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The representation agreement is revocable and non-exclusive [see [2], P 1, below]. It contains neither a description of the property to be acquired nor a compensation component. It is intended to:

- Define the scope of the agency relationship [see [2], P 2, below];
- Clarify the broker's duty with regard to inspections [see [2], PP 3 and 4, below; see also [b], below]; and
- Add certainty about the time frame within which any legal action can be brought [see [2], P 6, below].

Unless the parties otherwise agree to a only single agency, under Paragraph 2(C)(1) of this form the buyer consents to the broker becoming a dual agent with regard to properties listed with the broker. Paragraph 6 provides that any legal action for breach of the agreement must be brought no more than two years from the expiration of the agreement or the date the cause of action arose, whichever occurs first. There is no provision for payment of attorneys' fees.

CAR also publishes two other Buyer Broker Agreements: (1) an Exclusive Right to Represent [CAR Form BBE; see § 21.204], and (2) a Non-Exclusive Right to Represent [CAR Form BBNE; see § 21.205]. Unlike the form in [2], below, both of these other agreements are irrevocable and include compensation provisions to the broker, dispute resolution provisions, and a provision providing for attorneys' fees.

Paragraph 4 of the form defines the scope of the broker's duty with regard to inspections.

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.211

§ 21.211 Authority of Broker to Solicit Buyer's Acceptance of Seller's Offer in Listing Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a clause authorizing a broker to accept, on the seller's behalf, an offer by a purchaser to buy the property that is the subject of the listing agreement. In other words, this clause should be used if the listing agreement is drafted so that (1) it constitutes an offer to sell, and (2) a purchaser's acceptance of the seller's offer would turn the listing agreement into the actual agreement of sale. Thus, this clause gives the broker the right to bind the owner on a contract of sale. Obviously, it should not be used unless the listing contains detailed provisions setting forth the terms and conditions of the sale. As a practial matter, it is rare for a broker to be given this type of authority to bind the owner on a contract of sale.

This form is intended to be incorporated by reference into the body of the listing agreement [see §§ 21.200-21.202]. If a standard form listing agreement is used, the provision incorporating the exhibit by reference can be set forth in the section of the agreement devoted to additional or miscellaneous terms [see, e.g., § 21.200 [2], P 16]. Alternatively, this form may be modified to serve a clause that may be incorporated directly into the body of the listing agreement.

[b] Authority of Agent to Solicit Acceptance

A provision in a listing agreement that gives the broker the "right to sell" gives the broker the right to solicit offers and submit them to the owner for his or her acceptance; it does not, per se, give the broker the right to bind the owner on any contract of sale that could be specifically enforceable by the purchaser. If the owner intends to make a definite offer that need only be accepted by the purchaser, this intent must be clearly and definitely stated in the listing [Lyne v. Bonner (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 743, 746, 277 P.2d 941 ; Mason v. Mazel (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 769, 772-773, 187 P.2d 98] .

[c] Buyer's Acceptance as Separate Agreement

If the listing agreement authorizes the agent to solicit the buyer's acceptance of the seller's offer, a form providing for that acceptance must be drafted [see § 21.212].

[2] FORM

Authority of Broker to Solicit Buyer's Acceptance of Seller's Offer in Listing Agreement

EXHIBIT _____

Broker's Authority to Solicit Acceptance From Buyer

The [title of listing agreement] ("Agreement") to which this Exhibit is attached, and which incorporates this Exhibit by reference, is more than a mere grant of authority to Broker to solicit offers from purchasers that are to be submitted to Seller for Seller's approval and acceptance. Instead, the Agreement constitutes an offer that may be accepted by any buyer without the need for the further approval of Seller or Broker. On such an acceptance by a buyer, Broker is expressly authorized and obligated to take the following steps:

(1) To bind Seller by contract according to the terms and conditions set forth in the Agreement;

(2) To record this Agreement;

(3) To prepare, execute, and deliver all necessary documents for the consummation of this sale [or exchange or sale or exchange] and the transfer of title, in the name of Seller; and

(4) To perform any other acts that may be required for the consummation of this sale [or exchange or sale or exchange], the transfer of title, and the recording of the deed or other evidence of the transfer of title.

Notwithstanding the above, unless a signed copy of the buyer's acceptance is delivered to Seller, either in person or by mail to the address of Seller set forth in the Agreement, within the period of the Agreement, or unless other terms are accepted by Seller and the buyers within the period of the Agreement, the Agreement and the offer to the buyers that it contains shall be canceled and of no further force and effect.

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.212

§ 21.212 Buyer's Acceptance of Seller's Offer in Listing Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a buyer's acceptance of a seller's offer (in a listing agreement) to sell real property. It may be used when (1) the listing agreement is intended to serve as a definite offer to sell, and (2) the acceptance by a purchaser of the seller's offer converts the listing agreement into the sales agreement. As a practial matter, it is rare for a broker to be given this type of authority to bind the owner on a contract of sale.

The buyer's acceptance may be incorporated into the body of the listing agreement [see §§ 21.200-21.202] or may be included in a separate document that is then incorporated by reference into the body of the listing agreement. This form uses the latter approach of placing the acceptance in a separate, attached exhibit. If a standard form listing agreement is used, the provision incorporating this form by reference can be set forth in the section of the agreement devoted to additional or miscellaneous terms [see e.g., § 21.200[2], P 16].

Use of all capital letters will make the representations more prominent. If the agreement is to be printed, these provisions should be in larger type than the other provisions.

[b] Contract of Sale or Escrow Instructions as Separate Agreement

When a broker is authorized to solicit a buyer's acceptance of the seller's offer in the listing agreement, the parties must contemplate and draft the terms of the sale. The terms of sale may be incorporated into the body of the listing agreement or may be included in a separate document (such as a sales agreement or escrow instructions) that is then incorporated by reference into the body of the listing agreement. Because none of the listing agreements in this chapter [see §§ 21.200-21.202] include terms of sale, if this form is to be used, the attorney should incorporate the terms of sale in a separate, attached exhibit. When that approach is used, the terms of the entire transaction are physically divided into two important parts, the listing agreement and the sales agreement. The two sets of terms can be examined and considered independently to avoid confusion and the inadvertent omission of significant terms peculiar to either the listing or the sale.

Since either a contract of sale or escrow instructions must be prepared when this form is used, refer to Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements, or Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows.

[a] Use of Form

Disclosure to Buyer of Agent's Interest in Property

This form notifies a potential purchaser of real property that the purchaser's agent has an ownership interest in the property. It may be incorporated into the body of the exclusive buyer-broker agreement [see § 21.204] or may be included in a separate document that is then incorporated by reference into the body of such an agreement. This form uses the latter approach and consequently is intended to be a separate, attached exhibit to a buyer-broker agreement. If a standard form buyer-broker agreement is used, the provision incorporating this form by reference can be noted in the section of the agreement devoted to additional or miscellaneous terms or conditions [see, e.g., § 21.204 [2], P 10].

[b] Disclosure of Agent's Interest in Property

A real estate license may be suspended or revoked if the licensee, while acting as an agent for a buyer of real property, fails to disclose to the buyer the nature and extent of any direct or indirect ownership interest of the licensee in the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)]. The licensee must also disclose the direct or indirect ownership of the property by (1) a person related to the licensee by blood or marriage, (2) an entity in which the licensee has an ownership interest, or (3) any other person with whom the licensee occupies a special relationship [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)].

B. Agency Relationship Disclosures

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.220

§ 21.220 Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationships [CAR Form AD]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard disclosure regarding real estate agency relationships [CAR Form AD, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The form sets forth the statutory disclosure regarding real estate agency relationships required by the Civil Code for every real estate transaction involving (1) an estate of inheritance or life estate in property containing one to four dwelling units, (2) any leasehold in the foregoing type of property, or (3) a mobilehome [see Civ. Code § 2079.14; see also Civ. Code § 2079.13(j) ("real property" defined); Civ. Code § 761(1), (2) (estates in real property defined)]. Real estate agents must give this form to buyers and sellers at the times and in the manner prescribed in Civ. Code § 2079.14 (discussed below).

This form is complete as reproduced below; nothing need be filled in. It must be signed by the agent and the agent's associate licensee (if any), as well as by the buyer and/or seller, as appropriate [Civ. Code § 2079.16].

PRACTICE TIP:

Getting in Touch With the California Association of Realtors. The California Association of Realtors has offices throughout California. Their headquarters are located at 525 South Virgil Ave., Los Angeles, CA. 90020, (213) 739-8200, www.car.org. Generally, the Association will sell their forms in packages to both members and non-members. Some local Associations, however, will not sell to non-members. By Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[b] Purpose and Contents of Form

So that buyers and sellers of real estate will understand their relationships to their agents, this form (1) discloses the capacity in which the agent is acting in a particular transaction (exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller), and (2) enumerates the affirmative obligations of the agent in each relationship [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.14-2079.16]. Further, Civ. Code §§ 2079.13 through 2079.24, excluding Civ. Code § 2079.16 itself, must be and are printed on the back of this form, so that the actual statutes regarding agency disclosures are available to buyers and sellers at the time the form is provided [see Civ. Code § 2079.16].

[c] Timing

A "listing agent" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)] must provide the form to the seller before the agent and the seller enter into a listing agreement [Civ. Code § 2079.13(e); see Civ. Code § 2079.14(e) ("listing agreement" defined)]. A "selling agent" must provide the form to the seller "as soon as practicable" before presenting the seller with an offer to purchase, unless the selling agent is also the listing agent and has previously provided the seller with the disclosure form in his or her capacity as a listing agent [Civ. Code § 2079.14(b)]. If the selling agent does not deal on a face-to-face basis with the seller, the disclosure form prepared by the selling agent may be furnished to the seller (and acknowledgment of its receipt may be obtained from the seller) by the listing agent [Civ. Code § 2079.14(c); see [e], below (acknowledgment of receipt)]. Alternatively, the selling agent may deliver the disclosure form to the seller by certified mail addressed to the seller at his or her last known address, in which case no signed acknowledgment of receipt is required [Civ. Code § 2079.14(c); see [e], below (acknowledgment of receipt)].

The selling agent must provide this form to the buyer "as soon as practicable" before execution of the buyer's offer to purchase [Civ. Code § 2079.14(d)]. However, if the offer to purchase is not prepared by the selling agent, it is sufficient if the selling agent presents the disclosure form to the buyer not later than the next business day after the selling agent receives the offer to purchase from the buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.14(d)].

[d] Delegation of Duty to Associate Licensee

Listing agents, selling agents, and real estate brokers are responsible for providing the disclosure form to their clients [Civ. Code § 2079.14; see Civ. Code § 2079.13(a) ("agent" defined); Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 (real estate broker's acts defined); § 21.10; see also Civ. Code §§ 2079.14, 2079.17 (disclosure duties of "selling" agents and "listing" agents)]. The statutes recognize, however, that a broker may delegate his or her duty to provide the form to an "associate licensee," who may be a real estate salesperson or another broker licensed under or working pursuant to a written contract with the broker [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(b) ("associate licensee" defined); Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10017 ("salesman" means "salesperson"), 10132 (real estate salesperson); but see Civ. Code § 2079.13(o) ("subagent" is not "associate licensee"); see also § 21.11 (real estate salespersons)]. When the broker's duty has been delegated to an associate licensee, the broker still "bears responsibility" for his or her associate licensee; however, the associate licensee also has a duty to the client [Civ. Code § 2079.13(b)]. Thus, the statutes imposing the obligation to provide the statutory form provide that, when an associate licensee owes a duty to any principal (or to any buyer or seller who is not a principal) in a real property transaction, that duty is "equivalent" to the duty owed to that party by the broker for whom the associate licensee functions [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(b)].

The agents must obtain signed acknowledgments of receipt of the disclosure form from the seller or buyer, except (1) when the disclosure form is sent by certified mail to a seller by a selling agent who does not deal on a face-to-face basis with the seller [see Civ. Code § 2079.14(c)], or (2) when the seller or the buyer refuses to sign an acknowledgment of receipt of the disclosure form [Civ. Code § 2079.14; see Civ. Code § 2079.15]. If one of the parties refuses to acknowledge receipt of the form, the agent or associate licensee must set forth, sign, and date a written declaration of the facts of the refusal [Civ. Code § 2079.15].

[f] Other Disclosure Obligations

Nothing in the statutory rules requiring disclosure of agency relationships diminishes the duty of disclosure that sellers and their agents owe to buyers, nor do the statutory rules relieve agents (or their associate licensees, subagents, or employees) from liability for their conduct otherwise imposed by law [Civ. Code § 2079.24]. For discussion of the duties of disclosure owed to buyers by sellers and their agents, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

In Huijers v. DeMarrais [Huijers v. DeMarrais (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232] , the Court of Appeal held that a listing agreement was voidable by the sellers because the buyer's broker had failed to give them the statutory agency disclosure form set forth in Civ. Code § 2079.16 before entering into the listing agreement with the sellers. Because Civ. Code § 2079.24 provides that the statutes governing agency disclosures do not diminish the duty of disclosure owed by agents or relieve agents from liability, the statutes leave intact the common law remedies for failure to disclose [Huijers v. DeMarrais (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232] . Under the common law, if an agent breaches the duty to disclose dual representation, the remedy is that the seller is not liable for the commission, and may avoid the transaction [Huijers v. DeMarrais (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232 (citing McConnell v. Cowan (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 805, 809, 285 P.2d 261)].

The form must be followed by actual disclosure of the capacity in which the agent is acting in the particular transaction (that is, exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller) [Civ. Code § 2079.17]. Further, a confirmation of that relationship must be executed or acknowledged [see Civ. Code § 2079.17]. For such a confirmation form, see § 21.221.

§ 21.221 Confirmation: Real Estate Agency Relationships [CAR Form AC-6]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard confirmation of a real estate agency relationship [CAR Form AC-6, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The form is prescribed by the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 2079.17(c)]. A confirmation form is required only when the transaction involves (1) an estate of inheritance or life estate in property containing one to four dwelling units, (2) any leasehold in the foregoing type of property, or (3) a mobilehome [see Civ. Code § 2079.14; see also Civ. Code §§ 761(1), (2) (estates in real property defined), 2079.13(j)("real property" defined)].

For the statutory disclosure form regarding real estate agency relationships prescribed by Civ. Code § 2079.16, see § 21.220.

PRACTICE TIP:

Getting in Touch With the California Association of Realtors. The California Association of Realtors has offices throughout California. Their headquarters are located at 525 South Virgil Ave., Los Angeles, CA. 90020, (213) 739-8200, www.car.org. Generally, the Association will sell their forms in packages to both members and non-members. Some local Associations, however, will not sell to non-members. By Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[b] Required Disclosure and Confirmation

In addition to providing the required "Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationships" [Civ. Code § 2079.16; see § 21.220], each agent has the further duty of disclosing whether he or she is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, exclusively as the buyer's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17; see Civ. Code § 2079.13(d) ("dual agent" defined)], and of confirming the disclosure in writing [see Civ. Code § 2079.17].

A "listing agent" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)] may act in a particular transaction exclusively as the seller's agent or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b)]. A "selling agent" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(n)] may act in a particular transaction exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a)]. A listing agent may also act as a selling agent, and the combination of both of these functions in one agent does not, of itself, make the agent a dual agent [Civ. Code § 2079.22]. However, a listing agent (whether or not that agent is also a selling agent) may not act as an agent for the buyer only [Civ. Code §§ 2079.17(b), 2079.18].

The disclosure of the actual relationship between the agent and the seller or buyer may initially be made either orally or in writing, and must be made "as soon as practicable" [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)]. However, the disclosure must be followed by a written confirmation of the relationship (this form). Disclosure of the capacity in which the listing agent is acting must be confirmed either in a separate writing executed or acknowledged by the seller and the listing agent or in the sales agreement [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b)]. The capacity in which the selling agent is acting must be confirmed either in a separate writing executed or acknowledged by the seller, the buyer, and the selling agent or in the sales agreement [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a)]. If the confirmation is in a writing separate from the contract, the separate writing must be executed or acknowledged before or coincident with the execution of the contract [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)].

[c] Duty to Provide Form

The duty to prepare and obtain signatures on this form falls on real estate brokers [Civ. Code § 2079.14(a), (b); see Civ. Code § 2079.13(a) ("agent" defined); Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 (real estate broker); see also Civ. Code §§ 2079.14, 2079.17 (disclosure duties of "selling" agents and "listing" agents)]. However, the statutes recognize that brokers may delegate their duties in this regard to "associate licensees" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(b)]. For a discussion of the duties of brokers and associate licensees to provide the statutory forms, see § 21.220[1][d].

PART IV. FORMS
B. Agency Relationship Disclosures

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.222

§ 21.222 Disclosure to Principal That Broker Is Also a Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used by a real estate broker to advise his or her principal in a real estate transaction that the broker is also acting as a principal in the transaction and to reveal any compensation, commission, or profit that the broker will receive. The form will typically be used if a broker wishes to purchase for his or her own account property for which the broker has earlier obtained a listing, or if the broker wishes to obtain an option to purchase the listed property.

Although the right of a real estate broker to act in the dual capacity of principal and agent has been upheld in California [see Estate of Baldwin (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 596, 605-606, 110 Cal. Rptr. 189] , the right is subject to stringent limitations.

A broker generally must conform to the same high standards of fidelity and loyalty to which trustees are held [Civ. Code § 2322; Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 222-223, 169 P.2d 371 ; Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 792, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; see Prob. Code § 16000 et seq. (duties of trustees)]. A trustee has a broad duty not to take part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. A transaction between a trustee and a beneficiary by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16004(c)].

At the minimum, a broker who undertakes to act both as agent and principal must make a full disclosure of all material facts concerning the transaction that might affect the other principal's decision [Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 223, 169 P.2d 371 ; Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 793, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242] . This duty of disclosure is in addition to the statutory duties of disclosure imposed by the Business and Professions Code [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(d), (g), (h); see also § 21.22]. Thus, a broker may not act for more than one party in a transaction without the knowledge or consent of all parties to the transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(d)]. Similarly, a broker may not claim or take any secret or undisclosed compensation, commission, or profit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)]. Brokers must, before or coincident with the execution of the contracts between them and their principals, reveal to their principals the full amount of their compensation, commissions, and profits [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g)]. A broker may not take an option to purchase except when the broker, before or coincident with the exercise of the option, reveals in writing to the principal the full amount of the broker's profit and obtains the written consent of the principal approving the amount of the profit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(h); see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property].

For further discussion of broker as principal, see § 21.22.

[c] Date

The required disclosures of the broker to the principal should be made before the principal signs a contract obligating the principal to sell the property to the broker. Accordingly, the date on this form should be the same as, or earlier than, the date on the contract.

[d] Independent Counsel

A real estate agent who acts as a principal in a transaction in which he or she is employed as an agent should advise the principal that the principal has the right to obtain independent counsel regarding the propriety of the sale. The first alternative provision of Paragraph 6 of this form recites that the agent has advised the principal of that right, but that the principal has decided to proceed without independent counsel. The second alternative version of Paragraph 6 may be used to set forth the name of the advisor if the principal exercises the above right.

[e] Disclosure to Buyer of Agent's Interest in Property

A real estate license may be suspended or revoked if the licensee, while acting as an agent for a buyer of real property, fails to disclose to the buyer the nature and extent of any direct or indirect ownership interest of the licensee in the real property. The licensee must also disclose the direct or indirect ownership of the property by (1) a person related to the licensee by blood or marriage, (2) an entity in which the licensee has an ownership interest, or (3) any other person with whom the licensee occupies a special relationship [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)]. § 21.230 Independent Contractor Agreement (Between Broker and Associate-Licensee) [CAR Form ICA]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard independent contractor agreement between a broker and associate-licensee [CAR Form ICA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The form may be used when the salesperson is to be an independent contractor, not an employee. For discussion of the characterization of a real estate salesperson as an employee or independent contractor, see § 21.71. For discussion of employees and independent contractors generally, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors , and Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

If the salesperson is hired as an employee rather than an independent contractor, this form may serve as a checklist of the material aspects of the broker-salesperson relationship that should be covered by the employment agreement. For employment contracts generally, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

PRACTICE TIP:

Getting in Touch With the California Association of Realtors. The California Association of Realtors has offices throughout California. Their headquarters are located at 525 South Virgil Ave., Los Angeles, CA. 90020, (213) 739-8200, www.car.org. Generally, the Association will sell their forms in packages to both members and non-members. Some local Associations, however, will not sell to non-members. By Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[b] Contents and Execution

Every real estate broker must have a written agreement with each of his or her salespersons, whether licensed as a salesperson or as a broker. The agreement must be dated and signed by the parties and must cover the material aspects of the relationship between the parties, including supervision of licensed activities, duties, and compensation [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2726].

[c] Salesperson's Assistant

Paragraph 12 of this form provides that the salesperson may make use of a personal assistant provided that the salesperson has a written agreement with the assistant that establishes the terms and responsibilities of the parties. Both the salesperson and the assistant must sign any agreement that the broker has established for these purposes. Unless otherwise agreed, a licensed assistant must supply a copy of his or her license to the broker. For a form of agreement between the salesperson and the assistant, see § 21.233. For a three-party agreement between the broker, the salesperson, and the assistant, see § 21.234.

[d] Modification of Commission Schedule

The clauses in Paragraph 8 of this form providing for sales commissions in accordance with a set schedule, which may not be varied except by written agreement of the parties, precludes oral modification of the commission arrangement. In Beggerly v. Gbur [Beggerly v. Gbur (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 180, 169 Cal. Rptr. 166] , the court held that such a clause expresses a clear intent to preclude oral modification within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1698(c), and rejected the salesperson's allegation that a new oral agreement had been reached [Beggerly v. Gbur (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 180, 187-190, 169 Cal. Rptr. 166 ; see Civ. Code § 1698(c) (written contract may be modified by oral agreement supported by new consideration unless written contract expressly provides otherwise)].

§ 21.231 Salesperson Change Application [DRE Form 214]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an official form prepared by the California Department of Real Estate for use by licensed real estate brokers and salespersons to notify the Real Estate Commissioner of certain changes affecting salespersons. These changes include changes in a salesperson's name, mailing address, or sponsoring broker.

Typically, licensed salespersons prepare and submit this form to the Department of Real Estate. However, real estate brokers also use the form to notify the Real Estate Commissioner of the commencement and termination of a salesperson's employment [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10161.8(a), (b); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2752]. Whenever a real estate salesperson enters the employ of a real estate broker, the broker must notify the Real Estate Commissioner of that fact within five days [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2752]. This notification must be given on this form and must be signed by the broker and the salesperson. The predecessor broker may use the form to give notice of termination of the broker-salesperson relationship if the form is mailed to the Real Estate Commissioner not more than 10 days following the termination [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2752; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10161.8(b) (notice of termination required)].

The Department of Real Estate maintains an informative website at www.dre.ca.gov. All DRE forms, including the form in [2], below, can be found at www.dre.ca.gov/frm_forms.html.

[b] Distinguished From Change Application (for Broker Licensees)

This form should be distinguished from the Department of Real Estate form entitled "Broker Change Application (for Broker Licensees)," to be used by a licensed real estate broker, including one working as a broker-salesperson, to notify the Real Estate Commissioner of certain changes affecting the broker. See § 21.232 for a copy of that form and related discussion.

[c] Changes on License of Salesperson

Whenever a salesperson licensee acquires a business address different from the address shown on his or her license, the licensee must (1) mark out the former address on the face of the license, (2) type or write in ink the new main office address on the reverse side, and (3) date and initial the changes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10161.8(c)]. Whenever a real estate salesperson enters the employ of a new broker, the salesperson must (1) mark out the name of his or her former broker on the face of the license, (2) type or write the name of the new employing broker in ink on the reverse side, and (3) date and initial the changes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10161.8(d)].

As indicated on the form, this form is to be used by brokers only (including those working as broker-salespersons). Licensed salespersons, however, must use DRE Form 214 [see § 21.231 for the official form and a discussion of changes involving salespersons]. Corporations and corporate officers must use DRE Form 204A.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard personal assistant contract between an associate-licensee and a licensed or unlicensed assistant [CAR Form PAC, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The contract does all of the following:

- Specifies whether the assistant is an employee or independent contractor of the salesperson [see [2], P 3, below];
- Provides for compensation of the assistant [see [2], P 5, below]; and
- Specifies whether or not the assistant is covered by errors and omissions insurance obtained by the salesperson or broker [see [2], P 7, below].

Paragraph 4 allows the parties to specify the activities to be performed by the assistant.

This contract satisfies the requirement of the independent contractor agreement between the broker and salesperson that the salesperson may make use of a personal assistant only if the salesperson has a written agreement with the personal assistant that establishes the terms and responsibilities of the parties [see § 21.230[2]]. For a three-party agreement between the broker, salesperson, and assistant, see § 21.234.

This form, prepared by the California Association of Realtors (CAR), is a standard broker/associate-licensee/assistant three-party agreement [CAR Form TPA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R); endorsement not implied]. The agreement establishes the relationship between the parties. Paragraph 4 specifies that the assistant works for the salesperson under the terms of a separate written agreement between them, and that, except as specified, no other agreements exist between the broker and assistant for the performance of any acts specified in the agreement between the salesperson and the assistant. Paragraph 6 states that the salesperson is solely responsible for the assistant's compensation.

This agreement is designed to be used with the agreement between the salesperson and the assistant that establishes the terms and responsibilities of their relationship [see § 21.233] and the independent contractor agreement between the broker and salesperson [see § 21.230].

PART IV. FORMS
D. Finder's Agreements

9-21 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 21.240

§ 21.240 Finder-Buyer Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between a "finder" and a person who wishes to purchase real estate. The finder's sole function under this agreement is to "find" and introduce prospective parties to a real estate transaction [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] .

Unlike a "listing agent" [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)], a "finder" need not be a real estate licensee [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . However, if a finder is to perform services other than merely finding and introducing the parties, the finder must be a real estate licensee, and an appropriate listing agreement should be executed by the finder (agent) and his or her principal [see Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 12, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] .

For coverage of real estate listing agreements and standard agreement forms, see §§ 21.200-21.206. For a finder-seller agreement and related discussion, see § 21.241.

[b] Finder's Authority

An unlicensed finder's authority under a finder's agreement must be very limited. The only power that can be given to, and the only duty that can be imposed on, an unlicensed finder is to find a potential buyer and introduce him or her to the seller [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . Any power or duties given the finder beyond merely finding a buyer and introducing him or her to the seller will prevent the finder from being able to enforce the finder's agreement unless he or she is a licensed real estate broker [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 11-12, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . The distinction between a finder and a broker is more fully discussed in § 21.14.

[c] Writing Required

Finders' fee agreements, like brokers' commission agreements, are subject to the statute of frauds and, accordingly, must be in writing and signed by the party to be charged [see Civ. Code § 1624; Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1258, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] .

[d] Arbitration Provision

If a binding arbitration provision is desired, see § 21.210 for such a provision and its related statutory notice.

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter deals with options to purchase real property. It covers transactional, contractual, tax, and drafting considerations and includes discussions concerning the formal requirements for executing and recording options.

The chapter also discusses requirements for extending the option period, exercising and assigning the option, and quitclaiming option rights. A general form of option to purchase, an option to repurchase, a successive option, and an abstract of option constitute the option agreements contained in this chapter. Various option provisions applicable to specific transactions are also included. Related forms set forth in the chapter include a notice of exercise of the right to extend an option period, an extension of an option agreement, a notice of exercise of an option, an assignment of an option, and a quitclaim of option rights.

Related topics not discussed in detail in this chapter are agreements to sell real property and exchanges of real property. These topics are discussed in Chapters 23, Real Property Sales Agreements , and 24, Real Property Exchanges .

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Nature of Option Agreement

§ 22.10 Definitions

An option to purchase real property, when supported by consideration, is a contract by which an owner gives another the exclusive right to purchase specified real property for a stipulated price within a specified time [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139 ; see Spielberg v. Granz (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 283, 289, 8 Cal. Rptr. 190] . It is a right acquired by contract to accept or reject a present offer to sell real property within a limited time in the future [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . The right to purchase created by an option is a substantial one: it is irrevocable by the owner of the property and may be exercised against the owner's successors following the owner's death [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . Typically, the owner of the real property is referred to as the "optionor" and the holder of the option is referred to as the "optionee."

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Nature of Option Agreement

§ 22.11 Distinguished From Sales Contract

An option to purchase real property must be distinguished from a sales contract to purchase property. An option gives the optionee the right to purchase specified property without imposing any duty to purchase, while a sales contract obligates the buyer to purchase the property according to the terms and conditions set forth in the contract [Schmidt v. Beckelman (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 462, 469-470, 9 Cal. Rptr. 736] .

The difference in the obligations imposed distinguishes the two types of agreements and is the primary factual and legal indicator used in determining whether an instrument, regardless of its title or form, is an option or a sales contract [Scarbery v. Bill Patch Land & Water Co. (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 87, 100, 7 Cal. Rptr. 408] . The test of whether an instrument is an option or a contract of sale is whether there is such an obligation on the part of the optionee/purchaser to buy that it can be enforced by specific performance [Scarbery v. Bill Patch Land & Water Co. (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 87, 100, 7 Cal. Rptr. 408] . The form and title of an instrument are not controlling, since the law looks through the form to substance and gives effect to the intention of the parties [Welk v. Fainbarg (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 269, 272-273, 63 Cal. Rptr. 127] . For example, it has been held that an instrument, although labeled an option, was in fact a contract of purchase and sale; the agreement provided for substantial, continued, and immediate payments on the purchase price before exercise of the option was permitted, and its practical effect amounted to a contract of purchase and sale with regular installment payments [see Smith v. Morton (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 616, 618-620, 106 Cal. Rptr. 52] . When the contract is ambiguous, the courts will look to extrinsic evidence to determine the true intent of the parties [Welk v. Fainbarg (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 269, 273, 63 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

On exercise of the option, it becomes a contract of sale binding on both parties; however, the mere exercise of the option does not mean that a new contract is in fact made by and at the time of the exercise. The contract of sale has already been made, as far as the optionor is concerned, but it is subject to conditions that are removed by the exercise. Moreover, the optionee is entitled to specific performance of the contract when the option is exercised, and this right relates back to the time of giving the option so as to cut off intervening rights acquired with knowledge of the existence of the option [Seeburg v. El Royale Corp. (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 128 P.2d 362] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Nature of Option Agreement

§ 22.12 Distinguished From Preemptive Right

An option should also be distinguished from a preemptive right. A preemptive right does not give the preemptioner the power to compel an unwilling owner to sell. It merely requires the owner, when and if the owner decides to sell, to offer to sell the property first to the person entitled to the preemptive right at a stipulated price [Mercer v. Lemmens (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 167, 170, 40 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Nature of Option Agreement

§ 22.13 Statute of Frauds

Although an option to purchase real property is considered to be a property right, it does not constitute an interest in the land itself [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 691, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . An option supported by consideration is an enforceable contract, subject to the principles of contract law [see Caras v. Parker (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 621, 626-627, 309 P.2d 104] . Thus, in the same manner that a contract to sell real property is subject to the statute of frauds, an option to purchase real property comes within the statute of frauds and, accordingly, must be in writing [Pac. Etc. Dev. Corp. v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 62, 66, 301 P.2d 825 ; Civ. Code § 1624(c)]. The statute of frauds requires a writing, signed by the party to be charged [see Civ. Code § 1624]. A sufficient memorandum of a sale of an interest in real property must include the identity of the parties [Malerbi & Associates v. Seivert (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 760, 762, 12 Cal. Rptr. 852] , a description of the property so that it may be adequately identified [Ganiats Construction, Inc. v. Hesse (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 377, 384, 4 Cal. Rptr. 706] , and the terms of the sale [Ontario Downs, Inc. v. Lauppe (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 697, 702, 13 Cal. Rptr. 782] . Since an option agreement, when exercised, becomes the sales agreement [Caras v. Parker (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 621, 625-627, 309 P.2d 104] , it requires the same care and specificity in drafting as a contract of sale. At a minimum, an option should contain a description of the real property, the identity of the parties, the price for the sale of the real property, the time period during which the option may be exercised, a definite statement of the consideration of the optionee, and various other terms concerning the manner of exercising and giving notice of the exercise of te option. Refer to Sections 22.110 and 22.111 for various matters to consider for inclusion in the option agreement.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Benefits of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.20

§ 22.20 Practical Uses of Options for Both Optionee and Optionor

[1] Avoiding Necessity of Present Commitment

An option may suit a potential buyer or seller who does not desire to make a present commitment. A potential buyer might simply be hesitant and desire more time. A potential seller might currently need occupancy of the premises but be willing to sell for a price based on a higher market, or might want to postpone the sale to a more favorable tax period.

[2] Avoiding Conditions and Contingencies in the Sales Agreement

In many real estate transactions, the parties find themselves drafting conditions into the sales agreement or deposit receipt, which, if not satisfied, relieve a party from going forward with the contract. These conditions often raise problems as to whether they were satisfied or whether the party responsible has exercised good faith in attempting to satisfy the conditions.

For example, even the simple purchase of a single-family dwelling may involve the condition that the buyer obtain satisfactory financing. A complex transaction may have many conditions relating to soil conditions, zoning, surveys, and other matters. By using an option, the parties can avoid the insertion of certain (or any) conditions or contingencies into the final sales agreement. This is possible because the option provides a period during which the optionee can wait to see whether particular conditions and contingencies will be satisfied before deciding whether or not to exercise the option. The optionor also benefits from this arrangement: if the sale does not go through because the optionee chooses not to exercise the option, the optionor has the option consideration as compensation; if the option is exercised, the optionor benefits from a sales agreement with few (if any) tangential conditions and contingencies remaining to be fulfilled, which is an agreement the optionor can be more confident of enforcing.

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Benefits of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.21

§ 22.21 Benefit of Option to Optionee

[1] Speculation

One classic use of the option is for speculation on a rising real estate market. The advantage of the option is that it allows the optionee to speculate on property with a small investment in proportion to the cost of an outright purchase. If the market does rise, the optionee deducts the option price from profits. But if the market falls, the optionee's losses are cut to a minimum.

In the area of real estate development, there are numerous situations in which a considerable amount of work and investigation must be carried out before the potential purchaser can establish that he or she has a profitable use for the property. A developer may need to know the results of various tests and surveys, or whether certain zoning restrictions will give way. Just as important, the developer may need a lengthy option period to stimulate interest in the property and obtain commitments from lessees or others whose advance commitments would insure success. The use of an option allows the person who believes he or she can profit from the use of certain property to develop plans or obtain commitments, or both, without having to purchase the property outright.

Successive options may be particularly useful to a developer. This type of option agreement gives the developer periodic options on contiguous parcels in a tract. This allows the developer to see how successful the first projects are before making a larger commitment while reserving more land in case of success.

[3] Prompting Optionor to Perform and Cooperate

In many situations, a potential buyer is in need of or has bargained for various services from the seller. Examples of these services are title reports, surveys, and cooperation in obtaining utilities and changing zoning laws. An option with a fixed duration that commences only after the optionor performs specified services will stimulate the optionor's performance if he or she believes the option contract is favorable. Thus, if the optionor knows that a six-month option period will not begin to run until the optionor has provided the optionee with a subdivision map, the optionor will be more apt to comply quickly.

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Benefits of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.22

§ 22.22 Benefit of Option to Optionor

[1] Retaining Initial Payment

If the optionee fails to exercise the option within the option period, the optionor may retain the consideration given for the option [Sheveland v. Reed (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 820, 822, 324 P.2d 633 ; see also California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 70, Options (Matthew Bender)].

[2] Prompting Optionee to Perform and Cooperate

Just as an option can be used to avoid placing complicated conditions in the sales agreement, it can be used to stimulate the optionee to resolve these conditions during the option period. A buyer who signs an agreement to purchase, subject to obtaining satisfactory financing, can easily avoid the commitment on the grounds that any available financing was unsatisfactory. Even more sophisticated drafting leaves something to the efforts of the buyer. But if, through use of the option, the buyer/optionee pays money that will be lost if the option is not exercised, he or she will think twice before frivolously abandoning the contract. If the optionee does not exercise the option, the optionor has the option consideration as compensation.

[3] Instead of a Security Interest

From a security point of view, using successive options in the sale of many parcels of a tract may be more advantageous to the optionor than taking a purchase money mortgage in the outright sale of the whole tract. If the optionee does not exercise one of the options, or breaches a condition precedent to exercise, the optionee's rights terminate immediately [see § 22.30[5]]. There is no necessity for foreclosure proceedings. Even though this method leaves the optionor with the obligation to pay taxes and other expenses on the remaining parcels, adjustments in the consideration for the option should provide adequate compensation.

[4] Avoiding Imputed Interest

Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514], if a sale of a capital asset was being made, and the sales price was being paid in installments, it was advantageous for the seller to attribute as much of the installment payments to principal as possible in order to secure capital gains treatment for these installments. Any interest paid by the purchaser for the privilege of spreading income payments out over time was taxable to the seller as ordinary income. Extensive "imputed interest" rules existed to prevent sellers from treating interest income as capital gains [see I.R.C. §§ 483, 1272-1275]. Because an option becomes a contract of sale only on exercise, use of successive options avoided imputation of interest, even though the payments were similarly spaced.

Corporate taxpayers generally are subject to the same rate of tax on both capital gains and ordinary income [I.R.C. §§ 11, 1201]. Individual taxpayers, however, are taxed on capital gains at a rate that is significantly lower than the maximum tax rate on ordinary income. The tax rate on capital gains is generally 15 percent [see I.R.C. § 1(h)(1)(C), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303; see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)].

In contrast, the maximum tax rate on ordinary income for individuals is 35 percent after 2002 [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)].

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Provisions of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.30

§ 22.30 Duration of Option

[1] Setting Expiration Date

Although not required to be stated, the option term is an extremely significant element of the option agreement. In the absence of the statement of a term, the option will be open for a reasonable time [Auslen v. Johnson (1953) 118 Cal. App. 2d 319, 322, 257 P.2d 664] . The interpretation of what constitutes a reasonable time under the circumstances of the particular case may vary considerably. To effect the intention of the parties and to provide a degree of certainty to the option agreement, it is therefore recommended that the option agreement contain a specific statement of the option period.

[2] Time of the Essence

The effect of setting an exact option period is to make time of the essence as to the exercise of the option [Rosenaur v. Pacelli (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676, 345 P.2d 102] . This means that the optionee loses all right to exercise the option if the optionee does not do so according to its terms and exactly within the allotted time period [see Wilson v. Gentile (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 759, 762-768, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 (provision for exercise "within 30 days prior to expiration" permits exercise during 30-day period preceding expiration)]. However, time is of the essence only with respect to the exercise of the option. After the option has been exercised, this doctrine has no application, and a reasonable time to perform is allowed unless otherwise specifically provided [see Murfee v. Porter (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 9, 18, 214 P.2d 543] .

[3] Common Methods of Fixing Duration

There are three common methods of fixing the duration of the option period. In the most typical case, the option period commences on execution of the option agreement and runs through a fixed date. When the optionee is relying on and desires to stimulate certain performance by the optionor [see § 22.21 [3]], the commencement of the period may be fixed as dependent on the date of certain performance by the optionor. Another alternative utilizes a fixed period that begins and ends on dates certain in the future, that is, the option period is fixed by beginning and ending dates but does not commence on execution of the option agreement. This alternative is useful if the optionor either needs the property temporarily, needs to postpone exercise of the option for tax reasons, or is otherwise unprepared to convey title until some future date.

[4] Rule Against Perpetuities

The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231] codifies and supersedes the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21201, 21205(a)]. While options were held subject to the common law rule against perpetuities [see Alamo School Dist. v. Jones (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 180, 190-191, 6 Cal. Rptr. 272] , the USRAP specifically excludes property interests arising out of "nondonative transfers" from its application [see Prob. Code § 21225(a); but see Prob. Code § 21225(a)(1)-(8) (exceptions for certain "domestic" transfers)]. "Nondonative" transfers are commonly commercial transactions, such as options [see Recommendation Relating to Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, 20 Cal. Law Rev. Comm. 2501, 2595 (1990)]. The authors of the USRAP believed that subjecting commercial transactions to perpetuities limitations would tend to discourage the improvement of property, with undesirable social results, and that nondonative transfers were thus inappropriate subjects for perpetuities regulation [see Waggoner, The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, 21 Real Prop., Prob. and Tr. J. 569, 600 (1986)]. Whether a transfer is "donative" is generally, but not always, determined by whether the transfer is supported by consideration [see Recommendation Relating to Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, 20 Cal. Law Rev. Comm. 2501, 2595 (1990)]. A detailed discussion of the rule against perpetuities and its operation in California is beyond the scope of this chapter. For general coverage of the USRAP, refer to Chapter 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities.

[5] Automatic Termination of Option and Execution of Releasing Documents

With respect to the exercise of an option within the option period, time is deemed to be of the essence [see Rosenaur v. Pacelli (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676, 345 P.2d 102] . In other words, the optionee loses all rights to exercise the option if the option time period expires before an exercise is effected. Thus, the rights to exercise terminate automatically and it is good practice to insert in the option agreement a statement explaining this concept [see § 22.200[2], P 7].

If a recorded instrument gives constructive notice of an option to purchase real property, the option expires of record if no conveyance, contract, or other instrument that gives notice of exercise or extends the option is recorded within (1) six months after the option expires according to its terms; or (2) if the option provides no expiration date, six months after the date the instrument that creates or gives constructive notice of the option is recorded [Civ. Code § 884.010]. This six-month period can create problems by clouding title to the underlying property for that period even though the underlying option period has expired. This problem can be remedied by requiring the subsequent execution of a quitclaim deed or other documents releasing the option when it expires. Other approaches include a prohibition against recording the option [see § 22.234; see also § 22.50] or a provision for automatic termination and prior execution of a quitclaim deed [see § 22.235].

Once an option to purchase real property expires of record, the recorded instrument that creates or gives constructive notice of the option ceases to be notice to any person or to put any person on inquiry with respect to the exercise or existence of the option or any contract, conveyance, or other instrument that may have been executed pursuant to the option [Civ. Code § 884.020].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Provisions of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.31

§ 22.31 Consideration

[1] Role of Consideration

As mentioned above [see § 22.10], an option is a unilateral offer by the owner to a prospective purchaser to sell to the purchaser within the time and under the conditions stated in the option. When supported by consideration, the offer is irrevocable according to its terms [Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49] . In the absence of consideration, the optionor can revoke the offer at any time prior to acceptance [Kelley v. Rouse (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 92, 96-97, 10 Cal. Rptr. 235] .

Any consideration will be deemed sufficient to create a binding offer, and its value need not reflect any proportional relationship to the value of the property [Marsh v. Lott (1908) 8 Cal. App. 384, 388-390, 97 P. 163] . In fact, the consideration for granting the option is not even relevant to establishing the element of "adequacy" in an action for specific performance: the "adequacy" required to obtain specific performance of an exercised option relates to the purchase price of the optioned property, not the option consideration [Marsh v. Lott (1908) 8 Cal. App. 384, 389, 97 P. 163 ; see Kowal v. Day (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 720, 725-728, 98 Cal. Rptr. 118 (presence of consideration turned illusory contract of sale into irrevocable option to purchase)].

A sum of money is the most typical form of consideration for an option. One basic factor that the parties may use to determine the amount of the consideration is the cost to the optionor of keeping the property off the market. This should take into account the following: the accruing expenses of ownership of the property, such as taxes and mortgage costs; what the optionor could realize on sale of the property; and what risk, if any, the optionor takes in delaying sale. If the parties decide to set as part of the consideration the actual amount of taxes accruing during the option period, the optionee will be responsible for all taxes payable during this period, not just those due [Brady v. Fowler (1920) 45 Cal. App. 592, 594-595, 188 P. 320] .

A provision setting forth the optionor's right to retain the option consideration in the event the option is not exercised is an important part of the option agreement. In many cases, the option consideration is an independent measure of the value of keeping the property off the market, and should not be refunded to the optionee. Even if this is not the case, the option consideration may serve as "earnest money" to be forfeited by the optionee in case the optionee does not proceed with the sale [see § 22.22[1]].

An option agreement may provide for the return of the option consideration under certain circumstances. This is appropriate only if the refund is conditioned on the failure of a representation made by the optionor; for example, the agreement may provide for a refund if the property cannot be rezoned as the optionor promised. Even then, before drafting such a provision, it should be taken into account that one of the reasons for using an option is to allow the potential buyer, for a relatively small sum in relation to the purchase price, to attempt to resolve all or many important contingencies before committing to the purchase [see § 22.20[2]].

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Provisions of Option Agreement

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.32

§ 22.32 Exercise of Option

[1] In General

The exercise of an option is the communicated election of the optionee to accept the option; if not required by statute to be in writing, the acceptance may be oral [Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49 (involving option for sale of real property); see Civ. Code § 1582], unless the option agreement provides otherwise. If the option prescribes any conditions concerning the communication of its acceptance, the optionor is not bound unless they are satisfied; in other cases, any reasonable and usual method may be adopted [Civ. Code § 1582]. An example of such a method is the deposit in the mail of written notice of acceptance. In that case, the acceptance is effective at the time that it is deposited in the mail [Palo Alto Town & Country Village, Inc. v. BBTC Company (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 494, 500-501, 113 Cal. Rptr. 705, 521 P.2d 1097] . An optionee that communicates a rejection of the option may lose the right to exercise it, even within the option period [see Beverly Way Associates v. Barham (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 49, 55, 276 Cal. Rptr. 240] .

[2] Relation Back Doctrine

On exercise of the option, the priority rights of the optionee relate back to the date of the option agreement to take precedence over any party having actual or constructive knowledge of the option and whose claim of right arose subsequent to the option agreement [Utley v. Smith (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 448, 450, 285 P.2d 986] . Recordation of the option agreement ceases to serve as constructive notice six months from the date of the expiration of the option or, if there is no expiration date, six months from the recordation of the instrument giving notice [Civ. Code § 884.010]. For a discussion of the relation back doctrine in the context of option agreements, refer to California Real Estate Law & Practice, Chapter 70, Options (Matthew Bender).

If an option to purchase real property is granted and recorded before the federal government records a tax lien [see I.R.C. §§ 6321-6323] against the property, the subsequent exercise of the option causes the optionee's right to the property to relate back to the date on which it acquired the option and thus to achieve priority over the tax lien. California's relation back doctrine serves as the basis for this result because the nature and extent of a property interest competing with a federal tax lien for priority is determined by state law [Claremont Terrace Homeowners' Assn. v.

United States (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 398, 405-408, 194 Cal. Rptr. 216] .

Even an unrecorded option gains priority if the optionee was in possession of, and made monthly payments on, the property prior to the recordation of the tax lien, because California law provides that recordation only affects the priority of a property interest as against subsequent bona fide purchasers and charges the federal government with notice of the option under the foregoing circumstances [Claremont Terrace Homeowners' Assn. v. United States (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 398, 405-408, 194 Cal. Rptr. 216] .

Civil Code Section 1044 provides generally that all property may be transferred. An option is freely assignable unless its terms otherwise provide or unless the agreement depends on the personal trust and confidence of the optionor in the optionee [Mott v. Cline (1927) 200 Cal. 434, 450, 253 P. 718] . When the option agreement provides that its obligations will be binding on the parties' assignees and other successors in interest, an assignee assumes the assignor's obligations upon assignment, and no express assumption of the obligations is necessary [Brady v. Fowler (1920) 45 Cal. App. 592, 595, 188 P. 320] . For alternative provisions concerning assignment of an option, see Section 22.200, Paragraph 8.

D. Tax Considerations

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.40

§ 22.40 Tax Consequences of Option Consideration

[1] To Optionor

The optionor must determine when the option consideration is to be reported for purposes of federal income taxes. The date of the taxable event depends on whether or not the consideration is applicable to the purchase price of the property.

To the extent the consideration for the option is not applicable to the purchase price, it is recognized as income during the year of its receipt [Hull v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (4th Cir. [T.C.] 1937) 87 F.2d 260, 261-262] . To the extent the consideration is applicable to the purchase price on exercise of the option, there is no taxable event until the exercise or until the expiration of the option [Virginia Iron Coal & C. Co. v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (4th Cir. [T.C.] 1938) 99 F.2d 919, 921 , cert. denied, 307 U.S. 630 (1938) ; see C.V.L. Corporation (1951) 17 T.C. 812, 816] . If the option is exercised, the consideration (1) becomes part of the purchase price and is entitled to the same tax treatment as the rest of the purchase price (very likely, capital gains), and (2) is reportable in the year of exercise of the option even if it was received in a prior year [J.F. Westrom (1966) 25 T.C.M. 1019, 1023] . If the option expires, the consideration is treated as ordinary income. This income is reportable in the year the option expires even if it was received in a prior year [see Dill Co. (1959) 33 T.C. 196 , nonacq., 1961-2 C.B. 6 , aff'd, 294 F.2d 291 ; Treas. Reg. § 1.1234-1(b)]. In order to postpone the taxation of option consideration to a future time, the contract must be an option. Mere terminology is not enough. If the option payments are large and logically more akin to purchase payments and the optionee cannot rationally back out of the transaction without losing an unreasonable amount of money, then the contract is in danger of being considered an ordinary purchase agreement for the purposes of taxation [see Watson v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (9th Cir. [B.T.A.] 1932) 62 F.2d 35, 36] .

[2] To Optionee

An option is an asset [Helvering v. San Joaquin Fruit & Inv. Co. (1936) 297 U.S. 496, 498, 56 S. Ct. 569, 80 L. Ed. 824] . Therefore, all consideration expended by the optionee to acquire and maintain the option in force enters into the computation of loss on expiration of the option pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 1234. Correspondingly, if the option is sold, the consideration becomes the basis in computing gain or loss. Finally, on acquisition of the property through exercise of the option, the consideration becomes a part of the optionee's tax basis for the property [see C.H.

Mead Coal Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (4th Cir. [B.T.A.] 1934) 72 F.2d 22, 25] .

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Tax Considerations

§ 22.41 Tax Considerations Relating to Successive Options

The optionor will need to determine whether the proceeds from the sale of each parcel, as each option is exercised, fall within capital gains provisions or are considered ordinary income. Assuming the property was not purchased for sale to customers [see I.R.C. § 1231(b)(1)(B)], the sale of the property in successive parcels does not alone convert the seller into a dealer who must treat the gains as ordinary income. Capital gains result from a sale even though it is one of successive transfers of tracts to the same builder if the transaction is not one of separate sales but is part of a single sale that is fragmented to permit the builder to generate funds by building and selling to pay for successive portions of the total acreage [Winding River Ranch, Inc. (1966) 25 T.C.M. 1335, 1340]. However, real estate automatically becomes "dealer" property when subdivision activity is undertaken in order to effect a disposition [1959-1 C.B. 15, Rev. Rul. 59-91]. Therefore, the optionor should be cautious if asked to undertake any of the preliminary subdivision efforts before conveyance of the parcels.

The tax rate on capital gains depends first on whether the taxpayer is an individual or a corporation. For an individual, the tax rate on capital gains generally is 15 percent, although the actual tax rate depends on the time the capital asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h)(1)(C), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303; see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)]. In contrast, corporate capital gains are taxed at the same rate as ordinary income [see I.R.C. §§ 11(b), 1201]. Therefore, a nonindividual optionor may not care about having short-term capital gain, or ordinary gain, as opposed to long-term capital gain. In fact, if any loss is involved for the optionor, the optionor may prefer an ordinary loss, or even a short-term capital loss, rather than a long-term capital loss [see I.R.C. § 1211].

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Tax Considerations

§ 22.42 Tax Consequences on Sale of Option

Under federal tax law, an option is an asset [Helvering v. San Joaquin Fruit & Inv. Co. (1936) 297 U.S. 496, 498, 56 S. Ct. 569, 80 L. Ed. 824] with a tax basis ordinarily equal to the amount the optionee paid for the option [I.R.C. § 1012]. The character of an option as a capital or noncapital asset is determined by the character that the underlying property would have in the hands of the optionee if the optionee had acquired it [I.R.C. § 1234]. In other words, the optionee is deemed to be dealing in the property underlying the option for purpose of taxation of any gain or loss [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1234-1(a)]. An option that is a capital asset or a Section 1231 asset because it would be used in the taxpayer's trade or business and that is held for the appropriate period is entitled to long-term capital gains treatment on sale [I.R.C. §§ 1221, 1222(3), 1231]. The holding period commences the day after the acquisition of the option and includes the date of its sale [see H.M. Hooper (1932) 26 B.T.A. 758, 760 ; Rev. Rul. 70-598, 1970-2 C.B. 168].

The tax rate on capital gains depends first on whether the taxpayer is an individual or a corporation. For an individual, the tax rate on capital gains generally is 15 percent, although the actual tax rate depends on the time the capital asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h)(1)(C), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303; see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. In contrast, corporate capital gains are taxed at the same rate as ordinary income [see I.R.C. §§ 11(b), 1201]. Therefore, a nonindividual optionee may not care about having ordinary gain or short-term capital gain, as opposed to long- term capital gain. Indeed, if any loss is involved for the optionee, the optionee may prefer an ordinary loss, or even a short-term capital loss, rather than a long- term capital loss [see I.R.C. § 1211]. However, capital losses are still allowed only to the extent of capital gains (in the case of a corporation), or capital gains plus amounts limited by statute (in the case of individual taxpayers) [see I.R.C. § 1211]. Carryback and carryforward rules for unused capital losses still apply [see I.R.C. § 1212(a), (b)]. Section 1231 losses still may be allowed in full [see I.R.C. § 1231(a)(4)]. Therefore, the appropriate characterization of property, and of gains and losses from the exercise, lapse, or assignment of an option on that property, may still have considerable importance. For further discussion of the various tax considerations relating to options, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 70, Options (Matthew Bender).

If an optionee allows the option to expire, and a loss is attributable to the failure to exercise, the loss is recognized in the year in which the option expired [see I.R.C. § 1234(a)(2)]. The nature of the loss depends on the character that the land underlying the option would have in the optionee's hands, that is whether the land would be a capital asset, and how long the option is held [I.R.C. § 1234(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.1234-1(b)].

§ 22.50 Recordation and Acknowledgment

The parties must decide whether or not to record the option. Recording protects the rights of the optionee but gives publicity to the option. Moreover, a recorded option can cloud the title of the optionor even after the option expires [see § 22.30[5]].

If the parties decide that the option is to be recorded, it must be executed and acknowledged by the parties whose real property is affected or alienated by the instrument [Gov. Code §§ 27287, 27288]. Thus, the purported owners of the underlying real property, including the spouses of the owners if community interests are involved, must execute and acknowledge an option. The optionees are not required to acknowledge the option. See § 22.200[2] for standard acknowledgments for an individual, a partnership, and a corporation.

If the parties decide not to record the option agreement, they may desire to prepare, execute, and record an abstract of the option agreement [see § 22.203].

§ 22.51 Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement

Unless a statutory exception applies [see Civ. Code § 1102.2], the transferor of any real property containing at least one but not more than four dwelling units must deliver to the prospective transferee a written statutory disclosure statement setting forth detailed information concerning the property [Civ. Code § 1102(a); see Civ. Code § 1102.6 (disclosure form)]. This requirement applies to a variety of types of transfers of real property, including transfers made in connection with an option to purchase [see Civ. Code § 1102(a)]. Further, any city or county may require that a second disclosure form be used in conjunction with the foregoing statutory disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a]. The transferor must make additional disclosures if the property (1) lies within certain designated "hazardous areas" that are susceptible to floods, fires, or earthquakes [see Civ. Code § 1103; see also Civ. Code §§ 1103.1, 1103.2 (transfers not covered; form)]; (2) has been the site of an illegal controlled substance release [see Civ. Code § 1102.18]; or (3) is subject to a Mello-Roos tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code 53111 et seq.] or to a fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500et seq.], which concerns street improvements, or to a contractual assessment program authorized pursuant to Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24 [see Civ. Code § 1l02.6b(a)(2); see also Civ. Code § 1l02.6c(b) (satisfaction of additional disclosure requirement concerning supplemental property tax bills)]. In the future, the Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001 may also impose additional disclosure requirements [see Health & Safety Code §§ 26100-26156]. CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Additional Considerations

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.52

§ 22.52 Remedies

[1] Specific Performance

Since an option supported by consideration is an irrevocable offer [Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49] , the optionee can accept the offer at any time during the option period, even if the optionor has purported to revoke. In other words, the option is irrevocable until the time specifically fixed in the contract for termination regardless of an attempted revocation [Jonas v. Leland (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 770, 776, 176 P.2d 764 , disapproved on other grounds, Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 206, 216, 32 Cal. Rptr. 415, 384 P.2d 7] . When the option is exercised, it becomes a bilateral executory contract that can be enforced by specific performance if the optionor refuses to convey the subject real property [see Torlai v. Lee (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 854, 858, 76 Cal. Rptr. 239] . The statutory requirements for an action in specific performance are as follows [Henderson v. Fisher (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 468, 473, 46 Cal. Rptr. 173 ; Civ. Code § 3384 et seq.]: the legal remedy must be inadequate; the consideration must be adequate; the contract must be just and reasonable as to the party against whom it is being enforced; there must be mutuality of remedies; the contract terms must be sufficiently definite to be enforceable; and the performance ordered by the court must be substantially the same as that promised in the contract [Henderson v. Fisher (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 468, 473, 46 Cal. Rptr. 173 ; Civ. Code § 3384 et seq.]. For further discussion of the enforcement of a sales agreement by specific performance, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 74, Buyer's Remedies in Actions Involving Agreements of Sale (Matthew Bender).

[2] Damages for Breach

The following damages are recoverable for breach of an agreement to convey an estate in real property [Civ. Code § 3306]:

- The price paid;
- The expenses properly incurred in examining the title and preparing the necessary papers;
- The difference between the agreed price and the value of the estate at the time of the breach;

- The expenses properly incurred in preparing to enter on the land;
- Consequential damages according to proof; and
- Interest.

[3] Declaratory Relief

An optionee can obtain a declaratory judgment that an option is still in effect if the optionor improperly repudiates the option during its term [see, e.g., Holiday Inns of America v. Knight (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 327, 74 Cal. Rptr. 722, 450 P.2d 42] . For a complaint for declaratory relief in the option context, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser of Real Property (Matthew Bender).

[4] Rescission

An optionee can obtain rescission of an option agreement and return of the consideration, provided that the optionee establishes that he or she was induced to enter into the option by fraudulent misrepresentations [Soderling v. Tomlin (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 169, 172, 338 P.2d 946] .

[5] Optionor's Remedies

The optionor may also have remedies under an option agreement. When the optionee breaches a material condition of the option agreement, the optionor may terminate the option for breach of contract [Briles v. Paulson (1915) 170 Cal. 408, 410, 149 P. 804] . After the option has been exercised, the optionor has all the rights of any other seller under an executory agreement to sell real property. If the option expires and the optionee breaches the terms of the option by refusing to execute a quitclaim deed to clear the optionor's title, the optionor can bring a quiet title action and then recover damages for the breach of contract and the expenses in quieting title, including reasonable attorneys' fees [Fabares v. Benjamin (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 264, 271-272, 4 Cal. Rptr. 359 ; Civ. Code § 3306a].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.110

§ 22.110 Transactional Determinations

1. Determine suitability of option.

NOTE:

Counsel should independently determine whether an option agreement is consistent with the client's desires and intentions, taking into consideration whether the client owns the subject property or is a prospective purchaser of it, whether the client desires merely an option to purchase or an outright purchase of the property, and whether counsel has been retained to draft the option or to advise the client concerning an extant option. An option may offer significant advantages in comparison to an outright purchase or sale; however, there may be disadvantages such as monetary detriment to the optionor resulting from the property being kept off the market for the option period.

a. Consider following practical advantages:

(1) Additional time to make decisions concerning sale of subject property.

(2) Postponement of sale to achieve favorable tax treatment.

(3) Present realization of consideration in form of cash or services.

(4) Removal of conditions and contingencies in sales agreement.

NOTE:

An option can be used to avoid the insertion of conditions or contingencies in the final bilateral sales agreement in that an option provides time for the prospective buyer to determine whether any conditions and contingencies are necessary. Therefore, the final sales agreement, on exercise of the option, typically is less complex and more likely to be performed.

b. Consider following benefits:

(1) To buyer:

(a) Speculation.

(b) Land development, especially when successive option agreement [see § 22.202] is used.

(c) Encouragement to seller to perform and cooperate.

(d) Avoidance of publicity when option is not recorded.

(2) To seller:

(a) Earnest money considerations.

(b) Encouragement to buyer to perform and cooperate.

(c) Security considerations.

NOTE:
Successive options [see § 22.202] used in connection with the sale of multiple parcels of real property may be more advantageous to the seller/optionor from a security point of view than an outright sale of the entire tract. If the buyer/optionee does not exercise one of the options, or breaches a condition precedent to the exercise of one of them, his or her rights terminate immediately. There is no necessity for foreclosure. For further discussion of security considerations inherent in the use of options to purchase real property, refer to Section 22.22[3].

c. Ascertain business aspects relating to proposed transaction.

d. Resolve whether option is appropriate for transaction.

e. Determine type of option agreement to be drafted.

(1) General form of option agreement [see § 22.200].

(2) Option to repurchase [see § 22.201].

(3) Successive option [see § 22.202].

2. Verify factual and legal capacity of parties to enter into option agreement by determining following:

a. Contractual capacity.

b. Marital status.

c. State of title of real property.

2. If applicable, resolve clouded title problem created by expired option by reading and selecting appropriate provisions [see §§ 22.30[5], 22.200[2], P 7, 22.234, 22.235].

3. Decide whether option should be assignable [see § 22.33; see also §§ 22.200[2], P 8].

4. Determine point in time that mailed notices are deemed communicated [see § 22.32[1]].

5. Determine whether sale warranties or representations should be made applicable to option period [see § 22.230].

6. Determine whether option consideration should consist partially of services, such as providing preliminary title report or analysis of property [see §§ 22.220, 22.221].

7. If optionee is to perform work on optioned property during option period, determine what types of protection are available from mechanics' liens [see § 22.232].

8. Determine desirability of providing for extensions of option period, and nature and amount of consideration for extensions [see § 22.210].

9. Determine disposition of growing crops, if any, on exercise of option [see § 22.233].

10. Determine rights of parties on condemnation or destruction of property [see § 22.231].

NOTE:

Counsel and the client should carefully consider the amount of the option consideration. If the consideration is nominal and the situation involves the optionor simply giving a potential buyer/optionee more time, perhaps the optionee should not be entitled to compensation without an exercise of the option in the case of condemnation. On the other hand, if the optionee has paid substantial consideration, in effect investing in an option, the optionee's interest deserves more protection.

11. Determine which performance, other than exercise of option, should be subject to time is of essence provision [see § 22.30 [2]].

12. Determine method of exercise to be required by option agreement.

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Option Agreements

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.200

§ 22.200 Option to Purchase

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a general form of option agreement to purchase real property. It grants to named optionees the exclusive right to purchase described real property at an agreed price and under specified terms and conditions. The form also provides for both the giving of consideration in exchange for the grant and a fixed option period. Thus, if the option agreement is properly executed, the option is irrevocable for the term of the option [see Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49] .

This form contains basic option provisions. It may be adapted to the particular circumstances of the contemplated transaction by the use of various optional provisions, appropriately modified [see §§ 22.210-22.236].

[b] Designation of Parties and Date of Execution

The blanks in the preamble for the names of the optionors are to be filled in with the names of the legal owners of the property underlying the option. Caution should be exercised in ascertaining both the ownership and capacity to contract of an optionor and the state of the title. Even if investigation reveals sole ownership, when an alleged sole owner is or was married, the consent of spouse clause at the end of this form should be used to prevent subsequent claims. If the optionor's name is presently different from the one in which record title stands, the option agreement must include the name in which record title is vested in order to serve as constructive notice on recordation [see Civ. Code § 1096].

A title insurance company can help ascertain the record state of the title, along with exceptions, encumbrances, and the existence of prior options. However, even the small cost of a preliminary title report may not be justified when the option is really just a several-day extension of an offer to sell, with nominal consideration for the option. The degree of examination, whether through investigation or title company aid such as a preliminary report or a policy of title insurance, depends on whether the value of the option justifies the expense. A successive option agreement dealing with the development of a large tract of land will warrant more extensive examination [see § 22.202; see also § 22.220

(preliminary title report as consideration)].

[c] Transactional Relationship of Parties

There are cases when a court must decide whether an agreement is one of several types of instruments. For example, it may be a close question of whether the parties intended an option or a sales agreement [see § 22.11]. When parties intend an option agreement, and are using this type of agreement to their advantage, they should use option terminology in the agreement. In a close case, weight would be given to the manner in which the parties treated the instrument [see Smith v. Blodget (1921) 187 Cal. 235, 241, 201 P. 584] . However, the designation of the contract is not controlling [see Smith v. Morton (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 616, 619-620, 106 Cal. Rptr. 52 (labels disregarded in finding instrument to be contract of sale rather than option agreement)]. This form, in the recitals and preamble, uses option terminology from the beginning of the agreement, designates the parties "optionors" and "optionees," not "buyers" and "sellers," and describes in the recitals the relationship into which the parties are entering. While this form describes the relationship of the parties as optionors and optionees, further details may be added to the recitals if the nature of the agreement as an option or other type of instrument is a close question.

[d] Contract of Sale or Escrow Instructions as Exhibit to Option Agreement

On exercise, an option agreement becomes the sales agreement [Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49] . Therefore, when the option is drafted, the parties must contemplate and draft the terms of the sale. The terms of sale may be incorporated into the body of the option agreement or included in a separate document (such as a sales agreement or escrow instructions) that is then incorporated by reference into the body of the option agreement.

This form uses the latter approach of incorporating the terms of sale in a separate, attached exhibit, and provides for execution of the exhibit as the method by which the option is exercised. Thus, the terms of the entire transaction are physically divided into two important parts, the option terms and the sales terms. The two sets of terms can be examined and considered independently to avoid confusion and the inadvertent omission of significant terms peculiar to either the option or the sale.

Since either a contract of sale or escrow instructions must be prepared when this form is used, refer to Chapter 23, Agreements to Sell Real Property, or Chapter 26, Real Property Escrows.

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.201

§ 22.201 Option to Repurchase

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a short form of an option agreement to repurchase specified real property. It is designed to give a seller-optionee of real property the exclusive right to reacquire the same real property sold to the buyer-optionor. The form may be adapted for use when the optionee desires the right to reacquire the specified property on the occurrence of some contingency. For example, an owner of several contiguous parcels may be interested in enhancing the value of some of the parcels by selling various remaining parcels to a developer who has promised to develop the latter within a certain time period and according to stated specifications. For protection from the failure of the developer to develop the land, the owner may retain an option to repurchase the land if construction is not started by a certain date; such an option agreement is valid and may be specifically enforced [see, e.g., D-K Investment Corp. v. Sutter (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 537, 96 Cal. Rptr. 830] . Refer to § 22.50 for discussion of recording and acknowledgment requirements and considerations.

CHAPTER 22 OPTIONS TO PURCHASE REAL PROPERTY
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Option Agreements

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.202

§ 22.202 Successive Option Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a successive option agreement. It provides all the basic provisions that should go into any successive option agreement as well as specific provisions dealing with the types of problems that are typical in a transaction involving the development of a subdivision. To these provisions may be added appropriate optional provisions [see §§ 22.210-22.236]. For other examples of successive option agreements, refer to Current Legal Forms, Chapter 22, Development and Subdivision (Matthew Bender).

The various purposes served by successive options include advantages to both the prospective seller and the prospective buyer. A seller may find the granting of successive options to a developer advantageous as a substitute for a security device for the sale of the whole tract that allows continued controls upon the developer for as long as the seller has not been paid for the property in full. A buyer-developer may prefer successive options to experiment with the successful development of one parcel without committing as to the others, at the same time being assured of the right to purchase the remaining parcels if the venture is successful.

The Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000-11200] is designed to protect individual purchasers of lots or homes from subdividers and to assure that all purchasers will be given essential information concerning public utility facilities and other essential factors. The statutory requirements of the Act are inapplicable to an installment land sales contract by an owner to a subdivider who intends to subdivide the property and sell it to the public [Westbrook v. Summerfield, Roberts Etc., Inc. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 761, 766, 316 P.2d 691] ; the rationale of this proposition should apply to successive option agreements as well. For detailed discussion of the Subdivided Lands Act and subdivision regulation in general, refer to Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation.

[c] Specific Provisions

[i] Recital

The recital in this form states that the option is applicable to parcels of the described property rather than the whole. No reference is made to an exhibit supplying the terms of the proposed sale; the option agreement itself is designed to include all the terms of sale.

[ii] Grant of and Consideration for Successive Options

There are numerous ways in which the granting of successive options, along with a system for providing monetary consideration, may be set up. The first alternative in this form is mechanically closest to reflecting the concept of how a successive option agreement operates: it demonstrates graphically what it is that is being given in exchange for the option consideration (assuming the option consideration does not apply to the purchase price). The optionee pays option consideration on a certain date. This consideration entitles the optionee to exercise an option to purchase the entire property or just the parcel relating to the first option. The option consideration, therefore, is not just for the first parcel but includes all remaining parcels, for these, too, are remaining off the market. The foregoing arrangement may be varied so as to omit the optionee's option to purchase all the land at the same time.

[iii] Setting Parcel Prices and Option Consideration

Schemes for setting and interrelating the prices of the various parcels and the consideration for the option vary tremendously. One possibility is to try to estimate the exact worth of each parcel. For instance, taking the first "grant" clause utilized below, the parties should estimate the fair market value of each parcel during the period when the option relating to it might be exercised. Then the parties should set the option consideration for each period as the true measure of the value of the optionor's keeping the property off the market. To preserve the validity of this approach, the parties should avoid making the consideration applicable to the purchase price. If, on the other hand, the consideration is to apply to the purchase price, then the purchase price must be appropriately inflated. For the important tax consequences of the application or nonapplication of consideration to the purchase price, refer to Section 22.40.

If the period over which the agreement extends is not too long, or the market too volatile, one possible way of setting up all the relationships in a chart such as given in the first "grant" clause below is to compute uniform rates. Thus, once it is estimated that the land should be worth $15,000 per acre next year and $16,000 the year after, and the agreement runs one more year, the parties could set all the purchase prices on the basis of $16,000 per acre, providing, perhaps, for a somewhat lower alternative if the option to buy all parcels were immediately exercised. Similarly, after several option periods were estimated as to the amount of the option consideration, the parties could compute an average option consideration cost per acre per one-month period. This rate could be applied to all option periods and all parcels in the agreement.

The element of flexibility can be built into setting purchase prices by providing for fair market value as of the date the option is exercised, to be established by appraisal. An illustration of such an arrangement is provided as an alternative below. Flexibility may also be built into the option consideration by segregating certain components such as taxes and insurance and providing that the optionee must pay these costs.

Each successive option is exercised in the same manner as a single option. The only difference is that the optionee must continue to exercise each successive option in order to keep future successive options available. Alternatives that must be considered and determined in this form are whether the optionee will have the right to exercise an option to buy all the parcels at once, in advance of when the optionee must purchase them or terminate the agreement, and, if the optionee has this right, what will be the purchase price of all the remaining parcels combined.

[v] Controls Maintained by Optionor-Seller

An extensive program of land development usually involves the seller's maintaining an interest in the project. This is because the large sums of money needed generally require the seller to participate in the financing, or the seller may be retaining adjacent land. These factors, particularly the financing, give the seller a strong interest in maintaining certain controls on the development of the land. This may be accomplished by setting conditions precedent to the exercise of the successive options relating to the paying off of obligations and the successful development of land acquired by the previous option. Successful development may also be accomplished by giving the seller a significant say in the method and plan of development. Many variations in accomplishing the foregoing are possible. Articles II and VI of this form set forth several possibilities.

[vi] Reservation of Rights by Optionor

When the development of the property will take a long time, the optionor may request, and the optionee may allow, a reservation of rights as to conducting activities on the optioned lands that may carry over even after they have been conveyed. These rights may serve as part of the option consideration. They may even involve permanent easements that benefit the optionor if the optionor is retaining adjacent land. Numerous such rights can be offered the optionor, depending on the situation and the uses of the land. Several possibilities are suggested below in Articles VII and VIII.

[vii] Exchange of Lands

When vast parcels of land are involved in a long-term plan of development, preserving flexibility as to changing land needs is advisable. The possibility always exists that the interests of the optionee or optionor might require that land other than that originally specified in the agreement be offered first, or even that land already conveyed be exchanged for land in a parcel to which the option has not yet been exercised. An example of an exchange arrangement is demonstrated below in Article IX.

A copy of the signed report must be delivered to each of the parties to this Agreement and to the title company described in Article V within [e.g., 15] days of the selection of the third appraiser. (b) Optionees fail to perform or observe any of the covenants or agreements of any deed of trust given pursuant to the provisions of this Agreement.

On the date specified in the notice, all of Optionee's rights under this Agreement will terminate and come to an end unless the default is curable and is in fact cured within the period specified in the notice, or unless the default (other than the failure to pay money) is curable but cannot reasonably be cured within [e.g., 10] days after the giving of the notice and Optionees commence within that [e.g., 10]-day period to cure the default and prosecute their efforts to conclusion with reasonable diligence.

Recordation

Section 4.03. [A memorandum of this Agreement in the form of Exhibit _____ attached to this Agreement or This Agreement] must be executed and acknowledged by the parties for the purpose of recording. If Optionees fail to exercise any of the options granted in this Agreement within the time provided, or if Optionees' rights under this Agreement are terminated as provided in Section 4.02, Optionees must promptly execute and deliver to Optionors a document relinquishing to Optionors Optionees' rights to acquire the portion of Parcels A through _____ not yet acquired by Optionees, which document must be in the form Optionors require.

(1) The exceptions applicable to the particular parcel as set forth in Exhibit _____.

(2) The exceptions contained in its customary printed form of standard coverage policy of title insurance.

(3) The reservations in the deed.

(4) The rights of any subsequent lessee or licensee of Optionors to the extent provided in Section 8.01.

(b) Record the deed in _____ County, California, and deliver it to Optionees.

(c) Date the note and deed of trust as of the closing of the escrow.

(b) On the closing of each such escrow, Optionees must pay the other one-half of the escrow fee.

(c) Property taxes must be prorated as of the date of closing.

(d) Each party must pay to the title company its part of the foregoing charges on receipt of the title company's statement of the charges.

ARTICLE VI. DEVELOPMENT PLANS

Land Use Plan

Section 6.01. Optionees covenant and agree to develop and subdivide each of Parcels A through _____ that Optionees may acquire from Optionors pursuant to this Agreement substantially as provided in (1) the land use plan attached to this Agreement and marked Exhibit _____, and (2) development plans approved in writing by both parties. Optionees may from time to time submit to Optionors for approval amendments to the land use plan, and Optionors' approval must not be unreasonably withheld.

Parcel Development Plan

Section 6.02. Within [e.g., 90] days after the recordation of a deed from Optionors to Optionees for each of Parcels A through _____, Optionees must prepare and submit to Optionors a development plan for the parcel described in that deed, which development plan will be subject to the written approval of Optionors. Optionor's approval must not be unreasonably withheld. At any time prior to the full development and subdivision of any of Parcels A through _____ pursuant to a development plan approved in writing by the parties, Optionees may submit to Optionors for approval an amendment to any development plan then in effect, and Optionor's approval must not be unreasonably withheld. The initial development plan for each parcel that Optionees are obligated to submit within [e.g., 90] days after recordation of the deed (1) must satisfy the requirements of Section 6.03, (2) may be in narrative form, general or skeleton in nature, and (3) may be approved by Optionors subject to supplemental material being submitted and approved at a later date. The term "development plan" as used in this Agreement with respect to any of the Parcels means the development plan for the parcel originally approved by Optionors or as subsequently amended by any amendments approved by Optionors as provided in this Agreement.

Contents of Development Plan

Section 6.03. Before construction actually begins in any area, a development plan for the area must have been submitted and approved that sets forth among other things the following:

(a) The division of the Property into areas for single- family residences, multifamily residences, professional, administrative, commercial, and industrial uses, and also areas for schools, parks, golf courses, playgrounds, and other community purposes;

(b) The location of rights-of-way for all streets and highways, including both width of right-of-way and width of paved surface from curb to curb, and paving and sidewalk plans;

(c) The nature and capacity of sewage disposal, storm drainage, water, gas, electric, telephone, and street lighting facilities;

(d) The lots into which the Property is to be divided for subdivision purposes; and,

(e) The terms of building and use restrictions to be imposed in the various areas.

Submission of Plan for Government Approval

Section 6.04. It will be the responsibility of Optionees to present the development plan for each parcel for approval by the [specify, e.g., County Planning Commission] or any other governmental authority, whether state, city, or county, as may be required by law to permit the subdivision and development of the parcel in accordance with the development plan.

ARTICLE VII. REMOVAL OF IMPROVEMENTS AND PERSONAL PROPERTY

Right of Optionors to Remove

Section 7.01. Optionors reserve the right to remove from the Property the following improvements: [specify, e.g., any buildings, fences, cattle watering facilities, pole lines, pipelines, tanks, pumps, irrigation facilities] and other improvements, whether similar or dissimilar to the foregoing, and any personal property belonging to Optionors on the Property. The right may be exercised at any time and from time to time either before or after the parcels on which the improvements or personal property are located are conveyed to Optionees; provided, however, that any improvements or personal property remaining on Property conveyed to Optionees after the expiration of [e.g., 60] days from notice given by Optionees to Optionors requesting removal of improvements or personal property from that Property will be deemed abandoned and will become the property of Optionees.

Optionor's Limited Obligation of Restoration

Section 7.02. Optionors will have no obligation to remove any improvements or personal property, or any portion of the foregoing, that Optionors do not desire to remove, and will have no obligation to restore the surface on any Property from which improvements or personal property are removed, with the following exceptions: (1) Optionors must fill in any holes or trenches dug in the course of removal; and (2) in the case of water wells from which equipment is removed, the well must be properly capped and the casing in the well left intact.

ARTICLE VIII. ADDITIONAL RIGHTS OF PARTIES

Leasing of Optioned Parcels

Section 8.01. Optionors may from time to time lease or grant licenses to use portions of parcels the options to which have not yet been exercised. The rights of each lessee or licensee of Optionors will continue in effect, unless a shorter term is specified in the lease or license, for [specify time period, e.g., one year] after the date of [exercise by Optionees of the option with respect to or conveyance to the Optionees of] the Property affected by the lease or license.

Reservation of Rights

Section 8.02. At the time of each conveyance under this Agreement, Optionors must reserve the rights listed in (a) through (d), below, which reservations must be expressed in each deed. The form of fee simple deed to be used by Optionors is attached to this Agreement as Exhibit _____, and the appropriate date, land description, and exceptions and reservations must be inserted into each deed. The following are the rights to be reserved:

(a) Ingress and egress easements for highway and travel purposes and for installation and maintenance of water, power, telephone, and other utilities over, along, and across all now existing and future roads and waterways on or through the land, public or private, for the benefit of any land of Optionors' that, at the time of the conveyance, has not been conveyed to Optionees, subject to the following provisions:

(1) Any reserved easement may be relocated by the Optionees if substantially similar access is given by the relocation.

(2) The relocation, including the relocation of utilities, must be at the sole expense of the Optionees.

(3) The relocation must occur only with Optionors' written consent to relocation, which consent must not be unreasonably withheld.

(b) Reasonable right-of-way reservations or provisions for the benefit of any land of Optionors' that, at the time of the conveyance, has not been conveyed to Optionees, provided the reservations or provisions assure Optionors of public road access from that land to _____[specify, e.g., set forth name of street or highway].

(c) For a period of [number] years after the date of each conveyance and free of rent or charge therefor, the exclusive possession for use, as the land subject to this Agreement is presently being used, of all of the land described in Exhibit _____ even if some, or all, of the land has been released or discharged from the lien of the deed or deeds of trust mentioned in this Agreement, including possession of and title to crops in the ground. This reservation will continue in like manner for [number] years after the date of each conveyance, but only as to land not then physically under development by Optionees.

(d) All stumps and dead and down timber on all of the land described in Exhibit _____, free of charge therefor, for a period of [number] years after the date of this Agreement, subject to the following provisions:

(1) If the foregoing are not removed from the land within that _____-year period, this reservation will cease.

(2) Optionors must not cut any growing timber after the date of this Agreement.

Entry on Optioned Lands

Section 8.03. Optionees will have the right at any time hereafter to survey, map, engineer, make and take soundings on any parcel subject to this Agreement, even during the period when Optionors have exclusive possession, provided those acts do not unreasonably interfere with Optionors' exclusive possession, and provided further that Optionees must indemnify and hold Optionors harmless from any and all damage and liability occasioned by entry pursuant to this section .

[If exchange provisions are to be included, add:]

ARTICLE IX. EXCHANGE OF LAND

Revision of Description Proposed by Optionors

Section 9.01. If at any time Optionors deem it advisable to revise or amend the description of any portion of Parcels A through _____ not yet acquired by Optionees pursuant to this Agreement, Optionors may, from time to time, submit to Optionees a written request that a revision take place. If Optionees consent to any requested revision it will be deemed to have been made at the time of consent. The consent of Optionees to a revision must not be unreasonably withheld, provided that Optionees will not be obligated to consider any requested revision unless it is on an acre-for-acre basis.

Exchange of Land Proposed by Optionors

Section 9.02. If at any time Optionors deem it advisable to exchange land owned by Optionors for land acquired by Optionees pursuant to this Agreement, Optionors may submit to Optionees a written request that an exchange take place. If Optionees consent to any requested exchange the exchange must be made as provided in this Article. The consent of Optionees to an exchange must not be unreasonably withheld, provided that Optionees will not be obligated to consider any requested exchange unless it is on an acre-for- acre basis.

Exchange of Land Proposed by Optionees

Section 9.03. If at any time after Optionees have acquired one or more of Parcels A through _____, Optionees deem it advisable to exchange acreage in a parcel so acquired for acreage included in any portion of Parcels B through _____ not yet acquired by Optionees pursuant to this Agreement, Optionees may submit to Optionors a written request that such an exchange take place. If Optionors consent to the requested exchange, the exchange must be made as provided in this Article. The consent of Optionors to an exchange must not be unreasonably withheld, provided that Optionors will not be obligated to consider a requested exchange unless the following apply: (1) it is on an acre-for-acre basis; (2) it is for property of a like character (that is, residential for residential and commercial for commercial as designated on the land use plan marked Exhibit _____); and (3) after the exchange, the parcels as reconstituted would each be a contiguous unit.

Written Consent to Exchange

Section 9.04. If either party consents to a requested exchange pursuant to Sections 9.02 or 9.03, that party must notify the other party in writing.

Closing Title to Exchanged Property

Section 9.05. (a) Within [e.g., 30] days after the date of the written notification, the parties are obligated to make the following deposits in escrow: (1) Optionors must deposit in escrow with the title company a grant deed to the acreage to be exchanged by it, which deed must be in the form attached as Exhibit _____. (2) Optionees must deposit in escrow with the title company a grant deed to the acreage to be exchanged by Optionees, which deed must be in the form attached as Exhibit _____. (3) The parties must each execute and deposit in escrow with the title company the documents and instruments that are necessary (1) to release the acreage to be exchanged and conveyed by Optionees from any and all deeds of trust given pursuant to this Agreement to secure the payment of a purchase money note, and (2) to include the acreage to be exchanged and conveyed by Optionors among the acreage subject to any and all such deeds of trust.

(b) Within [e.g., 30] days after the date of the written notification, the parties must instruct the title company to close each such escrow if and when it is prepared to issue its standard coverage policies of title insurance with respect to the acreage exchanged by each party with liability equal in amount to the [purchase price of the acreage or fair market value of the acreage as agreed to by the parties], insuring the interests of both Optionors and Optionees as those interests may appear, subject only to the following: (1) The exceptions applicable to the acreage as set forth in Exhibit _____; (2) The exceptions contained in its customary printed form of standard coverage policy of title insurance; (3) The reservations in any deed from Optionors; and (4) The right of any subsequent lessee or licensee of Optionors to the extent provided in Section 8.01.

(c) Within [e.g., 30] days after the date of the written notification, the parties must instruct the title company to record the deeds in _____ County, California, and deliver them to the respective grantees.

Following the closing of any escrow provided for in this Article, the party requesting the exchange must pay to the title company, upon the receipt of the title company's statement, the following: the recording fees, documentary transfer taxes, premiums for the policies of title insurance, and escrow fee.

Amendment of Descriptions

Section 9.07. On the recordation of the deeds referred to in Section 9.05, or on Optionees' consent to a revision of the description of any of Parcels A through _____ as provided in Section 9.01, the descriptions set forth in Exhibit _____ to this Agreement, and the description of Parcels A through _____ as that description may be fixed pursuant to this Agreement, will be deemed to be revised and amended to the extent necessary to reflect the changes made in the parcels as a result of the revision or exchange, and all references in this Agreement to Parcels A through _____ will be deemed to refer to the parcels as they may be reconstituted from time to time pursuant to this Agreement.

ARTICLE X. ASSESSMENTS PRIOR TO CONVEYANCE

Obligation of Optionees to Reimburse Optionors

Section 10.01. If any land not yet conveyed to Optionees pursuant to this Agreement is affected by any special assessment or assessments occasioned or caused by and attributable to improvements made by Optionees or others to or on the land previously conveyed by Optionors pursuant to this Agreement, Optionees must reimburse Optionors for the amount of the special assessment or above-described assessments paid by Optionors at the time of the conveyance of the affected land pursuant to this Agreement. A special assessment must not be deemed to be any ad valorem tax levied on the land or any increase in any ad valorem tax levied on the land.

ARTICLE XI. ASSIGNABILITY

Assignability

Section 11.01. No assignment of this Agreement or of any right accruing under this Agreement may be made, in whole or in part, by either party without the prior written consent of the other party; provided, however, that nothing in this section will impair Optionees' right to convey lands acquired from Optionors pursuant to this Agreement which have been released by Optionors from all existing deeds of trust given pursuant to this Agreement.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The parties may be reluctant to record the entire option agreement because they desire to avoid making all of the terms of the agreement public or because of the expense of recording a lengthy agreement. If this is the case, they may prepare and record an abstract of the agreement. The only requirements for drafting this abstract are that it must affect title to real property [Gov. Code § 27280], be acknowledged or proved [Gov. Code §§ 27287, 27288], and contain the essentials of which parties to be put on constructive notice must be aware. Basically, this means that the instrument must describe the real property and the length of time the option will affect title to it. The following form, then, is a sample that may be used in a simple option transaction. However, if successive options, extensions, or other complex conditions affecting the length of the option are to be applicable, the abstract must contain these conditions if it is to give constructive notice.

PART IV. FORMS
B. Option Provisions
1. Right to Extend

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.210

§ 22.210 Option Period--Right to Extend

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form sets forth three alternative provisions regarding the right to extend an original option period. The first alternative gives the optionee the right to extend the original option period to a fixed date in the future. The second alternative permits the optionee to extend the period to any date before and including a stated date and is appropriate for successive options. The third alternative gives the optionee the right to extend the option to any date within a stated limit; the amount of consideration is to vary in accordance with the selected length of the extension.

This form also contains two alternative provisions regarding the consideration for extension. The first alternative may be inserted in either a standard option agreement or a successive option agreement. The second alternative provides for consideration that varies with the length of the extension selected by the optionee and is, thus, appropriate for use with the third alternative right-to-extend provision. For a discussion concerning the tax considerations, refer to § 22.40.

The right to extend the option period may be valuable to the optionee for several reasons. If the optionee's purpose in obtaining the option is speculative, then an extension clause allows the optionee the right to continue to speculate on a rising market without buying the property outright. If the purpose of the option is to allow time to resolve contingencies or to develop the property, an extension clause assures that the optionee will not lose the initial investment if the original time period proves inadequate.

[c] Legal Role of Consideration

Just as consideration is necessary to make an option agreement binding on the optionor for the period of the original option period [see Lawrence v. Settle (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 386, 388, 6 Cal. Rptr. 49] , there must also be consideration to support an extension. Therefore, if the parties desire an extension to be binding, they should expressly provide for the giving of additional consideration when the option agreement grants a right to extend to the optionee.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains an optional provision requiring the optionee to provide, as partial consideration for the granting of an option, a preliminary title report covering the underlying real property. Since optionors typically bargain for and receive monetary consideration for the granting of an option, this provision should be added to an option agreement that also provides for monetary consideration [see § 22.31]. This form may be adapted for use in successive option agreements [see § 22.202].

[b] Services as Consideration

In addition to cash, services may be required from the optionee as consideration for the option. A typical service is the obtaining of a preliminary title report on the underlying property. When dealing with a developer, the optionor may require services in the form of costly surveys or technical analyses of the property [see § 22.221]. The services have independent value to the optionor if the optionee fails to exercise the option to purchase. For example, extensive property analyses may enable the optionor to develop the land or supply the optionor with significant information relating to the prospective sale of the property.

§ 22.230 Applicability of Warranties

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides alternative provisions designed for use in option agreements in which the parties agree that specified covenants, warranties, and representations made by the optionor in favor of the optionee will apply to the transaction during the option period and before exercise of the option. The first alternative provision is designed for a standard option agreement [see §§ 22.200, 22.201]. The second alternative provision may be used in a successive option agreement [see § 22.202].

[b] Enforcement of Warranties, Covenants, and Representations

The right of an optionee to maintain a cause of action against an optionor who is not prepared to perform is conditioned on the optionee's exercise of the option [see Auslen v. Johnson (1953) 118 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 257 P.2d 664 ; Seeburg v. El Royale Corp. (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4-7, 128 P.2d 362] . For this reason, the option agreement should contain a separate warranty provision applicable to the option period for those warranties, covenants, and representations that the optionee desires to be able to enforce during the option period. The following provisions accomplish this by (1) referring to the terms of sale, (2) making the desired warranties, covenants, and representations applicable to the option period, and (3) excluding those that are not intended to be in force until the time of sale.

3. Rights of Parties

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.231

§ 22.231 Rights of Parties In Event of Condemnation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains four alternative provisions that set forth the respective rights of optionor and optionee in the event of condemnation of the underlying property before exercise of the option. The first alternative provides that the optionee is not entitled to compensation on condemnation. The second alternative permits the optionee to share the condemnation award to the same extent as permitted by law. The third and fourth alternatives illustrate examples of condemnation clauses appropriate for use in successive option agreements.

[b] Optionee's Right to Compensation

The right to compensation in the event of condemnation is conditioned on whether the condemnation has deprived the claimant of a valuable right rather than on whether the right can technically be called an estate or an interest in land [see County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 691-693, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . In the case of options to purchase real property, the owner of an unexercised option to purchase land possesses a valuable property right that, if taken by government, is compensable under California Constitution, Article I, Section 19. The measure of damages to the optionee is the excess, if any, of the total award above the optioned purchase price [County of San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 693, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . Therefore, the parties to an option agreement should provide in the agreement for their respective rights in case the property is condemned, either confirming California law or specifying other rights. The need to set forth such an understanding is particularly important when the option period extends for a considerable length of time.

[2] FORM

Rights of Parties In Event of Condemnation

Condemnation

[If optionee not entitled to compensation, use:]

#. In the event that all or any part of the Property is appropriated during the option period by the power of eminent domain, then Optionees will have no compensable interest and no right to share in the condemnation award.

[OR]

[If optionee permitted to share condemnation award to extent permitted by law, use:]

#. In the event that all or any part of the Property is appropriated during the option period by the exercise of the power of eminent domain, then Optionees will have a compensable interest and a right to share in the condemnation award to the extent that the excess, if any, of the total award is above the optioned purchase price.

[OR]

[If successive option agreement provides that compensation will reduce sales price, use:]

#. In the event of the condemnation or taking by eminent domain of any land subject to this Agreement prior to its conveyance by Optionors under this Agreement and while this Agreement is in full force and effect, Optionees will be made a party to those proceedings and, if Optionors and Optionees cannot agree as to the amount of any award to be accepted for the condemnation or taking, the amount of that award will be determined by trial in the proper court or courts. The amount of any award must be paid to Optionors, and the net amount so received by Optionors after payment of all expenses and fees incurred will reduce the sales price of the parcel or parcels that would have contained the land so condemned or taken by eminent domain. [If method of application is to be specified, add: This reduction must first be applied to the principal balance of the deed of trust on the subject parcel in inverse chronological order of the installment payments thereof. In no event may there be any return of, or other credit for, any option money payments, or other money, received or to be received by Optionors from Optionees pursuant to this Agreement.]

[OR]

[If successive option agreement provides that parcel descriptions will be revised to exclude condemned property, use:]

#. In the event any part of Parcels A through _____ is condemned or taken for a public or quasi-public use prior to the acquisition of those parcels by Optionees pursuant to this Agreement, the proceeds of any award or compensation arising from the condemnation will belong to and be the property of Optionors, and the description of the parcels as set forth in the attached Exhibit A will be deemed to be revised to exclude the portion so condemned or taken. If any action is filed in a court of competent jurisdiction for the condemnation or taking for a public or quasi-public use of any portion of Parcels A through _____ prior to the acquisition of those parcels by Optionees pursuant to this Agreement, Optionors will have the right to settle that action on the terms it deems reasonable, including the right to convey to the plaintiff in the action the property that is the subject of the action free and clear of any rights of Optionees under this Agreement. In that event, all of the proceeds of any such conveyance will belong to and be the property of Optionors, and the description of the parcels in the attached Exhibit A will be deemed to be revised to exclude the portion so conveyed.

§ 22.232 Protection of Optionor From Mechanics' Liens

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains an optional provision designed to protect the optionor from mechanics' liens that might otherwise be attached to the underlying real property as a result of services performed by the optionee on the property [see, e.g., § 22.221]. The optionor is protected by the requirement that the optionee acquire a bond. When the services performed on the property involve a considerable cost for the contracting of labor and materials, the optionor should consider a provision limiting the risk of mechanics' liens.

[b] Notice of Nonresponsibility

The filing by the optionor of a notice of nonresponsibility pursuant to Civil Code Section 3094 may not guaranty nonresponsibility [see Ott Hardware Co. v. Yost (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 593, 597-601, 159 P.2d 663 (lessor not entitled to notice of nonresponsibility protection when lease required lessee to build improvements lessor would benefit from on return of property); but see American Transit Mix Co. v. Weber (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 74, 79, 234 P.2d 732 (vendor under land sales contract is protected by notice of nonresponsibility)]. No case has ruled on the availability of Section 3094 in the option context. Therefore, the best assurance of protection from mechanics' liens available to the optionor appears to be the requirement that the optionee acquire a bond.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form contains a provision that states that the optionor is entitled to retain the ownership of all designated crops growing on the underlying real property as of a specified date in the event the optionee exercises the option to purchase the property. Growing crops have the status of real property [Wilson v. White (1911) 161 Cal. 453, 460-461, 119 P. 895] . Without an agreement to the contrary, the optionor would be obligated to convey growing crops with the underlying property on exercise of the option. Therefore, if the optionor intends to grow crops on the underlying property during the option period, and to retain ownership of them after exercise of the option, the following provision should be included in the option agreement.

§ 22.234 Prohibition Against Recordation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an option provision prohibiting the recordation of the option agreement. The form and the procedure accompanying its use, or the alternatives set forth in Sections 22.235 and 22.244, should be used if the optionor wants to be able to clear title immediately after the option expires according to its terms and before the expiration date provided by statute for an unexercised option of record [see Civ. Code §§ 884.010-884.030; see also § 22.30 [5]]. Pursuant to the provision, the optionees' violation of the prohibition against recordation will cause the agreement to automatically terminate without notice.

An optional clause in this form provides that the option agreement is to be held by a designated third party and that on expiration of the option period the third party will cancel the instrument. This arrangement assures that the optionee does not possess the agreement, and therefore cannot have the signature of the optionor proved and the agreement recorded.

[b] Risks to Optionee

Acceptance of an antirecordation clause involves a risk to the optionee because it enables the optionor to convey a superior claim to the property to third parties without notice of the optionee's rights. In evaluating whether to take this risk, the optionee should consider the reliability of the optionor and the optionor's ability to respond in damages. If still in doubt, the optionee may consider offering to execute a quitclaim deed in advance to be held by a third party [see § 22.235]; the optionor then has the assurance of being easily able to clear title in case of expiration of the option, and the optionee is able to record the agreement and gain the protection of constructive notice to third parties.

Prohibition Against Recordation

#. [(a)] Optionees must not cause or allow this Agreement or a memorandum or assignment of it to become of record in any public office. In the event Optionees violate this provision, the option granted in this Agreement will automatically terminate without notice.

[If option agreement is to be held by third party, add:]

(b) In accordance with the policy of this provision, the parties agree to the following procedure: (1) All copies of this Agreement bearing the signatures of the Optionors must be delivered to _____[name of third party] to hold in accordance with the terms of this provision. (2) On termination of the Agreement, Optionors must deliver written notice of the termination to Optionees and to _____[name of third party]. If Optionees object to the termination, they must provide a written notice of objection to _____[name of third party] and Optionors within [number] days. This notice must set forth the grounds for their objections. If they fail to provide such a notice, then _____[name of third party] must cancel the instrument by stamping or marking the word "CANCELLED" on each page of the Agreement, and deliver one copy of the Agreement to the Optionees, and any additional copies to the Optionors. (3) If Optionees do object, and the parties do not reach an accord on the issues presented by the objection within [number] days, then the issue of whether the Agreement has been terminated will be submitted to arbitration under the rules of the American Arbitration Association. _____[Name of third party] will then either cancel and deliver, or retain, the Agreement in accordance with the arbitration decision.

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.235

§ 22.235 Automatic Termination and Prior Execution of Quitclaim Deed

This form is a clause that provides both for the automatic termination of an option agreement in the event the option is not exercised and for a method of dealing with the problem of clouded title. This form and the procedure accompanying its use, or the alternatives set forth in Sections 22.234 and 22.254, should be used if the optionor wants to be able to clear title immediately after the option expires according to its terms and before the expiration date provided by statute for an unexercised option of record [see Civ. Code §§ 884.010-884.030; see also § 22.30[5]].

An optionee loses all rights to exercise an option if the option period expires [Rosenaur v. Pacelli (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676, 345 P.2d 102] . This proposition applies to an option transaction even though the parties have failed to provide for an automatic termination in their agreement. However, the purpose of a provision providing for the automatic termination of an option in the event that there is a failure to exercise timely the option is to inform the parties of this important legal concept.

This form also prescribes a method for avoiding the problem of a cloud on the title of the underlying property. The problem of clouded title affects an unexercised option until it expires of record pursuant to statute. As mentioned above, this form permits the optionor to clear title immediately after the option expires according to its terms, without waiting for the statutory expiration date. It accomplishes this by providing that a third party will be the holder of an already executed and acknowledged quitclaim deed, which is to be recorded on expiration of the option.

Automatic Termination

#. (a) If Optionees fail to exercise _____[this or any] option in accordance with its terms and within the [applicable] option period or any extension of that period, then this Agreement and the rights of the Optionees will automatically terminate without notice.

(b) In accordance with the policy of this provision, the parties agree to the following procedure:

(1) Concurrently with the execution of this Agreement, Optionees agree to execute and acknowledge [a quitclaim deed or quitclaim deeds] quitclaiming their interest in [each parcel of] the Property, and to deliver the quitclaim deed[s] to _____[name of third party], who will hold the quitclaim deed [s] in accordance with this provision.

(2) On termination of the Agreement, Optionors must deliver written notice of the termination to Optionees and to _____[name of third party]. If Optionees object to the termination, they must provide a written notice of objection to _____[name of third party] and Optionors within [number] days. This notice must set forth the grounds for their objections. If they fail to provide such a notice, then _____[name of third party] will cause the quitclaim [deed or deeds to the parcels not conveyed] to be recorded in the office of the county recorder in the county where the Property is located.

(3) If Optionees do object, and the parties do not reach an accord on the issues presented by the objection within [number] days, then the issue of whether the Agreement has been terminated will be submitted to arbitration under the rules of the American Arbitration Association. _____[Name of third party] will then either record or retain the quitclaim deed [s] in accordance with the arbitration decision.

(4) Optionors will be responsible for all reasonable costs of _____[name of third party] for performance in accordance with this provision.

9-22 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 22.236

§ 22.236 Risk of Loss

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form sets forth alternative provisions allocating the risk of loss in the event of loss or damage to the underlying property before the exercise of the option. The first provision gives the optionees the right to terminate the agreement and obtain a prorated refund of moneys paid to the optionors following any material loss or damage to the property. This right must be exercised within a specified time period. The second version provides that the optionees are not entitled to such a refund. Both provisions contain language that may be used to specify whether or not the optionees, on exercise of the option, may offset against the purchase price any insurance proceeds or other amounts collected for any loss or damage to the underlying property.

The allocation of the risk of loss depends on such factors as the amount and type of consideration paid for the option. It is possible to draft a provision completely favoring the optionee so that the optionee is protected from every loss occurring during the option period or a provision favoring the optionor by providing that the risk of loss be taken by the optionee. This latter alternative is reasonable when the optionee has paid only nominal consideration for the option and has limited expectations with respect to the future use of the underlying property.

§ 22.250 Notice of Exercise of Right to Extend Option Period

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice to the optionor of the exercise of the right to extend the option period; its use assumes that the right to extend was specifically granted in the option agreement. For an example of an option provision granting the right to extend the option period, see § 22.210. For an example of a subsequent agreement to extend a designated option period, see § 22.251. For a discussion of the appropriate method of exercising an option, see § 22.32.

This form should be executed by the optionee and the signature should be acknowledged if recording is to be effected [see [b], below; § 22.50]. If the original option agreement fails to specify the applicability of extension consideration to the purchase price, this must now be settled in writing. This notice should be communicated to the optionor along with a tender of consideration, both as called for by the agreement; the agreement should be reviewed to verify that the form of the notice is correct and that correct procedure is followed.

[b] Recording

This form also contains a recording heading although the validity of the form is not affected by the failure to have the form recorded. If the option agreement was recorded, then this notice should also be made of record by sending a duplicate original for recordation [see § 22.120]. To prevent the option from expiring of record, an extension of a recorded option must be recorded within six months after the option expires according to its terms, or, if the option provides no expiration date, within six months after the date the instrument that creates or gives constructive notice is recorded [see Civ. Code § 884.010].

[c] Tax Consequences of Extension

The Internal Revenue Service has contended, so far unsuccessfully in the courts, that an extension terminates the old option and begins a new one, thereby commencing a new holding period [see, e.g., Chemetron Corporation v. C.I.R.

(7th Cir. [T.C.] 1962) 299 F.2d 644, 645-650] . This position stems from the concern that the extension was obtained solely for tax advantage. This concern is arguably less applicable in two situations: (1) when the original option agreement provided for the right to extend; and (2) when a new extension is sought for business reasons other than solely for tax advantage. To this end, this form originates directly from rights granted in the original option agreement, and Section 22.241 includes specific recitals of the business reasons for which the extension was sought. For additional support, the extension period should not coincide exactly with the desired tax period but should exceed it and be in line with the stated business purpose (if any). Care should also be taken not to modify, or to modify as little as possible, the terms of the original option. Modifications add support to the position that a new option has been created, rather than an old one extended.

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the right to extend the option period has not been specifically granted in the option agreement but, rather, has been subsequently agreed to by the parties. This form embodies this subsequent agreement. For a discussion of tax considerations related to extending an option period, see § 22.250[1][c].

[b] Procedure for Execution and Recordation

This form must be executed by all parties to the original option agreement, including the optionor, the optionee, and, when appropriate due to community or other interests, the spouse of the optionor. If the form is to be recorded, which depends on whether or not the original option agreement was recorded, the signatures of the optionor and the spouse of the optionor must be acknowledged. To prevent an option from expiring of record, an extension of a recorded option must be recorded within six months after the option expires according to its terms, or, if the option provides no expiration date, within six months after the date of recordation of the instrument that creates or gives constructive notice [see Civ. Code § 884.010]. For a discussion of the process of extension, see § 22.120.

This form is a notice of the exercise of an option. It is to be used when the option agreement provides for exercise by written notice. Modifications to this form should be made, depending on the terms and conditions set forth in the particular option agreement. For example, if the option agreement requires a tender of consideration at the time of exercise, the notice should be modified to reflect the tender of consideration.

This form is not appropriate when the option agreement requires an exercise procedure by some means other than written notice [see, e.g., § 22.200[2], P 6 (exercise effected by executing and delivering sales agreement)].

§ 22.253 Assignment of Option

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an assignment of an option to purchase real property. The form contains a statement concerning the consideration given for the assignment and incorporates by reference the assigned agreement, a copy of which must be attached to the assignment as an exhibit.

The assignor, spouse [see § 22.200[1][b]], and assignee should execute this form. If recordation is to be effected, their signatures must be acknowledged. Unless the option agreement specifies that it is not to be recorded, the assignment should be recorded [see § 22.120].

For option provisions governing the assignability of the option agreement, see § 22.200 [2], P 8.

[b] Tax Considerations

In purporting to sell the option, the optionee should be careful that he or she is not in effect exercising the option and selling the underlying property. If the optionee joins in conveying title to the underlying property, the Internal Revenue Service may take the position that the option was exercised and the property, not the option, was sold [see Barber v. United States (8th Cir. [Minn.] 1954) 215 F.2d 663, 665]. The facts of each case are determinative. If the position of the Internal Revenue Service is upheld, the gain on the sale will be short-term capital gain (ordinary income) to the optionee since the holding period in the property will commence from the date of the exercise of the option and will necessarily be less than one year [see Chemetron Corporation v. C.I.R. (7th Cir. [T.C.] 1962) 299 F.2d 644, 645] . To avoid this pitfall, the optionee should make it clear that the intention is to assign the option, not to sell the underlying property. After giving notice of the assignment to the optionor, the assignor should have nothing further to do with the transaction. The assignee must be the one to exercise the option and to deal with, and pay the purchase price to, the optionor.

Scope

This chapter covers agreements for the purchase and sale of real property that provide for the immediate transfer of title to the buyer in exchange for the entire purchase price. Although this chapter focuses on drafting concerns, it also discusses related topics such as methods of financing, statutory disclosures, and tax considerations.

The Legal Background reviews the laws governing all contracts in California, examines the manner in which those laws are applied to real property sale contracts, and discusses laws applicable solely to these contracts. The Transaction Guide contains lists of information and documents needed to draft a contract for a real property sale transaction, important determinations that the attorney should make before drafting or approving a contract, and procedures for drafting and executing the contract and meeting related reporting requirements. The forms include complete contracts for the sale of residential, commercial, and undeveloped real property; alternative and additional contractual provisions; and related documents such as a real estate transfer disclosure statement, a preliminary change-of-ownership report, and a bill of sale.

This chapter should be used in conjunction with other chapters listed in the Research Guide.

§ 23.10 Terminology

[1] Real Property Sale Contracts

This chapter covers real property sale contracts that provide for the immediate transfer of title to the buyer in exchange for payment of the entire purchase price at once. These are not the same as the "real property sale contracts" defined in Civ. Code § 2985, which are actually installment-sale contracts (commonly called installment land sale contracts). Under the typical installment-sale contract, the buyer agrees to pay the purchase price in installments and is entitled to possession immediately on execution of the contract. No escrow is involved. The seller retains legal title to the property as security for the payments until all or most of them are made. Because they are security devices, these installment-sale contracts are covered in Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

The contracts in this chapter may be called "marketing contracts" [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(a)], although in practice that term is rarely used. The common term "real property sale contracts" (or "agreements") has been used in this chapter.

[2] Purchase Agreements; Deposit Receipts

The purchase agreement, sometimes referred to as a "deposit receipt," is a type of sale contract frequently used in small real estate transactions. It is generally a printed form prepared by a real estate association or commercial publisher [see, e.g., § 23.203 (California Association of Realtors, Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions)]. The purchase agreement serves two functions: (1) on completion by the buyer and delivery to the seller (along with the buyer's deposit), it constitutes the buyer's offer to purchase the property; and (2) on acceptance by the seller, it is a binding purchase and sale contract [see § 23.203[1]; see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 71, Real Property Purchase and Sale Agreements , Pt. B (Matthew Bender)].

§ 23.11 Overview of Applicable Laws

[1] Required Elements of Contract

An agreement to do or not to do a certain thing is a contract if that agreement creates a legal duty enforceable by a civil action or proceeding [Civ. Code § 1549; see Civ. Code §§ 1427, 1428]. A contract for the purchase and sale of real property is subject to the laws that govern all types of contracts in California [see Civ. Code § 1549 et seq.]. The necessary elements of any contract are [Civ. Code § 1550]:

- Parties capable of contracting [see Civ. Code §§ 1550, 1556, 1558 (incapacity; identifiable parties)];
- The consent of the parties [see Civ. Code § 1565 et seq.];
- A lawful object [see Civ. Code §§ 1595 et seq., 1667 et seq. (object of contract; unlawful contracts)]; and
- A sufficient cause or consideration [see Civ. Code §§ 1614, 1605 et seq. (written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration; consideration)].

For further coverage of basic contract law, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

Additional requirements apply specifically to real property sale contracts. Those requirements are discussed throughout this chapter.

[2] Statute of Frauds

Under California law, any contract for the sale of an interest in real property, or some note or memorandum of the contract, must be in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3)]. An agent cannot sign the document unless the principal first authorizes that act in writing [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3); see

Civ. Code § 2309 (equal dignities rule: authority to enter into contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by instrument in writing)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Don't Forget the Equal Dignities Rule Defense. Practitioners frequently focus upon the operation of the statute of frauds, yet ignore the potential dispositive impact of the equal dignities rule. This rule holds that the authority of an agent to execute on behalf of a principal with respect to a contract governed by the statute of frauds also must be in writing. Because of the possible inequities arising from application of this rule, the courts have been liberal in recognizing ratification and estoppel theories to synchronize with the realities of a particular real estate deal. However, the equal dignities rule is still a potent defense. In one case, the court found a defendant was estopped from raising the statute of frauds, but nonetheless was not estopped from relying on the equal dignities rule as a defense [see McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 252-254, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902] . By William M. Hensley.

To meet these requirements, a contract for the sale of real property must be in a writing that identifies the parties to the contract, sets forth the purchase price and the terms and manner of payment, contains a description of the property, and is signed by the parties to be charged or their agents [Finn v. Goldstein (1927) 201 Cal. 605, 607, 258 P. 85 ; Dennis v. Overholtzer (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 766, 774, 3 Cal. Rptr. 193 , disapproved on other grounds, Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 206, 221, 32 Cal. Rptr. 415, 384 P.2d 7] .

An oral contract within the statute of frauds is voidable at the election of either party. Each party assumes the risk that the other party will withdraw [Goldstein v. McNeil (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 608, 611, 265 P.2d 113 ; see Civ. Code § 1624]. However, a party who does not sign the contract can be estopped to assert the statute of frauds following the partial performance of the other party [see Francis v. Colendich (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 128, 131, 14 Cal. Rptr. 56 (payment, survey, and fencing-in of parcel were sufficient for estoppel); see also Oren Realty & Development Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 229, 235, 154 Cal. Rptr. 97] . Full performance of an oral contract is not voidable for failure to satisfy the statute of frauds, because the statute is merely a defense to enforcement [see Realty Corp. of America, Inc. v. Burton (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 44, 57, 327 P.2d 948] .

For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds (Matthew Bender).

[3] Home Equity Sale Contracts Statute

Special statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.] apply to certain contracts for the sale of owner-occupied residential property, consisting of one-to-four residential units, that is in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.1(b)]. Known as "home equity sale contracts," these include most contracts under which the property is sold in foreclosure but outside the normal foreclosure procedure [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(a), (e); see Ch. 25D, Foreclosure]. The special statutory requirements that apply to these contracts are intended to protect homeowners from being induced, through misrepresentations or other unreasonable commercial practices, to sell their homes in foreclosure for a fraction of fair market value during the period between the commencement of foreclosure proceedings and the scheduled foreclosure sale date [see Civ. Code § 1695].

These statutes regulate a contract between any equity buyer and equity seller, that is, the buyer and seller of a residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.1(e); see generally Segura v. McBride (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1028, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 (law applies to all buyers of home equity subject to foreclosure, not just to persons in business of buying home equity)]. An equity buyer is any person who acquires title to any residence in foreclosure [see Civ. Code § 1695(b) (definition)] except as follows [Civ. Code § 1695.1(a)]:

- For the purpose of using the property as a residence;

- By a deed in lieu of foreclosure of any voluntary lien or encumbrance of record;

- By a deed from a trustee acting under a power of sale in a deed of trust or mortgage at a foreclosure sale conducted pursuant to Civ. Code § 2920 et seq.;

- At any sale of property authorized by statute;

- By order or judgment of any court; or

- From a spouse, blood relative, or blood relative of a spouse.

An equity seller has the right to cancel any contract with an equity buyer until the earlier of (1) the fifth business day following the day on which the equity seller signed a contract that complies with the provisions governing home equity sale contracts [see Civ. Code § 1695.4], or (2) the day scheduled for the sale of the property pursuant to a power of sale conferred in a deed of trust [see Civ. Code § 1695.4]. Until that time has elapsed, the equity buyer is restricted in the acts he or she may perform in connection with the sale transaction [see Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)]. Statutory notices regarding the right to cancel [see Civ. Code § 1695.5(a)] and the temporary restrictions on the actions of the equity buyer [see Civ. Code § 1695.3(h)] must be included in the sale contract [see Civ. Code §§ 1695.2, 1695.3 (other required contents); see also § 23.211]. Further, a statutory notice of cancellation must be attached to the contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.5; see § 23.307]. Finally, if any person involved in a transaction involving residential real property in foreclosure takes "unconscionable advantage" of the property owner in foreclosure, the transaction is voidable and may be rescinded by the property owner within two years of the date of the recordation of the conveyance of the property [see Civ. Code § 1695.14; see also § 23.324].

The Home Equity Sales Contract Act excludes from its coverage a purchaser acquiring title "at any sale of property authorized by statute" [Civ. Code § 1695.1(a)(4)]. In Spencer v. Marshall, (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 783, 795, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 752 , the court concluded that the Legislature purposefully started the phrase with the preposition "at," which is defined in the dictionary as denoting a location or position. Thus, to be excluded from the Act, the purchaser must have bid for or purchased the property at a sale authorized by statute. For example, a purchase of property at a government sale due to unpaid taxes would fall under this exception. In Spencer, the fact that an equity seller sold the property to the equity purchaser after receiving approval from a bankruptcy trustee did not bring the sale within the statutory exemptions from the definition of "equity purchaser" because the equity purchasers did not buy the property "at" any sale of property authorized by statute.

If a representative of an equity buyer participates in a home equity sale transaction, the representative must provide written proof and a written statement indicating that the representative has a valid current California real estate license and is bonded by an admitted surety insurer in an amount equal to twice the fair market value of the real property that is the subject of the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.17(a); see Civ. Code § 1695.15(b) ("representative" defined); see also § 23.308]. The equity buyer is liable for all damages resulting from any statement made or act committed by the representative in connection with the equity buyer's acquisition of a residence in foreclosure, receipt of any consideration or property from or on behalf of the seller, or performance of any act prohibited by the laws governing home equity sale contracts [Civ. Code § 1695.15(a); see Civ. Code § 1695.16 (any contractual provision attempting to limit this liability is void)]. For further discussion, see § 23.308[1].

[4] Applicability of Unruh Civil Rights Act

The Unruh Civil Rights Act prohibits business establishments from discriminating in the sale of housing based on age, unless the discrimination is in favor of senior citizens and complies with numerous statutory requirements [Civ. Code §§ 51.2-51.4; see Civ. Code §§ 51.10-51.12 (special provisions applicable only to Riverside County); Stats. 1996, ch. 1147, § 8 (legislative findings for special treatment of Riverside County); see also Ch. 34, Condominiums (coverage of senior housing statutes)].

The Unruh Civil Rights Act declares that all persons within California are free and equal and, regardless of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, or national origin, disabilities, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all "business establishments" of every kind whatsoever [Civ. Code § 51(b); see Civ. Code § 51(e) (definitions)]. The act is not to be construed to require modification of new or existing structures [Civ. Code § 51(d)]. It has been interpreted to prohibit all arbitrary discrimination by business establishments [In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 216, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992] .

The term "business" as used in the Act embraces everything about which one can be employed, and "establishment" includes not only a fixed location but also a permanent "commercial force or organization" or a "permanent settled position (as in life or business)" [Burks v. Poppy Construction Co. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 463, 468 469, 20 Cal. Rptr. 609, 370 P.2d 313] . "Business establishment" also covers owners of duplexes, non-owner-occupied single-family dwellings, and other housing accommodations [56 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 546 (1973)] .

[5] Applicability of California Fair Employment and Housing Act

Under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], it is unlawful to engage in specified discriminatory practices in housing accommodations on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, source of income, or disability [see Gov. Code § 12955]. Discrimination on these bases is against public policy [Gov. Code § 12920], and the opportunity to seek, obtain, and hold housing without discrimination is a civil right [Gov. Code § 12921(b); see Civ. Code § 51]. The Department of Fair Employment and Housing is authorized to take remedial and preventive actions, such as to use the services of all governmental departments and agencies, including conciliation councils with regard to housing discrimination, and to receive, investigate, and conciliate complaints alleging discriminatory practices [Gov. Code § 12930(d), (f)]. For example, with regard to real estate transactions, it is unlawful for any person, organization, or entity to do any of the following [Gov. Code § 12955(i)- (k)]:

- Discriminate against any person in making available a transaction, or in the terms and conditions of a transaction, based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics;

- Deny a person access to, or membership or participation in, a multiple listing service, real estate brokerage organization, or other service based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics; or

- Otherwise make unavailable or deny a dwelling based on discrimination because of the specified characteristics.

[6] Inapplicability of Consumer Credit Statute (Unruh Act)

California's Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.] (not to be confused with the Unruh Civil Rights Act discussed in § 23.11[4]) strictly regulates the extension of consumer credit in connection with retail installment sales [see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales]. However, the Unruh Act is inapplicable to real property sale contracts. Specifically, the Act does not apply to any contract or series of contracts providing for the following [Civ. Code § 1801.4]:

- The construction, sale, or construction and sale of an entire residence or all or part of a structure designed for commercial or industrial occupancy, with or without a parcel of real property or an interest in a parcel of real property; or

- The sale of a lot of real property, including any site preparation incidental to the sale.

These exceptions were specifically enacted to abrogate any contrary rule in Morgan v. Reasor Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 881, 73 Cal. Rptr. 398, 447 P.2d 638 , which applied the provisions of the Unruh Act to a contract of sale for a house yet to be built [see Stats. 1969, ch. 554, § 2].

[7] Buyer's Choice Act

If the seller acquired the property at a foreclosure sale and was the mortgagee or trust deed beneficiary that foreclosed, then the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103.20 et seq., titled the Buyer's Choice Act, could apply. Until January 1, 2015 [Civ. Code § 1103.23], no mortgagee or trust deed beneficiary (nor any trustee, agent, officer, or other employee, of a mortgagee or beneficiary), that acquired title to residential real property improved by four or fewer dwelling units at a foreclosure sale, may require, directly or indirectly, as a condition of selling the property, that title insurance covering the property, or escrow service provided in connection with the sale of the property, must be obtained by the purchaser from a particular title insurer or escrow agent [Civ. Code § 1103.22(a), (b)(2); see Civ. Code § 1103.22(b)(1), (3) (escrow service and title insurance defined)]. However, the purchaser may agree to accept the services of a title insurer or an escrow agent recommended by the seller if the seller first gives the purchaser written notice of the right to make an independent selection of those services [Civ. Code § 1103.22(a)].

Civ. Code § 1103.22 applies regardless of whether the secondary sale ensues from a solicitation of purchasers or from acceptance of an unsolicited offer to purchase [see Civ. Code § 1103.21(b)].

A sale subject to Civ. Code § 1103.22 cannot be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with any provision of Civ. Code § 1103.20 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1103.22(d)]. However, a violation of Civ. Code § 1103.22 is a cause of action, and the purchaser may recover statutory damages equal to three times all of the charges made for the required title insurance or escrow services. A violation also is a ground for disciplinary action by a licensing agency, if the culpable mortgagee or beneficiary (or a culpable trustee, agent, officer, or other employee, of the mortgagee or beneficiary) is a state-licensed person [Civ. Code § 1103.22(c)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.12

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.12 Parties to Contract

[1] Capacity

The parties to a valid contract must be capable of contracting [Civ. Code § 1550; see Civ. Code § 1558 (identities of parties must be ascertainable)]. All persons are capable of contracting except minors, persons of unsound mind, and persons deprived of civil rights [see Civ. Code § 1556].

[2] Married Persons

[a] Separate Property

Spouses may each own separate property, and together they may hold property in joint tenancy or tenancy in common or as community property or as community property with a right of survivorship [Fam. Code § 750]. The separate property of a married person includes, among other things (1) all property owned by that person before marriage, (2) all property acquired by that person during marriage by gift, will, or inheritance, and (3) the rents, issues, and profits of property in the first two categories [Fam. Code § 770; see Fam. Code §§ 771, 781 (additional types of separate property)]. A married person may convey his or her separate property without the consent of the other spouse [Fam. Code § 770].

[b] Community Property

Except as otherwise provided by statute, all real property, wherever situated, acquired by a married person during the marriage while domiciled in California is community property or as community property with a right of survivorship [Fam. Code § 760]. One statutory variation, applicable to instruments created after June 2001, allows for community real property with right of survivorship. Any community property (except a multiple-party account [see Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.]), when expressly declared in the transfer document to be community property with right of survivorship, and which may be accepted in writing on the face of the document by a statement signed or initialed by the grantees, shall, on the death of one of the spouses, pass to the survivor, without administration, pursuant to the terms of the instrument, subject to the same procedures as property held in joint tenancy [Civ. Code § 682.1]. For further discussion, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

Either spouse has the management and control of community real property, regardless of when it was acquired. However, both spouses (either personally or by duly authorized agent) must sign any instrument by which community real property is sold or conveyed [Fam. Code § 1102(a); see Fam. Code § 1100(c)]. This joint-execution requirement does not apply to transfers between the spouses [Fam. Code § 1102(b)]. Further, the joint-execution requirement and the other provisions of Fam. Code § 1102 do not preclude either spouse from encumbering his or her interest in community real property, pursuant to Fam. Code § 2033, to pay reasonable attorney's fees in order to retain or maintain legal counsel in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, for nullity of marriage, or for legal separation [Fam. Code § 1102(e)].

Several important presumptions affect the application of the community property laws. For example:

- If a husband and wife acquired property before 1975 by an instrument in which they are described as husband and wife, it is presumed that the property is community property unless a different intention is expressed in the instrument [Fam. Code § 803(c); see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording].

- If record title to real property is held in the name of one spouse, and that spouse signs a contract or instrument conveying the property or any interest in it to a good faith purchaser who has no knowledge of the marriage relation, the instrument is presumed valid [see Fam. Code § 1102(c); Fam. Code § 1102(d) (one-year limitation period to avoid instrument)].

- In the case of property acquired during marriage in joint form, including property held in tenancy in common, joint tenancy, or tenancy by the entirety, or as community property, the property is presumed to be community property for the purpose of division of the property on dissolution of marriage or legal separation. This presumption may be rebutted either by a clear statement in the deed or other documentary evidence of title that the property is separate property and not community property or by proof that the parties have made a written agreement that the property is separate property [Fam. Code § 2581; see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording].

A person under 18 years of age [see Fam. Code § 6500 (age of majority)] cannot make a contract relating to real property [Civ. Code §§ 1556, 1557; Fam. Code § 6701(b); Sparks v. Sparks (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 129, 137, 225 P.2d 238 (contract is void)] unless he or she is an emancipated minor. An emancipated minor is any person under 18 years of age who either (1) has entered into a valid marriage (whether or not the marriage has been dissolved), (2) is on active duty with the U.S. armed forces, or (3) has received a declaration of emancipation pursuant to Fam. Code § 7122 [Fam. Code § 7002]. An emancipated minor will be considered to be an adult for purposes of the minor's capacity to enter into a binding contract or to buy or sell any interest in real property [Fam. Code § 7050(e)(2), (3)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 100B, Contracts and Employment of Minors .

When a real property transaction involves an unemancipated minor as seller, a duly appointed guardian must be authorized by court order to sell the real property that is held in the minor's name [Prob. Code § 2540; see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording]. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians (Matthew Bender).

[4] Persons of Unsound Mind

A person of unsound mind who is entirely without understanding has no power to make a contract of any kind [Civ.

Code § 38]. After an adjudication of incapacity, a person of unsound mind cannot make any contract until restored to capacity [Civ. Code § 40]. For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

If a person of unsound mind who is not entirely without understanding makes a contract before his or her incapacity has been judicially determined, the contract is subject to rescission [Civ. Code §§ 39, 1689(b)(7)]. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution (Matthew Bender).

A conservator must be appointed to sell, pursuant to court authorization, real property that is held in the name of an incompetent [Prob. Code § 2540; see Prob. Code § 3000 et seq. (disposition of community property when spouse is incompetent)]. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators (Matthew Bender).

[5] Corporations

Any contract or other instrument in writing by a corporation is not invalid for any lack of authority of the signing officers if the buyer did not have actual knowledge of that lack of authority. The appropriate officers are the chairman of the board, the president, or any vice president, and the secretary, assistant secretary, chief financial officer, or assistant treasurer of the corporation [Corp. Code § 313; but see Corp. Code § 208(a) (rule inapplicable to certain intracorporate disputes not affecting rights of third persons)]. To be valid and enforceable against the corporation, a contract to sell the corporation's real property must be signed a person who holds one of the three specified operational offices (chairman, president, vice president) and a person who holds one of the other specified offices (secretary, assistant secretary, chief financial officer, assistant treasurer). However, it is not necessary for two individuals to sign: if one person happens to hold both an operational office and also one of the other offices (such as president and chief financial officer), then that person alone can sign. In such a case, it is not necessary to disclose, or to indicate in connection with the signature, that the person holds both offices; it is necessary only that the person signing for the corporation must in fact hold both offices [Snukal v. Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 786-787, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286 (lease signed for corporation by one person, who signed only once and was designated as "president" of corporation, was enforceable against corporation under Corp. Code § 313 because that person was in fact president, chief financial officer, and secretary of corporation)]. Nevertheless, prudence would dictate requiring two signatures on behalf of a corporation, even by one person signing as two officers, along with appropriate designation of the official capacity in which each signature is given.

PRACTICE TIP:

Get Two Corporate Signatures of Appropriate Officers. Snukal is must reading in the area about the number and identity of corporate officers who must sign on behalf of a corporation in order to create a binding contract. Before the California Supreme Court resolved the case, the decision created quite a stir by holding that Corp. Code § 313 should be applied quite literally. Although the Supreme Court recognized that actual and ostensible authority doctrines frequently prevail in contractual contexts, the real-life lesson is that parties opposite a corporation should insist on two corporate representative signatures to be safe--one by the Board chairman, president, or any vice president and one by the secretary, assistant secretary, chief financial officer, or assistant treasurer. By William M. Hensley.

If the property to be sold represents all or substantially all of the assets of the corporation [see Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 11, 15-16, 206 P.2d 847] , the principal terms of the disposition must be approved by the board [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 151 ("approved by the board" defined)]. In addition, unless the transaction is in the usual and regular course of the business of the corporation [see Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 11, 16, 206 P.2d 847] , the principal terms of the sale must be approved by the outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152 ("approved by the outstanding shares" defined)] either before or after the board's approval and before or after the transaction [Corp. Code § 1001(a)]. However, if the transaction constitutes a conversion to another form of business entity, it is not subject to these provisions but rather to provisions that specifically govern conversions [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 1150 et seq. (conversions)]. For further discussion, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 12, Corporate Acquisitions, Mergers, and Reorganizations (Matthew Bender).

Civ. Code § 1190 offers an assurance regarding the capacity of a corporate participant in a sale transaction. That assurance is available if the corporation's deed (1) is signed by the president, vice president, secretary, or assistant secretary of the corporation, and (2) includes the statutory certificate of acknowledgment [see Civ. Code § 1190; see also Civ. Code § 1189(a) (statutory form)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

Any deed or instrument conveying or otherwise transferring corporate assets may have annexed to it any one of several certificates of the corporation's secretary or assistant secretary. If properly drafted, the attached certificate will be prima facie evidence of the existence of the facts authorizing the conveyance or other transfer of the assets and conclusive evidence in favor of any innocent buyer or encumbrancer for value. For discussion of the required contents of such a certificate [see Corp. Code § 1002], see § 23.121.

[6] General Partnerships

A general partnership can acquire real property in the partnership name or in the name of one or more of the partners [Corp. Code § 16204(a)]. When title to real property is held in the partnership name, the property can be conveyed only in that name. In general, any partner can convey that title by an instrument signed in the partnership name [Corp. Code §§ 16302(a)(1), 16303].

The partnership may recover property conveyed by a partner pursuant to an instrument signed in the partnership name unless the partner's act binds the partnership or the property has been conveyed to a good faith purchaser for value without knowledge that the partner exceeded his or her authority by executing the conveyance [Corp. Code § 16302(b); see Corp. Code §§ 16301, 16303].

If title to partnership property is held in the name of one or more of the partners, only the partners in whose name title stands can convey title [see Corp. Code § 16302(a)(2), (3); see also Corp. Code §§ 16204, 16303].

For further discussion of general partnerships, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships . For deeds that may be used by a partnership to acquire and convey property, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

[7] Limited Partnerships

A general partner of a limited partnership has the rights and powers of a partner in a general partnership (for example, the right to convey partnership property) [Corp. Code § 15904.02(a) (ULPA '08), Corp. Code § 15643 (CRLPA, repealed January 1, 2010); see § 23.12[6]]. The recordation of a certified copy of the certificate of limited partnership (or any amendment) in the county where partnership real property is located creates a conclusive presumption in favor of a good faith purchaser of the property that the general partners named in the certificate are all of the general partners of the partnership [Corp. Code § 15902.01(e) (ULPA '08), Corp. Code § 15621(d) (CRLPA, repealed January 1, 2010)].

The consent of each partner is necessary to sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of a limited partnership's property, with or without the goodwill, other than in the usual and regular course of the limited partnership's activities [Corp. Code § 15904.06(a) (ULPA '08)]. Under the CRLPA, unless the limited partnership agreement provides to the contrary, a transfer of all or a substantial part of the assets of the limited partnership or the incurring of any indebtedness that is not in the ordinary course of business must be authorized by the affirmative vote of a majority in interest of the limited partners [Corp. Code § 15636(f)(1)(B), (C) (CRLPA, repealed January 1, 2010)].

For further discussion of limited partnerships, see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships .

[8] Unincorporated Associations

An unincorporated association may, in its name, acquire, hold, manage, encumber, or transfer an interest in real or personal property [Corp. Code §§ 18105, 18110; see Corp. Code § 21200 (capacity of unincorporated association that is organized as medical society)]. The acquisition, transfer, or encumbrance of an interest in real property by an unincorporated association must be executed by (1) its president and secretary or other comparable officers, (2) a person specifically designated by a resolution adopted by the association, or (3) a committee or other body or person authorized to act by the governing principles of the association [Corp. Code § 18115].

An unincorporated association may record in a county in which it has an interest in real property a verified and acknowledged statement of authority stating the name of the association, and the names, title, or capacity of its officers and other persons who are authorized on its behalf to acquire, transfer, or encumber real property [Corp. Code § 18120(a); see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording]. Generally, it must be conclusively presumed in favor of a bona fide transferor, purchaser, or encumbrancer for value of the association's real property located in the county in which a statement of authority has been recorded, that a person designated in the statement is authorized to acquire, transfer, or encumber real property on the association's behalf [Corp. Code § 18120(c)]. However, the presumption does not apply if, before the acquisition, transfer, or encumbrance, either (1) the statement of authority is revoked by the unincorporated association, or (2) a person claiming to be a member, director, or officer of the unincorporated association records, in the county in which the property is located, a verified and acknowledged document stating that the statement of authority is erroneous or unauthorized [Corp. Code § 18120(d)].

For further discussion of unincorporated associations, see Ch. 13A, Nonprofit Unincorporated Associations .

[1] Basic Requirement

The consent of the parties to a contract is essential to the existence of the contract and must be free, mutual, and communicated by each party to the other [Civ. Code §§ 1550, 1565]. Consent is not free if it is obtained through duress, menace, actual fraud, constructive fraud, undue influence, or a mistake of fact or law [Civ. Code § 1567; see Civ. Code § 1565 et seq.].

The existence of mutual assent is determined by an objective test [Meyer v. Benko (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942, 127 Cal. Rptr. 846] that looks to the reasonable meaning of the parties' words and acts [see Brant v. California Dairies, Inc. (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 128, 133, 48 P.2d 13] . Mutual assent is usually manifested by the signatures of both parties on the contract itself [Sampson v. Draeger (1927) 88 Cal. App. 105, 108, 262 P. 781] . The execution by both parties of a deposit receipt that contains all the material factors common to a sale of real property indicates the existence of mutual consent and therefore that the parties entered into an enforceable contract [Meyer v. Benko (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942-944, 127 Cal. Rptr. 846 ; see Yablon v. Burke (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 502, 505, 280 P.2d 809 (unsigned standard-form deposit receipt is not contract of sale)].

For further discussion of the existence of mutual consent in this context, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 71, Deposit Receipts and Other Agreements of Sale (Matthew Bender). For an examination of the requirement of mutual consent as it relates to contracts in general, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[2] Acceptance and Counteroffers

An acceptance of an offer to make a contract must be absolute and unqualified. A qualified or conditional acceptance is considered a new proposal or counteroffer [Civ. Code § 1585; Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750-752, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335 ; Apablasa v. Merritt & Co. (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 719, 726, 1 Cal. Rptr. 500] . A counteroffer terminates the offeree's power to accept the original offer, unless the offeror, in the offer, or the offeree, in the counteroffer, provides that the counteroffer will not terminate the offer [Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335] . For further discussion of counteroffers, see § 23.204[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

CAR Counteroffer Battle Shows Lack of Contract Formation. One frequently forgets how law school contract principles came to life given the widespread modern use of California Association of Realtors (CAR) forms. A case from the Third District Court of Appeal illustrates how counteroffer "unqualified" acceptance rules kept a contract from arising in a real estate context. Specifically, in Roth v. Malson [(1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 552, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 226] , plaintiff-buyer wrote "COUNTER TO COUNTER OFFER" in a CAR form and then handwrote some fairly minor changes in a space marked "CHANGES/AMENDMENTS." The Third District, in a 2-1 opinion, found that the "counter-counteroffer" language had to be viewed objectively, requiring a further response from defendant-seller. Seller did not respond, with the result that no contract was formed and a summary judgment in favor of seller on buyer's specific performance action was affirmed. By William M. Hensley.

[3] Revocation

An offer may be revoked at any time before acceptance of the offer is communicated to the offeror [Civ. Code § 1586]. An offer may be revoked by (1) communication of notice of revocation from the offeror to the offeree, (2) lapse of time, (3) the offeree's failure to fulfill a condition precedent to acceptance, or (4) the offeror's death or insanity [Civ. Code § 1587]. For further discussion, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[4] Certainty

Mutual assent is not present if there is any evidence that a material element has been left to future agreement. For example, a deposit receipt containing all of the essential terms of sale is not a binding contract if the parties intend to withhold final agreement until all incidental terms and conditions are noted in a written agreement [see Smissaert v. Chiodo (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 827, 831, 330 P.2d 98 (no contract when addendum to deposit receipt provided for final written agreement)]. Further, a deposit receipt is not a contract of sale when it does not adequately arrange for payment of the remainder of the purchase price [see Kline v. Rogerson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 158, 160, 181 P.2d 385 (no contract when deposit receipt provided that purchase price was to be paid on mutually satisfactory terms, and parties never agreed on such terms)]. However, a contradiction in the terms on the face of the contract will not invalidate the contract if the court (through the use of parol evidence or otherwise) can recognize and remedy the contradiction to effect the intentions of the parties at the time of execution [Lipton v. Johansen (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 363, 367, 233 P.2d 648] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.14 Description of Property

[1] Requirement of Specificity: Legal Description

To satisfy the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 1971; see also § 23.11[2]], a contract for the sale of real property must be in a writing that, among other things, contains a description of the property that sufficiently identifies it [Finn v. Goldstein (1927) 201 Cal. 605, 607, 258 P. 85 ; see Calvi v. Bittner (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 312, 321, 17 Cal. Rptr. 850] . An adequate description is also a prerequisite to specific performance of the contract [see Civ. Code § 3390 (contract cannot be specifically enforced if its terms are not sufficiently certain to make clearly ascertainable what precise act is to be done); see also Ganiats Construction, Inc. v. Hesse (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 377, 384, 4 Cal. Rptr. 706] .

The term "legal description" is commonly used to refer to a description of real property that is complete enough to permit the identification of a particular parcel of land.

The courts have applied a number of standards or tests in determining the adequacy of descriptions of real property. Under one common test, a description will be deemed sufficient if a competent surveyor could locate the land and establish its boundaries from the description [see Carlson v. Richardson (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 204, 207, 72 Cal. Rptr. 769] . Another test has been applied to descriptions that are abstract and of a general nature. That test determines whether the description, with the assistance of external evidence that does not contradict or add to the description, can be connected with and applied to the appropriate property to the exclusion of all other property [Vezaldenos v. Keller (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 816, 823, 62 Cal. Rptr. 808] . In addition, the Supreme Court has held that a memorandum agreement satisfies the statute of frauds if it (1) identifies the subject of the parties' agreement, (2) shows that they made a contract, and (3) states the essential contract terms with reasonable certainty [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 757, 766, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116, 152 P.3d 420] .

Under any test used by the courts, parol evidence may be admitted for the purpose of applying the given description to the earth's surface, thereby identifying the property [Beverage v. Canton Placer Mining Co. (1955) 43 Cal. 2d 769, 774, 278 P.2d 694 ; Calvi v. Bittner (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 312, 316, 17 Cal. Rptr. 850] . However, parol evidence cannot be used to furnish the description [Sterling v. Taylor (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 757, 766, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116, 152 P.3d 420 (memorandum must include essential contractual terms, and therefore extrinsic evidence is not admissible to supply those required terms); Roberts v. Lebrain (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 712, 715, 248 P.2d 810 ; Vezaldenos v. Keller (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 816, 823, 62 Cal. Rptr. 808] . For further discussion of the parol evidence rule, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[2] Effect of Inadequate Description

An inadequate description (one that fails to identify the land or to provide the means by which it may be identified) may (1) render the contract void or ineffective [see Edwards v. City of Santa Paula (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 375, 380, 292 P.2d 31] , (2) cause a party to incur additional expense to bring an action to reform the instrument [see Hanlon v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 580, 598, 116 P.2d 465] , and (3) preclude specific enforcement of the contract [see Civ. Code § 3390; see also [1], above].

[3] Reference to Recorded Maps or Other Instruments

Real property sale contracts frequently describe the subject property by reference to a lot and block number as indicated on a map that has been filed with the county recorder. Alternatively, the contract may refer to the description set forth in another document, such as the seller's deed or a preliminary title report (which usually includes a description of the property and a copy of a map of the property) or title insurance policy. When a description incorporates a map or other instrument by reference, the documents, when read together, must provide a description of the property sufficiently definite to locate the property [Caldwell v. Center (1866) 30 Cal. 539, 542 ; see Ames v. Irvine Co. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 832, 836, 55 Cal. Rptr. 180 (all information contained on map is included in description by reference with same effect as though it were specifically set forth)].

Maps used to describe property can include subdivision maps prepared pursuant to the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.; see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation], "official maps" prepared by local jurisdictions [see Gov. Code § 66499.52], and assessors' parcel maps [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 327].

[4] Other Methods of Describing Land

In addition to recorded maps or other instruments, methods of describing land that are used in California include reference to United States Government survey, reference to the California Coordinate System, description by metes and bounds, bounds descriptions, and lot division descriptions. For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 81, Boundaries and Descriptions (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Include APN. In order to guard against invalidation based on an incorrect property description, always include the Assessor's Parcel Number (APN) as a fail-safe measure. By William M. Hensley.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.15 Purchase Price

[1] Sufficiency of Consideration

A real property sale contract must have a sufficient cause or consideration [see Civ. Code § 1550(4)]. This consideration must be "good consideration," that is, valuable consideration [Horton v. Kyburz (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 59, 65, 346 P.2d 399] . A benefit conferred or agreed to be conferred on the seller, to which the seller is not otherwise entitled, is good consideration. Similarly, a detriment suffered or agreed to be suffered by the buyer is good consideration if the buyer was not already legally bound to suffer this prejudice at the time of consent [Civ. Code § 1605]. Real property sale contracts almost invariably provide for the payment of a specified purchase price in exchange for the transfer of title.

Although a good and sufficient consideration must be a valuable consideration, it need not be an adequate consideration [see Horton v. Kyburz (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 59, 66, 346 P.2d 399] . However, unless the purchase price or other consideration is "adequate," the buyer will not be able to obtain specific performance of the contract [Civ. Code § 3391(1); see Schwartz v. Shapiro (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 238, 255, 40 Cal. Rptr. 189] . The determination of the adequacy of the consideration is made as of the time of the execution of the contract [Henderson v. Fisher (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 468, 474, 46 Cal. Rptr. 173] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Rely on Presumptions, But Do Not Go Too Far. If someone challenges the nature or amount of legal consideration, do not forget to rely on the rule that a written instrument is presumptive evidence of a consideration [Civ. Code § 1614]. In line with this presumption, the burden of showing lack of consideration to support a written instrument rests with the party challenging the instrument [Civ. Code § 1615]. However. the presumption regarding consideration is rebuttable; Evid. Code § 622 makes this clear by specifying that a recital of consideration--with recitals usually given conclusive effect--is an exception to the general rule of dispositive impact. Nonetheless, a recital of considerations does have a powerful evidentiary effect, requiring rebuttal by the other side in order to show that adequate consideration was not given for entry into a contract. By William M. Hensley.

[2] Terms of Payment

A real property sale contract will not satisfy the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624] unless it sets forth (among other things) the purchase price and the terms and manner of payment [Finn v. Goldstein (1927) 201 Cal. 605, 607, 258 P. 85 ; Dennis v. Overholtzer (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 766, 774, 3 Cal. Rptr. 193 , disapproved on other grounds, Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 206, 221, 32 Cal. Rptr. 415, 384 P.2d 7] . The terms of payment must be complete and must not leave any material element to future agreement [see Kline v. Rogerson (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 158, 160, 181 P.2d 385 ; Burgess v. Rodom (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 71, 74, 262 P.2d 335] .

If the purchase price will not be payable entirely in cash at the closing, the contract must provide for the method of securing the balance of the purchase price [see Mueller v. Chandler (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 521, 523, 31 Cal. Rptr. 646] . The normal method is by the use of a deed of trust.

If the property is subject to an existing deed of trust or mortgage, the buyer may "assume" the encumbrance or accept the property "subject to" the encumbrance. If the buyer purchases the property "subject to" an existing encumbrance, he or she does not assume or agree to pay the debt secured by the mortgage or deed of trust [Wolfert v. Guadagno (1933) 130 Cal. App. 661, 663, 20 P.2d 360] and does not become personally liable for the payment of the debt [Braun v. Crew (1920) 183 Cal. 728, 731, 192 P. 531 ; Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 599, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981] . A buyer who "assumes" the encumbrance agrees to pay and discharge the debt that the seller is liable for and that is secured by the mortgage or deed of trust, and therefore becomes liable for the debt to the mortgagee or beneficiary [Williams v. Naftzger (1894) 103 Cal. 438, 440, 37 P. 411] . For further discussion, see § 23.221[1].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 23.16 Contingencies (Conditions)

While every real estate contract places conditions on a party's performance, if a contract does not impose a definite obligation on one party to perform it, it lacks the fundamental element of mutuality of obligation and is not binding on the other party [Shortell v. Evans-Ferguson Corp. (1929) 98 Cal. App. 650, 660, 277 P. 519] . A contract that allows the buyer to withdraw if he or she wishes is illusory [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 122, 330 P.2d 625] . Conditions to performance are often referred to as "contingencies," and this chapter will follow that practice.

A contract conditioned on the satisfaction of either party or a third party is not illusory. If a contingency requires the personal satisfaction of either party (a subjective judgment), the party who must be satisfied has an implied duty of good faith [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 124, 330 P.2d 625 ; see Converse v. Fong (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 86, 90, 205 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; Simmons v. Dryer (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 733, 743, 31 Cal. Rptr. 199] . When the contingency must meet an objective standard such as commercial value or quality, operative fitness, or mechanical utility, the relevant standard is that of a reasonable person [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 123, 330 P.2d 625] . In the case of an inspection contingency (such as pest inspection or inspection of subsoil), the standard is the prevailing practice in that field of inspection at that time [see Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 249, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

The validity of a real estate contract containing a contingency (condition) is protected somewhat by the statutory rule that all things considered in law or usage to be incidental to a contract, or necessary to carry it into effect, are implied in the contract [Civ. Code § 1656]. This rule has been interpreted to infer in every contract for the sale of real property a requirement of a good faith attempt by both parties to carry the contract into effect [Landis v. Blomquist (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 533, 537, 64 Cal. Rptr. 865] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Determining in Whose Favor Contingencies Run Is Important. Contingencies are a crucial aspect of real estate purchase/sale contracts. In determining the effect of contingencies, courts often consider in whose favor they run or to whom they were designed to benefit. The determination of benefit can be outcome determinative in determining the legal effect of a particular contingency. Decisional law frequently will side with the view that certain contingencies are waivable by a certain party based upon which party the contingency was assigned to benefit [see, e.g., WYDA Associates v. Merner (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 1714-1715, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (financing contingency protected buyer, but the actual contingency period was for seller's benefit and seller did not have to keep the property off the market indefinitely while buyer sought financing)]. One cannot lose sight of the purpose of a contingency for purposes of judicial scrutiny of the circumstances under which the contingency will be found to have been waived or to be unenforceable. By William M. Hensley.

Some warranties arise by operation of law. In the case of real property sales, the only significant implied warranties are those applicable to newly constructed homes [see Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 (implied warranty that new construction was designed and constructed in reasonably workmanlike manner); see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 441, Consumers' Remedies (Matthew Bender)] and to personal property included in the sale [see Com. Code §§ 2314, 2315; see also Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code]. The scope, modification, and exclusion of these warranties are strictly regulated.

If a real property sale contract provides that the warranties set forth in the contract will survive delivery of the deed, this will prevent the contract (and its warranties) from being merged into and extinguished by the accepted deed, and therefore will permit the injured party to bring an action if a warranty is breached after delivery of the deed [see Burnand v. Nowell (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5, 189 P.2d 796 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 (person to whom tender is made must, at time of tender, specify any objection to money, instrument, or property, or he or she will be deemed to have waived it)].

§ 23.18 Liquidated Damages

[1] Real Property Sales Contracts in General

This discussion focuses on the seller's right to liquidated damages following a buyer's breach of a real property sale contract. A liquidated damages clause in a real property sale contract is enforceable if the following conditions are satisfied:

- It is separately signed or initialed by each party to the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1676, 1677(a); see Guthman v. Moss (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 501, 509-510, 198 Cal. Rptr. 54 (failure to sign or initial renders provision voidable)].

- In the case of a printed contract, the provision is set out either in at least 10-point boldface type or 8-point contrasting red boldface type [Civ. Code §§ 1676, 1677(b)].

- The buyer (or other person seeking to invalidate the provision) does not establish that the provision was unreasonable in view of the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code §§ 1671(b), 1676].

Additional requirements apply to sale contracts for residential real property [see [2], below].

If the buyer defaults, and the contract does not contain a liquidated-damages provision, the seller may recover not only the excess of the contract price over the value of the property but also consequential damages according to proof and interest [see Civ. Code § 3307].

Liquidated damages provisions used in other contexts are subject to different requirements [see Civ. Code § 1671; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions].

[2] Residential Property

Liquidated-damages provisions are subject to additional requirements when (1) they apply to residential property consisting primarily of a dwelling of one-to-four units, and (2) the buyer intends (at the time the contract is made) to occupy the dwelling or one of its units as his or her residence. In that case, a liquidated-damages provision is valid only to the extent that the buyer actually pays the subject funds (that is, the deposit) in the form of cash or check, including a postdated check [Civ. Code § 1675(b)].

When the amount actually paid pursuant to the liquidated-damages provision does not exceed 3 percent of the purchase price, the provision is presumed valid to the extent of payments actually made, unless the buyer establishes that the amount is unreasonable as liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1675(c)]. Conversely, when the amount actually paid pursuant to the liquidated-damages provision exceeds 3 percent of the purchase price, the provision is presumed invalid unless the party seeking to uphold the provision establishes that the amount actually paid is reasonable as liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1675(d); see 13 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 1735 (1976)(buyer may choose to uphold provision when it appears that seller will be able to show higher actual damages in absence of valid liquidated-damages provision)].

The reasonableness of an amount actually paid as liquidated damages must be determined taking into account (1) the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made, and (2) the price and other terms and circumstances of any subsequent sale or contract to sell and purchase the same property if the sale or contract is made within six months of the buyer's default [Civ. Code § 1675(e); see 13 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 1735 (1976)(circumstances considered by court in making its determination regarding reasonableness include cost of insurance, interest, and taxes during period after original sale contract was made, and any additional broker fees that result from buyer's default)].

Different requirements apply for the initial sale of newly constructed attached residential condominium units located within a structure of 10 or more units [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(1); see Civ. Code § 783]. If the amount actually paid to the seller pursuant to the liquidated-damages provision exceeds 3 percent of the purchase price of the residential unit in the transaction, both of the following must occur if the buyer defaults [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(1)]:

- The seller must perform an accounting of its costs and revenues related to and fairly allocable to the construction and sale of the residential unit within 60 calendar days after the final close of escrow of the sale of the unit within the structure; and

- The accounting must include any and all costs and revenues related to the construction and sale of the residential property and any delay caused by buyer's default.

The seller must make reasonable efforts to mitigate any damages arising from the default, and the seller must refund to the buyer any amounts previously retained as liquidated damages in excess of the greater of either 3 percent of the originally agreed-on purchase price of the residential property or the amount of the seller's losses resulting from the buyer's default, as calculated by the accounting [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(1); see Civ. Code § 1675(f)(2)(refund must be sent to buyer's last known address within 90 days after final close of escrow of sale or lease of all residential condominium units within structure)]. If the amount retained by the seller after the accounting does not exceed 3 percent of the purchase price, the amount is valid unless the buyer establishes that it is unreasonable as liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(3); see Civ. Code § 1675(e) (determination of reasonableness of liquidated damages)]. If a new qualified buyer has entered into a contract to purchase the residential property in question, the seller must perform the accounting within 60 calendar days after a new qualified buyer has entered into a contract to purchase [Civ. Code § 1675(f)(5); see Civ. Code § 1675(f)(7) ("new qualified buyer" defined)].

Until July 1, 2014, special provision is made also for enhanced liquidated damages to be allowed to sellers in cases involving pre-completion sales of units in a structure of 20 or more residential condominium units, standing over eight stories high, that is high-density infill development as defined in Pub. Res. Code § 21159.24(a)(10) and is located in a city, county, or city and county with a population density of 1,900 residents per square mile or greater as evidenced by the 2000 federal census. When the sale price of a unit exceeds $1,000,000, and the buyer defaults, liquidated damages of 6 percent of the purchase price will be presumed valid [Civ. Code § 1675(g),(h)]. Except regarding the amount of liquidated damages and the conditions prescribed for this case, the rules in this case are essentially the same as in a case subject to Civ. Code § 1675(f), described above.

When more than one payment made by the buyer is to constitute liquidated damages (for example, when the buyer makes a deposit at the time of the offer and then makes an additional deposit on execution of the contract), the amount of any payment after the first payment is valid as liquidated damages only if the total of all the payments meets the 3-percent and reasonableness requirements discussed above [Civ. Code § 1678]. Further, a separate liquidated-damages provision signed or initialed by each party must be inserted in the contract for each payment. If the contract is printed, each of these provisions must be set out either in at least 10-point bold type or in contrasting red print in at least eight-point bold type [Civ. Code § 1678; see Civ. Code § 1677].

[3] Miscellaneous Requirements

None of the foregoing statutory requirements affect the right of either party to the contract to seek, or preclude either party to the contract from seeking, specific performance of the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1680, 3389]. Further, those requirements do not apply to liquidated-damages provisions that specify the damages the seller will pay the buyer if the seller breaches the contract [Civ. Code § 1679]. Liquidated-damages provisions that come within these exemptions are subject to alternative requirements in Civ. Code § 1671 [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions].

§ 23.19 Risk of Loss

Under the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act, any real property sale contract made in California is to be interpreted to include the provisions of the Act unless the contract provides otherwise. The Act provides that the seller retains full responsibility for the property until the legal title or possession has been transferred to the buyer. Thus if the property is destroyed (through no fault of the buyer's) or is taken by condemnation before such a transfer, the buyer is entitled to a return of his or her money, and the seller cannot enforce the contract. If the loss occurs after a transfer of title or possession, the buyer must continue to pay [see Civ. Code § 1662]. For further discussion, see § 23.200[1][f].

§ 23.20 Disclosure Requirements Applicable to Sellers

[1] Statutory Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement

Unless a statutory exception applies [see Civ. Code § 1102.2], the transferor of any real property containing up to four dwelling units must complete and deliver a statutory disclosure form to the transferee when the property is transferred by sale (or by certain other methods) [see Civ. Code § 1102(a); see also Civ. Code § 1102.6; § 23.300[2] (statutory form)]. Any waiver of this requirement, or of any of the other disclosure requirements, is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 1102(c)]. The seller's delivery of a transfer disclosure statement is a condition precedent to the buyer's duty to perform under the contract. Prior to transfer, the failure to provide a disclosure statement gives rise to a right to rescission in the buyer, and precludes an action for specific performance by the seller [Realmuto v. Gagnard (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 193, 202, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569] .

The statutory form must indicate whether the property has certain items, whether any of those items are not in operating condition, whether the seller is aware of any significant defects or malfunctions in certain structural components of the property, and whether the seller is aware of various other restrictions or problems with the property [see Civ. Code § 1102.6]. In the case of a sale, the statement must be delivered as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.3]. The transferor must indicate compliance with these requirements on either the receipt for deposit, the real property sale contract, an addendum attached to those documents, or a separate document [Civ. Code § 1102.3].

A disclosure made in accordance with Civ. Code § 1102.6 cannot be relied on by a buyer as part of the sale contract or as a separate contract containing contingencies on which the formation of the purchase and sale contract depends [Brasier v. Sparks (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1756, 1760, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] .

Any broker representing the seller or obtaining the offer must complete a portion of the statutory inspection disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6; see also § 23.22[1], [2]].

For further discussion and the statutory form, see § 23.300.

[2] Local Option Disclosure Statement

If a transferor is required to complete a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102(a); [1], above], the city or county in which the property is located may require the transferor to provide additional disclosures regarding the property. The additional disclosures must be set forth on a statutory form (called the "Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement") or on an alternative form required by the applicable local ordinance [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)]. For further discussion and the statutory form, see § 23.301.

[3] Natural Hazard Disclosures

A transferor of real property, or his or her agent, must notify prospective transferees when the real property lies within any of the following hazardous areas [Civ. Code § 1103(a), (c); see Civ. Code § 1103.2]:

- A special flood hazard area [see Gov. Code § 8589.3];
- An area of potential flooding [see Gov. Code § 8589.4];
- A very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51183.5];
- A wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136];
- An earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9; see also [4], below]; or
- A seismic hazard zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694; see also [4], below].

These disclosures must be made on the sale (or exchange, installment land sale contract as defined in Civ. Code § 2985, lease with an option to purchase, any other option to purchase, or ground lease coupled with improvements) of any real property improved with or consisting of one-to-four dwelling units (or transfer of a residential stock cooperative) [Civ. Code § 1103(a); see Civ. Code § 1103.2]. These requirements also apply to resale of a manufactured home or mobilehome that is classified as personal property intended for use as a residence if the transaction was entered into after 1999 [Civ. Code § 1103(b); see Health & Safety Code §§ 18007, 18008].

If the transaction is subject to the statutory real estate transfer disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code § 1102 et seq.; see also [1], above], the disclosures must be made in (1) a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2], or (2) the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see [2], above]. For further discussion and the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form, see § 23.302.

[4] Earthquake Safety Guides

[a] Residential and Noncommercial Property

The California Seismic Safety Commission is responsible for publishing and updating a booklet entitled Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149(a), (c)]. Among other things, this guide must include maps and information on geologic and seismic hazard conditions for the entire state, and provide recommendations for mitigating the hazards of an earthquake [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149(d)]. The commission must distribute this guide to real estate licensees and, on request, to any member of the general public [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149(c) (commission must charge fee for guide)].

A transferor of a residential dwelling of conventional light-frame construction built before 1960 and containing one-to-four living units must, as soon as practicable before the transfer of title, deliver to the transferee (1) a copy of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety, and (2) an earthquake hazards disclosure statement regarding the property [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a), (b)]. The earthquake hazards disclosure must clearly indicate whether the transferor has actual knowledge that the dwelling has any of the deficiencies listed in Gov. Code § 8897.2 [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a); see Gov. Code § 8897.1(c) (exemptions from disclosure requirements)]. This disclosure may be made in person or by mail to the transferee, any person authorized to act for the transferee in the transaction, or additional transferees who have requested delivery from the transferor in writing [Gov. Code § 8897.1(b)].

If the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety is delivered to a transferee in connection with a transfer of noncommercial real property, the information in the guide will be deemed to be adequate to inform the transferee to (1) geologic and seismic hazards in general (as described in the guide) that may affect real property, and (2) mitigating measures that the transferee or seller might consider. Further, the seller or broker will not be required to provide additional information concerning those hazards and mitigating measures [Civ. Code § 2079.8(a)]. These rules apply to all transfers of real property, including real property subject to Civ. Code § 1102 [see [1], above] or the Alquist-Priolo Earthquake Fault Zoning Act (Alquist-Priolo Act) [Civ. Code § 2079.8(a); see also Pub. Res. Code § 2621 et seq. (Alquist-Priolo Act)].

Notwithstanding the above, Civ. Code § 2079.8 does not increase or decrease any duties of sellers or brokers, including the duties imposed by Civ. Code § 1102 and the Alquist-Priolo Act or by Civ. Code § 2079 et seq. [Civ. Code § 2079.8(b); see § 23.22[1]]. Further, Civ. Code § 2079.8 does not alter the duty of a seller or broker to disclose the existence of known hazards on or affecting the real property [Civ. Code § 2079.8(b)].

[b] Commercial Property

Commercial real property is subject to an alternative set of earthquake-related disclosure laws that are very similar to the ones described in [a], above [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147 (preparation of earthquake safety guide); Civ. Code § 2079.9 (delivery of safety guide to transferee of real property); Gov. Code §§ 8875.6, 8893.2 (transferor or transferor's agent must deliver guide to prospective buyer if property being transferred was built before 1975 and consists of precast concrete or reinforced masonry building or unreinforced masonry building with wood frame floors or roofs)]. The primary difference between the two sets of laws is that the Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147] includes explanations of what constitutes "adequate wall anchorage" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147(d)(3)]. That term is defined to mean a connection between a wall and floor, or between a wall and roof construction, of a precast concrete or reinforced masonry building with wood frame floors or roof, that is capable of resisting specified horizontal forces [Gov. Code § 8893.1]. If a transferee of real property is given a Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety and does not bring the structure into compliance with the requirements for adequate wall anchorage within three years of receiving the notice (five years in the case of a transfer of an unreinforced masonry building), the transferee/owner will not receive payment from any state assistance program for repairs resulting from damage during an earthquake until all other applicants have been paid [Gov. Code §§ 8875.7, 8893.4].

[5] Installation of Smoke Detector

Every single-family dwelling and factory-built housing unit [see Health & Safety Code § 19971] that is sold must have an operable smoke detector [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(a); but see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(d) (exceptions to installation requirement)]. The detector must be approved and listed by the State Fire Marshal and installed in accordance with the fire marshal's regulations [see 19 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 200 et seq., 740 et seq.]. Unless prohibited by local rules, regulations, or ordinances, a battery-operated smoke detector will meet this requirement [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(a)].

The transferor of any real property containing a single-family dwelling, whether the transfer is made by sale, exchange, or real property sale contract [see Civ. Code § 2985 (definition)], must deliver to the transferee a written statement indicating that the transferor has complied with this requirement. The statement must be included in the receipt for deposit, an attached addendum, or a separate document [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b); see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(c) (delivery requirements); see also § 23.305].

Similar requirements apply to mobilehomes and multiple-unit residential structures, whether or not the unit or structure is about to be transferred [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.7; see also Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits].

[6] Water Heater Bracing

All existing residential water heaters must be braced, anchored, or strapped to resist falling or horizontal displacement due to earthquake motion. At a minimum, the water heater must be secured in accordance with the California plumbing code or any modifications made to that code by a city, county, or city and county [Health & Safety Code § 19211(a); see Health & Safety Code § 17958.5 (local modifications)]. (The plumbing code was formerly in the California Code of Regulations as part 5 of title 24. That title was removed, but the plumbing code is available from the International Code Council, which has a web site at www.iccsafe.org.) For these purposes, "water heater" means any standard water heater with a capacity of not more than 120 gallons for which a pre-engineered strapping kit is readily available [Health & Safety Code § 19211(d)].

The seller of any real property containing a water heater must certify in writing to the prospective buyer that the above requirement has been complied with. This certification must be in writing, and may be included in existing transactional documents, including (but not limited to) the sale contract [see § 23.203[2]], statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement, local option real estate transfer disclosure statement, or Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [Health & Safety Code § 19211(b)]. Any building or portion of a building, including any dwelling unit, guestroom, suite of rooms, or portions of these, or the premises on which it is located, is deemed to be a nuisance if it is in violation of this requirement, and the owner has to right to correct the violation [Health & Safety Code § 19211(f); see Health & Safety Code § 17980]. However, an owner of a residential rental property may not evict any person on the basis that the eviction is required to comply with this section [Health & Safety Code § 19211(c)].

[7] Lead-Based Paint Disclosures

Federal regulations require sellers of most residential housing built before 1978 to disclose the presence of known lead-based paint or lead-based paint hazards in the housing [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.86; 40 C.F.R. § 745.103; § 23.311]. Sale transactions involving housing for the elderly, zero-bedroom dwellings (such as studio apartments; other examples would be dormitory housing and military barracks), and housing sold at foreclosure are exempted from the disclosure requirements [see 24 C.F.R. §§ 35.82(a), 35.86; 40 C.F.R. §§ 745.101(a), 745.103]. The seller must disclose to the buyer the presence of any known lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards, provide available records and reports, and give the buyer a lead-hazard information pamphlet [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.80; 40 C.F.R. § 745.100]. The seller must also disclose this information to each agent involved in the transaction [24 C.F.R. § 35.88(a)(3); 40 C.F.R. § 745.107(a)(3)]. Some of the required disclosures must be set forth in an attachment to the sale contract [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.92(a); 40 C.F.R. § 745.113(a); § 23.311]. In addition, the seller must permit the buyer, for 10 days, to conduct a risk assessment or inspection [see § 23.312]. The parties may agree in writing to a different inspection period, or the buyer may waive the opportunity in writing [24 C.F.R. § 35.90; 40 C.F.R. § 745.110].

Sellers and their agents who fail to comply with the requirements are subject to civil and criminal penalties and can be held jointly and severally liable to the buyer in an amount equal to three times the amount of damages incurred [24 C.F.R. § 35.96; 40 C.F.R. § 745.118].

In March 2008, EPA issued new rules for contractors who renovate or repair housing, child-care facilities or schools built before 1978 to further protect children from exposure to lead-based paint [73 Fed. Reg. 21692 (April 22, 2008) ; amending 40 C.F.R. Part 745]. The "Lead: Renovation, Repair and Painting Program" rule, which will take effect in April 2010, prohibits work practices creating lead hazards. Under the new rules, workers must follow lead-safe work practice standards to reduce potential exposure to dangerous levels of lead during renovation and repair activities. Requirements under the rule include implementing lead-safe work practices and certification and training for paid contractors and maintenance professionals working in pre-1978 housing, child-care facilities and schools.

The rule covers all rental housing and non-rental homes where children under six and pregnant mothers reside. The new requirements apply to renovation, repair or painting activities where more than six square feet of lead-based paint is disturbed in a room or where 20 square feet of lead-based paint is disturbed on the exterior. The affected contractors include builders, painters, plumbers and electricians. Trained contractors must post warning signs, restrict occupants from work areas, contain work areas to prevent dust and debris from spreading, conduct a thorough cleanup, and verify that cleanup was effective. For further information see http://www.epa.gov/lead/pubs/renovation.htm.

[8] Notice of Nearby Ordnance Locations

Any seller of residential real property who is required to provide the buyer with a real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102(a); [1], above] and who has actual knowledge of any former federal or state ordnance locations within the neighborhood area must give the buyer written notice of that knowledge as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.15]. For these purposes, "former federal or state ordnance locations" means an area identified by an agency or instrumentality of the federal or state government as an area once used for military training purposes that may contain potentially explosive munitions [Civ. Code § 1102.15]. For further discussion, see § 23.304[1].

[9] Common-Interest Development Information

The owner of a separate interest in a condominium project, community apartment project, planned development, or stock cooperative must furnish prospective buyers with specified documents relating to the common-interest development and the owner's separate interest [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.6; Civ. Code §§ 1133, 1134, 1368(a), (f)]. For a list of these documents, and further discussion, see Ch. 34, Condominiums .

[10] Title Insurance

In an escrow transaction [see § 23.23] for the purchase of real property, when a policy of title insurance [see § 23.24] is not to be issued to the buyer, the buyer must be given a statutory notice (in a separate document) indicating that it may be advisable for the buyer to obtain such a policy. The buyer must sign and acknowledge the notice [Civ. Code § 1057.6; see § 23.309].

PRACTICE TIP:

Buyer Beware--Buy Title Insurance. If you are the buyer in a real estate transaction, do not be penny foolish. Make sure to purchase title insurance. In fact, many title insurers offer extra protection in the form of insurance that insures against view protection problems, homeowners' association CC&R violations, and extended easement concerns. Buyers are well advised to buy extended title insurance protection offered by reputable title insurers. By William M. Hensley.

[11] Disclosure of Industrial Use Zoning

The seller of residential real property who has actual knowledge that the property is adjacent to, or zoned to allow, an industrial use described in Code Civ. Proc. § 731a, or affected by a nuisance created by such a use, must give written notice of that knowledge to the buyer as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.17].

[12] Notice of Controlled Substance Release

A seller of residential real property who knows that any release of an illegal controlled substance has come to be located on or beneath the real property must give written notice advising of that condition to the buyer before sale of the property. Notice is given by checking "yes" on the appropriate question on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6] and attaching a copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as the Department of Toxic Substances Control, the county health department, or the local environmental health officer [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1940.7.5 (similar disclosure requirements applicable to landlords)]. A seller's knowledge of the condition is established by receipt of a notice as specified, or by actual knowledge of the condition from a source independent of the notice [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(2)]. A seller's delivery of this disclosure information is legally adequate for purposes of informing the prospective buyer of the condition; the seller is not required to provide any additional disclosure of the information [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(3)].

"Illegal controlled substance" means a drug, substance, or immediate precursor listed in specified schedules [see Health & Safety Code §§ 11054-11058], or an emission or waste material resulting from the unlawful manufacture or attempt to manufacture of an illegal controlled substance, which does not include marijuana [Civ. Code § 1102.18(a)(1)]. "Release" means any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring , emitting, emptying, discharging, injecting, escaping, leaching, dumping, or disposing of an illegal controlled substance in a structure or into the environment [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1)].

The owner's failure to provide written notice to the buyer when required by Civ. Code § 1102.18(b) will subject the owner to actual damages and any other remedies provided by law. In addition to any other damages provided by law, if the owner has actual knowledge of the presence of any release of an illegal controlled substance, and knowingly and willfully fails to provide written notice to the buyer as required, the owner is liable for a civil penalty not to exceed $5,000 for each separate violation [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(4)].

[12A] Notice of Local Health Officer's Order Prohibiting Use or Occupancy

A local health officer has power to issue and serve an order prohibiting the use or occupancy of particular property after determining that the property is polluted by a hazardous chemical related to methamphetamine-laboratory activities [Health & Safety Code § 25400.22(a)]. The property owner and any other person occupying the property must immediately vacate, and the owner must promptly engage a contractor to clean up the property [Health & Safety Code § 25400.25]. Thereafter, until the owner has received a notice from the local health officer that the property requires no further action, the owner must notify a prospective buyer in writing of the pending order, and provide the prospective buyer with a copy of the pending order, except as otherwise required in Civ. Code § 1102.3 [see § 23.20[1]]. The prospective buyer must acknowledge, in writing, the receipt of a copy of the pending order [Health & Safety Code § 25400.28(a)]. The owner is subject to a civil penalty for failing to provide the required notice to a prospective buyer [Health & Safety Code § 25400.45(a)].

[13] Property Tax Disclosures

[a] Mello-Roos Tax and Street Improvement Lien Assessment Installment Disclosures

The seller of any real property subject to the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 23.20[1]] must make disclosures if the property being transferred is subject to a continuing lien securing the levy of special taxes pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code § 53111 et seq.] or to a fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500 et seq.], which concerns street improvements, or to a contractual assessment program authorized pursuant to Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24 [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(a)(2)]. The seller must make a good faith effort to obtain and deliver to the transferee a disclosure notice concerning the special Mello-Roos tax provided in Gov. Code § 53340.2, and the assessment installment provided in Gov. Code § 53754 from each local agency that levies the special tax or that collects the assessment installments [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(b)]. Special provisions require the legislative body collecting assessment installments under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 to designate an office, department, or bureau in the local agency to handle annual assessment installment obligation information, reports, and dissemination, among other related activities [Gov. Code § 53754(a)]. For purposes of enabling sellers of real property to satisfy notice requirements concerning these assessments, the agency must furnish a Notice of Assessment on request within five working days, at a charge not to exceed $10 [Gov. Code § 53754(b); see Gov. Code § 53754(c) (prescribed form for notice of assessment)].

A seller may satisfy the disclosure notice requirements by delivering a disclosure notice obtained from a nongovernmental source that satisfies the specified requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(1); see Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(3) (provision does not change ability to make disclosures pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.4)]. With regard to each type of required disclosure, a notice provided by a private entity other than a designated office, department, or bureau of the levying entity may be modified as needed to clearly and accurately describe either of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(2)]:

- A special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy a special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act against the property. This notice must include the name of the Mello-Roos levying taxes against the property, the annual tax due for the Mello-Roos for the current tax year, the maximum tax that may be levied against the property in any year, the percentage by which the maximum tax for the Mello-Roos may increase per year, and the date until the tax may be levied against the property for the Mello-Roos and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the Mello-Roos.

- Special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 against the property. This notice must include the name of the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, the current annual tax on the property for the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915.

If these required disclosures have been delivered to the transferee, the seller or the seller's agent is not required to provide additional information concerning the special tax or assessment installments, and the disclosure information is deemed to satisfy the responsibility of the seller or the seller's agent to provide this information to the transferee. In any case, these disclosure requirements do not impose a duty to discover a special tax or assessment installments, or the existence of any levying district not actually known to the agents [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(e)].

[b] Supplemental Property Tax Bill Disclosure

It is the sole responsibility of the seller of any residential real property in a transfer that is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 23.300[1][b]], or the seller's agent, to deliver to the prospective purchaser a prescribed disclosure notice concerning supplemental property tax bills, in addition to any other disclosure required by Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1102.6c(a)]. For additional discussion and a form, see § 23.300A.

[14] Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001--Future Disclosure Requirements

The Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001 [Health & Safety Code §§ 26100-26156] requires the Department of Health Services to convene a task force of various experts and interested parties to advise the Department on the development of permissible exposure limits to molds, standards for assessment of molds in indoor environments, standards for identification of molds, and remediation of mold. The Act will eventually require any person who sells, transfers, or rents specified types of residential, commercial, or industrial real property to provide written disclosures to potential buyers, prospective tenants, renters, and landlords concerning mold problems in the real property [see Health & Safety Code § 26140 et seq.]. However, these disclosure duties and requirements would not apply until the January 1 or July 1 that occurs at least six months after the Department adopts the requisite standards and guidelines [see Health & Safety Code § 26154]. Adding additional uncertainty concerning these requirements, the Act will be implemented only to the extent the Department determines that funds are available for its implementation [Health & Safety Code § 26156].

[15] Private Transfer-Fee Requirement

If property being transferred after 2007 is subject to a private transfer fee, the transferor must provide, at the time the transfer disclosure statement required pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6 is provided, an additional disclosure statement containing all of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6e]:

- Notice that payment of a transfer fee is required on transfer of the property;
- The amount of the fee required for the asking price of the real property, and a description of how the fee is calculated;
- Notice that the final amount of the fee may be different if the fee is based on a percentage of the final sale price;
- The entity to which funds from the fee will be paid;
- The purposes for which funds from the fee will be used; and
- The date or circumstances under which the obligation to pay the transfer fee expires, if it could expire.

A private transfer fee, for this purpose, is any fee-payment requirement imposed in a covenant, restriction, or condition contained in any deed, contract, security instrument, or other document affecting the transfer or sale of, or any interest in, real property, which requires a fee be paid on transfer of the real property [Civ. Code § 1098; but see Civ. Code § 1098(a)-(i) (exceptions)].

In addition, the recipient of any such fee imposed before 2008, or the person or entity imposing any such fee after 2007, must record a document, entitled "Payment of Transfer Fee Required," in which pertinent facts about the fee-payment requirement are disclosed [Civ. Code § 1098.5].

For forms of these disclosure statements, see § 23.314.

[16] Noncompliant Plumbing Fixtures (Pre-1994 Residential Property)

On and after January 1, 2017 [Civ. Code § 1102.155(b)], the seller of residential real property subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 23.20[1]] must disclose, in writing, that Civ. Code § 1101.4 [see § 23.20B] requires that California single-family residences, if built and available for use before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2], must be equipped with water-conserving plumbing fixtures on or before January 1, 2017; and the seller must further disclose whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1102.155(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 1101.3(c),(e) (what are noncompliant plumbing fixtures and water-conserving plumbing fixtures)]. The seller must affirm that this representation is that of the seller and not a representation of any agent, and that this disclosure is not intended to be part of any contract between the buyer and the seller. The seller must further affirm that this disclosure is not a warranty of any kind by the seller or any agent representing any principal in the transaction and is not a substitute for any inspections or warranties that any principal may wish to obtain [Civ. Code § 1102.155(a)(2)]. For a disclosure form that can be used to meet this requirement, see § 23.315.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.20A

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.20A Requirements Related to Actions for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold On or After January 1, 2003

[1] Overview and Applicability of Statutory Scheme

In accordance with Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residence (excluding a condominium conversion) for which the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action is preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all in accordance with statutory time frames [see Civ. Code § 910 et seq.; see also [9] below].

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title Seven are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Homeowners' associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

These provisions do not apply to any action by a claim to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of any other statute [Civ. Code § 943(a)]. In addition, for a claim involving a single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is generally limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the personal use exception as developed under common law [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

To make a claim for violation of these statutory standards [see Civ. Code § 896 et seq.] a homeowner only needs to demonstrate, in accordance with the applicable evidentiary standard, that the home does not meet the applicable standard, subject to the affirmative defenses set forth in Civ. Code § 945.5. No further showing of causation or damages is required to meet the burden of proof regarding a violation of a standard, provided that the violation arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction [Civ. Code § 942].

As discussed in [2] through [9], below, Title Seven is primarily concerned with handling defects in construction, a subject which, at first blush, would seem more appropriate for coverage in the materials dealing with construction and development. However, Title Seven imposes obligations and responsibilities on sellers of property subject to its provisions that must be satisfied in connection with the sales agreement and before close of escrow. Thus, it is at the contracting stage that the parties must understand their relative rights, responsibilities, and obligations under Title Seven. For sample language in a general form of contract for the sale of real property, see § 23.200[2]. The California Association of Realtors (CAR) applicable form is set forth in § 23.205.

[2] Parties

A "claimant" or "homeowner" who may bring an action under Title Seven includes individual owners of single-family homes, individual unit owners of attached dwellings and, in the case of a common interest development, any association created for the purpose of managing the development [Civ. Code § 895(f)]. A "builder" against whom an action governed by Title Seven may be brought may be, but is not limited to, a builder, developer, general contractor, contractor, or original seller, who, at the time of sale, was also in the business of selling residential units to the public for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim or was in the business of building, developing, or constructing residential units for public purchase for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim [Civ. Code § 911(a)]. The term "builder" for these purposes does not include any entity or individual whose involvement with a residential unit that is the subject of the homeowner's claim is limited to his or her capacity as general contractor or contractor and who is not a partner, member of, subsidiary of, or otherwise similarly affiliatedwith the builder. These nonaffiliated general contractors and nonaffiliated contractors are treated the same as subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals [Civ. Code § 911(b)].

General contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals may also be liable for damages to the extent that they cause, in whole or in part, a violation of a particular statutory construction standard as the result of a negligent act or omission or a breach of contract. All actions by a claimant or builder to enforce an express contract, or any provision of an express contract, against a general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional are preserved. Builders, general contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, manufacturers, or design professionals may be held joint and severally liable to the extent that they contribute to any specific violation of the statutory construction standards. This negligence standard, however, does not apply to any general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional to which strict liability applies [Civ. Code § 936].

[3] Standards for Determining When Construction Is Defective

[a] Issues With Which Standards Are Primarily Concerned

The statutory standards used to determine the existence of construction defects are concerned with the following issues [see Civ. Code § 896(a)- (f)]:

- Water issues related to the building's windows, doors, roofs, decks and balconies, foundations, hardscape (e.g., paths, patios, landscaping, drainage systems), exterior surfaces (e.g., stucco and siding), retaining walls, plumbing and sewer systems, shower and bath enclosures, and ceramic tile and countertops.

- Structural issues related to the foundations, load-bearing components, and slabs, including compliance with applicable established standards for earthquake and wind load resistance.

- Soil and retaining wall issues related to the structural integrity of the building and the suitability of the surrounding land for the purpose represented at the time of the original sale, or for the purpose for which the land is commonly used (e.g., as a garden).

- Fire protection issues related to applicable government regulations, fireplaces and chimneys, and electrical and mechanical systems.

- Issues related to the operation of the plumbing and sewer systems.

- Issues related to the operation of the electrical systems.

The standards set forth in the statute and summarized above and in [b], below, are intended to address every function or component of the building. To the extent that a function or component of a building is not addressed by these standards, it is actionable if it causes damage [Civ. Code § 897].

[b] Issues Related to Other Areas of Construction

Issues related to other areas of construction to which standards apply include [see Civ. Code § 896(g)]:

- Cracking in exterior pathways, driveways, landscape, sidewalks, patios, stucco, exterior siding, and other exterior wall finishes and fixtures.

- Installation of products that are completely manufactured offsite (e.g., doors, windows, fireplaces, and HVAC units).

- Installation of the heating system.

- Installation of untreated wood and steel fences.

- Compliance with government standards for inter-unit noise transmission.

- Operation of irrigation and drainage systems.

- Application of paint and stains.

- Installation of roofing materials.

- Installation of ceramic tile and tile backing.

- Installation of dryer ducts.

- General construction standards to avoid hazards to public health.

[4] Builder's Express Warranty for Fit and Finish Items

Issues related to the fit and finish of cabinets, mirrors, flooring, interior and exterior walls, countertops, paint finishes, and trim that do not rise to the level of construction defects under the statutory construction standards are nonetheless subject to a minimum one-year express written warranty, which the builder must provide to the home buyer. The express warranty does not apply to damage to these items caused by defects in other components that are governed by the construction standards. If the builder fails to provide the express warranty, a statutory one-year warranty for these items will apply [Civ. Code § 900].

[5] Optional Enhanced Protection Agreement

A builder may, but is not required to, offer greater protection or protection for longer time periods than those provided by the statutory standards [see Civ. Code § 896 (time periods); see also [3], above (statutory standards), and [8], below (statutory time limit for bringing action)], in its express contract with the homeowner. This constitutes an "enhanced protection agreement" [Civ. Code § 901]. If an enhanced protection agreement is in place, the statutory construction standards in Civ. Code § 896 no longer apply other than to establish minimum provisions by which to judge the enforceability of the enhanced protection agreement's particular provisions [Civ. Code § 902]. However, employing an enhanced protection agreement does not affect the applicability of the mandatory pre-litigation procedure [Civ. Code § 906; see Civ. Code §§ 910-938; see also [9], below].

The builder's election to offer its own protection agreement must be made in writing no later than the close of escrow [see Civ. Code § 895(c) ("close of escrow" defined)]. In addition to the enhanced protection agreement, the builder must also provide the homeowner with a complete copy of the statutory construction standards and advise the homeowner that the builder has elected not to be subject to the statutory standards. If any provision of the builder's protection agreement is later found to be unenforceable, as not meeting the statutory standards, the builder may use the statutory standards in lieu of the provisions in its own protection agreement that are found to be unenforceable [Civ. Code § 903]. If a homeowner seeks to enforce a particular statutory standard in lieu of a provision in the builder's protection agreement, the homeowner must give the builder written notice of that intent at the time the homeowner files a notice of claim [Civ. Code § 904; see Civ. Code § 910(a)].

If, in a subsequent litigation or other legal action, a homeowner seeks to enforce the statutory construction standards in lieu of the enhanced protection agreement, the builder may have the matter bifurcated and have an immediately binding determination of his or her responsive pleading within 60 days after that pleading is filed, but in no event later than the commencement of discovery. If the builder fails to seek such a determination in the specified time frame, he or she waives the right to do so and the statutory construction standards will apply [Civ. Code § 905].

Any nonoriginal homeowner will be deemed to be in privity for purposes of the enhanced protection agreement only if the builder has recorded the agreement on title or provided actual notice of the agreement to the nonoriginal homeowner. If the builder's protection agreement is not recorded or no actual notice is provided, the statutory construction standards will apply to the nonoriginal homeowner's claims [Civ. Code § 905].

[6] Homeowner's Obligation to Follow Maintenance Obligations and Schedules

A homeowner is obligated to follow all reasonable maintenance obligations and schedules communicated in writing by the builder and product manufacturers, as well as commonly accepted maintenance practices. Failure of the homeowner to do so may subject him or her to the affirmative defenses afforded the builder in any subsequent action [Civ. Code § 907; see Civ. Code § 945.5(c)].

[7] Seller's Duty to Provide Copy of Title Seven

Civ. Code § 912(g) requires the seller to provide with the original sales documentation, a written copy of Title Seven, which must be initialed and acknowledged by the buyer and the seller's sales representative.

[8] Statute of Limitations

With certain limited exceptions listed below, any action brought under Title Seven must be filed within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. The four-year statute of limitations specified for patent defects and the 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects, specified by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1 and 337.15, respectively, do not apply to these actions [Civ. Code § 941(d)].

Exceptions to the 10-year limitation period include the following:

- Four years for actions alleging improper operation of electrical systems [Civ. Code § 896(f)].
- One year from original occupancy of adjacent unit for actions alleging noncompliance with governmental inter-unit noise transmission standards [Civ. Code § 896(g)(6)].
- Four years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of untreated steel fences and adjacent components [Civ. Code § 896(g)(9)].
- Five years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper application of paint and stains [Civ. Code § 896(g)(10)].
- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of landscaping systems [Civ. Code § 896(g)(12)].
- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of dryer ducts [Civ. Code § 896(g)(14)].

"Close of escrow" means the date of the close of escrow between the builder and the original homeowner. If the claimant is an association, "close of escrow" means the date of substantial completion [see Civ. Code § 1351(a)], or the date the builder relinquishes control over the association's ability to decide whether to initiate a claim, whichever is later [Civ. Code § 895(c)].

The applicable statute of limitations may be tolled pending the outcome of the mandatory pre-litigation process [see Civ. Code § 928; see also [9], below].

The statute of limitations may not be asserted by way of defense by any person in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of the subject residential property, at the time any deficiency in the residence constitutes the proximate cause for which it is proposed to make a claim or bring an action [Civ. Code § 941(c)].

Existing statutory and decisional law governing the tolling of statutes of limitations applies to the time periods for filing an action or making a claim for violation of the statutory construction standards, except for the special tolling provisions related to the pre-litigation procedure [Civ. Code § 941(c); see Civ. Code § 927].

The above-described time limitations "do not apply to any action by a claimant for a contract or express contractual provision" and these provisions also do not limit causes of action and damages to which they do not apply [Civ. Code § 941(e)]. Though it was probably not the Legislature's intent, if taken literally, this could be construed to exempt an action based on violation of a builder's enhanced protection agreement from the 10-year limitation period specified by Civ. Code § 941(a) in which case the shorter limitation period applicable to a contract action, or an action based on a patent defect [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337(1), 337.1, respectively], arguably could apply.

[9] Mandatory Pre-Litigation Procedure

[a] Overview

Before a homeowner can file an action seeking damages for alleged construction defects based on the construction standards described in [3], above, he or she must initiate a process the main component of which is the builder's right to attempt to repair any alleged defects before the homeowner can initiate litigation [Civ. Code § 910]. The goal of this pre-litigation process is to afford the parties the opportunity for quick and fair resolution of construction defect claims without having to resort to lengthy and expensive litigation [see 2002 Stats., ch. 722, § 1(c)].

The statutory pre-litigation process is mandatory unless a builder provides, by contract, for its own nonadversarial procedure. However, if the builder does so, and the contractual procedure either fails to resolve the construction defects or is subsequently found to be unenforceable, the builder may not then require adherence with the statutory procedure [Civ. Code § 914(a)].

When the sales agreement is executed, the builder must notify the homeowner which nonadversarial procedure--i.e., the statutory procedure, or the builder's alternative nonadversarial contractual provisions--will apply to resolve any construction defects. If the builder elects to use alternative nonadversarial contractual provisions, the election is binding regardless of whether those provisions successfully resolve the ultimate dispute or are ultimately deemed enforceable [Civ. Code § 914(a)].

If the builder fails to comply with the requirements of a nonadversarial procedure or elects not to go through with such a procedure, the homeowner is released from the obligation to participate in the procedure and may proceed to file an action to resolve the alleged construction defects [Civ. Code § 915].

When the claimant is an association representing a common interest development that includes 20 or more units and the parties comply with the statutory pre-litigation process, the parties will be excused from performing the substantially similar pre-litigation dispute resolution process required by Civ. Code § 1375 [Civ. Code § 935].

[b] Notice of Claim

Before the claimant can file an action alleging violation of the construction standards, he or she must provide the builder with written notice of the claimant's claim that the construction of his or her residence violates any of the statutorily-prescribed standards. The notice must be delivered to the builder's registered agent via certified mail, overnight mail, or personal delivery. The notice has the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of a legal proceeding [Civ. Code § 910(a)].

The notice of claim must include all of the following [Civ. Code § 910(a)]:

- The claimant's name, address, and preferred method of contact.
- A statement that the claimant alleges a violation pursuant to Civ. Code § 895 et seq. against the builder.
- A description of the claim in reasonable detail sufficient to determine the nature and location, to the extent known, of the claimed violation.

For a form of a notice of claim, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 104, Building Contracts, § 104.261 (Matthew Bender).

If the claimant is a group of homeowners or an association, the notice must identify the claimants solely by address or other description sufficient to apprise the builder of the locations of the subject residences [Civ. Code § 910(a)].

The builder must register the name and address of an agent for notice with the Secretary of State, or elect to use a third party for that purpose provided the builder has notified the homeowner in writing of the third party's name and address. The name and address of the registered agent or third party must be included with the original sales documentation and must be initialed and acknowledged by the purchaser and the builder's sales representative [Civ. Code § 912(e)].

The notice requirement does not preclude a homeowner from seeking redress through any applicable normal customer service procedure set forth in any contract, warranty, or other builder-generated document. However, if the homeowner requests this form of recourse through such a procedure, the request does not satisfy the statutory notice requirement [Civ. Code § 910(b)].

The builder must acknowledge receipt of the notice of claim in writing within 14 days [Civ. Code § 913].

[c] Builder's Obligation to Provide Copies of Requested Materials

Within 30 days of the claimant's written request, the builder must provide, at the claimant's expense, copies of the following [Civ. Code § 912(a)- (d)]:

- All relevant documents, such as plans, specifications and soil reports, public reports, and engineering calculations pertaining to the claimant's residence, or as part of a larger development tract.

- All maintenance and preventative maintenance recommendations.

- All manufactured products maintenance, preventive maintenance, and limited warranty information.

- All of the builder's limited contractual warranties in effect at the time the residence was originally sold.

If the builder fails to comply in a timely manner with the claimant's request for any of this information, the claimant is relieved from any obligation to continue with the pre-litigation process and may proceed to file suit [Civ. Code § 912(i)]. On filing suit, the burden is on the homeowner to show that he or she did not comply with the pre-litigation procedures due to the builder's noncompliance with Civ. Code § 912 [Standard Pacific Corp. v. Superior Court (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 828, 834, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295] .

[d] Inspection of Claimed Unmet Standards

The builder may elect to inspect the alleged violations of the statutory construction standards specified in the notice of claim. Any inspection and testing must be completed within 14 days after the builder acknowledges receipt of the notice of claim. The builder must bear the cost of the inspection and testing [Civ. Code § 916(a)]. If reasonably necessary, the builder may, within three days of the initial inspection or testing, conduct a second inspection or testing. The second inspection must be completed within 40 days of the initial inspection [Civ. Code § 916(c)].

If the builder intends to hold a third party, i.e., a subcontractor, design professional, individual product manufacturer, or material supplier (including an insurance carrier, warranty company, or service company) responsible for its contribution to the unmet standard, the builder must give notice to that third party sufficiently in advance to allow them to attend the initial or second inspection and to participate in any subsequent repair process. Failure to include a third party in the inspection process will not be construed to relieve the third party from liability in any subsequent action brought by the claimant [Civ. Code § 916(e)].

[e] Offer to Repair

Within 30 days of the initial or, if requested, second inspection or testing, the builder may offer in writing to repair any violation found. The offer must also compensate the claimant for damages recoverable within the time frame for the repair. It must be accompanied by a repair plan, including a detailed statement identifying the violation to be repaired and setting a reasonable completion date [Civ. Code § 917; see Civ. Code § 944 (recoverable damages)]. The completion date, barring unforseen events, should be within 120 days of the claimant's acceptance of the offer [see Civ. Code § 921(b)].

If the builder elects to repair some, but not all, of the claimed unmet construction standards, he or she must also set forth in writing the reasons, and the support for those reasons, for not repairing all claimed unmet standards [Civ. Code § 924].

The offer of repair must be accompanied by an offer to mediate the dispute at the homeowner's option. If the builder makes an offer to repair and the mediation fails to resolve the dispute, the claimant must allow the repair to be performed [Civ. Code § 919].

The builder may not obtain a release or waiver of any kind in exchange for required repair work [Civ. Code § 926]. Note that this rule must be reconciled with the fact that if the builder has obtained a valid release as to a particular violation, the release operates as an affirmative defense to an action by the claimant [see Civ. Code § 945.5(f)].

When a repair has been made but not to the claimant's satisfaction, the claimant may proceed to file suit for violation of the applicable construction standard, for inadequate repair, or for both [Civ. Code § 926]. However, if there has been no previous mediation between the parties, the claimant must request mediation before filing suit [Civ. Code § 928].

If the builder fails to make an offer to repair, the claimant may proceed to file an action for violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 920].

[f] Cash Offer in Lieu of Repair

The builder may make a cash offer instead of making the repair. The claimant may either accept the offer, or reject it and proceed to file an action based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 929(a)]. In exchange for a cash payment, the builder is entitled to obtain a reasonable release, the terms and conditions of which are negotiable between the builder and the claimant [Civ. Code § 929(b)].

[g] Effect of Pre-Litigation Process on Statute of Limitations

If the applicable statute of limitations has otherwise run during the statutory pre-litigation process and the process resulted in an inadequate repair, the time period for filing an action is extended from the time of the claimant's original claim to 100 days after the inadequate repair is completed. The action is not limited to the inadequate repair; it may encompass any violation of the construction defect standards [Civ. Code § 927].

If the statute of limitations has otherwise run during the statutory pre-litigation process, it will be extended to 45 days after the time for responding to the notice of claim has expired if the builder does any of the following [Civ. Code § 927]:

- Fails to acknowledge the claim in a timely manner [see Civ. Code § 913].
- Elects not to go through the statutory pre-litigation process.
- Fails to request an inspection in a timely manner.

If the builder has elected to employ its own alternative nonadversarial procedure in lieu of the statutory procedure [see § 23.20A[9][a]], and the statute of limitations would otherwise run during that procedure, the time period for filing an action for violation of the statutory construction standards is extended from the time of the claimant's original claim to either 100 days after either the completion of the alternative procedure, or 100 days after the alternative procedure is deemed unenforceable, whichever is later [Civ. Code § 927].

[h] Dealing With Claims Discovered After Action Is Filed

Once an action has been filed, subsequently discovered claims of unmet statutory construction standards must be administered separately--that is, they are subject to the pre-litigation procedure. However, in the case of a detached single family residence, if the subsequently discovered claim is for a violation of the same construction standard as a standard that is the subject of a pending action brought by the same claimant, the claimant need not reinitiate the process as to that standard. The same is true in the case of an attached project, if the subsequently discovered claim is for a violation of the same construction standard for a connected component system in the same building as a standard that is the subject of a pending action brought by the same claimant [Civ. Code § 932].

§ 23.20B Installation of Water-Use Efficiency Improvements (Pre-1994 Properties)

[1] Requirements in General

State law requires generally that a residential or commercial property, if it was built and available for use on or before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2], must be equipped with water-conserving plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.1 et seq.]. While the law does not directly require that water-conserving plumbing fixtures must be installed before a property can be sold or transferred, that is the practical implication of a requirement (starting in 2017 for single-family properties and in 2019 for other properties) that a seller or transferor must disclose, before completion of the sale or transfer, both the law's requirements and also whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code §§ 1101.4(c), 1101.5(e); see § 23.20B[6]; see also Civ. Code § 1102.155 (related disclosure requirement, discussed in § 23.20[16])].

With respect to a particular property, requirements are applicable on and after various dates, starting January 1, 2014, and depending on the circumstances [see § 23.20B[3]-[5]]. This law does not apply, however, to [Civ. Code § 1101.7]:

- A registered historical site;
- Any property for which a licensed plumber certifies that, because of the age or configuration of the property or its plumbing, installation of water-conserving plumbing fixtures is not technically feasible; or
- A building for which water service is permanently disconnected.

Cities and counties may enact ordinances and establish policies, and retail water suppliers may establish policies, that promote compliance with this state law or that will result in a greater amount of water savings than those provided for in this state law [Civ. Code § 1101.8]. A city or county that adopted an ordinance requiring retrofit of noncompliant plumbing fixtures prior to July 1, 2009, is exempt from the requirements of this state law as long as the ordinance remains in effect [Civ. Code § 1101.9].

[2] Definitions

In this context, real property that is improved with, or consists of, a building that was built and available for use on or before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2], is subject to Civ. Code § 1101.1 et seq. as either:

- A single-family residential property if the building contains not more than one unit intended for human habitation [Civ. Code § 1101.3(d)];

- A multi-family residential property if the building contains more than one unit intended for human habitation, or if the property has any mixed residential-commercial building or portion of such a building intended for human habitation--including a residential hotel but not including a hotel or motel other than a residential hotel [Civ. Code § 1101.3(b)]; or

- A commercial property if the building is intended for commercial use, including as a hotel or motel, and is not a single-family residential property or a multi-family residential property [Civ. Code § 1101.3(a)].

A water-conserving plumbing fixture is a fixture that is in compliance with current building standards applicable to a newly constructed property of the same type [Civ. Code § 1101.3(e)].

A noncompliant plumbing fixture is any of the following [Civ. Code § 1101.3(c)]:

- A toilet manufactured to use more than 1.6 gallons of water per flush;

- A urinal manufactured to use more than 1 gallon of water per flush;

- A showerhead manufactured to have a flow capacity of more than 2.5 gallons of water per minute; or

- An interior faucet that emits more than 2.2 gallons of water per minute.

[3] Requirements for Building Additions, Alterations, or Improvements

On and after January 1, 2014, for any building alteration or improvement to a single-family residential property, as a condition for issuance of a certificate of final completion and occupancy or final permit approval by the local building department, the permit applicant must replace all noncompliant plumbing fixtures with water-conserving plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.4(a)].

On and after January 1, 2014, all noncompliant plumbing fixtures in a multi-family residential property or a commercial residential property must be replaced with water-conserving plumbing fixtures in the following circumstances [Civ. Code § 1101.5(d)(1)].

- For building additions in which the sum of concurrent building permits by the same permit applicant would increase the floor area of the space in a building by more than 10 percent, the building permit applicant must replace all noncompliant plumbing fixtures in the building [Civ. Code § 1101.5(d)(1)(A)].

- For building alterations or improvements in which the total construction cost estimated in the building permit is greater than $150,000, the building permit applicant must replace all noncompliant plumbing fixtures that service the specific area of the improvement [Civ. Code § 1101.5(d)(1)(B)].

- Notwithstanding the foregoing requirements, for any alterations or improvements to a room in a building that require a building permit, if that room contains any noncompliant plumbing fixtures, the building permit applicant must replace all noncompliant plumbing fixtures in that room [Civ. Code § 1101.5(d)(1)(C)].

- Replacement of all noncompliant plumbing fixtures with water-conserving plumbing fixtures must be a condition for issuance of a certificate of final completion and occupancy or final permit approval by the local building department [Civ. Code § 1101.5(d)(2)].

[4] Building Subject to Demolition Permit

The duty of an owner or building permit applicant to comply with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1101.1 et seq. will be postponed for one year from the date of issuance of a demolition permit for the building. If the building is demolished within the one year postponement, those requirements will not apply. If the building is not demolished after the expiration of one-year, the provisions of Civ. Code § 1101.1 et seq. will apply, subject to appeal to the local building department, even though the demolition permit is still in effect or a new demolition permit has been issued [Civ. Code § 1101.6].

[5] Replacement Deadlines for All Properties

[a] Single-Family Property

On or before January 1, 2017, noncompliant plumbing fixtures in a single-family residential property must be replaced by the property owner with water-conserving plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.4(b)].

[b] Multi-Family or Commercial Property

On or before January 1, 2019, all noncompliant plumbing fixtures in a multi-family residential property or a commercial property must be replaced with water-conserving plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.5(a)].

On and after January 1, 2019, the water-conserving plumbing fixtures required by Civ. Code § 1101.5 must be operating at the manufacturer's rated water consumption at the time the tenant takes possession. A tenant is responsible for notifying the owner or owner's agent if the tenant becomes aware that a water-conserving plumbing fixture within his or her unit is not operating at the manufacturer's rated water consumption. The owner or owner's agent must correct an inoperability in a water-conserving plumbing fixture on notice by the tenant or if detected by the owner or the owner's agent [Civ. Code § 1101.5(c)].

An owner or the owner's agent may enter the owner's property for the purpose of installing, repairing, testing, and maintaining water-conserving plumbing fixtures required by Civ. Code § 1101.5, consistent with notice requirements of Civ. Code § 1954 [Civ. Code § 1101.5(b)].

[6] Disclosure by Seller or Transferor to Purchaser or Transferee

The applicable disclosure requirement, below, applies to a sale or transfer of the entire estate or fee interest in a property, not to a sale or transfer of a partial interest, including a leasehold [Civ. Code § 1101.3(f)].

On and after January 1, 2017, a seller or transferor of a single-family residential property must disclose in writing to the prospective purchaser or transferee the requirements of Civ. Code § 1101.4(b) [see § 23.20B[5][a]] and whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.4(c)].

On and after January 1, 2019, a seller or transferor of a multi-family residential property or a commercial property must disclose to the prospective purchaser or transferee, in writing, the requirements of Civ. Code § 1101.5(a) [see § 23.20B[5][b]] and whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures. This disclosure may be included in other transactional documents [Civ. Code § 1101.5(e)].

For a disclosure form that can be used to meet the applicable requirement, see § 23.315.

§ 23.21 Seller Financing and Arrangers of Credit

Special disclosure requirements apply to the sale of a one-to-four-unit dwelling when the transaction involves seller financing and the participation of an arranger of credit [see Civ. Code § 2956 et seq.]. An "arranger of credit" is a person, other than a party to the transaction, who develops or negotiates credit terms and completes the credit documents for compensation [Civ. Code § 2957(a)(1)]. Certain persons are excluded from this definition [see Civ. Code § 2957(a)], including an attorney who is representing one of the parties [Civ. Code § 2957(a)(1); but see Civ. Code § 2957(a)(2) (attorney is arranger of credit if he or she is party to transaction and neither party is represented by real estate agent)]. The disclosures pertain primarily to the terms of the seller financing [see Civ. Code § 2963] and must be made before the execution of any note or security documents [Civ. Code § 2959]. The California Association of Realtors and other real estate organizations may offer printed standard forms designed to meet these disclosure requirements. § 23.22 Statutory Responsibilities of Real Estate Brokers

[1] Inspection of Residential Property and Disclosure of Material Facts

Special inspection and disclosure requirements apply to any real estate broker licensed under California law who has a written contract with a seller to find or obtain a buyer for residential real property containing one-to-four dwelling units, including a manufactured home [Civ. Code § 2079(a); see Health & Safety Code § 18007 ("manufactured home" defined)]. The broker, or another broker acting in cooperation with the broker to find and obtain a buyer, must conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale, and must disclose to prospective buyers all facts revealed by the investigation that materially affect the value or desirability of the property [Civ. Code § 2079(a)]. The broker must comply with these requirements and any regulations imposing standards of professional conduct adopted under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080 with reference to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10176 and 10177 (regarding disciplinary actions against licensees) [Civ. Code § 2079(b)]. The broker must exercise the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise, measured by the degree of knowledge (through education, experience, and examination) required to obtain a real estate license [Civ. Code § 2079.2]. The inspection need not include or involve areas that are reasonably and normally inaccessible to such an inspection, nor an affirmative inspection of areas off the site of the subject property or public records or permits concerning the property's title or use [Civ. Code § 2079.3]. In addition, the seller's agent is under no duty to independently verify or disclaim the accuracy of the seller's representations; rather, the agent must only act in good faith and must not convey the seller's representations without a reasonable basis for believing them to be true [Robinson v. Grossman (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 641-642, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380] .

The statutory duty to inspect and disclose goes only toward prospective buyers and not to persons who are not parties to the real estate transaction [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564 (broker owed no duty to homebuyer's minor child who allegedly suffered injuries as result of home's undisclosed microbial contamination)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Brokers Are Not Required to Have "Superman" Eyes. Brokers are not held to a supernatural standard of care, even though buyers many times bring suit on theories that are predicated on near-supernatural theories. In fact, case law has confirmed that brokers do not have to undertake structural foundation analysis of a residence or, as one decision graphically described, have "x-ray eyes" [Civ. Code § 2079; Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1973) 15 Cal. App. 4th 298]. Rather, the broker is held to a normal visual inspection standard to the geographical area under consideration [but see Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 26 (indicating that broker's fiduciary duty to inspect may be broader than nonfiduciary duty imposed under Civ. Code § 2079)].

Brokerage practices do vary by geographical area in terms of inspection practices. For example, in the Fresno area, brokers require sellers to get a roofer certification that there are no significant roof problems coupled with a two-year warranty from the roof inspector--based on broker experience that roof leaks are a number one cause of disputes. (If there are problems from such a certification, they are addressed through negotiation during the escrow process.) Southern California brokers do not require such a roof certification, preferring to defer to the buyer's option of seeking an independent home inspection report. These regional variances in practice illustrate how standard-of-care issues are driven by geographical trade differences. By William M. Hensley.

If the property is a unit in a planned development, a condominium, or a stock cooperative, the broker need only inspect the unit offered for sale, as long as the seller or the broker provides the prospective buyer with certain subdivision documents as required by Civ. Code § 1368 [see Civ. Code § 2079.3; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums]. There is no duty to go beyond these requirements to find additional matters (such as pending litigation concerning common areas of the property) that have not been revealed in the course of the required inquiries [Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1282, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373] .

These requirements do not relieve a buyer or prospective buyer of the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself. In discharging these duties, the buyer or prospective buyer must take into account those facts that are known to him or her or within his or her diligent attention and observation [Civ. Code § 2079.5].

If a seller or real estate broker provides a prospective buyer with the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety, the seller or broker will not to be required to provide the buyer with additional information concerning (1) the geologic and seismic hazards described in the guide, or (2) measures that the buyer or seller might consider to mitigate earthquake hazards [Civ. Code § 2079.8(a)]. However, the broker will still be obligated to comply with the other disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 2079 et seq. [Civ. Code § 2079.8(b)]. Slightly different requirements apply when the property being transferred is commercial property [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147; Civ. Code § 2079.9; see also § 23.20[4]].

[2] Coordination With Transferor's Disclosure Statement

The brokers' inspection and disclosure requirements have been coordinated with the separate requirement that transferors of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units must complete and provide prospective transferees with a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.6; see also § 23.20[1]]. The statutes governing use of the transferor's disclosure statement impose some delivery and record-keeping duties on real estate brokers [see Civ. Code § 1102.12; see also § 23.300[1][c][iv]], but they do not expressly require brokers or agents to make disclosures. However, Paragraphs III and IV of the statutory transferor's disclosure form [Civ. Code § 1102.6; see § 23.300[2]] must be completed by any broker of the transferor and any other broker who obtains an offer. Alternatively, the form provides the brokers with the option of stating the disclosures on a separate form, provided they indicate this election in Paragraph I of the official form [see Civ. Code § 1102.6].

Related statutes require the seller or his or her agent to make natural-hazards disclosures under specified circumstances [see Civ. Code § 1103 et seq.; see also §§ 23.20[3], 23.302[1].

[3] Disclosures Regarding Agency Relationship

Certain statutory disclosure requirements regarding an agency relationship apply when a transaction involves (1) a perpetual estate, an estate of inheritance, or life estate in property containing one-to-four dwelling units, (2) any leasehold in the foregoing type of property exceeding one years' duration, or (3) a mobilehome [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(j) (definition of "real property"); see also Civ. Code § 761(1), (2)]. A licensed real estate broker under whose license a listing contract is signed or an offer to purchase is obtained must provide the seller and buyer in any resulting sale transaction with two disclosures regarding the broker's agency relationship with the seller or buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.13(a); see Civ. Code §§ 2079.12-2079.24; see also Civ. Code § 2079.13(k)]. First, the broker must provide a statutory form entitled "Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Relationship" [see Civ. Code § 2079.16; see also Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents]. Second, the broker must disclose whether he or she is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, exclusively as the buyer's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17] and must confirm this disclosure in writing. The written confirmation must appear either in the sale contract [see § 23.210] or in a separate writing.

For further discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents .

[1] Escrow Instructions

As a general rule, it is presumed that escrow instructions are merely a customary and convenient means of carrying out an underlying real property sale contract, and that they are not intended to supersede it [King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 589, 197 P.2d 321 ; Katemis v. Westerlind (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 537, 542, 261 P.2d 553] . Thus the escrow instructions are considered evidence of the meaning and intent of the contract, and may be looked to in order to ascertain the contractual obligations of the parties when the contract is unclear or silent on a particular point [King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 588-589, 197 P.2d 321 ; Leiter v. Handelsman (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 243, 250, 270 P.2d 563] . Further, the omission of certain terms or contingencies from escrow instructions will not, in and or itself, operate to change the terms of the contract [Keelan v. Belmont Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 6, 7, 165 P.2d 930] . Notwithstanding the general rule, however, terms contained in escrow instructions may supersede inconsistent terms of an underlying contract [Neher v. Kauffman (1925) 197 Cal. 674, 683, 242 P. 713 ; Hawes v. Lux (1931) 111 Cal. App. 21, 24, 294 P. 1080] .

From the point of view of the escrow agent, written escrow instructions of the parties define and limit the agent's obligations [see Schaefer v. Manufacturers Bank (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 70, 77, 163 Cal. Rptr. 402] . The escrow holder does not owe a duty to persons who are not parties to the escrow and thus cannot be held liable to strangers to the escrow for injuries allegedly caused by following its principals' instructions [Summit Financial Holdings, Ltd. v. Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 705, 713-714, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541, 41 P.3d 548 (escrow holder who paid note as instructed by issuing check to assignor of the note rather than assignee, neither of whom were parties to the escrow, could not be held liable to assignor for breach of fiduciary duty or for negligence)].

[2] Termination of Escrow

Title to instruments and funds deposited in escrow passes by operation of law when the conditions of the escrow are performed. The escrow is terminated when (1) all of the conditions have been performed, (2) it is abandoned or canceled by mutual agreement of the parties, or (3) it is canceled by one party because of another party's failure to perform a required term or condition. Termination ends the dual agency relationship between the escrow agent and the parties and shifts the right to possession and control of deposited instruments and funds to the parties respectively entitled to the delivery or return of the items [see, e.g., Todd v. Vestermark (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 374, 377, 302 P.2d 347] .

In any contract for the sale of real property, there is an implied requirement that the seller convey a "good" or "marketable" title to the buyer [King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 589, 197 P.2d 321 ; see Hocking v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 644, 649-651, 234 P.2d 625 ("marketable title" and "good title" are analytically indistinguishable concepts; older cases refer to "good title")]. A real property sale contract cannot be specifically enforced in favor of a seller who cannot give the buyer a title free from reasonable doubt [Civ. Code § 3394].

"Marketable title" is a title that a reasonable buyer, well-informed of the facts and their legal consequences and willing and anxious to perform the contract, would, in the exercise of the prudence that business persons ordinarily bring to bear on such transactions, be willing to accept [Hocking v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 644, 649, 234 P.2d 625] . It must be sufficiently free from defects to enable the holder (1) to retain the property, (2) to possess it in peace, and (3) when the time comes to sell it, to be reasonably sure that no flaw or doubt will arise to disturb its market value [Mertens v. Berendsen (1931) 213 Cal. 111, 113, 1 P.2d 440] . To qualify as "marketable," a title must embrace both the legal and equitable estates, must be free from unknown encumbrances, and must be defensible and salable [Palos Verdes Corp. v. Housing Authority (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 827, 838, 21 Cal. Rptr. 225] .

Title insurance is usually used to establish marketable title [see Ins. Code § 12340.1 ("title insurance" defined)]. The California Land Title Association's standard coverage policy is probably the most commonly used form of title insurance policy in California. It is a "joint protection" policy designed to insure the interest of either an owner or a lender against title risks. The American Land Title Association's (ALTA) loan policy, which insures mortgages and deeds of trust, is commonly purchased by institutional lenders on real property. The ALTA owner's policy, which is designed for use by real property owners, is commonly purchased in connection with the acquisition of large commercial properties. For discussion of title insurance, see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance .

After the execution of a real property sale contract, the buyer has an insurable interest in the property [see Long v. Keller (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 312, 317, 163 Cal. Rptr. 532] . Unless it provides otherwise, a real property sale contract made in California must be interpreted as placing the risk of loss on the buyer on the transfer of either legal title or possession [Civ. Code § 1662; see § 23.19].

The buyer may assume the seller's insurance. However, because an insurance policy is a personal contract that indemnifies the insured against loss resulting from the destruction of or damage to the insured's interest in the property [see Long v. Keller (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 312, 320, 163 Cal. Rptr. 532] , the transfer of a policy usually requires the insurer's consent, whether or not that is stated in the policy [Bergson v. Builders' Ins. Co. (1869) 38 Cal. 541, 544] .

§ 23.26 Gain or Loss on Sale of Real Property

[1] Classification of Assets

Real property is a capital asset if not held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of trade or business [I.R.C. § 1221(a)(1)] and not classified as Section 1231 property used in trade or business [I.R.C. § 1221(a)(2)]. Real property is Section 1231 property if held by the taxpayer for more than one year and used in the taxpayer's trade or business but not held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of that trade or business [I.R.C. § 1231(b)(1)]. Any other real property, namely, real property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's trade or business, is classified as a noncapital asset [see I.R.C. § 1221; see also Malat v. Riddell (1966) 383 U.S. 569, 570, 86 S. Ct. 1030, 16 L. Ed. 2d 102] .

For an individual, the tax rate on capital gains is generally 15 percent, although the actual tax rate depends on the time the capital asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h)(1)(C), effective generally for tax years ending on or after 5/16/03 and before 2009; see Pub. Law No. 108-27, §§ 301, 303; see also I.R.C. § 1(a)- (d), (i)(2)]. In contrast, corporate capital gains are taxed at the same rate as ordinary income [see I.R.C. §§ 11(b), 1201].

Capital losses are allowed only to the extent of capital gains (in the case of a corporation) or capital gains plus limited amounts of ordinary income (in the case of an individual taxpayer) [see I.R.C. § 1211]. However, there are carry-back and carry-forward rules for unused capital losses [see I.R.C. § 1212(a), (b)], and losses on Section 1231 property may be allowed in full [see I.R.C. § 1231(a)(4)].

[2] Sale of Capital Assets

[a] Federal Law

Any gain or loss realized by the seller on the sale of a capital asset is a capital gain or capital loss [I.R.C. § 1222]. If the capital asset has been held by the seller for not more than one year, the resulting gain or loss is a short-term capital gain or loss [I.R.C. § 1222(1), (2)]. If the capital asset was held by the seller for more than one year, the resulting gain or loss on its sale is a long-term capital gain or loss [I.R.C. § 1222(3), (4)]. A taxpayer's short-term capital gains in a given year are reduced by short-term capital losses for the same year to determine net short-term capital gain or loss [I.R.C. § 1222(5), (6)]. The taxpayer's long-term capital gains during the year are reduced by long-term capital losses for the year to determine net long-term capital gain or loss [I.R.C. § 1222(7), (8)].

If net long-term capital gain exceeds net short-term capital loss, the difference is net capital gain [I.R.C. § 1222(11)]. Individual net capital gains are taxed at rates significantly lower than for ordinary income, based on the time the asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h); see also I.R.C. § 1(a)- (d)]. A corporation is taxed on net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) [I.R.C. § 1201(a)] at the same maximum rate that applies to ordinary corporate income [see I.R.C. § 11(b)].

Noncorporate taxpayers who show a net short-term or long-term capital loss as a result of these computations may offset that loss against any other capital gains; then any remaining loss may be deducted from ordinary income up to a maximum of $3,000 ($1,500 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return) [I.R.C. § 1211(b)]. Corporations showing a capital loss as a result of the computations outlined above may offset that loss only against capital gains [see I.R.C. § 1211(a)]. Within statutory limits, capital losses in excess of the allowed amount [I.R.C. § 1222(10) (net capital losses)] may be carried forward by noncorporate taxpayers [see I.R.C. § 1212(b)] or may be carried backward or forward by corporations [see I.R.C. § 1212(a)].

[b] California Law

For California state income tax purposes, capital gains and losses must be determined in accordance with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151; § 23.26[2][a]].

[3] Sale of Section 1231 Assets

Any gain realized on the sale of a Section 1231 asset [see § 23.26[1]] is treated as long-term capital gain, except that any gain realized on the sale must be treated as ordinary income to the extent of the losses from these transactions over the five preceding years [I.R.C. § 1231(c); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]. However, any loss realized on the sale of a Section 1231 asset is treated as an ordinary loss fully deductible against other taxable income in the year of the sale [I.R.C. § 1231(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151].

[4] Sale of Noncapital Assets

Any gain realized on the sale of noncapital assets is treated as ordinary income. However, any loss on the sale of a noncapital asset is fully deductible against other income in the year the loss was recognized [I.R.C. §§ 61, 64, 65, 165(c); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201].

[5] Determining Gain or Loss

For income tax purposes, including under California law [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18031], the amount of gain or loss on a sale of any property is computed as the amount realized minus the seller's adjusted tax basis for the property and the expenses of making the sale [see I.T. 2340, VI-1 C.B. 43 (1927) ; see also Chapin v. Commissioner, 12 T.C. 235, 238 , aff'd, 180 F.2d 140 (8th Cir. 1950)] . The amount realized includes the fair market value of any notes received or any mortgages or deeds of trust the buyer assumed [I.R.C. § 1001; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18031, 24901(b)]. The adjusted tax basis of the property is the seller's cost of acquiring the property (including any mortgages or deeds of trust the seller assumed or took the property subject to), plus the costs of any capital improvements made to the property by the seller, less any depreciation deductions allowed in previous years because of the property [I.R.C. §§ 1011, 1012, 1016(a); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18031, 18036].

Land is not depreciable, but depreciation deductions can be taken for buildings and improvements placed on the land if they are used in a trade or business for the production of income [I.R.C. §§ 167, 168; Treas. Reg. § 1.167(a)-2; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17201, 17250, 24349-24356]. Residential real property placed in service after 1986, must be depreciated for federal tax purposes over a 27.5-year period. Nonresidential real property placed in service after 1986, must be depreciated for federal tax purposes over a 39-year period [I.R.C. § 168(c)]. Alternatively, a taxpayer may elect a 40-year depreciation period for federal tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 168(g)]. Regardless of the period, real property depreciation must be computed for federal tax purposes on a straight-line basis [see I.R.C. § 168(b), (g)].

For California purposes, the amount of depreciation that will be taken into account in determining the taxpayer's adjusted basis of property for purposes of computing gain or loss will depend on whether the taxpayer is subject to the Personal Income Tax Law or the Corporation Tax Law. The Personal Income Tax Law generally allows depreciation deductions in the same manner as incorporated federal law [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17024.5, 17250, 27201; I.R.C. §§ 167, 168; see § 12C.252[1][b] for a detailed discussion]. The Corporation Tax Law allows less generous depreciation deductions. Depreciation deductions under those provisions must generally be computed using one of several methods (straight-line, double declining balance, sum-of-years digits), taking into account useful life and salvage value [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 24349(a), (b), 24350, 24351, 24352, 24352.5, 24353, 24354, 24354.1, 24355, 24355.4]. These rules generally follow pre-1981 federal law, and result in depreciation deductions that are likely to be less favorable than under federal law [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 24349-24356; I.R.C. §§ 167, 168].

[6] Sale of Residence

Special rules govern the determination of gain or loss from the sale of a residence. A personal residence is a capital asset. Therefore any gain required to be recognized from the sale of a personal residence is treated as capital gain [I.R.C. § 1221; Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]. This gain must be recognized in the year the residence is sold unless the gain is wholly or partially excluded or deferred (see discussion below). Loss ordinarily is not deductible because there is usually no profit motive in the acquisition of a home [see Treas. Reg. § 1.165-9(a)].

A specified amount of gain from the sale or exchange of a principal residence is excluded from income if, during the five-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property had been owned and used by the taxpayer as a principal residence for periods that aggregate to two years or longer [I.R.C. § 121(a); see I.R.C. § 121(c) (special treatment of certain sales and exchanges)]. However, for a sale or exchange after 2008, the exclusion does not reach any part of the gain that must be allocated to a period of nonqualified use, that is, with some exceptions, any period (other than the portion of any period preceding 2009) during which the property was not used as the principal residence of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or former spouse [I.R.C. § 121(b)(4); see I.R.C. § 121(b)(4)(C)(ii) (exceptions to what is period of nonqualified use)]. The maximum amount of gain that may be excluded with regard to any sale or exchange is $250,000 for single taxpayers or $500,000 for married taxpayers filing joint returns and meeting additional statutory criteria [I.R.C. § 121(b)(1), (2); see I.R.C. § 121(d)(1)- (3) (special rules concerning joint returns and treatment of property of former or deceased spouse)]. This exclusion applies to only one sale or exchange in a two-year period. The taxpayer may elect to have the exclusion not apply to a particular sale or exchange [I.R.C. § 121(f)].

Effective for estates of decedents dying after 2009, the exclusion for the sale of a principal residence is extended to estates and individuals who acquire a residence from the decedent [I.R.C. § 121(d)(11)(A), (B)]. If the decedent's estate or an individual heir sells the decedent's principal residence, $250,000 of gain can be excluded on the sale of the residence, provided the decedent used the property as a principal residence for two or more years during the five-year period prior to the sale [I.R.C. § 121(b)(1)]. The exclusion for the gain on the sale of a principal residence also applies to property sold by a trust that was a qualified revocable trust under I.R.C. § 645 immediately prior to the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 121(d)(11)(C)].

In the case of property as to which the taxpayer rolled over gain from another residence [see former I.R.C. § 1034], the aggregate period for which the other residence (and each previous residence taken into account [see I.R.C. § 1223(6)]) had been used as a principal residence is taken into account in determining the period for which the taxpayer has owned and used the current property as a principal residence [I.R.C. § 121(g)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.27

§ 23.27 Interest Deductions

[1] Personal Interest

As a general rule, interest that is paid or accrued within the taxable year may be deducted [see I.R.C. § 163(a); see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17201, 24344, 24345]. However, for the noncorporate taxpayer, there are several important exceptions to the deductibility of interest.

No taxpayers other than corporations are allowed a deduction for "personal" interest [I.R.C. § 163(h)(1)]. Personal interest is a residual category including all interest that does not qualify under one of five specific categories of interest for which a deduction is allowed in whole or in part [I.R.C. § 163(h)(2)]:

- Interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to a trade or business;
- Investment interest [see I.R.C. § 163(d)];
- Interest taken into account in computing passive income and losses [see I.R.C. § 469];
- Interest on a "qualified residence" of the taxpayer [see I.R.C. § 163(h)(3), (4)];
- Interest on underpayment of estate taxes while certain extensions are in effect [see I.R.C. §§ 2001, 6163];
- Any interest allowable as a deduction under I.R.C. § 221 (relating to interest on educational loans).

Interest paid or accrued by the buyer in connection with the purchase of real property will be fully deductible only if the underlying indebtedness is properly allocable to a trade or business [see [2], below]. It will be deductible subject to limitations if it is qualified residence interest, interest taken into account in determining income or loss from a passive activity, or investment interest [see [3]-[6], below]. Interest will be nondeductible personal interest in all other cases [see I.R.C. § 163(h)(1), (2)].

[2] Business Interest

Interest remains fully deductible if paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to a trade or business other than the business of performing services as an employee [I.R.C. § 163(a), (h)(2)(A)].

It is not clear whether the use of the term "trade or business" in I.R.C. § 163(h) carries with it the body of case law interpreting the term as used in I.R.C. § 162 (concerning deductions for business expenses). There is authority for the proposition that a trade or business under I.R.C. § 162 requires holding one's self out to others as engaged in the selling of goods and services [see Gajewski v. C.I.R. (2d Cir. 1983) 723 F.2d 1062, 1065-1067] . Furthermore, costs incurred by real estate investors during construction or the start-up period are generally not allowed as deductions but are required to be capitalized and amortized, under the theory that during construction or the start-up period there is not yet a trade or business incurring ordinary and necessary expenses [I.R.C. § 195; see Francis v. Commissioner (1977) T.C. Memo. 1977-170 ; Goodwin v. Commissioner (1980) 75 T.C. 424 , aff'd, 691 F.2d 490 (3rd Cir. 1982)] .

Whether this rule now applies to interest on real estate acquisition or construction loans or other preoperational indebtedness of a business is not resolved. The language of the two code sections regarding "trade or business" is different. The business expense deduction is allowed for "all ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred ... in carrying on any trade or business" [I.R.C. § 162(a)]. The interest deduction is allowed for "interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to a trade or business" [I.R.C. § 163(h)(2)(A)].

[3] Qualified Residence Interest

Qualified residence interest is interest paid or accrued during the taxable year on acquisition indebtedness or home equity indebtedness with respect to any qualified residence of the taxpayer [I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(A)]. "Acquisition indebtedness" means any indebtedness, up to $1 million ($500,000 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return), that is both (1) incurred in acquiring, constructing, or substantially improving any qualified residence of the taxpayer, and (2) secured by that residence [I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(B); see I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(C)]. A "qualified residence" includes the taxpayer's principal residence [I.R.C. § 163(h)(4)(A)(i)(I); see I.R.C. § 121] and one other residence of the taxpayer that is selected by the taxpayer for these purposes [I.R.C. § 163(h)(4)(A)(i)(II), (iii)]. However, if the designated second residence is rented for a majority of the taxable year, it will be considered a qualified residence only if the taxpayer uses the dwelling unit as a residence for the greater of 14 days or 10 percent of the number of days during the year for which the unit is rented at fair rental value [I.R.C. § 163(h)(4)(A)(i)(II); see I.R.C. § 280A(d)(1)].

For these purposes, "home equity indebtedness" means any indebtedness (other than acquisition indebtedness) secured by a qualified residence to the extent that the aggregate amount of the indebtedness does not exceed the fair market value of the qualified residence reduced by the amount of acquisition indebtedness with respect to the residence [I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(C)]. The aggregate amount treated as home equity indebtedness for any period cannot exceed $100,000 ($50,000 in the case of a separate return by a married individual) [I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(C)(ii)].

[4] Passive Activity Interest

All rental activities [see I.R.C. § 469(j)(8)] and activities involving the conduct of a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate are "passive" activities for federal income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 469(c)(1), (2)]. Deductions arising from passive activities, including any deduction for interest incurred in connection with the activity, may be taken only against income attributable to the taxpayer's aggregate passive activities [I.R.C. § 469(a)(1), (d)]. Deductions that are disallowed under the rule in any taxable year may be carried forward to the next taxable year but not back to any previous taxable year [I.R.C. § 469(b)] and are allowed against all income if the taxpayer disposes of his or her entire interest in the activity in a fully taxable transaction [see I.R.C. § 469(g)].

The rule applies to any taxpayer that is an individual, estate, trust, closely held corporation, or personal service corporation [I.R.C. § 469(a)(2)]. However, there is an exception that permits closely held corporations to use passive losses and credits against active income but not against investment income [see I.R.C. § 469(e)(2)].

A taxpayer is deemed to participate materially in an activity if the taxpayer is involved in the operations of the activity on a regular, continuous, and substantial basis [I.R.C. § 469(h)(1)]. Each case is to be determined independently on its facts and circumstances. Relevant considerations are whether the activity is the taxpayer's principal business, the taxpayer's physical presence on the premises of the activity, and the taxpayer's performance of management functions and services for the activity [see S. Rep. No. 99-313, Pub. L. No. 99-514 (1986), pp. 732-735]. A limited partner is conclusively presumed not to be a material participant. The IRS may, however, promulgate regulations permitting limited partners to be material participants [I.R.C. § 469(h)(2)].

There is a limited allowance of deductions against other income in rental real estate activities. A natural person may apply his or her passive activity losses and credits against up to $25,000 of nonpassive income, if the person "actively participates" (see definition, below) in the rental real estate activities [I.R.C. § 469(i)(1), (2)]. The $25,000 limit is reduced by 50 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income over $100,000 [I.R.C. § 469(i)(3); see I.R.C. § 469(i)(5) (all amounts halved for married taxpayers filing separately)].

Active participation in rental real estate is a less-stringent standard than material participation in other passive activities. Active participation requires only significant and good faith participation in management decisions, even if arrangements are made for others to provide services. At a minimum, however, the taxpayer must have an interest of at least 10 percent of all interests in the activity for the entire taxable year regardless of the personal time and effort invested in the activity [I.R.C. § 469(i)(6)(A); see S. Rep. No. 99-313, Pub. L. No. 99-514 (1986), pp. 736-738]. The taxpayer must meet this active-participation standard in both the year in which the deduction or credit arises and the year in which it is taken [I.R.C. § 469(i)(1)]. As with the material-participation standard, limited partners will be conclusively considered not to be active participants in rental real estate activities unless the IRS promulgates regulations permitting them to be active participants [I.R.C. § 469(i)(6)(C)].

[5] Investment Interest

Investment interest deductions for a taxable year may not exceed net investment income for the same taxable year [I.R.C. § 163(d)(1)]. Any amount disallowed in one taxable year is carried forward to the next taxable year [I.R.C. § 163(d)(2)].

Investment interest is interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to property held for investment [I.R.C. § 163(d)(3)]. Real property is not specifically mentioned in the definition of "property held for investment" [see I.R.C. §§ 163(d)(5), 469(e)(1)]. Investment interest specifically excludes interest taken into account in computing income or loss from a passive activity [I.R.C. § 163(d)(3)(B)(ii); see I.R.C. § 469; see [4], above], but not interest properly allocable to a trade or business [see [2], above].

[6] Prepaid Interest and Points

Interest is deductible by a cash-basis taxpayer only when paid, and the giving of a note for interest is not considered to be payment [I.R.C. § 163(a); see England v. Commissioner (1960) 34 T.C. 617] . Interest paid by a taxpayer on a mortgage on real estate of which he or she is the legal or equitable owner may be deducted as interest on the taxpayer's indebtedness, even though the taxpayer is not directly liable on the note [Treas. Reg. § 1.163-1(b); see Rev. Rul. 68-643, 1968-2 C.B. 76 (if interest is prepaid for period not exceeding 12 months beyond end of taxable year of payment, IRS will determine on case-by-case basis whether deduction of interest causes material distortion of income); see also Rev. Rul. 69-582, 1969-2 C.B. 29 (current deduction for points constituting interest is generally allowable without need for proration if borrower did not obtain funds for points from lender and no material distortion of income results)].

Prepaid interest of a cash-basis taxpayer is deductible only with respect to the period for which it is allocable [I.R.C. § 461(g)]. This requirement applies to all taxpayers, including individuals, corporations, partnerships, estates, and trusts [S. Rep. No. 94-938, Pub. L. No. 94-455 (1976), p. 104]. The only exception is for points paid by a cash-basis taxpayer in connection with a debt incurred for the purchase or improvement of the taxpayer's principal residence and secured by that residence. The exception applies only if points are generally charged in the geographical area where the loan is made and only to the extent of the number of points generally charged in that area [I.R.C. § 461(g)(2)].

Under the tax-benefit rule, a cash-basis taxpayer must recapture interest that was prepaid and deducted on the sale of property [see, e.g., Weyher v. Commissioner (1976) 66 T.C. 825 (taxpayer sold real property to corporation of which he was president and majority shareholder; he was reimbursed for interest that he had prepaid and deducted when he purchased; amount recovered on sale that represented prepaid interest had to be recaptured as ordinary income)].

§ 23.28 Allocation of Purchase Price

[1] Improved Property

The purchase price of improved property must be allocated among each of the assets sold. For tax purposes the seller is treated as having sold each individual asset separately, and its gain is measured accordingly. The buyer is treated as having purchased each asset separately, and basis in each of the assets is determined accordingly [see Treas. Reg. § 1.61-6(a); see also Drybrough v. Comm'r (1966) 45 T.C. 424 (attempts to allocate portions of purchase price may be disregarded by IRS if they bear no reasonable relationship to value of assets to which they are allocated)].

The IRS has recognized that the component method of accounting for depreciation on used real property improvements may be used if the cost of acquisition is properly allocated to the various components based on their value, and useful lives are assigned to the component accounts based on the condition of those components at the time of acquisition [Rev. Rul. 73-410, 1973-2 C.B. 53 ; see Rev. Rul. 75-55, 1975-1 C.B. 74].

[2] Unimproved Property

The purchase price may be allocated in a sale of unimproved property. For example, when part of a larger property is sold and the property is subdivided into lots, the basis of the entire property must be equitably apportioned among the individual parts. The sale of each part is treated as a separate transaction, and gain or loss is computed separately. The apportionment can allocate more of the purchase price to the more-valuable portions of the property. The allocation of additional price to certain portions will increase the buyer's tax basis in those assets and consequently decrease the taxable gain when those tracts are sold [see Treas. Reg. § 1.61-6(a)]. Allocation of total cost on the basis of the fair market value of each portion of a tract of land has been approved [see Biscayne Bay Islands Co. v. Commissioner (1931) 23 B.T.A. 731 ; see also Cleveland-Sandusky Brewing Corp. v. Commissioner (1958) 30 T.C. 539] . Allocation of cost according to front footage, release prices, tentative sales prices, or assessed valuation has been approved under limited circumstances [see Cullinan v. Commissioner (1927) 5 B.T.A. 996 ; Cullinan v. Commissioner (1930) 19 B.T.A. 930 ; see also Fairfield Plaza, Inc. v. Commissioner (1963) 39 T.C. 706] .

§ 23.29 Foreign Sellers and Tax Withholding

If the seller of real property is a "foreign person" [see I.R.C. § 1445(f)(3) ("foreign person" means any person other than a "United States person")], the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act (FIRPTA) [Pub. L. No. 96-499, §§ 1121-1125] requires the buyer to withhold from the seller's proceeds 10 percent of the gross sale price, unless an exemption applies [see I.R.C. § 1445]. The two most significant exemptions apply when (1) the seller furnishes the buyer an affidavit stating, under penalty of perjury, the seller's U.S. taxpayer identification number and that the seller is not a foreign person, and (2) the purchase price is $300,000 or less and the buyer plans to use the property as his or her residence [see I.R.C. § 1445(b)(2), (5)]. CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.30

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.30 Tax Withholding

[1] Overview

California income-tax withholding requirements apply to all dispositions of California real property interests [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18662(e), 18668(d)], except in certain cases [see § 23.30[2]]. When withholding is required:

- The transferor (seller) may make an election as to the amount [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(B); see § 23.30[3]].

- The transferee (buyer) is required to withhold the elected amount or, in the absence of the transferor's election, 3.33 percent of the sale price [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(A); regarding what is sale price, see § 23.30[2][a]].

- In the case of a qualified installment sale, the withholding requirements may or must be applied to each installment (instead of the sale price) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(E); see § 23.30[4]].

- Any withheld amount must be reported and remitted to the Franchise Tax Board (FTB) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4); see § 23.30[5]].

In this context, a "California real property interest" is an interest in real property located in California and defined in I.R.C. § 897(c)(1)(A)(i), that is "an interest in real property (including an interest in a mine, well, or other natural deposit) located in the United States or the Virgin Islands" [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(5)]. For the purpose of that definition, the term "interest in real property" includes (1) fee ownership and co ownership of land or improvements on land, (2) leaseholds of land or improvements on land, (3) options to acquire land or improvements on land, and (4) options to acquire leaseholds of land or improvements on land. Moreover, the term "real property" includes movable walls, furnishings, and other personal property associated with the use of the real property [I.R.C. § 897(c)(6)(A), (B)].

The FTB may prescribe, by forms, instructions, published notices, or regulations, any requirements necessary for the efficient administration of the withholding requirements, relating to the treatment of de minimis amounts that would otherwise required to be withheld and remitted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(9)].

[2] Exceptions to Withholding Requirements

[a] Sale Price Not More Than $100,000

No transferee is required to withhold any amount unless the sale price of the California real property conveyed exceeds $100,000 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(A)].

For purposes of the withholding requirements, the "sale price" is the sum of all of the following [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(8)]:

- The cash paid, or to be paid, but excluding for this purpose any stated or unstated interest or original issue discount, as determined under I.R.C. §§ 1271-1275.

- The fair market value of other property transferred, or to be transferred.

- The outstanding amount of any liability assumed by the transferee or to which the California real property interest is subject immediately before and after the transfer.

In the case of an installment sale, this minimum sale price is not to be applied to each installment [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(E)(ii)].

[b] Lack of Notification as to Requirements

No transferee, other than an intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount unless the real estate escrow person provided written notification of the withholding requirements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(B)]. A "real estate escrow person" is (1) the person, including any attorney, escrow company, or title company, responsible for closing the transaction or, if no such person is responsible for closing the transaction, then (2) any other person who receives and disburses the consideration or value for the interest or property conveyed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(6)].

An escrow person has a statutory duty to provide notification [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(2); see § 23.30[8]].

[c] Foreclosure Sale

No transferee, trustee under a deed of trust, or mortgagee under a mortgage with a power of sale is required to withhold when the transferee has acquired California real property (1) at a sale pursuant to a power of sale under a mortgage or deed of trust, (2) at a sale pursuant to a decree of foreclosure, or (3) by a deed in lieu of foreclosure [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(C)(i)].

[d] Sale by Bank as Trustee

No transferee is required to withhold when the transferor is a bank acting as trustee other than a trustee of a deed of trust [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(C)(ii)].

[e] Sale of Principal Residence

No transferee, including for this purpose any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount if the transferee, in good faith and based on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, relies on a written certificate executed by the transferor, certifying, under penalty of perjury, that [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(i); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(5) (transferor's liability for knowingly executing false certificate for purpose of avoiding withholding requirements)]:

- The California real property being conveyed is the seller's or decedent's principal residence, within the meaning of I.R.C. § 121 (exclusion of gain from sale of principal residence).

- The last use of the property being conveyed was use by the transferor as the transferor's principal residence within the meaning of I.R.C. § 121.

The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

[f] Like-Kind Exchange Without Recognition of Gain

No transferee, including for this purpose any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount if the transferee, in good faith and based on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, relies on a written certificate executed by the transferor, certifying, under penalty of perjury, that the California real property being conveyed is being exchanged, or will be exchanged, for property of like kind, within the meaning of I.R.C. § 1031. However, this exception applies only to the extent of the amount of the gain not required to be recognized for California income or franchise tax purposes under I.R.C. § 1031 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(ii)(I); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(5) (transferor's liability for knowingly executing false certificate for purpose of avoiding withholding requirements)]. The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

This exception will not apply if the exchange does not qualify for nonrecognition treatment for California income or franchise tax purposes under I.R.C. § 1031, in whole or in part, because of the failure of the transaction to comply with the provisions of I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3) relating to the requirement that property be identified and that the exchange be completed not more than 180 days after the transfer of the exchanged property [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(ii)(II)].

If this exception applies, the transferee must notify the FTB in writing within 10 days of the expiration of the statutory periods specified in I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3) and thereafter must remit the applicable withholding amount [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(ii)(III)].

[g] Involuntary Conversion of Property

No transferee, including for this purpose any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount if (1) the transferee, in good faith and based on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, relies on a written certificate executed by the transferor, certifying, under penalty of perjury, that the California real property has been compulsorily or involuntarily converted, within the meaning of I.R.C. § 1033; and (2) the transferor intends to acquire property similar or related in service or use so as to be eligible for nonrecognition of gain for California income tax purposes under I.R.C. § 1033 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(iii); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(5) (transferor's liability for knowingly executing false certificate for purpose of avoiding withholding requirements)]. The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

[h] Nonrecognition of Gain or Loss

No transferee, including for this purpose any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount if the transferee, in good faith and based on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, relies on a written certificate executed by the transferor, certifying, under penalty of perjury, that the transaction will result in either a net loss or a net gain not required to be recognized for California income or franchise tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(iv); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(5) (transferor's liability for knowingly executing false certificate for purpose of avoiding withholding requirements)]. The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

[i] Sale by California Corporation or Partnership

The requirements for withholding do not apply to a disposition of a California real property interest by either [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(1)(A)]:

- A corporation, including an entity classified for tax purposes as a corporation under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.; or

- A partnership, as determined in accordance with I.R.C. § 701 et seq. (Subchapter K), including an entity classified as a partnership for tax purposes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 17001 et seq.

The intended references here are to California corporations and partnerships. The withholding requirements do apply to a disposition of a California real property interest by a corporation or, after 2008, a partnership if, immediately after the transfer of the title to the California real property, the corporation or partnership has no permanent place of business in California. A corporation or partnership has no permanent place of business in California if it is not organized and existing under the laws of California, does not qualify with the office of the Secretary of State to transact business in California, and does not maintain and staff a permanent office in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(1)(B)].

[j] Sale by Corporation With California Place of Business

No transferee, including for this purpose any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold any amount if the transferee, in good faith and based on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, relies on a written certificate executed by the transferor, certifying, under penalty of perjury, that the transferor is a corporation with a permanent place of business in California [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(3)(D)(v); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(5) (transferor's liability for knowingly executing false certificate for purpose of avoiding withholding requirements)]. The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

[3] Transferor's Election of Withholding Amount

If the transferor makes an election, the transferee, including any intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange, is required to withhold an amount equal to an amount certified by the transferor in writing under penalty of perjury. The amount certified must not be less than the gain required to be recognized under California law on the disposition of the California real property, multiplied by either (1) the franchise tax rate, for transferors that are corporations [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23186], or (2) the highest rate specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041, for transferors other than corporations. However, after 2008, for S corporations subject to the modified tax rate specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23802, the multiplier is the sum of the rate specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23802(b) and the highest rate specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 17041. For purposes of applying this requirement, the highest rate specified in § 17041 is determined without regard to any other tax rate specified under the Personal Income Tax Law, regardless of whether the applicable statute provides that tax must be treated as if imposed under § 17041 [Rev. & Tax. Code §

18662(e)(2)(B)].

The written certification must be in a form as prescribed by the FTB. The form must state a warning as follows: "Title and escrow persons and exchange accommodators are not authorized to provide legal or accounting advice for purposes of determining withholding amounts. Transferors are strongly encouraged to consult with a competent tax professional for this purpose" [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(C)(I)].

The FTB must make this form available electronically on its web site in a format that allows a transferor to complete and print the form. The FTB also must provide electronic means to enable the transferor to estimate the amount of gain required to be recognized by the transferor in the transaction. Any form or worksheet, electronic or otherwise, developed for this purpose must provide the same warning [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(C)(ii)].

The transferor must submit a copy of the written certificate and supporting documentation for the elected withholding amount, executed by the transferor, to the FTB on request [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(B)].

[4] Withholding in Case of Installment Sale

In the case of an installment sale [see I.R.C. § 453(b) (definition)] occurring after 2008, the withholding requirements must be separately applied to each principal payment to be made under the terms of the installment sale agreement [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(E)]. For an installment sale occurring before 2009, application of the withholding requirements separately to each installment would depend on the transferee's making an irrevocable election for that treatment [see former Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(2)(E)].

[5] Transferee's Duty to Report and Remit

Amounts withheld and payments made in accordance with the withholding requirements must be reported and remitted to the FTB in the form and manner and at the time specified by the FTB. Notwithstanding this requirement, funds withheld on individual transactions by real estate escrow persons may, at the real estate escrow person's option, be remitted (1) by the 20th day of the month following the close of escrow for the individual transaction, or (2) on a monthly basis in combination with other transactions closed during that month [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(4)(A)].

[6] Transferee's Liability

Whenever any transferee is required but fails to withhold any amount pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e), unless it is shown that the failure to withhold is due to reasonable cause, the transferee is liable for $500 or 10 percent of the amount required to be withheld, whichever is greater, after the transferee is notified in writing of the withholding requirements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(d)]. However, the transferee is not liable if the failure to withhold is the result of his or her reliance, based on good faith and on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, on a written certificate executed by the transferor in circumstances permitting it [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(4); regarding transferor's execution of a certificate, see § 23.30[2][e]-[h], [j]].

[7] Escrow Person's Fee for Assistance

It is unlawful for any real estate escrow person to charge any customer for complying with the withholding requirements, unless the escrow person provides assistance [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(7)(A); regarding who is escrow person, see § 23.30[2][b]]. "Assistance" includes, but is not limited to, helping the parties clarify with the FTB the issue of whether withholding is required or, on request of the parties, withholding an amount and remitting that amount to the FTB [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(7)(B)]. "Assistance" does not include providing written notification of the withholding requirements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(7)(C); see § 23.30[8]]. When the escrow person provides assistance in complying with the withholding requirements, it is unlawful for the escrow person to charge any customer a fee that exceeds $45 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e)(7)(D)].

[8] Escrow Person's Notification Duty

A real estate escrow person must provide written notification to the transferee (other than a transferee that is an intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange) in substantially the form prescribed by statute [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(2); regarding who is escrow person, see § 23.30[2][b]].

Unless it is shown that a failure to notify is due to reasonable cause, the escrow person is liable for the amount of the transferee's liability [see § 23.30[6]], when written notification of the withholding requirements is not provided to the transferee (other than a transferee that is an intermediary or accommodation party in a deferred exchange) in a case of the disposition of California real property disposition that is subject to the withholding requirements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(1)]. However, the escrow person is not liable if the tax due as a result of the disposition of California real property is paid by the original or extended due date of the transferor's return for the taxable year in which the disposition occurred [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(3)]. Further, the escrow person is not liable if the failure to withhold is the result of his or her reliance, based on good faith and on all the information of which he or she has knowledge, on a written certificate executed by the transferor in circumstances permitting it [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18668(e)(4); regarding transferor's execution of certificate, see § 23.30[e]-[h], [j]].

CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.31

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.31 Property Tax

[1] In General

All property in California is subject to property taxation at its full value, unless exempt under the laws of the United States or California [Cal. Const., art. XIII, § 1; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 201, 401]. The maximum amount of any ad valorem tax on real property cannot exceed 1 percent of the "full cash value" of the property [Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, § 1(a)]. The full cash value of property is the valuation as shown on the 1975-1976 tax rolls unless the property was purchased, was newly constructed, or changed ownership after the 1975 assessment [Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, § 2(a); see § 23.31[2]].

[2] Reappraisal on Sale

The full cash value of real property that is purchased or newly constructed or changes ownership after March 1, 1975, is equal to the fair market value of the property as of the date on which the purchase or change of ownership occurs or the new construction is completed (or, if it is uncompleted, on the lien date) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 110.1(a)(2)]. This amount (the full cash value) is also the "base year value" for the property, from which the taxable value will be computed [Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, § 2(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 110.1(a), (b); see 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 460(b)(2)(A); see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 75.9, 75.10]. To determine the taxable value of the property, adjustments may be made to the base year value to reflect (1) inflation at a rate not to exceed 2 percent per annum, (2) a reduction in value as shown in the consumer price index or comparable data for the area, or (3) a decline in value resulting from substantial damage, destruction, or other factors [Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, § 2(b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 51]. The base year value does not include that portion of the previous base year value that was attributable to any portion of the property that has been destroyed or removed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 51(b)].

For purposes of determining "full cash value" or "fair market value" of real property (other than possessory interests) being appraised on a purchase, that value will be the purchase price, unless it is established by a preponderance of the evidence that the real property would not have been transferred for that price in an open market transaction [Rev. & Tax. Code § 110(b); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 110(a)]. The purchase price will be rebuttably presumed to be the "full cash value" or "fair market value" if the terms of the transaction were negotiated at arm's length between a knowledgeable transferor and transferee, neither of whom could take advantage of the exigencies of the other [Rev. & Tax. Code § 110(b); but see Rev. & Tax. Code § 110(c) (presumption does not apply if taxpayer fails to provide related information in preliminary change-of-ownership report or change-in-ownership statement); see also § 23.31[4]]. For these purposes, "purchase price" means the total consideration provided by the buyer or on the buyer's behalf, valued in money, whether paid in money or otherwise. There is a rebuttable presumption that the value of improvements financed by the proceeds of an assessment resulting in a lien imposed on the property by a public entity is reflected in the total consideration, exclusive of that lien amount, involved in the transaction. This presumption may be overcome if the assessor establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that all or a portion of the value of those improvements is not reflected in that consideration. If a single transaction results in a change of ownership of more than one parcel of real property, the purchase price must be allocated among those parcels and any other assets transferred in the transaction, based on the relative fair market value of each [Rev. & Tax. Code § 110(b)].

The property will be reappraised at its full cash value as of the date on which the change of ownership occurs or the new construction is completed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 75.10(a); 18 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 462.001, 463; but see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 68, 75.10(b) (exceptions)]. For a reappraisal triggered by a sale, the date of the ownership change is rebuttably presumed to be either the date of recordation, when the transfer is evidenced by the recordation of a deed or other document, or the date of the transfer document, when the transfer is accomplished by an unrecorded document [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.260(a)]. The presumption may be rebutted by evidence proving a different date to be either the date all parties' instructions have been met in escrow or the date the contract of the parties became specifically enforceable [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.260(a)].

A taxpayer who is over the age of 55 or who is severely and permanently disabled may transfer the base year value of his or her principal residence to any replacement dwelling of equal or lesser value within the same county [but see Rev. & Tax. Code § 69.5(a)(2) (authorizing transfer of base year value to replacement dwelling in other county, if permitted by local ordinance)], provided the following conditions are satisfied:

- The original residence was, and the replacement dwelling is, eligible for the homeowner's property tax exemption [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 218; Cal. Const., art. XIII, § 3(k)].

- The replacement dwelling is purchased or newly constructed by the taxpayer within two years after the sale of the original residence.

- The taxpayer files a claim with the county assessor within three years after the purchase of the replacement property or the completion of construction on that property [Rev. & Tax. Code § 69.5(a)(1), (f)(1)(F)]. A claim that is filed after the expiration of the three-year filing period must, nevertheless, be considered by the assessor, if specified conditions are satisfied [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 69.5(f)(2)].

Counties are required to prepare supplemental assessment rolls and collect supplemental taxes for real property that has been the subject of a transaction triggering reappraisal [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 75, 75.80]. The assessed value (that is, the property's new base year value) [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 75.9, 75.10] is entered on the supplemental roll, which reflects the difference between the property's taxable value on the current assessment roll (if any) and its new base year value. The buyer will be liable for a supplemental assessment prorated for the portion of the tax year remaining after the reappraisal [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 75.41, 75.51].

[3] Attachment of Lien

Local ad valorem real property taxes become a lien on the property [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2187-2189]. The lien date (effective date) is the first day of January preceding the fiscal year for which the taxes are levied [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2192]. On the lien date, the amount of the tax for the following fiscal year will not be known; therefore, when the tax rate is subsequently established and the taxes are assessed and levied, they will relate back to the lien date [see City of Long Beach v. Aistrup (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 41, 52, 330 P.2d 282] . The tax lien continues until the taxes are paid or legally canceled or the property is sold to satisfy the tax lien [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2194].

[4] Report of Change of Ownership

Following any change of ownership of taxable real property, the transferee must report the transfer to officials of the county in which the property is located [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(a)]. For these purposes, a change of ownership is a transfer of a present interest in real property, including the beneficial use of the property, the value of which is substantially equal to the value of the fee interest [Rev. & Tax. Code § 60]. The purchase of real property falls within that definition [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 67 ("purchase" means a change of ownership for consideration)].

When, as in the case of a purchase, the change of ownership is effected by the recordation of a deed or other document, the transferee must file a completed preliminary change-of-ownership report with the county recorder at the time of recordation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3; see also § 23.306]. If that report is not filed, the transferee will be required to file a completed change-in-ownership statement [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(a)] and pay an additional recording fee.

PRACTICE TIP:

Home Inspections Are Recommended. Home inspections by independent contractors should be utilized by most residential buyers. Even though they have significant carve-outs, these inspections are cheap and usually give notice of "yellow flags" or "red flags" that might lead a buyer to a pass on a purchase or to negotiate through the escrow process issues revealed by the inspection.

In hilly areas (especially areas built on fill), a buyer is well advised to obtain a geological inspection for such hazards as ancient landslides, subsidence-sensitive soil, and the like.

Home inspections also provide a source of comfort for other real estate professionals. One recent case allowed an equitable indemnity action to proceed against a home inspector by a real estate broker in a disgruntled buyer lawsuit [see Leko v. Cornerstone Home Inspection (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858] . By William M. Hensley.

c. Premium.

d. Transferability of policy.

18. Contingencies (conditions) seller wishes to include in contract [see § 23.16; see also § 23.113 (list of common contingencies)], such as seller's ability to purchase replacement property.

§ 23.110 Capacity and Consent of Parties

1. If party is minor, is he or she emancipated and capable of entering into binding contract to buy or sell real property [see Fam. Code §§ 7002, 7050]?

2. If seller has been adjudicated incompetent, has a conservator been appointed to sell the property [see Prob. Code § 2540]?

3. If corporation is a party to sale contract:

a. Has board adopted resolution authorizing sale or purchase [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]?

b. If corporation is seller:
(1) Is sale in usual and regular course of corporation's business?

(2) Does property represent all or substantially all of corporation's assets?

NOTE:
Statutory approval requirements apply to the sale of all or substantially all of the assets of a corporation [see Corp. Code § 1001(a); see also § 23.121]. If the transaction constitutes a conversion to another form of business entity, it is not subject to these provisions but rather to provisions that specifically govern conversions [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 1150 et seq. (conversions)].

4. If seller is limited partnership:

a. Has certified copy of certificate of limited partnership been recorded in county where real property is located [see Corp. Code § 15902.01(e) (ULPA '08), Corp. Code § 15621(d) (CRLPA, repealed January 1, 2010)]?

b. Does subject property constitute all or a substantial part of assets of partnership?

NOTE:

The consent of each partner is necessary to sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of a limited partnership's property, with or without the goodwill, other than in the usual and regular course of the limited partnership's activities [Corp. Code § 15904.06(a) (ULPA '08)]. Under the CRLPA, unless the limited partnership agreement provides to the contrary, a transfer of all or a substantial part of the assets of the limited partnership must be authorized by the affirmative vote of a majority in interest of the limited partners [Corp. Code § 15636(f)].

5. If seller is general partnership, does recorded statement of partnership (signed by every partner) authorize specified partners to sign instruments on behalf of partnership?

6. If seller is unincorporated association [see Corp. Code § 18120]:

a. Has statement listing persons authorized to sign conveyances of association property been recorded in county where real property is located?

b. Has member of association recorded contradictory statement concerning that authority?

7. Is mutual assent to contract present [see § 23.13]?

c. Do parties agree on all material elements of transaction?

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.111

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.111 Tax Considerations

1. For purposes of federal and California state income taxes, will real property be considered [see § 23.26[1]]:

a. Noncapital asset, that is, real property held primarily for sale to customers in ordinary course of taxpayer's trade or business [I.R.C. § 1221; Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]?

b. Section 1231 asset, that is, real property that [I.R.C. § 1231(b); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]:
(1) Has been held by taxpayer for more than one year?

(2) Has been used in taxpayer's trade or business?

(3) Has not been held primarily for sale to customers in ordinary course of taxpayer's trade or business?

c. Capital asset, that is, real property that is not noncapital asset or Section 1231 asset [I.R.C. § 1221(a)(1), (2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]?

2. If property is seller's personal residence [see § 23.26[6]]:

a. Is transaction subject to rules allowing specified amount of gain from sale or exchange of principal residence to be excluded from income [see I.R.C. § 121; Rev. & Tax. Code § 17131; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 17152 (how California law differs from I.R.C. § 121)?]

b. Does seller have option of applying rollover provisions of former I.R.C. § 1034 because sale occurred before May 7, 1997 (or within two years after that date if there was binding contract in existence before that date)?

3. If at least one payment for property is to be received after close of taxable year in which disposition occurs [see § 23.27], does seller wish to use installment method of reporting income from sale [see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing]?

4. For purposes of depreciation recapture, when was property placed in service [see § 23.26[5]]?

5. How will purchase price be allocated among assets being sold?

NOTE:

For tax purposes, the purchase price of improved property must be allocated among the assets transferred to the buyer. The amount of the seller's gain or loss will be computed on an asset-by-asset basis, and the buyer will be treated as having purchased each asset separately [see Treas. Reg. § 1.61-6(a)]. The purchase price of unimproved property may also be allocated under certain circumstances, such as when subdivided lots are being sold. For further discussion, see § 23.28.

Since the allocation of the purchase price causes different tax consequences to the buyer and to the seller, they may disagree about the allocation even though they are in agreement as to the total amount of the purchase price. Thus the allocation of the purchase price may require extensive negotiations. For instance, recapture on depreciation previously taken by the seller on certain assets will be ordinary income to the seller at the time of the sale [I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250], and the seller will attempt to allocate as small a portion of the sales price to those assets as possible. However, the buyer will want as much of the purchase price as possible allocated to the depreciable property, because the buyer's subsequent depreciation on these assets depends on his or her basis in these assets. (The Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514] made this aspect of negotiation less critical, however. Because accelerated depreciation methods are no longer available, the importance to the buyer of allocating as much of the purchase price as possible to depreciable buildings, rather than to nondepreciable land, has been diminished [see § 23.26[5]].)

6. Will interest paid by buyer in connection with purchase be:

a. Paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to taxpayer's trade or business (fully deductible [see I.R.C. § 163(a), (h)(2)(A)])?

b. Paid or accrued on indebtedness that is secured by "qualified residence" of taxpayer [see I.R.C. § 163(h)(4)(A) ("qualified residence" defined)]?

NOTE:

For discussion of the definition of "qualified residence interest," which determines the extent to which this interest is deductible [see I.R.C. § 163(h)(3)(A)], see § 23.27[3].

c. Incurred in connection with "passive activities" [see I.R.C. § 469(c)(1), (2)]?

NOTE:

For these purposes, all rental activities and activities involving the conduct of a trade or business in which the taxpayer does not materially participate are passive activities [I.R.C.

§ 469(c)(1), (2)]. Deductions arising from these activities (including interest deductions) may only be taken against income attributable to the taxpayer's aggregate passive activities [I.R.C. § 469(a)(1), (d); see § 23.27[4]].

d. Paid or accrued on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry property held for investment?

NOTE:

Deductions for this investment interest may not exceed net investment income for the same taxable year [I.R.C. § 163(d)(1), (3); see § 23.27[5]].

7. If seller is "foreign person," is buyer required to withhold part of gross sale price [see I.R.C. § 1445; see also § 23.29]?

8. Is buyer required to withhold because transaction does not come under exemption [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18662(e); see also § 23.30]?

§ 23.113 Contingencies (Conditions)

1. What contingencies should be included in contract [see § 23.200[2], P 3.01 et seq.; § 23.201[2], P 3.01 et seq.; § 23.202[2], P 3.01 et seq.]?

a. Buyer's approval of preliminary title report.

NOTE:
The seller of real property must convey "good" or "marketable" title to the buyer [King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 589, 197 P.2d 321 ; see § 23.24]. The process of establishing the condition of title typically commences with the receipt of a preliminary title report by the buyer, who must approve or disapprove every exception listed in the report [see § 23.200[1][d][ii]].

b. Conveyance of marketable title to buyer.

c. Issuance of title insurance policy [see § 23.200[1][d][ii]].

d. Delivery of possession to buyer [see § 23.200[1][d][iii]]:

(1) On close of escrow.

(2) After close of escrow (with seller retaining possession for specified time) [see § 23.326 (temporary lease agreement)].

(3) Before close of escrow [see § 23.327 (interim occupancy agreement)].

NOTE:

Unless the sale contract provides otherwise, the risk of loss will shift from the seller to the buyer on the transfer of possession or legal title [see Civ. Code § 1662; see also § 23.251[1]].

e. Survey of property.

NOTE:

A survey is particularly important when the purchase price of unimproved property is determined by the size of the parcel [see § 23.201[1][e][i]].

f. Inspections or tests regarding physical condition of property, such as:

(1) Soil test, geological test, or other engineering test.

NOTE:

These tests are often used to help a developer determine whether the physical condition of the property is compatible with development plans [see § 23.201[1][e][ii]].

(2) Inspection by licensed contractor [see § 23.202[1][c][vi]].

(3) Roof inspection [see § 23.202[1][c][vii]].

(4) Structural pest-control (termite) inspection [see § 23.133].

NOTE:

Lenders often require a recent structural pest-control report ("termite report") and a certification of performance of any necessary corrective work, as a condition to the release of loan proceeds [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8519]. The buyer may wish to postpone performance of any corrective work until after the sale has closed, or may be willing to accept a reduction in the purchase price in lieu of the issuance before the close of escrow of a certification. If the parties agree to require a structural pest-control report and clearance, they should decide at the outset who will pay for any corrective work. For discussion, see § 23.320[1].

g. Issuance or granting of governmental approvals required by buyer, such as:

(1) Building permit [see § 23.201[1][e][v]].

(2) Variance [see § 23.201[1][e][iii]].

(3) Subdivision map approval [see § 23.201[1][e][iv]].

(4) Other permits, certificates, or licenses [see § 23.202[1][c][v]].

NOTE:

If the buyer's intended use requires a governmental approval, the buyer should make his or her obligation to perform contingent on the receipt of the necessary approval.

h. Suitability of property for buyer's intended use [see § 23.234].

i. Financing contingencies [see § 23.131].

j. If sale involves commercial structure containing multiple rental units:

(1) Buyer's approval of leases, maintenance or service contracts, and other agreements affecting property [see § 23.202[1][c][i]].

(2) Buyer's approval of seller's books and records [see § 23.202[1][c][iv]].

(3) Submission to buyer of tenant estoppel certificates [see §§ 23.202[1][c][ii], 23.322].

(4) Seller's assignment of leases or any other agreements to buyer [see § 23.202[1][c][iii]].

(5) Buyer's obtaining satisfactory leases from prospective tenants [see § 23.235].

k. Inventory of personal property to be included in sale [see § 23.202[1][c][viii]].

l. Bill of sale for personal property [see § 23.202[1][c][viii]].

m. Purchase or sale of other property by buyer [see §§ 23.230-23.232].

NOTE:
The buyer should insist on the inclusion of an appropriate contingency when the buyer's plans for the property require the purchase of multiple parcels that have different owners [see §§ 23.230, 23.231*] or when the buyer must sell other property to obtain the proceeds necessary to purchase the property covered by the sale contract [see § 23.232*].

n. Seller's purchase of other property [see § 23.233].

o. Seller's endorsement and transfer to buyer of:

(1) Membership in owners' association [see § 23.238].

(2) Shares in mutual water company [see § 23.237].

(3) Other documents evidencing transfer of membership or entitlement.

p. Execution of separate agreement pertaining to property, such as easement agreement or party wall agreement [see § 23.239].

q. Receipt of estimate of reasonable value by Department of Veterans Affairs [see § 23.223].

r. Receipt of appraisal by Federal Housing Administration [see § 23.224].

s. Other.

2. Regarding each contingency:

a. Who will benefit from contingency?

b. Who will determine whether contingency has been met [see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows ; see also § 23.16]?

(1) Parties (outside escrow).

(2) Escrow agent.

c. What is deadline for meeting contingency?

(1) Close of escrow.

(2) Specified date.

(3) Other.

d. What steps, if any, must be taken by party to indicate that contingency has been met (such as written notice of satisfaction of escrow conditions [see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows ; see also § 23.200[1][c]])?

e. What will be effect of failure of contingency?

(1) Automatic cancellation of contract.

(2) Cancellation on written notice.

(3) Waiver of contingency.

NOTE:
For an illustrative notice of waiver of a contingency, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

(4) Option or obligation of party to remedy failure to perform contingency.

(5) Option of party intended to benefit from contingency to select any of following:

(a) Termination of contract.

(b) Purchase property:
(i) With corresponding reduction in purchase price.

(ii) Without price reduction.

(c) Remove defect and purchase property with corresponding price reduction.

1. What costs or expenses of maintenance or use of property should be prorated [see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows]?

a. Real property taxes.

b. Special assessments.

c. Maintenance fees.

d. Owners' association dues.

e. Premiums for insurance policies to be transferred to buyer.

f. Utility bills.

g. Other.

2. Who will be obligated to pay other costs and expenses of sale and escrow?

a. Broker's commission.

b. Cost of preliminary report and title insurance policy.

c. Initial pest-control report.

d. Cost of corrective pest-control work [see § 23.133].

e. Fees for building and health code inspection report and costs of corrective work.

f. Documentary transfer tax and local transfer tax [see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording ; California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 132, Disposition , Pt. F (Matthew Bender)].

NOTE:
The transfer tax must be declared on the face of the deed or in a separate document submitted to the recorder along with the deed. If a separate document is used, it will not be recorded [Rev. & Tax. Code § 11932]; thus, the price paid for the property (the "total consideration," on which the tax is based) will not be disclosed in the public record. Either or both of the parties might prefer to have a separate document used for declaring the tax, and in that case, it would be appropriate for the contract to provide that the seller's escrow instructions will require use of a separate document.

g. Fee for reconveyance of existing deed of trust.

h. Recording fees.

i. Fees and charges for services of escrow agent.

3. Should any of those costs or expenses be prorated or paid by parties directly (outside escrow) [see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows]?

NOTE:

This chapter focuses on the initial steps in a real property sale transaction: the negotiation, drafting, and execution of the real property sale contract. Thus this procedural guide covers only the steps leading up to execution of the sale contract, and certain related steps such as optional recordation [see § 23.124*] and statutory disclosures [see § 23.125*]. Also covered are other related and subsequent procedures, such as the performance of structural pest-control work [see § 23.150*].

Once the sale contract is signed, the parties normally open an escrow as soon as possible. The opening of an escrow, drafting of escrow instructions, and procedures up to and including the close of escrow are covered in Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

§ 23.121 Approval of Transaction

1. If seller is a corporation:

NOTE:
If the transaction constitutes a conversion to another form of business entity, it is not subject to these provisions but rather to provisions that specifically govern conversions [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see Corp. Code § 1150 et seq. (conversions)].

a. If property represents all or substantially all of selling corporation's assets, have principal terms of sale [Corp. Code § 1001(a); see § 23.12[5]]:
(1) Approved by board [see Corp. Code § 151].

(2) Approved by outstanding shares [see Corp. Code § 152], unless transaction is in usual and regular course of seller's business.

b. Attach to sale contract, as exhibit, certificate [Corp. Code § 1002] stating that:

(1) Sale has been validly approved by board.

(2) Whether property described in contract is or is not substantially all of corporate assets and sale is or is not in usual and regular course of business of corporation.

(3) If property constitutes all or substantially all the corporate assets and transfer is not in usual course of business of corporation, whether transfer has been approved by outstanding shares of corporation pursuant to General Corporation Law, or approval is not required by General Corporation Law.

2. If property constitutes all or substantial part of assets of limited partnership, take following steps:

NOTE:
For discussion of ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15900 et seq.; see Corp. Code §§ 15912.04, 15912.06 (operative date and limited application of former limited partnership acts prior to January 1, 2010), see Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships .

a. Under ULPA '08, obtain consent of each partner to sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all of limited partnership's property, with or without good will, other than in usual and regular course of limited partnership's activities [Corp. Code § 15904.06(b)].

b. Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15636(f)(1)(b) (repealed January 1, 2010):

(1) Submit sale to vote of limited partners.

(2) Proceed with sale only if majority in interest of limited partners vote for it.

§ 23.122 Offer and Acceptance

[1] Purchase Agreement; Deposit Receipt

NOTE:

The purchase agreement, sometimes referred to generally as a "deposit receipt," is a type of sale contract that is frequently used in smaller real estate transactions, such as the sale of a single-family residence. It is generally a printed form prepared by a real estate organization [see, e.g., § 23.203[2] (California Association of Realtors (CAR) form of residential purchase agreement)] or commercial publisher. In [a]-[c], below, are set forth procedures that may be followed by an attorney in a transaction involving the use of a purchase agreement. In most cases, however, most or all of the following steps will be performed by the parties with the assistance of their real estate agents.

[a] Buyer's Offer

1. Assist buyer in completing purchase agreement.

a. Complete applicable provisions.

b. Provide for attachment and incorporation by reference of agreements related to possession [see § 23.203[1][c][iv]], such as:

(1) Residential lease agreement [see § 23.326].

(2) Interim occupancy agreement [see § 23.327].

c. Have parties initial clauses when necessary, such as:

(1) Liquidated-damages provision [see § 23.203[1][c][xiv]].

(2) Optional terms and contingencies that are to apply to transaction [see, e.g., § 23.203[2]].

d. If desired, modify provisions of purchase agreement [see § 23.203[1][b][iii]]:

(1) List modifications in paragraph designated for this purpose.

(2) Use rider, addendum, or other document that is attached to deposit receipt and incorporated by reference.

e. Avoid making changes on face of purchase agreement [see § 23.203[1][b][iii]].

f. Give special consideration to whether certain provisions in printed form should be modified.

(1) Risk of loss [see Civ. Code § 1662; see also § 23.203[1][f][i]].

(2) Disclosure of agency relationship [see Civ. Code § 2079.17; see also § 23.203[1][f][ii]].

(3) Effect of failure to meet contingencies of sale [see § 23.203[1][f][iii]].

(4) Installation of smoke detector in single-family dwelling [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8; see also § 23.203[1][c][vii]].

(5) Delivery of statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement to buyer of one-to-four-unit dwelling [see Civ. Code §§ 1102, 1102.3; see also § 23.203[1][c][ix]].

2. Obtain buyer's check for deposit, made payable to escrow agent.

3. Submit offer and deposit to seller.

4. Once parties agree to all terms, tender buyer's deposit and confirm that both parties have signed purchase agreement and all counteroffers [see [b], [c], below].

[b] Seller's Counteroffer

NOTE:
If the seller rejects the offer but wishes to make a counteroffer, the seller's attorney can assist in the following steps.

1. Complete counteroffer form [see § 23.204[1][c]].

a. Identify paragraphs of purchase agreement that are to be modified.

b. Set forth modifications.

c. Describe any additions desired by seller.

2. Sign form.

3. Insert reference to counteroffer form on purchase agreement and sign purchase agreement [see § 23.204[1][c]].

4. Specify deadline for buyer's acceptance of counteroffer.

NOTE:
The CAR counteroffer form [see § 23.204[2]] gives the seller the right to accept other offers unless and until the seller receives a copy of the counteroffer form containing the buyer's signature [see § 23.204[1][c][iii]].

5. Once parties agree to all terms, confirm that both parties have signed purchase agreement and counteroffer.

[c] Buyer's Counteroffer

NOTE:
It is theoretically possible for a transaction to involve several rounds of counteroffers. In practice, after the first counteroffer is submitted, the parties should have a good idea of what basic terms are acceptable to each party. If the basic terms are acceptable, any remaining details can be hammered out in informal negotiations before the terms are memorialized in a final counteroffer. This avoids the need for preparing numerous rounds of paperwork to resolve the fine points of a transaction.

1. Assist buyer in specifying proposed changes to counteroffer on counteroffer form.

2. Specify deadline for seller's acceptance of buyer's counteroffer.

3. Once parties agree to all terms, confirm that both parties have signed purchase agreement and all counteroffers.

[2] Custom-Drafted Form

1. If retained to draft contract, use complete contracts set forth in this chapter [see §§ 23.200-23.202] and drafting guide [see § 23.130 et seq.].

NOTE:
The form in § 23.200[2] may be used for a relatively simple transaction, such as the purchase of a single-family dwelling. The form in § 23.201[2] covers the sale of unimproved land to a developer. The form in § 23.202[2] is a contract for the sale of a structure containing multiple dwelling units.

2. If client is seller and receives contract prepared by another attorney, review contract to ensure that it is consistent with client's goals, otherwise acceptable to client, and legally sufficient.

NOTE:

For checklists of provisions that must or should be included in sale contracts, see § 23.130 et seq.

§ 23.123 Execution

1. Instruct seller and buyer (and their spouses, if necessary) to sign contract.

NOTE:

Under the California statute of frauds, a contract for the sale of real property must be subscribed by the parties to be charged or their agents [Civ. Code § 1624(a); see § 23.11[2]; see also Gov. Code § 27287 (execution is prerequisite to recordation)]. Both spouses (either personally or by duly authorized agent) must sign any instrument by which community real property is sold or otherwise conveyed [Fam. Code § 1102(a); see Fam. Code § 1100(c); see also § 23.12[2]].

The parties may sign the contract at the same time, or the buyer may sign it and treat it as an offer that does not become a contract until it is signed by the seller [see § 23.203[1][b]].

2. If seller is married and claims that property is his or her separate property, have seller's spouse sign quitclaim deed [see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording] or sign statement waiving right to sign sale contract [see §§ 23.12[2][b], 23.254].

3. If seller's agent has been authorized in writing by seller to sign as attorney-in-fact, have agent first subscribe seller's name, and then agent's own name as attorney-in-fact [see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording].

NOTE:

Under the statute of frauds [see § 23.11[2]], an agent cannot sign a sale contract on behalf of the seller without prior written authorization from the seller [see Civ. Code §§ 1091, 1624(a)]. In many cases, the agent will be an attorney-in-fact [see People ex rel. Dept. of Public Works v. Malone (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 531, 536-537, 42 Cal. Rptr. 888 ("attorney-in-fact" defined); see also Ch. 98, Powers of Attorney]. When executing an instrument that transfers an interest in real property, an attorney-in-fact must first subscribe the name of the principal, and then his or her own name as the attorney-in-fact [Civ. Code § 1095].

4. If seller is partnership, have sale contract executed by partners expressly authorized by statement of general partnership, if any, otherwise all partners.

NOTE:

This execution requirement is typically imposed on general partnerships by title insurers and is more stringent than those required by California law [see § 23.12[6]]. In the case of a limited partnership, all of the general partners should sign the contract [see § 23.12[7]].

5. If seller is unincorporated association, have sale contract executed by president (or other head) and secretary, recording secretary, or other comparable officer, or by persons specifically designated by resolution adopted pursuant to articles of association or bylaws [Corp. Code § 18115; see § 23.12[8]].

6. If seller is corporation, obtain signatures of [Corp. Code § 313; see § 23.12[5]]:

a. Chairman of board, president, or any vice-president.

b. Secretary, assistant secretary, chief financial officer, or assistant treasurer.

§ 23.124 Optional Recordation

NOTE:

Recording the contract or a memorandum of it protects the interest in the property of a good faith purchaser or mortgagee for value from any previous unrecorded conveyances and from any subsequent conveyances or actions affecting title [see Civ. Code § 1214].

1. If desired, prepare memorandum of contract for recording purposes [see § 23.321].

NOTE:

A recorded memorandum will provide constructive notice of the contents of the contract to subsequent buyers and mortgagees [see Buehler v. Oregon-Washington Plywood Corp. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 520, 529, 131 Cal. Rptr. 394, 551 P.2d 1226] while protecting the confidentiality of many of the terms of the contract [see § 23.321[1]].

2. Have memorandum of sale contract executed in same manner as contract [see § 23.123].

3. Arrange for acknowledgment of contract or memorandum by executing parties and for certification of acknowledgments by authorized officer [see Gov. Code § 27287].

NOTE:

For discussion of the current laws governing acknowledgments, including coverage of an assurance offered by Civ. Code § 1190 regarding the capacity of a corporate participant in a sale transaction, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

4. Have contract or memorandum recorded in county in which property is situated.

NOTE:

An instrument is deemed to be recorded when, after being duly acknowledged or proved and certified, it is deposited in the recorder's office, with the proper officer, for record [Civ. Code § 1170]. Instruments entitled to be recorded must be recorded by the county recorder of the county in which the subject real property is situated [Civ. Code § 1169].

§ 23.125 Disclosures

[1] Seller's Disclosures

1. If real property contains single-family dwelling, have seller provide buyer with smoke detector installation statement [see § 23.20[5]].

a. Include statement in deposit receipt or separate document [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b); see also § 23.135].

b. Deliver statement as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(c)].

NOTE:
The statement must indicate that the seller has complied with his or her statutory duty to install an operable smoke detector [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b)].

Although the installation and notice requirements do not apply to other types of structures, a similar installation requirement applies to other structures containing "dwelling units intended for human occupancy," whether or not the structures are about to be transferred [Health & Safety Code § 13113.7]. Sellers are not required to provide a notice of compliance with that installation requirement [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.7; see also Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits].

"Deliver" means delivery in person or by mail to the buyer, or to any person authorized to act for him or her in the transaction, or to additional transferees who have requested delivery from the seller in writing. Delivery to a transferee's spouse will be deemed delivery to the transferee, unless the contract states otherwise [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(c)].

2. If real property contains water heater, have seller provide buyer with certification that water heater has been braced, anchored, or strapped to resist falling or horizontal displacement from earthquake motion [Health & Safety Code § 19211; see § 23.20[6]].

NOTE:

This certification must be in writing and may be included in existing transaction documents, including, but not limited to, the sale contract or deposit receipt [see § 23.203[1][c][vii]*], statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement, local option real estate transfer disclosure statement, or Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [Health & Safety Code § 19211(b)]. For these purposes, "water heater" means any standard water heater with a capacity of not more than 120 gallons for which a pre-engineered strapping kit is readily available [Health & Safety Code § 19211(d)].

3. Unless statutory exception applies [see Civ. Code § 1102.2; see also § 23.300[1][b][ii]], have seller of any real property containing not more than four dwelling units take following steps [see Civ. Code § 1102(a); see also § 23.300]:

a. Complete real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6 (official form)].

b. Deliver form to buyer as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.3].

c. Indicate compliance with these requirements in deposit receipt or other document [see Civ. Code § 1102.3; § 23.135].

d. If required by local ordinance [Civ. Code § 1102.6a], complete and deliver additional local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see § 23.301].

e. If seller has actual knowledge of any former federal or state ordnance locations within neighborhood area, give written notice of that knowledge to buyer as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.15; see § 23.304].

f. Deliver disclosure notice concerning supplemental property tax bills to prospective purchaser [Civ. Code § 1102.6c(a); see § 23.300A].

4. If real property consists of separate interest in condominium project, community apartment project, planned development, or stock cooperative, have seller furnish buyer with specified documents [see Ch. 34, Condominiums] relating to development in general and particular separate interest [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11018.1, 11018.6; Civ. Code §§ 1133, 1134, 1368(a), (e)].

5. If real property consists of lot or parcel in subdivision, have seller furnish buyers with required disclosures [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11018(b), 11018.1; 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2795, 2795.1; see also Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation, § 30.100 et seq.].

NOTE:

These disclosures consist of a final public report covering the subdivision [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018*] and, if the seller wishes to take reservations before the receipt of the final public report, a preliminary public report [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2795, 2795.1*]. The seller must obtain acknowledgment of receipt of these documents from the buyer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1(a)*; 10

Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2795, 2795.1]. When taking reservations, the seller must also enter into a reservation agreement and an escrow agreement with the buyer [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2795, 2795.1].

6. Have seller disclose any other material facts [see Civ. Code §§ 1572(3), 1710(3); see also Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349, 353, 164 P.2d 8] , preferably in writing (such as sale contract) and before execution of sale contract.

7. If property is located within specified hazardous area [see Civ. Code § 1103; see also § 23.125] and is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., have seller (or seller's agent) deliver required natural hazard disclosure to buyer [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e)].

NOTE:

This disclosure must be made on the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form; or it may be made on the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement if the local statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warning set forth in the statutory disclosure form [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e)]. For further discussion and the statutory form, see § 23.302.

8. If property is not subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. and is located within very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51179] or wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards (that is, state responsibility area) [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136], have seller disclose this to buyer [Gov. Code § 51183.5(a); Pub. Res. Code § 4136(a); see §§ 23.125, 23.302[1]].

9. If property is not subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. and is located within designated special flood hazard area, area of potential flooding shown on inundation map, delineated earthquake fault zone, or designated seismic hazard zone, instruct seller to disclose this to buyer if seller is acting without agent [Gov. Code §§ 8589.3(a), 8589.4(a); Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9(a), 2694(a); see §§ 23.125, 23.302[1]].

10. If property consists of residential dwelling of conventional light-frame construction built before 1960 and containing one-to-four living units, have seller deliver copy of Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety and earthquake hazards disclosure statement containing information required by statute [see Gov. Code § 8897.2] to buyer as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a); see Gov. Code § 8897.1(b), (c) (delivery requirements and exemptions)].

11. If transaction involves precast concrete or reinforced masonry building or unreinforced masonry building that was built before 1975, and building has wood frame floors or roofs, have seller (or seller's agent) deliver Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147] to buyer as soon as practicable before sale [Gov. Code §§ 8875.6, 8893.2 (unreinforced masonry building; precast concrete or reinforced masonry building); see Gov. Code §§ 8893.5, 8875.95 (violation of this requirement will not invalidate transfer); see also § 23.20[4]].

NOTE:

The seller could consider optionally providing the buyer with the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety or Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety, as appropriate [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.8, 2079.9].

12. If sale will be consummated through use of escrow, but arrangements have not been made for issuing title insurance policy to buyer, have seller or real estate agent provide buyer with statutory notice (in separate document) indicating that it may be advisable for buyer to obtain such policy [Civ. Code § 1057.6; see § 23.309], and have buyer sign to acknowledge receipt.

13. If property consists of residential housing built before 1978 [see 24 C.F.R. pt. 35; 40 C.F.R. pt. 745], except housing for elderly, "0-bedroom dwellings," and housing sold at foreclosure [see 24 C.F.R. §§ 35.82(a), 35.86; 40 C.F.R. §§ 745.101(a), 745.103]:

a. Have seller deliver to buyer federally required disclosures concerning lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards [see § 23.311; see also § 23.312 (sale contract contingency language describing buyer's related right to inspect property)].

b. Have seller, buyer, and any agents sign and acknowledge disclosures.

14. If seller of residential real property knows that any release of illegal controlled substance has come to be located on or beneath real property [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see § 23.20[12] (definitions of "release" and "illegal controlled substance")]:

a. Give written notice advising of condition to buyer before sale of property by checking "yes" on appropriate question on Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6].

b. Attach copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as Department of Toxic Substances Control, county health department, or local environmental health officer.

NOTE:

A seller's knowledge of the condition is established by receipt of a notice as specified, or by actual knowledge of the condition from a source independent of the notice [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(2)]. A seller's delivery of this disclosure information is legally adequate for purposes of informing the prospective buyer of the condition; the seller is not required to provide any additional disclosure of the information [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(3)].

15. If real property is subject to disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., have seller make appropriate disclosures if property being transferred is subject to [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(a)]:

a. Continuing lien securing levy of special taxes pursuant to Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code § 53111 et seq.].

b. Fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued pursuant to Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500 et seq.], which concerns street improvements.

c. Disclosure requirement concerning contractual assessment as provided in Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24.

NOTE:

The seller must make a good faith effort to obtain and deliver to the transferee a disclosure notice concerning the special Mello-Roos tax provided in Gov. Code § 53340.2, and the assessment installment provided in Gov. Code § 53754 from each local agency that levies the special tax or that collects the assessment installments, and the disclosure notice concerning the contractual assessment as provided in Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24 [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(b)]. A seller may satisfy the disclosure notice obtained from a nongovernmental source that satisfies the requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(c), (d)(1); see Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(3) (provision does not change ability to make disclosures pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.4)]. See § 23.20[13] for additional discussion of these requirements and related definitions.

16. If local health officer has served order prohibiting use or occupancy of property after determining that property is polluted by hazardous chemical related to methamphetamine-laboratory activities [see Health & Safety Code § 25400.22(a)], have seller [Health & Safety Code § 25400.28(a)]:

a. Notify buyer in writing of pending order.

b. Provide buyer with copy of pending order.

c. Obtain buyer's acknowledgment, in writing, of receipt of copy of pending order.

NOTE:

Except as otherwise required in Civ. Code § 1102.3, the owner must take these steps unless the owner has received a notice from the local health officer that the property requires no further action [Health & Safety Code § 25400.28(a)]. The owner is subject to a civil penalty for noncompliance [Health & Safety Code § 25400.45(a)].

17. If property being transferred after 2007 is subject to private transfer fee, have transferor provide, at time transfer disclosure statement is provided pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6, additional disclosure statement concerning private transfer-fee requirement [Civ. Code § 1102.6e; see § 23.20[15]]:

[2] Real Estate Broker's Disclosures

1. If real estate broker licensed in California has written contract with seller to find or obtain buyer for residential real property containing one-to-four dwelling units, confirm that broker [Civ. Code § 2079(a)]:

a. Conducted reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of property.

b. Disclosed to buyers all facts revealed by investigation and materially affecting value or desirability of property.

NOTE:

These requirements apply to California-licensed brokers and brokers who act in cooperation with them to find and obtain buyers [Civ. Code § 2079(a)]. It is the duty of a licensed real estate broker or salesperson to comply with these requirements and any regulations imposing standards of professional conduct adopted under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080 with reference to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10176 and 10177 (relating to disciplinary action against real estate licensees) [Civ. Code § 2079(b)]. For further discussion, see § 23.22[1].

If the property is a unit in a planned development, condominium, or stock cooperative, the broker need only inspect the unit offered for sale, as long as the seller or broker provides the prospective buyer with certain subdivision documents as required by Civ. Code § 1368 [see Civ. Code § 2079.3; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums].

These disclosures may be made on the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see § 23.300[2]; see also § 23.22[1]] or in a separate document.

2. Confirm that licensed real estate broker, under whose license listing contract was signed or offer to purchase was obtained, duly revealed agency relationship to party other than broker's client [see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate

Brokers and Agents]:

a. Provided statutory "Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Relationship" form [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.14, 2079.16].

b. Disclosed nature of relationship as soon as practicable [see Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)].

c. Provided statutory form for confirmation of agency disclosure in sale contract or separately [see Civ. Code § 2079.14; see also § 23.135].

3. If property is located within specified hazardous area [see Civ. Code § 1103; see also § 23.115] and is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 23.125[1]], have seller's broker (or seller) deliver required natural hazard disclosure to prospective buyers [Civ. Code § 1103.2].

NOTE:
This disclosure must be made on the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form; or it may be made on the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see § 23.125[1]*] if the local statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warning set forth in the statutory disclosure form [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e)]. For further discussion and the statutory form, see § 23.302.

4. If property is not subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. and is located within designated special flood hazard area, area of potential flooding shown on inundation map, delineated earthquake fault zone, or designated seismic hazard zone, instruct broker to disclose this to buyer [Gov. Code §§ 8589.3(a), 8589.4(a); Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9(a), 2694(a); see § 23.115; see also § 23.302[1]].

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.130 Introductory Provisions

1. Begin contract with introductory paragraph or preamble setting forth [see §§ 23.200[2], 23.202[2]]:

a. Date of execution of contract.

b. Information concerning parties:
(1) Full names (spelled correctly, since deed will be prepared on basis of names in contract).

(2) Status and capacity, such as:
(a) California corporation.

(b) California limited partnership.

(c) Husband and wife.

(d) Single (or unmarried) man or woman.

c. Agreement of parties to sell and purchase real property.

NOTE:
A sale contract should not provide that the title is to be taken by the "buyer or the buyer's nominee" because the use of the term "nominee" can make the contract uncertain and therefore a nullity [see Rivadell, Inc. v. Razo (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 614, 625, 30 Cal. Rptr. 622] or preclude the intended buyer (the nominee) from obtaining specific performance of the contract [see Cisco v. Van Lew (1943)

60 Cal. App. 2d 575, 579-582, 141 P.2d 433] . Thus, if a transfer to a nominee is contemplated, the sale contract should permit the buyer to assign the contract to the nominee [see Civ. Code § 1458; Cisco v. Van Lew (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 575, 583-584, 141 P.2d 433] .

2. Provide legal description of real property [see §§ 23.200[2], 23.202[2]]:

a. Attach, and incorporate by reference, exhibit containing legal description [see § 23.14], such as copy of:

(1) Deed creating seller's title.

(2) Preliminary title report.

(3) Title insurance policy.

b. Incorporate legal description into introductory paragraph.

c. Include street address, if any.

NOTE:

A street address should be included, when possible, in any legal description. Although a street address alone may be sufficient to describe the property [see King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 586, 197 P.2d 321 ; see also Estate of Wolf (1932) 128 Cal. App. 305, 310, 17 P.2d 1052] , this practice should be avoided, particularly when the address does not cover the entire property to be conveyed [see Brudvig v. Renner (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 522, 524, 342 P.2d 276 ; see also Finn v. Goldstein (1927) 201 Cal. 605, 608, 258 P. 85] .

d. Omit any reference to acreage.

NOTE:

Descriptions containing a statement of acreage may present problems because an acre can be any shape. For example, a reference to "the next contiguous 30 acres" was inadequate, and the option in which it was contained was unenforceable because an acre can take any shape, and there was no reference to any other boundary [Ganiats Construction, Inc. v. Hesse (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 377, 384, 4 Cal. Rptr. 706] .

e. Avoid description that refers to unrecorded map or instrument.

NOTE:

Although a map or other document referred to in a description [see § 23.14[4]] need not be of record in order to create a legally valid description [see Donnelly v. Tregaskis (1908) 154 Cal. 261, 263-264, 97 P. 421] , the description should not refer to unrecorded instruments because (1) if a title dispute develops, and it becomes necessary to prove in court the exact parcel described, the unrecorded instrument may be unavailable, and (2) reference to an unrecorded instrument will make the title uninsurable and may not provide constructive notice to subsequent buyers or encumbrancers.

§ 23.131 Purchase Price and Terms of Financing

1. Include purchase price provision [see § 23.15] that either:

    a. States total purchase price [see § 23.200[2], P 1.01; § 23.202[2], P 1.01; see also § 23.200[1][b]].

    b. Sets forth formula for determining purchase price [see § 23.201[2], P 1.01; see also § 23.201[1][b]].

2. If desired, allocate total purchase price among [see § 23.202[2], P 1.01; see also § 23.28]:

    a. Land.

    b. Improvements.

    c. Any personal property included in sale.

3. For each deposit, specify [see § 23.200[2], P 1.01; § 23.201[2], P 1.02; § 23.202[2], P 1.02]:

    a. Amount.

    b. Time of payment.

    c. Method of payment, for example, certified or cashier's check.

NOTE:
Virtually every real property sale contract calls for the payment of a deposit on execution of the contract. The contract may also require the buyer to pay an additional deposit at a later date. If the deposit on residential property is to be made in two or more payments, a separate liquidated-damages provision should be inserted for each payment [Civ. Code § 1678; see § 23.18[2]].

4. State amount payable on close of escrow, such as:

a. Balance payable in cash or by check [see § 23.200[2], P 1.01; see also § 23.200[1][b]].

b. Specified amount (less than balance) payable in cash or by check [see § 23.201[2], P 1.02].

5. In the case of seller financing:

a. Include following information regarding promissory note:

(1) What form it is to take (for example, attached exhibit).

(2) Principal amount.

(3) Amount of periodic payment and mode of payment (for example, monthly, quarterly, semiannually, or annually).

(4) Rate of interest.

(5) Whether interest will be:
(a) Included in periodic payment [see § 23.201[2], P 1.02; see also § 23.201[1][b]]; or

(b) In addition to that payment [see § 23.202[2], P 1.02; see also § 23.202[1][b][ii]].

NOTE:
If the note will call for "interest-only" payments with a balloon payment of principal at the end of a specified period (such as five or ten years), the terms should be specified in the sale contract.

(6) Amounts and due dates of any balloon payments.

(7) Whether sale is contingent on buyer's ability to obtain loan within designated period [see § 23.222].

(8) Date of commencement of payments.

b. Concerning deed of trust:

(1) Specify form it is to take (for example, attached exhibit).

(2) State whether it will be first deed of trust.

(3) If appropriate, add subordination provisions [see § 23.201[1][c]].

(4) If desired, include partial release provisions [see § 23.201[1][d]].

6. State any other method for payment of balance of purchase price, for example:

a. Buyer's use of straight note, under which entire principal, with or without interest, is paid in one lump sum [see § 23.220].

b. Buyer's assumption of existing encumbrance [see § 23.221].

c. Buyer's agreement to take subject to existing encumbrance [see § 23.221].

d. Issuance to buyer, on specified terms, of any of following loans:

(1) Purchase money loan [see § 23.222].

(2) Construction and permanent loans [see § 23.201[2], P 3.02; see also § 23.201[1][e][vi]].

§ 23.133 Contingencies (Conditions)

1. Set forth contingencies [see § 23.113].

2. For each contingency, specify [see § 23.200[1][d][i]]:

a. Precise act required to meet contingency, such as:
(1) Issuance of permit by appropriate governmental agency.

(2) Approval by one party of instrument provided by other party during escrow.

b. Party for whose benefit contingency was inserted.

c. Time within which contingency must be met or waived.

d. Requirements governing benefited party's acceptance or rejection of performance meeting contingency [see § 23.16].

e. Party who will be responsible for any related costs.

3. Describe consequences if contingency is not met [see §§ 23.113, 23.200[1][d][iv]].

NOTE:
Real estate brokers and attorneys may draw a distinction between what they call passive contingency removal--meaning that failure to meet a contingency automatically cancels the contract--and active contingency removal. Since both parties, presumably, want the contract to be performed, contingencies generally should require active removal. In other words, if a contingency is not met, the failure must be communicated to the other party (or objection is waived otherwise); then if the failure is curable within a reasonable time, the responsible party must have an opportunity to cure it; and the contract is not canceled unless the failure is uncurable within a reasonable time, or efforts to cure it are ineffectual.

PRACTICE TIP:

Make Contingency Removals Active or Self-Executing in Nature. This commentator cannot underscore enough what is just said in the foregoing NOTE. Real estate transactional attorneys should make sure most contingencies are removed actively, namely, communication to escrow that the transaction is being canceled affirmatively. The only exception that should apply is in the case of conditions like financing contingencies. If the buyer cannot get loan approval by close of escrow, the deal terminates automatically assuming the buyer in good faith could not get loan approval. With the exception of a few self-executing contingencies well known to real estate professionals, most other contingencies should require active communication of disapproval by buyer (plus a specified cure opportunity). By William M. Hensley.

4. If sale is contingent on receipt of structural pest-control certification (popularly known as "termite clearance") [see § 23.202[2], P 3.03; § 23.320[1][b]]:

a. Provide for performance of pest-control work in sale contract [see § 23.202[1][d]] or separately.

b. Specify whether parties are to order new report or rely on existing report [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 8641, 8516, 8516.5; Civ. Code § 1099(a)].

c. Require buyer to approve report within specified period.

d. Authorize performance of corrective work necessary to obtain certification [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 8516, 8519].

NOTE:

When a registered pest-control company completes work under a contract, it must prepare a "notice of work completed and not completed" on a form prescribed by the Structural Pest Control Board. The notice must include a statement of the cost of the completed work and the estimated cost of work not completed. The company must furnish a copy of the notice to the owner of the property or the owner's agent within 10 working days after completing the work. The address of each property inspected on which work was completed must be reported on a form prescribed by the board and must be filed with the board no later than 10 working days after the work is completed. Every property on which work is completed must be assessed a filing fee pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 8674 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8518]. The company must retain all original notices of work completed and work not completed, and activity forms, for three years. Notices of work completed and not completed must be made available for inspection and reproduction by the executive officer of the board or a duly authorized representative during business hours. Original notices of work completed or not completed, or copies of these, must be submitted to the board on request within two business days [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8518]. As soon as practicable before transfer of title, the seller must provide the buyer with any work completion notice or certification received by the seller before the transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1099(b); see Civ. Code § 1099(c) (delivery requirements)].

e. State that cost of corrective work, up to amount specified in report, is to be [see § 23.202[2], P 3.03]:

(1) Borne solely by one party.

(2) Split between parties.

(3) Borne by one party up to specified limit, with other party to pay balance.

(4) Apportioned in some other manner.

f. If report has not yet been obtained, consider limiting maximum potential liability for repair cost to certain sum [see § 23.202[2], P 3.03].

g. Provide for handling of additional costs [see § 23.202[2], P 3.03].

b. Pending litigation [see § 23.200[1][e][iv]].

c. Violations of applicable laws.

d. Condition of property [see § 23.200[1][e][vi]].

e. Defaults under existing contracts [see § 23.202[1][d][v]].

§ 23.135 Disclosures

1. If seller of single-family dwelling has already met statutory obligation to install smoke detector [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b)], provide notice of installation [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b); see § 23.125[1]] in contract [see § 23.203[1][c][vii]] or addendum to it or separately [see § 23.305].

2. If seller has complied with obligation to have water heater braced, anchored, or strapped to resist falling or horizontal displacement due to earthquake motion, provide written certification of this compliance in contract [see § 23.203[1][c][vii]] or separately [Health & Safety Code § 19211(b)].

NOTE:

The written certification may be included in existing transactional documents, including (but not limited to) the sale contract or deposit receipt, statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement, local option real estate transfer disclosure statement, Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety, or other document [Health & Safety Code § 19211(b)]. For these purposes, "water heater" means any standard water heater with a capacity of not more than 120 gallons for which a pre-engineered strapping kit is readily available [Health & Safety Code § 19211(d)].

3. If seller of property containing one to four dwelling units has already delivered statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement to buyer [*see Civ. NOTE:

Any city or county may require that a second disclosure form be used in conjunction with the real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; see also § 23.301]. If the sale contract or local ordinance requires the seller to provide this second statement within a specified number of days [see § 23.236[1]], compliance with that requirement should be mentioned in the notice of delivery [see § 23.303[1]].

Similarly, if the property is situated within a hazardous area [see §§ 23.115, 23.125[1]], the parties may wish to include a notice of the delivery of the required disclosure [see § 23.303[1]].

4. If broker is involved in transaction and has disclosed nature of agency relationship with seller or buyer, insert confirmation of that disclosure in sale contract unless confirmation is provided in separate writing [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b); see § 23.125[2]].

5. If sale involves residential real property in foreclosure that is subject to home equity sale contract law, add statutory notices [see Civ. Code §§ 1695.3, 1695.5; see also § 23.137].

§ 23.137 Special Requirements for Home Equity Contracts

NOTE:

Special statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.] apply to certain contracts for the sale of owner-occupied residential property consisting of one-to-four residential units that is in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.1(b)]. Known as "home equity sale contracts," these essentially include most contracts under which the property is sold outside the normal foreclosure procedure [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(a), (e); see also §§ 23.11[3]].

Any provision of a home equity sale contract that attempts or purports to limit the liability of the equity buyer for damages resulting from the statements or acts of the equity buyer's representative will be void and will, at the option of the equity seller, render the contract void. Further, any provision of the contract that attempts or purports to require arbitration of any dispute arising under the laws governing home equity sale contracts will be void at the option of the equity seller, but only if grounds exist for the revocation of the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.16(a)]. For further discussion, see § 23.308[1].

1. Prepare contract in 10-point boldfaced type (or equivalent) using language principally used by equity buyer and equity seller to negotiate sale [Civ. Code § 1695.2].

2. Include following information regarding equity buyer [Civ. Code § 1695.3(a)]:

a. Name.

b. Business address.

c. Telephone number.

3. State address of residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.3(b)].

4. State total consideration to be given by equity buyer in connection with or incident to sale [Civ. Code § 1695.3(c)].

5. Provide complete description of terms of payment or other consideration, including any services that equity buyer represents he or she will perform for equity seller before or after sale [Civ. Code § 1695.3(d)].

6. Specify time at which possession is to be transferred to equity buyer [Civ. Code § 1695.3(e)].

7. Include terms of any rental agreement [Civ. Code § 1695.3(f)].

8. Add statutory notices regarding equity seller's rights to [see § 23.211]:

a. Refrain from signing conveyance instruments [see Civ. Code § 1695.3(h)].

b. Cancel contract [see Civ. Code §§ 1695.3(g), 1695.5(a)].

9. Complete statutory notice of cancellation [see Civ. Code § 1695.5(b); see also § 23.307] and attach two easily detachable copies of notice to contract [Civ. Code § 1695.5(b)].

10. Have equity seller and equity buyer sign and date contract [Civ. Code § 1695.2].

NOTE:

The contract must be fully completed, signed, and dated by the equity seller and equity buyer before the execution of any instrument of conveyance of the residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.2].

§ 23.138 Special Requirements for Newly Constructed Residences Sold On or After January 1, 2003

NOTE:

Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")] imposes obligations and responsibilities on a builder, developer, or original seller of new residential units sold on or after January 1, 2003. These obligations and responsibilities should be reflected in the sales agreement. For coverage of this legislation, see § 23.20A. For sample form provisions, see §§ 23.200[2], 23.205.

1. Include minimum one-year express written limited warranty covering fit and finish of following building components [see Civ. Code § 900; see also § 23.20A[4]]:

a. Cabinets.

b. Mirrors.

c. Flooring.

d. Interior and exterior walls.

e. Countertops.

f. Paint finishes.

g. Trim.

2. If applicable, disclose that seller is electing to offer enhanced protection agreement in lieu of being bound by statutory construction standards, and incorporate seller's enhanced agreement into sales contract [see Civ. Code §§ 901-906; see also § 23.20A[5]].

NOTE:
If an enhanced protection agreement is in place, the statutory construction standards no longer apply other than to set forth minimum provisions by which to judge the enforceability of the particular provisions of the enhanced protection agreement [Civ. Code § 902].

3. Provide that buyer is obligated to follow all reasonable maintenance obligations and schedules communicated to him or her in writing by the seller and product manufacturers, as well as commonly accepted maintenance practices [see Civ. Code § 907; see also § 23.20A[6]].

NOTE:
The relevant maintenance standards and schedules should be included in the closing documents and incorporated by reference in the sales agreement itself.

4. Include provision indicating whether pre-litigation non-adversarial procedure parties must use in attempting to resolve construction defect disputes is either:

a. That prescribed by Civ. Code § 895 et seq. (Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code) [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938; see also § 23.20A[9]]; or

b. Alternative nonadversarial contractual procedure developed by seller [see Civ. Code § 914(a)].

NOTE:
If the seller elects to use its own alternative nonadversarial procedure in lieu of the statutory procedure, the election is binding regardless of whether the builder's alternative procedure is successful in resolving the ultimate dispute or ultimately deemed unenforceable [Civ. Code § 914(a)].

5. If seller elects to use its own nonadversarial contract procedure to attempt pre-litigation resolution of construction defects, incorporate in sales agreement provisions setting forth that procedure.

6. Include instruction to original buyer to provide to any subsequent buyer any documents related to construction defects legislation that have been provided in conjunction with original sale [see Civ. Code § 912(h)].

§ 23.150 Arranging for Pest-Control Work

1. If appropriate, order certified copy of any structural pest-control inspection reports and work completion notices on property filed with Structural Pest Control Board during preceding two years [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 8516, 8518].

2. If there is no recent report on property, have responsible party (who will pay for work) order structural pest-control report.

NOTE:

If the latest report was made more than one year before execution of the sale contract, it is probably a good idea to order a new report in any case. Lenders may have even more stringent requirements. Some, for example, will require a new report if the last one is more than six months old.

With regard to work and reports concerning wood destroying pests or organisms [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8516(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8519], a written inspection report must be prepared on a form approved by the Structural Pest Control Board and delivered to the person requesting the inspection or an agent within 10 business days after the inspection. The report must be delivered before work is commenced on any property. Reports must be made available for inspection and reproduction to the executive officer of the board or a representative during business hours. Original inspection reports or copies of reports must be submitted to the board on request within two business days [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8516(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8519].

3. Have parties order and pay for corrective work in manner specified in sale contract or separate structural pest-control certification agreement [see § 23.133].

4. If pest-control operator cannot perform necessary corrective work and prepare certification before date specified in sale contract for close of escrow, have parties extend escrow or authorize escrow agent to retain funds in impound account and pay operator after work is completed.

§ 23.151 Actions Involving Home Equity Sales Contracts

NOTE:
For the definition of "home equity sale contract" and further discussion, see §§ 23.11[3], 23.137, and 23.211[1][b].

1. Notify client of equity seller's right to cancel contract until earlier of [Civ. Code § 1695.4(a)]:

a. Midnight of fifth business day following day on which seller signed contract that complies with requirements of provisions governing home equity sale contracts [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.].

b. Eight o'clock a.m. on day scheduled for sale of property pursuant to power of sale conferred in deed of trust.

2. Inform client of right to bring action for recovery of damages or other equitable relief within four years after equity buyer takes any of following actions in violation of home equity sale contract laws [Civ. Code §§ 1695.6, 1695.7; see § 23.211[1][g]]:

a. Accepting or inducing equity seller's execution of any instrument of conveyance of any interest in residence in foreclosure.

b. Recording any document signed by equity seller.

c. Actually or purporting to transfer or encumber any interest in residence in foreclosure to any third party [see Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(3)].

d. Paying equity seller any consideration.

e. Making untrue or misleading statements regarding transaction [see Civ. Code § 1695.6(d)].

f. Having encumbrances placed on, or granting interests in, property that is purportedly held by equity buyer and subject to option to repurchase held by equity seller.

3. To rescind, have seller provide notice of cancellation to equity buyer (at address specified in contract) by either personally delivering written notice of cancellation or sending telegram indicating cancellation [Civ. Code § 1695.4(b)].

NOTE:
Within 10 days following receipt of a notice of cancellation, the equity buyer must return without condition any original contract and any other documents signed by the equity seller [Civ. Code § 1695.6(c); see Civ. Code § 1695.7 (action for damages for violation of Civ. Code § 1695.6)].

4. If client is equity seller and any person has taken "unconscionable advantage" of client, notify client of right to:

a. Rescind contract by taking following actions within two years of date of recordation of conveyance of property [Civ. Code § 1695.14]:
(1) Give written notice [see § 23.324] to equity buyer and successor in interest, if successor in interest is not good faith purchaser or encumbrancer for value.

(2) Record notice with county recorder of county in which property is located.

(3) Restore everything of value received from equity buyer under contract, or offer to restore everything on condition that seller does likewise [see Civ. Code §§ 1691, 1695.14(b); see also § 23.324[1][c]].

b. Bring action for recovery of damages or other equitable relief within four years after date of alleged violation [Civ. Code § 1695.7; see § 23.211[1][g]].

5. If equity buyer and successor in interest do not, within 20 days of delivery of notice of rescission, reconvey title to property free and clear of encumbrances created subsequent to rescinded transaction, notify seller of his or her right to bring action to enforce rescission and for cancellation of deed [Civ. Code § 1695.14(a), (b)].

§ 23.152 Obtaining Title Insurance

NOTE:

In any contract for the sale of real property, the law implies a requirement that the seller convey a "good" or "marketable" title to the buyer [King v. Stanley (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 584, 589, 197 P.2d 321] . Marketable title is generally established through the use of title insurance. For discussion of title insurance, see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance .

1. Obtain and analyze preliminary report or commitment showing condition of title.

2. If desired, clear or make alternative arrangements for handling of title defects listed in preliminary report or commitment.

3. Order these:

a. Title insurance policy.

b. Any appropriate indorsements, such as:
(1) Easement indorsement.

(2) Single family homeowner's protection indorsement.

(3) Condominium owners protection indorsement.

c. If necessary, special-purpose policies and reports, such as:

(1) Litigation guarantee (may be used to disclose necessary defendants in action to remove a cloud on title).

(2) Subdivision guarantee (will show that all persons having any record title interest in real property that is being subdivided have signed and acknowledged consent certificate [see Gov. Code § 66436]).

§ 23.153 Reporting Change of Ownership

NOTE:

The following requirements apply after any change of ownership of real property (or of a manufactured home) that is subject to local property taxation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(a)]. A change of ownership in this context is a transfer of a present interest in the property, including the beneficial use of the property, the value of which is substantially equal to the value of the fee interest [Rev. & Tax. Code § 60; see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 61, 62, 67]. Although owners of tax-exempt real property are exempt from these requirements [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(a)], they must still report conveyances of the right to use the property, under certain circumstances [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.5].

1. If transaction will be closed through escrow, determine whether and to what extent escrow agent will assist buyer in meeting change-of-ownership reporting requirements [see § 23.306[1][a]].

2. Complete preliminary change-of-ownership report (provided by county assessor or recorder) and file it with county recorder at time of recordation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3; see § 23.306].

NOTE:

The preliminary change-of-ownership report must be signed by the transferee, certifying that the information provided on the form is, to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, true, correct, and complete. The form must not be signed by an agent acting for a transferee [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(a)]. Failure to file the preliminary report with the county recorder may result in an additional recording fee [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(b)]. A failure to tender the additional fee may delay or preclude the recordation of the document evidencing the change of ownership [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(c)].

Certain persons and transactions are exempt from the preliminary change-of-ownership reporting requirement and from the payment of the additional recording fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(e), (f); see also § 23.306[1][b][ii]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Expect a Reassessment Upon a New Property Purchase. Hate to say it, but practicalities often speak louder than all the treatises one could write. More often than not, a real estate property transfer between existing owners (even in a partition action) triggers a reassessment of property valuation by the county assessor's office. If such an event occurs, this commentator has found that it is worthwhile to appeal, especially in connection with residential property reassessments. As the appeal draws near to an administrative hearing, an official from the assessor's office usually will call and try to negotiate a compromise on the valuation issue. Generally, a settlement is reached informally at this pre-adjudication stage--and all over the telephone at a fairly economical price. By William M. Hensley.

§ 23.154 Extending Recorded Contract

1. If contract was recorded, consider recording extension of contract before five years after date for conveyance of title provided in contract or, if no such date is provided, five years after last date provided in contract for meeting contingencies in contract [Civ. Code § 886.030(a)].

NOTE:

An unperformed recorded contract for the sale of real property [see Civ. Code § 886.010(a), (b)] will expire of record unless the expiration date is waived or extended by an instrument that is recorded before that date [Civ. Code § 886.030]. A contract that has expired of record has no effect and does not constitute an encumbrance or cloud on the title to the real property as against a person other than a party to the contract [Civ. Code § 886.040]. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser of Real Property, § 569.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

2. Following recordation of extension, notify buyer that contract will expire of record unless buyer performs contract within five years after date for conveyance of title provided in extension or, if no such date is provided, five years after last date provided in extension for meeting contingencies in contract [Civ. Code § 886.030(b)].

§ 23.200 Contract of Sale of Real Property--General Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a contract for sale of real property and may be used in relatively simple real estate transactions, such as the sale of a single-family residential dwelling. It provides for the opening of an escrow, a deposit, and payment of the balance of the purchase price on close of escrow. The buyer is to receive a preliminary title report and a standard form title insurance policy. Contingencies set forth requirements governing the status of the seller's title and the delivery of possession. There is a series of seller warranties and a liquidated damages provision.

The form includes alternative provisions that are appropriate for compliance with Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")], which imposes obligations and responsibilities on a builder, developer, or original seller of new residential units sold on or after January 1, 2003 [see [l], below; see also § 23.20A].

For a standardized purchase agreement that is also suitable for basic transactions, see § 23.203.

The form in § 23.201[2] may be used for the sale of unimproved real property to a developer. The form in § 23.202[2] may be used for the sale of multi-unit rental property.

[b] Payment of Purchase Price

In addition to establishing the purchase price, the contract must adequately describe the terms and manner of payment [Finn v. Goldstein (1927) 201 Cal. 605, 607, 258 P. 85 ; Dennis v. Overholtzer (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 766, 774, 3 Cal. Rptr. 193 , disapproved on other grounds, Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 206, 221, 32 Cal. Rptr. 415, 384 P.2d 7] . For further discussion, see § 23.15.

If the buyer plans to obtain some or all of the funds due at closing from a third-party lender, counsel should add the form in § 23.222[2] (purchase money loan contingency) to the miscellaneous contingencies. For discussion of alternative payment and financing provisions, see § 23.201[1][b].

[c] Escrow

[i] Relationship Between Contract and Escrow Instructions

Most real property sale contracts provide for the use of an escrow. Escrow instructions [see § 23.23[1]] define the obligations of the escrow agent [see Axley v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1978) 88 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-9, 151 Cal. Rptr. 570 ; see also Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows].

An escrow is a mechanism for effecting concurrent performance of the obligations of the parties to the underlying real property sale contract. This is accomplished by having the parties deposit the instructions, funds, documents, and other necessary items with a neutral third party, known as the escrow agent (or escrow holder), who serves as a mutual agent. The escrow agent oversees and monitors the performance of the applicable terms and contingencies and, if they are fully performed, takes the steps necessary to complete the transfer of title to the buyer and delivers the consideration to the seller. Ordinarily, the sale contract will specify the particular person or entity who is to serve as the escrow agent. However, the contract may provide for the subsequent selection of the agent by a specified party or a lender or another third party.

Because escrow instructions are drafted after the execution of the sale contract, the drafter of the instructions can avoid inconsistencies between the two documents by referring to the contract during the drafting process. Overlapping (and therefore potentially conflicting) provisions should be avoided. The form in [2], below, reflects the different functions of the two documents and avoids inconsistencies by containing general provisions that do not set forth the specific ways in which the escrow agent is to perform its functions.

[ii] Opening of Escrow

Ordinarily, the sale contract will specify the person or entity that is to serve as the escrow agent. However, the contract may provide for the subsequent selection of the holder by a particular party, lender, or other third party. The provision for opening of escrow also requires the deposit of escrow instructions (joint or separate) [see § 23.23[1]] and other necessary documents with the escrow agent.

[iii] Prorations

Real property sale contracts usually provide for the proration of property taxes, maintenance fees, and similar expenses relating to the property and paid or assumed by one of the parties for the period during which the ownership of the property changes hands. Proration is essentially a method of apportioning these expenses to each party. Prorations are usually computed on a daily basis (based on a 30-day month and 360-day year) and then divided between the parties as of the closing date. If the sale involves income-producing property, rents and other income are also prorated. Although the contract should authorize prorations, the specific procedures should be performed during escrow and described in the escrow instructions.

[iv] Costs and Expenses

When the sale contract obligates the seller to deliver good and marketable title subject to specified liens and encumbrances, the seller should pay the costs of removing all other liens and encumbrances. Responsibility for the payment of escrow fees and charges and other costs of completing the sale should be negotiated and then fixed in the sale contract. Since the escrow agent will usually make the actual payments, specific instructions should be inserted in the escrow instructions.

[v] Brokers' Commissions

A sale contract should provide for the payment of any brokers' commissions due on the sale. In most cases, it will simply state the total commission and identify the brokers entitled to it. Additional terms, such as the circumstances under which the commission will be earned, due, and payable, should be set forth in the listing contract between the broker and the seller [see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4) (written listing contract is required by statute of frauds)]. The commission provision in the sale contract must be consistent with the listing contract.

The seller usually pays the entire commission due to all brokers involved in the transaction, including any broker retained by the buyer. The total amount may be a flat sum but is commonly expressed as a percentage (typically 5-to-7 percent) of the purchase price [see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents (different methods of compensation)].

If more than one broker will share the commission, the right of any broker who has not entered into a listing contract with the seller to receive a portion of the commission paid by the seller should be specified in the sale contract. This practice is advisable because agreements between brokers to split commissions are rarely in writing [see Goossen v. Adair (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 810, 819, 8 Cal. Rptr. 855 (upholding enforceability of oral contract for division of commission between brokers); California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 62, Recovery of Brokers' Commissions , Pt. F (Matthew Bender)], and buyers usually do not enter into written contracts with their brokers or usually wait until after the execution of the sale contract to do so.

[d] Contingencies (Conditions)

[i] Overview

Conditions, known in the real estate industry as contingencies, in a real property sale contract usually benefit the buyer [see § 23.16]. The contract may contain any contingencies appropriate for the transaction; for discussion of various contingencies, see [ii] and [iii], below, and §§ 23.201[1][e] and 23.202[1][c] and [d], as well as § 23.203[1][c] (provisions in the usual form of purchase agreement).

To reflect the intention of the parties fully and clearly, for each contingency the contract should specify the following:

- The precise act required to meet the contingency (for example, issuance of permits by the appropriate governmental agency, or approval by one party of an instrument, such as an existing lease, provided by the other party during escrow);
- The party for whose benefit the contingency was inserted;
- The time within which the contingency must be met or waived;
- Requirements governing the benefited party's acceptance or rejection of performance to meet the contingency [see § 23.16];
- The party who will be responsible for any related costs; and
- Any rights (including waiver) and obligations of the parties following failure to meet the contingency [see [iv], below].

[ii] Review of Preliminary Title Report and Conveyance of Marketable Title

The contract would normally provide that the buyer must have the opportunity to review a preliminary title report and to approve or disapprove of every exception listed in it. If the buyer disapproves of an exception, and the exception is not eliminated, the contract may be terminated.

The buyer's right to receive marketable title [see § 23.24] is usually embodied in a contingency, that evidence of marketable title shall be supplied by a standard form title insurance policy showing title vested in the buyer, subject to any specified title exceptions and any exceptions subsequently approved in writing by the buyer. A standard policy affords protection against title exceptions that appear from the public records, not against off-record exceptions that might be detected by inspecting the property or inquiring of those in possession [see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance]. The buyer's attorney should protect the buyer from any off-record exceptions. This can be accomplished in several ways. For example, the contract may call for the identification of any exceptions "known to Seller" and thus would extend to known off-record exceptions. Further, to protect against off-record exceptions not known to the seller, the buyer could obtain an extended coverage policy or commission a survey of the property and condition his or her obligation to perform on the approval of any exceptions revealed. Finally, the buyer may ask the seller to warrant the status of the seller's title [see [e][iii], below].

[iii] Delivery of Possession

It is common for a sale contract to provide that possession is to pass on close of escrow, free and clear of all uses and occupancies other than those approved in writing by the buyer. Alternatively, the parties may wish to provide for the transfer of possession before or after the close of escrow. Although the terms of any such arrangement may be specified in the sale contract, it is preferable to cover them in a separate agreement [see §§ 23.326[2] (temporary lease agreement), 23.327[2] (interim occupancy agreement)] and to make the execution of the separate agreement a contingency in the sale contract.

[iv] Contingency Not Met

The contract should specify the consequences in the event that a contingency is not met: for example, if a contingency is not met, the buyer may terminate the contract and receive a full refund without waiving any other rights the buyer may have against the seller for the breach (if any). The seller may be empowered to elect to remedy any failure to meet certain specified contingencies; and if the seller does not do so, the buyer may terminate the contract or buy the property with no reduction in price. For an alternative provision requiring the seller to attempt to remedy specified failures and providing the buyer with different options in the event the failure is not remedied, see § 23.201[2].

Before providing the seller with the option of remedying the failure to meet a specific contingency, counsel should confirm that the remedial measures specified do not conflict with the terms of the particular contingency as set forth in the contract. Although the failure provision may apply "notwithstanding any provision of this contract to the contrary," conflicting provisions may confuse the parties and result in inadvertent breaches.

Some of the contingencies contained in other forms in this chapter provide that they may be waived by the buyer [see, e.g., § 23.201[2]]. For discussion of waiver, see § 23.201[1][e][vii].

[e] Warranties

[i] Definition

The contract should contain some basic warranties, which are statements that specified facts pertaining to the property or the sale transaction do or will exist [see § 23.17]. For additional warranty provisions and discussion, see § 23.202.

[ii] Survival of Delivery of Deed

A real property sale contract should provide that the warranties set forth in the contract will survive delivery of the deed. This will permit the injured party to bring an action if a warranty is breached after delivery of the deed [see Burnand v. Nowell (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5, 189 P.2d 796] .

[iii] Seller's Title

It is advisable, from the buyer's perspective, to have the seller warrant the status of the seller's title. Although a marketable-title contingency may provide for the disclosure of all title exceptions of record and any additional exceptions known to the seller, that would not cover off-record exceptions that are not known to the seller [see [d][ii], above]. If the buyer does not wish to obtain an extended-coverage policy or to commission a survey to reveal such off-record exceptions, he or she should attempt to obtain the seller's consent to the above warranty, which would cover unknown off-record exceptions. This warranty should be used in addition to, rather than in lieu of, a marketable-title contingency.

[iv] Pending Litigation

The buyer will want to know whether there is any pending litigation affecting the property. Although the preliminary title report will reveal the existence of any applicable lis pendens [see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance], the buyer should not rely solely on that source.

[v] Defaults

The buyer should have the seller warrant that the seller is not in default under any existing contracts pertaining to the property. Otherwise, the buyer risks facing the consequences of a possible default, such as the termination of a rental agreement by a disgruntled tenant.

[vi] Defects

The seller may warrant that the seller has no knowledge of any material defects, or that the seller has no knowledge of any material defects other than specified defects. Both warranties reflect the requirement that the seller disclose to the buyer any material fact of which the seller is aware, if the fact affects the value of the property and the seller knows that the fact would not be observed by the buyer on inspection [see Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349, 353, 164 P.2d 8 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735-736, 737-738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201] . For a discussion of the remedies available to a buyer who has been defrauded by a seller, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 74, Buyer's Remedies in Actions Involving Agreements of Sale , Pt. D (Matthew Bender).

If the property contains one to four dwelling units, the warranty regarding material defects need not be included, because the seller must provide the buyer with a detailed form regarding the condition of the property and will be liable for damages for a violation of any of the applicable disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code § 1102; see also § 23.300[1]].

[f] Risk of Loss

[i] Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act

Any contract made in California for the purchase and sale of real property will be interpreted as including an agreement that the parties will be bound by the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act unless the contract provides otherwise. If all or a material part of the subject property is destroyed without fault of the buyer or is taken by eminent domain, the risk of loss will be borne as follows [Civ. Code § 1662]:

- The seller bears the loss if neither legal title nor possession of the property has been transferred to the buyer. The seller is not entitled to specific performance, and the buyer may recover any portion of the purchase price that he or she has paid.

- The buyer bears the loss when either legal title or possession has been transferred to the buyer. The buyer is not relieved of the obligation to pay the remainder of the purchase price and is not entitled to recover any amounts that he or she has paid.

[ii] Gaps in Coverage

Because the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act automatically applies to any real property sale contract made in California unless the contract provides otherwise [Civ. Code § 1662], the sale contract need not include a risk-of-loss provision. However, under that act, the seller assumes the risk of loss only following the destruction or condemnation of "all or a material part" of the property. The act does not define "material part" and does not detail who is to bear the risk of any nonmaterial, pre-transfer loss. Similar concerns are not present once legal title or possession is transferred to the buyer because, from that point on, the buyer is obligated to perform following the destruction or condemnation of "all or any part" of the property.

[g] Liquidated Damages

[i] Basic Requirements

The contract may contain a liquidated-damages provision that governs the seller's remedies in the case of a default by the buyer. The provision must be separately signed or initialed by each party to the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1676, 1677(a)]. In a printed contract, it must be set out either in at least 10-point bold type or in contrasting red print in at least 8-point bold type [Civ. Code §§ 1676, 1677(b)].

If the buyer defaults, and the contract does not contain a liquidated-damages provision, the seller may recover the excess of the contract price over the value of the property, consequential damages according to proof, and interest [see Civ. Code § 3307; see also § 23.18[1]].

[ii] Residential Property

Additional requirements apply when the liquidated-damages provision appears in a contract for the sale of residential property consisting primarily of a one-to-four-unit dwelling, if the buyer intends (at the time the contract is made) to occupy at least one of the units as his or her residence. That provision will be valid only to the extent that the buyer actually pays the subject funds in cash or by check (including a postdated check) [Civ. Code § 1675(b); see § 23.18[2]]. When the amount actually paid pursuant to the liquidated-damages provision does not exceed 3 percent of the purchase price, the provision is presumed valid to the extent of payments actually made, unless the buyer establishes that the amount is unreasonable as liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1675(c); see Civ. Code § 1675(d) (seller must establish that liquidated damages exceeding that amount are reasonable)]. For liquidated-damages provisions that do not reflect the foregoing residential-property requirements, see §§ 23.201[2] and 23.202[2].

Further, different requirements apply when the contract involves the initial sale of newly constructed attached residential condominium units located within a structure of 10 or more units and the buyer defaults [see Civ. Code § 1675(f); see also Civ. Code § 783]. For a discussion of these requirements, see § 23.18[2].

If the deposit on residential property is made in two or more payments, a separate, initialed provision must be inserted for each payment [see Civ. Code § 1678].

[h] Insurance

The contract may provide that the seller will cancel his or her insurance policies as of the close of escrow, and the buyer is responsible for obtaining insurance as of that date. Alternatively, the buyer may either obtain his or her own insurance or assume the seller's policies by providing the seller with notice of this election a specified number of days before the close of escrow. Because an insurance policy is a personal contract between the insurer and the insured [see Long v. Keller (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 312, 320, 163 Cal. Rptr. 532] , the policy itself must be transferred. This will invariably require the insurer's consent [see § 23.25]. Counsel must therefore review the transfer provisions of the applicable policies before adopting the second alternative. If the second alternative is used, the notification period should be based on the number of days the agent will need to prepare the paperwork for an assumption.

For an alternative insurance provision that may be used to reflect insurance requirements imposed by sellers or lenders, see § 23.202[2].

[i] Time of the Essence

Most real property sale contracts provide that time is of the essence. This may permit a party to insist on performance by the date specified for the close of escrow. Following a failure to perform on time, and after timely tender by the non-defaulting party of performance and a notice of breach to the other party, the party unwilling to perform may, without incurring any liability, reject any further attempts at performance by the other party. Without such a provision, late performance may have to be tolerated if it is tendered within a reasonable time. For further discussion of the effect of a time-of-the-essence provision, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts , and Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution (Matthew Bender).

[j] Arbitration and Mediation

If a real property sale contract contains a provision for binding arbitration, the provision must include a statutory heading and a statutory arbitration notice and must comply with certain format requirements [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1298]. For further discussion, see § 23.253[1].

The contract may contain a provision for the parties to undertake mediation when a dispute arises and then to submit to arbitration if mediation fails. No statutory requirements would govern the use of such a provision and whether such a provision would be enforceable is open to question since mediation is entirely a cooperative process. No statute supports compelled mediation, whereas the Code of Civil Procedure supports contractual arbitration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.]. Either party could scuttle an on-going mediation by simply taking a stance that the other would regard as intolerable. If a mediation were successful, a settlement agreement would result and only when that agreement had been signed would the parties be bound by the mediation. For further discussion and some forms of contract provisions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 31, Mediation (Matthew Bender).

[k] Waiver

The contract should provide that a waiver of a breach of any provision of the contract does not constitute a continuing waiver of the same provision or a waiver of any subsequent breach of the same or another provision of the contract [see United Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Reeder Dev. Corp. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 282, 292-293, 129 Cal. Rptr. 113 (upholding effectiveness of similar provision in real property sale contract); see also Bowman v. Santa Clara County (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 707, 713, 315 P.2d 67 (in continuing obligation contracts, waiver of breach up to certain time does not necessarily preclude promisee from asserting subsequent breach)]. For further discussion of the waiver of a breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[l] Compliance with Requirements for Newly Constructed Residences Sold On or After January 1, 2003

If the property that is the subject of the contract is a new residential unit sold on or after January 1, 2003, the sales contract must reflect compliance with Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")]. This legislation primarily imposes obligations and responsibilities on, but is not limited to, a builder, developer, general contractor, contractor, or original seller, who, at the time of sale, was also in the business of selling residential units to the public for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim or was in the business of building, developing, or constructing residential units for public purchase for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim [Civ. Code § 911(a); see §§ 23.20A[1], [2], 23.205 (CAR Form)]. The term "builder" for these purposes does not include any entity or individual whose involvement with a residential unit that is the subject of the homeowner's claim is limited to his or her capacity as general contractor or contractor and who is not a partner, member of, subsidiary of, or otherwise similarly affiliated with the builder. These nonaffiliated general contractors and nonaffiliated contractors are treated the same as subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals [Civ. Code § 911(b)].

To effect compliance with Title Seven, this form includes optional provisions related to the following [see § 23.138]:

- A minimum one-year express limited warranty covering fit and finish of specified building components [see Civ. Code § 900].
- The applicability of either the statutory construction standards prescribed by Title Seven or an alternative enhanced protection agreement offered by the seller [see Civ. Code §§ 901-906].
- The buyer's duty to follow all reasonable maintenance obligations and schedules [see Civ. Code § 907].
- A pre-litigation nonadversarial procedure the parties must employ in attempting to resolve any construction defect disputes before instituting litigation [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938].
- The original buyer's duty to provide any subsequent buyer with any documents related to Title Seven that have been provided in conjunction with the original sale [see Civ. Code § 912(h)].

This shall be done at the expense of [Buyer or Seller]. Within [number] days after the delivery of the report and related documents to Buyer, Buyer shall notify Seller in writing of any objection to any exception. If Buyer makes a timely objection to any exception and the exception is not eliminated within [number] days of the Seller's receipt of the objection, this contract shall be terminated pursuant to Paragraph 3.04. Buyer's failure to object in this manner to any exception shall be an approval by Buyer of that exception.

3.02. Miscellaneous Conditions. The close of escrow and Buyer's obligation to purchase the Property pursuant to this contract are subject to the satisfaction of the following conditions, which are solely for Buyer's benefit unless otherwise indicated.

(a) Marketable Title. The conveyance to Buyer of good and marketable title to the Property, as evidenced by a California Land Title Association standard coverage title insurance policy issued by _____ [name of title company] in the _____ [amount of $_____ or full amount of the purchase price], insuring that title to the Property is vested in Buyer free and clear of all title defects, liens, encumbrances, conditions, covenants, restrictions, and other adverse interests of record or known to Seller, subject only to those exceptions approved by Buyer in writing and the following: a lien for current real property taxes, any exceptions shown on the preliminary title report described in Paragraph 3.01 that are not disapproved by Buyer pursuant to that paragraph, and _____ [specify additional exceptions].

[EITHER]

[Add other conditions as appropriate; see, e.g., § 23.201[2], P 3.02; § 23.202[2], P 3.02; see also §§ 23.220[2], 23.237[2].]

3.03. Failure of Condition and Seller's Breach of Warranty. Except as provided in Paragraph 3.04, if any condition set forth in this contract is not satisfied, or if Buyer notifies Seller in writing before the close of escrow of Seller's breach of any of Seller's warranties set forth in this contract, then Buyer may cancel the escrow, terminate this contract, and recover the amounts paid by Buyer to the escrow agent toward the purchase price of the Property [add, if Buyer is to pay escrow charges: (less costs and expenses of escrow)]. Buyer shall exercise this power to terminate by complying with any applicable notice requirements specified in the relevant condition and, in all other cases, by providing written notice to Seller and the escrow agent within [number] days of the failure or breach. The exercise of this power shall not waive any other rights Buyer may have against Seller for breach of this contract. Seller shall instruct the escrow agent, in the escrow instructions, to refund to Buyer all money and instruments deposited in escrow by Buyer pursuant to this contract on failure of a condition or breach of a warranty and receipt of a termination notice. This instruction shall be irrevocable. [Add, if Seller is to pay escrow charges: In the event of such a termination, Seller shall bear any costs and expenses of escrow.]

3.04. Seller's Election to Remedy Defects. Notwithstanding any provision of this contract to the contrary, Seller shall have the right to remedy certain violations of this contract before the close of escrow. This right to remedy shall be subject to the following requirements and restrictions.

(a) Buyer shall immediately notify Seller in writing of Buyer's discovery, before the close of escrow, of a violation of any of the following provisions of this contract: _____ [list paragraph numbers of any conditions or warranties that are to be subject to this provision]. For these purposes, the foregoing violations shall be referred to as "defects."

(b) If Buyer fails to give notice, Buyer shall waive the defect, and the defect shall not be a violation of this contract. If Buyer gives notice, Seller may elect to remedy the defect by giving Buyer written notice of this election within _____ [number] days of receiving Buyer's notice. Seller's notice of election to remedy shall specify the number of days, up to a maximum of _____ [number] days, the close of escrow shall be postponed so that Seller may remedy the defect. If Seller fails to provide a timely notice of election or fails to remedy the defect before the close of escrow (including any extension of escrow), then Buyer may, at Buyer's election, either terminate this contract without any liability on the part of either party or purchase the Property without a reduction in the purchase price and without any liability for the unremedied defect or defects on the part of Seller. The failure by Buyer to make such an election shall be deemed an election of the _____ [first or second] option.

(c) Seller shall instruct the escrow agent, in the escrow instructions, to immediately refund to Buyer all money _____ [add, if buyer is to pay escrow charges: (less costs and expenses of escrow)] and instruments deposited in escrow by Buyer pursuant to this contract on termination of this contract and on receipt of notice of that termination from Buyer. _____ [Add, if seller is to pay escrow charges: In the event of such a termination, Seller shall bear any costs and expenses of the escrow.]

4. Rights, Duties, and Warranties

4.01. Rights and Duties of Buyer. Buyer has the following rights and duties.

(a) Buyer or Buyer's agents are granted the right, at any time and from time to time within _____ [number] days after the opening of the escrow, to enter the Property to conduct tests or investigations. 5.02. Liquidated Damages. If Buyer defaults in the performance of this contract, the parties agree that Seller shall be released from any obligation to sell the Property to Buyer and may retain, as liquidated damages, the lesser of the deposit paid by Buyer on execution of this contract or 3 percent of the purchase price. Seller shall refund to Buyer any remainder of the deposit. The parties further agree that the amount of liquidated damages established by this provision is a reasonable estimate, under the circumstances existing on the date of execution of this contract, of what Seller's damages would be in the event of a default by Buyer.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Sale Contracts

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.201

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.201 Contract for Sale of Unimproved Land for Subdivision or Other Development

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a contract for the purchase and sale of unimproved property, which the buyer plans to develop by subdividing or constructing a building. It provides for seller financing, conditions the buyer's obligations on the issuance of commitments for construction loans and permanent loans from third parties, requires the subordination of the purchase money loan to those third-party loans, and authorizes partial releases of portions of the property from the lien of the purchase money deed of trust. Additional contingencies relate to the suitability of the land for the buyer's proposed use and the issuance of the approvals necessary for that development.

For discussion of warranties, see § 23.200[1][e]. For discussion of miscellaneous provisions, see § 23.200[1].

[b] Purchase Price Provision

The purchase price for undeveloped real property may be determined by multiplying the number of acres times a specified price per acre. The exact number of acres may have to be determined by a survey. Land that is not suitable for development may or may not be included when determining the purchase price.

The contract should provide for a down payment, may provide for payment of a further sum (in cash or by check) on close of escrow, and may require payment of the balance of the purchase price in installments pursuant to the terms of a promissory note secured by a deed of trust in favor of the seller. The note may be an "interest included" note, under which each installment on the note will be applied first to interest on the remaining unpaid principal balance at a designated rate and then to reduction of the principal balance. Thus, the amount of each installment is the same, but the percentage of the installment payment that is applied to interest and principal will change as the unpaid balance of the note is reduced. For an "interest extra" provision, calling for equal principal payments and additional interest payments that are based on the remaining unpaid principal balance of the note, see § 23.202[2].

The purchase price provision may also contain subordination and partial release requirements [see [c][i], [d], below]. In addition to specifying the more important terms to be included in the promissory note and deed of trust, the contract may provide for the attachment (as exhibits) of the form of note and deed of trust that must be used by the buyer. This practice makes it unnecessary to repeat all of the essential terms of the seller financing in the contract. Failure to include complete terms of payment in the contract and its exhibits may violate the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624] or render the contract unenforceable [see § 23.15[2]].

This chapter also contains alternatives to seller financing. For example, the form in § 23.200[2] provides for the payment of a deposit and the balance at the close of escrow. If the buyer plans on obtaining some or all of those funds from a third-party lender, that provision may be used in conjunction with the form in § 23.222[2], which conditions the buyer's obligations under the sale contract on the receipt of a purchase money loan from a third party lender. For additional financing provisions, see § 23.220 (buyer to provide "straight" note) and § 23.221 (buyer to assume existing encumbrance).

[c] Subordination

[i] Overview

A developer of commercial or subdivision property typically relies heavily on borrowed money ("leveraging") to obtain the land and construct the improvements. In most cases, the seller of the land accepts a promissory note secured by a deed of trust on the land for a major portion of the purchase price. A commercial lending institution makes short-term construction loans, and another commercial lender makes permanent loans that are used to repay the proceeds of the construction loans [see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. A]. Institutional lenders usually insist that a construction loan be secured by a first lien on the property. However, a deed of trust or mortgage given to secure payment of the purchase price of real property has, at the time of its conveyance, priority over all other liens on the property created by or against the buyer, subject to the operation of the recording laws [Civ. Code § 2898]. A purchase money deed of trust can be made subordinate to construction loan deeds of trust or mortgages by either an express subordination agreement, in which the land seller agrees to make the lien of the purchase money mortgage or deed of trust subject to the construction loan [see [ii], below]. The purchase money deed of trust is referred to as the "subordinated" lien, and the deed of trust securing the construction loan is the "subordinating" lien. Permanent loans may be handled in a similar manner [see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. A].

An alternative to the use of subordination clauses and subordination agreements is a procedure that is commonly called "de facto subordination." This involves recording the construction loan mortgage or deed of trust before recording the purchase money mortgage or deed of trust, pursuant to an agreement of the parties usually contained in the land sale contract or escrow instructions. The same rules and limitations that apply to an attempted subordination pursuant to an automatic subordination or a "promise to subordinate" clause [see [ii], below] also apply to a de facto subordination [Middlebrook-Anderson Co. v. Southwest Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1034, 96 Cal. Rptr. 338] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Subordination Resulting From Optional Lienholder Advances. Subordination can occur as a matter of law even though no one agreed to a contractual subordination. For example, in Lennar Northeast Partners v. Buice [(1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1576, 1589, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435] , the appellate court subordinated a senior lienholder's $140,000 subsequent advance below that of a junior lienholder's interest. The court went so far as to suggest that the senior lien in toto could have been subordinated had the junior lienholder also been a subordinating seller. Although post-Lennar decisions have held that "equitable subordination" must be narrowly circumscribed according to the circumstances at issue [Friery v. Sutter Buttes Savings Bank (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 869, 876, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 32] , Lennar is a harbinger of potential danger for a lienholder making optional advances, counseling lawyers that advances normally should not be made without the express consent of the junior lienholder. By William M. Hensley.

[ii] Provision in Contract

When a subordination is made in connection with a sale of land that is to be developed by the buyer, the sale contract usually contains a provision requiring the seller to accept a purchase money deed of trust or mortgage containing one or more subordination clauses. Thus, by entering into the sale contract, the seller essentially makes a promise to subordinate. This promise may be specifically enforced on the buyer's behalf if the subordination provision contains terms that will define and minimize the risk that the subordinating lien will impair or destroy the seller's security [Handy v. Gordon (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 578, 581, 55 Cal. Rptr. 769, 422 P.2d 329 ; see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. A]. For a list of terms meeting this standard, see [iii], below. A failure to include those terms may render the entire sale contract unenforceable [Magna Development Co. v. Reed (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 230, 238, 39 Cal. Rptr. 284 ; but see Reeder v. Longo (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295-297, 182 Cal. Rptr. 287 (buyer may unconditionally waive invalid subordination provision originally inserted solely for buyer's benefit and may obtain specific performance of remaining provisions of sale contract)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. A.

[iii] Required Contents

An enforceable subordination agreement or clause must specify at least the maximum principal, maximum interest rate, maximum term, and mode of repayment of the subordinating loan [Cummins v. Gates (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 532, 540, 45 Cal. Rptr. 417] . Further, it must be just and reasonable to the seller [Handy v. Gordon (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 578, 581, 55 Cal. Rptr. 769, 422 P.2d 329] . Although there is no magic number of terms that will ensure a just and reasonable subordination clause or agreement as a matter of law [Roskamp Manley Associates, Inc. v. Davin Development & Investment Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 513, 521, 229 Cal. Rptr. 186] , the courts have repeatedly stated that an enforceable subordination clause or agreement must contain terms that define and limit the seller's risk [Handy v. Gordon (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 578, 581, 55 Cal. Rptr. 769, 422 P.2d 329] and that leave no material element to the future agreement of the parties [Krasley v. Superior Court (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 425, 431, 161 Cal. Rptr. 629] .

Therefore, an enforceable subordination agreement or clause should, at the minimum, specify all of the following [see Roskamp Manley Associates, Inc. v. Davin Development & Investment Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518, 229 Cal. Rptr. 186 ; see also Walters, Subordination Agreement That Did Not Specify Maximum Amount of Loan or Terms Thereof Is Not Enforceable, 1 Cal. Real Estate Reporter 164, 166]:

- The maximum principal amount of the subordinating loan;
- The maximum interest rate to be charged under the subordinating loan;
- The term (that is, maturity date) of the subordinating loan;
- Maximum loan fees and costs and whether they are to be paid from the principal amount of the subordinating loan;
- Repayment terms, including any provisions for balloon payments;
- Prepayment terms, such as maximum prepayment penalties;
- That the proceeds of the development loan may not be used for any purpose other than construction or other development on the subject property, or other restrictions on the use of loan proceeds;

- Existence and terms of any commitment for "take-out" or permanent financing after completion of the construction or development; and

- That the new loan will be made by a bank, life insurance company, building and loan association, savings and loan association, or other institutional lender [see Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 1000, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583 (attorney was negligent when subordination clause did not require loan from institutional lender)].

For further discussion of these required terms, see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. A.

[d] Partial Releases of Subdivided Land

[i] Use and Effect

A purchase money deed of trust or mortgage encumbering land that is to be subdivided almost always includes a "partial release" (also called a "partial reconveyance") clause. A partial release clause provides for the release of a portion of the property from the encumbrance, by a reconveyance signed by the trustee under the purchase money deed of trust, on the occurrence of a certain event, such as the payment of a designated portion of the purchase price.

The use of such a clause permits the buyer to develop the subdivision in stages. For example, under one common arrangement, as each home in the subdivision is completed and sold, the sale proceeds are disbursed through escrow to (1) pay off the construction loan that is secured by a deed of trust on the home's lot, and (2) obtain a release of the lot from the purchase money deed of trust. Alternatively, the developer may use the partial release clause to have acreage (instead of individual subdivision lots) released from the purchase money deed of trust. In that case, the developer has a portion of the property released and then subdivides and develops that portion. After it is developed and sold, the developer obtains the release of more land and proceeds to develop it. The release clause in the contract may give the buyer a choice of using either or both of those methods of development by providing for the release of raw undeveloped acreage before the subdivision map has been filed and for the release of individual lots as shown on a filed subdivision map.

Although a release clause will be included in the purchase money deed of trust, the real property sale contract should also include a release clause to ensure the enforceability of the clause [see Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance]. For further discussion, including a number of illustrative partial release provisions for deeds of trust that can be modified for use in the present context, see Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance .

[ii] Requirements of Subdivided Lands Act

The restrictions on partial releases imposed by the Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.] are triggered by the presence of a "blanket encumbrance," which is a deed of trust, mortgage, or any other lien or encumbrance securing the payment of money and affecting land to be subdivided or more than one lot or parcel of subdivided land [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013]. A subdivider cannot sell or lease lots or parcels in a subdivision that is subject to the Subdivided Lands Act and to a blanket encumbrance unless either the encumbrance (or a supplemental agreement) contains an unconditional release clause or the subdivider complies with rather strenuous requirements specified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2.

An unconditional release clause allows the buyer or lessee to obtain legal title free and clear of the blanket encumbrance by complying with the terms and conditions of the purchase or lease [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.1]. Because institutional lenders (which ordinarily finance subdivision projects) and sellers are not likely to agree to the inclusion of an unconditional clause, the contract should contain a conditional release provision: for instance, one applicable before recordation of the final subdivision map, or one governing post-recordation releases. Under such a conditional clause, the buyer-subdivider will not be able to sell the subdivided lots or parcels unless he or she complies with Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2 by one of the following methods:

- Depositing the money paid or advanced by the buyers into escrow [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2(a)];

- Transferring title to the individual lots or parcels to a trust until a proper release is obtained [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2(b)];

- Furnishing a bond for the protection of the buyers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2(c)]; or

- Complying with any other condition or method acceptable to the Real Estate Commissioner that carries out the legislative intent to ensure that the buyer will obtain title to the lot or parcel free and clear of the blanket encumbrance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2(d)].

For further discussion of the requirements above, see Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance .

If a subdivision is subject to a blanket encumbrance but is exempt from compliance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.1, the subdivider must have prospective buyers of lots, parcels, or units sign a statutory notice form [see Civ. Code § 1133]. For further discussion, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

[iii] Contents of Release Clause

A partial release provision in a seller's deed of trust must be "just and reasonable" as to the seller to be specifically enforceable and should contain terms that define and minimize the risk that the seller's security will be impaired [see Eldridge v. Burns (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 396, 428-431, 142 Cal. Rptr. 845 ; Civ. Code § 3391(2)]. The terms of the obligation must be sufficiently certain to make the precise act to be done clearly ascertainable [White Point Co. v. Herrington (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 458, 465, 73 Cal. Rptr. 885 ; Hiller v. King (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 181, 190-191, 232 P.2d 905] . If the provision is uncertain, it may render the entire sale contract unenforceable [see White Point Co. v. Herrington (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 458, 465-467, 73 Cal. Rptr. 885 (contract containing uncertain release clause cannot be enforced by buyer); but see Yackey v. Pacific Development Co. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 776, 784, 160 Cal. Rptr. 430 (seller may bring action for damages for breach even though contract contains uncertain release clause); see also Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance].

Because it is rare for all acreage and all lots in a subdivision to be of the same value, the release clause should prevent the buyer-subdivider from taking only the best acreage or lots and leaving the deed of trust beneficiary with insufficient security to protect the purchase money promissory note [see White Point Co. v. Herrington (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 458, 467, 73 Cal. Rptr. 885] . The release provision in the contract can protect the security and meet the specificity requirement discussed above in the following ways.

- The clauses dealing with the release of raw acreage before the recordation of a final subdivision map should include a schedule, which may be used to set different amounts or "release prices" that must be paid for lots in different parts of the proposed subdivision. The schedule also should specify the legal description and sizes of parcels that may be released and the order in which the parcels are to be released. This would be intended to prevent the buyer from having the more valuable parcels released first and leaving the deed of trust beneficiary with property of insufficient value to protect the deed of trust and the secured obligation. It also would prevent releases that would leave the remaining property without access to a public road or street.

- The clauses permitting the release of lots following the recordation of the final subdivision map also should use the release prices specified in the foregoing schedule. The "subdivided lots" release clauses need not specify the order of release or address access concerns because most local subdivision ordinances prevent subdividers from creating landlocked or completely valueless lots.

The amount of the "release price" for each lot or parcel will involve bargaining between the subdivider and the seller. In setting the price for each lot, the subdivider will argue for a release price that is roughly equivalent to or below the true resale value of the lot, while the seller will desire a price that exceeds the fair resale price of the lot so that the remaining lots will always be sufficient to protect the security.

For partial release provisions that are designed to be inserted into deeds of trust, see Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance . Those provisions may, with minor modifications, be used as alternatives to the release provisions included in the form in [2], below.

[iv] Subdivision Map Act Requirements

The Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.] defines "subdivision" to include the division of a unit of land, as shown on a county assessment roll, for the purpose of sale, lease, or financing [Gov. Code § 66424]. This definition also encompasses a partial release from a blanket encumbrance [see 58 Ops. Atty. Gen. 408, 412 (1975)(placement of separate deeds of trust on different portions of unit of land is division for purpose of sale or financing)]. Partial release provisions recognize the applicability of the Subdivision Map Act by providing that a partial release cannot be granted unless the buyer-subdivider has met all requirements of that act. As a general rule, the act requires local approval of both a tentative map and a final map for any subdivision containing five or more parcels [Gov. Code § 66426]. Subdivisions that are not subject to that final-map requirement must have a parcel map approved by the local legislative body unless the local subdivision ordinance waives the statutory parcel-map requirement [Gov. Code § 66428]. For further discussion of the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

[e] Contingencies (Conditions)

[i] Survey

One of the contingencies in the contract may require the completion and deposit in escrow of a survey of the property. A survey is particularly important in the sale of undeveloped land because it will help the parties establish the exact acreage and therefore result in the computation of a fair purchase price when that amount is based on a price per acre or other unit [see [b], above].

[ii] Soil Tests and Other Engineering Tests

The buyer's performance should be conditioned on a determination by the buyer's experts that the physical condition of the property is compatible with the buyer's development plans. The types of tests that should be conducted will depend on the nature of those plans. For example, buyers of undeveloped land must determine whether the property is free from soil and geologic conditions that might preclude its use for the intended development without extra expense for precautionary, remedial, or corrective measures. The contract provision may include review by the buyer's expert of any reports previously prepared for the seller; however, the buyer should not rely solely on seller-commissioned reports and should obtain independent results that address the buyer's specific concerns.

The soil test contingency may require the buyer to notify the seller of the experts' determinations by a certain date, and provide that a failure to do so will constitute a waiver of the entire contingency. However, dicta in one case considering such a contingency suggested that a seller's actual or constructive knowledge that the property was unsuitable for the buyer's intended use would excuse the buyer from performance even when the buyer failed to give the required notice [see United Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Reeder Dev. Corp. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 282, 292, 129 Cal. Rptr. 113] .

The contract may contain a related provision authorizing the buyer to enter the property after the opening of escrow to conduct necessary tests, and imposing seller-oriented limitations on the exercise of that right.

[iii] Zoning and Land Use Laws

The contract may contain a provision that conditions the buyer's performance on his or her ability to obtain the right under applicable zoning and land use laws to construct the desired development. This provision would protect the buyer when the zoning classification for the property does not permit the buyer's intended use and the buyer is unable to obtain a zoning change, variance, or conditional use permit for that use. For discussion of these forms of zoning relief, see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits . The provision also may grant the buyer the right to waive the contingency, so that the buyer will have the option of altering his or her development plans if necessary.

To protect the seller, the zoning provision should establish a deadline for the submission by the buyer of the necessary applications. Further, anticipating the possibility that a final determination regarding the buyer's application may not be made before the closing date, the provision may offer alternative methods of dealing with such an occurrence.

[iv] Approval of Subdivision Map

A buyer who intends to subdivide the property should condition the sale on approval by the proper governmental body of a tentative map to be submitted by the buyer. Under the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.], a tentative map must be prepared for most proposed subdivisions [see Gov. Code § 66426; see also Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation]. It is essentially a rough draft showing the design and improvement of the proposed subdivision and the existing conditions in and around the subdivision [see Gov. Code § 66424.5(a)]. The local legislative body uses the tentative map to determine whether the proposed project should be approved and what changes (if any) must be made to the project. If it is approved, the map serves as the basis for the preparation of a final map (or, in some cases, a parcel map) for the project [see Gov. Code §§ 66433, 66434, 66456]. Because the tentative map is prepared much earlier than the final map and provides the developer with a clear idea of what requirements will be imposed on the final approval of the subdivision, it is sufficient and preferable to condition the buyer's performance on the approval of the tentative map (as opposed to the final or parcel map).

The map contingency should specify the date by which the seller must be notified of the final governmental action regarding the tentative map. This deadline will prevent the buyer from delaying in seeking the approval. If the map is rejected (or no final determination is made) by that date, the buyer may waive the contingency or terminate the contract. Alternatively, the attorney may wish to adapt the "final determination" contingency set forth in the zoning contingency [see [iii], above].

[v] Building Permit

If the buyer plans to construct a commercial building or subdivision, the contract should condition the buyer's performance on the issuance of the necessary building permits to the buyer or the buyer's contractor. The seller's attorney may wish to insist that the approval be obtained by a specified date, to ensure that the buyer will be diligent in seeking the building permits.

For an alternative contingency that should be used when the buyer will need to obtain additional permits, licenses, or certificates, see § 23.202[2].

[vi] Loan Commitments

A buyer who plans to construct a commercial building or subdivision requiring third-party financing should condition the closing of escrow and his or her further performance on the issuance to the buyer of commitments for a construction loan to finance the project, and possibly on the issuance of one or more commitments for permanent ("take-out") loans [see [c][i], above]. From the seller's perspective, the contingency (or another provision in the sale contract) should set forth the specific terms of the loan, to prevent the buyer from seeking construction financing at unobtainable terms. The financing contingency should cross-refer to the subordination provisions that describe the terms of the construction loan and take-out loan in detail [see [c][iii], above].

[vii] Failure of Contingencies

Some contingencies may be made waivable by the buyer [see [iii], above]. A party may unilaterally waive a condition precedent, but only if the contingency is solely for that party's benefit [Johnson v. Lehtonen (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 579, 582, 312 P.2d 35 ; Doryon v. Salant (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712, 142 Cal. Rptr. 378] . The party may waive the contingency either expressly or by his or her actions [Noel v. DuMont Builders, Inc. (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 691, 696-697, 3 Cal. Rptr. 220] . If a contingency benefits both parties, it may be waived only by their mutual agreement [see Spangler v. Castello (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 49, 53, 304 P.2d 752 ; Britschgi v. McCall (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 138, 143, 257 P.2d 977] . For a form of notice of waiver of a contingency, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

The contract may provide that if any contingency fails to be met, the buyer may terminate the contract and receive a full refund without waiving any other rights that the buyer may have against the seller [see § 23.200[1][d][iv]]. Notwithstanding that right of disapproval, the seller may be obligated under the contract to attempt to remedy the failure of certain specified contingencies; and if the seller does not do so, the buyer may terminate the contract or purchase the property (with or without a corresponding reduction in the purchase price). Some contingencies may specify alternative consequences of a failure to be met, such as requiring the buyer to give notice of an expert's determination that the condition of the land precludes the buyer's intended use.

[CONTINUE]

(c) Remove the defect and purchase the Property for the purchase price less the reasonable cost to Buyer of removing the defect, provided that this cost does not exceed $_____.

Seller shall refund to Buyer any remainder of the deposit. The parties further agree that the amount of liquidated damages established by this provision is a reasonable estimate, under the circumstances existing on the date of execution of this contract, of what Seller's damages would be in the event of a default by Buyer.

Initialed by Seller: _____

5.03. Insurance. Seller shall cancel all policies of insurance on the Property as of the close of escrow. DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 23 REAL PROPERTY SALES AGREEMENTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Sale Contracts

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.202

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.202 Contract of Sale of Property With Multiple Rental Units

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a contract for the sale of a commercial building containing multiple rental units. It provides for a deposit, seller financing, an escrow [see § 23.200[1][c][i]], and liquidated damages. It also sets forth contingencies relating to the delivery, approval, and assignment of existing leases, tenant estoppel certificates, the issuance of necessary governmental approvals, and a pest inspection and corrective pest-control work. Several seller warranties cover the condition of the property and the status of existing contracts affecting the property.

For discussion of provisions on marketable title and possession, see § 23.200[1][d][ii] and [iii]. For discussion of miscellaneous provisions, see § 23.200[1].

[b] Purchase Price

[i] Allocation

The parties may specify the total purchase price of the improved property, and then allocate the total price among the land, improvements, and personal property included in the sale. For discussion of the tax consequences of such an allocation, see § 23.28[1].

[ii] Terms of Payment

The contract may provide for a down payment, payment of a further sum in cash or by check on close of escrow, and payment of the balance of the purchase price pursuant to the terms of a secured "interest extra" promissory note. Under an "interest extra" note, the buyer must make installment payments in a specified amount that does not change during the term of the note. With each installment payment, the maker must also pay the interest then due on the remaining unpaid principal balance of the note. Thus the amount of the interest payment will decrease over the term of the note as the unpaid principal balance decreases. For an "interest included" provision, under which each installment payment is applied first to interest and then to principal, see § 23.201[2]. For a list of other types of payment provisions, see § 23.131.

[c] Contingencies (Conditions)

[i] Approval of Leases and Other Documents

The contract should condition the buyer's performance on his or her approval of the leases, insurance policies, service contracts, and employment contracts relating to the property. To protect the seller, the approval contingency may impose a deadline on this review process and provide that failure to meet that deadline constitutes an approval of the contracts.

Because the documents to be approved by the buyer will be numerous in the case of a large, multi-unit rental property, the contract may provide for the use and attachment of schedules that describe the documents in detail. These schedules may contain the following information:

- (Schedule 1) All leases encumbering the property as of the date of the contract, indicating for each lease whether any tenant is in default in the performance of that lease and setting forth the nature of any default;

- (Schedule 2) All insurance policies currently insuring the property, stating for each policy the policy number, insurer's name, term, expiration date, premiums, and nature and type of policy;

- (Schedule 3) All persons employed by the seller in connection with the property, stating for each the employee's name, social security number, position, salary, any collective bargaining or employment contract covering the employee, and the amount of any and all contributions accruing to pension, vacation, union welfare, or other funds for that employee; and

- (Schedule 4) All service and other contracts (such as contracts for equipment rental, maintenance, and guard service, but excluding employment, collective bargaining, or occupancy contracts), stating for each contract the names of the parties, the service rendered or to be rendered, the compensation payable by the seller, other important terms, and the expiration date.

The contract also may contain warranties that the schedules are accurate and that the seller is not in default under any of the contracts [see [e][ii], below].

[ii] Tenant Estoppel Certificates

If the tenants are obligated, under their leases, to provide estoppel certificates when the landlord requests them [see generally California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 153, Drafting Commercial Leases (Matthew Bender)], the buyer should insist on receiving an estoppel certificate from each of the tenants as a condition to the closing of escrow. An estoppel certificate is a statement by a tenant that the seller has not breached the lease, that no security deposits are being held by the seller other than as shown on the seller's books, and that no rent has been paid in advance except as shown by those books [see § 23.322].

PRACTICE TIP:

Tenant Estoppel Certificates Get Conclusive Impact. Tenant estoppel certificates are indispensable elements of commercial sales of shopping centers and office buildings. The certificates routinely are relied on by buyers in substantiating the cash flow from the property being purchased (and, on a subsidiary level, by appraisers hired by the parties to value the property under the income approach) [see In re Aslan (9th Cir. 1990) 909 F.2d 367, 370] .

One appellate decision has recognized that statements in a tenant estoppel certificate are tantamount to recitals that are accorded conclusive effect under Evid. Code § 622 [see Plaza Freeway Ltd. v. First Mountain Bank (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 616, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865] . Commentators agree that tenants may not contradict statements they have warranted as true in estoppel certificates [see In re Aslan (9th Cir. 1990) 909 F.2d 367, 369 n.2 ; California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 90, Representing Clients in Sales Transactions, § 90.69[2] (Matthew Bender)]. Given this impact afforded to these certificates, landlords and potential purchasers should insist on them. However, note that Plaza Freeway was subsequently distinguished in a 2004 case which held that the estoppel certificate was not conclusive evidence of the contract terms because it created an ambiguity: the certificate stated that the lease remained in effect but created an ambiguity as to the continued existence of an option in the lease [Miner v. Tustin Avenue Investors (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 264, 272, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178] . By William M. Hensley.

[iii] Assignment of Leases

The contract should require the seller to furnish to the buyer a signed and acknowledged assignment of the seller's entire right, title, and interest in every lease encumbering the property. The contract should also provide for the buyer's approval of the proposed assignment contract and the buyer's assumption of the obligations under the leases.

[iv] Seller's Books and Records

The buyer should condition his or her performance on (1) the buyer's receipt and expressed approval of copies of all books and records relating to the management of the property, and (2) a showing of the current or delinquent status of each tenant. The seller should insist that the buyer's approval be in writing and deposited in escrow by a specific date.

[v] Licenses and Permits

The contract may condition the buyer's performance on issuance to the buyer of all permits, certificates, and licenses that the buyer will require to operate the property in the manner in which it has previously been operated by the seller. The contingency may further protect the buyer by providing that any conditions attached to the issuance of the approvals must be reasonably acceptable to the buyer. For discussion of the use of contingencies requiring the personal satisfaction of either party, see § 23.16. To ensure the buyer's diligent performance in obtaining the necessary permits and licenses, the contingency may require the buyer to notify the seller within a specified number of days if any of the necessary approvals cannot be obtained.

[vi] Inspection by Contractor

The buyer may wish to retain a licensed contractor to inspect the physical condition of the property. This practice is particularly advisable when the subject property contains five or more dwelling units, because the seller of such a structure need not provide the prospective buyer with a copy of the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102(a); see also § 23.20[1]]. The contract may empower the buyer to order such an inspection, to negotiate with the seller concerning any defects disclosed in the inspection report, and to terminate the contract if the parties cannot agree on the correction of the defects.

[vii] Roof Inspection

If the property being sold is an older structure, the buyer should insist on the preparation of a roof inspection report by a licensed general contractor or roofing contractor. The parties should be empowered to assume or allocate the responsibility for the payment of any recommended work, or the buyer should be empowered to terminate the contract if the seller is unwilling to pay for the work.

[viii] Inventory and Bill of Sale

If the sale includes personal property, that property can be described in the contract or in an exhibit. However, if several items are involved, the buyer's performance should be conditioned on the deposit in escrow of an inventory of the personal property taken jointly by the parties. In addition to the inventory, a bill of sale for the personal property [see § 23.323] should be deposited in escrow.

[d] Pest-Control Inspection and Work

A pest-control provision may be used when the buyer wants assurance that the structures are not infested with termites or other wood-destroying pests or organisms. It is important that this matter be covered because there are no implied warranties against building defects in a contract for the sale of real property [Murphy v. Sheftel (1932) 121 Cal. App. 533, 539, 9 P.2d 568] , such as defects caused by termites or dry rot. However, if the seller knows of termite damage and knows that the buyer is unaware of it, and the seller conceals it to induce the buyer to purchase the property, the seller may be liable, on a cause of action for fraud, for damages [Orlando v. Berkeley (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228-229, 33 Cal. Rptr. 860 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201] .

The pest-control provisions should reflect statutory requirements, procedural steps, and drafting considerations discussed in §§ 23.133 and 23.150. They should provide for the use of an existing structural pest-control report or the inspection of the property and the preparation of such a report by a registered company or licensed structural pest-control operator [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 8506.1, 8516, 8556], the performance of corrective work [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8516] or termination of the contract if the recommended work exceeds a specified sum, the allocation of the costs of the work, and the deposit in escrow of a certification stating that the property is free of active infestation or infection in the visible and accessible areas [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8519].

For further discussion, including an examination of problems relating to pest-control certifications, see § 23.320[1].

[i] Definition

A contract for the sale of a building containing multiple rental units typically contains a number of warranties. A warranty is a statement that specified facts pertaining to the property or the sale transaction exist or will exist [see § 23.17]. Warranties are particularly important when a multi-unit rental building is being sold because the buyer will be assuming existing rental agreements encumbering the property.

[ii] Status of Existing Contracts

To protect the buyer from the consequences of a default by the seller in the performance of the seller's obligations under existing contracts relating to the property [see [c][i], above], the contract may contain a warranty that the seller is not in default under those contracts.

[iii] Insurance

If the buyer will or may assume insurance policies currently covering the property, he or she should obtain the seller's warranty as to the validity of the pertinent information on each policy [see § 23.200[1][h]].

[f] Miscellaneous Agreements

[i] Buyer's Assumption of Contractual Obligations

The seller should obtain the buyer's agreement to assume and perform all of the terms and conditions of the leases and contracts that the seller has entered into. The buyer should insist that this assumption not take place until escrow has closed. This agreement supplements the seller's warranty regarding the assignment of leases.

[ii] Indemnification

In a sale of a multi-unit rental property, each party should be protected from any claim arising after the close of escrow and involving a breach of a lease or contract that allegedly occurred while the other party held title to the property. The seller should agree to indemnify the buyer against liability arising from any matter pertaining to the property that occurred or allegedly occurred before the close of escrow, and the buyer similarly should agree to indemnify the seller for matters occurring or allegedly occurring after the close of escrow.

§ 23.203 Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions [CAR Form RPA-CA]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the California Association of Realtors (CAR) long-form purchase agreement entitled "California Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions" (with financing clauses) [CAR Form RPA-CA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R) endorsement not implied].

This chapter contains provisions that may be incorporated into this form [see §§ 23.210[2], 23.264[2]]. For a guide to the use of those provisions, see § 23.130.

For a CAR counteroffer form, see § 23.204. For CAR forms of listing contracts and broker-salesperson contracts, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents .

PRACTICE TIP:

Getting in Touch With the California Association of Realtors. The California Association of Realtors has offices throughout California. Their headquarters are located at 525 South Virgil Ave., Los Angeles, CA. 90020, (213) 739-8200, www.car.org. Generally, the Association will sell their forms in packages to both members and non-members. Some local Associations, however, will not sell to non-members. By Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[b] Residential Purchase Agreements, Generally

[i] Use by Parties

The CAR form, sometimes referred to as a "deposit receipt," is usually completed by the buyer and his or her broker. Everything preceding the seller's acceptance clause constitutes the buyer's offer to purchase the property. The buyer's broker then formally "presents" the offer to the seller and the seller's broker. If the seller accepts the offer, the buyer's broker tenders the deposit at that time. The seller may reject (or "conditionally accept") the offer and present a counteroffer adding additional terms or modifying terms in the buyer's offer [see § 23.204]. The transaction may involve the exchange of several counterproposals. A binding contract is not created until the seller signs the acceptance clause on the form, and both parties sign any counteroffer.

Parties should, of course, use care when proposing the use of standard forms. One court specifically commented on the use of CAR standard forms [Behniwal v. Mix (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1038 n.12, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320] :

> "California Realtor Association standard forms [for sale contracts] probably hasten real estate deals when everything goes right, i.e., when neither party wants to back out of a deal. When things go wrong, though, the nature of the forms can have the effect, as they clearly had in this case, of turning things into (in the trial court's word) a 'morass.' Instead of a clean exchange of forms the way attorneys would structure most deals (if they have the time), the forms and the labels tend to confuse the substance of what is going on. The advantage, of course, is that the need to do original thinking to explain precisely what is going on is minimized, which facilitates transactions en masse."

[ii] Role of Attorney

The attorney's role in a transaction involving the use of a purchase agreement ordinarily will be limited. The attorney may be asked to assist the buyer in completing the form, to review the completed form before either or both of the parties will sign it, or to interpret or determine the sufficiency of the completed form. Whenever the client is relying on a printed form, counsel should evaluate the legal sufficiency of the form. The remainder of this comment covers the more significant provisions of the CAR form.

[iii] Modifications

Certain recommended or optional modifications to the CAR form may be considered. Although modifications may be set forth in the form, they may be too lengthy or numerous to fit in the space provided. In that event, the revisions should be covered in exhibits, addenda, or riders, which should be attached to the purchase agreement and incorporated by reference. Each page of the attached document should be signed or initialed by both parties. For an illustrative addendum that may be easily modified for use in this context, see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts .

Changes should not be made on the face of the CAR form except when an entire provision is being deleted or modified. In that case, the provision should be lined out, and the change should be discussed on the attached document. Those marks and any other interlineations, deletions, or modifications appearing on the form itself should be initialed by both parties.

[c] Provisions of Form

[i] Purchase Price and Financing

Paragraph 1 of the CAR form identifies the buyer and the property, sets forth the offered purchase price, and the time for the closing of escrow. Paragraph 2 covers financing and provides that the buyer will tender a deposit at the time he or she signs the form. This deposit is to be held uncashed until the offer is accepted. The CAR form also contains a clause calling for the payment of an increased deposit at a later date [see [xiv], below]. In addition, the CAR form contains detailed alternative provisions regarding the financing of the balance of the purchase price, and states whether or not these financing provisions are conditions of sale [see [f][iii], below]. The financing options provide for the following:

- The issuance to the buyer by a third-party lender of a purchase-money or non-purchase-money loan [see § 23.222];

- Additional financing, such as seller financing [see § 23.201[1][b]] and the buyer's assumption of, or agreement to take "subject to," an existing encumbrance [see § 23.221]; and

- The balance of the purchase price to be deposited with the escrow agent.

The purchase may be made contingent on the property's being appraised at no less than the specified purchase price. If the buyer is making an all-cash offer, satisfactory written verification of sufficient funds to close the transaction must be provided to the seller within a specified number of days.

[ii] Sale of Buyer's Property

Unless otherwise provided, the transaction is not contingent on the sale of the buyer's property. If this sale is made contingent on the close of escrow of another property of the buyer, the seller has the right to continue to offer the property for sale, unless provided otherwise.

[iii] Escrow

The escrow provision provides for joint escrow instructions consisting of portions of the purchase agreement and any additional mutual instructions. The allocation of the escrow fee is provided for. More detailed escrow provisions are discussed in § 23.200[1][c]. They provide, among other things, for the proration of expenses and the extension of the closing date. If the parties add a provision that contemplates the extension of the closing date [see, e.g., [f][iii], below], they should add a clause similar to Paragraph 2.02 in § 23.200[2].

[iv] Possession

Possession is to be delivered to the buyer either on the close of escrow, on another specified date, or no later than a specified number of days after the close of escrow [see § 23.200[1][d][iii]]. The form provides for the attachment of supplements, which may include two other CAR forms that set forth alternative possession arrangements: a residential lease agreement [see § 23.326] and an interim occupancy agreement [see § 23.327].

Before completing the possession provision, the parties should review the laws governing risk of loss [see Civ. Code § 1662; see also [f][i], below].

[v] Buyer's Residence

The buyer must indicate whether the buyer intends to occupy the property as his or her primary residence. This information will determine the extent to which the liquidated-damages provision applies to the transaction [see Civ. Code §§ 1675-1678; see also [xiv], below].

[vi] Allocation of Costs

The CAR form allows for the allocation of a variety of costs between the buyer and seller, including the following, as applicable: city and county transfer or tax fees; title and escrow costs; costs relating to sewer, septic, and well systems, such as connection and inspection costs; homeowners' association costs; natural hazard zone disclosure report costs [see [ix], below]; pest-control inspection and report costs [see [viii], below]; and costs of smoke-detector installation and water-heater bracing [see [vii], below].

[vii] Smoke-Detector Installation and Water-Heater Bracing

As to smoke-detector installation and water-heater bracing, the CAR form states that seller will provide the buyer with a written statement of compliance, unless exempt, before the close of escrow. The seller is obligated to provide the buyer with written notice of the actual installation of smoke detectors [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b); see also § 23.305]. Similarly, the seller must certify to the buyer that the requirement that the water heater [see Health & Safety Code § 19211(d) ("water heater" defined as any standard water heater with a capacity of not more than 120 gallons for which a pre-engineered strapping kit is readily available)] has been braced, anchored, or strapped to resist falling or horizontal displacement due to earthquake motion has been complied with [see Health & Safety Code § 19211].

[viii] Pest-Control

Under the CAR form, the cost of having a pest-control report prepared by a registered structural pest-control company is allocated to the buyer or seller. The report (popularly known as a "termite report," although it also covers other matters) identifies any infested or infected areas and recommends corrective or preventive work [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8516(b)(6), (7), (10)]. The costs of both corrective work and preventive work can also be allocated.

If such a report is prepared, the CAR form describes the property to be inspected and provides for the performance of necessary corrective work and the issuance of a pest-control certification stating that the property is free of active infestation or infection [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8519 (certification must state that property is free of active infestation or infection in visible and accessible areas)]. If inspection of inaccessible areas is recommended, the buyer may order further inspection, with the cost of any resulting corrective work paid as specified. If there is no damage, the buyer is responsible for the costs of entering and inspecting the formerly inaccessible areas unless otherwise agreed.

These arrangements reflect what is probably the most common way of dealing with pest-control inspection and certification. For an alternative pest-control provision, see § 23.202[2] (alternative methods of allocating costs among parties). For a procedural guide to meeting the relevant statutory requirements, see § 23.150. For additional discussion of the difficulties that can arise with regard to pest-control work, see § 23.320[1].

Sellers of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units must deliver a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement to prospective buyers [see Civ. Code § 1102 et seq.; see also § 23.300]. The seller must indicate compliance with this disclosure requirement on the purchase agreement, an addendum, or a separate document [Civ. Code § 1102.3; see § 23.303 (separate document containing notice of compliance)]. A natural hazard disclosure statement is also required when the property is located within any special flood hazard area, potential flooding (inundation) area, very high fire hazard zone, state fire responsibility area, earthquake fault zone, or seismic hazard zone [see Civ. Code § 1103; see also § 23.302]. The CAR form provides for the delivery to the buyer of the required disclosure statements as well as any disclosure notice made available by a local agency levying a special tax on the property pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [see Gov. Code § 53311 et seq.].

For transactions involving most residential property built before 1978, sellers must provide buyers with federal lead-based paint disclosures and pamphlet [see 42 U.S.C. § 4852d; 24 C.F.R. § 35.84 et seq.; 40 C.F.R. § 745.100 et seq.; see also §§ 23.311[2], 23.312[2]]. The CAR form provides for their delivery.

If the transaction involves a unit in a condominium, planned development, or other common interest subdivision, the CAR form provides that the seller will request from the homeowners' association and provide to the buyer copies of various governing and other documents [see Ch. 34, Condominiums].

As to all of these disclosures, the CAR form states that the seller will provide the disclosures within a specified number of days of the seller's acceptance of the buyer's offer. The buyer then has a specified number of days to complete review and disapprove any unacceptable items.

If a seller of residential real property knows that any release of an illegal controlled substance has come to be located on or beneath the real property, the seller must give written notice advising of that condition to the buyer before sale of the property. Notice is given by checking "yes" on the appropriate question on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6] and attaching a copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as the Department of Toxic Substances Control, the county health department, or the local environmental health officer [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1940.7.5 (similar disclosure requirements applicable to landlord)]. For additional discussion, including a definition of "illegal controlled substance," see § 23.20[12].

The seller of any real property subject to the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. must also disclose if the property being transferred is subject to a continuing lien securing the levy of special taxes pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code § 53111 et seq.] or to a fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500 et seq.], which concerns street improvements, or to a contractual assessment program authorized pursuant to Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24 [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(a)(2)]. The seller must make a good faith effort to obtain and deliver to the transferee a disclosure notice concerning the special Mello-Roos tax provided in Gov. Code § 53340.2, and the assessment installment provided in Gov. Code § 53754, from each local agency that levies the special tax or that collects the assessment installments [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(b)].

A seller may satisfy the disclosure notice requirements by delivering a disclosure notice obtained from a nongovernmental source that satisfies the specified requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(1); see Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(3) (provision does not change ability to make disclosures pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.4)]. With regard to each type of required disclosure, a notice provided by a private entity other than a designated office, department, or bureau of the levying entity may be modified as needed to clearly and accurately describe either of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(2)]:

- A special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy a special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act against the property. This notice must include the name of the Mello-Roos levying taxes against the property, the annual tax due for the Mello-Roos for the current tax year, the maximum tax that may be levied against the property in any year, the percentage by which the maximum tax for the Mello-Roos may increase per year, and the date until the tax may be levied against the property for the Mello-Roos and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the Mello-Roos.

- Special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 against the property. This notice must include the name of the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, the current annual tax on the property for the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915.

For additional discussion of this disclosure requirement, see § 23.20[13].

[x] Seller Warranties

Optional provisions in the CAR form set forth seller warranties regarding the condition of the property at the time possession is made available to the buyer [see § 23.200[1][e][vi]]. Unless these provisions are modified to state that they will survive delivery of possession, the buyer may not bring an action for any breach of the warranties occurring after that time [see Burnand v. Nowell (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5, 189 P.2d 796 ; see also § 23.200[2], P 7.01].

[xi] Inspections and Condition of Property

A comprehensive clause in the CAR form authorizes the buyer, usually at the buyer's expense, to order inspections, tests, and investigations of the property and to terminate the agreement if those inspections reveal information or conditions unsatisfactory to the buyer.

Several alternative contingencies may be tailored to specific types of inspections. For example, the buyer may be empowered to accept or reject a survey of unimproved real property [see § 23.201[2]] and specifically to order the performance of geological inspections [see § 23.201[2]; see also § 23.201[1][e][ii]]. The buyer may be empowered to order and approve an inspection by a licensed contractor and/or a roof inspection [see § 23.202[2]]. The contract may require a pest-control inspection and the performance of related corrective work [see § 23.202[2]; see also § 23.203[1][c][viii]]. The purchase may be conditioned on a determination by the buyer (made after the execution of the sale contract) that the property is suitable for the buyer's intended purpose [see § 23.234].

The CAR form also provides that the buyer has the right to make a final inspection of the property within a specified number of days before the close of escrow, not as a contingency, but to verify that the seller has complied with his or her obligations under the agreement.

[xii] Proration

The CAR form provides for the proration of certain assessments, taxes, interest, rents, premiums on insurance assumed by the buyer, and other payments between the buyer and seller as of the close of escrow. Any exceptions must be agreed to in writing.

[xiii] Removal of Buyer's Contingencies

The CAR form provides that the seller may, after giving buyer a notice to perform, cancel the agreement if buyer does not remove an applicable contingency. Once all contingencies are removed, failure of either buyer or seller to close escrow on time may be a breach of the agreement.

[xiv] Liquidated Damages

California law regulates the scope and use of liquidated-damages provisions [see Civ. Code §§ 1676, 1677]. The CAR form incorporates the requirements that apply to a liquidated-damages provision in a contract for the sale of residential property primarily consisting of a one-to-four-unit dwelling, when the buyer intends to occupy at least one of the units as his or her residence [see Civ. Code § 1675; see also § 23.203[1][c][v]].

If the deposit on the property is to be made in two or more payments, a separate liquidated-damages provision must be inserted for each payment [see Civ. Code § 1678]. The liquidated-damages provision must be separately initialed by each party [Civ. Code § 1677(a)].

[xv] Dispute Resolution

The CAR form provides that the parties will first mediate disputes or claims, unless excepted, arising between them before resorting to arbitration or court action. The provision for binding arbitration of disputes meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1298 with regard to title, format, and the statutory notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(a)- (c)].

This provision must be separately initialed by the parties. For further discussion of these requirements, see § 23.253[1], which contains alternative arbitration provisions providing for the use of the rules of the American Arbitration Association or rules set forth in the California Arbitration Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.].

[d] Offer and Deposit

The portion of the form preceding the buyer's signature constitutes an offer to purchase the described property and a receipt for the buyer's deposit. It does not become a binding contract unless and until the seller signs the "Acceptance of Offer" clause and delivers it to the buyer [see § 23.203[1][b][i]].

[e] Agreement Between Seller and Broker

[i] Amount of Commission

The CAR form provides that the seller agrees to pay compensation to the broker as specified in a separate written agreement between the seller and the broker. Brokers are not parties to the agreement. The form also includes provisions that may be used if the commission is to be split between the seller's broker ("listing broker") and another broker ("cooperating broker"). For discussion of splitting commissions, see § 23.200[1][c][v].

[ii] Statutory Commission Notice

If the CAR form will alter the terms of any previous contract providing for compensation, the form will be subject to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5. Alteration of the terms of any contract that previously established a right to compensation means an increase in the rate of compensation, or the amount of compensation if initially established as a flat fee, provided in the contract that previously established a right to compensation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5].

Note that the CAR form will not be the first document to establish the right of the seller's broker to a commission, because sellers and brokers enter into listing contracts at the time the property is put on the market [see Ch. 21, Agreements with Real Estate Brokers and Agents for CAR's standard listing agreements]. If, however, Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5 does apply, the following statement must appear in at least 10-point boldface type immediately preceding any provision in the contract relating to a real estate licensee's compensation: "Notice: The amount or rate of real estate commissions is not fixed by law. They are set by each broker individually and may be negotiable between the seller and broker." Because there is no room on the CAR form for the statutory notice, the compensation should not be specified and the form should instead refer to an attachment containing the statutory notice and the compensation figure.

For further discussion of the compensation for a real estate licensee, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents .

[f] Additional Provisions

[i] Risk of Loss

Before signing the CAR form, the parties should determine whether they wish to add provisions dealing with topics that are not covered by the form [see § 23.203[2], P 25 ("Other Terms and Conditions, including attached supplements")]. For instance, the form does not mention the transfer of the risk of loss. Any real property sale contract made in California for the purchase and sale of real property will be interpreted as including an agreement that the parties will be bound by the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act [Civ. Code § 1662] unless the contract provides otherwise. Under the Act, the responsibility for the property shifts from the seller to the buyer on the transfer of legal title or possession [Civ. Code § 1662]. This can present problems, because there are gaps in the Act's allocation of risks. Specifically, under the Act, the seller assumes the risk of loss only following the destruction or condemnation of "all or a material part" of the property [Civ. Code § 1662]. The Act does not define "material part" and does not detail who is to bear the risk of any nonmaterial, pre-transfer loss [see Civ. Code § 1662]. For a provision that fills these gaps, see §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2]. For another provision that gives the drafter an opportunity to select a different method of allocation of risk, see § 23.251.

[ii] Disclosure of Agency Relationship

A licensed real estate broker under whose license a listing contract is signed or an offer to purchase is obtained must disclose whether he or she is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, exclusively as the buyer's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17] and must confirm this disclosure in writing [Civ. Code § 2079.17; see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (imposing related obligation to provide sellers and buyers with related statutory disclosure form)]. The written confirmation must appear either in the sale contract or in a separate writing [Civ. Code § 2079.17; see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents]. The CAR form contains such a confirmation. For further discussion, see § 23.210.

[iii] Contingency Not Met

The sale contract should specify the consequences of a failure to meet any contingency. The options are numerous, including automatic cancellation of the contract, cancellation at the option of the party intended to benefit from the contingency, an option or obligation on the part of the defaulting party to attempt to remedy the default, the benefiting party's option to attempt to remedy the default or to proceed with the transaction (with or without a corresponding reduction in the purchase price), and waiver of the contingency.

The CAR form provides that within the specified number of days after acceptance, the buyer must remove the loan contingency or cancel the agreement. Additional provisions for dealing with financing contingencies are set forth in §§ 23.200[2] and 23.201[2]. For discussion of the options presented by those provisions, see §§ 23.200[1][d][iv] and 23.201[1][e][x].

§ 23.204 Counteroffer [CAR Form CO]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the California Association of Realtors (CAR) standardized counteroffer form [CAR Form CO, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R) endorsement not implied]. It may be used with CAR's residential purchase agreement [see § 23.203[2]].

A purchase agreement serves as an offer and does not become a binding contract unless and until it is signed by the seller [see § 23.203[1][b][i]]. However, because it would be unusual for a seller to agree to every term in the buyer's offer without any changes or additions whatsoever, in practice the usual procedure is for the seller to submit a counteroffer setting forth any modified or additional terms. Often the submission of a counteroffer is preceded by informal negotiations between the parties and their brokers over a term (such as price) that may be a point of contention, and the counteroffer will be used to memorialize the parties' informal agreement on such terms. For further discussion, see [c], below.

The CAR form may also be used by the buyer to make a subsequent counteroffer to the seller's counteroffer.

[b] Laws Governing Acceptances and Counteroffers

One of the elements of a contract is the consent of the parties [Civ. Code § 1550]. The consent must be free, mutual, and communicated by each party to the other [Civ. Code § 1565]. Further, it must be absolute and unqualified. A qualified acceptance is not an acceptance at all, but a new proposal [Civ. Code § 1585], and it has the effect of rejecting the original offer and making a counteroffer [Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750-752, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335 ; Apablasa v. Merritt & Co. (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 719, 726, 1 Cal. Rptr. 500] . A conditional acceptance terminates the offeree's power to accept the original offer, unless the offeror in the offer or the offeree in the counteroffer provides that the counteroffer will not terminate the offer [Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335] .

The CAR form provides that the terms and conditions of the offer to which the counteroffer relates are accepted subject to changes or amendments listed on the counteroffer form. It states that unless otherwise specified in writing, down payment and loan amounts will be adjusted in the same proportion as in the original offer. Under California law, this would be considered a conditional acceptance and a counteroffer [see Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 750-752, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335] . Therefore, unless the purchase agreement or the counteroffer states that the counteroffer will not terminate the preceding offer, the use of the CAR form technically terminates the power to accept the original offer [see Landberg v. Landberg (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 742, 757, 101 Cal. Rptr. 335] . Thereafter, the CAR counteroffer form serves as an offer by the party making it, which incorporates by reference many of the terms of the purchase agreement. Notwithstanding these principles of contract law, users of the form may routinely assume that they are making a conditional acceptance of the original offer and that the execution of the form constitutes a final acceptance of that offer.

[c] Counteroffer Procedure

[i] Completion of Form

The CAR form will be used to propose or memorialize both modifications of and additions to a purchase agreement. A modification of a particular term should begin by identifying that item. For example, the seller may state that "Paragraph 11 of the above purchase agreement is modified as follows: _____." The seller should then specify the manner in which the seller wishes to alter the original clause. After listing all modifications, terms may be added that do not conflict with the offer to which the counteroffer relates, by providing, for example, that "the above purchase agreement is further modified by the addition of the following terms:" and then listing them.

For discussion of the provisions of the CAR purchase agreement, including recommendations for additions or modifications, see § 23.203[1].

[ii] Notation on Purchase Agreement Regarding Seller's Counteroffer

In addition to completing the CAR form, the seller should insert a reference to it on the purchase agreement. This can be accomplished by checking the box preceding "SUBJECT TO ATTACHED COUNTER OFFER, DATED _____" in the seller's acceptance clause on the purchase agreement [see § 23.203[2], P 33].

[iii] Submission to Buyer and Other Offers

The CAR form states that the seller may accept another offer any time before receipt by the seller (or the seller's designated agent) of a copy of the counteroffer, accepted and signed by the buyer. The form imposes a deadline on the buyer's acceptance. The counteroffer is revoked if that deadline passes or the seller accepts another offer.

The receiving party is given the opportunity to accept the counteroffer, or to accept the counteroffer conditionally, subject to an attached counteroffer. When additional negotiations are necessary, one of the parties should seriously consider drafting a new offer. This is preferable to preparing additional documents that refer to the deposit receipt and the first counteroffer, because the use of multiple documents can be very confusing and often results in inadvertent omissions, misstatements, and conflicting terms.

§ 23.205 Addendum to New Construction Residential Purchase Agreement [CAR Form NCAD]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the California Association of Realtors (CAR) New Construction Addendum to New Construction Purchase Agreement [CAR Form NCAD, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R) endorsement not implied]. It is for use to comply with the provisions of Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")]. The form should be used only in those situations when a residence is to be constructed by the close of escrow.

The construction defects legislation imposes obligations and responsibilities on, but is not limited to, a builder, developer, general contractor, contractor, or original seller, who, at the time of sale, was also in the business of selling residential units to the public for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim or was in the business of building, developing, or constructing residential units for public purchase for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim [Civ. Code § 911(a); see § 23.20A]. In addition, these provisions are only applicable to new residential units when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003 [Civ. Code § 938]. The term "builder" for these purposes does not include any entity or individual whose involvement with a residential unit that is the subject of the homeowner's claim is limited to his or her capacity as general contractor or contractor and who is not a partner, member of, subsidiary of, or otherwise similarly affiliated with the builder. These nonaffiliated general contractors and nonaffiliated contractors are treated the same as subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals [Civ. Code § 911(b)].

For discussion, see § 23.20A. For sample provisions addressing the construction defects legislation in a general form of contract for the sale of real property, see § 23.200[2].

§ 23.210 Disclosure of Exclusive or Dual Agency by Real Estate Agent

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory statement confirming that a licensed real estate broker, under whose license a listing contract is signed or an offer to purchase is obtained, has made a required disclosure regarding the nature of the broker's real estate agency relationship with a buyer or seller of real property [Civ. Code § 2079.13(a)]. The agency disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.13, 2079.16, 2079.17] apply only when the transaction involves either (1) a perpetual estate, an estate of inheritance, or a life estate in property containing one-to-four dwelling units, (2) any leasehold in the foregoing type of property exceeding one year's duration, or (3) a mobilehome [see Civ. Code § 2079.13(j) (definition of "real property"); see also Civ. Code § 761(1), (2)]. This confirmation statement may be included in the miscellaneous provisions in any of the complete real property sale contracts set forth in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

For discussion of additional requirements applicable to real estate brokers, see § 23.22.

[b] Applicable Definitions

The disclosure requirements vary depending on whether the broker is a listing agent or a selling agent, and whether the broker is serving as a dual agent. The following definitions apply for these purposes:

- An "agent" is a person (including a licensed real estate broker) under whose license a listing contract is signed or an offer to purchase is obtained [Civ. Code § 2079.13(a)].

- A "listing agent" is a person who has obtained a listing of real property to act as an agent for compensation [Civ. Code § 2079.13(f); see Civ. Code § 2079.13(a)].

- A "selling agent" is a listing agent who acts alone, or an agent who acts in cooperation with a listing agent, and who sells or finds and obtains a buyer for real property; or an agent who locates property for a buyer or finds a buyer for a property for which no listing exists, and presents an offer to purchase to the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.13(n)].

- A "dual agent" is an agent acting, either directly or through an associate licensee, as agent for both the seller and the buyer in the sale transaction [Civ. Code § 2079.13(d)].

[c] Disclosure Requirement

As soon as practicable, a selling agent must disclose to the buyer and the seller whether the selling agent is acting in the sale transaction exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both buyer and seller [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a)]. Similarly, as soon as practicable, a listing agent must disclose to the seller whether the listing agent is acting exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both parties [Civ. Code § 2079.17(b)].

These disclosures may first be made either orally or in writing [see Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)] but must then be confirmed in the sale contract or in a separate writing signed or acknowledged by the parties coincident with the making of the contract [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b); see also Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents]. The wording of the written confirmation is specified by statute [see Civ. Code § 2079.17(c)].

§ 23.211 Home Equity Sale Contract Notices [Civ. Code §§ 1695.3(h), 1695.5(a)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, consists of two statutory notices that must be included in home equity sale contracts. Those include most contracts for the sale of a residence in foreclosure when the sale is outside the normal foreclosure procedure [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(a), (e); see also [b], below]. The disclosures and related statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.] are intended to protect homeowners from being induced, through misrepresentations or other unreasonable commercial practices, to sell their homes in foreclosure for a fraction of fair market value during the period between the commencement of foreclosure proceedings and the scheduled foreclosure sale date [see Civ. Code § 1695 (legislative intent)]. Any waiver of these statutory provisions is contrary to public policy, void, and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1695.10].

In addition to these notices, a separate form of notice of cancellation must be attached to the home equity sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.5(b); § 23.307 (statutory form)]. Further, a representative of an equity buyer must make related disclosures before the transfer of any interest in the real property that is the subject of the home equity sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.17; § 23.308; see also Civ. Code §§ 1695.15, 1695.16].

For discussion of foreclosure, see Ch. 25D, Foreclosure .

[b] Definitions

The key term, "contract," means any offer or any contract, agreement, or arrangement, or any term of such a contract, between an equity buyer and equity seller incident to the sale of a residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.1(e)]. Regarding whether the buyer qualifies as an equity buyer ("equity purchaser" is the statutory term) and whether the seller is therefore an equity seller, see § 23.11[3].

The terms "residence in foreclosure" and "residential real property in foreclosure" mean residential real property consisting of one-to-four family dwelling units, one of which the owner occupies as his or her principal residence, and against which there is an outstanding notice of default recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 2920 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1695.1(b); see Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans].

"Property owner" means the record title owner of the residential real property in foreclosure at the time the notice of default was recorded [Civ. Code § 1695.1(f)].

[c] Contract Requirements

[i] Format, Language, and Signatures

Every home equity sale contract must be written in letters of a size equal to 10-point boldfaced type, in the same language (English, Spanish, and so forth) as that principally used by the equity buyer and equity seller to negotiate the sale of the residence in foreclosure. Further, the contract must be fully completed, signed, and dated by the equity seller and equity buyer before the execution of any instrument of conveyance of the residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.2].

[ii] Contents

Every home equity sale contract must contain the entire agreement of the parties and must include the following terms [Civ. Code § 1695.3]:

- The equity buyer's name, business address, and telephone number;
- The address of the residence in foreclosure;
- The total consideration to be given by the equity buyer in connection with or incident to the sale;
- A complete description of the terms of payment or other consideration, including any services that the equity buyer represents he or she will perform for the equity seller before or after the sale;
- The time at which possession is to be transferred;
- The terms of any rental agreement;
- The statutory notice of the equity seller's right to cancel the contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.5(b); see also [d][iii], below]; and
- The statutory notice regarding related rights of equity sellers (the form in [2], below) [see Civ. Code § 1695.3(h); see also [d][ii], below].

With the exception of the disclosures set forth in the form in [2], below, the foregoing information will be present in any well-drafted real property sale contract. Consequently, the disclosures can be added to any of the illustrative real property sale contracts included in this chapter, in order to prepare a valid home equity sale contract.

[d] Cancellation of Contract

[i] Right to Cancel

In addition to any other right of rescission, an equity seller has the right to cancel any contract with an equity buyer until the earlier of (1) midnight of the fifth business day [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(d) ("business day" defined)] following the day on which the equity seller signs any contract or (2) 8:00 a.m. on the day scheduled for the sale of the property pursuant to a power of sale conferred in a deed of trust [Civ. Code § 1695.4(a)]. In addition, until the equity buyer has complied with the requirements concerning notification of cancellation rights, the equity seller may cancel the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.5(d); see Civ. Code § 1695.5(a)- (c)]. Cancellation occurs when the equity seller personally delivers written notice of cancellation to the address specified in the contract [see § 23.307] or sends a telegram indicating cancellation to that address [Civ. Code § 1695.4(b)].

Until the time within which the equity seller may cancel the transaction has fully elapsed, the equity purchaser may not:

- Accept or induce the equity seller's execution of any instrument of conveyance of any interest in the residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(1)].

- Record with the county recorder any document, including any instrument of conveyance, signed by the equity seller [Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(2)].

- Pay the equity seller any consideration [Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(4)].

- Transfer or encumber (or purport to transfer or encumber) any interest in the residence in foreclosure to any third party.

However, a violation of this last prohibition will not defeat or affect a grant of an interest or encumbrance to a good faith purchaser or encumbrancer for value and without notice of the violation. For these purposes, knowledge on the part of the buyer or encumbrancer that the property was "residential real property in foreclosure" will not constitute notice of the violation. This protection for good faith purchasers or encumbrancers does not abrogate any duty of inquiry that exists as to rights or interests of persons in possession of the residential real property in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(3)].

For a discussion of the rescission of a home equity sale transaction in which the buyer, by the terms of the transaction, takes unconscionable advantage of the property owner in foreclosure [see Civ. Code § 1695.13], and a form for rescission, see § 23.324.

[ii] Notice of Right to Refrain From Executing Instruments of Conveyance

Until the rescission period has elapsed, the equity buyer must not accept or induce the equity seller's execution of any instrument of conveyance of any interest in the residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(1)]. This prohibition is the subject of the first statutory notice set forth in the form in [2], below.

The statutory notice of the equity seller's right to refrain from executing instruments of conveyance must appear in at least 14-point boldface type if the contract is printed, or in capital letters if the contract is typed. The equity seller must add the name of the equity buyer to the notice. The notice must appear immediately above the statutory statement of the seller's right to cancel [Civ. Code § 1695.3(h); see [iii], below].

[iii] Notice of Right to Cancel

The second paragraph of the form in [2], below, consists of the statutory notice of an equity seller's right to cancel a home equity sale contract [see [i], above]. This notice must appear immediately after the statutory notice regarding the seller's right to refrain from executing conveyance documents, and in immediate proximity to the space reserved for the equity seller's signature. The notice must appear in at least 12-point boldface type if the contract is printed, or in capital letters if the contract is typed. The equity buyer must accurately enter the date and time of day on which the rescission right ends [Civ. Code § 1695.5(a); see [i], above].

For a separate notice of the right to cancel, which must be provided in addition to this notice and must be attached to the home equity sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.5(b)], see § 23.307.

[e] Additional Limitations on Equity Buyers

An equity buyer is subject to two additional limitations. First, the equity buyer must not make untrue or misleading statements regarding any aspect of the sale [see Civ. Code § 1695.6(d) (specific prohibitions against untrue or misleading statements)]. Second, if an equity seller conveys his or her residence in foreclosure to an equity buyer but reserves or obtains an option to repurchase, the equity buyer cannot have an encumbrance placed on the property or grant any interest in the property to any other person without the equity seller's written consent [Civ. Code § 1695.6(e); see Civ. Code § 1695.12; see also [h], below]. However, this does not preclude the application of provisions concerning the rights of a good faith purchaser or encumbrancer for value [Civ. Code § 1695.6(e); see Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(3)].

[f] Criminal Penalties

Equity buyers who violate Civ. Code § 1695.6 or engage in fraudulent or deceptive practices are subject to a fine, imprisonment, or both [Civ. Code § 1695.8].

[g] Actions by Equity Sellers

An equity seller can recover specified damages or obtain other equitable relief against an equity buyer who takes unconscionable advantage of the equity seller [see Civ. Code § 1695.13] or who violates any of the other restrictions applicable to equity buyers [see Civ. Code § 1695.6 (restrictions)], provided the equity seller brings the action within four years after the date of the alleged violation [see Civ. Code § 1695.7]. In addition, a court may award exemplary damages or equitable relief, or both. Alternatively, the court may award a civil penalty of up to $2,500, but the court may not award both exemplary damages and a civil penalty [Civ. Code § 1695.7].

[h] Conveyance With Repurchase

If an equity seller purports to make an absolute conveyance of his or her residence in foreclosure to an equity buyer but reserves or obtains an option to repurchase, there is a presumption that the transaction does not involve an absolute conveyance but is instead a loan transaction. Specifically, it is presumed that the equity buyer has made a loan to the equity seller, and that the loan is secured by a mortgage. However, this presumption may be overcome by clear and convincing evidence that the transaction is indeed an absolute conveyance with an option to repurchase. The presumption will not apply to a good faith buyer or encumbrancer for value [see Civ. Code § 1695.12].

[i] Survival and Effect of Contract

A home equity sale contract will survive the delivery of any instrument of conveyance of the residence in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.3]. Apparently this provision is intended to supplement other provisions prohibiting the equity buyer from accepting or inducing the seller's execution of an instrument of conveyance or recording an instrument of conveyance signed by the seller before the expiration of the seller's right to cancel [see Civ. Code § 1695.6(b)(1), (2); see also [d][i], above].

A home equity sale contract will not have an effect on persons other than the parties to the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.3(h)].

§ 23.220 Buyer to Provide Straight Note

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a payment provision for a real property sale contract. It provides for a down payment and states that the balance of the purchase price will be payable according to the terms of a "straight" (also referred to as a "noninstallment" or "flat") promissory note. It may be substituted for the payment provisions contained in §§ 23.200[2] and 23.202[2].

Under a straight note, the entire principal, with or without interest, is paid in one lump sum at a specified time, usually expressed as "on or before" a specified number of days, months, or years from a triggering event (such as the close of escrow). Interest may or may not be charged. The payment provision may conclude with a sentence that provides for a single payment of interest at the time the principal is paid.

[2] FORM

Buyer to Provide Straight Note

1.01. Amount and Terms of Payment. The total purchase price of the Property is $_____, payable by Buyer to Seller as follows:

(a) The sum of $_____ shall be paid on execution of this contract, as a deposit to be applied to the purchase price at the close of escrow. This amount shall be payable _____ [specify, e.g., by certified or cashier's check drawn to the order of the escrow agent].

(b) The balance shall be paid according to the terms of a promissory note in the form of Exhibit _____, which is attached to this contract and incorporated by reference. The note shall be payable to the order of Seller and shall provide that the entire principal amount shall be paid in one lump sum on or before _____ [specify time period, e.g., the one-year anniversary date of the close of escrow. If that day is a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the due date shall be the next business day]. _____ [The note shall further provide for interest from the close of escrow on the principal amount at the rate of _____ percent per annum and shall provide for payment of the interest at the time the principal is paid.]

§ 23.221 Buyer to Assume Existing Encumbrance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, consists of alternative purchase price provisions that permit the buyer either to take subject to or to assume an existing encumbrance. It may be used in lieu of the payment provisions in §§ 23.200[2] and 23.202[2].

[b] Purchase of Property Subject to Existing Encumbrance

A buyer of real property who elects to purchase the property "subject to" an existing mortgage or deed of trust does not assume or agree to pay the debt secured by the mortgage or deed of trust [Wolfert v. Guadagno (1933) 130 Cal. App. 661, 663, 20 P.2d 360] and does not become personally liable for the debt [Braun v. Crew (1920) 183 Cal. 728, 731, 192 P. 531 ; Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 599, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981] . The property remains the primary security for the obligation [Birkhofer v. Krumm (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 43, 50, 40 P.2d 553] . The seller (if he or she is the original trustor or mortgagor) remains personally liable for the payment of the debt, subject to the antideficiency provisions of Code of Civ. Proc. §§ 580b and 580d [see Ward v. DeOca (1898) 120 Cal. 102, 103, 52 P. 130 ; see also Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing]. If the original seller (as the original trustor or mortgagor) pays the sum due on the mortgage, the seller is subrogated to the mortgagee's right to foreclose against the property [Vincent v. Garland (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727-728, 58 P.2d 1320 ; see Civ. Code §§ 2848 (on payment of obligation, surety is entitled to enforce every remedy creditor has against principal), 2849 (surety is entitled to benefit of security held by creditor)].

[c] Assumption of Existing Encumbrance

A buyer of real property subject to a mortgage or deed of trust "assumes" the encumbrance (as part of the purchase price of the property) by agreeing to pay and discharge the debt for which the seller is liable and that is secured by the mortgage or deed of trust. The assuming buyer becomes personally liable for the debt to the mortgagee or beneficiary [Williams v. Naftzger (1894) 103 Cal. 438, 440, 37 P. 411] . This liability is established under the "equitable subrogation" theory [see Ward v. De Oca (1898) 120 Cal. 102, 104-106, 52 P. 130 ; see also Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. B]. Although the assuming buyer becomes the principal debtor of the mortgagee or beneficiary, the seller remains liable, but only as a surety for the buyer [Braun v. Crew (1920) 183 Cal. 728, 731, 192 P. 531] .

Under the statute of frauds, a contract by a buyer of real property to pay a debt secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on the property must be in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged (or that party's agent), unless the assumption is specifically provided for in the conveyance [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(6)]. For an illustrative assumption agreement and further discussion, see Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment , Pt. B.

[d] Owner's Statement and Beneficiary's Statement

The form in [2], below, contains optional provisions requiring the seller (or buyer) to submit a written request for an owner's statement or a beneficiary's statement regarding the existing encumbrance. An owner's statement is a written statement by the owner of the encumbered property concerning the terms, unpaid balance, validity, and enforcement of the promissory note and deed of trust. It is used to verify the seller's representations to the buyer of the nature and amount of the obligations secured by the existing deed of trust. For further discussion and illustrative forms, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows . A beneficiary's statement is a written statement by the holder of a deed of trust providing detailed information about the amount of the debt and other facts relating to the note. The beneficiary must provide the statement (along with a copy of the promissory note and deed of trust) on the written demand of the trustor, the trustor's successor in interest, or an escrow agent who is licensed under the escrow law or exempted from the licensing requirements [Civ. Code § 2943]. Such a request is usually made when the prospective buyer of real property is to take subject to or assume the existing encumbrance. For a request for a beneficiary's statement, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows . For further discussion and illustrative forms, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

§ 23.222 Buyer to Obtain Purchase Money Loan

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, empowers the buyer to obtain a commitment from an institutional lender for a purchase money loan. It may be inserted into any of the sale contracts in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2]. Because the buyer will use the proceeds of the third-party financing to pay some or all of the purchase price in cash on the close of escrow, the contract also should contain a clause providing for such a payment [see § 23.200[1][b]]. For further discussion of real estate financing, see Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans , and Ch. 30A, Construction Financing .

[b] Description of Loan

[i] Reasons for Specificity

A contract that is incomplete, uncertain, or indefinite in its material terms will not be specifically enforced in equity and may violate the statute of frauds [see § 23.15[2]]. This general rule has prevented the specific enforcement of real property sale contracts that required the buyer to obtain a loan when the terms of the loan were incompetently, indefinitely, or uncertainly described [Mills v. Skaggs (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659, 149 P.2d 204] .

Also, the buyer will want to limit the type of loan he or she will be required to accept. For example, a buyer who was obligated under a contract to obtain a "$20,000 loan at 5% for 20 years" could not thereafter reject a loan that included a prepayment penalty [Fry v. George Elkins Co. (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 256, 260, 327 P.2d 905] .

Moreover, to prevent the seller's property from being tied up for an unreasonable time, the seller should be certain that the buyer is seeking a loan with reasonable and realistic terms in view of current loan market conditions.

[ii] "Other Acceptable Terms"

Because institutional lending practices reflect the ever-changing state of the money market and a variety of other fluctuating factors, it is difficult, if not impossible, to anticipate the precise terms on which the buyer will be able to obtain financing. Consequently, the contract should provide the buyer with the flexibility to obtain a commitment for a loan on "other terms acceptable to the buyer." The seller should find this wording tolerable, because it increases the likelihood that the sale will be consummated.

[c] Contents of Form

The contract should specify the following terms of the loan and the loan commitment:

- The nature of the lender that may make the loan (that is, an institutional lender);
- The minimum amount of the loan;
- The term of the loan;
- The monthly payments to be made on the loan;
- The prepayment provisions to be contained in the loan instruments;
- The maximum interest the loan may bear;
- The loan fees (or "points") and costs, including late charges, penalties, and default fees, that the buyer may have to pay; and
- The deadline for obtaining the loan and the consequences of a failure to obtain it.

[d] Good Faith Efforts

The buyer's promise to make good faith efforts to obtain the loan is implied in any "new loan" contingency. Thus, a buyer was found not to have acted in good faith and to be liable for damages when he applied to two lenders but expressly refused to apply to the one lending institution that the buyer was advised would make the required loan [Fry v. George Elkins Co. (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 256, 260, 327 P.2d 905] . Consequently, the contract should provide that the buyer will apply to a specified number of lending institutions and will diligently furnish the institutions with all the documents and information they require to process the application. The contract also should empower the parties to name a specific lending institution.

[e] Deposit of Loan Instruments in Escrow

Anticipating that the buyer will obtain a satisfactory commitment, the contract should require the buyer and lending institution to deposit into escrow the documents required to enable the deed of trust securing the new loan to be recorded concurrently with the deed. This requirement should condition the close of escrow on the actual extension of the new loan to the buyer, and not merely on the issuance of a loan commitment by the lender.

[f] Alternatives to Formal Loan Commitments

The buyer may find that lenders are reluctant to issue formal loan commitments. The lender may only be willing to issue a letter that (1) states that the buyer qualifies for a loan, (2) contains a number of conditions to the making of the loan, and (3) expressly states that it is not a formal loan commitment and is not binding on the lender in any way. This type of document is generally regarded as being sufficient to meet a loan-commitment contingency because it is often the only loan assurance available to the buyer.

[g] Buyer's Efforts

The contract should require the buyer to apply to a specified minimum number of lenders, including (if desired) a specific lender, and to supply each lender diligently with the required information and documents. This provision is recommended by a series of decisions holding that when a contract contains a financing contingency, there is an implied covenant obligating the buyer to use due diligence to obtain the financing [Bewick v. Mecham (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 92, 99, 156 P.2d 757 ; Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 828, 837, 83 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; Fry v. George Elkins Co. (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 256, 261, 327 P.2d 905] . This implied covenant was breached by a buyer who, after being informed that banks were unlikely to provide the necessary financing but that a specified mortgage company would probably make the loan, unsuccessfully applied to only two banks [Fry v. George Elkins Co. (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 256, 260 261, 327 P.2d 905] . The recognition of this implied covenant in the contract and the specification of the identities of likely lenders or a minimum number of lenders should make it less likely that the seller could lose the benefit of the bargain because of a failure to meet a financing contingency.

§ 23.223 Purchase Price Not to Exceed VA-Determined Reasonable Value

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a clause that provides that a buyer will not be obligated to purchase real property if the purchase price exceeds the reasonable value of the property established by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (the former Veterans Administration, still known as the VA) [see 38 U.S.C. § 101(1)]. The VA guarantees real estate loans made by private lenders to qualified veterans or their spouses for the purchase of a home [see 38 U.S.C. § 3710]. Although there is no limitation on the purchase price of the home, the amount of the loan cannot exceed the reasonable value of the home as determined by the VA [38 U.S.C. § 3710(b)(5); see 38 U.S.C. § 3731]. A loan that exceeds this reasonable value may not be guaranteed [38 U.S.C. § 3710(b)(5); but see 38 U.S.C. § 3810(b)(7), (8) (limited exception for loans that are made to refinance certain other loans)], unless the veteran certifies to the VA that he or she has paid in cash from his or her own resources a sum equal to the difference between the purchase price or cost of the property and its reasonable value [see 38 C.F.R. § 36.4336(a)(3)]. The contract may authorize the buyer to terminate the transaction if the purchase price exceeds that reasonable value, but also should provide the buyer with the option of proceeding with the purchase. It may be inserted into §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

For additional coverage of the VA home-loan application process, see Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans .

Purchase Price Not to Exceed VA-Determined Reasonable Value

(_____) Valuation of Property. The establishment by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs of the reasonable value of the Property; provided that:

(1) The reasonable value shall not exceed the purchase price of the Property.

(2) Buyer shall obtain the determination within _____ [number] days of the execution of this contract.

(3) If that reasonable value exceeds the purchase price, or Buyer is unable to obtain a determination due to no fault of Buyer, Buyer may terminate this transaction by providing Seller with written notice of this election within _____ [number] days after the receipt by Buyer of the determination by the Department of Veterans Affairs of the reasonable value. If no determination had been obtained within _____ [number] days after execution of this contract, then Buyer may terminate this transaction by providing Seller with written notice of this election within _____ [number] days after that date.

(4) Buyer's failure to provide Seller with a timely notice of termination shall constitute a waiver of this condition.

§ 23.224 Seller to Obtain FHA Appraisal

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, empowers the buyer to terminate the contract without penalty if the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) determines that the appraised value of the real property is below a specified amount. It may inserted into one of the contracts in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

The FHA insures loans by private lenders on several types of residential structures [see 24 C.F.R. § 200.1 et seq.]. Because the amount of an FHA-insured loan is based on an appraisal of the property [see, e.g., 24 C.F.R. § 203.18(a)(2)- (4) (loan-to-value ratio on loans for principal and secondary residences)], the buyer may need to terminate the transaction if the appraised amount is so low that the buyer cannot obtain a sufficient FHA-insured loan. The common practice is to require the seller to obtain the appraisal.

For a guide to FHA loan programs, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing . For further discussion of these loans, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

(_____) FHA Appraisal. The delivery by Seller to Buyer of a written statement prepared by the Federal Housing Administration and specifying an appraised value for the Property of at least $_____; provided that:

(1) Seller shall obtain the determination as soon as possible but no later than _____ [date].

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this contract to the contrary, if Seller fails to provide such a statement, Buyer may terminate this transaction without forfeiting Buyer's deposit or incurring any other penalty, provided that Buyer notifies Seller in writing of this election by _____ [date].

(3) Buyer's failure to provide Seller with a timely notice of termination shall constitute a waiver of this condition.

§ 23.230 Buyer to Purchase Additional Parcels for Development

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be inserted into a contract for the sale of unimproved property [see § 23.201[2]] when (1) the buyer is a developer whose proposed project requires the purchase of more than one parcel, (2) the necessary parcels have different owners, and (3) the developer has not yet entered into a contract for the purchase of the other parcels. The buyer will not be required to perform his or her obligations under the underlying contract unless he or she is able to purchase the other necessary property.

[b] Purchase of Multiple Parcels

Developers of subdivisions, shopping centers, and other large projects frequently find that no single property owner can sell enough land for the proposed development. Faced with this situation, the developer could try to arrange a "package" deal under which all adjoining landowners sell their property as a unit under the same contract and in the same escrow, or the developer could enter into separate contracts with each of the landowners and make each of the contracts subject to the acquisition of the other necessary parcels. The second alternative probably occurs more frequently and is preferable because the developer can vary the terms of each contract to meet the demands of each seller.

[c] Terms of Purchase of Other Property

The contract may condition the purchase not only on the buyer's ability to purchase other property but also on the buyer's ability to purchase the other property on reasonable terms. Thus the buyer would not be not obligated to accept a loan on unfavorable terms. The specification of the maximum terms of the additional purchases also protects the seller who signs this contract. Were the close of escrow simply conditioned on the buyer's obtaining the other property, with the maximum terms for the purchase not stated, the buyer could refuse to purchase the other property at a reasonable price and then attempt to use the contingency as an excuse for withdrawing from the contract. To prevent the buyer from tying up the seller's property for an unlimited time, the contract should provide that the escrow for any other parcel must close simultaneously with the escrow for the purchase of the property that is the subject of the sale contract in which this provision will be inserted.

[2] FORM

(1) The purchase price of that property shall not exceed $_____.

(2) Not more than _____ [$_____ or _____ percent] of the purchase price shall be payable on close of escrow.

(3) The balance of the purchase price, with interest at the rate of not more than _____ percent per annum, shall be payable in equal _____ [e.g., monthly] installments over a period of not less than _____ [number] years according to the terms of a promissory note secured by a deed of trust on the property.

(4) The promissory note and deed of trust shall be in the forms attached as Exhibits _____ and _____, respectively.

§ 23.231 Buyer to Acquire Additional Property Pursuant to Other Contracts

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be inserted into § 23.201[2] (a complete contract for the sale of unimproved property) when the buyer must obtain additional parcels for an intended development, the buyer has already signed contracts to purchase those other parcels, and the buyer requires the simultaneous close of the escrows for all of the required parcels. If more than one other parcel is involved, a separate provision should be inserted for each parcel, so that the close of escrow is contingent on the simultaneous close of escrow for all affected parcels, and the buyer is protected against having to purchase some affected parcels even though the sale of another falls through. For a longer provision that may be used when contracts for the other parcels have not yet been signed, see § 23.230[2].

§ 23.232 Buyer to Sell Other Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be inserted into a contract for the sale of real property [see §§ 23.200[2], 23.202[2]] when the buyer wishes to finance the purchase with funds obtained from the sale of other real property, such as the buyer's former residence. It includes a release clause that permits the seller to accept another offer that is not contingent on the sale of other property unless the buyer waives this contingency [see [d], below].

[b] Timing of Other Sale

A buyer who wishes to sell real property and use the proceeds to fund the purchase of other property (as in the case of a sale of an existing residence and purchase of a new one) must decide whether to put the old property on the market before locating replacement property or to wait until after execution of the purchase contract for the replacement property. In most cases the seller of the replacement property will be more likely to agree on a contingent sale if a sale is already pending on the buyer's other property, because there is a greater likelihood that the other sale will be consummated within the specified time than if a buyer has not yet been found. This may be particularly important when the buyer is competing with other prospective buyers, inasmuch as an offer contingent on the sale of other property is usually at a disadvantage compared to an offer that contains no such contingency. Another advantage of finding a prospective buyer for the old property before agreeing to purchase the new property is that the seller of the old property will know how much he or she can expect to receive for the old property before negotiating the price and payment terms for the new property.

Conversely, a buyer who puts property on the market before finding suitable replacement property will be under pressure to find such property within a short time and may ultimately have to settle for property or terms that do not meet all the buyer's expectations. The buyer and his or her broker must assess the state of the market and the buyer's needs before deciding what to do. One way to minimize time pressure is to provide for a long escrow for the other sale.

[c] Coordinating the Close of Escrows

Many contracts containing this type of contingency provide for the simultaneous close of escrows. This contingency requires the escrow for the sale of the other property to occur before or simultaneously with the close of escrow for this transaction. The timing is important because proceeds of the first sale will be needed in order for the second to close. When deciding on the closing date, the parties should provide for a long escrow if the buyer has not yet found a buyer for the other property. To minimize procedural difficulties, it may be advisable to have the same escrow agent handle both escrows.

[d] Relief Clause

The contract should contain a relief clause giving the seller the right to (1) tentatively accept another offer to purchase the property if that offer is not subject to the sale of other property and (2) terminate the sale contract if the buyer does not waive the contingency of sale within a specified period (such as three days). In other words, if the seller receives a backup offer that is not contingent on the sale of other property, he or she can force the first buyer either to waive that contingency or to terminate the sale. This clause is very advantageous to sellers because they are not forced to wait and see whether the first prospective buyer will actually be able to sell his or her property; if a second prospective buyer makes an offer that contains no such contingency, the seller can accept it. Conversely, such a relief clause can be extremely undesirable to a buyer because it forces the buyer, in effect, to gamble on being able to sell the old property or obtain other financing [see [e], below] before the time set for close of escrow on the replacement property. If the buyer fails to do either, the buyer will breach the sale contract, forfeit any deposit, and face potential liability for any other damages to which the seller is entitled.

The seller might not insist on including a relief clause. For example, if the seller is in no hurry to move and would be willing to extend the close of escrow, if necessary, to give the buyer additional time to sell the other property, a relief clause may be viewed as unnecessary. However, the seller should be aware that if no relief clause is included, the buyer is in effect being given the right to tie up the property for an extended period (especially if the sale contract provides for a long escrow) while seeking a suitable buyer for the other property.

[e] Interim Financing

If the buyer is unable to sell the other property in time to meet close of escrow on the replacement property, and the seller will not agree to an extension of the closing date, the buyer may be able to obtain interim short-term financing (a "swing loan") to pay any amounts due at the close of escrow for the replacement property. In this situation, the buyer will be in the difficult position of temporarily owning both properties. However, it may give sufficient time to find a buyer and close an escrow on the existing property.

[2] FORM

Buyer to Sell Other Property

(_____) Sale of Other Property by Buyer. The close, before or simultaneously with the close of escrow under this contract, of an escrow for the sale by Buyer of that certain real property owned by Buyer, located at_____[complete street address], in _____ County, California, and described as follows: [insert legal description] (the "other property"); provided that:

(2) _____ [Add, if no sale is pending: Buyer agrees to make a concerted and good faith effort to find a purchaser for the other property and warrants that Buyer will not unreasonably reject any offer to purchase the other property meeting the basic requirements specified above.]

(3) Seller shall have the right to continue to offer the Property for sale to other purchasers.

§ 23.233 Seller to Buy Other Property

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be used when a seller of real property is not willing to go ahead with the transaction unless he or she is able to purchase suitable replacement property. Typically, this type of provision will be used when a seller wishes to condition the sale of his or her primary dwelling on the purchase of another home. To provide the buyer with a little protection, this type of provision may be modified, if desired, by adding a relief clause, similar to that contained in § 23.232[2], giving the buyer the right to terminate the contract and purchase other property if the seller has not found suitable replacement property within a specified time. For further discussion of contingencies relating to the sale of other property, see § 23.232[1].

[2] FORM

Other similar contingencies may concern a survey, soils tests, the approval of a subdivision map, and the issuance of a building permit [see § 23.201[2]] or the issuance of necessary permits, certificates, and licenses, performance of inspections of the property, and issuance of a certification that the property is free of infestation or infection caused by wood-destroying pests or organisms [see § 23.202[2]].

The form in [2], below, may be inserted into a real property sale contract [see §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2]] when the buyer intends to construct a commercial building on the property. It conditions the purchase on the buyer's ability to negotiate favorable leases with major tenants for the proposed development and specifies the minimum rental per square foot and the types of desired tenants. § 23.236 Seller to Deliver Disclosure Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, requires the seller of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units to provide the buyer with (1) a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement regarding the condition of the property [see [b], below], (2) an additional disclosure statement, if required by the city or county in which the real property is located [see [c], below], and (3) a statutory natural hazard disclose statement (when applicable) [see [d], below]. The form also empowers the buyer to cancel the transaction or to order one or more inspections of the property after reviewing the disclosure form or forms.

The disclosure requirements and related penalties for noncompliance [see § 23.300[1][g]] apply whether or not they are mentioned in the sale contract. Including this contingency in the contract permits the parties to impose an additional requirement, which is the delivery of the form or forms within a specified number of days, and to empower the buyer to terminate the contract after reviewing the disclosures.

Once the seller provides the buyer with the disclosures, the attorney for the seller should provide the buyer with the notice set forth in § 23.303[2].

[b] Standard Disclosure Statement

The seller of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units must complete and deliver a statutory real estate transfer disclosure form [see Civ. Code § 1102.6; see also § 23.300] to prospective buyers as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102]. The seller must indicate compliance with this disclosure requirement on the deposit receipt or other sale contract, an addendum to the contract, or a separate document [see Civ. Code § 1102.3]. For a notice of compliance and further discussion, see § 23.303.

[c] Local Option Disclosure Statement

Any city or county may require a seller subject to the disclosure requirement discussed in [b], above, to provide the transferee with a second disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1102.6a]. This second statement must be in the form specified by statute [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a(b)] or in an alternative form required by a local ordinance originally enacted before July 1990 [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)]. For further discussion and the statutory version of this statement, see § 23.301. The form in [2], below, requires the delivery of the disclosure form within a specified number of days. Before adopting this requirement, which is not imposed by statute, counsel should confirm that it does not conflict with the local ordinance that imposes the disclosure requirement.

[d] Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement

When the seller must provide the transferee with a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6, the seller (or the seller's agent) also must give the transferee a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement if the real property lies within a specified hazardous area [see Civ. Code § 1103(a), (c)]. Alternatively, this disclosure may be set forth in the local option disclosure statement [see [c], above], provided this statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warning set forth in the statutory disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(e)]. For further discussion and the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form, see § 23.302.

The form in [2], below, requires the delivery of the disclosure form within a specified number of days. This requirement is not imposed by statute. If the hazardous area disclosure will be set forth in the local option disclosure statement, counsel should confirm that this delivery requirement does not conflict with the local ordinance that requires the use of the local option form [see [c], above].

[2] FORM

Seller to Deliver Disclosure Form

(_____) Seller to Deliver Disclosures. The delivery by Seller to Buyer of a completed real estate transfer disclosure statement as required by Civil Code Section 1102 et seq. _____[add, if applicable: and a local option real estate transfer disclosure statement as required by Ordinance No. _____ of the _____ City Code] [add, if applicable: and a natural hazard disclosure statement as required by Civil Code Section 1103]; provided that:

(1) Delivery shall take place _____ [specify applicable time period or deadline, e.g., within _____ [number] days of the execution of this contract].

(2) Following receipt of the disclosure form[s], Buyer shall have _____ [number] days within which to review the form[s] and to notify Seller in writing of Buyer's decision, based on the contents of the disclosure form[s], to cancel this transaction or to order one or more inspections.

(3) If Buyer orders any such inspections, they shall be performed within _____ [number] days of the delivery of that notice.

(4) Buyer shall also have the right to cancel this transaction after obtaining the results of any such inspection, provided Buyer gives Seller written notice of the decision and a copy of the inspection report (if any) within _____ [number] days after the performance of the inspection.

(5) Buyer's failure to provide Seller with a timely notice to cancel or a notice of Buyer's intention to order one or more inspections shall constitute a waiver of this condition.

§ 23.237 Seller to Transfer Shares in Mutual Water Company

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, provides that the seller of real property will transfer to the buyer shares of stock in a mutual water company. It may be inserted into any of the complete sale contracts in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

[b] Mutual Water Company Shares

[i] Mutual Water Company

A mutual water company is a corporation that sells, distributes, supplies, or delivers water for domestic or irrigation use [Corp. Code § 14300]. This type of corporation is typically organized by water users in areas where there are supplies of privately owned water, for the purpose of having water supplied at a reasonable rate [see generally Corp. Code § 14300 et seq.; see also Corp. Code § 14310 et seq. (mutual water companies formed in connection with subdivided lands)]. The articles or bylaws of a mutual water company may (and usually will) provide that water can be sold or delivered only to owners of the corporation's shares and that each share will be appurtenant to land described in the share certificate [Corp. Code § 14300].

For further discussion of mutual water companies, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 20, Corporations for Specific Purposes (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Transfer of Shares

When an owner of real property to which water stock is attached or appurtenant wishes to transfer the land, the shares cannot be transferred until the recorded deed is shown to the secretary of the water company. Thereafter, the secretary will issue the grantee a new certificate of stock for the number of shares attached or appurtenant to the land as shown on the company's books [Corp. Code § 14302].

Although the shares cannot be transferred free of the land to which they are appurtenant, the land may be transferred without the rights represented by the shares. A reservation of water rights in a deed, without mention of the appurtenant shares, will accomplish this [Locke v. Yorba Irrigation Co. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 205, 209, 217 P.2d 425] .

§ 23.238 Seller to Transfer Membership in Owners' Association

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, provides for the endorsement and transfer of a certificate or other document needed to transfer the seller's membership in a common-interest development owners' association to the buyer. It may be inserted into any contract in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2]. Normally, the document will be deposited in escrow for eventual delivery to the buyer.

[b] Owners' Associations

Every condominium project, planned development, stock cooperative, or community apartment project subject to the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.; see Ch. 34, Condominiums] must be managed by an association, which may be incorporated or unincorporated [Civ. Code § 1363(a); see Civ. Code § 1351(a)]. The members of the association are the owners of the condominiums (or other separate interests). These associations are usually referred to as owners' (or homeowners') associations. Whether or not it is incorporated, the association may (unless the governing documents provide otherwise) exercise the powers granted to a nonprofit mutual benefit corporation [see Corp. Code § 7140], except that an unincorporated association may not adopt or use a corporate seal or issue membership certificates in accordance with Corp. Code § 7313 [Civ. Code § 1363(c)]. Most owners' associations are organized under the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 7110 et seq.] and therefore may issue membership certificates [see Corp. Code § 7313(b) (required contents of certificates); see also Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations].

§ 23.239 Party to Make Separate Agreement Pertaining to Property

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, requires one of the parties to a real property sale contract to make a separate agreement pertaining to the property. It may be inserted into any contract in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2] and may be used, for example, to require the buyer to convey some type of right or interest in the property, such as an easement [see Ch. 28A, Easements and Licenses], to the seller or to an owner of adjoining real property or to require the seller to sign a document benefiting the property to be conveyed to the buyer, such as a boundary agreement [see Ch. 28B, Party Walls and Boundary Agreements].

(2) The easement shall consist of a right-of-way for ingress and egress extending over that portion of the Property that is bordered by the northern, southern, and eastern boundaries of the Property and that extends westward 15 feet from the eastern boundary of the Property].

§ 23.250 Sale-Leaseback Provisions

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a sale-leaseback provision that may be inserted into any of the contracts in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2]. In a sale-leaseback, in its basic form, the buyer of real property simultaneously leases the property back to the seller. The transaction thus transfers the legal title to the real property (along with the financial benefits and burdens of ownership) without also transferring the right to occupy and use the property. The lease is usually for a long term and obligates the lessee (seller) to pay rent, real property taxes, insurance premiums, and operating costs associated with the property. The lessee may or may not have an option to repurchase the property on expiration of the lease or at some other future time.

Sale-leasebacks may involve either unimproved or improved land. A sale-leaseback of unimproved land typically contemplates its prompt development. Either the seller or the buyer may undertake the financial responsibility of developing the property. If the transaction involves improved property, the transaction may involve the sale-leaseback of both the land and the improvements, or of just the land or just the improvements (with the seller retaining ownership of the other) [see, e.g., Frank Lyon Co. v. United States (1978) 435 U.S. 561, 98 S. Ct. 1291, 55 L. Ed. 2d 550 (sale-leaseback of improvements only)].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 76, Sale-Leasebacks , Pt. B (Matthew Bender).

[b] Coordinating Provisions of Contract and Lease

The contract used in a sale-leaseback transaction can take many forms but need not differ significantly from sale contracts that do not involve leasebacks. In addition to the provisions found in any real property sale contract, all that is necessary is a requirement that the parties sign the related lease. If desired, the contract may also provide for the recordation of a memorandum of lease [see Ch. 34C, Retail, Industrial, and Office Leases]. The lease (rather than the sale contract) will govern the seller's continuing possession of the property, payment of rent, and other essential terms of the tenancy. The lease may be attached to the contract and incorporated by reference, or the contract may provide that the lease and the contract are to be signed simultaneously.

For discussion of the contents of leases used in these transactions, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 76, Sale-Leasebacks (Matthew Bender). For illustrative leases, see Ch. 34C, Retail, Industrial, and Office Leases ; see also Rohan, Real Estate Financing-- Text, Forms, Tax Analysis, Ch. 6, The Sale-Leaseback as a Financing Vehicle (Matthew Bender), and Rohan, Current Leasing Law and Techniques: Forms, Ch. 12, The Sale and Leaseback of Real Estate (Matthew Bender).

[c] Income Tax Aspects

[i] Federal Depreciation Rules

A taxpayer who owns the land on which his or her business is located may claim a reasonable allowance as a depreciation deduction for the exhaustion and wear and tear of the improvements or physical developments located on the land [I.R.C. § 167(a)(1)] but not for the cost of the land itself. For purposes of federal income taxation, most depreciable real and personal property placed into service after 1980 must be depreciated using the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS) [see I.R.C. § 168]; a modified depreciation system is used for most property placed in service after 1986 (MACRS) [I.R.C. § 168].

Under the MACRS, which governs depreciable property placed into service after 1986, the cost of the property is recovered over a specified number of years using a prescribed method of depreciation, depending on the classification of the property. This system more evenly matches class lives with the economic or useful lives of particular assets. After 1986 most real property is depreciated over 39 years (nonresidential property) or 27.5 years (residential rental property), using the straight line method [I.R.C. § 168(c)]. However, a taxpayer may elect (on a building-by-building basis) to use an alternative 40-year straight line depreciation recovery period [see I.R.C. § 168(g)]. Because the computation method is inflexible, and the depreciation periods are quite long, the amount of depreciation allowed in any one year may be small.

For further discussion, see Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift, and Estate Taxation, Ch. 45, Depreciation (Matthew Bender).

[ii] California Depreciation Rules

The Personal Income Tax Law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17001 et seq.] modifies I.R.C. § 168 by stating that any reference to a "tax imposed by this chapter" in that section means "net tax," as defined in Rev. & Tax. Code § 17039 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 17250(a)(1)]. Depreciation deductions under the Bank and Corporation Tax Law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.] are generally computed under separate statutory provisions rather than under incorporated federal provisions [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 24349-24356].

[iii] Ownership of Improvements

A taxpayer who sells the land on which his or her business is located to an investor and leases it back for use in the taxpayer's business cannot thereafter claim a depreciation deduction for any improvements belonging to the owner. However, the taxpayer can depreciate any leasehold improvements owned by the taxpayer. The deduction must be computed in the same manner as the deduction for the underlying property would be computed if that property had been placed in service at the same time as the improvement [I.R.C. § 168(i)(6); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17201, 24349(a)]. Thus the period of depreciation is fixed by statute (for instance, 39 years for nonresidential real property placed into service after 1986) and is not affected by the term of the lease [I.R.C. § 168(i)(8); see I.R.C. §§ 167(a), 168(c)]. If the tenancy is terminated before the expiration of that period, and the taxpayer does not remove the improvements, he or she can take a loss with respect to the remaining basis in the improvements [see § 23.26[5]].

[iv] Deduction of Rent Paid

A taxpayer participating in a sale-leaseback transaction also can deduct on his or her federal and California state income tax returns the full amount of all rent, including rent applicable to the land itself, that the taxpayer must pay as a condition to his or her continued use or possession of the land, provided the taxpayer has not acquired and is not acquiring an equity interest in the property [I.R.C. §§ 62, 162(a)(3); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17072, 17201].

[v] Taxable Gain or Loss to Seller

If, as is usually the case, the real property being sold under a sale and leaseback arrangement has been owned by the seller for more than six months and has been used in the seller's trade or business, it is classified as a "Section 1231" asset. Any gain realized by the seller on the sale of such an asset is treated as a long-term capital gain, with the exception that any gain realized on the sale must be treated as ordinary income to the extent of the losses from these transactions over the five preceding years [I.R.C. § 1231(b)(1), (c); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151]. Any loss realized by a seller on the sale of a Section 1231 asset is treated as ordinary loss fully deductible against other taxable income in the year of the sale [I.R.C. § 1231(a); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18151].

[vi] Recharacterization of Transaction

The important tax and financial advantages of sale-leasebacks will be destroyed if the IRS successfully recharacterizes the transaction as a like-kind exchange, a disguised financing device, an option to buy, or a sale of a residual interest in the subject real property.

If a real property lease with a term of at least 30 years is exchanged for fee title to real property, the transaction will be deemed an exchange of "like-kind" properties for federal and state taxation purposes [Treas Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(c)(2); see I.R.C. § 1031; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18031, 24941; see also Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift, and Estate Taxation, Ch. 43, Disposition of Real Estate (Matthew Bender)]. Any loss from the disposition of property in a like-kind exchange cannot be recognized [see I.R.C. §§ 1031(a), (c), 1231]. Recognition of gain is deferred until the property acquired in the exchange is sold. However, gain is recognized to the extent of the net amount of any money or other "unlike" property received in the exchange [see I.R.C. § 1031(a), (b)]. For further discussion of the characterization of the foregoing transaction as a like-kind exchange, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 76, Sale-Leasebacks (Matthew Bender).

Tax benefits will also be lost if the sale-leaseback is recharacterized as a long-term loan or other financing device. The determination will depend on the facts of the case and will be based on the actual economic effect of the transaction on the parties, rather than on the wording of the relevant documents or the clearly expressed intentions of the parties [Frank Lyon Co. v. United States (1978) 435 U.S. 561, 573, 98 S. Ct. 1291, 55 L. Ed. 2d 550] . As a general rule, if there is a genuine multiple-party transaction with economic substance that is compelled or encouraged by business or regulatory realities, is imbued with tax-independent considerations, and is not shaped solely by tax-avoidance features that have meaningless labels attached, the IRS should honor the parties' allocation of their respective rights and duties [Frank Lyon Co. v. United States (1978) 435 U.S. 561, 583, 98 S. Ct. 1291, 55 L. Ed. 2d 550] .

Although the principal challenges to sale-leasebacks involve financing devices and like-kind exchanges, recharacterization will also result if the transaction is found to be a grant of an option to buy the subject property [see, e.g., Estate of Franklin v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. 1976) 544 F.2d 1045, 1049] . It has also been suggested that a sale-leaseback is always a sale of a residual interest in the subject property, which is akin to a financing arrangement and therefore should be treated as such [see Del Cotto, Sale and Leaseback: A Hollow Sound When Tapped? 37 Tax Law Rev. 1 (1981)].

[d] Property Tax--Change of Ownership

The California Supreme Court has held that a sale-leaseback of property is a change of ownership for property tax purposes [see Pacific Southwest Realty Co. v. County of Los Angeles (1991) 1 Cal. 4th 155, 162, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536, 820 P.2d 1046 ; see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 60, 62(e), (g)].

§ 23.251 Risk of Loss

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, presents alternative contractual provisions allocating the risk of loss of real property before the close of escrow. Either alternative may replace the risk-of-loss provisions in the contracts in §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

[b] Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act

Any contract made in California for the purchase and sale of real property will be interpreted as including an agreement that the parties will be bound by the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act unless the contract provides otherwise. Under the act, the responsibility for the property shifts from the seller to the buyer on the transfer of legal title or possession [Civ. Code § 1662; see § 23.19].

There are gaps in the act's allocation of risks. Under the act, the seller assumes the risk of loss only following the destruction or condemnation of "all or a material part" of the property [Civ. Code § 1662]. The act does not define "material part" and does not detail who is to bear the risk of any nonmaterial, pre-transfer loss. For a provision that fills these gaps, see §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2].

§ 23.252 "As Is" Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be inserted into a real property sale contract by a seller who wishes to limit his or her potential liability for the condition of the property by expressly refusing to warrant or make representations concerning the condition of the property. A buyer-oriented option would permit the buyer to order an inspection of the property and to terminate the contract based on the results of the inspection.

Although some sellers insist on the inclusion of an "as is" clause, California law places significant limitations on the effectiveness and enforceability of these provisions [see [b], [c], below].

[b] Applicability to Visible Defects

An "as is" clause is void as against public policy, except to the extent that it is applied only to defective conditions visible to or observable by the buyer [Orlando v. Berkeley (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 224, 229, 33 Cal. Rptr. 860 ; see Civ. Code § 1668]. A seller must disclose to the buyer any material fact (such as the existence of a material defect) of which the seller is aware, if the fact affects the value of the property and the seller knows that the buyer would not observe the fact on inspection [see Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735-738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 ; Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349, 353, 164 P.2d 8] .

PRACTICE TIP

"As Is" Clauses Are Not Substantively Preclusive, But May Have Great Evidentiary Weight."As is" clauses are far from dispositive. They do not, for example, cover intentional non-disclosures by the seller. However, they do have great evidentiary impact in misrepresentation cases. Many judges in cases this commentator has litigated give great weight to this clause in commercial real estate matters, reasoning that the buyer had an opportunity to inspect and that the clause undercut the reliance element of a misrepresentation claim. By William M. Hensley.

[c] Effect of Statutory Disclosure Requirements

[i] In General

Any waiver of the statutory requirements applicable to sellers of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units [see Civ. Code § 1102 et seq.] is void as against public policy [Civ. Code 1102(c)]. Thus, the delivery of a real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.6; see also § 23.300] may not be waived in an "as is" sale [Civ. Code § 1102.1(a); Loughrin v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1195, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] .

Unlike an "as is" clause, the statutory disclosure statement is not intended to be part of the sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1102.6]. Further, it is neither a warranty by the seller or any agent representing any principal in the transaction nor a substitute for any inspections or warranties that the principals may wish to obtain [see Civ. Code § 1102.6].

[ii] Buyer's Acknowledgment of Disclosure

An "as is" clause obligates the buyer to accept the property with any defects that were visible to or observable by the buyer at the time of the execution of the contract [see Orlando v. Berkeley (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 224, 229, 33 Cal. Rptr. 860 ; see also [b], above]. A buyer who signs the disclosure statement before or simultaneously with the buyer's execution of the sale contract is, in effect, acknowledging his or her awareness of any defects described in the statement. If a dispute later arises regarding the applicability of the "as is" clause to particular defects, a court presumably can look to the buyer's acknowledgment of the statutory statement as evidence that the buyer was in fact aware of any defects described in it before executing the real property sale contract, and that those defects were therefore covered by an "as is" clause. There are no reported decisions on this point. A similar argument is possible in many cases even when the disclosure statement is delivered to the buyer after execution of the sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1102.3 (statement must be provided as soon as practicable before transfer of title)], because sale contracts often contain a clause making the contract contingent on the buyer's approval of the disclosure statement [see § 23.236].

§ 23.253 Arbitration

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, consists of two alternative arbitration provisions for a real property sale contract, which may be inserted into §§ 23.200[2], 23.201[2], and 23.202[2]. Arbitration is the submission for determination of a disputed matter to private unofficial persons selected in the manner provided by law or by the agreement of the parties [Stockwell v. Equitable Fire and Marine Ins. Co. (1933) 134 Cal. App. 534, 540, 25 P.2d 873] .

The first provision incorporates by reference the rules of the American Arbitration Association, while the second provides for the use of the rules set forth in the California Arbitration Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.]. For a detailed discussion of these arbitration schemes, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[b] Arbitration Disclosure Requirements Applicability

Statutory disclosure requirements apply to any contract to convey real property or a contract contemplated to convey real property in the future, if the contract contains a provision for binding arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(a); see [c], below]. The disclosure requirements also apply to contracts between principals and agents in real property sale transactions, including listing contracts [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(b); see Civ. Code § 1086(f)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Agents .

[c] Binding Arbitration

Although the term "binding arbitration" is not defined by statute, it is generally understood to refer to a system of arbitration under which the parties are bound by the arbitration award and are not entitled to judicial review of the award, except under extremely limited circumstances [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(c) (statutory notice describes binding nature of arbitration); see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(a) (effect of contract by attorney and client to be bound by award of arbitrators)]. The rules of the American Arbitration Association and the California Arbitration Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.] provide for binding arbitration. For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender)].

[d] Heading, Notice, and Format

If the real property sale contract contains a binding arbitration provision, the following requirements must be met.

- The arbitration provision must be clearly titled "ARBITRATION OF DISPUTES" (in capital letters) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(a)].

- The statutory arbitration notice (set forth as the last two paragraphs of the form in [2], below,) must appear immediately following the arbitration provision and immediately before the line or space provided for the parties to indicate their assent or nonassent to the arbitration provision [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(c)].

- Both the statutory notice and the arbitration provision must be in capital letters if the contract is typed. If the contract is printed, the provision must be in at least 8-point boldface type or in contrasting red in at least 8-point type, and the notice must be in at least 10-point boldface type or in contrasting red in at least 8-point boldface type [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(a), (c)].

PRACTICE TIP

Mediation Clauses. In many real estate purchase/sale contracts (including CAR forms), there is a provision providing that the parties must mediate any contractual dispute before pursing arbitration. This provision should not be ignored. As generally framed, the clause provides that a party who fails to submit to mediation first may forfeit the ability to recoup attorneys' fees under a contractual fee clause, at the discretion of the arbitrator or trial court. This commentator's experience is that arbitrators will enforce this provision against a party refusing to mediate in good faith. Out of three cases where an opposing party refused to mediate, the arbitrator during a subsequent arbitration refused to award attorneys' fees to the ultimate prevailing party. This penalty is a potent provision to use against uncooperative opposing parties in a real estate dispute. By William M. Hensley.

[e] Relationship to Other Laws

An arbitration provision subject to these disclosure requirements will not preclude or limit any right of action for bodily injury or wrongful death, or any right of action that is subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 (four-year statute of limitations for actions based on patent deficiencies in the construction of improvements to real property) or Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 (ten-year statute of limitations for actions based on latent deficiencies in the construction of improvements to real property) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298.7; but see Basura v. U.S. Home Corp. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 1212, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 328 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1298.7 is preempted by section 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 2], which prohibits courts from invalidating arbitration agreements under state laws applicable only to arbitration provisions); see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 104, Building Contracts (Matthew Bender)].

The statutory notice requirements do not diminish the authority of any court of competent jurisdiction with respect to real property transactions in areas involving court supervision or jurisdiction, including, but not limited to, probate, marital dissolution, foreclosure of liens, unlawful detainer, or eminent domain [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298(d)].

Any party to an action who proceeds to record a notice of pending action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 405.20] will not thereby waive any right of arbitration that that person may have pursuant to a written agreement to arbitrate, nor any right to petition the court to compel arbitration pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2, if, in filing an action to record that notice, the party at the same time presents to the court an application that the action be stayed pending the arbitration of any dispute that is claimed to be arbitrable and that is relevant to the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1298.5].

PRACTICE TIP

Arbitration Before JAMS/Endispute, American Arbitration Association or Other Bodies; Discovery Rights. Many arbitration clauses go so far as to specify that the arbitration shall take place in front of an arbitrator appointed by private arbitration services--such as JAMS/Endispute or the American Arbitration Association--or by some other body. In deciding whether or not to agree to such a contractual clause, one needs to keep in mind that there are significant differences between competing arbitration services as far as procedures, arbitrator selection methods, arbitrator candidate pools, arbitrator expenses, and the like. It is best to consult regional local counsel who happens to be knowledgeable of these geographical peculiarities.

Pretrial discovery may or may not be available in contractual arbitration. Generally, unless the parties expressly agree in their contract otherwise, in real estate disputes arbitral discovery is almost non-existent as most practitioners know it [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.1(b)]. However, if the parties incorporate pre-trial discovery procedures (especially deposition procedure), discovery may proceed and be regulated by the arbitrator much as in ordinary civil litigation [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1283.1(b), 1283.05]. By William M. Hensley.

§ 23.254 Statement of Seller's Spouse

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statement by the spouse of a seller of real property, to the effect that the spouse has no interest in the property being sold and will sign a quitclaim deed if necessary. It should be included immediately after the seller's signature block in the real property sale contract when the seller claims that the subject property is his or her separate property.

[b] Spouse's Right to Set Aside Conveyance

The use of the form in [2], below, is recommended because both spouses must sign any instrument conveying community real property, and a spouse who does not join in the execution of the instrument may bring an action to set aside the transfer within one year of the recording of the instrument of conveyance [Fam. Code § 1102(a), (d)]. A spouse who signs this statement will be estopped from setting aside the sale. The affirmative defense of estoppel may be asserted when the spouse had knowledge of the facts [Rice v. McCarthy (1925) 73 Cal. App. 655, 662, 666, 239 P. 56] and prejudiced or misled the grantee by his or her conduct [*Waldeck v. Hedden (1928) 89 Cal. § 23.260 Seller to Transfer Water Rights and Crop Allotment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, consists of two provisions that may be inserted into a contract for the sale of agricultural land [see § 23.200[2]] when the buyer is to acquire the water rights or crop allotment relating to the land.

[b] Water Rights

Water rights are appurtenant to real property and part of the real property [Copeland v. Fairview Land & Water Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 148, 154, 131 P. 119 ; see Ch. 36A, Mining Claims, Timber Interests, and Water Rights]. Therefore, unless expressly reserved, they pass as an incident to real property by a conveyance of the real property to which they are appurtenant without being mentioned in the deed or other instrument of conveyance of that real property [Stanislaus Water Co. v. Bachman (1908) 152 Cal. 716, 724, 93 P. 858] . However, in order to avoid future disputes, the contract should expressly set forth a provision to the effect that the water rights are intended to be vested in the buyer on the consummation of the sale.

For a form for reservation of water rights, see § 23.263.

[c] Crop Allotment

The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 [7 U.S.C. § 1281 et seq.] provides for a system of acreage allotments for wheat, corn, cotton, and rice designed to maintain an orderly and balanced market flow of products [7 U.S.C. § 1282]. Basically, the acreage allotment is apportioned to farms in each county according to the amount of each crop raised on those farms in the year immediately preceding the year for which the allotment is determined [7 U.S.C. § 1344(f)]. Thus the allotments are apportioned to the farm and not to the owner; nevertheless, official transfer forms must be submitted when a farm is sold. The act is administered by state and county committees of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The second paragraph of the form in [2], below, contains a warranty by the seller as to the acreage allotment attributable to the property being sold for the year of the sale, and an agreement by the seller to submit a transfer form on consummation of the sale.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, provides for the seller's reservation of crops growing on the property and of the right to harvest the crops by a specified date. As between the seller and buyer, a crop growing on the land being sold constitutes a part of the realty unless it has been constructively severed or the seller specifically reserves the crop [Wilson v. White (1911) 161 Cal. 453, 460, 119 P. 895 ; Silveira v. Ohm (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 272, 275, 201 P.2d 387] . When a writing is essential to the transfer of the real property [see § 23.11[2]], a reservation of the crop by the seller cannot be established by parol evidence to impair the effect of the writing purporting to convey the land without reservation [Wilson v. White (1911) 161 Cal. 453, 461, 119 P. 895] .

For an alternative provision requiring the buyer to harvest the crops, market them through a specified agency, and divide the proceeds of their sale with the seller, see § 23.262.

§ 23.263 Seller's Reservation of Water Rights

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a provision that may be inserted into a contract for the sale of agricultural land when the seller wishes to sever the water rights and to retain them for use on adjoining land owned by the seller. Although the right to take water for beneficial use on a particular parcel of land becomes an appurtenance to the land and passes with the land when it is conveyed [Stanislaus Water Co. v. Bachman (1908) 152 Cal. 716, 724, 93 P. 858] , this right may be severed or "segregated" from the land by grant, condemnation, or prescription [Gould v. Stafford (1891) 91 Cal. 146, 155, 27 P. 543] . Therefore, the seller may reserve this right in the real property sale contract or the deed consummating the contract [see Locke v. Yorba Irrigation Co. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 205, 209, 217 P.2d 425 ; see Ch. 36A, Mining Claims, Timber Interests, and Water Rights].

The only apparent exception to the right to sever water rights applies when an irrigation company, such as a mutual water company, is being organized. Under those circumstances, the landowners organizing the company must show an intention that every portion of the land then owned by them will receive water and that the right of every portion of the land to receive water is perpetual and cannot be severed [Locke v. Yorba Irrigation Co. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 205, 209-210, 217 P.2d 425 ; see § 23.236[1]].

§ 23.264 Seller's Reservation of Right to Enter and Remove Merchantable Timber

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a clause by which the seller of real property reserves the right to enter and remove timber from the land. Unless modified or controlled by other expressions in a contract, "timber" means any trees that are fit to be used for lumber in building or similar construction [Buffum v. Texaco, Inc. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 732, 735, 50 Cal. Rptr. 852 ; Crain v. Hoefling (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 396, 405, 132 P.2d 882] .

Real property consists, among other things, of land and that which is affixed to land [Civ. Code § 658]. A thing is affixed to land when it is attached to it by roots, as in the case of trees, vines, or shrubs [Civ. Code § 660]. Consequently, a conveyance of land will include trees growing on the land unless the contract provides otherwise [see Whittaker v. Thompson (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 192, 194, 1 Cal. Rptr. 7, 347 P.2d 7 ; see also Buffum v. Texaco, Inc. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 732, 734, 50 Cal. Rptr. 852 (fee interest in standing timber is conveyable separately from title to underlying property)].

[b] Time for Removal

If the reservation fixes period during which the seller may exercise the right to enter and remove the timber, that provision will be enforced by the courts. If no period is specified, a reasonable period will ordinarily be implied. However, a contract that reserves the right to remove timber "at any time" in the future gives the seller a perpetual right to remove the timber [Cochran v. Union Lumber Co. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 423, 426, 102 Cal. Rptr. 632] .

[c] Date Timber Will Be Deemed Merchantable

If the seller wishes to reserve the right to "all merchantable timber now standing," the date on which the timber is to be determined to be merchantable should be specified. If that is not done and more than one contract or a contract and subsequent deed both reserve the right to all merchantable timber now standing, the date of execution of the last document will be the date on which the timber will be deemed to be merchantable, on the theory that prior inconsistent terms have been merged into the terms of the final document [Cochran v. Union Lumber Co. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 423, 428-429, 102 Cal. Rptr. 632] .

§ 23.300 Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [Civ. Code § 1102]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory disclosure form that must be delivered to prospective transferees of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units when the property is transferred by sale or by certain other methods [see Civ. Code § 1102(a)]. The text of the form is set forth in Civ. Code § 1102.6. The disclosures pertain to the condition of the property. Except in certain circumstances [see [b][ii], below], this disclosure statement must be provided in addition to any other required disclosures [see Civ. Code § 1102.8; see also § 23.135].

Any city or county may require that a transferor provide additional disclosures regarding the property that is the subject of the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement. The additional disclosures must be set forth on a statutory form (called the "Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement") or an alternative form required by the applicable local ordinance [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)]. For further discussion and the statutory form, see § 23.301.

If the property is located in any of the natural hazard areas enumerated in Civ. Code § 1103(c), and the matter involves the types of property and transfers described in Civ. Code § 1103(a) and (b), the transferor must disclose this to the prospective transferees [see [j][ii], below].

[b] Applicability of Disclosure Requirement

[i] In General

With certain exceptions [see [ii], below], the disclosure requirement applies to transfers of real property, or residential stock cooperatives, containing one-to-four dwelling units, when the transfer is by any of the following [Civ. Code §

1102(a)]:

- Sale.
- Exchange [see Ch. 24, Exchanges of Real Property].
- Installment land sale contract [see Civ. Code § 2985; see also Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing].
- Lease with an option to purchase [see Ch. 34C, Retail, Industrial, and Office Leases].
- Any other option to purchase [see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property].
- Ground lease coupled with improvements [see Ch. 34D, Ground Leases].

Any waiver of the disclosure requirements is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 1102(c); see [h], below].

[ii] Exempt Transfers

The disclosure requirement does not apply to any of the following transfers [Civ. Code § 1102.2]:

- Transfer subject to the public reporting requirements of the Subdivided Lands Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.; Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1; see also Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation].
- Sale by a subdivider of a newly constructed residence located on subdivided land in a city, if the sale is exempt from the public reporting requirements because (a) the developer has complied with applicable purchase money handling requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11013.1, 11013.2, 11013.4] and (b) the subdivision is not a common-interest subdivision [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5] or undivided interest subdivision [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.4].
- Transfer under court order, including:
  - Transfer ordered by a probate court in the administration of an estate;
  - Transfer under a writ of execution;
  - Transfer by any foreclosure sale;
  - Transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy;
  - Transfer by eminent domain; and
  - Transfer resulting from a decree for specific performance.
- The following transfers on default:
  - Transfer to a mortgagee by a mortgagor or successor in interest who is in default;
  - Transfer to a beneficiary of a deed of trust by a trustor or successor in interest who is in default;

- Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default;

- Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default in an obligation secured by a mortgage;

- Transfer by a sale under a power of sale or any foreclosure sale under a decree of foreclosure after default in an obligation secured by a deed of trust or secured by any other instrument containing a power of sale;

- Transfer by a mortgagee or a beneficiary under a deed of trust who has acquired the real property at a sale conducted in accordance with a power of sale under a mortgage or deed of trust or a sale under a decree of foreclosure or who has acquired the real property by a deed in lieu of foreclosure;

- Transfer to the legal owner or lienholder of a manufactured home or mobilehome by a registered owner or successor in interest who is in default; and

- Transfer by reason of any foreclosure of a security interest in a manufactured home or mobilehome.

- Transfer by a fiduciary in the course of the administration of a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust, except that this exemption does not apply to a transfer if the trustee is a natural person who is sole trustee of a revocable trust and he or she is a former owner of the property or an occupant in possession of the property within the preceding year.

- Transfer from one co-owner to one or more other co-owners.

- Transfer to a spouse or to a person or persons related by consanguinity to any transferor.

- Transfer between spouses resulting from a judgment of dissolution of marriage or of legal separation or from a property settlement agreement incidental to such a judgment.

- Transfer by the State Controller in the course of administering the Unclaimed Property Law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq.; see also Ch. 102C, Lost and Unclaimed Property].

- Transfer of tax-defaulted or tax-deeded property made by the state [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 3691 et seq., 3771 et seq.].

- Transfer or exchange to or from any governmental entity.

[c] Disclosure Procedure

[i] Basic Requirements

The transferor of real property subject to the disclosure requirement must complete and deliver the statutory statement to the prospective transferee. In the case of a sale, the delivery must occur as soon as practicable before transfer of title. In the case of a transfer by an installment land sale contract, or by a lease together with an option to purchase, or a ground lease coupled with improvements, it must be delivered as soon as practicable before the contract's execution. For these purposes, "execution" means the making or acceptance of an offer [Civ. Code § 1102.3]. The transferor must indicate compliance with the disclosure requirement on the deposit receipt or other sale contract, the lease, an addendum attached to one of those documents, or a separate document [Civ. Code § 1102.3].

The transferor of a manufactured home or mobilehome must complete and deliver the disclosure as follows [Civ. Code § 1102.3a(a)]:

- In the case of a sale, or a lease with an option to purchase, involving an agent [see Health & Safety Code § 18046], as soon as practicable, but no later than the close of escrow for the purchase of the manufactured home or mobilehome; or

- In the case of a sale, or a lease with an option to purchase, not involving an agent [see Health & Safety Code § 18046], at the time of execution of any document by the prospective transferee and the transferor.

The transferor of a manufactured home or mobilehome must indicate compliance with these requirements either on the transfer disclosure statement (or any addendum to the disclosure statement) or on a separate document [Civ. Code § 1102.3a(b)]. For additional discussion of manufactured homes and mobilehomes, see Ch. 40, Mobilehomes .

Delivery must be made in person or by mail to the prospective transferee. Delivery to the spouse of a transferee will be deemed delivery to the transferee, unless the contract provides otherwise [Civ. Code § 1102.10].

[ii] Requirement of Good Faith

Each required disclosure and each act that may be performed in making the disclosure must be made in good faith. "Good faith" means honesty in fact in the conduct of the transaction [Civ. Code § 1102.7].

[iii] Approximations and Subsequent Inaccuracies

If, at the time the disclosures must be made, an item of required information is unknown or not available to the transferor, and the transferor or his or her agent has made a reasonable effort to ascertain it, the transferor may use an approximation of the information. The approximation must be clearly identified as such, must be reasonable, and must be based on the best information available to the transferor or his or her agent. It must not be used for the purpose of circumventing or evading the disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.5].

If any of the disclosed information subsequently becomes inaccurate as a result of any act, occurrence, or agreement after the delivery of the required disclosures, the resulting inaccuracy will not constitute a violation of the disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.5].

[iv] Responsibilities of Broker

If more than one licensed real estate broker is acting as an agent in the transfer transaction, the broker who has obtained the transferee's offer must deliver the disclosure to the transferee, unless the transferor has given other written instructions for delivery [Civ. Code § 1102.12(a)]. If a licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering the required disclosures cannot obtain the required disclosure document and does not have the transferee's written assurance that the disclosure has been received, the broker must advise the transferee in writing of his or her right to the disclosure [Civ. Code § 1102.12(b)].

A licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering the disclosures must maintain a record of the action taken and retain a copy of the record and the disclosure statement for three years from the date of the closing of the transfer transaction or from the date of the listing if the transaction is not consummated [Civ. Code § 1102.12(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148].

[v] Transferee's Rights in Event of Late Delivery

If the form in [2], below, or any material amendment to the required disclosures [see [vi], below], is delivered after the execution of an offer to purchase, the transferee will have three days after delivery in person, or five days after delivery by deposit in the mail, to deliver a written notice terminating the offer to the transferor or the transferor's agent [Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.3a(c)].

[vi] Amendment of Disclosures

Any of the required disclosures may be amended in writing by the transferor or his or her agent. The written amendment must comply with the delivery requirements of Civ. Code § 1102.3 or 1102.3a [Civ. Code § 1102.9].

[d] Automatic Garage Door Openers

The seller must indicate whether the property has an automatic garage door opener. The form includes a warning that the garage door opener, if any, may not comply with statutory safety standards relating to automatic reversing devices. Those standards are set forth in Health & Safety Code § 19890 et seq. Among other things, they prohibit any person, corporation, or entity from manufacturing (for sale in California), installing, purchasing, or selling or offering for sale at retail or wholesale, a residential automatic garage door opener, unless the opener has an automatic reverse safety device that complies with the applicable standards set forth in the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., Standard for Safety-ANSI/UL 325-30.1 and 325-30.2, Third Edition, as revised May 4, 1988 [Health & Safety Code § 19890(a)]. The opener also must contain a tactile garage door edge sensor, an optical sensor, or a similar device that is designed to cause a closing door to open and to prevent an open door from closing [see Health & Safety Code § 19890(b) (statute includes limited exception from this requirement for openers manufactured before 1993 and sold before July 1993)]. Further, the statutory standards prohibit the installation of a replacement residential garage door in a manner that connects the replacement door to an existing residential automatic garage door opener that does not meet the test standard set forth in Health & Safety Code § 19890(e) [Health & Safety Code § 19890(h); see Health & Safety Code § 19890(e) (requiring person servicing or repairing the opener to determine whether it reverses on contact with a rigid two-inch high obstacle placed on the surface beneath the garage door, and to make specified disclosure if opener does not pass this test)]. Manufacturers, distributors, wholesalers, and retailers are subject to related disclosure requirements [see Health & Safety Code § 19890(c), (d)].

The foregoing statutory standards apply to all automatic garage door openers manufactured and sold for use in any residence [Health & Safety Code § 19890(f); see Health & Safety Code § 19890(g)(2) ("residence" means building that contains one-to-four single-family dwelling units)]. Further, they apply to any automatic garage door opener that is (1) manufactured for commercial purposes, and (2) sold for, or installed in, a residence because the specific application requirements of the installation require the use of a commercial (rather than residential) opener. Residential applications of garage door openers manufactured for commercial purposes must comply with the manufacturer's installation instructions as well as the above statutory standards, with one exception: the applicable standard must be the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., Standard for Safety-ANSI/UL 325-29 in lieu of the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., Standard for Safety-ANSI/UL 325-30.1 and 325-30.2 [Health & Safety Code § 19890(f)].

In addition to any other remedies permitted by law, a seller who violates the notice requirements of Civ. Code § 1102.6 relating to automatic garage door openers will be subject to a civil penalty [Health & Safety Code § 19891(c)]. Additional civil penalties apply to violations of Health & Safety Code § 19890 [see Health & Safety Code § 19891(a), (b)]. Court proceedings relating to these violations may be initiated by the building department of the local agency with jurisdiction over the enforcement of building standards, by affected consumers, or by the district attorney. Assessed civil penalties are payable to the local agency initiating the court proceedings to offset resulting costs. If an affected consumer initiates the proceeding, the civil penalties will be payable to the consumer [Health & Safety Code § 19891(d)].

[e] Information Supplied by Others

[i] Nonliability of Transferor and Agents

A transferor will not be liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission in the required disclosures if (1) it was not within the personal knowledge of the transferor or the listing or selling agent, (2) it was based on information timely provided by public agencies, or by certain experts under the circumstances described under [ii], below, and (3) ordinary care was exercised in obtaining and transmitting it [Civ. Code § 1102.4(a)].

This exemption from liability applies not only to transferors but also to listing and selling agents [Civ. Code § 1102.4(a)]. For these purposes, "listing agent" means one who has obtained a listing of property and who is authorized by law to act as an agent for compensation with regard to that property [Civ. Code § 1102.14(a); see Civ. Code § 1086(g)]. "Selling agent" means an agent who acts in cooperation with a listing agent and who sells the property or finds and obtains a buyer [Civ. Code § 1102.14(b); see Civ. Code § 1086(h)].

[ii] Information Supplied by Certain Licensed Experts

Under the exemption from liability discussed in [i], above, the transferor will not be liable for information furnished by a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, structural pest-control operator, contractor, or other expert who, acting in response to a written or oral request, prepares and delivers to the transferee a report or opinion dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise [Civ. Code § 1102.4(c)].

In responding to the request, the expert may indicate, in writing, an understanding that the information provided will be used in making the required disclosures. An expert who gives such an indication must also indicate the required disclosures (or portions of disclosures) to which the information being furnished is applicable. An expert furnishing such a statement will not be responsible for any items of information other than those expressly set forth in the statement [Civ. Code § 1102.4(c)].

[iii] Delivery of Information by Person Other Than Transferor or Agent

The delivery of any of the required information to a prospective transferee by a public agency or any person other than the transferor or a listing or selling agent will be deemed to comply with the statutory disclosure requirements and will relieve the transferor or agent of any further duty under the disclosure laws with regard to that item of information [Civ. Code § 1102.4(b)].

[f] Exemption for Escrow Agents

Any person or entity, other than a real estate licensee, acting as an escrow agent for the transfer of real property will not be deemed the agent of the transferor or transferee for purposes of the disclosure requirement, unless the person or entity is empowered to act as such by an express written agreement to that effect. The extent of this agency will be governed by the written agreement [Civ. Code § 1102.11].

[g] Effect of Noncompliance

No transfer subject to the disclosure requirement will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with these disclosure requirements [but see [c][v], above]. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any of the disclosure duties will be liable for any actual damages suffered by a transferee [Civ. Code § 1102.13]. However, this provision is applicable only when the buyer has gone through with the transaction despite the seller's failure to comply with the statutory disclosure requirements. If no transfer has taken place, Civ. Code § 1102.13 does not apply. Prior to transfer, the failure to provide a disclosure statement gives rise to a right to rescission in the buyer [Realmuto v. Gagnard (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 193, 202, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569] .

The Real Estate Commissioner may suspend or revoke the license of any real estate broker who repeatedly or willfully violates the disclosure requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176.5].

[h] Effect of Waiver

Any waiver of the requirements of the disclosure provisions is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 1102(c); see Realmuto v. Gagnard (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 193, 201, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569 (seller's delivery of real estate transfer disclosure statement is nonwaivable condition precedent to buyer's duty of performance under contract for sale and purchase of real property)]. Civ. Code § 1102(c), enacted in 1994, appears to nullify the decision in Loughrin v. Superior Court [Loughrin v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] , in which a knowing and explicit waiver by a buyer of the benefits of the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. was effective in a typical private real estate purchase and sale transaction. The court relied on Civ. Code § 3513, which provides that anyone may waive the advantage of a law intended solely for his or her benefit, but that a law established for a public reason cannot be contravened by a private agreement. Applying the factors used in Tunkl v. Regents of University of California (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98 100, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33 , the court in Loughrin found that none of the characteristics creating a "public interest" exist in the typical sale transaction. The court also found that its conclusion regarding waiver was supported by Civ. Code § 1102.13 [see [g], above]. The language in Civ. Code § 1102.13 contemplating a failure to comply with the disclosure statutes indicates that the purpose of Civ. Code § 1102.13 is to facilitate private transactions rather than to impose regulations for the general public benefit [Loughrin v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] .

The court in Loughrin then examined the detailed "as is" clause used by the parties in the transaction, and concluded that it did not constitute a waiver of the buyer's rights under the disclosure statutes [Loughrin v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1195, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] . In addition, the Legislature specifically provided in 1994 that the delivery of a real estate transfer disclosure statement may not be waived in an "as is" sale, as was held by the court in Loughrin [1994 Stats., ch. 817, § 3]. For coverage of that aspect of the decision, see § 23.252[1].

[i] Effect of Disclosure Statement

[i] In General

The disclosure statement is not intended to be part of any contract between the seller and the buyer [Brasier v. Sparks (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1756, 1760, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; see Civ. Code § 1102.6]. It is not a warranty by the seller or any agent representing any principal in the transaction, or a substitute for any inspections or warranties the principals may wish to obtain [see Civ. Code § 1102.6].

If the statement is prepared after the contract's execution and reveals significant defects, the buyer may want to amend, renegotiate, or terminate the contract. For a provision that makes the sale contingent on the buyer's receipt and approval of the statement, see § 23.236[2].

[ii] Documentation of Seller's Duty to Disclose Material Facts

The disclosure statement may also be used to document the seller's compliance with his or her duty to disclose any material fact, such as the existence of a material defect, that the seller knows would not be observable to the buyer and that affects the value of the property [see Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349, 353, 164 P.2d 8 ; Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735-738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201] . By signing the statement, the buyer is, in effect, acknowledging receipt of all disclosures contained in it.

For discussion of the interaction between the disclosure statement and an "as is" clause, see § 23.252[1][c].

[j] Related Disclosure Requirements

[i] Notice of Nearby Ordnance Locations

Any seller of residential real property who is required to provide the buyer with a real estate transfer disclosure statement and who has actual knowledge of any former federal or state ordnance locations within the neighborhood area must give the buyer written notice of that knowledge as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.15]. For these purposes, "former federal or state ordnance locations" means an area identified by an agency or instrumentality of the federal or state government as an area once used for military training purposes that may contain potentially explosive munitions [Civ. Code § 1102.15]. For an illustrative disclosure form and additional discussion, see § 23.304.

[ii] Natural Hazard Disclosures

A transferor, or his or her agent, must notify prospective transferees when the real property lies within any of the following hazard areas:

- A special flood hazard area [see Gov. Code § 8589.3];
- An area of potential flooding [see Gov. Code § 8589.4];
- A very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51183.5];
- A wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136];
- An earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9]; or
- A seismic hazard zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694].

When the transaction is subject to the statutory real estate transfer disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 1102, 1102.6; see also [b][i], above], the disclosures must be made in either a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2] or the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see § 23.301], provided this statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warning that appears in the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(e)]. For further discussion and the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form, see § 23.302.

[iii] Geologic and Seismic Hazards

If a transferor or real estate broker provides a prospective buyer with a copy of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149] or the Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10147, 10149], the seller or broker will not be required to provide the buyer with additional information concerning the geologic and seismic hazards described in the guide or measures that the buyer or seller might consider to mitigate earthquake hazards [Civ. Code §§ 2079.8(a), 2079.9(a)]. However, the seller or broker will still be obligated to make other required disclosures (including, in the case of noncommercial property, all other disclosures required by Civ. Code § 1102 and the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement) [see Civ. Code §§ 2079.8(b), 2079.9(b)]. For further discussion, see § 23.20[4].

[iv] Common Environmental Hazards

The Department of Real Estate (DRE) has published a booklet, entitled Environmental Hazards: Guide for Homeowners and Buyers, which is designed to educate and inform consumers regarding common environmental hazards that are located on, and affect, real property [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10084.1(a); Health & Safety Code § 25417]. The DRE must distribute the booklet on request to the public (and may charge a fee for the booklet) [Health & Safety Code § 25417]. If the booklet is delivered to a transferee in connection with a transfer of real property, the seller or broker is not required to provide additional information concerning common hazards that can affect real property, and the information in the booklet will be deemed to be adequate to inform the transferee of those hazards [Civ. Code § 2079.7(a)]. However, the delivery of the booklet will not alter the duties of sellers or brokers, including their duties relating to the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement and to disclose the existence of known environmental hazards on or affecting the real property [Civ. Code § 2079.7(b)].

[v] Notice of Controlled Substance Release

A seller of residential real property who knows that any release of an illegal controlled substance [see § 23.20[12] (definitions)] has come to be located on or beneath the real property must give written notice advising of that condition to the buyer before sale of the property. Notice is given by checking "yes" on the appropriate question on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6] and attaching a copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as the Department of Toxic Substances Control, the county health department, or the local environmental health officer [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1940.7.5 (similar disclosure requirements applicable to landlords)]. A seller's knowledge of the condition is established by receipt of a notice as specified, or by actual knowledge of the condition from a source independent of the notice [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(2)]. A seller's delivery of this disclosure information is legally adequate for purposes of informing the prospective buyer of the condition; the seller is not required to provide any additional disclosure of the information [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(3)].

[vi] Mello-Roos Tax and Street Improvement Lien Assessment Installment Disclosures

The seller of any real property subject to the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. must disclose if the property being transferred is subject to a continuing lien securing the levy of special taxes pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code § 53111 et seq.] or to a fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500 et seq.], which concerns street improvements, or to a contractual assessment program authorized pursuant to Sts. & Hy. Code § 5898.24 [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(a)(2)]. The seller must make a good faith effort to obtain and deliver to the transferee a disclosure notice concerning the special Mello-Roos tax provided in Gov. Code § 53340.2, and the assessment installment provided in Gov. Code § 53754 from each local agency that levies the special tax or that collects the assessment installments [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(b); see § 23.20[13]].

A seller may satisfy the disclosure notice requirements by delivering a disclosure notice obtained from a nongovernmental source that satisfies the specified requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(1); see Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(3) (provision does not change ability to make disclosures pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.4)]. With regard to each type of required disclosure, a notice provided by a private entity other than a designated office, department, or bureau of the levying entity may be modified as needed to clearly and accurately describe either of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(2)]:

- A special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy a special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act against the property. This notice must include the name of the Mello-Roos levying taxes against the property, the annual tax due for the Mello-Roos for the current tax year, the maximum tax that may be levied against the property in any year, the percentage by which the maximum tax for the Mello-Roos may increase per year, and the date until the tax may be levied against the property for the Mello-Roos and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the Mello-Roos.

- Special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 against the property. This notice must include the name of the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, the current annual tax on the property for the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915.

[vii] Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001--Future Disclosure Requirements

The Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001 [Health & Safety Code §§ 26100-26156] requires the Department of Health Services to convene a task force of various experts and interested parties to advise the Department on the development of permissible exposure limits to molds, standards for assessment of molds in indoor environments, standards for identification of molds, and remediation of mold. The Act will eventually require any person who sells, transfers, or rents specified types of residential, commercial, or industrial real property to provide written disclosures to potential buyers, prospective tenants, renters, and landlords concerning mold problems in the real property [see Health & Safety Code §§ 26140-26153]. However, these disclosure duties and requirements would not apply until the January 1 or July 1 that occurs at least six months after the Department adopts the requisite standards and guidelines [see Health & Safety Code § 26154]. Adding additional uncertainty concerning these requirements, the Act will be implemented only to the extent the Department determines that funds are available for its implementation [Health & Safety Code § 26156].

Notice of Your "Supplemental" Property Tax Bill

Notice of Your "Supplemental" Property Tax Bill

California property tax law requires the Assessor to revalue real property at the time the ownership of the property changes. Because of this law, you may receive one or two supplemental tax bills, depending on when your loan closes.

The supplemental tax bills are not mailed to your lender. If you have arranged for your property tax payments to be paid through an impound account, the supplemental tax bills will not be paid by your lender. It is your responsibility to pay these supplemental bills directly to the Tax Collector.

If you have any question concerning this matter, please call your local Tax Collector's Office.

§ 23.301 Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, may be used in certain circumstances to provide additional information regarding real property that is the subject of a standard real estate transfer disclosure statement prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6 [see § 23.300]. Any city or county may require a transferor to provide disclosures regarding the subject property in addition to the ones required by Civ. Code § 1102.6. These additional disclosures must be made on this statutory form (the "Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement") or on an alternative form required by a local ordinance adopted before July 1990 [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a); see [b], below]. Addenda to the form may be used to facilitate the required disclosures [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(c)].

[b] Alternative Local Requirements

If the city or county, before July 1990, adopted an ordinance requiring the use of a local option disclosure statement other than the statutory form, the city council or county board of supervisors may amend the ordinance to revise its disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)].

A city or county may use this statutory disclosure form for a purpose other than that specified in Civ. Code § 1102.6a [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(c)].

As of January 1, 2005, if a city or county adopts a different or additional disclosure form pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6a regarding the proximity or effects of an airport, the statement in that form must contain, at a minimum, the information in the "Notice of Airport in Vicinity" found in [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(d)(1)]:

- Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(b)(13)(A), relating to the contents of a filed notice of intention to offer subdivided land [see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation];

- Civ. Code § 1103.4(c), relating to natural-hazards disclosures in an expert's report provided at the transferee's request [see § 23.302]; or

- Civ. Code § 1353(a)(1), relating to the contents of the declaration that is recorded with regard to the creation of a common-interest development [see Ch. 33C, Stock Cooperatives , § 33C.201, Ch. 33D, Planned Developments , § 33D.200, and Ch. 34, Condominiums , § 34.202].

As of January 1, 2006, if a city or county does not adopt a different or additional disclosure form, the provision of an "airport influence area" disclosure pursuant to one of the statutes listed above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(b)(13); Civ. Code §§ 1103.4(c), 1353(a)] or, if there is not a current airport influence map, a written disclosure of an airport within two statute miles, will be deemed to satisfy any city or county requirements for the disclosure of airports in connection with transfers of real property [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(d)(2)].

[c] Natural Hazard Disclosures

A transferor, or his or her agent, must notify prospective transferees when the real property lies within any of the following hazard areas:

- A special flood hazard area [see Gov. Code § 8589.3];

- An area of potential flooding [see Gov. Code § 8589.4];

- A very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51183.5];

- A wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136];

- An earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9]; or

- A seismic hazard zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694].

When the transaction is subject to the statutory real estate transfer disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code §§ 1102, 1102.6; see also § 23.300[1][b][i]], the disclosures must be made in either a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1103 et seq.] or the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement, provided this statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warning that appears in the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a)]. For further discussion and the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form, see § 23.302.

9-23 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 23.302

AUTHOR: William M. Hensley Editorial Consultant

§ 23.302 Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement, which may be used to provide disclosures regarding real property that is the subject of a "standard" real estate transfer disclosure statement prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6 [see § 23.300] and lies within a hazard area. An alternative disclosure may be provided when an additional "local option" disclosure statement must be completed or the transaction is not subject to the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see [b], below]. This disclosure is only a disclosure between the transferor, the transferor's agents, and the transferee, and may not be used by any other party, including, but not limited to, insurance companies, lenders, or governmental agencies, for any purpose [Civ. Code § 1103.2(g)].

[b] Hazard Areas and Covered Transfers

These disclosures must be made when the property lies within any of the following hazard areas [Civ. Code § 1103(a)]:

- Special flood hazard area designated by Federal Emergency Management Agency [see Gov. Code § 8589.3; see also [g][i], below];

- Area of potential flooding [see Gov. Code § 8589.4; see also [g][ii], below];

- Very high fire hazard severity zone designated pursuant to Gov. Code § 51175 et seq. [see Gov. Code § 51183.5; see also [g][iii], below];

- Wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards (that is, state responsibility area designated by State Board of Forestry pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 4125) [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136; see also [g][vi], below];

- Delineated earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9; see also [g][iv], below]; or

- Seismic hazard zone as designated under Pub. Res. Code § 2690 et seq. [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694; see also [g][v], below].

These disclosures must be made on the transfer of any real property or any residential stock cooperative improved with or consisting of one-to-four dwelling units, whether the transfer is by sale, exchange, installment land sale contract, lease with an option to purchase, any other option to purchase, or ground lease coupled with improvements [Civ. Code § 1103(a); see Civ. Code § 1103.2]. These requirements also apply to resale of a manufactured home or mobilehome that is classified as personal property intended for use as a residence if the transaction was entered into after 1999 [Civ. Code § 1103(b); see Health & Safety Code §§ 18007, 18008].

[c] Exempt Transfers

The disclosure requirements do not apply to the following transfers [Civ. Code § 1103.1(a)]:

- Transfer pursuant to court order, including, but not limited to:
  - Transfer ordered by a probate court in administration of an estate;
  - Transfer pursuant to a writ of execution;
  - Transfer by any foreclosure sale;
  - Transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy;
  - Transfer by eminent domain; and
  - Transfer resulting from a decree of specific performance.
- Transfers of the following kinds:
  - Transfer to a mortgagee by a mortgagor or successor in interest who is in default;
  - Transfer to a beneficiary of a deed of trust by a trustor or successor in interest who is in default;
  - Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default;
  - Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default in an obligation secured by a mortgage;
  - Transfer by a sale under a power of sale or any foreclosure sale under a decree of foreclosure after default in an obligation secured by a deed of trust or secured by any other instrument containing a power of sale; or
  - Transfer by a mortgagee or a beneficiary under a deed of trust who has acquired the real property at a sale conducted pursuant to a power of sale under a mortgage or deed of trust or a sale pursuant to a decree of foreclosure or has acquired the real property by a deed in lieu of foreclosure.

- Transfer by a fiduciary in the course of the administration of a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust.

- Transfer from one co-owner to one or more other co-owners.

- Transfer to a spouse or to a person or persons in the line of consanguinity of one or more of the transferors.

- Transfer between spouses resulting from a judgment of dissolution of marriage or of legal separation of the parties or from a property settlement agreement incidental to that judgment.

- Transfer by the State Controller in the course of administering Chapter 7 of Title 10 of Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure [Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq.].

- Transfer under Chapter 7 or Chapter 8 of Part 6 of Division 1 of the Revenue and Taxation Code [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 3691 et seq., 3771 et seq.].

- Transfer or exchange to or from any governmental entity.

[d] Disclosure Options

If a transaction is subject to the natural hazard disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1103, the required disclosures must be provided on either of the following forms [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e); see Gov. Code §§ 8589.3(c), 8589.4(c), 51183.5(c); Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9(c), 2694(c), 4136]:

- The statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2]; or

- A local option real estate disclosure statement, provided this statement includes substantially the same information and warnings that are required by the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e); see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; see also § 23.301].

When the transaction is not subject to Civ. Code § 1103, the form of the disclosure is not specified by statute. However, language in the statutory disclosure statement may be modified for use in this context.

[e] Primary Disclosure Obligation

The transferor, or a transferor's agent, must deliver the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103]. The statement provides that the disclosures are made by the seller and his or her agents, and includes signature blanks for the seller and agents [see Civ. Code § 1103.2(a)]. Further, the required disclosures may be provided by the seller and seller's agent in the local option real estate disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(e)]. Thus, if the transaction is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., both the transferor and the transferor's agent share responsibility for making the required disclosures.

If the transaction is not subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., the statutory provision governing the specific type of disclosure required to be made will determine the party responsible for making the disclosure. Thus, the disclosure must be made by the following person or entity:

- The transferor, if the property is located within a very high fire hazard severity zone [see Gov. Code § 51179] or a wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards (that is, state responsibility area) [Gov. Code § 51183.5(a); Pub. Res. Code 4136(a); see Pub. Res. Code § 4136].

- The transferor's agent, or the transferor if he or she is acting without an agent, if the property is located within a designated special flood hazard area, area of potential flooding shown on inundation map, delineated earthquake fault zone, or designated seismic hazard zone [Gov. Code §§ 8589.3, 8589.4(a); Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9(a), 2694(a)].

For further discussion of the statutory provisions governing each of the required natural hazard disclosures, see [g], below.

[f] Format of Disclosure and Relationship to Other Required Disclosures

[i] In General

The required disclosures may be made on a local option real estate disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1102.6a; see § 23.301[2]] or must be made on the statutory form of natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(a)]. In a disclosure statement required by Civ. Code § 1103.2, an agent and third-party provider may cause his or her name to be preprinted in lieu of an original signature in the portions of the form reserved for signatures. The use of a preprinted name does not change the legal effect of the acknowledgment [Civ. Code § 1103.2(f)(3)].

The specification of items for disclosure [see Civ. Code § 1103 et seq.] does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision of law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction. These provisions were not intended to affect the existing obligations of the parties to a real estate contract, or their agents, to disclose any fact materially affecting the value and desirability of the property, including, but not limited to, the physical condition of the property and previously received reports of physical inspection noted on the disclosure form provided pursuant to Civ. Code §§ 1102.6 and 1102.6a [Civ. Code § 1103.8(a)]. Similarly, these provisions do not change the duty of a real estate broker or salesperson to inspect property pursuant to Civ. Code § 2079 [Civ. Code § 1103.8(a)].

In any case, transfers not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. may be subject to other disclosure requirements, including those under Gov. Code §§ 8589.3, 8589.4, and 51183.5 and Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9, 2694, and 4136. In transfers not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq., agents may make required disclosures in a separate writing [Civ. Code § 1103.1(b)].

[ii] Time and Manner of Delivery of Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement

The transferor of any real property subject to the disclosure requirements must deliver to the prospective transferee the required natural hazard disclosure statement as follows [Civ. Code § 1103.3(a)]:

- In the case of a sale: as soon as practicable before transfer of title; or

- In the case of transfer by an installment land sale contract, a lease together with an option to purchase, or a ground lease coupled with improvements: as soon as practicable before execution of the contract (meaning the making or acceptance of an offer).

The transferor must indicate compliance with these requirements on the deposit receipt or other real property sale contract, the lease, any addendum attached to one of those documents, or a separate document [Civ. Code § 1103.3(b)].

Delivery of the required disclosures must be by personal delivery to the transferee or by mail to the prospective transferee. Delivery to the spouse of a transferee is deemed delivery to the transferee, unless otherwise provided by contract [Civ. Code § 1103.10].

If any disclosure, or any material amendment of any disclosure, required to be made pursuant to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. is delivered after the execution of an offer to purchase, the transferee has three days after delivery in person, or five days after delivery by deposit in the mail, to terminate his or her offer by delivery of a written notice of termination to the transferor or the transferor's agent [Civ. Code § 1103.3(c)].

[iii] Liability for Accuracy of Statement and Further Duties Under Act

The transferor or any listing or selling agent is not liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information in the natural hazard disclosure statement if the error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the personal knowledge of the transferor or the listing or selling agent, and was based on information timely provided by public agencies or by other persons providing information as specified by statute [see Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)], which is required to be disclosed, and ordinary care was exercised in obtaining and transmitting the information [Civ. Code § 1103.4(a); see Civ. Code § 1103.14(a), (b) ("listing agent" and "selling agent" are defined in Civ. Code § 1086(f), (g), exclusive of requirement that agent be participant in multiple listing service as defined in Civ. Code § 1087)]. The delivery of any information required to be disclosed to a prospective transferee by a public agency or other person providing information required to be disclosed is deemed to comply with these disclosure requirements and relieves the transferor or any listing or selling agent of any further duty with respect to that item of information [Civ. Code § 1103.4(b)].

The delivery of a report or opinion prepared by a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, or expert in natural hazard discovery, dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise, constitutes sufficient compliance for application of the exemption provided under Civ. Code § 1103.4(a), if the information is provided to the prospective transferee pursuant to a written or oral request. In responding to the request, an expert may indicate, in writing, an understanding that the information provided will be used in fulfilling the requirements of Civ. Code § 1103.2. If the expert makes that statement, he or she must also indicate the required disclosures, or parts of required disclosures, to which the information being furnished is applicable. Then the expert will not be responsible for any items of information other than those expressly set forth in the statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)].

Further, in responding to the transferee's request, the expert is required to make the following determinations and include the following statements, as appropriate, in the report [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)]:

- If the property is determined to be within an "airport influence area" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(b)(13)(B) (definition)], the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(1)]: "NOTICE OF AIRPORT IN VICINITY. This property is presently located in the vicinity of an airport, within what is known as an airport influence area. For that reason, the property may be subject to some of the annoyances or inconveniences associated with proximity to airport operations (for example: noise, vibration, or odors). Individual sensitivities to those annoyances can vary from person to person. You may wish to consider what airport annoyances, if any, are associated with the property before you complete your purchase and determine whether they are acceptable to you."

- If the property is determined to be within the jurisdiction of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission [see Gov. Code § 66620 et seq.], the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(2)]: "NOTICE OF SAN FRANCISCO BAY CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION JURISDICTION. This property is located within the jurisdiction of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission. Use and development of property within the commission's jurisdiction may be subject to special regulations, restrictions, and permit requirements. You may wish to investigate and determine whether they are acceptable to you and your intended use of the property before you complete your transaction."

- If the property is determined to be within one mile of a parcel of real property designated as "Prime Farmland," "Farmland of Statewide Importance," "Unique Farmland," "Farmland of Local Importance," or "Grazing Land" on the most current "Important Farmland Map" issued by the California Department of Conservation, Division of Land Resource Protection, using solely the county-level GIS map data, if any, available on the Farmland Mapping and Monitoring Program web site, the report must include this statement [Civ. Code § 1103.4(c)(3)]: "NOTICE OF RIGHT TO FARM. This property is located within one mile of a farm or ranch land designated on the current county-level GIS 'Important Farmland Map,' issued by the California Department of Conservation, Division of Land Resource Protection. Accordingly, the property may be subject to inconveniences or discomforts resulting from agricultural operations that are a normal and necessary aspect of living in a community with a strong rural character and a healthy agricultural sector. Customary agricultural practices in farm operations may include, but are not limited to, noise, odors, dust, light, insects, the operation of pumps and machinery, the storage and disposal of manure, bee pollination, and the ground or aerial application of fertilizers, pesticides, and herbicides. These agricultural practices may occur at any time during the 24-hour day. Individual sensitivities to those practices can vary from person to person. You may wish to consider the impacts of such agricultural practices before you complete your purchase. Please be advised that you may be barred from obtaining legal remedies against agricultural practices conducted in a manner consistent with proper and accepted customs and standards pursuant to Section 3482.5 of the Civil Code or any pertinent local ordinance."

The legal effect of a consultant's report delivered to satisfy the exemption provided by Civ. Code § 1103.4 is not changed when it is accompanied by a Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(f)(1)]. A consultant's report must always be accompanied by a completed and signed Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(f)(2)].

After a transferor and his or her agent comply with Civ. Code § 1103.2, they are relieved of further duty with respect to those items of information. The transferor and his or her agent are not required to provide notice to the transferee if the information provided subsequently becomes inaccurate as a result of any governmental action, map revision, changed information, or other act or occurrence, unless the transferor or agent has actual knowledge that the information has become inaccurate [Civ. Code § 1103.5(a)]. If information disclosed in accordance with these provisions is subsequently rendered inaccurate as a result of any governmental action, map revision, changed information, or other act or occurrence subsequent to the delivery of the required disclosures, the resulting inaccuracy does not constitute a violation [Civ. Code § 1103.5(b)].

Any disclosure made pursuant to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. may be amended in writing by the transferor or his or her agent, but the amendment is subject to the delivery requirements set forth in Civ. Code § 1103.3 [Civ. Code § 1103.9].

[iv] Actions of Agents

Any person or entity, other than a real estate licensee licensed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq., acting in the capacity of an escrow agent for the transfer of real property subject to these disclosure requirements will not be deemed the agent of the transferor or transferee for purposes of the disclosure requirements, unless the person or entity is empowered to act by an express written agreement, which will govern the extent of that agency [Civ. Code § 1103.11].

If more than one licensed real estate broker is acting as an agent in a transaction subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq., the broker who has obtained the offer made by the transferee must, except as otherwise provided in Civ.

Code § 1103 et seq., deliver the required disclosure to the transferee, unless the transferor has given other written instructions for delivery [Civ. Code § 1103.12(a)]. If a licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering these disclosures cannot obtain the required disclosure document and does not have written assurance from the transferee that the disclosure has been received, the broker must advise the transferee in writing of his or her rights to the disclosure. A licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering disclosures must maintain a record of the action taken to effect compliance, in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148 [Civ. Code § 1103.12(b)].

A transfer subject to these provisions will not be invalidated solely because of any person's failure to comply with any provision. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by any provision of Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[g] Specific Disclosure Requirements

[i] Special Flood Hazard Area

An agent for a seller of real property that is located within a special flood hazard area designated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or the seller if he or she is acting without any agent, must disclose to any prospective buyer the fact that the property is located within a special flood hazard area [Gov. Code § 8589.3(a); see Gov. Code § 8589.3(g) (required posting of public notices identifying location of special flood hazard area map and other specified information)]. The special flood hazard area disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Gov. Code § 8589.3(c)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Gov. Code § 8589.3(b)]:

- The transferor, or the transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within a special flood hazard area.

- The local jurisdiction has compiled a list, by parcel, of properties that are within the special flood hazard area, and a notice has been posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the parcel list.

For these purposes, persons specified in Civ. Code § 1103.11 (that is, escrow agents) and persons acting under a power of sale regulated by Civ. Code § 2924 will not be deemed agents of the seller [Gov. Code § 8589.3(d)].

The specification of items for disclosure does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Gov. Code § 8589.3(f)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with the provisions. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by these provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [Gov. Code § 8589.3(e); see Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[ii] Area of Potential Flooding

An agent for a transferor of real property that is located within an area of potential flooding shown on an inundation map, or the transferor if he or she is acting without an agent, must disclose to any prospective buyer the fact that the property is located within an area of potential flooding [Gov. Code § 8589.4(a)]. The disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Gov. Code § 8589.4(c)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Gov. Code § 8589.4(b)]:

- The transferor or the transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within an inundation area.

- The local jurisdiction has compiled a list, by parcel, of properties that are within the inundation area, and a notice has been posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the parcel list.

For these purposes, persons specified in Civ. Code § 1103.11 (that is, escrow agents) and persons acting under a power of sale regulated by Civ. Code § 2924 will not be deemed agents of the transferor [Gov. Code § 8589.4(d)].

The specification of items for disclosure in Gov. Code § 8589.4 does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Gov. Code § 8589.4(f)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those provisions or with Gov. Code § 8589.4. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by the foregoing provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [see Gov. Code § 8589.4(e); see also Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[iii] Very High Fire Hazard Severity Zone

A transferor of real property that is located within a very high fire hazard severity zone designated pursuant to Gov. Code § 51175 et seq. must disclose to any prospective transferee the fact that the property is located within a very high fire hazard severity zone, and is subject to the requirements of Gov. Code § 51182 [Gov. Code § 51183.5(a); see Gov. Code § 51182 (imposing maintenance obligations on any person who owns, leases, controls, operates, or maintains occupied dwelling or occupied structure in, on, or adjoining any area or land that is covered with flammable materials and is within very high fire hazard severity zone designated by local agency pursuant to Gov. Code § 51179)]. The disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Gov. Code § 51183.5(b)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Gov. Code § 51183.5(b)]:

- The transferor or the transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within a very high fire hazard severity zone.

- A map that includes the property has been provided to the local agency pursuant to Gov. Code § 51178, and a notice is posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the map and any information regarding changes to the map received by the local agency.

If the map or accompanying information is not of sufficient accuracy or scale that a reasonable person can determine whether the subject real property is included in a very high fire hazard zone, the seller normally must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement. The seller may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, however, if he or she attaches a report prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1103.4(c) [see § 23.300[1][e][ii]] and verifying that the property is not in the hazard zone. These provisions are not intended to limit or abridge any existing duty of the transferor or the transferor's agents to exercise reasonable care in making the above determination [Gov. Code § 51183.5(d)].

The specification of items for disclosure in Gov. Code § 51183.5 does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Gov. Code § 51183.5(f)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those provisions or with Gov. Code § 51183.5. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by these provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [see Gov. Code § 51183.5(e); see also Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[iv] Delineated Earthquake Fault Zone

An agent for a transferor of real property that is located within a delineated earthquake fault zone, or the transferor if he or she is acting without any agent, must disclose to any prospective buyer the fact that the property is located within such a zone [Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(a)]. The disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(c)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(b)]:

- The transferor, or the transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within a delineated earthquake fault zone.

- A map that includes the property has been provided to the city or county pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 2622, and a notice has been posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the map and any information regarding changes to the map received by the county.

For these purposes, persons specified in Civ. Code § 1103.11 (that is, escrow agents) and persons acting under a power of sale regulated by Civ. Code § 2924 will not be deemed agents of the transferor [Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(e)].

If the map or accompanying information is not of sufficient accuracy or scale that a reasonable person can determine if the subject real property is included in a delineated earthquake fault hazard zone, the agent or transferor normally must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement. The agent or transferor may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, however, if he or she attaches a report prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1103.4(c) [see § 23.300[1][e][ii]] and verifying that the property is not in the hazard zone. These provisions are not intended to limit or abridge any existing duty of the transferor or transferor's agents to exercise reasonable care in making the above determination [Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(d)].

The specification of items for disclosure in Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9 does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(g)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those provisions or with Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by these provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [see Pub. Res. Code § 2621.9(f); see also Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[v] Seismic Hazard Zone

An agent for a transferor of real property that is located within a seismic hazard zone as designated under Pub. Res. Code § 2690 et seq., or the transferor if he or she is acting without any agent, must disclose to any prospective transferee the fact that the property is located within a seismic hazard zone [Pub. Res. Code § 2694(a)]. The disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Pub. Res. Code § 2694(c)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Pub. Res. Code § 2694(b)]:

- The transferor or transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within a seismic hazard zone.

- A map that includes the property has been provided to the city or county pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 2622, and a notice has been posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the map and any information regarding changes to the map received by the county.

For these purposes, persons specified in Civ. Code § 1103.11 (that is, escrow agents) and persons acting under a power of sale regulated by Civ. Code § 2924 will not be deemed agents of the transferor [Pub. Res. Code § 2694(e)].

If the map or accompanying information is not of sufficient accuracy or scale that a reasonable person can determine if the subject real property is included in a seismic hazard zone, the agent or transferor normally must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement. The agent or transferor may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, however, if he or she attaches a report prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1103.4(c) [see § 23.300[1][e][ii]] and verifying that the property is not in the hazard zone. These provisions are not intended to limit or abridge any existing duty of the transferor or the transferor's agents to exercise reasonable care in making the above determination [Pub. Res. Code § 2694(d)].

The specification of items for disclosure in Pub. Res. Code § 2694 does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Pub. Res. Code § 2694(g)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those provisions or with Pub. Res. Code § 2694. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by these provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [see Pub. Res. Code § 2694(f); see also Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[vi] Wildland Fire Zone

A transferor of real property that is located within a state responsibility area designated by the State Board of Forestry pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 4125 must disclose to any prospective transferee the fact that the property is located within a wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards and is subject to the requirements of Pub. Res. Code § 4291 [Pub. Res. Code § 4136(a); see Pub. Res. Code § 4291 (requiring any person that owns, leases, controls, operates, or maintains any building or structure in, on, or adjoining any mountainous area or forest-covered lands, brush-covered lands, or grass-covered lands, or any land that is covered with flammable material, to maintain firebreak and take other specified fire prevention steps)]. Except for property located within a county that has assumed responsibility for prevention and suppression of all fires pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 4129, the transferor must also disclose to any prospective transferee that it is not the state's responsibility to provide fire protection services to any building or structure located within the wildlands unless the Department of Forestry and Fire Protection has entered into a cooperative agreement with a local agency for those purposes pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 4142 [Pub. Res. Code § 4136(b)]. The disclosure may be provided in the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a; § 23.301[2]] or must be provided in the natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2; Pub. Res. Code § 4136(d)].

The disclosure is required only when one of the following conditions exists [Pub. Res. Code § 4136(c)]:

- The transferor, or the transferor's agent, has actual knowledge that the property is within a wildland fire zone.

- A map that includes the property has been provided to the city or county pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 4125, and a notice has been posted at the offices of the county recorder, county assessor, and county planning agency that identifies the location of the map and any information regarding changes to the map received by the county.

If the map or accompanying information is not of sufficient accuracy or scale that a reasonable person can determine if the subject real property is included in a wildland fire zone, the transferor ordinarily must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement. The transferor may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, however, if he or she attaches a report prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1103.4(c) [see § 23.300[1][e][ii]] and verifying that the property is not in the hazard zone. These provisions are not intended to limit or abridge any existing duty of the seller or the seller's agents to exercise reasonable care in making the above determination [Pub. Res. Code § 4136(e) (requiring agent to mark "Yes" or "No" on statement and implying, in context of remainder of section, that seller should make this mark)].

The specification of items for disclosure in Pub. Res. Code § 4136 does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision or law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transfer transaction [Pub. Res. Code § 4136(g)]. No transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those provisions or with Pub. Res. Code § 4136. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any duty prescribed by these provisions will be liable in the amount of actual damages suffered by a transferee [see Pub. Res. Code § 4136(f); see also Civ. Code § 1103.13].

[vii] Providing Required Information

If an earthquake fault zone, seismic hazard zone, very high fire hazard severity zone, or wildland fire area map or accompanying information is not of sufficient accuracy or scale that a reasonable person can determine whether the subject real property is included in a natural hazard area, the transferor or the transfer's agent must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement. The transferor or the transferor's agent may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement if he or she attaches a report prepared pursuant to Civ. Code § 1103.4(c) [see § 23.300[1][e][ii]] and verifying that the property is not in the hazard zone. In any case, none of these provisions are intended to limit or abridge any existing duty of a transferor or the transferor's agents to exercise reasonable care in making a determination concerning the property [Civ. Code § 1103.2(b)].

If the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has issued a letter of map revision confirming that a property is no longer within a special flood hazard area, then the transferor or transferor's agent may mark "No" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, even if the map has not been updated. The transferor or transferor's agent must attach a copy of the letter of map revision to the disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(c)]. If FEMA has issued a letter of map revision confirming that a property is within a special flood hazard area and the location and the letter have been posted pursuant to Gov. Code § 8589.3(g), then the transferor or the transferor's agent must mark "Yes" on the natural hazard disclosure statement, even if the map has not been updated. The transferor or transferor's agent must attach a copy of the letter of map revision to the disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(d)].

[viii] Notice of Controlled Substance Release

A seller of residential real property who knows that any release of an illegal controlled substance [see § 23.20[12] (definitions)] has come to be located on or beneath the real property must give written notice advising of that condition to the buyer before sale of the property. Notice is given by checking "yes" on the appropriate question on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6] and attaching a copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as the Department of Toxic Substances Control, the county health department, or the local environmental health officer [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1940.7.5 (similar disclosure requirements applicable to landlords)]. A seller's knowledge of the condition is established by receipt of a notice as specified, or by actual knowledge of the condition from a source independent of the notice [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(2)]. A seller's delivery of this disclosure information is legally adequate for purposes of informing the prospective buyer of the condition; the seller is not required to provide any additional disclosure of the information [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(3)].

§ 23.303 Notice of Delivery of Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice indicating that a seller of real property containing one-to-four dwelling units has provided the buyer with the statutory disclosure form describing the condition of the property [see Civ. Code § 1102.6; § 23.300[2] (statutory disclosure form); see also [c], [d], below]. The disclosure form must be delivered as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.3(a)]. Sellers subject to this disclosure requirement must indicate compliance with it on the deposit receipt or other real property sale contract, in an addendum attached to one of those documents, or a separate document [Civ. Code § 1102.3].

For a provision requiring the seller to furnish the statutory disclosure form and empowering the buyer to terminate the transaction after reviewing the statement, see § 23.236[2]. For further discussion of the underlying disclosure requirement, see § 23.300[1].

[b] Failure to Deliver Disclosure Form

No sale or other transfer subject to the disclosure requirement [see [a], above] will be invalidated solely because of the failure of any person to comply with those requirements. However, any person who willfully or negligently violates or fails to perform any of the disclosure duties will be liable for any actual damages suffered by a transferee [Civ. Code § 1102.13; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176.5 (Real Estate Commissioner may suspend or revoke license of any real estate broker who repeatedly or willfully violates these disclosure requirements)].

If the statutory disclosure form, or any material amendment to the required disclosures, is delivered after the execution of an offer to purchase, the transferee will have three days after delivery in person, or five days after delivery by deposit in the mail, to deliver a written notice terminating the offer to the transferor or the transferor's agent [Civ. Code § 1102.3].

[c] Additional Local Disclosure Form

Any city or county may require a seller subject to the disclosure requirement [see [a], above] to provide the transferee with a second disclosure statement containing additional information regarding the subject property [Civ. Code § 1102.6a]. This second statement must be in a statutory form entitled "Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement" [see Civ. Code § 1102.6a(b); § 23.301[2]] or in an alternative form required by an applicable local ordinance originally enacted before July 1990 [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)]. If the sale contract or local ordinance requires the seller to provide the local option disclosure statement within a specified number of days [see § 23.236[1]], compliance with that requirement should be mentioned in the notice of delivery.

[d] Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement

Certain natural hazard disclosures required by Civ. Code § 1103 and related statutes may be provided by the seller or the seller's agent in either the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [see § 23.302[2]] or the local option real estate transfer disclosure statement [see [c], above], provided the local option statement includes substantially the same information and warning that is required in the statutory statement. If the sale contract requires the seller to provide this statement within a specified number of days [see § 23.236[1]], compliance with that requirement should be mentioned in the notice of delivery.

§ 23.304 Notice of Former Ordnance Location

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of the existence of a former military ordnance location. A seller of residential real property who is required to provide the buyer with a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code §§ 1102, 1102.6; see also § 23.300[2]] and who has actual knowledge of any former federal or state ordnance locations within the neighborhood area must give written notice of that knowledge as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Civ. Code § 1102.15].

For these purposes, "former federal or state ordnance locations" means an area identified by an agency or instrumentality of the federal or state government as an area once used for military training purposes that may contain potentially explosive munitions. "Neighborhood area" means within one mile of the residential real property [Civ. Code § 1102.15].

This disclosure requirement does not limit or abridge any disclosure obligation created by any other law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in a transfer transaction [Civ. Code § 1102.15].

§ 23.305 Notice of Installation of Smoke Detector

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice that the seller of a single-family dwelling has installed an operable smoke detector in the property. It is a separate document rather than a provision of a real property sale contract. Written notice of compliance with the installation requirement must be included in the contract documents or in a separate document [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b)].

[b] Installation Requirement

Every single-family dwelling and factory-built housing unit [see Health & Safety Code § 19971] that is sold after 1985 must have an operable smoke detector. The detector must be approved and listed by the State Fire Marshal and installed in accordance with the Fire Marshal's regulations [see 19 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 200 et seq., 740 et seq.]. Unless prohibited by local rules, regulations, or ordinances, a battery-operated smoke detector will meet this requirement [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(a)].

[c] Disclosure Requirement

The transferor of a single-family dwelling, whether the transfer is made by sale, exchange, or installment land sale contract, must deliver to the transferee a written statement indicating that the transferor has complied with the installation requirement. The statement must be included in the deposit receipt (or other sale contract), in an addendum attached to it, or in a separate document [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(b)].

The transferor must deliver the installation statement as soon as practicable before the transfer of title in the case of a sale or exchange, or before the execution of the contract when the transfer is by a installment land sale contract. For these purposes, "delivery" means delivery in person or by mail to the transferee, or to any person authorized to act for him or her in the transaction, or to additional transferees who have requested delivery from the transferor in writing. Delivery to the spouse of a transferee will be deemed delivery to a transferee, unless the contract states otherwise [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(c)].

[d] Exceptions to Requirements

The installation and disclosure requirements do not apply to mobilehomes [see Health & Safety Code § 18008] or to duplexes, lodging houses, apartment complexes, hotels, motels, condominiums, stock cooperatives, time-share projects, and dwelling units in multiple-unit dwelling complexes. Owners of those dwelling units are subject to a similar installation requirement that applies whether or not the unit is about to be transferred [see Health & Safety Code § 13113.7; see also Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits]. There is no requirement that a seller provide a notice of compliance with that installation requirement.

The following kinds of transfers are exempt from the installation and disclosure requirements [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(d)]:

- Transfer that must be preceded by furnishing a prospective transferee with a copy of a public report pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1 [see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation ; Ch. 34, Condominiums and Other Common-Interest Developments , Pt. A].

- Transfer pursuant to court order, including:

    - Transfer ordered by a probate court in the administration of an estate;

    - Transfer pursuant to a writ of execution;

    - Transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy;

    - Transfer by eminent domain; and

    - Transfer resulting from a decree for specific performance.

- Transfers of the following kind:

    - Transfer to a mortgagee by a mortgagor in default;

    - Transfer to a beneficiary of a deed of trust by a trustor in default;

    - Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default;

    - Transfer by any foreclosure sale after default in an obligation secured by a mortgage; or

    - Transfer by a sale under a power of sale after a default in an obligation secured by an instrument containing a power of sale.

- Transfer by a fiduciary in the course of the administration of a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust.

- Transfer from one co-owner to one or more co-owners.

- Transfer to a spouse, or to a person or persons in the line of consanguinity of one or more of the transferors.

- Transfer between spouses resulting from a decree of dissolution of marriage, from a decree of legal separation, or from a property settlement agreement incidental to either type of decree.

- Transfer by the State Controller in the course of administering the Unclaimed Property Law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq.].

- Transfer of tax-deeded property [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 3691 et seq., 3771 et seq.].

[e] Violation of Requirement

A failure to comply with these installation and disclosure requirements will not invalidate a sale. The exclusive remedy for such a failure is an award of actual damages of up to $100, exclusive of any court costs and attorney's fees [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(g)].

§ 23.306 Preliminary Change-of-Ownership Report

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a preliminary change-of-ownership report that is prescribed by the State Board of Equalization and available from each county assessor or county recorder in California [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(a)]. This form, designated as BOE-502-A, is commonly known as the PCOR form. There are 58 versions of this form, one for each county; however, all versions are essentially the same, differing only with respect to the county name and perhaps the addition of some locally useful information (such an office address or telephone number) by the assessor or recorder. Any particular county version can be used in any other county; it is not necessary to use the version of the form provided by the assessor or recorder in the county where the form will be filed. This form can be downloaded from many assessor or recorder web sites (but not from the BOE web site).

Following any change of ownership of taxable real property [see [b][i], below], the transferee must report the transfer to the county assessor of the county in which the property is located. If a filed preliminary report is found to be inadequate by the county assessor, the transferee will be required to file a change-in-ownership statement on a form that the county assessor will send to the transferee [see [c][i], below].

If the change-of-ownership transaction will be closed through escrow, the attorney should determine at the outset whether the escrow agent will assist in meeting the change-of-ownership reporting requirement. For example, a title insurance company serving as an escrow agent frequently will provide the transferee with the preliminary change-of-ownership report and file the completed report with the county assessor when the agent records the deed.

The change-of-ownership reporting requirement is one of the laws that implement Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, which provides that the taxable value of real property may be increased only by an annual inflation factor of up to 2 percent [ see Rev. & Tax. Code § 51(a)(1)(D)] or to the fair market value when the property is purchased or newly constructed [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 70 (definition of "newly constructed"); see also Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 71, 75.12; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 463] or when a change of ownership occurs [Cal. Const., art. XIIIA, § 2; see Cal. Const., art. XIII; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 50 et seq.].

[b] What Constitutes Change of Ownership

[i] In General

A change of ownership is a transfer of a present interest in real property, including the beneficial use of the property, the value of which is substantially equal to the value of the fee interest [Rev. & Tax. Code § 60; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 60 et seq.; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.001; see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 401, Real Property Valuation and Assessment (Matthew Bender)]. The transfer may be voluntary, involuntary, by operation of law, or by grant, gift, devise, inheritance, trust, contract of sale, addition or deletion of an owner, property settlement, or any other means [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.001]. The purchase of real property clearly falls within the above definition [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 67 ("purchase" means a change of ownership for consideration)].

The general change-of-ownership rule and definitions are subject to a number of complex rules and exceptions established by statute and administrative regulation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 60 et seq.; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462 et seq.]. Most of these rules clarify whether particular transfers qualify as changes in ownership. These special rules do not affect the typical real property sale transaction between unrelated parties but do apply to a wide range of other transfers. Interspousal transfers (including transfers that take effect on the death of a spouse) do not constitute a change of ownership [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.220]. Certain transactions do not constitute a change of ownership if they occur between parents and their children or between grandparents and their orphaned grandchildren [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(a); see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(c)(5) (determination of full cash value of property transferred in grandparent-grandchild exchange)]. For discussion of the special rules, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 401, Real Property Valuation and Assessment (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Assessor's Assistance

The primary responsibility for applying California's ad valorem property taxation laws rests with county tax assessors [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 601, 602 (preparation of annual assessment roll)]. A taxpayer may submit a written request to the appropriate county assessor for a written ruling as to the property tax consequences of an actual or planned transaction, or as to the property tax liability of a specified property. Any ruling issued by the assessor will notify the taxpayer that the ruling represents the county's current interpretation of applicable law and does not bind the county, except as provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 5909(b) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 5909(a)]. If a taxpayer's failure to timely report information or pay amounts of tax directly results from the taxpayer's reasonable reliance on the type of ruling described above, the taxpayer will be relieved of any penalties, or interest assessed or accrued, with regard to property taxes not timely paid as a direct result of this reasonable reliance. A taxpayer's failure to timely report property values or to make a timely payment of property taxes will be considered to directly result from the taxpayer's reasonable reliance on an assessor's written ruling only if (1) the taxpayer submitted a written request for a ruling, (2) the request fully described all relevant facts and circumstances pertaining to the subject transaction or property, and (3) the assessor responded in writing and specifically stated the property tax consequences of the transaction or the property tax liability of the property [Rev. & Tax. Code § 5909(b)].

[c] Filing Procedure

Since a change of ownership will be effected by the recordation of a deed at the close of the sale transaction, the transferee should obtain a preliminary change-of-ownership report form (available at the office of the county assessor or recorder; for many counties, the form also is available for downloading from the assessor's or recorder's web site) and submit the completed form to the county recorder at the time of recording the deed [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(a)].

The form must be signed by the transferee, certifying that the information provided on the form is, to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, true, correct, and complete. The form must not be signed by an agent acting for the transferee [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(a)].

Although the filing of a preliminary change-of-ownership report is technically an optional procedure and is not a prerequisite to recording the transfer document [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(e)], a failure to file it will have consequences. The transferee will be required to submit, within 45 days, a change-in-ownership statement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480(e)] and the recorder will charge an additional recording fee [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(b)]. Failure to pay the additional fee will delay the recording of the deed [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(c)].

A submitted preliminary change-of-ownership report will be forwarded to the county assessor. The assessor will accept the preliminary report unless he or she determines that the report is incomplete or inaccurate or that more information is needed. County assessors are not bound by any statutory or regulatory guidelines when making this determination and should be consulted for advice on local standards. If the preliminary report is inadequate, the assessor will provide the transferee with a form for a change-in-ownership statement, which must be completed and returned within 45 days [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 482].

The following persons are not required to submit a preliminary change-of-ownership report or pay an additional recording fee if the report is not submitted:

- Any trustee issuing a trustee's deed to the beneficiary of a trust deed or mortgagee, or his or her assignees, pursuant to the exercise of a power of sale contained in a deed of trust or mortgage [see Civ. Code § 2920 et seq.; see also Ch. 25D, Foreclosure]; or

- An intermediate transferee of property.

For these purposes, "intermediate transferee" means any transferee who is acting as both a transferee and the transferor of the same property as part of a series of simultaneous transfers affecting that property and who records the transfer documents and other recorded documents related to the transfer in consecutive order at one time [Rev. & Tax. Code § 480.3(f)].

[d] Confidentiality of Statement or Report

Preliminary change-of-ownership reports are not public documents and are not open to inspection [Rev. & Tax. Code § 481; but see Rev. & Tax. Code § 408]. All information contained in them must be kept secret by the county assessor, the State Board of Equalization, and all others authorized by law to receive or have access to that information [Rev. & Tax. Code § 481].

§ 23.307 Statutory Notice of Cancellation of Home Equity Sale Contract [Civ. Code § 1695.5(b)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory notice of the right to cancel a home equity sale contract. A home equity contract essentially effects the sale of a residence in foreclosure [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(e)] and is subject to statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.; see also § 23.211[1]].

The equity buyer [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(a)] must attach to the contract two easily detachable copies of a completed cancellation notice and provide these documents to the equity seller [Civ. Code § 1695.5(b), (c)]. The equity seller may then use one of those attached copies as the notice of cancellation. For further discussion of the right to cancel, see § 23.211[1][d].

Until the equity buyer has complied with the requirements concerning notification of cancellation rights, the equity seller may cancel the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.5(d); see Civ. Code § 1695.5(a)- (c)].

For a discussion of the rescission of a home equity sale transaction in which the buyer, by the terms of the transaction, takes unconscionable advantage of the property owner in foreclosure [see Civ. Code § 1695.13], and an illustrative rescission form, see § 23.324.

[b] Required Format

The caption of the statutory form ("NOTICE OF CANCELLATION") must be in 12-point boldface type if the contract is printed, or in capital letters if the contract is typed. It must be followed by a space in which the equity buyer must enter the date the equity seller signs any contract. The form itself must be (1) in the same language (English, Spanish, and so forth) as used in the contract and (2) in at least 10-point type if the contract is printed, or in capital letters if the contract is typed [Civ. Code § 1695.5(b)].

Although the equity seller may use this statutory notice as the notice of cancellation, the notice need not take the form in [2], below. The notice, however expressed, is effective if it indicates the equity seller's intention not to be bound by the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.4(c)].

[c] Return of Documents

Within 10 days following receipt of a notice of cancellation, the equity buyer must return without condition any original contract and any other documents signed by the equity seller [Civ. Code § 1695.6(c)].

§ 23.308 Statement by Equity Buyer's Representative [Civ. Code § 1695.17(a)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statement that an equity buyer's representative has a real estate license and is bonded. The representative must present this statement to all parties to a home equity sale transaction and must present related proof to the equity seller [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(c) ("equity seller" defined)].

For the primary discussion of home equity sale contracts, see § 23.211[1]. See also § 23.307 regarding the statutory notice of the right to cancel a home equity sale contract, and § 23.324 concerning rescission of a home equity sale transaction.

[b] Definition of "Representative"

For these purposes, "representative" means a person who in any manner solicits, induces, or causes any property owner to transfer title to a residence in foreclosure to an equity buyer or solicits any member of the property owner's family or household to induce or cause the owner to make such a transfer [Civ. Code § 1695.15(b)].

[c] Disclosure Requirements

Any representative deemed to be the agent or employee, or agent and employee, of an equity buyer must provide both of the following [Civ. Code § 1695.17(a)]:

- Written proof to the equity seller that the representative has a valid current California real estate sales license and that the representative is bonded by an admitted surety insurer in an amount equal to twice the fair market value of the real property that is the subject of the home equity sale contract; and

- A written statement, under penalty of perjury, that the representative has a valid current California Real Estate Sales License, is bonded by an admitted surety insurer in an amount equal to at least twice the value of the real property that is the subject of the contract, and has complied with the requirements regarding proof described above.

The representative must provide this statement to all parties to the home equity sale contract before the transfer of any interest in the real property that is the subject of the contract.

The failure to comply with the foregoing disclosure requirements will, at the option of the equity seller, render the sale contract void and will cause the equity buyer to be liable to the equity seller for all damages proximately caused by the failure to comply [Civ. Code § 1695.17(b)].

[d] Liability of Equity Buyer for Damages

An equity buyer is liable for all damages resulting from any statement made or act committed by the equity buyer's representative in connection with the equity buyer's acquisition of a residence in foreclosure, receipt of any consideration or property from or on behalf of the equity seller, or performance of any act prohibited by the law governing home equity sale contracts [Civ. Code § 1695.15(a); see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.]. Any contractual provision that attempts or purports to limit this liability will be void and will, at the equity seller's option, render the sale contract void. Further, the equity buyer will be liable to the equity seller for all damages proximately caused by that void provision. Any contractual provision that attempts or purports to require arbitration of any dispute arising under the law governing home equity sale contracts will be void at the option of the equity seller, but only if grounds exist for the revocation of the contract [Civ. Code § 1695.16(a); see Civ. Code § 1695.16(b) (statute applies to contracts entered into after 1990)].

§ 23.309 Statutory Notice Regarding Title Insurance [Civ. Code § 1057.6]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, contains a statutory notice that must be provided, in a separate document, to a buyer of real property when the transaction is being consummated through the use of an escrow, if a policy of title insurance is not to be issued to the buyer [Civ. Code § 1057.6]. The buyer must sign and acknowledge the notice [Civ. Code § 1057.6].

Civ. Code § 1057.6 does not specify who must provide the notice to the buyer. The seller's broker may wish to provide the notice on the buyer's behalf. The form in [2], below, includes optional language (following the statutory notice) that may be used to identify the person who provides the form to the buyer and the underlying sale transaction.

The notice must be "signed and acknowledged" by the buyer [Civ. Code § 1057.6]. Acknowledgment is a statement that an instrument was in fact signed by the person whose signature appears on the document [see Civ. Code § 1189(a) (statutory form of acknowledgment); see also Favello v. Bank of America etc. Ass'n (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 342, 344, 74 P.2d 1057] .

The notice must be provided to the buyer "[i]n an escrow transaction" [Civ. Code § 1057.6], that is, at any time after the escrow has been opened and before the close of escrow.

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a disclosure of earthquake hazards. This earthquake hazards disclosure form, along with a copy of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety [see § 23.20[4]], must be provided to a prospective buyer or other transferee by the transferor of any real property containing any residential dwelling that was built before 1960 if it contains one-to-four living units and is of "conventional light-frame construction, as defined in Chapter 25 of the 1991 Edition of the Uniform Building Code of the International Conference of Building Officials" [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a)].

For discussion of additional earthquake-related disclosures that must be made when the property is in a delineated earthquake fault zone or seismic hazard zone [see Civ. Code § 1003 et seq.; Pub. Res. Code §§ 2621.9, 2694], see § 23.302[1].

[b] Exemptions

The disclosure requirement does not apply to any of the following transfers [Gov. Code § 8897.1(c)]:

- Transfer required to be preceded by the furnishing to a prospective transferee of a copy of a public report [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1; see also Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation].

- Transfer pursuant to court order, including:

    - Transfer ordered by a probate court in the administration of an estate;

- Transfer to a spouse, or to a person or persons in the lineal line of consanguinity of one or more of the transferors.
- Transfer between spouses resulting from a decree of dissolution of a marriage, from a decree of legal separation, or from a property settlement agreement incidental to either of those decrees.
- Transfer by the State Controller in the course of administering the Unclaimed Property Law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq.; see also Ch. 102C, Lost and Unclaimed Property].
- Transfer of tax-defaulted or tax-deeded property made by the State [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 3691 et seq., 3771 et seq.].
- Transfer for which the transferee has agreed in writing that the dwelling will be demolished within one year of the date of transfer.

[c] Disclosure Procedure

The transferor must provide the earthquake hazards disclosure to the transferee as soon as practicable before the transfer of title in the case of a sale or exchange, or before the execution of the contract when the transfer is by a installment land sale contract [Gov. Code § 8897.1(b); see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing]. The disclosure may be made in person or by mail to the transferee or any person authorized to act for the transferee in the transaction, and additional transferees who have provided the transferor with a written request for the disclosure [Gov.

Code § 8897.1(b)].

[d] Required Disclosures

The transferor must disclose any of certain specified deficiencies if they are within the transferor's actual knowledge, are material to the transaction, and may increase the vulnerability of the dwelling to earthquake damage. The following deficiencies must be disclosed [Gov. Code § 8897.2(a); see Gov. Code § 8897.1(a) (disclosure must clearly indicate whether transferor has actual knowledge that dwelling has any of these deficiencies)]:

- Absence of anchor bolts securing the sill plate to the foundation [see Gov. Code § 8897.3 (requirements governing retrofit work for this deficiency)].
- Existence of any of the following conditions:
  - Perimeter cripple walls that are not braced with plywood, blocking, or diagonal metal or wood braces [see Gov. Code § 8897.3 (requirements governing retrofit work for this deficiency)];
  - First-story wall or walls that are not braced with plywood or diagonal metal or wood braces;
  - Perimeter foundation composed of unreinforced masonry;
  - Unreinforced masonry dwelling walls;
  - Habitable room or rooms above a garage; or
  - Water heater that is not anchored, strapped, or braced.

In addition, the transferor must disclose any material information within the transferor's actual knowledge regarding any corrective measures or improvements taken to address the items listed above [Gov. Code § 8897.2(b)].

[e] Duties of Licensees

For the purposes of the laws governing the earthquake hazards disclosure, the duty of a real estate licensee will be limited to providing the transferor with a copy of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety for delivery to the prospective transferee pursuant to Civ. Code § 2079.8 [Gov. Code § 8897.5; see § 23.20[4]].

§ 23.311 Lead-Based Paint Disclosures Attachment for Sales Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, consists of an attachment setting forth certain required disclosures relating to the presence of lead-based in residential housing built before 1978. Sellers of most of that type of housing must include such an attachment with the sale contract [see [c], below]. The attachment was developed by EPA and HUD, but neither agency included a model form in the regulations governing lead-based paint disclosures, which appear in the Code of Federal Regulations in both the EPA title [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.80 et seq.] and the HUD title [see 40 C.F.R. § 745.100 et seq.]. A seller or broker or agent may use a different format that contains all of the required elements [61 Fed. Reg. 9064, 9073 (1996)] .

For a related disclosure that may be included in the sale contract and covers the required 10-day opportunity to inspect for the presence of lead-based paint before becoming obligated under a sale contract [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.90; 40 C.F.R. § 745.110], see § 23.312.

[b] Seller's Obligation to Disclose Presence of Lead-Based Paint

[i] In General

Federal regulations require sellers of most residential housing built before 1978 (referred to as "target housing") [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.86; 40 C.F.R. § 745.103 (definition)] to make disclosures regarding the presence of known lead-based paint or lead-based paint hazards in the housing [see [ii], below]. A sale transaction involving housing for the elderly, a zero-bedroom dwelling (such as a dormitory or barracks), or housing sold at foreclosure is exempt from the disclosure requirements [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.82(a); 40 C.F.R. § 745.101(a)].

Further, the seller must give the buyer a 10-day opportunity to conduct a risk assessment or inspection and must attach specific disclosure and warning language to the sale contract. The parties may agree in writing to a different time period, or the buyer may waive the opportunity in writing [24 C.F.R. § 35.90; 40 C.F.R. § 745.110].

Sellers and their agents who fail to comply with the requirements are subject to civil and criminal penalties and can be jointly and severally liable to the buyer in an amount equal to three times the amount of actual damages [24 C.F.R. § 35.96; 40 C.F.R. § 745.118]. However, failure to comply does not invalidate a sale contract [42 U.S.C. § 4852d(c)].

[ii] Required Disclosure Activities

Before a buyer becomes obligated under any contract to purchase target housing in a non-exempt transaction, the seller must do all of the following [24 C.F.R. § 35.88; 40 C.F.R. § 745.107]:

- Provide the buyer with an EPA-approved lead-hazard information pamphlet, such as the EPA-approved Protect Your Family From Lead in Your Home (EPA 747-K-99-001), which can be obtained from the Government Printing Office or can be downloaded from www.hud.gov/offices/lead/healthyhomes/lead.cfm.

- Disclose to the buyer the presence of any known lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards in the housing being sold, along with any additional information available concerning that paint or hazard, such as the basis for determining that the lead-based paint or hazard exists, its location, and the condition of the painted surfaces.

- Disclose to each agent involved in the transaction the presence of any known lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards in the housing being sold and the existence of any available records or reports pertaining to that paint or hazards. The seller must also disclose any additional information available concerning the known lead-based paint or hazards, such as the basis for determining that the lead-based paint or hazard exists, its location, and the condition of the painted surfaces.

- Provide the buyer with any records or reports available to the seller pertaining to lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards in the housing being sold. This includes records and reports regarding both common areas and other residential dwellings in multifamily target housing, provided the information is part of an evaluation or reduction of lead-based paint or hazards in the target housing as a whole.

If some, but not all, of these requirements have been fulfilled when the buyer has made an offer to purchase the housing, the seller must complete the remaining disclosure activities before accepting the offer and allow the buyer an opportunity to review the information and amend (or, presumably, withdraw) the offer [24 C.F.R. § 35.88(b); 40 C.F.R. § 745.107(b)]. The latest point at which disclosure must take place is just before the buyer becomes obligated under a sale contract [see 61 Fed. Reg. 9064, 9071 (1996) (EPA/HUD statutory interpretation)]. However, failure to conduct full disclosure before the sale does not affect the validity of a sale contract [42 U.S.C. § 4852d(c)].

[c] Attachment Required for Sales Contracts

Each sale contract involving target housing must include an attachment containing the elements listed below. The text of the lead warning statement must be in "large type" and on a "separate sheet of paper attached to the contract" [42 U.S.C. § 4852d(a)(3)], but there is no prescribed format [61 Fed. Reg. 9073 (1996)] (although a format was suggested by EPA and HUD [61 Fed. Reg. 9074 (1996)] , for drafters who want to use it as a guide). The attachment must be in the same language (that is, English, Spanish, and so forth) as the contract [24 C.F.R. § 35.92(a); 40 C.F.R. § 745.113(a)]. The required elements are as follows:

- A lead warning statement in prescribed language (implicitly required to be entitled "Lead Warning Statement");

- A statement by the seller that either discloses the presence of any known lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards in the dwelling or indicates no knowledge of the presence of lead-based paint or hazards;

- A statement by the seller that provides any additional information available concerning the known lead-based paint or hazards (for example, the basis for determining that lead-based paint hazards exist in the housing, the location of lead-based paint or hazards, and the condition of the painted surfaces);

- A list of all records and reports pertaining to lead-based paint or hazards that are available to the seller and have been provided to the buyer (but if no records or reports are available to the seller, the seller must so indicate);

- A statement by the buyer affirming receipt of the above-described information and receipt of an EPA-approved lead hazard information pamphlet, such as Protect Your Family From Lead in Your Home [see 15 U.S.C. § 2686; see also [b][ii], above];

- A statement that the buyer either (1) has received a 10-day opportunity to conduct a risk assessment or inspection for the presence of lead-based paint or hazards (unless the parties have mutually agreed to a different period of time) before becoming obligated under the contract or (2) has signed a written waiver of this opportunity;

- A statement by any agent involved in the transaction that he or she has informed the seller of the seller's disclosure obligations under 42 U.S.C. § 4852d and that the agent is aware of his or her duty to ensure compliance with those requirements; and

- The signatures of all parties and agents certifying the accuracy of their statements on the attachment, along with the dates of signature.

Sellers and agents must retain copies of the completed attachment for at least three years from the sale's completion date [24 C.F.R. § 35.92(c); 40 C.F.R. § 745.113(c)].

Lead-Based Paint Disclosures Attachment for Sales Contract

Lead Warning Statement

Every purchaser of any interest in residential real property on which a residential dwelling was built before 1978 is notified that such property may present exposure to lead from lead-based paint that may place young children at risk of developing lead poisoning. Lead poisoning in young children may produce permanent neurological damage, including learning disabilities, reduced intelligence quotient, behavioral problems, and impaired memory. Lead poisoning also poses a particular risk to pregnant women. The seller of any interest in residential real property is required to provide the buyer with any information on lead-based paint hazards from risk assessments or inspections in the seller's possession and notify the buyer of any known lead-based paint hazards. A risk assessment or inspection for possible lead-based paint hazards is recommended before purchase.

§ 23.312 Lead-Based Paint Disclosures--Contingency Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a clause describing the right of a purchaser of residential housing built before 1978 to inspect the property for the presence of lead-based paint. Federal regulations promulgated by the EPA and HUD require sellers of most such housing to disclose the presence of known lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards in the housing, and to provide purchasers with a right of inspection [see [b], below; § 23.311[1]]. This clause is based on an EPA/HUD-supplied example, but nothing in the federal disclosure regulations imposes a requirement on the parties to use any particular language [61 Fed. Reg. 9064, 9077 (1996)] .

[b] Inspection Right

Before a purchaser is obligated under a sale contract relating to housing subject to the federal disclosure regulations [see § 23.311[1]], the seller must permit the purchaser 10 days to conduct a risk assessment or inspection for the presence of lead-based paint and lead-based paint hazards. The parties may agree in writing to a different time period, or the buyer may waive the opportunity in writing [24 C.F.R. § 35.90; 40 C.F.R. § 745.110].

[2] FORM

Lead-Based Paint Disclosures--Contingency Clause

[number]. Lead-Based Paint Disclosures. This contract is contingent on a risk assessment or inspection of the property for the presence of lead-based paint and/or lead-based paint hazards at Buyer's expense until 9:00 p.m. on_____[date 10 days after contract ratification, or other date mutually agreed on]. This contingency will terminate at that deadline unless Buyer (or Buyer's agent) delivers to Seller (or Seller's agent) a written contract addendum listing the specific existing deficiencies and corrections needed, together with a copy of the inspection and/or risk assessment report. Seller may, at Seller's option, within [number] days after delivery of the addendum, elect in writing to correct the deficiencies before settlement. If Seller will correct the deficiencies, Seller shall furnish Buyer with certification from a risk assessor or inspector demonstrating that the deficiencies have been remedied before the date of the settlement. If Seller does not elect to correct the deficiencies, or if Seller makes a counteroffer, Buyer shall have [number] days to respond to the counteroffer or remove this contingency and take the property in "as is" condition, otherwise this contract shall become void. Buyer may remove this contingency at any time without cause.

§ 23.313 Disclosure of Law Enforcement Database of Registered Sex Offenders' Locations

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, must be part of every contract of sale for residential real property comprising one-to-four dwelling units, including installment land sale contracts [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a)(3) (applicable on and after April 1, 2006); see Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a)(1), (2) (this notice may be used in contracts before April 1, 2006, in lieu of notice that formerly was required; contract forms containing notice that formerly was required may be used until April 1, 2006); see also Penal Code §§ 290, 290.4, 290.46 (California version of "Megan's Law" requiring law enforcement authorities to maintain database of locations of registered sex offenders and to provide that information to public)]. The contract must contain the notice in [2], below, printed in at least eight-point type [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a)(3)].

The information in the notice is deemed adequate to inform the transferee about the existence of the statewide database and information from the database regarding the locations of registered sex offenders [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. On delivery of this notice, the seller is not required to provide any further information in addition to that contained in the notice regarding the proximity of registered sex offenders, and making those disclosures cannot give rise to any cause of action against the seller by a registered sex offender [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. However, providing the statutory notice regarding the existence of the database of registered sex offender locations does not alter any other existing duty that a seller has to make disclosures [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(c)].

§ 23.314 Disclosures Regarding Private Transfer-Fee Requirement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The forms in [2], below, may be used to disclose a private transfer-fee requirement that will apply to a transfer of real property. A private transfer fee, for this purpose, is any payment required in a covenant, restriction, or condition contained in any deed, contract, security instrument, or other document affecting the transfer or sale of, or any interest in, real property, which requires a fee to be paid on transfer of the real property [Civ. Code § 1098; but see Civ. Code § 1098(a)-(i) (exceptions)].

If property being transferred after 2007 is subject to a private transfer-fee requirement, the transferor must provide, at the time of providing the transfer disclosure statement required pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6, an additional disclosure statement containing all of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6e; see [2][a], below]:

- Notice that payment of a transfer fee is required on transfer of the property;
- The amount of the fee required for the asking price of the real property, and a description of how the fee is calculated;
- Notice that the final amount of the fee may be different if the fee is based on a percentage of the final sale price;
- The entity to which funds from the fee will be paid;
- The purposes for which funds from the fee will be used; and

- The date or circumstances under which the obligation to pay the transfer fee expires, if it could expire.

In addition, the person or entity imposing any such fee after 2007 must record a disclosure document, entitled "Payment of Transfer Fee Required," in which pertinent facts about the fee-payment requirement are disclosed [see [2][b], below]. The disclosure document must be recorded in the office of the county recorder for the county in which the real property is located, concurrently with the recording of the instrument creating the transfer-fee requirement [Civ. Code § 1098.5(b)]. The disclosure document must include all of the following information [Civ. Code § 1098.5(b)(2)]:

- The names of all current owners of the real property subject to the transfer fee, and the legal description and assessor's parcel number for the affected real property;

- The amount, if the fee is a flat amount, or the percentage of the sales price constituting the cost of the fee;

- If the real property is residential property: actual dollar-cost examples of the fee for a home priced at $250,000, a home priced at $500,000, and a home priced at $750,000;

- The date or circumstances under which the transfer fee payment requirement expires, if any;

- The purpose for which the funds from the fee will be used;

- The entity to which funds from the fee will be paid and specific contact information regarding where the funds are to be sent; and

- The signature of the authorized representative of the entity to which funds from the fee will be paid.

For transfer fees imposed before 2008, the recipient of the fee, as a condition of payment of the fee after 2008, must, before 2009, record the disclosure document against the real property in the office of the county recorder for the county in which the real property is located [Civ. Code § 1098.5(a)].

§ 23.315 Disclosures Regarding Noncompliant Plumbing Fixtures (Pre-1994 Properties)

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to meet the applicable requirement (if any) for a seller or transferor of real property, if it was built and available for use before January 1, 1994, to make disclosures regarding whether the property has plumbing fixtures that are noncompliant with a legal standard. The legal standard is discussed in § 23.20B. There are three requirements.

(1) On and after January 1, 2017 [Civ. Code § 1102.155(b)], the seller of residential real property subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 23.20[1]] must disclose, in writing, that Civ. Code § 1101.4 (see the second requirement, below) requires that California single-family residences, if built and available for use before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2], must be equipped with water-conserving plumbing fixtures on or before January 1, 2017; and the seller must further disclose whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1102.155(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 1101.3(c),(e) (what are noncompliant plumbing fixtures and water-conserving plumbing fixtures, discussed in § 23.20B[2])]. The seller must affirm that this representation is that of the seller and not a representation of any agent, and that this disclosure is not intended to be part of any contract between the buyer and the seller. The seller must further affirm that this disclosure is not a warranty of any kind by the seller or any agent representing any principal in the transaction and is not a substitute for any inspections or warranties that any principal may wish to obtain [Civ. Code § 1102.155(a)(2)]. (The statutory text states, apparently by clerical error: "any inspections that or warranties any principal may wish to obtain.")

(2) On and after January 1, 2017, a seller or transferor of a single-family residential property, if it was built and available for use before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2; see § 23.20B[2]], must disclose in writing to the prospective purchaser or transferee the requirements of Civ. Code § 1101.4(b) [see § 23.20B[5][a]] and whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures [Civ. Code § 1101.4(c)]. It is apparent that this disclosure requirement can be met by making the disclosure required in Civ. Code § 1102.155 (see the first requirement, above).

(3) On and after January 1, 2019, a seller or transferor of a multi-family residential property or a commercial property, if it was built and available for use before January 1, 1994 [Civ. Code § 1101.2; see § 23.20B[2]], must disclose to the prospective purchaser or transferee, in writing, the requirements of Civ. Code § 1101.5(a) [see § 23.20B[5][b]] and whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures. This disclosure may be included in other transactional documents [Civ. Code § 1101.5(e)].

There is some disharmony between the first requirement and third requirement above. Civ. Code § 1102.155 applies, on or after January 1, 2017, in cases that are subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq.; therefore Civ. Code § 1102.155 can be applicable in a sale of a single-family residence or a sale of a duplex, a triplex, or a fourplex [see Civ. Code § 1102(a)]. Civ. Code § 1101.5(e) applies, or after January 1, 2019--that is, starting two years later--to a sale of a multi-family property, which would include a duplex, a triplex, or a fourplex. Thus, in the case of a sale of a residential duplex, triplex, or fourplex, it is not clear whether the disclosure requirement applies starting in 2017 or starting in 2019.

Since there is no requirement for a separate disclosure statement in any of these cases, this form could be included in a document containing other disclosures (but this form cannot be appended to the disclosure statement specified in Civ. Code § 1102.6).

[2] FORM

Disclosures Regarding Noncompliant Plumbing Fixtures

[EITHER]

Section 1101.4(b) of the Civil Code provides that on or before January 1, 2017, noncompliant plumbing fixtures in any single-family residential real property shall be replaced by the property owner with water-conserving plumbing fixtures.

[OR]

Section 1101.5(a) of the Civil Code provides that on or before January 1, 2019, all noncompliant plumbing fixtures in any multi-family residential real property and in any commercial real property shall be replaced with water-conserving plumbing fixtures.

[CONTINUE]

Section 1101.2 of the Civil Code provides that Section _____[1101.4(b) or 1101.5(a)] shall apply to residential and commercial real property built and available for use on or before January 1, 1994.

The property commonly known as _____[specify address or other common description of property that is being sold or transferred] _____[includes or does not include] noncompliant plumbing fixtures. _____[If complying with Civ. Code § 1102.155, add: This representation is that of the seller and not a representation of any agent, and this disclosure is not intended to be part of any contract between the buyer and the seller. § 23.320 Impound Account for Structural Pest-Control Work

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an auxiliary agreement between a buyer and seller of real property to impound funds for the cost of structural pest-control work. It is designed for use when a structural pest-control clearance must be obtained before close of escrow [see § 23.320[1][b]], and there is not enough time for the operator to perform the necessary corrective work and prepare the certification before the date specified in the sale contract for close of escrow [see § 23.320[1][c]]. For discussion and checklists covering the relevant statutory requirements governing the preparation of the report and the performance of corrective work necessary to obtain a pest-control certification, see §§ 23.133 and 23.150.

An impound account may be useful in other situations. If, for example, the seller has agreed to replace a roof, remove debris on the property, or perform other similar obligations, an impound account may ensure that the seller will perform those obligations and at the same time would avoid the possibility of a delay in the close of escrow.

[b] Structural Pest-Control Certification Process

Lenders typically require a recent structural pest-control report and a pest-control certification or clearance as a condition of making a loan. The certification or clearance requirement means, in effect, that all repair work must be performed and the property must be reinspected before close of escrow. Unless the contract provides for a long escrow period, the timing can be a problem. The process of ordering the inspection, arranging for performance of the corrective work, and obtaining a reinspection and certification can take weeks. One way to circumvent this problem is to arrange for an impound of funds after close of escrow to cover the cost of the structural work [see § 23.320[1][c]].

If the structural pest-control report indicates a substantial amount of damage, and the lender demands that a clearance be obtained by close of escrow, the only real options are to perform the work, to extend the escrow period, to arrange for an impound of funds if that course is acceptable to the lender, or to terminate the escrow. Accordingly, the parties would be well advised to consider the policy of prospective lenders concerning termite clearances if it appears that there is a potential problem. Some lenders may negotiate a clearance requirement, while others will insist on a clearance regardless of the nature and cost of the work and the plans of the parties.

[c] Role and Operation of Impounds

In some cases, the process of ordering an inspection, preparing the inspection report, performing any corrective work, and preparing the certification may take weeks. If the escrow period is short, or if extensive corrective work must be performed in order to obtain a certification, it may not be possible to complete all these steps within the escrow period.

The most obvious way to solve this problem is to extend the time for close of escrow. There are numerous reasons, however, why an extension may be undesirable. The loan commitment issued by the buyer's lender, for example, may have a fixed expiration date, or a delayed close of escrow may jeopardize the sale of the buyer's existing residence or the purchase of the seller's new one. Accordingly, the parties may be reluctant or unwilling to extend the escrow date to await the pest-control clearance.

The impound arrangement offers the parties an alternative. It permits escrow to close on time regardless of whether a pest-control clearance has been obtained by that date. It authorizes the escrow agent to retain funds in an impound account and disburse those funds to the operator to cover the cost of the certification and corrective work.

[d] Funding of Impound Account

If the seller is responsible for the cost of the corrective work, the impound account will be funded out of amounts withheld from the proceeds of the sale received by the seller on close of escrow. If the buyer is responsible for the cost of corrective work, he or she is required to deposit additional funds with the escrow agent on or before the date of close of escrow. If the cost of corrective work is to be apportioned between buyer and seller, the agreement should be modified to provide for a combination of these two methods.

At first glance it might appear that creation of an impound account is superfluous if the buyer is the one responsible for the cost of corrective work, since the buyer, as new owner of the property, is the one who stands to benefit from performance of the work or to suffer if it is not performed. However, if the buyer is financing the purchase with a loan from an institutional lender, the lender may independently require a structural pest-control clearance as a condition of making the loan, in order to protect its security interest in the property. In this situation, if a clearance cannot be obtained before close of escrow, the lender may insist on an impound arrangement to ensure that the buyer will actually perform any necessary corrective work and obtain the required clearance.

[e] Amount of Impound

At a minimum, the amount of impounded funds should equal the structural pest-control operator's bid for performing the necessary corrective work, plus any other inspection and certification costs that are to be paid out of escrow. It is probably preferable to impound an amount exceeding those costs, such as 150 percent of the cost of the corrective work. The party responsible for the cost of repairs is thus given an incentive to have the repairs performed promptly, and the other party acquires a measure of protection (although not absolute protection) in the event that the repair costs exceed the amount specified in the operator's bid. Any funds remaining in the impound account after the operator has been paid will be refunded to the buyer or the seller, as appropriate.

[f] Failure to Perform Work

If the party responsible for the cost of the corrective work fails to arrange to have the work performed, the party for whose benefit the impound is established (the buyer or the buyer's lender) should be empowered to arrange for performance of the work and payment of the operator out of the impounded funds. To facilitate exercise of this remedy, the party responsible for the cost of corrective work should be required to deposit into escrow a signed contract with the operator for performance of the corrective work. Ordinarily, this will consist of a copy of the report, with the operator's bid attached and signed by the buyer to indicate acceptance.

[2] FORM

Impound Account for Structural Pest-Control Work

This is an addendum to a contract between_____[name] as Seller and_____[name] as Buyer ("the Contract"), dated _____, for the sale and purchase of real property known as_____[street address] ("the Property"), and shall modify the terms of the Contract in the manner and to the extent specified in this addendum.

Under the Contract, the close of escrow is contingent on the deposit in escrow of a certification by a licensed structural pest-control operator (the "certification") that the Property is free of evidence of active infestation or infection in the visible and accessible areas. The cost of any corrective work that is required to obtain such a certification is to be borne by [Seller or Buyer or, if costs are to be apportioned between seller and buyer, specify manner of apportionment].

[Seller or Buyer] has obtained a structural pest-control inspection and report ("the report") on the Property dated _____, from_____[name of structural pest-control operator],_____[address] (the "operator"), a licensed structural pest-control operator. The report is attached to this addendum and is incorporated by reference. The report contains the operator's bid to perform the corrective work necessary to obtain a certification at a cost of $_____.

The operator has informed [Seller or Buyer] that it may not be possible to complete all corrective work specified in the report and prepare a certification before the date specified in the Contract for close of escrow, as required by the Contract.

_____[Add, if appropriate: To purchase the Property, Buyer is relying on the proceeds of a loan from _____ [name of lender] ("Lender"). Lender has informed Buyer that as a condition of making that loan, Lender will require the deposit in escrow of a certification or the creation of an impound account to cover the cost of corrective work.]

THEREFORE, Seller and Buyer agree to establish an impound account to cover payment of the cost of structural pest-control work on the Property, on the terms and conditions specified in this addendum.

1. Close of Escrow. Notwithstanding Paragraph [number] of the Contract, escrow on the Property shall close on the date specified in the Contract for close of escrow, regardless of whether a certification has been deposited with the escrow agent by that date, provided the parties have complied with all terms and conditions specified in this addendum.

2. Creation of Impound Account. If a certification has not been deposited with the escrow agent on or before the date specified in the Contract for close of escrow on the Property, the escrow agent shall establish an impound account containing funds in the amount of $_____, that sum being_____[e.g., equal to or one and a half times the amount of] the operator's bid for performing the corrective work specified in the report [plus the operator's fee for inspection and certification]. These funds shall be [withheld by the escrow agent from the proceeds of sale disbursed to Seller following close of escrow on the Property or deposited with the escrow agent by Buyer, in addition to any other sums that Buyer is required to deposit with the escrow agent under the terms of the Contract, on or before the close of escrow on the Property or specify apportionment of cost of corrective work between buyer and seller ] and shall be held in a non-interest-bearing account and disbursed by the escrow operator in the manner specified in this addendum.

3. Payment of Corrective Work. On completion of all corrective work and issuance of a certification, [Seller or Buyer] shall deposit with the escrow agent a certification prepared by the operator, the operator's itemized statement for services rendered, and a statement signed by [Seller or Buyer or both Seller and Buyer] approving the completed work and authorizing release of the impounded funds. On receipt of the certification, statement, and authorization, the escrow agent shall promptly disburse to the operator, from the impound account, funds equal to the operator's charges appearing on its statement. After the operator has been paid in full for its services, the escrow agent shall promptly disburse any balance remaining in the impound account to [Seller or Buyer or specify apportionment].

4. Failure to Perform Corrective Work. If the operator's certification and statement for services rendered and an appropriate authorization to release the impounded funds have not been deposited with the escrow agent within [number] days following the close of escrow on the Property, the escrow agent shall immediately notify [e.g., Buyer and Lender] of that fact. On receipt of that notice, [e.g., Buyer or Lender] shall have the right to demand assurances that [Seller or Buyer] has arranged for performance of the corrective work and that satisfactory progress has been made toward completion of that work. If [Seller or Buyer] is unable to provide [e.g., Buyer or Lender] with assurances satisfactory to [e.g., Buyer or Lender], then [e.g., Buyer or Lender], on notice to the escrow agent, may arrange with the operator for completion of any unperformed portion of the work and may unilaterally authorize the escrow agent to disburse funds from the impound account to cover the cost of the corrective work.

5. Deposit of Signed Contract. [Seller or Buyer] shall deposit with the escrow agent, concurrently with execution of this addendum, an original signed contract between [Seller or Buyer] and the operator, authorizing the operator to perform all corrective work listed in the report that is necessary to obtain a certification on the Property, at the price specified in the operator's bid.

6. Availability of Other Remedies. Nothing in this addendum shall be construed to abrogate, limit, or otherwise restrict any other legal or equitable remedy that would otherwise be available to [e.g., Buyer or Lender], specifically including, but not limited to, the right of [e.g., Buyer or Lender] to recover from [Seller or Buyer] any funds paid by [e.g., Buyer or Lender] for any corrective work on the Property that is required in order to obtain a certification and the cost of which exceeds the funds held in the impound account.

§ 23.321 Memorandum Contract of Sale of Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a memorandum of a real property sale contract that, when recorded, will provide constructive notice of the contents of the sale contract to would-be buyers and mortgagees [see [b], below]. Recording a memorandum is preferable to recording the sale contract, for the sake of protecting the confidentiality of many of the terms contained in the sale contract. Also, since the recording fee is based on the number of pages [see Gov. Code § 27361], a memorandum will almost invariably cost less to record.

Although no legal authority in California expressly authorizes the recordation of a memorandum contract of sale of real property, it is clear that a real property sale contract can be recorded [see, e.g., Keese v. Beardsley (1923) 190 Cal. 465, 473, 213 P. 500 ; High Fidelity Enterprises, Inc. v. Hull (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 279, 281, 26 Cal. Rptr. 654] . A memorandum of a real property sale contract, while not expressly identified among the kinds of instruments that can be recorded [see Gov. Code § 27279 et seq.], is implicitly recordable if it contains all of the elements of a contract and is signed and acknowledged by the seller. The elements of a contract and the seller's signature would make the memorandum an "instrument" [see Gov. Code § 27279(a) ("a written paper signed by a person or persons transferring the title to, or giving a lien on real property, or giving a right to a debt or duty")]. Any instrument "affecting the title to or possession of real property may be recorded" [Gov. Code § 27280(a)]. The seller's acknowledgment is required because if "the instrument is an agreement for sale, ... deposit receipt, ... or affidavit which quotes or refers to an agreement for sale, ... [or] deposit receipt, ... and such instrument claims to, or affects any interest in real property, it shall be executed and acknowledged or proved ... by the party who appears by the instrument to be the party whose real property is affected or alienated thereby" [Gov. Code § 27288]. The recordability of such a memorandum is further implied by statutes clearly assuming that such a document could be recorded [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 886.010 et seq.].

However, some counties may not record a memorandum because of the lack of express authority. Consequently, before using the form in [2], below, the attorney should confirm that it will be accepted for recordation by the county in which the subject real property is situated (and by other counties, if appropriate) [see [g], below].

[b] Effect of Recordation

Every "conveyance" of real property (except a lease for a term not exceeding one year) is void as against any subsequent good faith purchaser or mortgagee for value whose conveyance is first duly recorded [Civ. Code § 1214; see Civ. Code § 1217 (unrecorded instrument is valid as between parties and those who have notice); see also Civ. Code § 1215 ("conveyance" defined); [e], below]. From the time it is filed with the recorder, a properly acknowledged or proved and certified instrument of conveyance will be constructive notice of its contents to subsequent buyers and mortgagees [Civ. Code § 1213; see Civ. Code § 18 (constructive notice is that which is imputed by law)]. Recording also protects the interest in the property of a good faith purchaser or mortgagee for value from any previous unrecorded conveyances and from any subsequent conveyances or actions affecting title [see Civ. Code § 1214].

[c] Required Contents

Documents relating to real property must contain certain information in order to be recorded. A document effecting or evidencing a transfer or encumbrance of an interest in real property must contain the name or names in which the interest appears of record (with certain exceptions relating to notices of street and highway assessments) [see Gov. Code § 27288.1(a)]. A document that releases or terminates any interest, right, or encumbrance in real property must contain or have appended to it the names of all persons and entities owning the subject title or interest, or the names of those persons or entities appearing as the owners of the title or interest in the document that created the interest, right, or encumbrance [Gov. Code § 27288.1(b)]. The failure of a document to include the appropriate names will not affect the constructive notice that would otherwise be afforded by the recording of the document [Gov. Code § 27288.1].

If any person in whom the title of real estate is vested afterward changes his or her name, the memorandum (or other conveyance) must set forth the name in which he or she derived title to the property [see Civ. Code § 1096]. A document that does not include such a changed name will not impart constructive notice of its contents to subsequent buyers and encumbrancers, but will be valid as between the parties to the agreement and those who have notice of it [Civ. Code § 1096].

[d] Other Information and Format

To be recorded, a document must contain an address for delivery by the recorder [see Gov. Code §§ 27321.5, 27361.6]. All printed forms primarily intended to be recorded must have a half-inch margin on the two vertical sides of each page, except in the top two and a half inches of the first page, which must be reserved for recording information. The left-hand three and a half inches of that reserved space is intended for use by the person requesting recordation, to show to whom the document should be returned. The recorder uses the right-hand side of that reserved space to show the time and place of recording. A failure to comply with the requirements will not affect the notice otherwise imparted by recording [Gov. Code § 27361.6].

All instruments presented for recordation should be on paper that will reproduce legibly by microphotographic or imaging processes [Gov. Code § 27361.6].

For further discussion, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

[e] Elements of Agreement

Every "conveyance" is constructive notice of its contents from the time it is filed with the recorder for record [Civ. Code § 1213]. For these purposes, "conveyance" includes every instrument in writing by which any estate or interest in real property is created, alienated, mortgaged, or encumbered, or by which the title to any real property may be affected (except wills) [Civ. Code § 1215]. An executory land sale contract is such a "conveyance" because the effect of the contract is to convey or transfer the equitable title to land [Keese v. Beardsley (1923) 190 Cal. 465, 473, 213 P. 500] . However, a mere notice of such a land sale contract is not a "conveyance," because it neither creates, alienates, mortgages, encumbers, or affects the title to real property. Therefore, although the recording of an executory land sale contract will impart constructive notice of the contents of all instruments referred to in it, to persons subsequently dealing with the land described in it, the recording of a mere notice that a land sale contract has been signed and exists will not [Hale v. Pendergrast (1919) 42 Cal. App. 104, 107, 183 P. 833] . Consequently, the recorded memorandum must itself be drafted as an elemental contract for the sale of real property [see § 23.11] in order to be constructive notice of the contents of the actual sale contract.

[f] Acknowledgment

With certain exceptions not relevant to this discussion, before an instrument can be recorded, its execution must be acknowledged or proved and the acknowledgment or proof must be certified [Gov. Code § 27287; see Civ. Code §§ 1198, 1199]. An acknowledgment is a statement that an instrument was in fact signed by the person whose signature appears on the document [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1189(a)]. A certificate of acknowledgment is a formal declaration by an authorized officer [see Civ. Code §§ 1180-1184], usually a notary public, that the executing party made the acknowledgment in the officer's presence and that the officer had satisfactory evidence that the party was the individual who was described in and who executed the instrument [Civ. Code § 1185(a)].

If the instrument affects or claims to affect an interest in real property and is an agreement for sale or lease, option agreement, deposit receipt, commission receipt, or affidavit that quotes or refers to any of the foregoing types of instruments, it must be signed and acknowledged or proved by the party who appears by the instrument to be the party whose real property is affected or alienated [Gov. Code § 27288; see Gov. Code § 27287 (applicable methods of acknowledgment and proof)].

The certificate of acknowledgment must be in the form prescribed in the Civil Code [see Civ. Code § 1189(a); see also Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording]. The certificate of acknowledgment of an instrument signed on behalf of an incorporated or unincorporated entity by a duly authorized person in the specified form is prima facie evidence that the instrument is the duly authorized act of the entity named in the instrument and is conclusive evidence of that fact in favor of any good faith purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer. "Duly authorized person," with respect to a domestic or foreign corporation, includes the president, vice president, secretary, and assistant secretary of the corporation [Civ. Code § 1190].

[g] Place of Recording

After being duly acknowledged or proved and certified, the instrument must be recorded in the county in which the subject real property is situated [Civ. Code §§ 1169, 1170]. A certified copy of the recorded instrument may be recorded in any other county, and, when so recorded, will have the same force and effect as if it were the original instrument [Civ. Code § 1218]. If the original is recorded in a county where the real property is not situated, then a certified copy may be recorded in the county where the real property is situated and will have the same force and effect as the original [Civ. Code § 1213].

§ 23.322 Tenant's Estoppel Certificate

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a certificate from a tenant of a building being sold, stating that the tenant has no offset or defense to rents accruing after the completion of the sale transaction. It is designed to be used in conjunction with a contract for the sale of a building containing multiple rental units that are subject to existing leases. If the tenants are obligated, under their leases, to provide estoppel certificates when the landlord requests them, the sale contract should contain a condition requiring the delivery to the buyer, on the close of escrow, of such a certificate from each tenant. For discussion of estoppel certificates, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 153, Drafting Commercial Leases (Matthew Bender).

[b] Purpose of Certificate

A prospective buyer of rented property should confirm that the leases encumbering the property are enforceable. In addition to examining the leases, seller's books, and related correspondence, the buyer should also obtain confirmation from each tenant that the seller has not breached the lease, that no security deposits are being held by the seller other than as shown on the seller's books, and that no rent has been paid in advance except as shown by those books. The most effective and binding way to obtain this confirmation is to require the seller to deliver to the buyer before the close of escrow an estoppel certificate signed by each tenant stating these matters.

[c] Effect of Certificate

Whenever a party in litigation has, by his or her own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe that a particular thing is true and to act on that belief, the party is not, in any litigation arising out of the statement or conduct, permitted to contradict it [Evid. Code § 623]. The tenant's estoppel certificate should expressly certify that the tenant understands that the buyer will materially rely on the certificate in purchasing the leased property. In any future litigation arising under the lease, the tenant will be estopped to deny the truth of the statements contained in the certificate.

PRACTICE TIP

Tenant Estoppel Certificates Given Conclusive Effect Under Evid. Code § 622. Aside from Evid. Code § 623, one court has applied the conclusive presumption of Evid. Code § 622 to tenant estoppel certificates [see Plaza Freeway Ltd. Partnership v. First Mountain Bank (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 616, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865] . In doing so, the court found that an estoppel certificate was an "instrument" under § 622, eschewing a narrower definition adopted in a prior decision. Plaza Freeway may be an even better basis than § 623 for enforcing estoppel certificates, because reliance need not be demonstrated. Instead, Evid. Code § 622 establishes a conclusive presumption, a presumption not subject to evidentiary contradiction as a matter of law [Gayton v. Pacific Fruit Express Co. (1932) 127 Cal. App. 50, 61, 15 P.2d 217] . However, note that Plaza Freeway was distinguished in a 2004 case which held that the estoppel certificate was not conclusive evidence of the contract terms because it created an ambiguity: the certificate stated that the lease remained in effect but created an ambiguity as to the continued existence of an option in the lease [Miner v. Tustin Avenue Investors (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 264, 272, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178] . By William M. Hensley.

An estoppel can be applied only to representations relating to past or present facts, not to expressions of opinion concerning future events [Berverdor, Inc. v. Salyer Farms (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 459, 464, 218 P.2d 138] . The tenant is therefore only estopped to deny that the facts stated in the tenant's certificate were true at the date the certificate was made. Consequently, the buyer should insist that the certificates be prepared as close as possible to the closing date.

§ 23.323 Bill of Sale of Personal Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a bill of sale for the purchase of tangible or intangible personal property that is transferred in connection with the sale of real property. A bill of sale is a written agreement by which one person transfers his or her title to goods or chattels to another person [Hull v. Ray (1926) 80 Cal. App. 284, 289, 251 P. 810 ; see Civ. Code § 1053; see also Civ. Code § 1052 et seq.]. When used in connection with a sale of real property, the bill of sale provides the buyer with written evidence of his or her ownership of the personal property included in the sale. The descriptions in the sale contract and bill of sale of the subject real property should be identical.

The bill of sale may include a warranty by the seller regarding the seller's title to the personal property and the condition of the property. For further discussion of bills of sale, see Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code .

[b] Deposit in Escrow

The parties should agree that the seller is to deposit the bill of sale with the escrow agent for delivery to the buyer on the close of escrow. A bill of sale effectively vests the interest to be transferred only on its delivery [see Civ. Code § 1054]. The bill of sale cannot be delivered conditionally. Delivery to the buyer, or the buyer's agent as such, is necessarily absolute, and the bill of sale takes effect on delivery, discharged of any condition on which the delivery was made [see Civ. Code § 1056]. By depositing the bill of sale in escrow, the seller is assured that the delivery (and transfer of title) will not take place until and unless the escrow closes.

§ 23.324 Notice of Rescission of Home Equity Sale Transaction [Civ. Code § 1695.14(b)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of rescission of a home equity sale transaction. It is designed to be used by a property owner to rescind such a transaction because of a violation of the prohibition against unconscionable home equity sale transactions [see Civ. Code §§ 1695.13, 1695.14(b); see also [b], below]. For an overview of the law governing home equity sale transactions, see § 23.211[1].

For discussion of certain disclosures that a representative of an equity buyer must make before the transfer of any interest in the real property that is the subject of a home equity sale contract [see Civ. Code § 1695.17; see also Civ. Code §§ 1695.15, 1695.16], see § 23.308[1].

[b] Rescission of Unconscionable Transaction

It is unlawful for any person to initiate, enter into, negotiate, or consummate any transaction involving residential real property in foreclosure [see Civ. Code § 1695.1(b); see also § 23.211[1][b]] if the person, by the terms of the transaction, takes unconscionable advantage of the property owner in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.13; see Civ. Code § 1695.1(f) ("property owner" means record title owner of residential real property in foreclosure at time notice of default was recorded)]. Following a violation of this prohibition, the transaction is voidable and may be rescinded by the property owner within two years of the date of the recordation of the conveyance of the residential real property in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.14(a)]. The equity seller may also bring an action for damages or other equitable relief against the equity buyer for such a violation [see Civ. Code § 1695.7; see also § 23.211[1][g]].

The rescission remedies are in addition to any other remedies provided by law [Civ. Code § 1695.14(e)].

[c] Procedure for Rescission

To rescind, the property owner must take the following steps within two years of the date of the recordation of the conveyance to the equity buyer [Civ. Code § 1695.14(b)]:

- Give written notice of the rescission as provided in Civ. Code § 1691 [see [d], [e], below] to the equity buyer and his or her successor in interest, if the successor in interest is not a good faith purchaser or encumbrancer for value [see [f], below].

- Record the notice of rescission with the county recorder of the county in which the property is located.

- Restore or offer to restore to the other party everything of value received from that party [see Civ. Code § 1691; see also [e], below].

The equity buyer and his or her successor in interest have 20 days after the delivery of the notice in which to reconvey title to the property free and clear of encumbrances created subsequent to the rescinded transaction. On a failure to reconvey title within that time, the rescinding party may bring an action to force the rescission and cancel the deed [Civ. Code § 1695.14(a), (b)]. In any such action, the prevailing party is entitled to costs and reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 1695.14(d)].

[d] Required Contents of Notice

The notice of rescission must be in writing. It must contain the names of the property owner, the equity buyer, and any successor in interest holding record title to the real property. It must also particularly describe the real property [Civ. Code § 1695.14(b); see Civ. Code § 1691].

[e] Restoration of Consideration

Rescission of an unconscionable home equity sale transaction is effected only on written notice as provided in Civ. Code § 1691 [Civ. Code § 1695.14(b)]. To effect the rescission, the property owner must do the following promptly on discovering the facts that entitle him or her to rescind if he or she is free from duress, menace, undue influence, or disability, and is aware of the right to rescind [Civ. Code § 1691]:

- Give notice of rescission to the equity buyer.

- Restore to the equity buyer everything of value that he or she has received from the equity buyer under the contract, or offer to restore this consideration on the condition that the equity buyer does likewise, unless the equity buyer is unable or positively refuses to do so [Civ. Code § 1691].

[F] Good Faith Purchaser or Encumbrancer

The rescission will not affect the interest of a good faith purchaser or encumbrancer for value if the purchase or encumbrance occurred before the recordation of the notice of rescission, even if that buyer or encumbrancer was aware that the property was residential real property in foreclosure. However, this does not abrogate any duty of inquiry that exists as to rights or interests of persons in possession of the residential real property in foreclosure [Civ. Code § 1695.14(c)].

[g] Acknowledgment for Recordation

The notice of rescission is to be recorded [Civ. Code § 1695.14(b)]. Before an "instrument" can be recorded, its execution must be acknowledged, unless the instrument is one of certain kinds that specifically need not be acknowledged [Gov. Code § 27287]. The notice of rescission is not described by any provision allowing for specified instruments to be recorded without acknowledgment. The notice of rescission would be an "instrument" in this context if "signed by a person or persons transferring the title to, or giving a lien on real property, or giving a right to a debt or duty" [Gov. Code § 27287]. It is not clear whether the notice of rescission would be an "instrument" and therefore would have to be acknowledged for recording. As a practical matter, acknowledging it will be necessary for having it recorded.

§ 23.325 License to Enter for Environmental Inspection and Testing

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is an agreement giving the buyer a limited license to enter the property for the purpose of performing environmental tests, pursuant to a provision in the sale contract giving the buyer the right to inspect and test the property. If this form is to be used, an appropriate supporting provision should be inserted into the sale contract. The agreement entitles the buyer to bring any needed experts and laborers onto the property for that purpose and obligates the buyer to restore the property (and any affected contiguous property) to its condition before the agreement was signed. This form is based on a form of agreement furnished by William M. Hensley, Esq., of Jackson, DeMarco & Peckenpaugh, Irvine, California.

[2] FORM

License to Enter for Environmental Inspection and Testing

This agreement ("Agreement") is entered into_____[date] by and between_____[name of seller] ("Seller"), [capacity of seller, e.g., a California corporation or husband and wife] and_____[name of buyer] ("Buyer"),_____[capacity of buyer].

By a separate contract (the "Sale Contract"), Seller has agreed to sell and Buyer has agree to purchase the real property situated in_____[the City of _____, or an unincorporated area of] _____ County, California, and more particularly described [as follows: _____ (insert legal description) or in Exhibit A, which is attached to this agreement and incorporated by reference] ("the Property"). Under the Sale Contract, Buyer has a contingency period of [number] days to inspect and accomplish environmental testing on the Property. Buyer has requested that Seller provide, and Seller is willing to provide, limited access to the Property for purposes of accomplishing the inspection and testing contemplated under the Sale Contract.

THEREFORE, in consideration of their mutual undertakings, Seller and Buyer agree as follows:

1. License and Limits of Seller' Responsibility. Seller hereby grant to Buyer and Buyer's representatives, agents, consultants, engineers, project managers or directors, contractors, and subcontractors (collectively the "Contractors") a nonexclusive license to enter on the Property solely in order to inspect it and to conduct all necessary environmental testing in connection with the contingency period provided for in the Sale Contract (the "Inspection Activities"). Seller shall have no responsibility or obligation to contribute any money or provide "in-kind" any labor, personnel or material in connection with the Inspection Activities.

2. License Term.

a. The license granted under this Agreement shall commence when this Agreement is signed by Seller and shall remain in effect until midnight on _____ [date] (the "Termination Date").

b. Upon termination of the license, Inspection Activities shall cease. All equipment and materials placed on the Property by Buyer or Contractors shall be removed before midnight on the Termination Date. Within _____ [number] days after the Termination Date, Buyer shall effect restoration of the Property substantially to its original condition and in a manner that is satisfactory to the Seller.

c. If Buyer or the Contractors should fail to perform any obligation under this Agreement, then Buyer authorizes Seller to take the following actions and all other actions that are reasonably necessary or that Seller deems convenient for the purpose of taking these actions: (i) cause the Inspection Activities to cease; (ii) have materials and equipment removed from the Property at Buyer's expense; and (iii) cause the Property to be restored to a condition satisfactory to Seller at Buyer's expense.

d. If Seller commences taking any of the actions identified in the preceding paragraph, then (i) neither Buyer nor the Contractors shall interfere with Seller's actions; (ii) Buyer and the Contractors shall waive any and all claims against Seller relating to Inspection Activities or removal of any material or equipment from the Property; (iii) Buyer and the Contractors shall pay or reimburse to Seller, within five days of a demand by the Seller, all of Seller's costs and expenses, including any attorney's fees, incurred in taking any such action.

e. Buyer shall have each of the Contractors sign an instrument acknowledging the terms of this Agreement and agreeing to the terms of this Agreement. Buyer shall promptly deliver each signed instrument to Seller.

3. Government Permits And Authorizations. Buyer shall obtain, at Buyer's expense, all governmental permits and authorizations required by any government agency for Buyer and the Contractors to perform the Inspection Activities or any related activities on the Property, including, without limitation, the restoration of the Property substantially to its original condition to the Seller's satisfaction.

4. Non-Interference With Contiguous Property. The Inspection Activities shall not interfere with or disrupt the normal daily activities on property contiguous to the Property or with any development on the contiguous property (including demolition activities) and shall not endanger the health, safety, or welfare of Seller or anyone else on the contiguous property while Inspection Activities are occurring (including, but not limited to, any placement, movement, or removal activities).

5. Removal of Equipment and Materials; Environmental Testing Obligations.

a. Buyer and the Contractors may maintain on the Property only such equipment, vehicles, materials, and personnel as are reasonably necessary for completion of the Inspection Activities. Such equipment, vehicles, and materials shall be located and stored in such a manner as not to interfere with entering, leaving, and using the Property and the contiguous property. To the extent that any such equipment, vehicles, materials, and personnel have served their function and their presence is not reasonably necessary to perform the Inspection Activities, Buyer and the Contractors shall promptly remove such equipment, vehicles, material, and personnel from the Property. Buyer and the Contractors shall not maintain equipment, vehicles, materials, and personnel on contiguous property.

b. If any portion of the contiguous property suffers any damage by reason of the acts or omissions of Buyer or the Contractors, then Buyer or the Contractors shall be solely responsible for reasonably restoring the contiguous property to its condition existing immediately before the occurrence of such damage and to the satisfaction of the owners of the contiguous property.

c. Buyer and the Contractors shall be responsible for the legal disposition of any and all wastes, samples, extractions, injections, and by-products derived from the Inspection Activities. If any Hazardous Material (as defined in the next paragraph) is generated as a result of or in connection with the Inspection Activities, Buyer and the Contractors shall be deemed the generator and shall execute any required Hazardous Material manifest or hazardous waste manifest. Buyer shall be responsible for any contamination of the Property or contiguous property by Hazardous Materials that Buyer or the Contractors cause to be transported or deposited onto the Property or contiguous property in connection with the Inspection Activities or any other action by Buyer or the Contractors.

d. For purposes of this Agreement, "Hazardous Material" means any chemical, substance, material, controlled substance, object, waste, or combination thereof, that is or may be hazardous to human health or safety or the environment because of radioactivity, ignitability, corrosivity, reactivity, explosivity, toxicity, carcinogenicity, matugenicity, phytotoxicity, infectiousness, or other harmful or potentially harmful properties or effects, including, without limitation, petroleum hydrocarbons, petroleum products, fractional petroleum products, degraded petroleum products, and all chemicals, substances, materials, controlled substances, or objects defined or regulated under any state, federal or local law or regulation based on such properties or effects.

e. Buyer shall be responsible for any migration of Hazardous Material in groundwater under the Property or contiguous property that is caused or contributed to by the Inspection Activities.

6. Compliance With Law. Any activities conducted on the Property or contiguous property by Buyer or the Contractors pursuant to this Agreement shall be conducted in compliance with law.

7. Indemnification and Defense of Seller. Buyer shall defend Seller and the Property against, and indemnify and hold Seller and the Property harmless from, all liens, claims, losses, liabilities, and expenses asserted against or incurred by Seller or the Property and caused by Buyer's entry or activities on the Property. Seller shall not be responsible or liable for any harm, death, or disability caused to any employee, representative, agent, or contractor of Buyer or the Contractors while on the Property or contiguous property, or liable for any harm, claim, or any other event relating to the Inspection Activities and equipment placed on the Property.

8. Liens. Buyer and the Contractors shall keep the Property and contiguous property free and clear of all mechanic's, materialman's, and other liens resulting from any work or activity performed by Buyer or the Contractors.

9. Insurance. Buyer shall purchase, at Buyer's expense, and keep in force during the term of this Agreement, a public liability insurance policy covering Buyer and the Property with a combined single limit of at least $500,000 per occurrence, issued by a company and in a form and substance satisfactory to Seller, which approval by Seller shall not be unreasonably withheld, and naming Seller as additional insured. Buyer shall provide to Seller written proof of insurance prior to any entry on the Property for the purposes of the Inspection Activities and the work contemplated under this Agreement.

10. Venue. Any controversy or claim arising out of or relating to this Agreement, or the breach thereof, shall be brought in the _____ County Superior Court.

11. Attorney's Fees. In the event that any party to this Agreement brings proceedings to enforce or construe the terms of this Agreement, the party not substantially prevailing in such proceedings shall pay to the substantially prevailing party all reasonable attorney's fees and all costs incurred by the substantially prevailing party, together with all costs of such proceeding.

12. References. References to a party include, bind, and inure to the benefit of, that party's officers, agents, employees, successors in interest and assignees.

13. Successors and Assigns. Buyer shall not assign any of Buyer's rights and shall not delegate any of Buyer's duties under this Agreement without the prior written consent of Seller, which consent may be withheld for any reason or for no reason. Subject to the foregoing, this Agreement shall be binding on and inure to the benefit of Seller and Buyer and their respective personal representatives, successors, and assigns; provided, however, that an assignment by Buyer of this Agreement shall not release Buyer from any obligation under this Agreement.

14. Authorized Signatories. Individuals executing this Agreement on behalf of a party represent and warrant that they are duly authorized to execute and deliver this Agreement on that party's behalf.

15. Changes. This Agreement may be changed only by the written agreement of both Seller and Buyer. All changes of this Agreement shall be binding on Seller and Buyer, without any additional legal consideration.

16. Headings. The headings contained in this Agreement are inserted for convenience only and shall not be considered in the construction or implementation of any provision.

17. Non-Waiver of Covenants and Conditions and Claims. The waiver by one party of the performance of any covenant or condition under this Agreement shall not invalidate this Agreement nor shall it be considered a waiver of any other covenant or condition under this Agreement. By entering into this Agreement, Seller does not waive any legal rights with respect to potential claims or causes of action that Seller has or may have in the future against Buyer, the Contractors, or any other person or entity not a party to this agreement. All such claims are expressly reserved _____ [except for those claims released by the settlement agreement dated _____ between Seller and Buyer].

18. Governing Law. The interpretation and enforcement of this Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of California. This Agreement shall be interpreted to give effect to its fair meaning and shall be construed as though it was prepared by both Seller and Buyer.

19. Severability. In the event that any provision of this Agreement is deemed not enforceable, the remaining provisions shall remain in full force and effect.

20. Test Results. If Buyer cancels the Sale Contract, Buyer shall provide Seller, at no cost to Seller, with a copy of all reports of tests of the Property prepared for Buyer. All information provided to or obtained by Buyer in connection with Buyer's investigation of the Property shall be kept in strict confidence by Seller, unless such disclosure is compelled by law or legal process.

21. Notice. All notices required or allowed in this Agreement shall be in writing and shall be sent to the addresses shown below. A party may change the party's address for notice by giving notice to the other party. Notice must be delivered by personal delivery, FAX transmission during normal business hours of the recipient, an overnight delivery service, or certified U.S. mail with return receipt requested. [1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the California Association of Realtors (CAR) Residential Lease After Sale [CAR Form RLAS, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R) endorsement not implied]. It is for use when the seller of a home needs additional time to move out after the close of escrow. In this situation it is often preferable to set out the rights and obligations of the parties in a separate agreement, rather than merely to specify in the sale contract that possession will be delivered to the buyer a stated number of days after the close of escrow. The primary advantage of a separate agreement is that it permits the parties to cover certain problem areas that could be confused with terms of the sale if inserted in the sale contract, such as a performance deposit and insurance coverage.

The parties should make delivery of possession pursuant to the interim occupancy agreement a condition in the underlying sale contract [see § 23.200[1][d][iii]].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the California Association of Realtors (CAR) Interim Occupancy Agreement [CAR Form IOA, displayed/reprinted with permission, CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS(R) endorsement not implied]. It is designed for use when the buyer of real property will take possession of the property before the close of escrow. The agreement is structured as a lease arrangement. It provides that the buyer (i.e., tenant) must vacate the premises on termination of the agreement unless the parties have signed a new agreement or the landlord (i.e., seller) accepts rent from the tenant, in which case a month-to-month tenancy is created which either party may terminate in accordance with Civ. Code § 1946.1 [see Ch. 35B, Modification and Termination of Leases]. The agreement specifies that the buyer's personal property is not insured by the seller and that the buyer is to carry renter's insurance to protect that property from loss [see § 23.25].

For discussion of the impact of the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act [Civ. Code § 1662] on the allocation of risk of loss following the transfer of possession, see §§ 23.19 and 23.251[1].

This chapter covers the tax-deferred exchange of real property known as a "like-kind" exchange. The Legal Background discusses the various types of like-kind exchanges and their treatment under federal and state income tax law. Included is a discussion of the requirements imposed for nonsimultaneous (deferred) exchanges. The Transaction Guide sets forth the factors to be considered and the procedures to be followed to effect a tax-free exchange. The Forms section contains agreements for two party and three party exchanges designed to accomplish the transaction, as well as an agreement for a deferred exchange and escrow instructions for the exchange.

For a discussion of real property sales contracts, see Chapter 23, Real Property Sales Agreements . Escrow is discussed in Chapter 26, Real Property Escrows. Procedures and forms relating to the drafting of deeds are set forth in Chapter 27, Deeds and Recording.

§ 24.10 Purpose of Exchange

Owners of real property held for business or investment purposes often wish to dispose of it and replace it with other property of similar character. There are many reasons for doing so: the property may have reached its maximum economic value; it may have been depreciated to such an extent that a substantial portion of the rental income is no longer sheltered from income taxes; or investment leverage may have decreased as the result of both the property's appreciation and the reduction of the principal balance of its mortgage encumbrances over the years [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

As a result of changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514], the importance of tax deduction-related reasons has been diminished, at least for many taxpayers. For example, rental real property is now subject to rules limiting allowable tax losses claimed before the disposition of the property to income accrued from the property (or other "passive" activities) [see I.R.C. § 469]. Nonbusiness interest deductions are severely limited compared to prior law. Allowable investment interest expense is limited to investment income in each taxable year [see I.R.C. § 163(d)]. With the exception of interest on mortgages for the taxpayer's residence and second home, most personal interest deductions have been eliminated [see I.R.C. § 163(h)]. In other words, exchanging property to obtain increased tax deductions is less likely to be profitable than it was prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

The main reason a taxpayer will prefer to exchange rather than sell property is to take advantage of federal tax provisions that allow nonrecognition of gain when real property held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment is exchanged solely for property of a "like-kind" to be held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment. Gain is recognized only to the extent of the net amount of money or other "unlike" property received in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031; see § 24.42[2]]. The legislative purpose behind this provision is to defer recognition of gain or loss on those transactions in which a taxpayer's money continues to be invested in the same kind of property, although in theory he or she may have recognized a gain or loss [see Biggs v. Commissioner (1978) 69 T.C. 905, 913] .

§ 24.11 Definitions

Various terms are typically used to describe each of the parties and properties involved in an exchange, to aid in the discussion of often complex multiparty exchanges. The party who wishes to effect a tax-free exchange is known as the "taxpayer," since in many transactions that party will be the only one interested in the tax deferral aspects of the exchange [see § 24.41]. However, in a two party exchange [see § 24.21], the other party to the exchange will also be eligible for tax deferral. The property being transferred by the taxpayer is usually referred to as "Parcel A," and the property being acquired by the tax payer is usually referred to as "Parcel B" or the "target property."

§ 24.20 Exchanges in General

There are three basic types of exchanges: (1) the two party exchange [see § 24.21], (2) the "Alderson" three party exchange [see § 24.22 [1]], and (3) the "Baird" three party exchange [see § 24.22 [2]]. In addition, there are also three-party--three-property exchanges [see § 24.23], four party exchanges [see § 24.24], and deferred exchanges [see § 24.25]. The more complicated varieties of exchanges are composed of one or more elements of the basic types.

The main goal in every multiple party exchange is to properly structure and document the exchange so that the taxpayer's transfer of property to the other party and the taxpayer's acquisition of the new like-kind property cannot be segregated and attacked as two separate and independent transactions that constitute a taxable sale and subsequent purchase rather than an exchange [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender); see also § 24.123 (format guidelines for exchange)].

§ 24.21 Two Party Exchanges

The two party exchange involves the exchange of real properties by two parties interested in acquiring each other's property and avoiding recognition of gain on the disposition. In general, if the properties exchanged are of like kind and are not acquired for purposes of resale, the transaction qualifies for nonrecognition of gain [see Bernard v. Commissioner, 26 T.C.M. 858 (1967) ; see also § 24.40]. Gain will only be recognized to the extent of any cash or boot received [see I.R.C. § 1031(b); see also § 24.42].

The tax status of the individual parties in a two party exchange determines whether they qualify to defer recognition of gain, and each party's tax status is independent of the other. For example, in an exchange in which one party can defer gain, the other party will still be required to recognize gain if the latter party is acquiring the property for immediate resale [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)(2)(A)].

§ 24.22 Three Party Exchanges

[1] "Alderson" Exchanges

A three party exchange is ordinarily used when a property owner does not want to sell the property unless similar property can be acquired and/or does not want to recognize gain upon disposition of the property. The type of three party exchange known as an "Alderson" exchange [see Alderson v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1963) 317 F.2d 790] involves three parties and two properties. It is used when a third party (such as a developer) desires to purchase the taxpayer's property ("Parcel A") for cash, but the taxpayer wants to exchange it for similar property, avoiding recognition of gain, and continuing business and investment enterprises on the new property. To solve this problem, the third party acquires for cash another property ("Parcel B") acceptable to the taxpayer. The third party then transfers Parcel B to the taxpayer in exchange for Parcel A. The taxpayer does not recognize gain and has no tax liability, since the exchange was for like-kind property and no boot was received [see §§ 24.40 [3], 24.41]. The third party, having purchased the property for cash, also has no tax liability; his or her basis in Parcel A is the carry-over basis from Parcel B by virtue of the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Alderson v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1963) 317 F.2d 790 ; see § 24.43]. The seller of Parcel B, having sold the property for cash, is the only party to the transaction who must recognize gain.

Each of the two steps described above is accomplished through separate escrows. The closing of the two escrows is normally simultaneous.

[2] "Baird" Exchanges

In the type of exchange known as a "Baird" exchange [see J.H. Baird Publishing Co. (1962) 39 T.C. 608] , the exchange step of the transaction occurs before the sale step and the intermediary who participates in both steps and both escrows is the owner of the other parcel of property, rather than a third party. The taxpayer first exchanges Parcel A for Parcel B, and then a third party purchases Parcel A for cash. Otherwise, the Baird exchange is similar to the Alderson exchange [see [1], above]. Both types of exchanges are made up of two distinct elements: a taxable purchase and sale and a straightforward two party exchange. Each of these elements is kept completely separate from the other by using separate escrows in order for the exchange element of the transaction to have tax-deferred status.

§ 24.23 Three-Party-Three-Property Exchanges

A three-party-three-property exchange involves the simultaneous circular transfer of three properties among three parties. Like the two party exchange, this type of exchange clearly qualifies for tax-deferred treatment, and gain is recognized only to the extent of cash or boot received [see I.R.C. § 1031(a), (b); see also Rev. Rul. 57-244, 1957-1 C.B. 247 ; §§ 24.40-24.42, 24.44].

The issue of whether the transaction would qualify for tax deferral if one of the parties transferred no realty but paid only cash is an open question [see Halpern v. United States (N.D. Ga. 1968) 286 F. Supp. 255, 258] . For example, if taxpayer 3 paid only cash to taxpayer 2, the Internal Revenue Service might claim that taxpayer 1 had constructive rights to and possession of the money and attack the transaction as being a taxable sale by taxpayer 1 to taxpayer 3 and a purchase of taxpayer 2's property. Consequently, unless all three taxpayers are exchanging properties, it is be preferable to structure the transaction along the lines of the Alderson or Baird types of three party exchanges discussed in Section 24.22.

§ 24.24 Four Party Exchanges

There are two varieties of four party exchanges. One is the four-party-four-property exchange in which each of the four parties is a principal acting on that party's own behalf. The other variety, which occurs more frequently, is actually a three-party exchange of either the Alderson, Baird, or three-party-three-property variety with a fourth party who acts as an agent for one of the parties, or is an additional purchaser or seller of all or part of the property involved. The addition of a purchase-sale transaction to a three-party-three-property exchange of three properties is also a four party exchange. If one of the three parties purchases property for purposes of making the exchange, the transaction is like a three party Alderson exchange and only the fourth party who sold property would have to recognize gain. On the other hand, if property was sold by one of the parties after the exchange took place, it would be similar to a Baird exchange and the seller would have to recognize gain from the sale.

§ 24.25 Deferred Exchanges

A deferred exchange can involve two, three, or more parties. A taxpayer may desire a nonsimultaneous or deferred exchange if the taxpayer or the other party or parties is unwilling to wait until suitable exchange property can be located. In a deferred exchange, the taxpayer transfers his or her property before receiving the exchange property.

Nonrecognition treatment does not apply to a nonsimultaneous exchange of property unless (1) the property received by the taxpayer is identified within 45 days of the transfer of the property relinquished by the taxpayer [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(A)]; or (2) the property is received by the taxpayer on or before the earlier of the day that is 180 days after the transfer of the relinquished property, or the due date (including extensions) of the taxpayer's tax return for the year in which the relinquished property is transferred [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(B)]. These requirements were enacted to curb the practice of deferred exchanges, often referred to as "Starker" exchanges [see Starker v. United States (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 1341, 1342-1343] , in which a taxpayer would transfer property to a purchaser who would promise to purchase a currently unidentified property in the future, at the taxpayer's direction, for transfer to the taxpayer [see § 24.40[4]].

C. Taxation of Exchanges

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.40

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.40 Requirements for "Tax-Free" Exchange

[1] Qualified Property

To defer recognition of gain realized on the exchange of property, the property transferred by the taxpayer must have been held either (1) for productive use in a trade or business, or (2) for investment, and must be exchanged for property to be held for either of those same purposes [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1)]. Property held by the taxpayer for productive use in a trade or business may be traded for either type of qualifying property. Similarly, property held for investment may be traded for either type of qualifying property [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a)].

Neither the Internal Revenue Code nor the regulations define "property held for productive use in a trade or business" or "property held for investment." Similar language ("property used in the trade or business") is used for depreciation purposes [see I.R.C. § 167], and is defined for capital gains treatment as depreciable property used in the trade or business that is held for more than six months, is not includible in inventory, and is not held primarily for sale [see I.R.C. § 1231(b)(1) (applicable to property acquired between June 22, 1984, and Jan. 1, 1988); see also Pub. L. No. 98-369 § 1001(b)(15) note to I.R.C. § 1231(b)]. Although cases interpreting I.R.C. §§ 167 and 1231 have held that the property need not be actively used to qualify as property used in a trade or business [see, e.g., Sears Oil Co. v. Commissioner (2d Cir. 1966) 359 F.2d 191, 198] , the addition of the word "productive" in I.R.C. § 1031 seems to indicate that property must be actively used to qualify for like-kind exchange treatment.

The regulations provide some guidance as to the nature of property held "for investment." Unproductive real estate that is held by someone other than a dealer for future use or future appreciation in value qualifies as property held for investment [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(b)].

The personal residence of a taxpayer is not treated as held for productive use in trade or business or for investment. However, a specified amount of gain from the sale or exchange of a principal residence may be excluded from income if, during the five-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property was owned and used by the taxpayer as a principal residence for periods aggregating at least two years [I.R.C. § 121(a); see I.R.C. § 121(c) (special treatment of certain sales and exchanges)]. The maximum amount of gain that may be excluded with regard to any sale or exchange is $250,000 for a single taxpayer or $500,000 for married taxpayers filing joint returns and meeting statutory criteria [I.R.C. § 121(b)(1),(2); see I.R.C. § 121(d)(1)-(3) (special rules concerning joint returns and treatment of property of former or deceased spouse)]. However, for a sale or exchange after 2008, the exclusion does not reach any part of the gain that must be allocated to a period of nonqualified use, that is, with some exceptions, any period (other than the portion of any period preceding 2009) during which the property was not used as the principal residence of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or former spouse [I.R.C. § 121(b)(4); see I.R.C. § 121(b)(4)(C)(ii) (exceptions to what is period of nonqualified use)]. For additional discussion, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

[2] Nonqualified Property

Not all property held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment qualifies for tax deferral. The following types of property are excepted [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(2)]:

- Stock in trade or other property held primarily for sale [see Land Dynamics v. Commissioner (1978) 37 T.C.M. 1119, 1120] .
- Stocks, bonds, or notes.
- Other securities or evidences of indebtedness or interest.
- Interests in a partnership (unless the partnership has elected not to be treated as a partnership for tax purposes) [see I.R.C. §§ 761(a), 1031(a)(2)].
- Certificates of trust or beneficial interests.
- Choses in action.

Property that is sold immediately after the exchange may be treated as property held primarily for sale, depending on the taxpayer's intent at the time of acquisition and sale of the property and the individual facts of each case [see, e.g., Biedenharn Realty Co., Inc. v. United States (5th Cir. 1976) 526 F.2d 409, 416-420 ; Maddux Construction Co. v. Commissioner (1970) 54 T.C. 1278, 1286 ; United States v. Winthrop (5th Cir. 1969) 417 F.2d 905, 907-912] . In the most obvious instance, a taxpayer who is a dealer in that property will be treated as holding property primarily for sale [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1]. However, persons other than business dealers may hold property primarily for sale. The actual use made of the property is evidence of the taxpayer's intent. When property received in an exchange is immediately sold, the sale is evidence that the property was held primarily for sale and the exchange may be treated as a taxable event [see Bernard v. Commissioner (1967) 26 T.C.M. 858] .

[3] Like-Kind Property

In addition to satisfying use (or holding) requirements [see [1], above], the property given up in an exchange must be of "like kind" with the property received in order to qualify for nonrecognition treatment [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1)]. The words "like kind" refer to the nature or character of the property and not to its grade or quality, so that one kind or class of property may not be exchanged for property of a different class or kind [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(b)]. The statute is intended to apply the broad distinction between classes and characters of properties, such as between real and personal property, rather than between parcels of real property, however dissimilar they are [Commissioner v. Crichton (5th Cir. 1941) 122 F.2d 181, 182] . The character of property as real or personal is to be determined under state law [Oregon Lumber Co. (1953) 20 T.C. 192, 197] .

The courts and the Treasury have applied the term "like kind" broadly to real property exchanges. For example, a leasehold of a fee with 30 years or more to run is property of like kind with real estate. Real estate located in a city is considered to be of like kind with a ranch or farm. Improved real estate is of like kind with unimproved real estate [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(c); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(b); see also Koch v. Commissioner (1978) 71 T.C. 54, 65]. The number of properties or interests involved in the transaction, or the exchange of a fractional interest for an entire interest, are factors of no importance in determining the "like-kind" nature of the properties [Rev. Rul. 73-476]. However, real property located within the United States is not considered of a like kind with real property located outside the United States [I.R.C. § 1031(h)(1)].

[4] Restrictions on Nonsimultaneous Exchanges

[a] In General

To qualify for deferred recognition of gain, the exchange of properties may be, but need not be, simultaneous. The most common way of effecting a simultaneous exchange is by making the transfer of each property contingent on the transfer of each other property. Reciprocal contingencies are included in both the exchange agreement and escrow instructions, in order to ensure that the purchase and exchange are seen by the IRS as one transaction. If the two escrows are not contingent upon each other, the transaction could be viewed as two separate transactions: a taxable sale of Parcel A and a taxable purchase of Parcel B [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW AND PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

A taxpayer may desire a nonsimultaneous exchange if the taxpayer or the other party or parties is unwilling to wait until suitable exchange property can be located. Nonsimultaneous exchanges usually occur in a three party exchange [see § 24.22] when the taxpayer transfers the taxpayer's property to a third party, but does not receive any property in exchange until a later time when suitable property has been found.

[b] 1984 Amendments

I.R.C. § 1031 was amended in 1984 to provide that a nonsimultaneous exchange will not qualify for tax-deferred treatment unless the property to be received is identified and received within certain time periods. This amendment was enacted to eliminate the latitude and uncertainties from the Starker decision [see Starker v. United States (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 1341, 1354] , which held that a nonsimultaneous exchange could qualify for tax deferral even though the transferor could designate the property to be exchanged at any time up to five years after the transaction, and could have ultimately received cash rather than like-kind property. The legislative history to the 1984 amendments indicates that Congress felt that the kind of deferred exchange permitted in Starker more closely resembled a sale and later reinvestment than an actual exchange [see Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 77(b)(3)]. Also, because the value of the taxpayer's property must be determined at the time it is transferred, the taxpayer's gain can be measured with accuracy. Finally, Congress was concerned with the ability of taxpayers to defer taxation even if cash is ultimately received. Under the installment sale rules of Internal Revenue Code Section 453, the taxpayer must report gain from the sale of property as payments are actually received.

Therefore, in 1984, Congress amended Internal Revenue Code Section 1031 to include limits on the time in which an exchange may be effected. Specifically, Internal Revenue Code Section 1031(a)(3) now provides that any property received by a taxpayer will not be treated as like-kind property for purposes of Section 1031 nonrecognition treatment under the following circumstances:

(1) The property to be received in the exchange is not so identified before the day that is 45 days after the date on which the taxpayer transfers the property relinquished in the exchange; or

(2) The property to be received by the taxpayer is received after the earlier of:

(a) The day that is 180 days after the date on which the taxpayer transfers the property relinquished in the exchange; or

(b) The due date (determined with regard to extensions) for the transferor's income tax return for the taxable year in which the transfer of the relinquished property occurs.

These time limitations apply to transfers of property by the taxpayer after July 18, 1984. If property was transferred on or before that date, nonrecognition will not apply unless the property received in the exchange is received before January 1, 1987. If the taxpayer transferred property on or before July 18, 1984, and fails to receive exchange property by January 1, 1987, the period for assessing a deficiency with respect to the year of the transfer does not expire before January 1, 1988 [Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 77(b)(3)]. If the property to be received in the exchange is identified in a binding contract in effect on June 13, 1984, and at all times thereafter before the transfer, the property need not be received before January 1, 1989, and the limitations period for the assessment of a deficiency does not expire before January 1, 1990 [Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 77(b)(4)].

Note that the 1984 amendments appear to permit taxpayers to avoid unwanted nonrecognition treatment (such as when the taxpayer desires to recognize a loss) merely by delaying the receipt of property. This would, in effect, make nonrecognition treatment elective rather than mandatory.

Thus, the current rule contains separate limitations on the identification and transfer of the property to be received by the taxpayer. Final regulations have been issued on deferred exchanges, and are generally effective for transfers of property after June 9, 1991 [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1]. Transfers of property after May 15, 1990, but before June 10, 1991, are eligible for nonrecognition treatment if the provisions of either the final regulations or the initial proposed regulations are satisfied [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(o)].

[c] Identification and Receipt of Replacement Property

[i] Identification Generally

Under the final regulations, to satisfy the identification requirements, the replacement property must be identified before midnight on the 45th day after the date on which the taxpayer gives up the relinquished property [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(b)]. Replacement property is treated as identified only if it is designated as replacement property in either (1) a written agreement covering the exchange that is signed by all parties before the end of the identification period, or (2) a written document signed by the taxpayer and hand delivered or mailed, telecopied, or otherwise sent before the end of the identification period to a person involved in the exchange (such as an intermediary, escrow agent, or title company) other than the taxpayer or a related party [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(2)]. The replacement property must be unambiguously described; real property is generally unambiguously described if it is described by a legal description, street address, or distinguishable name [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(3)]. Any replacement property that is received by the taxpayer before the end of the identification period is treated as identified before the end of the identification period [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(4)].

Replacement property that will be produced or that is in production [see I.R.C. § 263A(g)(1)] must be described in as much detail as is practicable. For example, if the identified replacement property consists of improved real property on which the improvements are to be constructed, the description of the replacement property is adequate if a legal description is provided for the underlying land and as much detail is provided regarding construction of the improvements as is practicable as of the time that the identification is made [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(e)(2)(i)].

[ii] Identification of Multiple Replacement Properties

The taxpayer may identify more than one property as replacement property. However, the maximum number of replacement properties that the taxpayer may identify is (1) three properties of any fair market value, or (2) any number of properties so long as their aggregate fair market value does not exceed 200 percent of the aggregate fair market value of all the relinquished properties as of the date that the relinquished properties were transferred by the taxpayer. These rules apply regardless of the number of relinquished properties transferred as part of the same deferred exchange [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(4)(i); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(4)(iii)]. With certain exceptions, if a taxpayer identifies more properties than permitted, the taxpayer is treated as if no replacement property had been identified [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(4)(ii)].

[iii] Revocation of Identification

An identification of property as replacement property may be revoked at any time before the end of the identification period. The revocation, as with the identification itself, must be in writing and sent before the end of the identification period to the person to whom the identification of the replacement property was sent [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(6)].

[iv] Receipt

Under the regulations, property is timely received if it is received before the end of the exchange period and is substantially the same property as was identified [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(d)]. The exchange period ends at midnight on the earlier of 180 days after the date on which the taxpayer transfers the relinquished property or the due date (including extensions) for the taxpayer's return for the year in which the transfer occurs [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(b)]. In determining whether the replacement property received by the taxpayer is substantially the same property as identified when the identified replacement property is to be produced, variations due to usual or typical production changes are not taken into account. However, if substantial changes are made in the property to be produced, the replacement property received will not be considered to be substantially the same property as identified [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(e)(3)(i)]. The regulations further provide that if the identified property is real property to be produced and the production of the property is not completed on or before the date the taxpayer receives the property, the property received will be considered to be substantially the same property as identified only if the replacement property received constitutes real property under local law, and the replacement property received would have been considered to be substantially the same property as identified if production has been completed on or before the date the taxpayer received the property [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(e)(3)(iii)]. Further, any additional production occurring with respect to the replacement property after the property is received by the taxpayer will not be treated as the receipt of property of a like kind because the relinquished property will be considered to be transferred in exchange for services [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(e)(4)].

[d] Constructive Receipt

In the deferred exchange, the taxpayer cannot actually or constructively receive money or other property before the taxpayer actually receives the like-kind replacement property (without the recognition of gain). If the taxpayer receives money or other property, under general constructive receipt rules, before the taxpayer actually receives like-kind replacement property, the taxpayer may recognize gain or loss. If the taxpayer actually or constructively receives money or other property in the full amount of the consideration for the relinquished property before the taxpayer actually receives like-kind replacement property, the transaction constitutes a sale and not a deferred exchange (even though the taxpayer ultimately receives like-kind replacement property) [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(f)(1)].

The regulations provide that the taxpayer is in constructive receipt of money or other property at the time that the money or property is credited to the taxpayer's account, set apart for the taxpayer, or otherwise made available so that the taxpayer may draw upon it at any time or so that the taxpayer may draw upon it if notice of intention to draw is given. Although the taxpayer is not in constructive receipt of money or property in the taxpayer's control if its receipt is subject to substantial limitations or restrictions, the taxpayer is in constructive receipt of the money or property at the time the limitations or restrictions lapse, expire, or are waived. Additionally, actual or constructive receipt of money or property by an agent of the taxpayer is actual or constructive receipt by the taxpayer [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(f)(2)].

[e] Safe Harbors to Avoid Premature Actual or Constructive Receipt

[i] In General

The use of various guarantee or security arrangements is common in deferred exchanges due to the unwillingness of taxpayers to rely on a transferee's unsecured promise to transfer the like kind replacement property. Intermediary arrangements may be used because the transferee may be unwilling or unable to acquire the replacement property. The use of such arrangements, however, raises issues concerning actual or constructive receipt. Therefore, the regulations provide four safe harbors to avoid being treated as in actual or constructive receipt of money or other property [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g); see also [ii]-[v], below]. More than one safe harbor can be used in the same deferred exchange, but the terms of each safe harbor must be separately satisfied [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(1)]. The explanation to the proposed regulations warned that it is expected that most deferred exchange transactions can be structured to come within the safe harbors, and that transactions not structured to come within the safe harbors will be carefully scrutinized.

Under all of the safe harbors, the taxpayer must have no rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of money or other property before the end of the exchange period [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)(i)]. However, the agreements may provide that if a taxpayer has not identified replacement property by the end of the identification period, the taxpayer may have rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of money or other property at any time after the end of the identification period [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)(ii)]. Furthermore, the agreements may provide that if a taxpayer has identified replacement property, the taxpayer may have rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of money or other property on or after the following [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)(iii)]:

> (1) The receipt by the taxpayer of all the replacement property to which the taxpayer is entitled under the exchange agreement; or
> (2) The occurrence after the end of the identification period of a material and substantial contingency that (a) relates to the deferred exchange, (b) is provided for in writing, and (c) is beyond the control of the taxpayer and of any disqualified person, other than the person obligated to transfer the replacement property to the taxpayer.

Certain acquisition and closing costs may be paid out of the qualified escrow account or qualified trust, or by the qualified intermediary, without resulting in constructive receipt to the taxpayer of the remaining funds. These costs include items that relate to the disposition of the relinquished property or to the acquisition of the replacement property and are listed as the responsibility of a buyer or seller in the typical closing statement under local standards [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(7)(ii)].

[ii] First Safe Harbor: Security or Guarantee Arrangements

The first safe harbor deals with security or guarantee arrangements. Under this rule, the transferee's obligation to transfer the replacement property to the taxpayer may be secured or guaranteed by one or more of the following [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(2)(i)]:

> (1) A mortgage, deed or trust, or other security interest (other than cash or a cash equivalent);
>
> (2) A standby letter of credit that does not allow the taxpayer to draw on the letter of credit except upon a default of the transferee's obligation to transfer like kind property; or

(3) A guarantee of a third party.

This safe harbor ceases to apply if at any time the taxpayer has an immediate ability or unrestricted right to receive money or other property pursuant to the security or guarantee arrangement [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(2)(ii)].

[iii] Second Safe Harbor: Transferee's Obligation Secured by Cash or Cash Equivalent

Under the second safe harbor, the obligation of the transferee to transfer the replacement property is permitted to be secured by cash or a cash equivalent if the cash or cash equivalent is held in a qualified escrow account or a qualified trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(3)(i)]. To be qualified, the escrow holder or trustee must not be the taxpayer or a "disqualified person" [see [iv], below] and the taxpayer's rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of the money in the escrow account or trust are expressly limited to circumstances specified in the regulations [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(3)(ii), (iii); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)]. This safe harbor ceases to apply at the time the taxpayer has an immediate ability or unrestricted right to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of the cash held in the escrow or trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(3)(iv)]. However, a taxpayer may receive money or other property directly from a party to the exchange, but not from a qualified escrow account or qualified trust, without affecting this safe harbor [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(3)(v)].

[iv] Third Safe Harbor: Use of Qualified Intermediary

Under the third safe harbor, a taxpayer may use a qualified intermediary in a deferred exchange without being considered in constructive receipt of the proceeds. For these purposes, a qualified intermediary is not considered an agent of the taxpayer, and the taxpayer's transfer of relinquished property and subsequent receipt of like kind replacement property is treated as an exchange [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(i)]. However, the taxpayer's rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of the money or property held by the qualified intermediary must be limited to the circumstances described in the regulations [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(i); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)].

A "qualified intermediary" is a person who is not the taxpayer or a "disqualified person" and (1) who enters into a written exchange agreement with the taxpayer and (2) who, as required by the exchange agreement, acquires the relinquished property from the taxpayer, transfers the relinquished property, acquires the replacement property, and transfers the replacement property to the taxpayer [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(iii); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(iv), (v)].

A "disqualified person" is defined as an agent of the taxpayer's and certain related persons [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(k)]. Of particular note is the fact that a disqualified person includes a person who has acted as the taxpayer's employee, attorney, accountant, investment banker or broker, or real estate agent or broker within the two-year period ending on the date of the transfer of the first of the relinquished properties [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(k)(2)]. Thus, the taxpayer's attorney, accountant, or real estate broker can generally not act as the intermediary in the deferred exchange without the taxpayer being considered in constructive receipt of the proceeds of the relinquished property, resulting in a taxable sale rather than a tax-deferred exchange [but see Treas. Reg. 1.1031(k)-(1)(k)(2)(i), (ii)].

The qualified intermediary safe harbor provides considerable flexibility in structuring deferred exchanges. The regulations clearly contemplate the use of a qualified intermediary to structure a last-minute exchange [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(8), Ex. 4]. For example, a taxpayer who has entered into a contract to sell property to a third party purchaser may, immediately before closing under the contract, execute an exchange agreement for the same property with a qualified intermediary and assign to the intermediary the taxpayer's rights in the binding contract to sell the property to the third party. The intermediary can then direct the taxpayer to transfer title directly to the third party at the closing [see Rev. Rul. 90-34, 1990-1 C.B. 154]. The intermediary will then use the funds received from the third party to purchase the replacement property identified by the taxpayer to complete a deferred exchange within the replacement period.

This safe harbor ceases to apply at the time the taxpayer has an immediate ability or unrestricted right to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of the money or other property held by the qualified intermediary. Rights conferred on the taxpayer under state law to terminate or dismiss the qualified intermediary are disregarded for this purpose [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(vi)]. Further, a taxpayer may receive money or other property directly from a party to the transaction, other than a qualified intermediary, without affecting this safe harbor [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(4)(vii)].

[v] Fourth Safe Harbor: Entitlement to Growth Factor on Exchange Property

Under the fourth safe harbor in the regulations, the taxpayer is permitted to receive interest or a growth factor on the deferred exchange, without being considered in constructive receipt of the proceeds, provided that the taxpayer's rights to receive the growth factor are limited to certain specified circumstances [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(5), (6)]. A taxpayer is treated as being entitled to receive interest or a growth factor with respect to a deferred exchange if the amount of money or property that the taxpayer is entitled to receive depends upon the length of time elapsed between the transfer of the relinquished property and the receipt of the replacement property [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(5), (h)].

[5] Exchanges Between Related Persons

The nonrecognition provisions do not apply to like-kind exchanges between a taxpayer and a related person [see I.R.C. § 1031(f)(3) (definition); see also I.R.C. §§ 267(b), 707(b)(1)], if before two years after the date of the last transfer that was part of the exchange, either the taxpayer or the related person disposes of the property received in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(f)(1); see I.R.C. § 1031(f)(4); but see I.R.C. § 1031(f)(2) (exception for certain dispositions), (g) (suspension of running of two-year period under specified circumstances)]. In that case, the taxpayer takes the previously unrecognized gain or loss into account on the date of the subsequent disposition of the exchanged property [I.R.C. § 1031(f)(1)].

§ 24.41 Nonrecognition of Gain or Loss on Like-Kind Property

I.R.C. § 1031 specifically defers recognition of the taxpayer's gain from the exchange of like-kind property until the property acquired in the exchange is sold [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1)]. It is an exception to the general rule that all gain realized on the sale or exchange of property must be recognized [see I.R.C. § 1001(c)]. "Realized" gain is the excess of the amount realized from a transaction over the adjusted basis of the property disposed of in the same transaction [I.R.C. § 1001(a)]. "Recognized" gain is that amount of gain that must be included in the gross income in the computation of the income tax [see I.R.C. § 61(a); see also I.R.C. § 1001(c)]. The application of I.R.C. § 1031 is mandatory; if all of the requirements for a tax-free exchange are satisfied [see § 24.40], the gain must be deferred [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)].

Losses from the disposition of property used in trade or business or for investment through a like-kind exchange cannot be recognized [see I.R.C. §§ 1031(a), (c), 1231]. If the taxpayer desires to recognize a tax loss, the disposition of the property should be structured as a taxable sale rather than as an exchange. This is particularly true of property that is used productively in the taxpayer's trade or business and qualifies for the recognition of ordinary losses on disposition [see I.R.C. § 1231; see also Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

The tax effects of an exchange transaction must be analyzed independently as to each party involved in the exchange, and it is immaterial for purposes of the taxpayer's tax treatment whether or not the transaction qualifies as a tax-deferred exchange as to any of the other parties [see I.R.C. § 1031(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a)]. In a two party exchange, both parties are eligible to defer gain. In a three party exchange, the third party acquiring the taxpayer's property will not recognize gain since property is acquired rather than sold, and the owner of the other parcel will always recognize gain since property is being sold rather than exchanged [see I.R.C. § 1001(a)].

For purposes of state taxation, gain or loss on the disposition of property is determined in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Rev. & Tax. Code § 18031; see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17024.5].

CHAPTER 24 EXCHANGES OF REAL PROPERTY
PART II. LE GAL BACKGROUND
C. Taxation of Exchanges

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.42

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.42 Receipt of Money or Other Property ("Boot")

[1] In General

Inasmuch as the respective values of exchanged properties are rarely identical, the taxpayer may give or receive money or other "unlike" property, known as "boot," to equal out the exchange transaction [see I.R.C. § 1031(b)]. There are two basic forms of boot. Cash or unlike property received is referred to as "property boot." "Mortgage boot" is given when one party assumes a liability of the other party to the exchange. An assumption of liability is treated as money or other property received because it relieves a party from the burden of repaying that indebtedness [see I.R.C. § 1031(d); see also I.R.C. § 357(d) (determination of amount of liability assumed); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(b)-1(c)].

If properties of different values are exchanged without the use of boot to equalize the transaction, the exchange will still qualify as a tax-free exchange under I.R.C. § 1031 [Rev. Rul. 78-163, 1978-1 C.B. 257]. The unequal nature of the exchange will not affect the nonrecognition of any gain or loss realized, or the determination of basis pursuant to I.R.C. § 1031(d) [see § 24.43[2]]. However, when such an exchange constitutes a charitable contribution for public purposes [see I.R.C. § 170(c)], the basis of the property received is determined under I.R.C. § 1031(d) as adjusted by applying the formula for bargain sales [Rev. Rul. 78-163, 1978-1 C.B. 257, 258 ; see I.R.C. § 1011(b)].

[2] Recognition of Gain or Loss on Boot Received by Taxpayer

The taxpayer in a like-kind exchange defers recognition of any gain attributable to the receipt of like-kind property, but must recognize gain equal to the amount of money and the fair market value of the boot received in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(b); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(b)-1(a)(4)]. However, no loss may be recognized on the receipt of either property boot or mortgage boot [see I.R.C. § 1031(c); see also Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(c)-1]. When a taxpayer both gives and receives boot in one exchange transaction, any gain attributable to the boot received will be taxable only if it cannot be offset by the boot given to the other party to the exchange [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.1031(b)-1(c), 1.1031(d)-2], in accordance with the rules discussed in [3]-[5], below.

[3] Property Boot Given Offsets Any Form of Boot Received

For the purpose of determining the amount of gain to be recognized on the receipt of boot in an exchange transaction, property boot received by the taxpayer may be offset by property boot given [see Rev. Rul. 72-456, 1972-2 C.B. 468]. Mortgage boot received by the taxpayer may also be offset by property boot given [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-2, ex. (2)(c)]. Brokerage commissions paid by the taxpayer in a like-kind exchange are treated as property boot given by the taxpayer. Consequently, mortgage or property boot received by the taxpayer may be offset by commissions paid by the taxpayer [Rev. Rul. 72-456, 1972-2 C.B. 468].

[4] Mortgage Boot Received Is Offset by Mortgage Boot Given

In an exchange transaction in which each party to the exchange either assumes a liability of the other party or acquires property subject to a liability, the mortgage boot received by the taxpayer is offset by the mortgage boot given to the other party when calculating the taxpayer's gain to be recognized [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-2]. For example, if the taxpayer transfers property subject to a mortgage debt of $100,000, and receives property subject to a mortgage debt of $200,000, the taxpayer will have received no mortgage boot because the mortgage boot received is completely offset by the mortgage boot given. Accordingly, the taxpayer recognizes no gain on the exchange [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-2].

[5] Property Boot Received Is Not Offset by Mortgage Boot Given

Although mortgage boot received is offset by property boot given, for purposes of calculating recognizable gain [see [4], above], property boot received is not offset by mortgage boot given [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-2, ex. (2)(c); Rev. Rul. 79-44, 1979-1 C.B. 265]. The taxpayer must treat as gain the value of the cash or property received, despite the fact that an equivalent amount of mortgage boot was given. For example, the taxpayer may transfer property with an exchange value of $100,000, and receive both property with an exchange value of $100,000 subject to a $50,000 mortgage, and $50,000 in cash. The taxpayer will have given $50,000 mortgage boot and received $50,000 property boot. The taxpayer cannot offset the mortgage boot given against the property boot received, and must recognize gain on the $50,000 received [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-2, ex. 2].

[6] Recognition of Gain or Loss on Property Boot Given by Taxpayer

In addition to the recognition of gain on the receipt of boot by a taxpayer, the taxpayer may recognize gain on the transfer of property boot to the other party. Although the transfer of property boot along with qualifying property does not affect the nonrecognition treatment of the qualifying property, nonrecognition treatment does not apply to the boot transferred. The transfer of property boot is equivalent to a taxable sale of that property. Gain or loss is recognized on the property boot to the extent of the difference between its adjusted basis and its fair market value [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.1031(a)-1(a), 1.1031(d)-1(e)]. Therefore, a transaction in which a taxpayer transfers both qualified property and property boot in exchange for qualified property only actually consists of two parts: a taxable sale of property boot for a portion of the property received and a tax-free exchange of the taxpayer's qualified property for a portion of the property received.

§ 24.43 Determination of Basis

[1] Composite Basis and Allocation to Qualified Property

The composite basis of all property (other than money) received by the taxpayer in a like-kind exchange under I.R.C. § 1031 is equal to the basis of the property given, decreased by the amount of any money received by the taxpayer, and either increased in the amount of any gain or decreased in the amount of any loss to the taxpayer that was recognized on the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(d)]. The basis of the property received is also increased by the amount of brokerage commissions paid by the taxpayer [Rev. Rul. 72-456, 1972-2 C.B. 468].

If either the total basis or a portion of the total basis is to be allocated to more than one qualified property, the amount of that basis must be allocated to the qualified properties in the same proportion as the fair market values of the properties bear to each other on the date of the exchange [see Rev. Rul. 68-36, 1968-1 C.B. 357 ; see also [4], below].

[2] When Only Qualified Property Is Received

If a like-kind exchange consists solely of qualified property, and no gain or loss is recognized under any provision of the Internal Revenue Code, the basis of the property acquired is the same as the adjusted basis of the property given by the taxpayer in the exchange. If additional consideration is given by the taxpayer in the exchange, the basis of the property acquired is the same as the adjusted basis of the property transferred, increased by the amount of the additional consideration given [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(a)]. If the taxpayer receives more than one qualifying property in the exchange, the substituted basis must be allocated between the properties received in proportion to their fair market values [Rev. Rul. 68-36, 1968-1 C.B. 357].

[3] When Qualified Property and Money Are Received

If gain is recognized to a taxpayer in a like-kind exchange on account of the receipt of money, the basis of the property acquired is the adjusted basis of the property given by the taxpayer, decreased by the amount of money received, and increased by the amount of gain recognized on the exchange [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(b); see Rev. Rul. 68-36, 1968-1 C.B. 357 (multiple qualifying properties)]. This formula also applies when gain is recognized on account of mortgage boot received by the taxpayer, since for purposes of determining basis, net mortgage boot received is treated as money received [I.R.C. § 1031(d)].

[4] When Both Qualified and Unqualified Property Are Received

If gain is recognized to a taxpayer in a like-kind exchange and property boot other than cash is received, the total basis of all the properties received by the taxpayer in the transaction is equal to the adjusted basis of the property given by the taxpayer, decreased by the amount of any money received, and increased by the amount of gain recognized by the taxpayer. That total basis must be allocated to the properties received on the exchange. For the purpose of the allocation, an amount equal to the fair market value of the boot on the date of the exchange must be allocated to the boot. The remainder of the total basis must be allocated to the qualified properties [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(c)].

[5] When Qualified Property and Boot Are Transferred

If gain or loss is recognizable by a taxpayer in a like-kind exchange and the taxpayer transfers boot in the transaction, the total basis of the properties received is equal to the total adjusted basis of the properties transferred by the taxpayer, either increased by the amount of gain recognized or decreased by the amount of loss recognized on the boot. For purposes of this rule, the taxpayer is deemed to have received an amount equal to the fair market value of the boot on the date of the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(e)].

For purposes of computing the basis of property received in a like-kind exchange, brokerage commissions paid by a taxpayer are treated as boot transferred, so that the basis of property received in the exchange is increased by the amount of commissions paid by the taxpayer [Rev. Rul. 72-456, 1972-2 C.B. 468].

§ 24.44 Reporting Gain or Loss From Like-Kind Exchanges

[1] Character of Gain or Loss

The character of any gain or loss recognized in a like-kind exchange depends on the nature of the property giving rise to the gain or loss. Gain or loss from capital assets is treated as capital gain or loss [see I.R.C. §§ 1201-1223]. Gain or loss from "property used in the trade or business" is combined with other such gain or loss and certain gains from involuntary conversions sustained by the taxpayer in the same year. If the net result of the combination is a gain, it is taxed as long-term capital gain. If the combination results in a net loss, the loss is treated as an ordinary loss [I.R.C. § 1231(a)]. Gain or loss from property that is neither a capital asset nor property used in the trade or business is treated as ordinary gain or loss [see I.R.C. § 1001].

The difference between capital gains and losses, I.R.C. § 1231 gains and losses, and ordinary gains and losses, may be more important for individual taxpayers than corporate taxpayers. Individual net capital gains are taxed at rates significantly lower than for ordinary income, based on the time the asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h); see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. However, a corporate taxpayer is taxed at a maximum rate of 35 percent on net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) [I.R.C. § 1201(a)], the same maximum rate that applies to ordinary corporate income [see I.R.C. § 11(b)].

Capital losses are allowed only to the extent of capital gains (in the case of corporations) or capital gains plus amounts limited by statute (in the case of individual taxpayers) [see I.R.C. § 1211]. Carryback and carryforward rules for unused capital losses still apply [see I.R.C. § 1212(a), (b)]. I.R.C. § 1231 losses still may be allowed in full [see I.R.C. § 1231(a)(4)]. Therefore, the appropriate characterization of property, and of gains and losses from that property, may still have considerable importance.

If a taxpayer transfers only qualified property in an exchange, but receives both qualified and nonqualified property, any gain must be gain from the disposition of a capital asset or from "property used in the trade or business," since those are the only types of property that qualify under the like-kind nonrecognition provisions [see I.R.C. §§ 1031(a)(1), 1221, 1231(b)]. If a taxpayer transfers both qualified property and boot, the character of any gain or loss as capital or ordinary depends on the nature of the boot transferred.

[2] Installment Reporting

If, as part of the consideration in a like-kind exchange, a taxpayer is to receive installment payments in subsequent years, and if the transaction otherwise qualifies as an installment sale, any gain recognized is reported pursuant to the installment method unless the taxpayer elects out of that method [see I.R.C. § 453(a), (d)]. Even though the transaction is an installment sale, all depreciation recapture income [see § 24.45] must be recognized currently [I.R.C. § 453(i)(1)].

§ 24.45 Recapture of Depreciation

[1] In General

When a taxpayer disposes of depreciated real property, the nonrecognition provisions of I.R.C. § 1031 may be overridden to the extent that the depreciation recapture provisions apply. I.R.C. §§ 1245 and 1250 provide for the recapture of certain depreciation on the disposition of depreciable property. Recapture of depreciation refers to the treatment of gain realized on the disposition of property as ordinary income, rather than capital gain, to the extent of the depreciation deductions taken on the property [see I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250]. The proportion of the gain that is subject to "recapture" on the disposition of real property depends on the method of depreciation used, the date of acquisition or construction of the property, the type of property (for example, residential rental property), and the length of time that the property is held [see I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250]. Individual net capital gains are taxed at rates significantly lower than for ordinary income, based on the time the asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h); see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. However, a corporate taxpayer is taxed at a maximum rate of 35 percent on net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) [I.R.C. § 1201(a)], the same maximum rate that applies to ordinary corporate income [see I.R.C. § 11(b)].

For most depreciable real property placed in service after 1986, there will be no recapture. Residential rental property and nonresidential real property placed in service after that date will be restricted to straight-line depreciation methods [see I.R.C. § 168]. As a result of this mandatory depreciation method, there will be no "additional" depreciation as defined by I.R.C. § 1250(b). Therefore, the recapture provisions simply will not apply [see I.R.C. § 1250(a)(1)].

Even for other kinds of property, and real property put in service before 1987 the recaptured depreciation is treated as ordinary income, as opposed to capital gains. This may be important, especially for individual taxpayers. Individual net capital gains are taxed at rates significantly lower than for ordinary income, based on the time the asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h); see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. However, a corporate taxpayer is taxed at a maximum rate of 35 percent on net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) [I.R.C. § 1201(a)], the same maximum rate that applies to ordinary corporate income [see I.R.C. § 11(b)]. On the other hand, treating recaptured depreciation as ordinary income may, in fact, increase the kinds of losses a taxpayer may use to offset that ordinary income [see I.R.C. § 1211].

The remaining importance of recapture is that it may force the recognition of gain in some cases when it would not otherwise be recognized, or to a greater extent than otherwise. The potential additional amount of gain to be recognized depends on (1) whether the property transferred was "Section 1245 property" or "Section 1250 property," and (2) whether the property received in exchange was "Section 1245 property" or "Section 1250 property" [see I.R.C. §§ 1245(b)(4), 1250(d)(4)(A)(ii), (C)]. The formula for calculating the amount that must be recognized is set forth in [2], below.

Most depreciable real property is "Section 1250 property." I.R.C. § 1245 covers personal property and a few special categories of property "subject to the allowance for depreciation under Section 167" that will qualify as "Section 1245 property." These are properties that have had either a very specialized use or have had an adjusted basis reflecting amortization under other Internal Revenue Code sections [see I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3)]. All other real property "subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in Section 167" is "Section 1250 property" [I.R.C. § 1250(c)].

I.R.C. § 1245 applies to property that (1) is or has been subject to the allowance for depreciation under I.R.C. § 167 or to the allowance of amortization provided in specified Internal Revenue Code sections; and (2) is either personal property, property that has a very specialized use [see I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3)(B), (D)-(F)], or property that has an adjusted basis reflecting amortization under certain Internal Revenue Code sections [I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3); see I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3)(C)].

[2] Extent of Recapture in Exchange

If depreciable real property is disposed of in a like-kind exchange and gain (determined without regard to the recapture provisions) is not recognized in whole or in part under I.R.C. § 1031, the amount of gain recognized by the taxpayer under the recapture provisions is calculated by determining the amount of depreciation recapture that would have been applicable to the transaction had it been a taxable exchange, and then applying the special limitation on recognition of depreciation recapture in the case of like-kind exchanges [see I.R.C. §§ 1245(a)(1), (b)(4), 1250(a), (d)(4)(A)].

For Section 1245 property, the limitation is the sum of (1) the amount of gain recognized on the disposition under I.R.C. § 1031, determined without regard to I.R.C. § 1245, plus (2) the fair market value of property acquired that is not I.R.C. § 1245 property and that is not taken into account in (1), above [I.R.C. § 1245(b)(4); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1245-4(d)]. For I.R.C. § 1250 property, the limitation is the greater of either (1) the amount of gain recognized on the disposition under I.R.C. § 1031, or (2) the excess of the amount of gain subject to recapture that would have been applicable to the transaction had it been a taxable exchange over the fair market value of the depreciable real property received in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1250(d)(4)(A)(i), (C); see Treas. Reg. § 1.1250-3(d)(1)(ii)(a), (iii)].

§ 24.110 Determining Whether to Sell or Exchange

1. Ascertain whether taxpayer wants to recognize any loss from transfer of property used in trade or business or for investment.

NOTE:

Although a taxpayer may recognize loss from the sale of property used in trade or business or for investment, the taxpayer cannot recognize any loss when that property is exchanged solely for other like-kind property [I.R.C. § 1031(a)], or when other nonqualified property or money is also received in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(c); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(c)-1]. Therefore, if the taxpayer desires to recognize a loss, the transaction should be structured as a sale rather than an exchange. For a checklist of procedures required to structure a sale of real property, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

2. Determine whether taxpayer desires to report any gains realized pursuant to the installment method [see I.R.C. § 453].

NOTE:

Installment reporting is available for gains realized in an exchange transaction as well as for sales transactions. For example, if a taxpayer receives installment payments of boot in subsequent years, the installment reporting rules will apply to the transaction unless the taxpayer opts out [see I.R.C. § 453(d); see also § 24.44[2]].

3. Ascertain whether transferor would prefer to sell, pay tax, and purchase new property in order to get higher tax basis for depreciation purposes.

NOTE:

Smaller depreciation allowances permitted after the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514] reduce the importance of depreciation factors as a motivating factor for making exchanges [see § 24.45].

In an exchange, the tax basis of the new property received is the same as that of the old property given away, decreased in the amount of any money received and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the taxpayer that was recognized on the exchange [see I.R.C. § 1031(d); see also §§ 24.43, 24.130].

4. Decide if higher basis for depreciation purposes can be obtained by exchanging in any of following ways rather than by selling:

a. Exchanging for property that is heavily encumbered.

NOTE:

The parties should also consider other factors, such as mortgage boot [see § 24.42].

b. Exchanging for property that has higher equity than property to be exchanged.

NOTE:

This type of exchange would require the transferor to pay cash or give a promissory note for the difference in the equities [see § 24.42].

c. Exchanging for property with greater percentage of depreciable improvements than property to be exchanged.

d. Exchanging for property that can be more easily financed than property to be exchanged.

§ 24.111 Appropriate Form of Exchange

1. Ascertain which of following exchange forms is appropriate for transaction:

NOTE:
The following constitute the basic methods of arranging an exchange involving any number of parties so as to effectuate a tax-free exchange as to at least one party, the client-taxpayer. More complex transactions can be based on these methods [see §§ 24.23, 24.24].

a. Simple exchange of property.

NOTE:
The simplest form of exchange is the two party exchange, which is simply a trade of property unaccompanied by any related sale [see § 24.21]. However, this type of exchange is not automatically limited to situations involving only two parties--it may be structured to encompass transactions involving any number of parties.

b. Exchange accompanied by sale or purchase, by one of following methods:

NOTE:
An exchange accompanied by a sale or purchase usually involves three parties, but the framework may be adapted for any transaction involving more than two parties. There must be an exchange of qualified properties between any two parties, and a separate transaction consisting of a related sale or purchase of property. A three party exchange is necessary if the property that the taxpayer wants to receive in the exchange is not owned by the person who intends to acquire the taxpayer's property [see § 24.20].

(1) Exchange followed by sale.

NOTE:
In this transaction, also known as a "Baird" exchange [see § 24.22 [2]], the taxpayer (owner of "Parcel A") and the owner of another parcel of like-kind property ("Parcel B") exchange their properties. A third party (such as a developer) then purchases Parcel A.

(2) Sale followed by exchange.

NOTE:
In this transaction, also known as an "Alderson" exchange [see § 24.22[1]] the taxpayer (who owns "Parcel A") and another party wish to exchange properties. The other party purchases suitable property ("Parcel B") from a third party and then exchanges Parcel B for Parcel A. Variations of this type of transaction include an exchange agreement with a provision for sale in lieu of exchange [see P 2 NOTE, below; see also § 24.211[2]], and an option to exchange or sell [see § 24.212[2]].

2. Determine whether transaction should require sale in lieu of exchange [see, e.g., § 24.211].

NOTE:
A "sale in lieu" provision usually requires the taxpayer to locate property ("Parcel B") that he or she would accept in the exchange, and notify the person interested in acquiring the taxpayer's own property ("Parcel A") that acceptable property has been located. The other party purchases Parcel B, and Parcel A and Parcel B are then exchanged. However, if the taxpayer fails to locate an acceptable Parcel B by a given date, the taxpayer must then sell Parcel A outright to the person interested in the taxpayer's property. Thus, this type of provision ensures that the interested party will acquire the taxpayer's property by some method by a given date, since that party usually would not have entered into the exchange agreement except for his or her desire to acquire the taxpayer's property [see § 24.211[1][c]]. If this provision is used, the purchase price and the method of payment should also be determined.

3. Determine whether a deferred exchange is necessary.

NOTE:
If the taxpayer must close on the transfer of property ("Parcel A") before locating suitable exchange property ("Parcel B"), a deferred exchange will be necessary. In that case, care must be taken to properly structure and execute the exchange, and to use a qualified intermediary if necessary [see § 24.25].

4. Determine whether transaction should be structured as option rather than outright sale or exchange, for any of following reasons:

NOTE:
For a complete discussion of the advantages of using an option to acquire real property, see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Chapter 70, Options (Matthew Bender).

a. Taxpayer wishes to:

(1) Retain money in event that party acquiring taxpayer's property fails to complete transaction.

NOTE:
An optionor is entitled to keep the price paid for the option if it is not exercised, while a seller may not be entitled to keep the sales deposit as liquidated damages if the buyer breaches the sales contract [see § 24.212[1][c][ii]].

(2) Taxpayer wishes to continue using property for a limited period.

NOTE:
For example, the taxpayer may want to harvest crops before transferring the property.

b. Party acquiring taxpayer's property wishes to:

(1) Tie up property without making present commitment to acquire.

(2) Speculate on potential increase in property's value without risking more than option consideration price.

(3) Avoid publicity that could drive up the price of neighboring property that party desires to purchase.

§ 24.112 Property to Be Exchanged

1. Determine whether real property to be transferred by taxpayer falls within either of following categories [I.R.C. § 1031(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a)]:

NOTE:

The property transferred may be either type set forth below, regardless of the type of property received [see P 2, below]. For example, property held for productive use in trade or business may be traded for either property used in trade or business, or for property held for investment. Property held for investment may be traded for either property held for investment, or for property used in trade or business [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a); see § 24.40[1]].

If the transferor's residence is located on the property, it will not qualify under I.R.C. § 1031 as either category of qualified property [see § 24.40]. However, a specified amount of gain from the sale or exchange of a principal residence may be excluded from income if, during the five-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property was owned and used by the taxpayer as a principal residence for periods aggregating at least two years [I.R.C. § 121(a); see I.R.C. § 121(c) (special treatment of certain sales and exchanges)]. The maximum amount of gain that may be excluded with regard to any sale or exchange is $250,000 for a single taxpayer or $500,000 for married taxpayers filing joint returns and meeting statutory criteria [I.R.C. § 121(b)(1),(2); see I.R.C. § 121(d)(1)-(3) (special rules concerning joint returns and treatment of property of former or deceased spouse)]. However, for a sale or exchange after 2008, the exclusion does not reach any part of the gain that must be allocated to a period of nonqualified use, that is, with some exceptions, any period (other than the portion of any period preceding 2009) during which the property was not used as the principal residence of the taxpayer or the taxpayer's spouse or former spouse [I.R.C. § 121(b)(4); see I.R.C. § 121(b)(4)(C)(ii) (exceptions to what is period of nonqualified use)]. For additional discussion, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

a. Commercial property that is:
(1) Held for productive use.

(2) Used in trade or business.

(3) Not held primarily for sale.

b. Investment property.

2. Determine whether real property to be received by taxpayer is both of following [I.R.C. § 1031(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a)]:

a. Either:

(1) Commercial property that is:
(a) Held for productive use.

(b) Used in trade or business.

(2) Investment property.

b. Of "like-kind" with property transferred by taxpayer.

NOTE:

"Like-kind" refers to the nature and character of property, not to its grade or quality. For example, the fact that property is improved or unimproved refers to grade or quality only [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(b)]. The nature or character of property is reflected in the differences between real and personal property, rather than between parcels of real property, however dissimilar they are [see § 24.40[3]].

§ 24.113 Planning Exchange in Accordance With Tax Goals

NOTE:
The tax effects of the exchange must be analyzed separately as to each party. The effect of the exchange on the other parties is irrelevant as to each party's own tax consequences [see § 24.41].

1. Determine whether taxpayer wishes to avoid recognition of any gain on exchange of qualified property.

a. If complete nonrecognition is desired, property received by taxpayer must be limited to proper categories of qualified property only [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a); see § 24.112].

b. Taxpayer must recognize gain to extent of [I.R.C. § 1031(b)]:
(1) Any money received.

(2) Fair market value of any nonqualified property received.

(3) Any liabilities of taxpayer (such as a mortgage) assumed by other exchanging party [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(a)].

c. Property transferred by taxpayer must be limited to:

(1) Qualified property [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1)].

(2) Cash [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(a)-1(c)].

(3) Nonqualified property that has a basis equal to its fair market value [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(e)].

2. Determine whether taxpayer wishes to recognize gain or loss on nonqualified property given.

NOTE:

When recognition of gain or loss is desired, the transaction must be structured so that the taxpayer gives property boot with a basis higher or lower than fair market value. The transfer of nonqualified property is treated as a taxable sale that will result in the recognition of gain or loss to the extent of the difference between its fair market value on the date of the exchange and the taxpayer's basis [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(e); see also § 24.42[6]].

§ 24.120 Drafting Exchange Agreement

NOTE:

This section contains a list of the basic provisions to be included in exchange agreements. For a discussion of agreements to transfer real property in general, see Ch. 23, Agreements to Sell Real Property . The use of particular forms or documents for a tax-deferred exchange is not required, and technically a mere exchange of deeds under an oral agreement to exchange is sufficient [see Rev. Rul. 61-119, 1961-1 C.B. 395]. However, proper documentation clarifies the parties' rights, and also allows the taxpayer to show the IRS, if necessary, that all of the requirements of a tax-free exchange have been fulfilled. Additionally, if the exchange is a deferred exchange, a written agreement will generally be required in order to satisfy the regulations, especially if a qualified intermediary is used [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1; see also § 24.25].

1. For basic two party or three party agreement, include all of following:

a. Preamble, including:
(1) Names of parties to agreement.

(2) Designation of shorthand names used in contract.

NOTE:

For example, the taxpayer is usually referred to as the "First Party," and the other exchanging party is referred to as the "Second Party." The taxpayer's property may be designated as "Parcel A," and the property to be received by the taxpayer may be designated as "Parcel B" [see, e.g., § 24.210[2]].

b. Legal descriptions of properties to be exchanged.

NOTE:
The descriptions may either be inserted into the body of the agreement [see, e.g., § 24.211[2], P 2.01], or attached as exhibits [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 1.01].

c. Provision indicating parties' agreement to exchange properties [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 1.01].

d. Provision regarding exceptions to title for each parcel of property, either:

(1) If agreement assumes that preliminary title reports have been given to each party, list of all approved exceptions [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], PP 2.01, 2.02]; or

(2) If agreement assumes that no preliminary title reports have been received, requirement that preliminary title reports are given and any exceptions approved [see, e.g., § 24.211 [2], PP 3.01, 3.02].

e. Value of property [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 3.01].

f. If respective equities of properties differ [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 3.01]:

(1) Dollar value of difference; and

(2) Amount of cash or other property paid to even out exchange.

NOTE:
The parties are not required to use boot to even out the difference between properties of different market values to effect a like-kind exchange. The unequal nature of an exchange will not affect the nonrecognition of any gain or loss realized, or the determination of basis pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 1031(d) [see Rev. Rul. 78-163, 1978-1 C.B. 257 ; see also § 24.42].

g. Provisions regarding escrow, including [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 4.02]:

(1) Name of escrow holder;

(2) Date for opening escrow; and

(3) Statement regarding which document will control if agreement and escrow instructions are inconsistent [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 4.02].

h. Conditions for close of escrow [see § 24.210 [2], P 5.01];

NOTE:
When the agreement is used for a three party exchange, the closing of the exchange escrow is usually made to occur simultaneously with the closing of the sale escrow for the other half of the transaction [see § 24.210 [1][d][vi]].

i. Provisions regarding title insurance policies for each parcel of property [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 6.01].

j. Required deposits by each party [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 7.01].

k. Proration of expenses for each property [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], PP 8.01, 8.02].

NOTE:

The interim charges involved in the transaction may include taxes, insurance, utilities, rent from tenants, or interest if a loan is being assumed [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender).

l. Costs to be borne by each party [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], PP 9.01, 9.02].

NOTE:

Costs customarily borne by each party include half of the escrow fee, the cost of a title insurance policy, and the cost of recording the deed to the property [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

m. Designation of each party's address for notice purposes [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.02].

n. Miscellaneous standard contract provisions:

(1) Statement that time is of the essence [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.01];

(2) Prohibition against assignment without consent of both parties [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.03];

(3) Provision specifying governing law [see, e.g., § 24.210[2] P 11.04];

(4) Provision binding parties' successors in interest [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.05];

(5) Provision for payment of attorneys' fees in event of litigation [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.06]; and

(6) "Entire agreement" clause [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 11.07].

2. If agreement requires "sale in lieu" of exchange or is a deferred exchange, add [see, e.g., §§ 24.25, 24.211[2], P 4.01]:

a. Statement of taxpayer's desire to exchange rather than sell;

b. Requirement that taxpayer locate suitable property ("Parcel B") for other party or qualified intermediary to purchase and then exchange for taxpayer's property;

NOTE:

For a summary of the parties' obligations in a sale in lieu transaction, see § 24.111, Paragraph 2 NOTE. For a discussion of the parties' obligations in a deferred exchange, see § 24.25.

c. Date by which taxpayer must locate suitable property;

d. Following requirements if Parcel B is located by stated date:

(1) Taxpayer's obligation to give written notification of location of Parcel B to third party or intermediary acquiring Parcel A;

(2) Third party's or intermediary's obligation to acquire Parcel B;

(3) Taxpayer's obligation to sell Parcel A to third party or intermediary if Parcel B is not located by stated date; and

(4) Purchase price of Parcel A, including terms of any installments.

e. If it is a deferred exchange, the date by which Parcel B must be conveyed to the taxpayer.

3. If agreement will contain escrow instructions, add all basic escrow provisions.

NOTE:

For a list of escrow provisions, see § 24.121, Paragraph 2. Escrow instructions may be incorporated into the exchange agreement to avoid having two documents that may contain conflicting provisions. A similar result can be obtained by drafting the escrow instructions to conform with the exchange contract, or attaching escrow instructions to the contract as an exhibit so that both documents can be agreed on at the same time [see § 24.211[1][b]; see also CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

4. If agreement is structured as option, draft option contract containing all of following [see § 24.212]:

NOTE:

A separate exchange agreement [see §§ 24.210, 24.211] should be drafted and attached as an exhibit to the option contract for use on exercise of the option. If exercise of the option may result in an alternative sale, a sales agreement [see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements] should also be attached.

a. Grant of option to acquire Parcel A;

b. Amount of consideration given for option;

c. Date on which unexercised option will terminate; and

d. Manner in which option may be exercised.

NOTE:

As an alternative to separate drafted instructions, escrow instructions may be provided by the escrow holder on printed forms, or may be contained in the exchange agreement itself [see § 24.211[2], art. 1; see also § 24.120, P 3]. For a complete discussion of escrows and escrow instructions, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

1. Select one of following types of instructions:

NOTE:

Escrow procedures differ by custom in northern and southern California. For a discussion of those differences, see § 24.200[1][c].

a. Joint instructions; or

NOTE:

Joint or "bilateral" instructions are used primarily in southern California. For a set of mutual instructions, see § 24.201.

b. Separate instructions.

NOTE:

Separate or "unilateral" instructions are used primarily in northern California. For a set of separate instructions for each party to the exchange, see § 24.200.

2. Include provisions regarding following:

NOTE:
This list contains the basic items to be included in the exchange escrow instructions. For a more complete list of items, see the Transaction Guide in Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows.

a. Deposit by each party of [see, e.g., § 24.200[2], PP 1, 2]:

(1) Property deed; and

(2) Boot, when value of one property is greater than the other.

NOTE:
If boot will be paid in installments, a note and deed of trust will be deposited [see, e.g., § 24.200[2], art. I, P 1].

b. Title insurance on each piece of property [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 4];

c. Exceptions to title [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 4];

d. Prorations [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], PP 7, 8];

e. Expenses to be paid by each party [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], PP 10-12];

g. Delivery of deeds [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 4];

h. Conditions to closing of escrow [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 5];

NOTE:
In a three party exchange, the closing of the exchange escrow should be made contingent on the closing of the purchase escrow, to ensure that the transaction is not treated as two separate transactions for tax purposes [see § 24.210[1][d][vi]]. If the exchange of properties will not be simultaneous, the identification and receipt of the target property must be accomplished within certain statutory deadlines [see § 24.122, P 6].

i. Termination of escrow on failure to close by given date [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 6]; and

1. Open exchange escrow.

a. Select escrow holder.

NOTE:
For a discussion of the choice of an escrow agent, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

b. Set up escrow file.

c. Advise taxpayer to deposit following into exchange escrow:

NOTE:
For a discussion of sales escrow requirements, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

(1) Exchange escrow instructions, when separately drafted [see § 24.121].

(2) Deed to property being exchanged.

(3) Any cash (or note and deed of trust) or other boot given pursuant to exchange.

(4) Funds to be used for escrow fees, if required by escrow holder.

NOTE:

Most escrow transactions require a deposit of fees upon opening the escrow [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

2. Advise taxpayer against doing any of following [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]:

NOTE:

If the form or structure in which the exchange takes place is faulty, the courts may find a purchase-sale transaction rather than an exchange transaction [see Carlton v. United States (5th Cir. [Fla.] 1967) 385 F.2d 238 ; W.D. Haden Co. v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (5th Cir. [T.C.] 1948) 165 F.2d 588] . The Internal Revenue Service regards the following actions as indicative of a sale rather than an exchange [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender); see also Borchard v. Commissioner (1965) 24 T.C.M. 1643 (compliance with all criteria required for exchange)]. For a thorough discussion of the various characteristics that courts have found significant in determining whether a given transaction is a tax-deferred exchange or a taxable sale, see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender).

a. Giving cash or other property for receipt of qualified property but failing to simultaneously transfer any qualified property.

NOTE:

In this situation, the taxpayer would appear to have made a purchase of property.

b. Receiving cash or other nonqualified property for transfer of taxpayer's qualified property, but failing to simultaneously receive qualified property from other party.

NOTE:

In this situation, the taxpayer would appear to have made a sale of property. If the transaction will be a nonsimultaneous exchange, in addition to other restrictions [see P 6, below], the taxpayer should not receive any cash or nonqualified property until the qualified property is received.

c. Becoming bound to sell or convey property to other party either:

NOTE:

Standard "sale in lieu of exchange" provisions do not violate this requirement because they require a sale of property only if the arranged exchange of that property does not take place by a given date [see § 24.211[2], P 4.01; see also § 24.212[2], P 2.03].

(1) Before arrangement of exchange; or

(2) Regardless of whether exchange takes effect.

d. Selling newly acquired property immediately after exchange.

NOTE:

If the property is immediately sold, the sale is evidence that the property was held primarily for sale [see Bernard v. Commissioner (1967) 26 T.C.M. 858] . Property held primarily for sale is specifically excluded from nonrecognition treatment [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(2)(A); see § 24.40[2]].

3. If property to be transferred contains one to four residential units, have transferor complete and deliver transfer disclosure statement(s) to prospective transferee [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.6, 1102.6a; see also Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

NOTE:

The transferor of such property must always provide the prospective transferee with the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1102.6; see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements]. In addition, effective July 1, 1990, the appropriate city or county may require the transferor to provide a second disclosure form [Civ. Code § 1102.6a; see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

4. If property to be transferred includes single-family dwelling or factory-built housing, serve transferee with written statement before transfer of title indicating that dwelling contains operable smoke detector [Health & Safety Code § 13113.8(a)-(c)].

NOTE:

For a complete discussion of the requirements for the written statement, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

5. If property contains one to four residential units, was built prior to January 1, 1960, and is of conventional light-frame construction, havbe transferor deliver following documents to transferee as soon as practicable before transfer of title [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a), (b)]:

NOTE:

For these purposes, the applicable definition of "conventional light-frame construction" is set forth in Chapter 25 of the 1991 Edition of the Uniform Building Code of the International Conference of Building Officials [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a)].

a. Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety.

b. Earthquake hazards disclosure statement [see Gov. Code § 8897.2 (required contents)].

NOTE:

For an illustrative disclosure statement and coverage of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreeements .

6. Close escrow in following manner:

NOTE:

This discussion and the forms (except for Section 24.213[2]) in this chapter assume that a simultaneous exchange of property will occur. However, if the property to be received in the transaction has not been located at the time Parcel A is transferred, certain deadlines for the identification and receipt of Parcel B must be met before the exchange is completed [see P 6, below; see also § 24.213[2]].

a. Advise taxpayer to take all actions required by exchange agreement as condition to close of escrow [see, e.g., § 24.210[2], P 5.01].

NOTE:

Title to each party's property is retained until the satisfaction of all conditions [see Civ. Code § 1057], and then passes automatically at the moment of satisfaction of those conditions [Todd v. Vestermark (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d. 374, 377, 302 P.2d 347] .

b. Record property deeds.

NOTE:

The recordation of the documents serves to evidence the passing of title previously accomplished [Holman v. Toten (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 309, 313-314, 128 P.2d 808] . Recordation is usually handled by the escrow agent. For further discussion of recordation procedures, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

c. On closing, advise taxpayer to obtain from escrow holder all of following:

(1) Deed to property received in exchange.

(2) Any boot (including note and deed of trust) received in exchange.

(3) Title insurance policy for property received in exchange.

NOTE:

If, in an escrow transaction for the simultaneous exchange of real property, a policy of title insurance is not to be issued to a party to the exchange, the party must be given a statutory notice (in a separate document) indicating that it may be advisable for the party to obtain such a policy. The recipient must sign and acknowledge the notice [Civ. Code § 1057.6]. The forms in this chapter provide for the issuance of a title insurance policy for each parcel of property involved in the exchange [see § 24.120, P 1i]. For further discussion and an illustrative notice requirement, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

(4) Itemized statement of costs charged to taxpayer's account.

7. If exchange transaction is nonsimultaneous:

NOTE:

A nonsimultaneous exchange may occur when the taxpayer transfers Parcel A to the party interested in acquiring it before Parcel B has been located [see §§ 24.40[4], 24.213]. In that situation, if the following deadlines are not met, the transaction will not qualify for nonrecognition treatment as a like-kind exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)].

a. Identify property to be received by taxpayer on or before 45th day after date on which taxpayer transfers property given to other party [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(b)]; and

b. Ensure that taxpayer receives property in exchange after the earlier of [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(B)]:

(1) 180 days after date on which taxpayer transfers property given in exchange; or

(2) Due date for transferor's federal income tax return for taxable year in which transfer of property given in exchange occurs.

NOTE:
Replacement property is treated as identified only if it is designated as replacement property in either a written agreement covering the exchange that is signed by all parties before the end of the identification period, or a written document signed by the taxpayer and hand-delivered or mailed, telecopied, or otherwise sent before the end of the identification period to a person involved in the exchange (such as an intermediary, escrow agent, or title company) other than the taxpayer or a related party [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(2); see § 24.40[4][c][i]]. The replacement property must be unambiguously described. A legal description or street address is acceptable [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(3)]. The regulations also provide special rules for identifying more than one property [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(4); § 24.40[4][c][ii]; see also CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

§ 24.123 Conducting Three Party Exchange

1. Arrange purchase and sale of property to be exchanged for taxpayer's property.

NOTE:

One element common to all three party exchanges is the purchase of one parcel of property by the third party to the exchange. In a "Baird" exchange, the taxpayer and the owner of Parcel B first exchange their properties; the third party then purchases Parcel A [see § 24.22[2]]. In an "Alderson" exchange, the third party first purchases Parcel B, and then exchanges it for Parcel A [see § 24.22[1]]. In most exchanges, Parcel B is already located and the exchange of the properties is simultaneous [see, e.g., §§ 24.210-24.212]. However, if the transaction involves a delayed exchange, Parcel B may not yet be located and the purchase may take place at a later time. In that situation, the taxpayer must also meet certain deadlines for identification and receipt of Parcel B [see § 24.122, P 6]. Care must also be taken to select a qualified intermediary if one is to be used [see § 24.40[4][e][iv]].

a. Draft sales contract.

NOTE:

For sales agreements, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements . Unless it is a deferred exchange, the contract should contain a provision that makes the closing of the sales escrow contingent upon closing of the exchange escrow. Although conceptually the purchase of Parcel B occurs before the exchange of Parcels A and B, the purchase and exchange escrows are made contingent on one another so that they occur simultaneously.

Furthermore, the third party will want the purchase to be made contingent in order to protect against acquiring unwanted property [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]. For a reciprocal contingency provision used in an exchange agreement, see § 24.210[2], P 5.01.

b. Draft sales escrow instructions.

NOTE:

For escrow instructions for sales agreements, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows . Like the sales contract, the sales escrow instructions should provide that closing of the sales escrow is contingent upon the closing of the exchange escrow [see P a NOTE, above], unless it is a deferred exchange. For a reciprocal contingency provision used in an exchange escrow, see § 24.201[2], P 5.

2. Open exchange escrow.

NOTE:

For a discussion of the process of opening an exchange escrow, see § 24.122, Paragraph 1.

3. Open sales escrow.

NOTE:

In a three party exchange, a separate escrow must be also set up for the sale transaction. The two escrows must be kept completely separate [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]. For a general discussion of sales escrows, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

4. Advise taxpayer against taking any of the following actions regarded as indicative of a sale rather than an exchange in three party exchange transactions [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]:

NOTE:

The following guidelines apply only to three party exchanges. For a list of actions to be avoided in both two party and three party exchanges, see § 24.122, Paragraph 2.

a. Receiving any money other than cash boot transferred pursuant to exchange.

NOTE:

For example, in an Alderson exchange the taxpayer should not accept cash from the third party for Parcel A and then receive Parcel B directly from the owner. Since the essence of an exchange is the transfer of property for other property, and the essence of a sale is the payment of cash for property, the receipt of money by taxpayer may indicate a sale rather than an exchange [see Carlton v. United States (5th Cir. [Fla.] 1967) 385 F.2d 238, 242]. If the parties are engaging in a deferred exchange, the safe harbors provided in the regulations should be followed in order to avoid constructive receipt of the cash [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g); see also § 24.40[4][e]].

b. Signing any documents related to sale or purchase of property by third party.

NOTE:

The taxpayer should not be bound to take any action except that of exchanging property, to avoid the possibility of constructive receipt of money for the taxpayer's property [see, e.g., Alderson v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1963) 317 F.2d 790] .

c. Making exchange after date specified in "sale in lieu" agreement.

NOTE:

In a "sale in lieu" agreement [see § 24.211], the taxpayer is required to locate an acceptable Parcel B, for the third party to purchase and then exchange for Parcel A, by a given date. If the taxpayer fails to notify the third party that the taxpayer has located suitable property by that date, the agreement obligates the taxpayer to sell Parcel A to the third party. If an exchange is completed after the date specified in the agreement, the third party is already required to pay cash for Parcel A, and the taxpayer is already entitled to receive money. Since the essence of a tax-deferred like-kind exchange is the transfer of one property in exchange for another [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)], and after the specified date any transfer of Parcel A is in consideration for money rather than property, the transaction would not qualify for nonrecognition of gain [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

d. Violating identification and receipt requirements in deferred exchange.

NOTE:

If the requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 1031(a)(3) are not satisfied in a deferred exchange, the transaction will be treated as a taxable sale [see § 24.40[4]].

5. If property to be transferred contains one to four residential units, have transferor complete and deliver transfer disclosure statement(s) to prospective transferee [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.6, 1102.6a; see also Civ. Code §§ 1102-1102.18; Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

NOTE:

The transferor of such property must always provide the prospective transferee with the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1102.6; see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements]. In addition, the appropriate city or county may require the transferor to provide a second disclosure form [Civ. Code § 1102.6a; see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

6. If property to be transferred includes single-family dwelling or factory-built housing, prepare written statement indicating that dwelling contains operable smoke detector.

NOTE:

For a discussion of the smoke detector statement, see § 24.122, Paragraph 4.

7. Close escrows.

a. Advise taxpayer to take all actions required by exchange agreement for close of exchange escrow.

NOTE:

For a discussion of passage of title upon satisfaction of all conditions, see § 24.122, Paragraph 5a NOTE.

b. Advise taxpayer to take all actions required by sales contract for close of the sales escrow.

NOTE:

Conditions for close of the sales escrow, as well as the exchange escrow, must be satisfied before title will pass, as the close of the exchange and sales escrows are made contingent upon each other [see, e.g., § 24.210 [2], P 5.01]. For a general discussion of typical conditions required for close of a sales escrow, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

c. Record property deeds in correct order.

NOTE:

For a discussion of recordation, see § 24.122, Paragraph 5b NOTE. In a three party exchange, the deeds must be recorded in the proper order in an exchange transaction to ensure that the chain of title is uninterrupted [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)]. For example, in an Alderson exchange the deed to Parcel B should be recorded pursuant to the sale to the third party before recordation of that deed pursuant to the exchange.

d. Obtain documents and any boot from escrow agent after closing.

NOTE:

For a list of documents to be obtained, see § 24.122, Paragraph 5c.

8. If exchange transaction is nonsimultaneous, advise taxpayer to identify and receive property to be acquired within statutory deadlines [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)].

NOTE:

For a discussion of the deadlines for identification and receipt of acquired property, see § 24.122, Paragraph 6.

§ 24.130 Determining Amount of Depreciation Recapture

NOTE:

When a taxpayer disposes of depreciated real property, the like-kind nonrecognition provisions may be overridden to the extent that the depreciation recapture provisions apply. Recapture of depreciation refers to the treatment of gain realized on the disposition of property as ordinary income, rather than capital gain, to the extent of the depreciation deductions taken on the property [see I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250; see also § 24.45]. The fact that recaptured depreciation is treated as ordinary income, as opposed to capital gains, may be important, especially for individual taxpayers. Individual net capital gains are taxed at rates significantly lower than for ordinary income, based on the time the asset was held and other specified factors [see I.R.C. § 1(h); see also I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)]. However, a corporate taxpayer is taxed at a maximum rate of 35 percent on net capital gain (or, if less, taxable income) [I.R.C. § 1201(a)], the same maximum rate that applies to ordinary corporate income [see I.R.C. § 11(b)]. On the other hand, treating recaptured depreciation as ordinary income may increase the kinds of losses a taxpayer may use to offset that ordinary income [see I.R.C. § 1211].

The remaining importance of recapture is that it may force the recognition of gain in some cases when it would not otherwise be recognized, or to a greater extent than otherwise, depending on the nature of the property transferred or received in the exchange [see I.R.C. §§ 1245(b)(4), 1250(d)(4)(A)(ii), (C); see also § 24.45].

1. If taxpayer transfers Section 1250 property in like-kind exchange and gain is not recognized in whole or part, determine amount of recapture to be recognized in following manner:

NOTE:

"Section 1250 property" is all depreciable real property that is not "Section 1245 property" [see I.R.C. § 1250(c); see also § 24.131, P 2]. For most depreciable real property placed in service after 1986 there will be no recapture [see I.R.C. § 1250(a)(1)]: residential rental property and nonresidential real property placed in service after that date will be restricted to straight-line depreciation methods [see I.R.C. § 168], and there is no "additional" depreciation as defined by I.R.C. § 1250(b).

a. Calculate amount of depreciation recapture that would apply to transaction if it were taxable [I.R.C. § 1250(a)]; and

b. Calculate limitation on amount of recapture by taking greater of either [I.R.C. § 1250(d)(4)(A)(i), (C)]:
(1) Amount of gain recognized on disposition under I.R.C. § 1031 [see § 24.113].

(2) Excess of following:
(a) Amount of gain subject to recapture that would apply to transaction if it were taxable; over

(b) Fair market value of depreciable real property received in exchange.

2. If taxpayer transfers Section 1245 property in like-kind exchange and gain is not recognized in whole or part, determine amount of recapture as follows:

NOTE:
I.R.C. § 1245 applies to property that (1) is or has been subject to the allowance for depreciation under I.R.C. § 167 or to the allowance of amortization provided in specified Internal Revenue Code Sections; and (2) is either personal property, property that has a very specialized use [see I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3)(B), (D)-(F)], or property that has an adjusted basis reflecting amortization under certain Internal Revenue Code sections [I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3); see I.R.C. § 1245(a)(3)(C)].

a. Calculate amount of depreciation recapture that would apply if transaction were taxable.

b. Calculate limitation on amount of recapture by taking sum of:

(1) Amount of gain recognized on exchange.

(2) Fair market value of property acquired in exchange that is not:
(a) Section 1245 property; and

(b) Taken into account in P (1), above.

§ 24.131 Calculating Basis of Property Received in Trade

1. Calculate basis of like-kind property received in exchange, as follows [see § 24.43]:

a. When no gain or loss is recognized, and:
(1) No boot is given or received, take adjusted basis of property transferred by taxpayer at time of the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(a)].

(2) Boot is given [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(a)]:
(a) Start with basis of property given in exchange.

(b) Make proper adjustments to basis; and

NOTE:
For example, expenditures for improvements would raise the cost basis. The rules on adjustment to basis are contained in I.R.C. § 1016.

(c) Increase by amount of any additional consideration in way of boot given for new property.

(3) Boot is received [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(d)]:

(a) Take basis of property given in exchange.

(b) Decrease by amount of any money received.

(c) Allocate to nonqualified property amount equivalent to fair market value on date of exchange.

NOTE:
For a definition of "nonqualified property," see Part III(A) NOTE.

(d) Allocate remainder to qualified property.

NOTE:
"Qualified property" refers to property that is held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment, and qualifies for nonrecognition treatment upon exchange [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)(1); see also CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW AND PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

b. When gain is recognized on account of taxpayer's receipt of:

(1) Money (or liabilities transferred by taxpayer) [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(b)]:

NOTE:
For purposes of determining basis, if the other party to the exchange either (1) assumes a liability of the taxpayer, or (2) acquires property of the taxpayer that is subject to liability, the taxpayer is treated as having received money in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(d)].

(a) Take basis of property transferred by taxpayer, as adjusted to date.

(b) Decrease by amount of money received in exchange.

(c) Increase by amount of gain recognized on exchange.

(2) Nonqualified property [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(c)]:

NOTE:
For a definition of "nonqualified property," see Part III(A) NOTE.

(a) Take total basis of property transferred by taxpayer, as adjusted to date.

(b) Decrease by amount of money received.

(c) Increase by amount of gain recognized on other nonqualified property.

(d) Allocate to nonqualified property amount equivalent to fair market value at date of exchange.

(e) Allocate remainder to qualified property.

c. When gain or loss is recognized on account of taxpayer's transfer of nonqualified property [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(e)]:

NOTE:
Since there is no prohibition on trading nonqualified property along with qualified property for other qualified property, the gains or losses normally reportable outside of exchanges on this nonqualified property are also separately recognized on the exchange transaction [see I.R.C. § 1001].

(1) Take total basis of properties transferred by taxpayer.

(2) Increase by amount of gain recognized.

(3) Decrease by amount of loss recognized.

NOTE:
For purposes of this calculation, the taxpayer is deemed to have received in exchange for the nonqualified property an amount equal to its fair market value on the date of the exchange [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-(1)(e)].

d. When taxpayer has transferred Section 1250 property [I.R.C. § 1250; see § 24.130, P 1]:

(1) Apply basis rules of Internal Revenue Code Section 1031 [see PP a-c, above] to qualified property acquired if [Treas. Reg. § 1.1250-3(d)(4)]:

(a) All Section 1250 gain is recognized [see § 24.130, P 1].

(b) Only non-Section 1250 property is received in exchange.

(c) Only one Section 1250 property is received in exchange.

(2) If more than one Section 1250 property is received, allocate basis to each property in proportion to relative fair market values of all Section 1250 property [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1250-3(d)(2)(iv), (4)].

(3) If both Section 1250 property and non-Section 1250 property are received, allocate basis in proportion to fair market value of properties [Treas. Reg. § 1.1250-3(d)(2), (4)].

2. Calculate basis of any nonqualified property received in exchange, as follows:

a. When no gain or loss is recognized but boot is received [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(d)]:

(1) Take basis of property given in exchange;

(2) Decrease basis by amount of any money received; and

(3) Allocate amount of basis to nonqualified property that is equivalent to fair market value on date of exchange.

NOTE:
The remainder of the amount not allocated to nonqualified property is the basis of the qualified property [see P 1a(3), above].

b. When gain is recognized on account of taxpayer's receipt of nonqualified property [I.R.C. § 1031(d); Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(d)-1(c)]:

(1) Take total basis of property transferred by taxpayer, as adjusted to date;

(2) Decrease basis by amount of money received;

(3) Increase basis by amount of gain recognized on other nonqualified property; and

(4) Allocate to nonqualified property amount equivalent to fair market value at date of exchange.

NOTE:
The remainder of the amount not allocated to nonqualified propertyis the basis of the qualified property [see P 1b(2), above].

PART IV. FORMS
A. Escrow Instructions

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.200

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.200 Escrow Instructions--Short Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a short version of escrow instructions for the tax-deferred exchange of real property. It may be used for either a two or a three party exchange. This form contains separate instructions from each party that must be executed independently of each other. For a longer, mutual version of instructions, see § 24.201. For additional sets of instructions, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows, §§ 26.200-26.202.

As an alternative to drafted escrow instructions, the parties to an exchange agreement may execute the printed escrow instructions supplied by the escrow or title company used to handle the exchange. As another alternative, the exchange agreement itself may contain the escrow instructions [see § 24.211[2], P 1.01].

[b] Purpose of Escrow and Escrow Instructions

Escrow is the method of closing a real estate transaction in which there is a concurrent exchange of money and documents resulting in the transfer of title to the property. A disinterested party is used to handle the details of the real estate transaction and to protect the interests of each party. In an exchange transaction, each party deposits a deed to the property given up in the exchange, along with any boot given, and receives a deed to the property received, together with any boot received. The purpose of the escrow instructions is to define the duties of the escrow holder that, when performed, will authorize the escrow holder to complete the transfer of the property. For a complete discussion of escrow and escrow instructions in general, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

[c] Use of Joint or Separate Instructions

The selection of joint or separate instructions may be determined by the area in California where the exchange takes place. As a matter of custom, escrow procedures differ in northern and southern California. Joint or "bilateral" instructions are customarily used in southern California, at least in smaller transactions. Separate or "unilateral" instructions, separately executed by each party, are customarily used in northern California. When separate instructions are used, problems due to conflicting provisions from each party can be avoided if the attorneys for the parties consult with each other in drafting the instructions [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE,, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)]. This form contains separate instructions from each party. The second party incorporates by reference the first party's instructions [see [2], P 3.07, below].

The choice of escrow holder also differs in southern and northern California. In southern California, escrow transactions are usually handled by independent escrow companies or the escrow departments of banks or savings and loans, while in northern California they are usually handled by title insurance companies. For a discussion of these differences in escrow procedures, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows, § 26.10 et seq.

[d] Identity of Parties

Whether these escrow instructions are used for a two party [see § 24.210] or three party exchange [see §§ 24.210-24.212], the taxpayer-client should be the "first party" designated in the instructions. If the exchange is an Alderson exchange [see § 24.22 [1]], the "second party" will be the person interested in acquiring the taxpayer's property. If the exchange is structured as a Baird exchange [see § 24.22 [2]], the "second party" will be the owner of the property the taxpayer wishes to acquire.

[e] Contents of Instructions

[i] In General

This form contains each party's agreement to deposit the deed to the property given up in the exchange. The party whose property has less equity will also deposit cash to be paid to the other party to make up the difference [see [2], below]. The instructions make the receipt of the other party's deed a condition of the delivery of each party's deed. For a list of basic provisions included in the escrow instructions, see § 24.121, P 2.

[ii] Title Insurance

Title insurance for exchange escrows is handled in the same manner as ordinary sales escrows. Title insurance protects against the purchaser's loss due to liens or encumbrances on the property, or defects in the title to the property [Ins. Code §§ 104, 12340.1]. The California Land Title Association [CLTA], a professional organization of title companies, has devised the basic form of insurance policy for owners and lenders. For detailed discussion of the role of title insurance in the transfer of real property, and an illustration of the CLTA policy, see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance .

[iii] Exceptions to Title

This form assumes that the parties have received copies of the preliminary title reports on each property [see, e.g., Ch. 26A, Title Insurance, §§ 26A.200]. After the receipt of the title report, the contract may require each party to notify the other of any liens, encumbrances, or other rights of third parties ("exceptions") that the acquiring party approves [see, e.g., § 24.211 [2], art. 3]. These instructions assume that the parties have already determined which of those exceptions they have approved [see [2], P 1.02, below].

[iv] Proration

These instructions contain a clause that requires the escrow holder to prorate whatever interim charges are involved in the transaction [see [2], PP 1.03- 1.05, below]. These charges may include taxes, insurance, utilities, rent from tenants, or interest if a loan is being assumed [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

[v] Failure of Escrow to Close

These instructions provide that if the escrow does not close on the agreed-upon date, the escrow terminates and the documents and funds deposited by each party will be returned [see [2], P 1.07, below]. Most escrow instructions contain this provision, or provide that any party who has fully complied with the requirements may demand the return of his or her money and property [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE,, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

[vi] Concurrent Closing of Escrow

These instructions constitute only half of the escrow arrangements necessary in a three party like-kind exchange. A contract of sale [see ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements] and sales escrow instructions [see vol. 6, ch. 26, Real Property Escrows] are also necessary for the developer's purchase of Parcel A in an Alderson exchange or Parcel B in a Baird exchange. This form makes the closing of the exchange escrow contingent upon the closing of the sales escrow in the other half of the transaction [see [2], P 1.06, below], in order to create a simultaneous exchange of properties. Reciprocal contingencies should be included in both the exchange escrow instructions and agreement and the sales escrow instructions and agreement of an exchange in which both properties are transferred at the same time, in order to ensure that the Internal Revenue Service does not see the purchase and exchange as one transaction. If the two escrows are not contingent upon each other, the transaction could be viewed as a taxable sale of Parcel A and a taxable purchase of Parcel B [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE,, ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]. For a discussion of requirements for exchanges in which one property is transferred at a later time, see [f], below.

[f] Nonsimultaneous Exchanges

To qualify for deferred recognition of gain, the exchange of properties may be, but need not be, simultaneous. Nonsimultaneous exchanges usually occur in a three party exchange when the taxpayer transfers the taxpayer's property to the third party but does not receive any property in exchange until a later time when suitable property has been located.

Internal Revenue Code Section 1031 was amended in 1984 to provide that a nonsimultaneous exchange will not qualify for tax-deferred treatment unless the property to be received is identified and received within certain time periods. First, the taxpayer must identify the property to be received in the exchange on or before the day that is 45 days after the transfer of the taxpayer's property to the other party to the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(A)]. Second, the taxpayer must receive the property to be acquired in the exchange before the earlier of (1) 180 days after transfer of the taxpayer's property, or (2) the due date (determined with regard to extensions) of the taxpayer's federal income tax return for the taxable year in which the taxpayer's property was transferred [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(B); see § 24.40[4]]. Because these escrow instructions require an exchange of title as a condition to closing [see [2], PP 1.02, 3.05, below], those deadlines do not apply to the exchange contemplated in this form [see § 24.213[2]].

PART IV. FORMS
B. Exchange Agreements

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.210

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.210 Exchange Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This agreement is a contract for the exchange of like-kind real property. It may be used in a two party exchange, in a three party "Alderson" exchange between the taxpayer and developer, or in a "Baird" exchange between the taxpayer and seller. This agreement assumes that the property to be acquired by the taxpayer has already been located. For an agreement granting an option to exchange before the property to be acquired by the taxpayer is located, see § 24.212. For a three party exchange or sale agreement that includes escrow instructions, see § 24.211. For a deferred exchange, see § 24.213. Printed exchange agreements, used primarily by real estate brokers, are also available from sources such as the California Association of Realtors (CAR).

[b] Contract Requirements

The rules of law applicable to contracts in general also apply to contracts for the exchange of property. For a complete discussion of those rules in the context of real property contracts, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

[c] Relationship to Escrow Instructions

Most like-kind exchanges are transacted through a disinterested escrow holder in order to protect the interests of each party. Separate escrow instructions should be executed to accompany this exchange agreement. The instructions may be drafted [see §§ 24.200, 24.201], obtained in printed form from the escrow holder, or incorporated into the exchange agreement itself [see § 24.211]. For a discussion of the function of escrow instructions, see § 24.200[1][b].

The escrow instructions and the exchange agreement are to be read together unless the parties intend and understand that the escrow instructions modify or change the agreement [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW &

PRACTICE, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)]. To avoid conflicts between the agreement and the instructions, the instructions should be drafted in accordance with the agreement provisions. The agreement may contain a clause stating which document will control in the event of a conflict [see, e.g., [2], P 4.02, below]. Alternatively, the escrow instructions may be attached to the agreement as an exhibit so that both documents can be agreed upon at the same time, or the agreement can be drafted to include instructions so that there is only one document [see, e.g., § 24.211; see also CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

[d] Contents of Agreement

[i] In General

The terms of an exchange agreement are basically the same as the terms of a general contract for the sale of real estate [see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements]. The primary differences between the two are the provisions for reciprocal transfers [see [2], P 1.01, below ; see also [vi], below], the payment of the difference in the net value of the properties [see [2], P 3.01, below], and an interest element in deferred exchanges [see § 24.213] contained in an exchange agreement.

The various parties and properties are usually given shorthand names in the contract. For either a two- or three party exchange, the taxpayer-client should be the First Party. If the form is used for a three party Alderson exchange [see § 24.22[1]], the taxpayer will be the First Party and the person interested in acquiring the taxpayer's property will be the Second Party. If the form is used for a three party Baird exchange [see § 24.22[2]], the owner of the property the taxpayer wishes to acquire will be the Second Party.

[ii] Exchange of Properties

This form sets forth the agreement of each of the parties to transfer his or her property in exchange for the property of the other. The legal description of each parcel should be attached as an exhibit to the agreement [see [2], P 1.01, below]. This form states the parties' intention that the conveyances qualify as a like-kind exchange under Internal Revenue Code § 1031. While the parties' intent does not govern the tax consequences of their actions, an intent to exchange rather than sell may determine the character of the transaction [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)].

[iii] Exceptions to Title

This form assumes that the parties have received copies of the preliminary title reports on each property [see Ch. 26A, Title Insurance], and that they have already determined which of those exceptions they have approved [see [2], Art. 2, below]. For an example of a provision requiring each party to provide a title report to the other, see § 24.211[2], Article 3.

[iv] Valuation and Transfer of Boot

This agreement sets forth the value of each parcel of property to be exchanged [see [2], P 3.01, below]. In most cases, the various properties to be exchanged will not have identical values. For that reason, money or other property, known as "boot," is given by one party to even out the exchange [see § 24.42]. This form assumes that any inequities will be offset by the payment of a stated amount of cash [see [2], P 3.01, below].

[v] Automatic Termination of Escrow

This agreement provides that if the escrow does not close on the agreed-upon date, the escrow terminates and the documents and funds deposited by each party will be returned [see [2], P 4.03, below]. Most escrow instructions also contain this provision [see, e.g., § 24.201[2], P 6], or provide that any party who has fully complied with the requirements may demand the return of his or her money and property [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)].

[vi] Concurrent Closing of Exchange and Sales Escrows

These instructions constitute only half of the escrow arrangements necessary in a three party like-kind exchange. A contract of sale [see ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements] and sales escrow instructions [see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows] are also necessary for the developer's purchase of Parcel A in an Alderson exchange, or Parcel B in a Baird exchange. This agreement, as well as the escrow instructions to be used with the agreement, makes the closing of the exchange escrow contingent upon the closing of the sales escrow in the other half of the transaction [see [2], P 5.01, below], in order to preserve the tax-free nature of the transaction as a simultaneous exchange [see § 24.200[1][e][vi]; see also CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]. If Parcel B has not yet been located and the exchange will not be simultaneous, certain deadlines for identification and receipt of that property must be met in order for the entire transaction to qualify as a like-kind exchange [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3); see also § 24.40[4]].

[vii] Title Insurance

This form provides that each party will receive a title insurance policy for the property received, showing title to be free and clear except for agreed-upon exceptions set forth in the exchange agreement [see [2], P 6.01, below]. Title insurance protects against the purchaser's loss due to liens or encumbrances on the property, or defects in the title to the property [Ins. Code §§ 104, 12340.1]. The California Land Title Association [C.L.T.A.], a professional organization of title companies, has devised the basic form of insurance policy for owners and lenders. For a detailed discussion of the role of title insurance in the transfer of real property, and an illustration of the CLTA policy, see Chapter 26A, Title Insurance .

[e] Federal Income Taxation

For a discussion of the tax effects of an exchange transaction, see §§ 24.41 and 24.42. For a discussion of the recapture of depreciation on property transferred pursuant to a like-kind exchange, see § 24.45.

Further, the escrow instructions must provide that if there is any inconsistency between the terms of this Agreement and the escrow instructions, the terms of this Agreement will control.

The escrow instructions must also provide that Escrow Holder will concurrently record First Party's grant deed to Parcel A to Second Party, and Second Party's grant deed to Parcel B to First Party, when the following apply:

The failure of the escrow to close and of the Escrow Holder to return to the depositing party all funds or documents deposited in the escrow will not affect any liability of either party to this Agreement to the other arising out of any breach of this Agreement [or will relieve both parties to this Agreement from their respective obligations under this Agreement].

PART IV. FORMS
B. Exchange Agreements

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.211

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.211 Three Party Exchange or Sale Agreement--With Escrow Instructions Included

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a three party exchange agreement that provides for a sale in lieu of exchange if the taxpayer does not locate real property to receive in exchange by a given date. This arrangement is a type of "Alderson" exchange [see § 24.22 [1]]. For an exchange agreement in which the property to be transferred to the taxpayer in exchange has already been located, see Section 24.210. For an agreement granting the third party interested in acquiring the taxpayer's property an option to exchange property with the taxpayer, see Section 24.212. For a deferred exchange, see Section 24.213. This comment discusses only those provisions peculiar to this form. For a discussion of those provisions generally found in all exchange agreements, see Section 24.210[1].

[b] Provision for Escrow Instructions

This form contains escrow instructions for the transfer of title to each of the parties [see [2], P 1.01, below]. It includes provisions for the deposit of money and documents into escrow [see [2], art. 12, below], prorations of expenses on the properties [see [2], art. 13, below], payment of costs and fees [see [2], arts. 14, 15, below], and the method of closing escrow [see [2], art. 6, below]. No separate instructions are necessary. By drafting the exchange agreement to include escrow instructions, the attorney avoids the potential problem of having two documents that may contain conflicting provisions. A similar result can be obtained by drafting the escrow instructions to conform with the exchange contract, or attaching escrow instructions to the contract as an exhibit so that both documents can be agreed on at the same time [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 91, Escrow (Matthew Bender)]. If separate escrow instructions are used, they should be read together with the exchange agreement unless the parties intend and understand that the escrow instructions modify or change the agreement [Swanson v. Thurber (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 171, 180, 281 P.2d 642] .

[c] "Sale in Lieu" Provision

This agreement requires the taxpayer to locate suitable property by a stated date, so that the third party interested in acquiring the taxpayer's property may purchase that designated property for purposes of an exchange. If the taxpayer fails to locate Parcel B, the third party will be entitled to purchase Parcel A outright from the taxpayer without having to perform any exchange transaction [see [2], PP 4.01, 4.03, below]. The purpose of the sale provision is to ensure that the person interested in the taxpayer's property will acquire that property by either exchange or purchase by a given date, since that person usually would not have entered into the exchange agreement except for his or her interest in the taxpayer's property. The fact that the agreement provides for a taxable purchase and sale transaction as an alternative to an exchange does not preclude the taxpayer from obtaining nonrecognition of gain if the transaction is actually completed as an exchange by the specified date [see Alderson v. Commissioner (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1963) 317 F.2d 790, 793] . If the taxpayer does notify the third person of acceptable property by the stated date, that person becomes obligated to purchase Parcel B for the purpose of exchanging it for Parcel A [see [2], P 4.01, below], and the exchange transaction then proceeds without further application of the sale in lieu provisions.

However, a problem arises if an exchange is completed after the date specified in the agreement. After that date, the agreement obligates the third person to pay cash for Parcel A, and entitles the taxpayer to receive money. Since the essence of a tax-deferred like-kind exchange is the transfer of one property in exchange for another [see I.R.C. § 1031(a)], and after the specified date any transfer of Parcel A is in consideration for money rather than property, the transaction would not qualify for nonrecognition of gain [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Tax-Deferred Exchanges (Matthew Bender)]. Therefore, the attorney should advise the taxpayer using this form to select a realistic date as a deadline for locating Parcel B, and warn the taxpayer of the tax implications of failing to locate Parcel B before that date.

[d] Taxation of Transaction as Sale or Exchange

The use of this agreement for a sale of property will result in very different tax consequences for the taxpayer than its use for an exchange. If the transfer of property is ultimately consummated as a valid like-kind exchange, neither gain nor loss on the transfer of the like-kind property will be recognized by the taxpayer [I.R.C. § 1031(a)], and gain (but not loss) will be recognized on other money or other property received by the taxpayer pursuant to the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(b)]. For a complete discussion of the tax implications of exchanges, see Sections 24.41 and 24.42.

If no acceptable property is located by the taxpayer to serve as Parcel B and the taxpayer's property is sold outright to the third person, the realized gain or loss will be recognized as a gain or loss in the year of sale [I.R.C. § 1001(c)]. For a complete discussion of the taxation of real property sales, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

Installment sale reporting [see I.R.C. § 453] and recapture of depreciation [see I.R.C. §§ 1245, 1250] apply to both sales and exchanges.

[e] Deposit Upon Opening of Escrow

This form requires the person acquiring Parcel A to deposit a stated amount of money with the escrow holder upon the opening of escrow [see [2], P 5.02, below]. If the transaction is closed as a sale, the deposit is applied toward the sales price [see [2], P 5.02(1), below]. This is a standard provision in real estate sales contracts [see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

If the transaction is closed as an exchange, it is important for tax purposes to specify the disposition of any funds deposited by the person acquiring Parcel A. To avoid classification as a taxable sale rather than exchange, the agreement should not grant the taxpayer any rights to receive money from the transaction except that which is paid out of the exchange escrow as cash boot [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 72, Exchanges

(Matthew Bender); see also § 24.123, P 2]. A taxpayer will be deemed to have constructively received money when the party acquiring the taxpayer's property deposits funds in escrow subject to the taxpayer's sole right to control their disposition [Halpern v. United States (N.D. Ga. 1968) 286 F. Supp. 255, 258] . This form requires the deposit to be used to pay the taxpayer any excess in value of Parcel A over Parcel B [see [2], PP 4.02, 5.02(2), below], and requires the escrow holder to return the remaining deposit to the party acquiring Parcel A [see [2], P 5.02(b), below].

If the party acquiring the taxpayer's property breaches the agreement, this form requires the deposit to be paid to the taxpayer as liquidated damages [see [2], P 5.02(3), below]. A provision in a contract for the sale of real property liquidating the damages to the seller upon the buyer's default is invalid unless the provision is separately signed or initialed by each party to the contract [Civ. Code § 1677(a)]. If the provision is included in a printed contract, it must be set out either in at least 10-point bold type or in contrasting red print in at least eight-point bold type [Civ. Code § 1677]. For a complete discussion of liquidated damages clauses in real property sales contracts, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

If the escrow is canceled without a breach by the developer, this form requires the escrow holder to return the full amount of the deposit to the developer [see [2], P 5.02(4), below].

[f] Exceptions to Title

This form assumes that the party acquiring the taxpayer's property has not yet received a preliminary title report from the taxpayer and has not determined which exceptions to Parcel A are acceptable. It requires the taxpayer to provide the acquiring party with a preliminary title report within a specified period of time after execution of the agreement [see [2], P 3.02, below]. The acquiring party must then approve any exceptions in writing or all will be deemed disapproved [see [2], P 3.02, below]. If the transaction is completed as an exchange, the party acquiring Parcel A must provide a preliminary title report on Parcel B to the taxpayer, for written approval of any exceptions to title [see [2], P 4.01(5), below]. For a provision in which the preliminary title report has been received and exceptions to title approved, see § 24.210[2], P 2.01.

[g] Right of Entry

This agreement gives the party acquiring Parcel A the right to enter the taxpayer's property for the purpose of conducting soil, engineering, and land tests and surveys in order to determine the suitability of Parcel A for the proposed use of the property [see [2], P 10.01, below]. This provision would be appropriate when property is transferred to a developer who plans to use it for a particular purpose [see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements (purchase for subdivision purposes)]. It also provides that the taxpayer will cooperate with the acquiring party in obtaining the appropriate zoning necessary for that party's intended use of the property [see [2], P 10.01, below]. If certain conditions are necessary for the acquiring party's intended use, these provisions could be made express conditions to the closing of escrow under Article 7 [see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements].

Three Party Exchange or Sale Agreement--With Escrow Instructions Included

EXCHANGE OR SALE AGREEMENT

This agreement is entered into by and between _____[name of owner of Parcel A] ("First Party") and _____[name of person acquiring Parcel A] ("Second Party").

First Party and Second Party agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. TRANSFER AGREEMENT

Agreement and Escrow Instructions

1.01. The terms and conditions set forth in this Agreement constitute both (1) an agreement between the parties for the transfer by First Party of Parcel A (as described in Paragraph 2.01 of this Agreement) to Second Party, and (2) escrow instructions for the related escrow to be opened by the parties with _____[name and address of title company] ("Escrow Holder") pursuant to Article 5 of this Agreement.

ARTICLE 2. LEGAL DESCRIPTION

Parcel A

2.01. First Party will transfer to Second Party and Second Party will acquire from First Party, on all of the terms and conditions contained in this Agreement, that certain real property located in the [if applicable, add: City of _____,] County of _____, State of _____ ("Parcel A") and described as follows: _____[set forth legal description of Parcel A].

ARTICLE 3. EXCEPTIONS

Title Requirements

3.01. In the event that this escrow closes by title to Parcel A passing to Second Party, title will be free and clear of all liens, encumbrances, covenants, conditions, restrictions, tenancies, rights of occupation or possession, easements, encroachments, and rights of any kind in third parties, except the following: (1) general and special real property taxes and assessments for the current fiscal tax year; and (2) any other exceptions that are approved by Second Party.

Preliminary Title Report

3.02. For purposes of determining approved exceptions, First Party will provide to Second Party, within _____[number] days after execution of this agreement, a preliminary title report on Parcel A. Within _____[number] days after receipt of the preliminary title report, Second Party will notify First Party and Escrow Holder in writing as to any exceptions that Second Party approves. All other exceptions will be deemed disapproved by Second Party. [If applicable, add: Any exception in the nature of a trust deed, mortgage, or other lien that is removable by the payment of money by Escrow Holder from closing funds in this escrow, must be so removed at the close of this escrow by the payment from those funds by Escrow Holder].

ARTICLE 4. EXCHANGE OR SALE

Exchange

4.01. First Party would prefer to exchange rather than to sell Parcel A for other real property of a similar nature. Therefore, First Party will have until _____[date prior to date for close of escrow] to locate and to notify Second Party in writing of other real property ("Parcel B") that would be acceptable to First Party in exchange for Parcel A. In the event of notification to Second Party on or before the foregoing date, Second Party will enter into a separate escrow with the owner of Parcel B ("Seller") for the acquisition of title to Parcel B. Second Party will close escrow with Seller and will acquire title to Parcel B, provided all of the following conditions are satisfied:

(1) The purchase price of Parcel B is payable by Second Party to Seller entirely in cash [or specify terms if payment is to be made by installment payments].

(2) The amount of the purchase price of Parcel B is acceptable to First Party.

(3) The cost to Second Party of acquiring Parcel B, including all cash payments toward the purchase price and all other acquisition costs (including all escrow, title, and recording costs) incurred by Second Party, does not exceed $

_____ .

(4) The closing of the escrow between Second Party and Seller is made contingent upon the concurrent closing of this escrow.

(5) Second Party conveys title to Parcel B to First Party, through this escrow, free and clear of all liens, encumbrances, covenants, conditions, restrictions, tenancies, rights of occupation or possession, easements, encroachments, and rights of any kind in third parties, except the following: (a) general and special real property taxes and assessments for the current fiscal tax year; and (b) any other exceptions that are approved by First Party. For purposes of determining approved exceptions, Second Party will provide First Party with a preliminary title report on Parcel B, together with full copies of all exceptions set forth in that report. Within _____ [number] days after receipt of the preliminary title report on Parcel B, First Party will notify Second Party and Escrow Holder in writing as to any exceptions that First Party approves. All other exceptions will be considered disapproved by First Party. [If applicable, add: Any exception in the nature of a trust deed, mortgage, or other lien that is removable by payment of money by Escrow Holder from closing funds in this escrow, will be so removed at the close of this escrow by the payment from those funds by Escrow Holder].

Payment on Exchange

4.02. In the event that this escrow is closed as an exchange, the exchange value of Parcel A, less encumbrances, is deemed to be $_____. Second Party will pay to First Party, through this escrow at the close of escrow, in cash or by a cashier's [or certified] check, an amount equal to the difference, if any, between the exchange value of Parcel A and the total cost to Second Party of acquiring Parcel B. For these purposes, "total cost" includes all payments in cash by Second Party to Seller toward the purchase price of Parcel B, and all other costs to Second Party of acquiring Parcel B, including all escrow, title, and recording costs.

Sale

4.03. In the event that this transaction is not consummated as an exchange as of the date set for the close of escrow as provided in this Agreement, First Party will immediately sell to Second Party, and Second Party will immediately purchase from First Party, Parcel A at the purchase price of $_____, payable as follows: _____[set forth terms of purchase and, if applicable, security].

ARTICLE 5. ESCROW

Opening

5.01. Within _____[number] days after the execution of this Agreement, an escrow will be opened by both parties with Escrow Holder.

Deposit

5.02. Upon the opening of the escrow provided for in this Agreement, and as a condition of this Agreement, Second Party will deposit in escrow cash or a cashier's [or certified] check payable to Escrow Holder in the amount of $_____. This deposit must be used as follows:

(1) If this escrow is closed as a sale rather than as an exchange, the deposit will be applied to the purchase price of Parcel A.

(2) If this escrow is closed as an exchange, the deposit will reduce the amount payable, if any, by Second Party to First Party as provided in Article 4 of this Agreement. If that deposit exceeds the amount payable by Second Party to First Party under Article 4 of this Agreement, the excess will be refunded to Second Party at the close of escrow.

(3) If this escrow is canceled without title to Parcel A passing to Second Party due to a breach of this Agreement by Second Party, both First and Second Parties agree by initialing this provision that the amount deposited by Second Party upon opening of escrow pursuant to this Agreement constitutes a reasonable estimate under the circumstances existing at the time this Agreement is made of the damages First Party would sustain because of such a breach, and agree that the deposit may be retained by First Party as liquidated damages in the event of any default. Initialed by First Party:

_____ [initials of first party] Initialed by Second Party:

_____ [initials of second party]

In the event that this escrow does not close on or before that date, either party may, at that party's option, cancel this escrow; provided, however, that the cancellation or failure of this escrow to close, and Escrow Holder's return to the depositing party of the documents and funds so deposited, will not affect any liability of either party to the other resulting from a breach of this Agreement.

Method of Closing

6.02. The escrow provided for in this Agreement will close by Escrow Holder delivering a grant deed to Parcel A to Second Party only if the following conditions are satisfied, to the extent applicable:

_____ [value of Parcel A], showing title to Parcel A vested in Second Party, subject only to those matters set forth in Article 3 of this Agreement.

(2) In the event that this escrow is closed as an exchange rather than a sale, if Escrow Holder can deliver a grant deed to Parcel B to First Party and can obtain the usual form C.L.T.A. standard coverage policy of title insurance issued by

_____ [name of title company] with total liability in an amount equal to the agreed value of Parcel B, showing title to Parcel B vested in First Party, subject only to those matters set forth in Paragraph 4.01 of this Agreement, and if Escrow Holder holds for the account of First Party an amount equal to the exchange value of Parcel A less the cost to Second Party of acquiring Parcel B, as provided in Article 5 of this Agreement.

(3) In the event that this escrow is closed as a sale rather than an exchange, if Escrow Holder holds for the account of First Party the sum of $

_____ [set forth portion of purchase price and any notes or trust deeds required by P 4.03].

(4) If

_____ [list any other documents to be transferred through escrow] are executed and deposited into escrow.

This condition is solely for the benefit of _____[First Party or Second Party] and may be waived by _____[First Party or Second Party].

ARTICLE 9. POSSESSION

Transfer of Possession

9.01. First Party agrees to cooperate with Second Party in connection with the procurement, for the benefit of Second Party and solely at the expense of Second Party, of all required subdivision permits from the appropriate public authority or authorities having jurisdiction over Parcel A, and First Party agrees to execute any documents reasonably required in that connection. If this escrow is not closed by title to Parcel A passing to Second Party, Second Party will return Parcel A to First Party in the same condition and status as it was at the time this Agreement was executed, and will reimburse First Party for any and all damages to Parcel A or to First Party resulting from Second Party's presence on Parcel A.

In the event of such a refusal, First Party will have no liability for damages under this Agreement insofar as the refusal affects Parcel A, and Second Party will have no liability for damages under this Agreement insofar as the refusal affects Parcel B. Each party is taking title on the basis of the policy of title insurance that that party is to receive and on that party's inspection of the real property, and not on the basis of any representation or warranty made by the other party. Each party hereby disclaims any representation or warranties of any description respecting the real property involved, the title to that property, or its area, corners, utility, or condition. Escrow Holder will have no liability or responsibility with respect to the provisions of this Article 11, which memorializes the agreement of First Party and Second Party with respect to matters set forth in this Agreement.

CHAPTER 24 EXCHANGES OF REAL PROPERTY
PART IV. FORMS
B. Exchange Agreements

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.212

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.212 Three Party Option to Exchange

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an option agreement for a three party exchange in which the taxpayer gives the person interested in acquiring the taxpayer's property an option to acquire that property. If the interested party exercises the option, the taxpayer is required either to locate suitable property for that party to purchase and then exchange for the taxpayer's property, or to sell the taxpayer's property outright to that party. This arrangement is a type of "Alderson" exchange [see § 24.22[1]].

This form is intended to be used in conjunction with an exchange agreement and a purchase and sale agreement. For a basic exchange agreement, see § 24.210. For an exchange agreement providing in detail for the "sale in lieu" arrangement required by this option agreement, see § 24.211. For a basic sales agreement, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

This comment discusses only those provisions peculiar to this Form. For a discussion of exchange agreements in general, see § 24.210[1].

[b] Options Generally

An option to acquire real property is a contract between the owner of property and the potential purchaser, in which the owner grants the prospective purchaser the exclusive right for a specified period to acquire the property on the terms specified in the option contract [San Diego County v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] . Typically, the person giving the option is referred to as the "optionor," and the holder of the option is referred to as the "optionee." For the purposes of this agreement, the taxpayer is the optionor, and the person acquiring the taxpayer's property is the optionee. For a complete discussion of real property option contracts in general, see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property .

[c] Consideration

[i] Effect on Contract

If an option is supported by consideration, it is subject to the principles of contract law [Caras v. Parker (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 621, 626, 309 P.2d 104] . It is therefore subject to the statute of frauds and must be in writing [see Civ. Code § 1624(c)]. It is also irrevocable by the optionor, and may be exercised against that person's successors after death [San Diego County v. Miller (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 684, 688, 119 Cal. Rptr. 491, 532 P.2d 139] .

This form requires the party acquiring the taxpayer's property to provide a stated amount of money as consideration for the grant of the option. None of that amount will be applicable to the acquisition of the property [see [2], P 1.02, below]. For a provision stating that the option consideration is to be applied toward the acquisition of the property, see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property .

Application of the option consideration to the purchase price has tax consequences for the optionor. Taxation of any consideration applied to the purchase price is deferred until the option is exercised. However, to the extent the consideration for the option is not applicable to the purchase price, it is recognized as income during the year of its receipt [Hull v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (4th Cir. [T.C.] 1937) 87 F.2d 260, 261 ; see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property].

[ii] Retention of Consideration

This form provides that the taxpayer may retain the option consideration in the event that the person acquiring the taxpayer's property does not exercise the option within the option period. Retention of option consideration is permissible in option contracts [see Sheveland v. Reed (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d. 820, 822, 324 P.2d 633 ; see also Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property]. In contrast, the retention of deposits given pursuant to sales contracts as liquidated damages are restricted [see § 24.211[1][e]].

[d] Exercise of Option

This form provides that the person acquiring the taxpayer's property may exercise the option to acquire Parcel A by giving written notice to the taxpayer [see [2], P 2.01, below]. When an option is properly exercised, the optionor must convey the property on the terms set forth in the option contract [Schomaker v. Osborne (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d. 887, 890, 58 Cal. Rptr. 827 ; see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, ch. 70, Options (Matthew Bender)]. Therefore, at the time the option is drafted, the parties must contemplate and draft the terms of the sale or exchange. This may be accomplished by either incorporating the terms of sale or exchange into the option agreement, or by placing them in a separate sale or exchange agreement attached as an exhibit to the option agreement [see CALIFORNIA REAL ESTATE LAW & PRACTICE, Ch. 70, Options (Matthew Bender); see also Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property, § 22.200[1][d]]. This form requires the parties to attach both an exchange agreement and a sales agreement as exhibits to the option agreement, since the eventual transaction may be closed as either an exchange or a sale [see [2], PP 2.02, 2.03]. If the parties are unable to agree in advance on certain terms, such as interest rates, those terms may be left blank at the time the option agreement is executed and filled in when the sales or exchange agreement (as appropriate) is executed.

[e] Obligations After Exercise of Option

This agreement requires the taxpayer to locate Parcel B within a stated period of time after receiving notice that the party interested in acquiring Parcel A has exercised the option. If suitable property is found, the interested party must purchase that property for purposes of exchanging it for Parcel A if its cost does not exceed the cost of purchasing Parcel A [see [2], P 2.02, below]. The exchange is then transacted pursuant to the terms set forth in the attached exchange agreement.

If the taxpayer fails to locate other property by the stated date, the taxpayer must sell Parcel A for cash to the interested party pursuant to the terms set forth in the attached sales agreement [see [2], P 2.03, below]. The tax implications of a "sale in lieu" provision are discussed at Section 24.211[1][c].

[f] Termination of Option

[i] Automatic Expiration

This agreement provides that failure to exercise the option by the date set forth in the contract will automatically terminate it [see [2], P 1.03, below]. The effect of setting an exact time period is to make time of the essence as to the exercise of the option [Rosenaur v. Pacelli (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676, 345 P.2d 102] . For alternative provisions relating to the duration of the option period, see Chapter 22, Options to Purchase Real Property, § 22.210.

[ii] Title Problems After Recordation

The optionee may decide to record the option to protect his or her rights [see Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property, § 22.50]. If a recorded instrument creates or gives constructive notice of an unexercised option, the option will expire of record if no conveyance, contract, or other instrument that gives notice of exercise or extends the option is recorded within (1) six months after the option expires according to its terms; or (2) if the option provides no expiration date, six months after the date the instrument that creates or gives constructive notice of the option is recorded [Civ. Code § 884.010]. Once an option expires, the recorded instrument that created or gave constructive notice of the option ceases to operate as notice or to put any person on inquiry with respect to the exercise or existence of the option or of any contract, conveyance, or other writing that may have been executed pursuant to the option [Civ. Code § 884.020]. To ensure that a clear title on the property subject to the option can be obtained after the option expires, this form requires the optionee to execute a quitclaim deed when requested to do so by the optionor or title insurance company [see [2], P 1.03, below].

[2] Form

Three Party Option to Exchange

OPTION TO PURCHASE OR EXCHANGE

This agreement is made by and between _____[name of Optionor] ("Optionor") and _____[name of Optionee] ("Optionee").

Optionor and Optionee agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. OPTION TO PURCHASE

Grant of Option

1.01. For and in consideration of the sum of $_____ paid by Optionee to Optionor, Optionor grants to Optionee the right, option, and privilege to acquire, in the manner hereafter provided, that certain real property located in the [if applicable, add: City of _____,] County of _____, State of _____ ("Parcel A") and more particularly described in Exhibit A, which is attached to this Agreement and hereby incorporated by reference.

Consideration

1.02. As consideration for the grant of the option, Optionee has concurrently with the execution of this Agreement delivered to Optionor _____[cash or a cashier's (or certified) check] in the sum of $_____. This sum is solely in consideration for the grant of this option to Optionee, and will in no event be applied toward the acquisition of Parcel A by Optionee.

Termination

1.03. In the event that Optionee has not exercised this option in the manner hereafter provided on or before _____[hour] _____[A.M. or P.M.] on _____[date], this option will automatically terminate at that time and on that date without notice to Optionee, and this Agreement will be of no further force or effect. Thereafter, Optionee will promptly execute, acknowledge, and deliver to Optionor a quitclaim deed or similar document requested by Optionor or a title insurance company for the purpose of verifying the termination of this option and the release of Optionee's rights in the property.

Retention of Consideration

1.04. In the event this option or any extension of it is not exercised, all sums paid and services rendered to Optionor by Optionee will be retained by Optionor in consideration of the granting of this option.

ARTICLE 2. EXERCISE OF OPTION

Manner of Exercise

2.01. Optionee may exercise this option only by delivering written notice of the exercise to Optionor on or before the time and date specified in Paragraph 1.03 of this Agreement for the termination of the option.

Intent to Exchange

2.02. It is Optionor's intention to exchange Parcel A for other similar property. Therefore, upon timely exercise of this option by Optionee, Optionor will have _____[specify number not larger than 45] days within which to locate and notify Optionee of suitable exchange property ("Parcel B") that Optionor would be willing to exchange for Parcel A. Optionor will give notice to Optionee by executing the Exchange Agreement attached to this Agreement as Exhibit B ("Exchange Agreement"), and by delivering the Exchange Agreement to Optionee within the period specified in this Agreement. In the event that Optionor delivers the Exchange Agreement to Optionee within that period, Optionee will immediately enter into an escrow for the acquisition of title to Parcel B for the purpose of exchanging it with Optionor for Parcel A pursuant to the terms and conditions set forth in the Exchange Agreement. However, Optionee will not be obligated to acquire Parcel B if the sum of the purchase price plus other costs of acquisition and exchange exceed the sum of the purchase price of Parcel A and other acquisition costs that would have been incurred by Optionee had this transaction been closed as a sale rather than an exchange.

Required Sale

2.03. In the event that Optionor does not deliver the Exchange Agreement to Optionee in the manner required by Paragraph 2.02 of this Agreement, or in the event that the escrow between Optionee and the owner of Parcel B does not close by title to Parcel B passing to Optionee as of the deadline set forth in Paragraph 2.02, Optionor will immediately sell Parcel A to Optionee at a price and under the conditions set forth in the Sales Agreement attached to this Agreement as Exhibit C.

ARTICLE 3. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Notice

3.01. Any notice to be given or other document to be delivered by either party to the other under this Agreement must either be delivered in person to the other party or may be deposited in the United States mail in the State of California, duly certified or registered, with postage prepaid and addressed to the other party to whom intended as follows:

To Optionor: _____[name, address, and zip code]

To Optionee: _____[name, address, and zip code]

Either party to this Agreement may from time to time, by written notice to the other, designate a different address to be substituted for the one above. If any notice or other document is sent by certified or registered mail, as stated above, it will be deemed served or delivered 24 hours after mailing in the manner provided above.

Assignment

3.02. Optionee may not assign this option without the prior written consent of Optionor. Any attempt to assign this option in violation of this provision will terminate this option.

Inurement

3.03. Subject to the restrictions against assignment set forth in this Agreement, this Agreement will inure to the benefit of, and will be binding upon, the assigns, successors in interest, personal representatives, estates, heirs, and legatees of each of the parties to this Agreement.

Attorneys' Fees

3.04. In the event of any controversy, claim, or dispute between the parties arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the breach of this Agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover from the losing party reasonable expenses, attorneys' fees, and costs.

Entire Agreement

3.05. This Agreement contains the entire agreement of the parties relating to the option granted in this Agreement, and supersedes any prior written or oral agreements between them concerning the subject matter contained in this Agreement.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 24 EXCHANGES OF REAL PROPERTY
PART IV. FORMS
B. Exchange Agreements

9-24 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 24.213

AUTHOR: by Patricia Hughes Mills

§ 24.213 Nonsimultaneous (Deferred) Exchange Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an exchange agreement for a deferred exchange to be entered into between the taxpayer (seller of Parcel A) and the accommodator, who will purchase Parcel A from the taxpayer, sell it to the purchaser of Parcel A, then purchase the replacement property (Parcel B) for the taxpayer and transfer it to the taxpayer. While the accommodator could be the purchaser of Parcel A, it is more likely to be an independent third party who will act as accommodator for a fee. The taxpayer is engaging in a deferred exchange because the taxpayer's transfer of Parcel A and receipt of Parcel B are not simultaneous.

In drafting a deferred exchange agreement, careful consideration must be given to the rights and obligations imposed upon the accommodator. The taxpayer is transferring his or her property to the accommodator with only a contractual or a secured obligation of the accommodator to transfer another property or the proceeds back to the taxpayer. On the other hand, the accommodator is typically doing this for a fee, and will be unwilling to assume many liabilities or obligations. Therefore, the Exchange Agreement form provides that the taxpayer will indemnify the accommodator, and provides that the accommodator is not obligated to locate exchange property or assume any obligations with respect to the exchange property. The accommodator will be reimbursed for all acquisition costs, and the accommodator may purchase the replacement property directly in the taxpayer's name. The taxpayer, however, will want tight controls on the accommodator's ability to negotiate the terms of the purchase of the exchange property.

[b] Provision for Escrow Instructions

This form assumes that escrow instructions will be attached as an exhibit to the Exchange Agreement, and assumes that there will be two escrows: one for the sale of Parcel A and another for the acquisition of Parcel B. However, escrow instructions could be incorporated directly into this Agreement to avoid any potential problems that might result from having two documents with conflicting provisions [see § 24.211 [2] (form of a three party exchange or sale agreement with escrow instructions included)]. If separate escrow instructions are used, they should be read together with the exchange agreement unless the parties intend and understand that the escrow instructions modify or change the agreement [Swanson v. Thurber (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 171, 180, 281 P.2d 642] .

[c] "Sale in Lieu" Provision

This form does not include a "sale in lieu" provision [see § 24.211[1][c], [2]], which is used when the purchaser of the taxpayer's property is acquiring the exchange property for the taxpayer. In this form, the accommodator is obligated to acquire the taxpayer's property and sell it to the purchaser of Parcel A. The taxpayer receives cash only if he or she does not designate replacement property for the accommodator to acquire on the taxpayer's behalf or the agreement is otherwise terminated by its terms.

[d] Requirements for Deferred Exchange

[i] Identification and Receipt

Nonrecognition treatment does not apply to a nonsimultaneous exchange of property if (1) the property to be received in the exchange is not identified before the day that is 45 days after the date on which the taxpayer transfers the property relinquished in the exchange [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(A)]; or (2) the property to be received by the taxpayer is received after the earlier of (a) the day that is 180 days after the date on which the taxpayer transfers the property relinquished in the exchange, or (b) the due date (determined with regard to extensions) for the transferor's income tax return for the taxable year in which the transfer of the relinquished property occurs [I.R.C. § 1031(a)(3)(B)]. Final regulations have been issued clarifying the identification and receipt requirements, and are generally effective for transfers of property after June 9, 1991 [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1; see also §§ 24.25, 24.40[4][b], [c]]. Replacement property is treated as identified only if it is designated as replacement property in either (1) a written agreement covering the exchange that is signed by all parties before the end of the identification period, or (2) a written document signed by the taxpayer and hand-delivered or mailed, telecopied, or otherwise sent before the end of the identification period to a person involved in the exchange (such as an intermediary, escrow agent, or title company) other than the taxpayer or a related party [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(2)]. The replacement property must be unambiguously described, with a legal description or street address acceptable [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(c)(3)]. This form complies with these identification and receipt requirements.

In the deferred exchange, it is important that the taxpayer does not actually or constructively receive money or other property before the taxpayer receives the like kind replacement property (without the recognition of gain). If the taxpayer does receive money or its equivalent (under general constructive receipt rules), the transaction constitutes a sale and not a deferred exchange [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(f)] For further discussion of constructive receipt in the exchange context, see Section 24.40[4][d].

[ii] Safe Harbor: Security or Guarantee Arrangements

The use of various guarantee or security arrangements is common in deferred exchanges due to the unwillingness of taxpayers to rely on the accommodator's unsecured promise to transfer the like-kind replacement property. Intermediary arrangements may be used because the purchaser of the taxpayer's property may be unwilling or unable to acquire the replacement property. The use of such arrangements, however, raises issues concerning actual or constructive receipt. Therefore, the regulations provide four safe harbors that protect the taxpayer from being treated as if actual or constructive receipt of money or other property has taken place. [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g); see also § 24.40 [4][e]].

This form provides that the accommodator's obligations will be secured by a letter of credit, which conforms with the first safe harbor in the regulations dealing with security or guarantee arrangements [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(2); see also § 24.40[4][e][ii]]. Under this rule, the transferee's obligation to transfer the replacement property to the taxpayer may be secured or guaranteed by one or more of the following: (1) a mortgage, deed of trust or other security interest (other than cash or a cash equivalent); (2) a standby letter of credit that does not allow the taxpayer to draw on the letter of credit except upon a default of the transferee's obligation to transfer like kind property; or (3) a guarantee of a third party [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(2)(i)]. This safe harbor ceases to apply if at any time the taxpayer has an immediate ability or unrestricted right to receive money or other property pursuant to the security or guarantee arrangement [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(2)(i)].

For a discussion of the other safe harbors [see Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(3)-(6)], including the use of a qualified intermediary, see Section 24.40 [4][e][iii]-[v]. Note that under all of the safe harbors, the taxpayer must have no rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of money or other property before the end of the exchange period [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)(i)]. However, the agreement may provide that if a taxpayer has not identified replacement property by the end of the identification period, the taxpayer may have rights to receive, pledge, borrow, or otherwise obtain the benefits of money or other property at any time after the end of the identification period [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(6)(i)].

[e] Acquisition and Closing Costs

Certain acquisition and closing costs may be paid by the qualified intermediary, without resulting in constructive receipt to the taxpayer of the remaining funds. These costs include items that relate to the disposition of the relinquished property or to the acquisition of the replacement property and are listed as the responsibility of a buyer or seller in the typical closing statement under local standards [Treas. Reg. § 1.1031(k)-1(g)(7)(ii)]. These types of costs are taken into account in determining the "Exchange Value" in this form.

ARTICLE 2. EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY

Agreement to Exchange

2.01. The parties agree that, on or before the applicable conveyance dates specified in Paragraph 1.03 of this Agreement, (1) First Party will convey Parcel A to Second Party, and Second Party will convey to First Party the Exchange Parcel(s).

Acquisition of Exchange Parcel(s)

2.02.(a) First Party must designate to Second Party the property or properties to be acquired by the Second Party as the Exchange Parcel(s). First Party has the right to designate Exchange Parcels anywhere in the United States of America. First Party must make the designation of the Exchange Parcel(s) on or before midnight of the 45th day after the Conveyance Date of Parcel A. First Party must make the designation in writing, and must hand deliver, mail, or telecopy this notice (the Exchange Notice) to Second Party. Each such Exchange Notice from First Party must adequately identify the designated Exchange Parcel(s), specify the Exchange Value (exclusive of expenses and closing costs) that First Party will allow for the parcel, state the total purchase price that should be paid for the parcel, indicate whether an option to purchase the parcel should be sought, specify any other terms and conditions of purchase that Second Party should attempt to obtain, and set forth any other information that will assist in the purchase of the parcel.

(b) First Party may designate more than one property as Exchange Parcels, subject to the following restrictions:

(1) First Party may designate a maximum of three properties of any fair market value; or

(2) First Party may designate any number of properties, so long as their aggregate fair market value does not exceed 200 percent of the aggregate fair market value of Parcel A.

(c) First Party may revoke or modify any designation of Exchange Parcel made under this Agreement, prior to midnight of the 45th day after the Conveyance Date of Parcel A. Any such revocation or modification must be in writing and made in the manner described above for designating Exchange Parcels.

(d) Upon receipt of an Exchange Notice, Second Party must take all necessary steps in order to be able to purchase the designated Exchange Parcel(s) within the time limitations specified in this Agreement, in accordance with the terms contained in the Exchange Notice. Second Party must keep First Party currently informed of the status of negotiations on all Exchange Parcels. Further, Second Party must not, without the prior written consent of First Party, exercise an option to purchase an Exchange Parcel or purchase an Exchange Parcel unless First Party has already approved the following: the title to the Exchange Parcel (as evidenced by a current preliminary title report on the property); the Exchange Value and the purchase price of the Exchange Parcel; the terms and conditions upon which the Exchange Parcel may be purchased; and any other documents, agreements, warranties, licenses, leases, or other matters applicable to the Exchange Parcel.

All options and agreements to purchase Exchange Parcels must be executed by Second Party in its name, and Second Party must enter into an Exchange Escrow (with an Exchange Escrow Holder) pursuant to which Second Party will acquire the Exchange Parcel(s). Second Party must submit all escrow instructions, amendments to escrow instructions, and agreements with the seller(s) of the Exchange Parcel(s) to First Party within three business days of receipt for approval by First Party prior to execution by Second Party.

Second Party must proceed to perform its obligations under the Exchange Purchase Agreement diligently and in good faith and to acquire the Exchange Parcel(s). Second Party will not be liable for any failure to close or to acquire the Exchange Parcel(s) for any reason other than Second Party's willful default in the performance of its obligations under the Exchange Purchase Agreement or under this Agreement.

Except as provided below, title to each Exchange Parcel must be recorded in the name of Second Party on or before the Conveyance Date of the parcel. Second Party must convey each Exchange Parcel to First Party subject only to any title defects or exceptions that were approved in writing by First Party prior to the acquisition of the parcel by Second Party. Notwithstanding the foregoing, title to the Exchange Parcel(s) may be recorded directly in the name of First Party to save the expense of additional transfer taxes, or when Second Party exercises its option to deed or cause the Exchange Parcel(s) to be deeded directly to First Party.

(e) Second Party acknowledges that all Exchange Parcels designated by First Party under this Agreement will be parcels that First Party desires to acquire for investment purposes or for use in its business. Therefore, Second Party agrees that it will not sell, transfer, assign, or convey any right, title, or interest in any Exchange Parcel to any party other than First Party without obtaining First Party's prior written consent.

(f) If Second Party expends any amount in accordance with this Paragraph 2.02 in attempting to purchase an Exchange Parcel (including any unrecoverable amount expended for an option to purchase such a parcel), and Second Party is subsequently unable to purchase the parcel, or First Party subsequently (but prior to the execution by Second Party of a contract for its purchase) disapproves the parcel as an Exchange Parcel, the amount expended by Second Party will constitute a cost of the exchange to First Party if the cost would have been includable in computing the Exchange Value of the parcel. First Party shall promptly reimburse Second Party for all such costs as soon as they are incurred.

(g) Second Party will incur no liability to First Party under this Agreement and will not be deemed to be in default under this Agreement on account of Second Party being unable to acquire any Exchange Parcel on terms and conditions specified by First Party in the Exchange Notice or otherwise being unable to perform under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, unless (1) the failure to acquire the Exchange Parcel(s) or to perform is due to a willful default by Second Party under this Agreement or under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, and (2) the willful default has not been consented to or waived in writing by First Party. If Second Party attempts but fails to acquire the Exchange Parcel(s) after entering into an Exchange Purchase Agreement, Second Party must, at the option of First Party, assign to First Party (without recourse and without any warranty or representation in connection with the assignment) any rights, claims, causes of action, or other rights that Second Party may have under the Exchange Purchase Agreement or otherwise.

(h) In addition to the limitations on Second Party's obligations as set forth elsewhere in this Agreement, Second Party will have no obligation to do the following:

(1) To seek to locate potential Exchange Parcels for First Party.

(2) To make factual or legal investigations regarding any Exchange Parcel or potential Exchange Parcel.

(3) To perform any repairs, improvements, or maintenance of any nature to the assets of any Exchange Parcel, either prior or subsequent to the acquisition by Second Party.

(4) To agree to or to subject itself to any nonmonetary obligations to the former owner of an Exchange Parcel in connection with the acquisition of the Exchange Parcel.

Escrows

2.03. The exchange of Parcel A and the Exchange Parcel(s) must be consummated by means of an escrow, which is to be opened with Escrow Holder. The escrow instructions must be substantially in the form of the instructions attached to this Agreement as Exhibit B.

Indemnification

2.04. First Party hereby agrees to indemnify and to defend Second Party against, and to hold Second Party harmless from, all losses, damages, liability, costs, and expenses (including reasonable legal fees and disbursements) imposed or asserted against Second Party relating to any of the following:

(1) Second Party's good faith but unsuccessful attempt to acquire Exchange Parcels, unless (i) the failure resulted from Second Party's willful default under this Agreement or under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, and (ii) the default was not approved or waived in writing by First Party.

(2) Any act, condition, state of fact, occurrence, matter, or claim with respect to an Exchange Parcel that took place prior to or coincident with the former owner's conveyance of the Exchange Parcel under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, unless (i) the act, condition, state of fact, occurrence, matter, or claim resulted from Second Party's willful default under this Agreement or under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, and (ii) the default was not approved or waived in writing by First Party.

(3) Any act, condition, state of fact, occurrence, matter, or claim with respect to an Exchange Parcel that took place subsequent to the transfer of the Exchange Parcel to First Party, unless (i) the act, condition, state of fact, occurrence, matter or claim resulted from Second Party's willful default under this Agreement or under the Exchange Purchase Agreement, and (ii) the default was not approved or waived in writing by First Party.

ARTICLE 3. VALUE OF PROPERTY AND EXCHANGE CREDIT

Value of Properties

3.01. For purposes of the exchange, Parcel A is deemed to have (1) a fair market value of $_____[insert value], (2) total encumbrances against it in the sum of approximately $_____[insert value], and (3) an equity of approximately $_____[insert value]. [Insert similar information for the Exchange Parcel if it has already been identified.]

Additional Payments

3.02. If there is a difference in the respective equities of Parcel A and the Exchange Parcel(s), this amount may be offset by a payment, in cash or notes, through escrow.

Exchange Account

3.03. If the exchange is not closed on the Conveyance Date of Parcel A, an Exchange Account will be maintained under this Agreement until the Closing Date. The Exchange Account must show all of the following, as of any given date:

(1) The Exchange Value of Parcel A, as a credit to the account;

(2) The Exchange Value of each Exchange Parcel acquired by Second Party and conveyed to First Party under this Agreement (as shown by the escrow closing or settlement, or as otherwise agreed to by the parties), as a debit or a charge against the Account; and

(3) The unrecovered balance of the Exchange Value of Parcel A (the "Exchange Credit").

Notwithstanding anything contained in this Paragraph to the contrary, Second Party will not be required to segregate any funds received on account of a disposition of Parcel A, and First Party will have no entitlement to those funds, or any interest in those funds, other than as provided in this Agreement.

Interest

3.04. Second Party must pay to First Party in arrears, monthly, on the last day of each month, all accrued interest on the Exchange Account at a rate equal to _____[insert applicable rate].

ARTICLE 4. CONVEYANCE OF EXCHANGE PARCELS

Consummation of Exchange

4.01.(a) On or before the Conveyance Date for Parcel A, the following must occur:

(1) First Party must deposit with the Escrow Holder or otherwise deliver to Second Party the deed conveying Parcel A to Second Party.

(2) Second Party must deposit with the Escrow Holder or otherwise deliver to First Party its written acknowledgment that it holds on its books and pursuant to this Agreement for the benefit of First Party an "Exchange Credit" equal to the amount of the Exchange Account for Parcel A.

(3) Both parties must deposit in the escrow or otherwise deliver to the other party, all funds, instructions, and documents that are required to close the escrow for Parcel A.

(b) Following the Conveyance Date for Parcel A, the exchange will continue until the Closing Date, and Second Party must continue to purchase the Exchange Parcel(s), in the manner specified in this Agreement. Notwithstanding the foregoing, each Exchange Parcel must be conveyed to First Party (through escrow or otherwise) as of the date that record title to the Exchange Parcel is vested in Second Party.

(c) When all Exchange Parcels have been conveyed to First Party on or before the Closing Date, the exchange will be completed. In all events, the exchange must be completed on or before the Closing Date. If the Exchange Value of the Exchange Parcel(s) conveyed to First Party under this Agreement exceeds the Exchange Value of Parcel A, First Party must pay an amount equal to the excess to Second Party in cash or notes on the Conveyance Date for the Exchange Parcel(s). If the Exchange Value of Parcel A exceeds the Exchange Value of the Exchange Parcel(s) conveyed to First Party under this Agreement, Second Party must pay an amount equal to the excess to First Party in cash, on the Conveyance Date for the Exchange Parcel(s). All other documents between the parties with respect to the exchange will be settled on the Closing Date or as soon thereafter as possible.

Security

4.02. The obligations of Second Party pursuant to this Agreement will be entirely unsecured.

[OR]

[If Second Party's obligations are to be secured by a letter of credit, use:]

Security

4.02. The obligations of Second Party under this Agreement must be secured by an irrevocable "stand-by" Letter of Credit issued by _____[name of desired financial institution]. The Letter of Credit must be dated as of the Conveyance Date of Parcel A, and must be in the amount of the Exchange Value. Further, the Letter of Credit must be non-negotiable and nontransferable (except together with the contractual rights of First Party under this Agreement). The term of the Letter of Credit must not expire prior to the 180th day following the Conveyance Date of Parcel A. The Letter of Credit must serve to underwrite and to secure the obligations of Second Party under this Agreement. Further, it must be payable to First Party only upon First Party providing issuer with a written statement that First Party is entitled to draw on the Letter of Credit on account of Second Party's default.

[Continue with the following:]

Termination by First Party

4.03. If Second Party fails to convey the Exchange Parcel(s) pursuant to Paragraph 2.01 of this Agreement prior to the Closing Date, then, in addition to its other remedies, First Party will have the right to terminate this Agreement by notice to Second Party. In the event of such a termination, the following must occur:

(1) Second Party must (i) immediately convey all of its right, title, or interest in and to Parcel A or all proceeds from the sale of Parcel A to First Party, and (ii) immediately transfer to First Party all right, title, and interest of Second Party in and to all Exchange Parcels.

(2) First Party must concurrently (i) pay to Second Party a sum equal to all costs incurred by Second Party in connection with the acquisition of the Exchange Parcel(s), to the extent the costs would have been includable in computing the Exchange Value of the parcel(s) had this Agreement been consummated, plus any amount due Second Party under Paragraph 4.01(c) of this Agreement, and (ii) assume, and indemnify Second Party against, all obligations of Second Party under all options, contracts, and other documents assigned to First Party under this Paragraph.

Upon the completion of such a termination, neither party will have any further right against or duty to the other under this Agreement, except as stated above.

ARTICLE 5. GENERAL MATTERS RELATING TO PARCEL A

Title to Parcel A

5.01.(a) Parcel A will be conveyed to Second Party by grant deed, subject only to (1) all matters ascertainable by a reasonable inspection and survey of Parcel A, and (2) the exceptions set forth in the preliminary title report describing Parcel A, which must be reviewed and approved by Second Party prior to the Conveyance Date for Parcel A.

(b) First Party must not cause or voluntarily permit any change to occur in the condition of title to Parcel A prior to its Conveyance Date. Second Party must have the right, at any time prior to the recordation of the deed to Parcel A, to terminate this Agreement, without liability of either party to the other, if Second Party will be unable to obtain, at standard premium rates, a CLTA standard form policy of title insurance, in the amount of the Exchange Value of Parcel A, showing title to Parcel A vested in Second Party free and clear of all matters except those described in the immediately preceding Subparagraph (a).

Termination by Second Party

5.02. In the event of any termination of this Agreement by Second Party by reason of the inability of First Party to satisfy its obligations under Paragraph 5.01 of this Agreement, First Party must indemnify, defend, and hold Second Party free and harmless from any loss, liability, claims, or demands arising out of actions taken by Second Party in furtherance of this Agreement in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

ARTICLE 6. MISCELLANEOUS

Closing Costs and Taxes

6.01.(a) All closing costs incurred in connection with the conveyance of Parcel A to Second Party must be borne by Second Party and must reduce the Exchange Value as provided in Paragraph 1.10 of this Agreement. All closing costs incurred by Second Party in connection with the acquisition of the Exchange Parcel(s) or the conveyance of the Exchange Parcel(s) to First Party must be borne by Second Party and included in the Exchange Value of the Exchange Parcel(s). With respect to each such Exchange Parcel and Parcel A, closing costs will include the cost of real estate transfer taxes, recording fees, title insurance costs and premiums (if required), escrow fees, brokerage commissions, and all other costs incurred by the Escrow Holder or Exchange Escrow Holder in connection with the conveyance of each such parcel. Title insurance must be issued to each party upon that party's request, by an issuer designated by the party, covering any or all of the real estate conveyed to the party pursuant to this Agreement.

(b) Real property taxes on each Exchange Parcel must be prorated between Second Party and the owner of the Exchange Parcel. The resulting debit or credit will be taken into account in computing the Exchange Value of the Exchange Parcel. These taxes will not be prorated between Second Party and First Party.

Brokerage Commissions

6.02. Any real estate brokerage commissions payable as a result of these transactions must be paid and designated in the escrow instructions for the conveyance of each parcel and will reduce the Exchange Value of Parcel A or increase the Exchange Value of the or an Exchange Parcel, as the case may be.

Independent Obligations

6.03. The obligations of each of the parties to this transaction are conditioned upon the other party's performance of his, her, or its obligations under this Agreement and the close of escrow on all transactions covered by this Agreement. The conveyance of Parcel A to Second Party must occur prior to the conveyance of the Exchange Parcel(s).

Prohibition Against Assignment

6.04. This Agreement is not assignable by either of the parties to this Agreement.

Notices

6.05. All notices and other communications required or permitted to be given or delivered under this Agreement must be in writing and must be delivered personally or be sent by first-class mail, registered or certified, with postage prepaid, addressed to the party intended at the address set forth above, or at any other address that is designated by the party by notice given to the other party in the manner described in this Paragraph. All notices and other communications delivered by mail, in the manner set forth above, must be deemed to have been delivered to and received by the addressee on the day following the date on which the notice or communication is deposited in the United States mail. All notices and other communications delivered personally to and received by a party are deemed received on the date of the personal delivery.

Time of Essence

6.06. Time is of the essence of this Agreement. Notwithstanding the above, if the date on which any action is required to be taken under this Agreement falls on any Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the action must be taken on the next business day following that date.

Counterparts; Entire Agreement

6.07.(a) This Agreement may be executed in one or more counterparts, each of which will be deemed an original, but all of which will constitute one and the same instrument.

(b) This instrument constitutes the entire agreement of the parties, and supersedes any prior written or oral agreements between them concerning the subject matter contained in this Agreement. There are no representations, agreements, arrangements, or understandings, oral or written, between the parties, relating to the subject matter contained in this Agreement, that are not fully expressed in this Agreement.

Amendments

6.08. This Agreement may not be amended or modified in any respect whatsoever except by an instrument in writing signed by both of the parties to this Agreement.

Attorneys' Fees

6.09. In the event of any controversy, claim, or dispute between the parties arising out of or relating to this Agreement or the breach of it, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover from the other party reasonable expenses, attorneys' fees, and costs.

Scope

§ 25SA.01 Special Alert--Truth in Lending Act Disclosure Requirements

On and after July 27, 2009, a creditor will have to comply with some enhanced disclosure requirements [see Pub. L. 110-289, § 2502(a),(c)] under the Truth in Lending Act [see § 25.23] in the case of any extension of consumer credit that is secured by the dwelling of the consumer, if the transaction is subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act [see § 25.24]. A future release of this publication will incorporate the following changes at appropriate places in this chapter. (The requirements of 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)-(E), listed below, will not apply to extensions of credit relating to timeshare plans described in 11 U.S.C. § 101(53D) [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(G)], however.)

- The creditor will have to make good faith estimates of the disclosures required under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a) and then mail or deliver them not later than three business days after receipt of the borrower's loan application, which will have to be at least seven business days before consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(A)].

- To expedite consummation of a transaction, if the consumer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency, the consumer will be permitted to waive or modify the timing requirements for disclosures under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(A). To effect a waiver or modification, the consumer will have to provide to the creditor a dated, written statement describing the emergency and specifically waiving or modifying those timing requirements, which statement bears the signature of all consumers entitled to receive the required disclosures; and the creditor will have to provide to the consumers, at or before the time of such waiver or modification, the final disclosures required by 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(1) [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(F)].

- The required disclosures will have to include this statement in conspicuous type size and format [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)(i)]: "You are not required to complete this agreement merely because you have received these disclosures or signed a loan application."

- The required disclosures will have to be provided in the form of final disclosures at the time of consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)(ii)].

- In any case in which the disclosure statement contains an annual percentage rate of interest that is no longer accurate, as determined under 15 U.S.C. § 1606(c), the creditor will have to furnish an additional, corrected statement to the borrower, not later than three business days before the date of consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(D)].

- The consumer will have to receive the disclosures before paying any fee to the creditor or other person in connection with the consumer's application for the extension of credit. If the disclosures are mailed to the consumer, the consumer will be considered to have received them three business days after they are mailed. A creditor or other person will be permitted to impose a fee for obtaining the consumer's credit report before the consumer has received the disclosures, provided the fee is bona fide and reasonable in amount [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(E)].

- On and after January 27, 2011, or an earlier compliance date established by a regulation of the Federal Reserve Board [see Pub. L. 110-289, § 2502(a),(c)(2)], if the annual rate of interest is variable, or the regular payments may otherwise be variable, then in addition to the other disclosures required by 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a), the disclosures provided under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b) will have to label the payment schedule as "Payment Schedule: Payments Will Vary Based on Interest Rate Changes." Also, the disclosures will have to state, in conspicuous type size and format, examples of adjustments to the regular required payment on the extension of credit based on the change in the interest rates specified by the contract for such extension of credit. Among the examples to be provided is an example that reflects the maximum payment amount of the regular required payments on the extension of credit, based on the maximum interest rate allowed under the contract, in accordance with the rules of the Federal Reserve Board [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(C)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.10

§ 25.10 Role of Attorney in Loan Transactions

An attorney is not likely to be actively involved in a client's real estate loan transaction unless the transaction is large or the client encounters problems during the transaction. Even in relatively small transactions, however, an attorney is expected to have sufficient background information and a working understanding of the lending industry to advise the client and to review documents. In large transactions, the attorney must review or draft some or all of the security instruments for the loan transaction [see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing]. Whether drafting or reviewing documents or monitoring the overall progress of the loan funding, counsel needs to be familiar with the overall loan approval process.

In large real estate loan transactions, counsel for the lender may require as a condition of the loan that the borrower's counsel give his or her opinion on the enforceability of the loan documents against the borrower. This legal opinion will also give the parties the opportunity to allocate, before the consummation of the transaction, any risks identified by the attorney.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.11

§ 25.11 Persons Who Assist Brokers With Mortgage Loan Transactions

Certain individuals who assist brokers with regard to mortgage loan transactions are excluded from the definition of real estate broker. This includes persons who solicit borrowers or lenders, negotiate loans, collect payments, or perform services for borrowers or lenders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(1)]. Specifically, a real estate broker's employee who, on behalf of the broker, assists the broker in meeting the broker's obligations to its customers in residential mortgage loan transactions, when the lender is an institutional lender [see Fin. Code § 50003], is not treated as a real estate broker, provided the employee does not participate in any negotiations occurring between the principals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(1)]. However, a broker must exercise reasonable supervision and control over the activities of the nonlicensed employees and must comply with the branch office licensing requirements for each location where the nonlicensed persons are employed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10163]. In any case, these provisions do not restrict the ability of the Real Estate Commissioner to discipline a broker or corporate broker licensee or its designated officer, or both the corporate broker licensee and its designated officer, for misconduct of a nonlicensed employee, or to adopt, amend, or repeal rules or regulations governing the employment or supervision of an employee who is a nonlicensed person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.12

§ 25.12 Sources of Real Estate Loans

[1] Types of Lenders

Sources for real estate loans include institutional lenders, such as commercial banks [see § 25.12[2]], savings associations [see § 25.12[3]], insurance companies, mortgage companies, pension funds, and real estate syndicates [see Ch. 29A, Joint Ventures , and Ch. 29B, Nonpublic Real Estate Syndicates]. Noninstitutional lenders (for example, sellers of property and other private lenders) constitute another source. Government sources of loans include the California Department of Veterans Affairs (Cal-Vet) [see § 25.13[3]] and the federal Small Business Administration. The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and the federal Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) do not directly make loans but guarantee them or insure them [see § 25.13[1], [2]].

For an outline of the types of loans generally made by different lenders, see § 25.110. For further discussion of available loan sources, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 100, Methods of Financing , and Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[2] Commercial Banks

A commercial bank may be either a national or state bank. National banks are organized under federal law [12 U.S.C. § 21 et seq.] and regulated by the Comptroller of the Currency [12 C.F.R. pt. 1 et seq.]. National banks are also regulated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System [12 C.F.R. pt. 201 et seq.] because every national bank must be a member of the Federal Reserve System [see 12 U.S.C. § 282]. A national bank operating in California is also subject to the Banking Law [Fin. Code § 99 et seq.], except to the extent that the Banking Law is inconsistent with and infringes on paramount federal laws governing national banks [Fin. Code § 100(b)].

A California state bank is a corporation incorporated under the General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code § 100 et seq.] that is, with the approval of the Commissioner of Financial Institutions, incorporated for the purpose of engaging in, or that is authorized by the commissioner to engage in, the commercial or industrial banking business [Fin. Code § 101(a)]. State banks are subject to the Banking Law [Fin. Code § 99 et seq.] and are regulated by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [Fin. Code §§ 200(b), 210, 210.5(b); see Fin. Code § 200 et seq.; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1.1 et seq.]. They are also governed by the General Corporation Law and all other state laws governing corporations generally, to the extent that those laws are not inconsistent with the Banking Law [Fin. Code § 101].

State banks may elect to be members of the Federal Reserve System [see 12 U.S.C. § 321]. If this election is made, the member bank is subject both to state law and to all federal laws and regulations applicable to member banks of the Federal Reserve System [see 12 U.S.C. §§ 324, 330]. In response to a volatile lending environment and in order to maintain the quality of competition between federal and state lenders, the state legislature has authorized state banks to make loans on the same terms allowed to federally chartered banks by the Comptroller of the Currency [see Civ. Code § 1916.12].

For a summary of the loan policies of different lenders, including commercial banks, see § 25.110. For an expanded discussion of loan policies of commercial banks, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[3] Savings Associations

Federally chartered savings associations are regulated under the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 [12 U.S.C. § 1461 et seq.] and are subject to regulations of the Office of Thrift Supervision [12 C.F.R. pt. 500 et seq.]. California-chartered savings associations are governed by the Savings Association Law [Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.] and are regulated by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [Fin. Code §§ 200(b), 210, 210.5(c); see Fin. Code § 200 et seq.; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1.1 et seq.].

For a summary of the lending policies and restrictions of savings associations and other lenders, see § 25.110. For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[4] Industrial Loan Companies

An industrial loan company (also known as a thrift and loan company) is a premium finance agency, which is a company that, by the terms of its authority to engage in the industrial loan business, is permitted to issue or sell investment certificates and is subject to specified limitations on its business and other activities [Fin. Code §§ 18003, 18560; see Fin. Code § 18596; see also Fin. Code § 18003 (these terms and related governing statutes do not apply to industrial banks, which are subject to and governed by Fin. Code § 1400 et seq.)]. These companies are governed by the Industrial Loan Law (also referred to as the Thrift and Loan Law) [Fin. Code § 18000 et seq.] and are regulated by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [Fin. Code §§ 200(b), 210, 210.5(d); see Fin. Code § 200 et seq.; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1.1 et seq.].

Loans made by industrial loan companies are strictly regulated as to type, terms, and maximum charges [see Fin. Code § 18190 et seq.]. However, industrial loan companies are not limited by statute in the interest rate they may charge and are not subject to the usury provisions of the California Constitution [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1]. Most real estate loans made by industrial loan companies are so-called "hard-money seconds," under which the property owner borrows money secured by a second deed of trust for some purpose other than to acquire the property [see § 25.14[1]].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[5] Residential Mortgage Lenders

The California Residential Mortgage Lending Act (RMLA) [Fin. Code § 50000 et seq.] governs persons engaged in the business of making or servicing residential mortgage loans in California. In general, persons engaged in these activities must obtain a license from the Commissioner of Corporations, unless the person or transaction is excepted from a definition or exempt from licensure by a provision of the RMLA or a rule of the Commissioner [Fin. Code § 50002(a); see Fin. Code §§ 50120 et seq., 50130]. Among the exempt persons under the RMLA are any bank, trust company, insurance company, or industrial loan company doing business under the authority or in accordance with a license, certificate, or charter issued by the United States or any state, district, territory, or commonwealth of the United States that is authorized to do business in California; a federally chartered savings and loan association, federal savings bank, or federal credit union that is authorized to transact business in California; and a savings and loan association, savings bank, or credit union organized under the laws of this or any other state that is authorized to transact business in California [see Fin. Code § 50002(c) (list of exempt persons)].

For persons who are subject to the RMLA, detailed provisions govern their financial condition and loan transactions [Fin. Code § 50200 et seq.]. Among the matters covered by the RMLA are:

- Required annual audits of a licensee's books by an independent certified accountant [see Fin. Code § 50200].
- A licensee's minimal tangible net worth [see Fin. Code § 50201].
- Procedures for handling escrow funds, trust accounts, and related financial matters [see Fin. Code § 50202].
- Limits on fees to be charged to borrowers and related matters [see Fin. Code § 50203].
- Prohibited activities [see Fin. Code § 50204].
- A licensee's maintenance of a surety bond [see Fin. Code § 50205].

The RMLA also authorizes licensees to provide brokerage services to a borrower, but strictly regulates the performance of these services by, among other things, (1) requiring the execution of a written loan brokerage agreement, and (2) imposing numerous restrictions and various reporting and disclosure requirements [see Fin. Code § 50700 et seq.].

For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[6] Mortgage Loan Originators

[a] Regulatory Scheme

The Secure and Fair Enforcement for Mortgage Licensing Act of 2008 [see 12 U.S.C. § 5101 et seq.; see also Pub. L. No. 110-289, § 1501 et seq. (July 30, 2008)], also known as the S.A.F.E. Mortgage Licensing Act, requires all states to license and register mortgage loan originators through the Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System and Registry (NMLSR), developed and maintained by the Conference of State Bank Supervisors and the American Association of Residential Mortgage Regulators. Provisions bringing California law into conformity with the federal law are found in the Real Estate Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.01 et seq.], in the Finance Lenders Law [see Fin. Code §§ 22012-22014, 22105.1-22105.4, 22109.1-22109.6], and in the Residential Mortgage Lending Act [see Fin. Code §§ 50002.5, 50003.5, 50003.6, 50140 et seq., 50150 et seq.].

Mortgage loan originators are only individuals. Corporations, partnerships, and other entities that are not individuals, are not subject to the licensing requirements (and related requirements) imposed on mortgage loan originators; however, any such entity that employs or compensates a mortgage loan originator is, to some extent, subject to related regulation.

For regulatory purposes, a "mortgage loan originator" is an individual who, for compensation or gain, or in the expectation of compensation or gain, takes a residential mortgage loan application or offers or negotiates terms of a residential mortgage loan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.01(b)(1); Fin. Code §§ 22013(a), 50003.5(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.01(d); Fin. Code §§ 22012(e), 50003(p) (definition of residential mortgage loan)]. Generally, a license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.02(b)(2); Fin. Code §§ 22109.6, 50002(d)]. Exemptions from regulation are allowed for individuals who, although engaged in activities similar or related to mortgage loan origination (such as administrative and clerical tasks supporting loan origination, or renegotiation of existing loans by employees for the employer's own account), do not warrant individualized regulation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.01(b)(2); Fin. Code §§ 22013(b), 50003.5(b)]. Loan processors and underwriters generally are not subject to licensing requirements if they work as employees, but those who work as independent contractors must comply with licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.03; Fin. Code §§ 22014, 50002(f), 50003.6]. An employee of a regulated financial institution, who engages in mortgage loan origination activities, can be exempt from licensing requirements if he or she is registered as a mortgage loan originator with the Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System and Registry [Fin. Code § 50002(e); see Fin. Code § 50003.5(c) (definition of registered mortgage loan originator)].

In compliance with licensing requirements, every mortgage loan originator must register with, and maintain a valid unique identifier issued by, the Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System and Registry [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.17; Fin. Code §§ 22100(e), 22109.6, 50002.5(d), 50146]. The NMLSR identifier must be displayed and disclosed in connection with various mortgage loan origination activities [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10140.6(b), 10235.5, 10236.4; Fin. Code §§ 22347, 50209, 50701(c)].

[b] Real Estate Licensees

An individual real estate licensee must obtain a license endorsement to act as a mortgage loan originator [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.02(b)(2); see Stats. 2009, ch. 160, § 87 (license endorsement need not be obtained before December 1, 2010, and must be obtained by December 31, 2010)]. However, an individual who only performs real estate brokerage services [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a), (b) (definition)] need not have the license endorsement unless he or she is compensated by a lender, a mortgage loan originator, or an agent of a lender or mortgage loan originator [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10166.01(b)(2)(B)].

[c] Finance Lenders and Residential Mortgage Lenders

A mortgage loan originator, if not subject to licensing requirements under the Real Estate Law, must obtain a license under either the Finance Lenders Law or the Residential Mortgage Lending Act [Fin. Code §§ 22109.6, 50002(d); see Stats. 2009, ch. 160, § 87 (license need not be obtained before July 1, 2010, and must be obtained by July 31, 2010)]. Generally, lenders and loan brokers and servicers subject to the Finance Lenders Law or the Residential Mortgage Lending Act:

- May not employ or compensate a mortgage loan originator who does not have a license (or does not have a license endorsement under the Real Estate Law) to act as a mortgage loan originator [Fin. Code §§ 22100(b), 50002.5(a)];

- Must maintain a net worth of $250,000 while employing any mortgage loan originator [Fin. Code §§ 22104(b), 50201(a)];

- May not make or broker a residential mortgage loan unless that loan is offered by, negotiated by, or applied for through, a licensed mortgage loan originator [Fin. Code §§ 22100(d), 50002.5(c)]; and

- Must register with, and maintain a valid unique identifier issued by, the Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System and Registry, if engaged in the business of making, brokering, and/or servicing residential mortgage loans [Fin. Code §§ 22100(e), 50002.5(d)].

CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.13

§ 25.13 Loans Involving Government Participation

[1] FHA Insured Loans

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA, in the Department of Housing and Urban Development) does not make loans, but provides insurance for private lenders against losses on mortgages or trust deeds that finance homes, multifamily projects, land development projects, and group facilities projects. It also provides insurance against loss on loans for property improvements and insures yields on investments in rental housing projects [see 24 C.F.R. § 200.5]. In most cases the insurance premium may not exceed 1 percent per annum of the unpaid balance of principal [see 24 C.F.R. § 203.281].

For a summary of the procedure for obtaining an FHA insured loan, see § 25.130.

[2] VA Guaranteed Loans

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) guarantees real estate loans made by private lenders to qualified veterans or their surviving spouses for the purchase or refinancing of homes, including condominium units [38 U.S.C. § 3710]. The VA guarantees only a part of the loan, with the maximum amount set by statute [38 U.S.C. § 3703(a)(1); see 38 C.F.R. § 36.4302(a)]. To qualify for such a guaranty, the veteran must have served on active duty in the armed forces for a specified period of time [see 38 U.S.C. §§ 3701(b), 3702; see also § 25.113].

The VA also insures those types of loans [38 U.S.C. § 3703(a)(2); see 38 C.F.R. § 36.4370 et seq.]. However, lenders seldom seek this insurance because the application procedure is more burdensome than that required for loan guaranties and the insurance is limited to 15 percent of the aggregate of the loans made or purchased by a lending institution [38 U.S.C. § 3703(a)(2)(A)].

For coverage of the procedure for obtaining a loan guaranteed by the VA, see § 25.131. For VA loan guaranty documents, see § 25.210 et seq. For additional discussion of the insurance and loan guaranty programs of the VA, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender).

[3] Cal-Vet Loans

[a] Overview

The California Department of Veterans Affairs (Cal-Vet), under authority of the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act of 1974 [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.50], operates the Cal-Vet loan program to assist eligible veterans (and surviving spouses of eligible veterans) in the purchase of qualified farms and homes. Cal-Vet buys the property and sells it to the veteran or spouse under a real property sales (installment) contract. Cal-Vet makes a loan that is repayable at an interest rate usually below the market rate for conventional loans. In addition to a low interest rate, other benefits of the Cal-Vet loan program include low-cost fire and hazard insurance, and life and disability insurance at group premium rates. State bond issues provide the funds that finance the program, but at no cost to the taxpayers, since the veteran's monthly payments on the loan cover all bond and administrative expenses [see Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 987.12, 987.83].

For coverage of the procedure for obtaining a Cal-Vet loan, see § 25.132. For Cal-Vet loan documents, see § 25.220 et seq. For the real property sales contract used by Cal-Vet, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[b] Definition of "Home"

A "home" for purposes of a Cal-Vet loan is a dwelling, condominium, or mobilehome suitably located and adequate to meet the housing needs of the veteran and minimum property standards [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.53(b)]. Each property must have a year-round access and water supply that is adequate and sufficient for its intended use as a farm or home [12 Cal. Code Reg. § 322].

[c] Eligibility for Home-Purchase Benefits

To be eligible to receive benefits from the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act of 1974 [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.50 et seq.], the applicant must be a veteran or must otherwise qualify through an eligible veteran. For coverage of the relevant criteria [see Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 980, 987.52], see § 25.113.

The surviving spouse of an eligible veteran may be allowed to succeed to the veteran's benefits under the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act of 1974 [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.58(a)]. A surviving spouse who has not remarried may also succeed to benefits if the deceased spouse was a member of the armed forces on active military duty, entered active duty while in California, lived in California for six months immediately preceding his or her entry into active duty, and was killed in the line of duty while on active duty or died after discharge from active duty from injuries incurred in the line of duty while on active duty. In making a determination of eligibility for these purposes, the Cal-Vet may base its determination on documentation furnished to the surviving spouse by the federal Department of Veterans Affairs specifying the cause of death [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.58(b)]. Finally, the spouse of one who is considered a veteran for purposes of the Cal-Vet loan program because of being missing in action or a prisoner of war may file an application to receive farm and home-purchase benefits [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.58(c)].

[d] Advantages of Loan Program

The advantages generally associated with Cal-Vet financing are low interest rates, low-cost fire and hazard insurance, and the assurance, through inspection and approval of the property, that the property is suitable for the veteran and his or her family. The term over which a purchase contract executed by Cal-Vet with a qualified veteran is made payable may not by statute exceed 40 years for farms or homes or 30 years for mobilehomes [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(b)]. Cal-Vet provides that the maximum terms of these loans are as follows:

- Single family home loan or farm loan, 30 years.
- New mobilehome loan, 20 years.

- Used mobilehome loan, 10 or 15 years (depending on the age of mobilehome).

To allow the veteran to purchase the home selected without incurring excessive monthly payments, Cal-Vet, at the time of the initial purchase, may postpone the commencement of payment of the principal balance for a period not exceeding five years, provided the veteran's current income meets the standards for purchase on those terms, and Cal-Vet determines that the veteran's income can reasonably be expected to increase sufficiently within the five-year period to make the payments [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(d)].

A deferred principal payment program permits a veteran to make interest-only payments on a Cal-Vet loan for up to five years if (1) the veteran has sufficient income and assets [see 12 Cal. Code Reg. § 309.4 (definition)] to make these payments, and (2) the veteran's income can reasonably be expected to increase sufficiently within a five-year period to make the transition to payments of fully amortized principal and interest [12 Cal. Code Reg. § 310(a), (c)]. Several limitations and restrictions apply to these loans [see 12 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 310.1, 310.2].

[e] Qualification of Property

The maximum purchase price that Cal-Vet will pay for a home is set by statute [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.64]. Before any purchase of property, the applicant should file specific appraisals with Cal-Vet.

Unless expressly accepted in writing by Cal-Vet, all conditions, encumbrances, and liens (whether or not of record) on or affecting the property must be cleared before purchase by Cal-Vet [12 Cal. Code Reg. § 322]. Homes to be used primarily for rental or income purposes or as vacation or weekend homes, and properties located outside California, do not qualify for the Cal-Vet program [12 Cal. Code Reg. § 320].

[f] Preference for Benefits Under Loan Program

Whenever a shortage of funds exists in any of the funding sources available, Cal-Vet must use those funds according to specified preference categories [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)]. (These preferences do not affect any eligibility requirement for benefits [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(c)].)

- First preference must be given to veterans who are otherwise qualified because of service during a time of war and who were wounded or disabled as a result of their service. Cal-Vet must determine, in each case, whether the veteran was wounded or disabled as a result of service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(1)].

- Second preference must be given to (1) unremarried spouses of individuals who were members of the armed forces on active military duty and were killed in the line of duty while on active duty, (2) members of the armed forces who were held as prisoners of war, and (3) unremarried spouses of members of the armed forces who have been designated by the armed forces as missing in action [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(2)].

- Third preference must be given to (1) veterans whose eligibility is derived from service that includes any date after August 1, 1990, and before a date set by law or by a Presidential proclamation ending the Gulf War and (2) veterans with wartime service discharged or released from active duty within 10 years of their application to Cal-Vet [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(3)].

- Fourth preference must be given to active members of the California National Guard or a reserve component of a branch of the United States armed forces who meet specified eligibility criteria [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(4); see Mil. & Vet. Code § 980(a)(3)].

- Fifth preference must be given to veterans with wartime service discharged or released from active duty more than 10 years before their application to Cal-Vet [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(5)].

- Sixth preference must be given to veterans who are otherwise qualified and whose only military service was during a time of peace [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(6)].

- Seventh preference must be given to veterans eligible for a subsequent loan under Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.86(a) [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.56(b)(6)].

§ 25.14 Primary and Secondary Financing

[1] Definitions

In the context of real estate loans, the terms "primary" and "secondary" are used in two different senses. In one sense, they refer to the sequence in which lenders acquire first liens [see [2], below]. Used in a different sense, they refer to the priority of liens on the property. Primary financing thus refers to a loan that is secured by a first lien on real property. Secondary financing refers to an inferior lien (second, third, and so on) behind the first lien on the secured property. Some lenders engage exclusively or chiefly in primary financing while others concentrate on secondary financing. For example, sellers of property are a principal source of secondary financing but generally do not make first loans on property.

Another name given to secondary loans is "hard-money loans." The terms are often, but not always, interchanged. Hard-money loans derive that name from the practice of lenders who specialize in underwriting loans based on the value of the property more than the creditworthiness of the borrower. Generally, the terms of such loans are less favorable, involving high interest rates and more points than primary loans. The increased financing cost reflects the precarious nature of the loan (given that it is subordinated) and the typical borrower's lack of creditworthiness.

For additional coverage of secondary financing, see Rohan, Real Estate Financing--Text, Forms, Tax Analysis, Ch. 9A, Secondary Financing, Subordination and Wrap-Around Mortgages (Matthew Bender).

[2] Secondary Mortgage Market

The secondary mortgage market involves the sale of loans secured by first liens. For these purposes, "secondary" refers to the sequence in which lenders acquire the first lien. In a typical transaction, a conventional lender sells its loan secured by a first lien to a buyer in the secondary market, such as the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA, colloquially "Fannie Mae"). A lender who would not ordinarily make a certain type of loan may decide to do so if it can sell the loan at a profit on the secondary market. Fannie Mae and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (FHLMC, colloquially "Freddie Mac") and other buyers in the secondary market have established parameters and requirements for the loans they will buy, including the loan documents and security instruments evidencing the loan.

CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.15

§ 25.15 Types of Loans

[1] Amortized Long-Term Loans

The most common device for financing the acquisition of real property in California is the fully amortized long-term loan. An amortized loan is one that is paid off through substantially equal regular installments of principal and interest. Although these loans traditionally have 30-year terms, shorter terms are becoming increasingly common. Banks and savings associations are the major sources of long-term real estate loans.

An amortized loan may be fully or partially amortized. A fully amortized loan is completely paid off (principal and interest) over the term of a loan by a series of regular periodic payments that are equal or roughly equal. The repayment schedule of a partially amortized loan does not provide for full repayment of principal in regular installments over the entire term. Instead, it typically requires the borrower to make regular payments of principal and interest over the entire term, but under a schedule that leaves part of the principal unpaid at the end of the term. That part is then payable in one sum, called a balloon payment [see [9], below].

For further discussion of long-term loans, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 100, Methods of Financing (Matthew Bender).

[2] Short-Term Loans

Short-term loans are generally used to finance construction and for second and lower-priority mortgages. The term of these loans is usually five or fewer years but may be, in the case of secondary financing, up to 15 years. These loans are usually not fully amortized except in the case of the longer short-term loans, for example, a second mortgage taken back by the seller. The interest on a short-term loan is generally higher than on a long-term loan; otherwise, there are virtually no differences between a long-term loan and a short-term loan.

For full coverage of construction loans and financing, see Ch. 30A, Construction Financing .

[3] Insured Loans

A common type of loan is the insured loan, which includes FHA-insured and VA guaranteed loans [see § 25.13[1], [2]]. Some private companies insure lenders (usually institutional lenders) against loss on real estate loans. The availability of insurance means that a lender can safely make a loan that it would not otherwise consider making. The practical effect of insurance is to allow loans to be made at high loan-to-value ratios.

[4] Seller Financing

A seller may finance the sale by accepting an installment land sale contract [see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing] or by taking the buyer's note and trust deed for all or a portion of the purchase price of the property. Seller financing may be a feasible alternative when the seller does not want to receive all cash for the price, when the buyer is unable to qualify for conventional financing because of a shortage of cash or low income, or when the property is one that conventional lenders will not finance.

Seller financing is subject to statutory disclosure requirements when it involves the sale of a dwelling for not more than four families and an arranger of credit [see Civ. Code § 2956 et seq.]. For discussion of these requirements, see § 25.25[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Arranger of Credit. One area that is fraught with difficulty for the unwary real estate agent involves seller financing (also called carry-back financing). Unwittingly, the real estate agent may become an arranger of credit if the agent structures the transaction to allow for the seller to carry back part of the purchase price. If considered to be an arranger of credit, the agent may have certain responsibilities, such as completing the seller's disclosure statement. The failure to complete and transmit that statement to the buyer may provide the buyer with an opportunity to rescind the transaction. The agent may then be found responsible for the cost of the ensuing litigation. Commentary by Timothy F. O'Leary

[5] Fixed-Rate, Fixed-Payment Loans

A fixed-rate, fixed-payment loan typically is fully amortized, that is, repayable in substantially equal regular installments of principal and interest sufficient to repay the principal over the term of the loan. Installments are payable on a periodic basis, usually monthly. Although the installments are generally equal, the first and last installments may be slightly greater or smaller than the others.

[6] Graduated-Payment Loans

Under a graduated-payment loan, installment payments are at a relatively low level for a short period at the beginning of the loan term but gradually increase to a higher level at which they stabilize for the duration of the loan term. This plan allows borrowing by persons whose current incomes cannot service a loan on an equal-installment plan [see [5], above]. These loans are generally fully amortized.

[7] Adjustable-Rate Loans

Loans that do not use a fixed interest rate are commonly referred to as variable-rate or adjustable-rate loans. Within this category are several specific types of loans. The feature common to all of these loans is that the interest rate may be changed periodically. The most common effect of the changed interest rate is an increase or a decrease in the amount of each installment, either at the time of the rate change or at some other time. However, under some loans, the effect of the change is to extend the term of the loan rather than to increase the regular payment.

There are generally rate ceilings (called caps) that limit the amount of rate increases during a specific period and over the life of the loan. The frequency with which the interest rate may be changed is also usually limited. An agreed-on index or standard is used to adjust the interest rate. Commonly used standards include a bank prime rate, the six-month

Treasury bill index, and the three-year Treasury securities index.

The payments on this type of loan may be fully adjusted at the time of each rate change in order to maintain a fully amortized loan. Alternatively, the payments may be adjusted at a different rate from the changes in the interest rate. When the payment changes do not fully incorporate rate increases, the unpaid interest usually is added to the principal balance of the loan, creating negative amortization [see Comment, Adjustable Rate Mortgages: A Proposed Statutory Reform, 26 Santa Clara L. Rev. 253 (1986); see also Rohan, Real Estate Financing--Text, Forms, Tax Analysis, Ch. 3B, Variable Rate Mortgages (Matthew Bender)].

Adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMs) are one type of adjustable-rate loan. Changes in the interest rate of these loans are linked to changes in the index specified in the loan documents and must comply with the rules specified in the loan documents, including rules governing the frequency of rate changes and the implementation of rate changes. Variable-rate loans [see Civ. Code §§ 1916.5, 1916.6], adjustable-payment, adjustable-rate loans [see Civ. Code § 1916.7], and renegotiable-rate loans [see Civ. Code § 1916.8] also are within this class of loans and are regulated by California statutes. Variable-rate loans and adjustable-payment, adjustable-rate loans are different from ARMs in that the increase in interest rate can lengthen the term of the loan.

A lender making any of those state-regulated loans must make certain disclosures to the borrower. However, those loans appear to have been rendered largely superfluous by ARMs, which allow more and higher rate changes per year [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 101, Conventional Financing (Loans) (Matthew Bender)].

[8] Convertible Loans

A convertible loan is a hybrid of an adjustable-rate loan and a fixed-rate loan. At the beginning of the loan term, the interest rate is adjustable, but the borrower may convert to a fixed rate at a later time during the loan term. Generally, the conversion must occur within a stated time period, for example, sometime between the second and fifth years of the loan term.

[9] Balloon-Payment Loans

A balloon-payment loan is essentially a loan with a final installment payment that (1) is significantly larger than the other installments and (2) pays the loan in full. For purposes of California notice and disclosure requirements, a balloon-payment note or loan is one that provides for a final payment that, as originally scheduled, is more than twice the amount of any of the immediately preceding six regularly scheduled payments or that contains a call provision [Civ. Code §§ 2924i(d)(1), 2957(b)]. A call provision empowers the holder of the loan to declare the loan due and payable either after a specified period has elapsed following closing or after a specified date [Civ. Code §§ 2924i(d)(2), 2957(c)]. For purposes of the statutes, an unexercised call provision does not cause a loan to be a balloon-payment loan [Civ. Code §§ 2924i(d)(1), 2957(b)].

Notice of the due date of an approaching balloon payment must be given to the borrower for certain loans secured by owner-occupied residential property [see Civ. Code § 2924i(a)] and for certain loans involving an arranger of credit and seller financing [see Civ. Code § 2966; see also § 25.25[1]]. For the required form for notice, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing . In the case of a balloon-payment loan involving an arranger of credit and seller financing, the promissory note must contain a required statement regarding the existence of the balloon payment [see Civ. Code § 2966(d)]. For the statutory statement, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

PRACTICE TIP:

Balloon Payments and Notice. A financing method that confounds sellers involves the carry-back loan with a short term of two or three years. The note typically is interest-only, with the principal due at the end of the term. This financing method is attractive to sellers and buyers alike. They both anticipate that the buyer will be able to refinance the property and pay off the carry-back loan after establishing two or three years of good credit. However, the balloon-payment obligation can be mishandled by the seller, who can fail to provide the required advance notice of when the balloon payment is due. Unfortunately, the mistake often is not discovered until after the payment has long been due, and the seller is in the process of commencing foreclosure proceedings. Sellers should be cautioned to provide the balloon-payment notice well in advance of the due date, so that this error is avoided before the foreclosure rights are exercised. Commentary by Timothy F. O'Leary

[10] Straight Loans

A straight loan is unamortized. The entire principal plus accrued interest must be paid, in one payment, at the end of the loan term. If such a loan were to be made, it would typically be on a low loan-to-value ratio for a relatively short term, if the lender is an institutional lender. A private lender might be willing to make a straight loan for a longer term. For a form for a straight promissory note, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[11] Demand Loans

A demand loan is similar to a straight loan, except that it has no fixed term or has a nominal term of one year. Normally, the borrower must make interest-only regular payments on the loan until the lender demands the entire principal amount. Although these loans are usually more expensive to the borrower, they do provide the borrower with lower payments and improved cash flow. The advantage to the lender is a higher yield without a loss of control. For a form for a demand promissory note, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[12] Wraparound Loans

A wraparound loan is a real estate loan secured by a junior (almost always second) mortgage or deed of trust, the principal amount of which equals the sum of the outstanding balance on the existing loan secured by the first mortgage or trust deed plus the amount being advanced by the wrap-around lender. Although the payments on the first loan are commonly made through the wraparound lender, the wraparound borrower may be required to make those payments. If the borrower fails to make the payments, either to the wraparound lender or to the holder of the first lien, the wraparound lender may (but is not obligated to) make payments on, or pay off, the first loan [see Armsey v. Channel Associates, Inc. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 833, 836, 229 Cal. Rptr. 509].

Wraparound trust deeds may be referred to as all-inclusive trust deeds. Forms for a promissory note secured by an all-inclusive trust deed and for an all-inclusive trust deed are set forth in Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[13] Standard Shared Appreciation Loans

A shared appreciation loan is any loan secured by real property (other than owner-occupied residential property containing up to four units) that, among other things, obligates the borrower to pay the lender contingent deferred interest [see Civ. Code § 1917(b)]. The contingent deferred interest is a specified share of (1) the appreciation in the value of the property, (2) rents and profits attributable to the property, or (3) both of the foregoing [Civ. Code § 1917(a)]. The payment of contingent deferred interest is normally in exchange for an interest rate below the prevailing rate. The relationship of the borrower and the lender in the loan transaction is that of debtor and creditor [Civ. Code § 1917.001].

The lien of a deed of trust securing a shared appreciation loan includes and secures the principal amount of the loan and all interest, whether accrued or to be accrued, including all contingent deferred interest [Civ. Code § 1917.003]. The lien attaches from the time of the recordation of the trust deed [Civ. Code § 1917.004(a)]. A trust deed that acts as security for a shared appreciation loan must indicate this fact [Civ. Code § 1917.004(b)].

These loans are exempt from all provisions of the Civil Code or Financial Code that limit the interest rate or change of interest rate of variable-rate, adjustable-rate, or renegotiable-rate instruments, or that require particular language or provisions in security instruments securing variable-rate, adjustable-rate, or renegotiable-rate obligations or in evidences of such debts, except for those specifically imposed by the Civil Code provisions governing (1) shared appreciation loans by ERISA pension funds [see former Civ. Code §§ 1917.010-1917.075], or (2) shared appreciation loans for senior citizens [Civ. Code § 1917.002; see [14], below]. Lenders making these loans are exempt from the usury laws with regard to the loans [Civ. Code § 1917.005].

The statutory exemption for shared appreciation loans did not exempt from the usury law a loan for a housing development that contained provisions for payments of "additional interest" based on sales of units because the loan schedule ensured payments of additional interest even in the absence of appreciation in the value of the secured property [WRI Opportunity Loans II, LLC v. Cooper (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 525, 538-539, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205] . In WRI, the court rejected the lender's argument that the statutory definition of a shared appreciation loan encompasses any loan secured by real property -- including a loan that guarantees the lender an otherwise usurious rate of interest -- as long as the loan also contains a provision entitling the lender to a share of appreciation arising from the property. This interpretation would effectively abrogate the usury law with respect to loans secured by real property by sanctioning usurious rates of interest that were guaranteed, even in the absence of appreciation or risk [WRI Opportunity Loans II, LLC v. Cooper (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 525, 539, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205] . Thus, the statutory definition of a shared appreciation loan must be understood to permit a lender to obtain guaranteed interest payments up to the maximum rate permitted under the usury law, and, additionally, payments of contingent deferred interest that are subject to risk [WRI Opportunity Loans II, LLC v. Cooper (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 525, 540, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205] .

[14] Shared Appreciation Loans for Seniors

Special statutory requirements govern shared appreciation loans for senior citizens [see Civ. Code § 1917.320 et seq.]. A lender making such a loan refinances the existing debt on the borrower's residence and uses the existing equity to provide the borrower with monthly annuity payments. Then, on a maturity event [see Civ. Code § 1917.320(j)], the lender is paid the accrued principal and interest, and a share of the post-refinancing appreciation. The loan must be repaid at the earliest of the following times [Civ. Code § 1917.331(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 1917.320(j)]:

- The borrower's death;
- Sale of the residence;
- Subsequent refinancing of the loan;
- The borrower's cessation of occupancy; or
- The borrower's failure to meet the terms of the trust deed.

However, in the case of the borrower's death or cessation of occupancy, the loan term will be extended until the earlier of the sale or refinancing of the property, or 12 months after the death or cessation of occupancy [Civ. Code § 1917.331(a)(1)].

The property securing the loan must contain one to four dwelling units, at least one of which is owner-occupied. Eligible improvements specifically include single family dwellings, single family mobilehome units, residential condominium units, and dwelling units in a planned unit development. A dwelling unit is conclusively deemed to be owner-occupied if the borrower certifies in writing to the lender that he or she will occupy the property [Civ. Code § 1917.330].

In addition, a lender may make a shared appreciation loan based solely on the value of the real property on which the borrower's dwelling is situated, and the loan may be secured only by that real property and not by the improvements on it [Civ. Code § 1917.330].

Comprehensive requirements govern the terms and conditions of the loans [see Civ. Code § 1917.330 et seq.] and the determination of the fair market value of the property for purposes of the loans [see Civ. Code §§ 1917.410 et seq., 1917.510 et seq.]. Further, there are numerous mandatory notice and disclosure requirements [see Civ. Code § 1917.710 et seq.].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.17

§ 25.17 Regulation of Certain Loans Up to $250,000

[1] Loans and Real Property Covered

A consumer loan that is secured by real property and has an original balance not exceeding $250,000 may be subject to special regulations and prohibitions [see Fin. Code § 4970 et seq.].

- The real property securing the loan must be (1) used or intended to be used as the principal dwelling by the consumer, (2) located in California, and (3) improved by a one-to-four-unit dwelling [Fin. Code § 4970(d)].

- The annual percentage rate [see Fin. Code § 4970(a)] at consummation of the transaction will exceed by more than 8 percentage points the yield on Treasury securities having a comparable period of maturity on the 15th day of the month immediately preceding the month in which the application for the extension of credit is received by the creditor [Fin. Code § 4970(b)(1)(A)].

- The total points and fees payable by the consumer at or before the closing will exceed 6 percent of the total loan amount [Fin. Code § 4970(b)(1)(B); see Fin. Code § 4970(c) (items included in points and fees)].

For these purposes, a consumer loan does not include a reverse mortgage, an open line of credit as defined by Regulation Z, or a bridge loan with a maturity of less than one year if the purpose of the loan is a bridge loan connected with the acquisition or construction of a dwelling intended to become the consumer's principal dwelling [Fin. Code § 4970(d)].

[2] Limitations on Prepayment Fees or Penalties

For the first 36 months, a covered loan may include a prepayment fee or penalty if the originator of the loan offered the consumer a choice of another product without a prepayment fee or penalty [Fin. Code § 4973(a)(2)(A)]. The originator also must have disclosed in writing to the consumer, at least three business days before loan consummation, the terms of the prepayment fee or penalty for accepting a covered loan with the prepayment penalty, and the rates, points, and fees that would be available to the consumer for accepting a covered loan without a prepayment penalty [Fin. Code § 4973(a)(2)(B)]. The amount of the prepayment fee or penalty must be limited to an amount not to exceed the payment of six months advance interest, at the contract rate of interest then in effect, on the amount prepaid in any 12-month period in excess of 20 percent of the original principal amount [Fin. Code § 4973(a)(2)(C)].

A covered loan may not include a prepayment fee or penalty after the first 36 months following the date of consummation of the loan [Fin. Code § 4973(a)(1)].

A covered loan may not impose the prepayment fee or penalty if the loan is accelerated as a result of default, and the originator of the covered loan may not finance a prepayment penalty through a new loan that is originated by the same person [Fin. Code § 4973(a)(2)(D), (E)].

[3] Permissible Payment Schedules

A covered loan with a term of five years or less may not provide at origination for a payment schedule with regular periodic payments that when aggregated do not fully amortize the principal balance as of the maturity date of the loan. If a payment schedule is adjusted for the consumer's seasonal or irregular income, the total installments in a year may not exceed the amount of one year's worth of payments on the loan [Fin. Code § 4973(b); see Fin. Code § 4973(b)(2) (not applicable to specified bridge loans)].

[4] Prohibited Terms and Provisions

A covered loan may not contain any of the following terms or provisions:

- A provision for negative amortization such that the payment schedule for regular monthly payments causes the principal balance to increase, unless the loan is a first mortgage and the licensed person discloses to the consumer that the loan contains a negative amortization provision that may add principal to the loan balance [Fin. Code § 4973(c)].

- Terms under which periodic payments required under the loan are consolidated and paid in advance from the loan proceeds [Fin. Code § 4973(d)].

- A provision that increases the interest rate as a result of a default, unless the change is a result of a variable rate loan that is consistent with the provisions of the loan documents, and the change in interest rate is not triggered by default or the acceleration of indebtedness [Fin. Code § 4973(e)].

- A provision that permits the lender, in its sole discretion, to accelerate the indebtedness, other than an acceleration in accordance with the terms of the loan documents as a result of the consumer's default, pursuant to a due-on-sale provision, or due to fraud or material misrepresentation by a consumer in connection with the loan or the value of security for the loan [Fin. Code § 4973(i)].

[5] Lender's Reasonable Belief in Recipient's Ability to Repay Loan

A person who originates a covered loan may not make or arrange the loan unless, at the time the loan is consummated, the person reasonably believes the consumer or consumers will be able to make the scheduled payments to repay the obligation. The lender's belief must be based on a consideration of the consumer's current and expected income, current obligations, employment status, and other financial resources, other than the consumer's equity in the dwelling that secures repayment of the loan. In the case of a covered loan that is structured to increase to a specific designated rate, stated as a number or formula, at a specific predetermined date not exceeding 37 months from the date of application, this evaluation must be based on the fully indexed rate of the loan computed at the time of application [Fin. Code §

4973(f)(1)].

In addition, a licensed person may not refinance or arrange for the refinancing of a consumer loan such that the new loan is a covered loan that is made for the purpose of refinancing, debt consolidation, or cash out that does not result in an identifiable benefit to the consumer, considering the consumer's stated purpose for seeking the loan, as well as fees, interest rates, finance charges, and points [Fin. Code § 4973(j)].

A consumer is presumed to be able to make the scheduled payments if, at the time the loan is consummated, the consumer's total monthly debts, including amounts owed under the loan, do not exceed 55 percent of the consumer's monthly gross income, as verified by the credit application, the consumer's financial statement, a credit report, financial information provided to the person originating the loan on behalf of the consumer, or any other reasonable means [Fin. Code § 4973(f)(1); see Fin. Code § 4973(f)(3) (loans based on stated income must not be to evade these provisions)]. In any case, no presumption of inability to make the scheduled payments to repay the loan may arise solely from the fact that the consumer's total monthly debts, including the loan amounts owed, exceed 55 percent of the consumer's monthly gross income [Fin. Code § 4973(f)(1)].

[6] Other Limitations on Lender and Loans

In general, a person who originates a covered loan may not act in any manner that constitutes fraud, whether specifically prohibited by statute or of a different character [Fin. Code § 4973(n)]. Specific prohibitions applicable to covered loans include the following:

- A person who originates a covered loan may not pay a contractor under a home-improvement contract from the proceeds of a covered loan other than by an instrument payable to the consumer or jointly to the consumer and the contractor or, at the election of the consumer, to a third-party escrow agent for the benefit of the contractor in accordance with the terms and conditions in a written escrow agreement signed by the consumer, lender, and contractor [see Fin. Code § 4973(g)].

- A person who originates a covered loan may not recommend or encourage a consumer to default on an existing consumer loan or other debt in connection with the solicitation or making of a covered loan that refinances all or any portion of the existing consumer loan or debt [Fin. Code § 4973(h)].

- A person who originates a covered loan may not steer, counsel, or direct any prospective consumer to accept a loan product with a risk grade less favorable than the risk grade that the consumer would qualify for based on the lender's current underwriting guidelines [see Fin. Code § 4973(l)(1)].

- If a broker originates a covered loan, the broker may not steer, counsel, or direct any prospective consumer to accept a loan product at a higher cost than that for which the consumer could qualify based on loan products offered by persons with whom the broker regularly does business [Fin. Code § 4973(l)(2)].

- A person who originates a covered loan may not avoid or attempt to avoid the applications of these provisions by structuring the loan transaction as an open-end credit plan for purposes of evading these provisions if the loan would have been a covered loan if structured as a closed-end loan, or by dividing any loan transaction into separate parts for the purpose of evading these provisions [Fin. Code § 4973(m)].

[7] Required Disclosure Statement

A covered loan may not be made unless a statutory disclosure statement has been provided to the consumer no later than three business days before the loan documents are signed. The statement, which must be entitled CONSUMER CAUTION AND HOME OWNERSHIP COUNSELING NOTICE, must be written in 12-point or larger font [see Fin. Code § 4973(k)(1) (text of statutory notice)]. It is a rebuttable presumption that a licensed person has met its obligation to provide this disclosure if the consumer provides the licensed person with a signed acknowledgment of receipt of a copy of the notice [Fin. Code § 4973(k)(2)].

[8] Violations of Law

Any failure to comply with the law that was not willful or intentional and resulted from a bona fide error (which does not include an error in legal judgment), that occurred notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adopted to avoid those errors, must be corrected within 45 days after receipt of a complaint or discovery of the error. If corrected in this manner, a person who originates a covered loan will not be administratively, civilly, or criminally liable for the error [Fin. Code § 4974(a)]. In addition, any licensed person who violated provisions of the law is deemed to have violated that person's licensing law and is subject to suspension or loss of the license as well as administrative and civil penalties [Fin. Code § 4975; see Fin. Code § 4977].

§ 25.17A Restrictions on Higher-Priced Mortgage Loans

[1] Overview

State-licensed lenders (see below) could be subject to certain restrictions on higher-priced mortgage loans imposed by Fin. Code § 4995 et seq. A "higher-priced mortgage loan" is a consumer credit transaction, secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, with an annual percentage rate that exceeds the average prime offer rate for a comparable transaction, as of the date the interest rate is set, by (1) at least 1.5 percentage points, for a loan secured by a first lien on the dwelling, or (2) at least 3.5 percentage points, for a loan secured by a subordinate lien on the dwelling [Fin. Code § 4995(a) (incorporating definition in 12 C.F.R. § 226.35(a))].

The provisions of Fin. Code § 4995 et seq. apply only with respect to a higher-priced mortgage loan that originates on or after July 1, 2010 [Fin. Code § 4995.4].

The state-licensed lenders that could be subject to the restrictions of Fin. Code § 4995 et seq. are real estate brokers, finance lenders and brokers licensed under the Finance Lenders Law, residential mortgage lenders, commercial banks, industrial banks, savings associations, and credit unions [Fin. Code § 4995(b)].

There is no private right of action against a lender for a violation of Fin. Code § 4995 et seq., which can be enforced only by the Attorney General or by the culpable lender's licensing agency [Fin. Code § 4995.3(e)]. However, in the event of a violation of Fin. Code § 4995 et seq., a provision for a prepayment penalty or yield spread premium, with respect to the tainted higher-priced mortgage loan, is unenforceable [Fin. Code § 4995.3(f)].

[2] Lenders Making Higher-Priced Loans

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in making higher-priced mortgage loans, state-licensed lenders are subject to the following restrictions.

The maximum amount of a prepayment penalty that may be imposed by the lender in connection with the higher-priced mortgage loan must not exceed 2 percent of the principal balance prepaid, for prepayment of the loan during the first 12 months following loan consummation, or 1 percent of the principal balance prepaid, for prepayment of the loan during the second 12 months following loan consummation [Fin. Code § 4995.1].

The lender must not [but see Fin. Code § 4995.2(h) (safe-harbor protection for good faith noncompliance)]:

- Make, or cause to be made, any false, deceptive, or misleading statement or representation in connection with the higher-priced mortgage loan [Fin. Code § 4995.2(b)];

- Recommend or encourage default on an existing loan or other debt prior to and in connection with the closing or planned closing of the higher-priced mortgage loan, it if refinances all or any portion of the existing loan or debt [Fin. Code § 4995.2(f)];

- Make the higher-priced mortgage loan with a provision for negative amortization [Fin. Code § 4995.2(g)].

After the higher-priced mortgage loan is made, the lender may enter into a subsequent agreement with the borrower to capitalize payments as a means of permitting the borrower to cure or prevent a delinquency; and that would not violate the proscription against negative amortization [Fin. Code § 4995.2(g)].

[3] Lenders Acting as Mortgage Brokers

A state-licensed lender is a "mortgage broker" for purposes of Fin. Code § 4995 et seq. when the lender arranges or attempts to arrange a higher-priced mortgage loan, which originates on or after July 1, 2010, and which is to be made by an unaffiliated third person, if the state-licensed lender acts, in the transaction, as exclusive agent for the borrower or as dual agent for the borrower and the higher-priced lender, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, whether paid directly or indirectly. In that situation, the lender-broker is engaging in "mortgage brokerage services" [Fin. Code § 4995(c), (d)].

A mortgage broker that arranges only higher-priced mortgage loans must disclose that fact to a borrower, both orally and in writing, at the time of initially engaging in mortgage brokerage services with that borrower [Fin. Code § 4995.2(c)].

A mortgage broker that provides mortgage brokerage services must not steer, counsel, or direct a borrower to accept a loan at a higher cost than that for which the borrower could qualify based on the loans offered by the persons with whom the broker regularly does business [Fin. Code § 4995.2(d)].

A mortgage broker that provides mortgage brokerage services for a borrower must not receive compensation, including a yield spread premium, fee, commission, or any other compensation, for arranging a higher-priced mortgage loan with a prepayment penalty that exceeds the compensation that the mortgage broker would otherwise receive for arranging that higher-priced mortgage loan without a prepayment penalty [Fin. Code § 4995.2(e)(1)].

When providing mortgage brokerage services for a borrower, a mortgage broker must receive the same compensation for providing those services whether paid by the lender, by the borrower, or by a third party [Fin. Code § 4995.2(e)(2)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 25.17B Mortgage Brokers as Fiduciaries

State-licensed lenders (see below) can have specific fiduciary duties under Civ. Code § 2923.1 when acting as mortgage brokers for residential mortgage loans; however, this will not limit or narrow any other fiduciary duty of a mortgage broker [Civ. Code § 2923.1(c)].

A "residential mortgage loan" in this context is a consumer credit transaction that is secured by residential real property that is improved by four or fewer residential units [Civ. Code § 2923.1(b)(4)].

The state-licensed lenders that could be subject to Civ. Code § 2923.1 are real estate brokers, finance lenders, and brokers licensed under the Finance Lenders Law, residential mortgage lenders, commercial banks, industrial banks, savings associations, and credit unions [Civ. Code § 2923.1(b)(1)].

A state-licensed lender is a "mortgage broker" for purposes of Civ. Code § 2923.1 when the lender arranges or attempts to arrange a residential mortgage loan which is to be made by an unaffiliated third person, if the state-licensed lender acts, in the transaction, as exclusive agent for the borrower or as dual agent for the borrower and the residential lender, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, whether paid directly or indirectly. In that situation, the lender-broker is engaging in "mortgage brokerage services" [Civ. Code § 2923.1(b)(2), (3)].

A mortgage broker providing mortgage brokerage services to a borrower is the fiduciary of the borrower, and any violation of the broker's fiduciary duties is a violation of the mortgage broker's license law. This fiduciary duty includes a requirement that the mortgage broker place the economic interest of the borrower ahead of the mortgage broker's own economic interest. A mortgage broker that provides mortgage brokerage services to the borrower owes this fiduciary duty to the borrower regardless of whether the mortgage broker is acting as an agent for any other party in connection with the residential mortgage loan transaction [Civ. Code § 2923.1(a)].

§ 25.18 Impound Accounts

[1] When Permitted

An impound or other similar account for the payment of taxes on the property, insurance premiums, or other purposes relating to the property is not permitted as a condition of a sale contract or loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on a single-family, owner-occupied dwelling, except in the following situations [Civ. Code § 2954(a)]:

- An impound account is required by a state or federal regulatory authority.
- A loan is made, guaranteed, or insured by a state or federal governmental lending or insuring agency.
- The purchaser or borrower has failed to pay two consecutive tax installments on the property before the delinquency date for such payments.
- The original principal amount of the loan is 90 percent or more of the sale price, if the property involved is being sold, or of the appraised value of the property securing the loan.
- The combined principal amount of all loans secured by the real property exceeds 80 percent of the appraised value of the property securing the loans.
- A loan is made in compliance with the requirements for higher-priced mortgage loans established in Regulation Z [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.35 (prohibited acts or practices in connection with higher-priced mortgage loans)], whether or not the loan is a higher-priced mortgage loan.
- A loan is refinanced or modified in connection with a lender's home-ownership preservation program or a lender's participation in such a program sponsored by a federal, state, or local government authority or a nonprofit organization.

The parties may mutually agree on an impound account if the seller or lender furnishes the purchaser or borrower with a written statement indicating (1) that the impound account is not required as a condition of the sale or loan, and (2) whether interest will be paid on the impounded funds [Civ. Code § 2954(a)(1)]. For an impound provision that may be included in a trust deed or promissory note, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[2] Payment of Interest

Every financial institution that either makes loans secured by real property containing only a one to four-family residence located in California, or purchases obligations secured by such property, and that receives money in advance for the payment of taxes and assessments on the property, for insurance, or for other purposes relating to the property, must pay interest on the funds to the borrower [Civ. Code § 2954.8(a)]. The interest paid must be at the rate of at least 2 percent simple interest per annum and must be credited to the borrower's account annually or on termination of the account, whichever is earlier [Civ. Code § 2954.8(a)]. The financial institution may not impose any fee or charge in connection with the maintenance or disbursement of the money received in advance if the fee or charge will result in an interest rate of less than 2 percent per annum paid on that money [Civ. Code § 2954.8(b)].

For these purposes, a financial institution is any bank, savings and loan association, or credit union chartered under the laws of California or the United States, or any other person or organization making loans secured by real property containing only a one to four-family residence [see Civ. Code § 2954.8(c)]. The requirements do not apply to loans executed before 1977 or to funds deposited by a financial institution other than a bank, pursuant to a requirement of a state or federal regulatory authority, in a non interest-bearing demand trust fund account of a bank [Civ. Code § 2954.8(d)].

[3] Amount, Use, and Maintenance of Impounded Funds

A lender (or other person who purchases obligations secured by real property) who maintains an impound or similar account for the payment of taxes and assessments, for insurance premiums, or for other purposes relating to the property, must comply with all of the following limitations and restrictions:

- The lender cannot require the borrower to deposit in the account in any month an amount in excess of that which would be permitted in connection with a federally related mortgage loan pursuant to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974 (RESPA) [Civ. Code § 2954.1(a); see 12 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq. (RESPA); see also 12 U.S.C. § 2609 (limitations on requirement of advance deposits in escrow accounts in connection with federally related mortgage loans)].

- The lender cannot require the sums maintained in the account to exceed at any time the amount or amounts reasonably necessary to pay the obligations as they become due, and must refund any excess within 30 days unless the parties agree otherwise [Civ. Code § 2954.1(b)].

- The lender may not make payments from the account so as to cause any insurance policy to be canceled or property taxes or other similar payments to become delinquent [Civ. Code § 2954.1(c)].

These requirements do not prohibit a lender from requiring additional amounts to be paid into an impound account to recover any deficiency that may exist in the account [Civ. Code § 2954.1].

Money held by a mortgagee or a beneficiary of a deed of trust on real property in California, or held by a vendor on a contract of sale of real property in California, in the type of impound account described above, must be retained in California and, if invested, must be invested only with California residents (in the case of individuals) or with entities or other persons engaged in business in California [Civ. Code § 2955(a)]. The lender must give the borrower a written disclosure of these provisions as soon as practicable and in any case before execution of any note or security documents [Civ. Code § 2955.5(b)]. Notwithstanding the above, a mortgagee or beneficiary of a trust deed secured by a first lien on real property may deposit money held for the payment of taxes and assessments or insurance premiums or other purposes in an impound account in an out-of-state depository institution insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation if the mortgagee or beneficiary is any one of certain specified entities or persons [see Civ. Code § 2955(c), (d); see also Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing]. The attorney general may bring an action to enjoin a violation of the above requirements [Civ. Code § 2955(d)].

For an illustrative statement of account that a lender may be required to give to a borrower in connection with an impound account, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[4] Legal Relationship Between Lender and Borrower

The legal relationship that exists between the lender and the borrower under Civ. Code § 2954.8 is not defined by statute or judicial decision. However, in two cases involving loans made before 1977 (the effective date of Civ. Code § 2954.8), the borrowers claimed that an impound account constituted a trust for which the lender as trustee had a duty to invest the deposited money and from which the borrowers were entitled to the earnings realized by the investment. In one case, a trust was created, but the lender did not have a duty to pay the borrower any interest because the trust deed provided that the money would be deposited without interest [Marsh v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 674, 684-685, 136 Cal. Rptr. 180]. In the other case, a simple debtor-creditor relationship, rather than a trusteeship, was all that was created between the lender and borrower [Petherbridge v. Prudential Sav. & Loan Assn. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 509, 518-523, 145 Cal. Rptr. 87].

§ 25.19 Hazard Insurance as Requirement of Loan

A lender may not require a borrower, as a condition of receiving or maintaining a loan secured by real property, to provide hazard insurance coverage against risks to the improvements on the real property in an amount exceeding the replacement value of the improvements [Civ. Code § 2955.5(a)]. The lender must give the borrower a written disclosure of this provision as soon as practicable and in any case before execution of any note or security documents [Civ. Code § 2955.5(b)]. For these purposes, hazard insurance coverage means (1) insurance against losses caused by perils that are commonly covered in policies described as, among other things, a homeowner's policy or a general property form, or (2) comparable insurance coverage protecting the real property against loss or damage from fire and other perils covered within the scope of a standard extended coverage endorsement [Civ. Code § 2955.5(e)(1)]. A violation of these requirements does not affect the validity of the loan, secured note, or security instrument [see Civ. Code § 2955.5(d)]. However, any person harmed by such a violation will be entitled to obtain injunctive relief and may recover damages, reasonable attorneys' fees, and costs [Civ. Code § 2955.5(c)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.23

§ 25.23 Truth in Lending Act (TILA)

[1] Purpose and Coverage of Act

A primary purpose of the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) [15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.] and Regulation Z [12 C.F.R. pt. 226] is to promote the informed use of consumer credit by requiring disclosures about its terms and cost [see 15 U.S.C. § 1601(a); see also 12 C.F.R. § 226.1(b)]. In general, TILA applies to all creditors, that is, those who regularly offer or extend credit to consumers, when the credit (1) is subject to a finance charge or is payable pursuant to a written agreement in more than four installments and (2) is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [see 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f); 12 C.F.R. § 226.1(c)(1); see also § 25.111; but see 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f) (special rules apply when credit is involved); 12 C.F.R. § 226.1(c)(2)]. TILA specifically applies to credit extended in connection with loans and sales of property [15 U.S.C. § 1602(f)].

TILA does not apply to a credit transaction that involves an extension of credit of more than $25,000 unless it is a private education loan subject to 15 U.S.C. § 1650 or requires the acquisition or retention of a security interest in real property, or in personal property used or to be used as the borrower's principal dwelling [see 15 U.S.C. § 1603(3); 12 C.F.R. § 226.3(b)]. Also excluded from the purview of TILA are extensions of credit primarily for business, commercial, or agricultural purposes [15 U.S.C. § 1603(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.3(a)(1)].

A loan that is secured by a deed of trust on a residence and obtained to invest in a limited partnership (formed to purchase real property) may be subject to TILA. Whether such an investment loan is for a personal purpose (and therefore covered by TILA) [see 15 U.S.C. § 1602(f), (h)], as opposed to a business or commercial purpose [see 15 U.S.C. § 1603(1) (exemptions from coverage)], must be determined on a case by case analysis. This analysis should consider the following factors [Thorns v. Sundance Properties (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1417, 1418-1419], which are applied to the analogous Regulation Z exemption for business or commercial transactions [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.3(a)(1), (2)]:

- The relationship of the borrower's primary occupation to the acquisition.
- The degree to which the borrower will personally manage the acquisition.

- The ratio of income from the acquisition to the borrower's total income.
- The size of the transaction.
- The borrower's statement of purpose for the loan.

[2] Disclosures in Real Estate Transactions

In a nonexempt real estate transaction, the creditor must furnish the borrower with a disclosure statement setting forth specific credit information required by TILA. The basic information that must be given includes all of the following:

- The identity of the creditor.
- A statement of the amount financed.
- The finance charge (identified as such) and the dollar amount of that charge [see § 25.23[3]].
- The annual percentage rate [see § 25.23[4]].
- Details of any variable rate [see § 25.23[6]].
- The payment schedule.
- The total of payments.
- The fact that there is a demand feature, if there is one.
- The total sale price.
- The fact that there is a prepayment penalty or credit, if any applies.
- Late payment charges that may be imposed.
- The fact that the creditor has or will acquire a security interest in the property purchased.
- Certain information relating to insurance obligations and security interest charges.
- The lender's assumption policy (that is, whether a subsequent purchaser of the dwelling will be permitted to assume the remaining obligation on its original terms).
- Deposit requirements.
- Disclosure that interest on any portion of the credit extension that is greater than the fair market value of the dwelling is not tax deductible for federal income tax purposes.

The disclosures must also refer to the contract for information about nonpayment, default, the right to accelerate the loan, prepayment rebates and penalties, and, at the lender's option, for further information about security interests and the lender's policy regarding assumption of the obligation [15 U.S.C. § 1638; 12 C.F.R. § 226.18]. For a form for a model disclosure statement, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

Normally, the lender must make the TILA disclosures before the consummation of the transaction [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1632, 1638(b)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.17(b)]. However, in a transaction subject to the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act [see 12 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.; see also § 25.24], in the case of any extension of credit that is secured by the dwelling of a consumer, the creditor must make good faith estimates of the disclosures required under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a) and then mail or deliver them not later than three business days after receipt of the borrower's loan application, which must be at least seven business days before consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(A)]. In addition, the creditor must comply with the following requirements.

- To expedite consummation of a transaction, if the consumer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency, the consumer may waive or modify the timing requirements for disclosures under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(A). To effect a waiver or modification, the consumer must provide to the creditor a dated, written statement describing the emergency and specifically waiving or modifying those timing requirements, which statement must bear the signature of all consumers entitled to receive the required disclosures; and the creditor must provide to the consumers, at or before the time of such waiver or modification, the final disclosures required by 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(1) [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(F)].

- The required disclosures must include this statement in conspicuous type size and format [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)(i)]: "You are not required to complete this agreement merely because you have received these disclosures or signed a loan application."

- The required disclosures must be provided in the form of final disclosures at the time of consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)(ii)].

- In any case in which the disclosure statement contains an annual percentage rate of interest that is no longer accurate, as determined under 15 U.S.C. § 1606(c), the creditor must furnish an additional, corrected statement to the borrower, not later than three business days before the date of consummation of the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(D)].

- The consumer must receive the disclosures before paying any fee to the creditor or other person in connection with the consumer's application for the extension of credit. If the disclosures are mailed to the consumer, the consumer is considered to have received them three business days after they are mailed. A creditor or other person may impose a fee for obtaining the consumer's credit report before the consumer has received the disclosures, provided the fee is bona fide and reasonable in amount [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(E)].

- If the annual rate of interest is variable, or the regular payments may otherwise be variable, then in addition to the other disclosures required by 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a), the disclosures provided under 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b) must label the payment schedule as "Payment Schedule: Payments Will Vary Based on Interest Rate Changes." Also, the disclosures must state, in conspicuous type size and format, examples of adjustments to the regular required payment on the extension of credit based on the change in the interest rates specified by the contract for such extension of credit. Among the examples required to be provided is an example that reflects the maximum payment amount of the regular required payments on the extension of credit, based on the maximum interest rate allowed under the contract, in accordance with the rules of the Federal Reserve Board [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(C)].

The requirements of 15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(B)-(E), above, do not apply to extensions of credit relating to timeshare plans described in 11 U.S.C. § 101(53D) [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(2)(G)].

In a consumer credit transaction secured by the consumer's principal dwelling, in which the extension of credit may exceed the dwelling's fair market value, the disclosure that interest on the portion of the credit extension that is greater than the dwelling's fair market value will not be tax deductible for federal income tax purposes [see 15 U.S.C. § 1638(a)(15)] must be made at the time the consumer applies for the credit extension [15 U.S.C. § 1638(b)(3)].

A creditor (and certain third parties) must provide detailed information to a consumer regarding any home equity loan (which is an open-end consumer credit plan that provides for an extension of credit secured by the consumer's dwelling) [15 U.S.C. § 1637a(a); 12 C.F.R. § 226.5b(a)]. Further, the creditor must comply with substantive limitations imposed by law on these loans [15 U.S.C. § 1647(a); 12 C.F.R. § 226.5b(f)]. For further discussion and a model disclosure statement, see § 25.237.

A lender must make subsequent disclosures under certain circumstances. For example, subsequent disclosures are required on refinancing [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.20(a)]. For a list of these disclosures, see § 25.140.

[3] Computing Finance Charge to Be Disclosed

Although there are certain exceptions with regard to real estate transactions, the amount of the finance charge in a consumer credit transaction generally is the sum of all charges payable directly or indirectly by the consumer, and imposed directly or indirectly by the creditor as an incident to the extension of credit [see 15 U.S.C. § 1605]. These include all of the following [15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)-(c); 12 C.F.R. § 226.4(b)]:

- Interest, time-price differential, and any amount payable under a point, discount, or other system of additional charges.
- Service or carrying charge, loan fee, finder's fee, or similar charge.
- Fee for an investigation or credit report.
- Premium or other charge for any guaranty or insurance protecting the creditor, and, subject to exceptions, premiums for credit life, accident, health, and property damage and liability insurance.

The following charges are not finance charges [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.4(c)(1)-(6)]:

- Credit application fees.
- Late payment charges.
- Some charges imposed for overdrawn accounts.
- Fees for participation in a credit plan.
- Seller's points.
- Certain interest forfeitures.

The following types of fees, if bona fide and reasonable in amount, are also excluded from the finance charge [12 C.F.R. § 226.4(c)(7)]:

- Fees for title examination, abstract of title, title insurance, property survey, and similar purposes.

- Fees for preparing deeds, mortgages, reconveyance, settlement, and similar documents.

- Notary, appraisal, and credit report fees.

- Amounts required to be paid into escrow or trustee accounts if the amounts would not otherwise be included in the finance charge.

Premiums for credit-related life, accident, health, or loss-of-income insurance and for property-damage and liability insurance may be excluded from the finance charge under certain conditions [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.4(d)]. If itemized and disclosed, taxes and fees prescribed by law and paid to public officials with respect to a security interest or a premium for insurance in lieu of perfecting a security interest may also be excluded from the finance charge [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.4(e)]. Income to be received by the consumer from deposits or investments may not be deducted in computing the finance charge [12 C.F.R. § 226.4(f)].

For further discussion of computing the finance charge, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 105, Truth in Lending , Pt. D (Matthew Bender).

Some charges in real estate transactions that are excluded in computing the finance charge are included in the closing costs, and are therefore subject to the disclosure requirements of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974 [see 12 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.]; see also § 25.238.

[4] Determining Annual Percentage Rate

The annual percentage rate is the cost of credit expressed as a yearly rate. It relates the amount and timing of value received by the consumer to the amount and timing of payments made. In closed-end credit transactions [see [5][a], below], the creditor may use either the actuarial method or the United States Rule method of computing the annual percentage rate [12 C.F.R. § 226.22(a)(1)]. The rate disclosed must be accurate to the nearest eighth of 1 percent [12 C.F.R. § 226.22(a)(2)]. For further discussion of the annual percentage rate, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales ; see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 105, Truth in Lending , Pt. E (Matthew Bender).

[5] Right of Rescission

[a] Overview

Generally, a consumer may rescind a credit transaction in which a security interest (including one that arises by operation of law) is or will be retained or acquired in the consumer's principal dwelling [15 U.S.C. § 1635(a); 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(a), 226.23(a)]. The types of credit extensions that may be rescinded differ depending on whether the transaction involves open-end or closed-end credit.

Closed-end credit is consumer credit other than open-end credit [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(10)].

Open-end credit means consumer credit extended by a creditor under a plan in which (1) the creditor reasonably contemplates repeated transactions; (2) the creditor may impose a finance charge from time to time on an outstanding unpaid balance; and (3) the amount of credit that may be extended to the consumer during the term of the plan (up to any limit set by the creditor) is generally made available to the extent that any outstanding balance is repaid [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(20)].

[b] Affected Transactions

In closed-end credit transactions, each consumer whose ownership interest is or will be subject to the security interest has the right to rescind, unless the right to rescind does not apply to the transaction [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(a)(1); see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e); 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f) (transactions exempt from right to rescind)]. The principal type of closed-end credit transaction that is exempt from the right to rescind is a residential mortgage transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(1)].

In open-end credit transactions, the consumer has the right to rescind all of the following [12 C.F.R. § 226.15(a)(1)(i)]:

- Each credit extension made under the credit plan.
- The plan when it is opened.
- A security interest when added or increased to secure an existing plan.
- The increase when a credit limit on the plan is increased.

The statutory right of rescission applies not only to transactions in which a security interest is created by the action of the homeowner (for example, the execution of a mortgage or deed of trust), but also when the security interest or lien arises by operation of law [15 U.S.C. § 1635(a)] (for example, mechanics' liens and other statutory liens) [see N.C. Freed Co., Inc. v. Board of Governors of Fed. Res. Sys. (2d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 1210, 1213]. Therefore, the disclosure requirements and rescission rights of TILA apply to home improvement contracts when the consumer executes an unsecured promissory note for the contract price, since the contractor will subsequently obtain a statutory lien on the consumer's property, thereby bringing the transaction within the purposes of TILA [N.C. Freed Co., Inc. v. Board of Governors of Fed. Res. Sys. (2d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 1210, 1213].

[c] Exceptions

The right to rescind in a closed-end credit transaction does not apply to the following [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f); see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)]:

- A residential mortgage transaction, that is, a transaction in which a mortgage, deed of trust, purchase money security interest arising under an installment sales contract, or equivalent consensual security interest is created or retained in the consumer's principal dwelling to finance its acquisition or initial construction [15 U.S.C. § 1602(w); 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(24)].
- A transaction in which a state agency is a creditor.
- An advance (other than an initial advance) in a series of advances or series of single-payment obligations treated as single transactions [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.17(c)(6)], if a notice of the right to rescind and all material disclosures have been given to the consumer.
- A renewal of optional insurance premiums that is not considered a refinancing under the regulations.

The right to rescind in a closed-end credit transaction does not apply to a refinancing or consolidation by the same creditor of a credit extension already secured by the consumer's principal dwelling. However, the right of rescission does apply to the extent the new amount financed exceeds the unpaid principal balance, any earned unpaid finance charge on the existing debt, and amounts attributable solely to the costs of the refinancing or consolidation [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f); see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e); see also § 25.231].

There is no right to rescind each credit extension made under an open-end plan if the extension is made in accordance with a previously established credit limit [12 C.F.R. § 226.15(a)(1)(ii)]. Only two types of transactions are exempt from the right of rescission: (1) a residential mortgage transaction, as defined above, and (2) a credit plan in which a state agency is a creditor [12 C.F.R. § 226.15(f)].

[d] Exercise of Right

The right of rescission may be exercised until midnight of the third business day following consummation of the transaction, delivery of the required notice of the right to rescind [see §§ 25.230-25.236], or delivery of all material disclosures, whichever occurs last [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3)]. Material disclosures in closed-end credit transactions encompass the annual percentage rate, the finance charge, the payment schedule, and certain disclosures and limitations in cases involving high-cost mortgage loans and higher-priced mortgage loans [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(a)(3) n.48; see 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.32(c),(d) (high-cost mortgage loans), 226.35(b)(2) (higher-priced mortgage loans)]. In open-end credit transactions, material disclosures cover the method of determining the finance charge and the balance on which it will be imposed, the annual percentage rate, and the amount or method of determining the amount of any membership or participation fee that may be imposed [*see 12 C.F.R. § 226.15(a)(3)*n.36]. In addition, in a home equity open-end credit transaction, material disclosures must include the length of the draw period and of any repayment period [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.5b(d)(5)(i)] as well as an explanation of how the minimum periodic payment will be determined and the timing of the payments [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.5b(d)(5)(ii)]. For further discussion of disclosures regarding home equity plans, see § 25.237. If the lender does not deliver the required notice or material disclosures, the right to rescind expires three years after consummation, on the transfer of the consumer's interest in the property, or on the sale of the property, whichever occurs first [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(a)(3), 226.23(a)(3)].

[e] Effect of Rescission

When a consumer exercises his or her right to rescind, the security interest that gave rise to the right to rescind becomes void and the consumer is not liable for any amount, including any finance charge [12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(d)(1), 226.23(d)(1)]. Within 20 calendar days after receipt of a notice of rescission, the creditor must return any money or property given to anyone in connection with the transaction and take any action necessary or appropriate to reflect termination of the security interest [15 U.S.C. § 1635(b); 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(d)(2), 226.23(d)(2)].

If the creditor has delivered any money or property, the consumer may retain possession until the creditor has returned any money or property given to anyone in connection with the transaction and taken the action necessary or appropriate to reflect termination of the security interest. After the creditor has fulfilled these obligations, the consumer must tender the money or property to the creditor. If tender of money or property would be impracticable or inequitable, the consumer must tender its reasonable value. At the consumer's option, tender of property may be made at the location of the property or at the consumer's residence. Tender of money, however, must be made at the creditor's place of business as designated in the notice of the right of rescission. If the creditor does not take possession of the tendered money or property within 20 calendar days after tender, the customer may keep it without further obligation [12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(d)(3), 226.23(d)(3)].

The procedures governing return of money or property by the creditor and tender and return of money or property by the consumer are subject to modification by court order [12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(d)(4), 226.23(d)(4)]. Because the right of rescission is an equitable doctrine and subject to equitable considerations, a court may condition the granting of rescission on repayment of the principal amount of the underlying loan to the creditor [Brown v. Nat. Permanent Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (D.C. Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 444, 446-447].

Attorneys have a legal right to a fee award in a successful action for rescission under TILA [see 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(3)]. Attorneys may seek those fees in actions initiated after settlement of the clients' claims [James v. Home Constr. Co. (11th Cir. 1982) 689 F.2d 1357, 1359].

[f] Waiver or Modification of Right of Rescission

The right of rescission may not be modified or waived by a customer except in extraordinary circumstances, when the customer determines that the extension of credit is needed to meet a bona fide personal financial emergency, and each customer involved furnishes the creditor with a dated, written, and signed statement describing the emergency and modifying or waiving the right of rescission [see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(d); 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(e), 226.23(e)]. Printed forms may not be used for such a modification or waiver [12 C.F.R. §§ 226.15(e), 226.23(e)].

[6] Disclosures in Adjustable-Rate Mortgage Loans

The interest rate, time-price differential, and any other amount payable under a point, discount, or other system of additional charges must be disclosed [see 15 U.S.C. § 1605(a)]. Under regulations applicable to federal savings associations, the interest rate, payment, loan balance, and loan term of a home loan may be adjusted if the term of the loan does not exceed 40 years, provided several other requirements are met [12 C.F.R. § 560.30]. Within three business days following receipt of an application for a home loan, a federal savings association must disclose to the loan applicant the terms of the types of loans offered to the applicant. An adjustment notice containing specified information [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.20(c)] must be delivered or mailed at least once in each year in which a rate adjustment is implemented without an accompanying payment change, and at least 25, but not more than 120, days before a payment at the new level is due [12 C.F.R. § 560.210]. These federal regulatory requirements preempt state laws purporting to govern the right of a federally chartered savings association to make adjustable-rate mortgage loans [12 C.F.R. § 560.2(a); see 12 C.F.R. § 560.110].

A creditor must include in any consumer credit contract secured by a dwelling and subject to TILA and Regulation Z the maximum interest rate that may be imposed during the term of the obligation if (1) in the case of closed-end credit [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(10); see also [5][a], above], the annual percentage rate may increase after consummation, or (2) in the case of open-end credit [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(20); see also [5][a], above], the annual percentage rate may increase during the plan [12 C.F.R. § 226.30].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.24

§ 25.24 Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA)

[1] Purpose

The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974 (RESPA) [12 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.; see 24 C.F.R. pt. 3500] was enacted primarily to ensure that consumers are provided with timely information regarding the nature and costs of the settlement process and are protected from unnecessarily high settlement charges resulting from abusive lending practices [see 12 U.S.C. § 2601(a)]. Specifically, the purposes of RESPA include all of the following [12 U.S.C. § 2601(b)]:

- To make effective advance disclosure to home buyers and sellers of settlement costs.
- To eliminate kickbacks or referral fees that tend to increase the costs of certain settlement services unnecessarily.
- To reduce the amounts home buyers are required to place in escrow accounts established to ensure the payment of real estate taxes and insurance.
- To reform and modernize local record-keeping of land title information.

RESPA does not set the prices for settlement services but does require a lender to provide the buyer and seller in a real estate transaction with timely information on the nature and costs of the settlement process. The requirements of RESPA apply to any federally related mortgage loan [see 24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b) (definition); see also § 25.112].

A form for the lender's good faith estimate of the settlement charges likely to be incurred by a borrower in a covered transaction is set forth in § 25.238.

[2] Prohibitions Against Kickback and Referral Fees

It is unlawful for any person to give or receive a fee, kickback, or anything of value for referring business incident to or as part of a settlement subject to RESPA to any particular person [12 U.S.C. § 2607(a)]. Giving or receiving any part of a fee charged for rendering a settlement service in connection with a transaction subject to RESPA, without the recipient actually performing services for the fee, is also unlawful [12 U.S.C. § 2607(b)]. Violators are subject to criminal and civil penalties [see 12 U.S.C. § 2607(d)(1), (2)].

RESPA does not prohibit the payment of a fee (1) to an attorney for services actually rendered, (2) by a title company to its duly appointed agent for services actually performed in the issuance of a policy of title insurance, or (3) by a lender to its duly appointed agent for services actually rendered in the making of a loan [12 U.S.C. § 2607(c); 24 C.F.R. § 3500.14(f)(1)]. The payment to any person of a bona fide salary, compensation, or other payment for goods or facilities actually furnished or services actually performed, and payment pursuant to a cooperative brokerage and referral arrangement or agreement between real estate agents and brokers are also exempt from the statutory prohibition [12 U.S.C. § 2607(c); 24 C.F.R. § 3500.14(f)(2), (3)]. Another exception applies to normal promotional and educational activities not directly conditioned on the referral of business and not involving the defrayal of expenses that otherwise would be incurred by persons in a position to refer settlement business, such as title company receptions, free seminars on title matters to professionals, and the furnishing of certain property information without charge to professionals [24 C.F.R. § 3500.14(f)(4)]. The waiver by a lender of a requirement that a borrower pay a prepayment penalty provided in mortgage documents, whether or not the waiver is conditioned on the lender's receipt of a loan application from, or the making of a loan to, the borrower or person purchasing property from the borrower is also not unlawful under RESPA [24 C.F.R. § 3500.14(f)(5)].

HUD has developed a test for determining whether yield spread premiums ("YSPs"), which are fees paid by mortgage lenders to mortgage brokers based on the difference between the interest rate at which the broker originates the loan and the par, or market rate, offered by the lender, are prohibited under RESPA. Under this test, a payment from a lender to a mortgage broker is not prohibited when (1) goods and facilities are actually furnished or services are actually performed for the compensation paid, and (2) the discount is reasonably related to the value of the goods or facilities actually furnished or the services actually performed [RESPA Statement of Policy 2001-1, 66 Fed. Reg. 53052, 53054 (Oct. 18, 2001) ; see Schuetz v. Banc One Mortgage Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 1004, 1014 (HUD test entitled to substantial deference; YSP did not violate RESPA because there was substantial evidence that mortgage broker provided borrower compensable goods, facilities, and services); Bjustrom v. Trust One Mortgage Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 1201 (following Schuetz and holding that YSP did not violate RESPA); Geraci v. Homestreet Bank (9th Cir. 2003) 347 F.3d 749, 751-752 (judgment granted for defendant as matter of law when plaintiffs failed to allege that YSPs were not reasonably related to value of goods or facilities that were actually furnished or services that were actually performed); Byars v. SCME Mortgage Bankers, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1134, 1144-1145, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 796 (payment of YSPs when borrower has paid 1 percent loan origination fee does not violate HUD regulations; YSP stated as lump sum rather than itemized list of services and fees was proper); see also Lane v. Residential Funding Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 739, 744 (applying HUD YSP test to hold that lender's arrangement with title company for discounts on title insurance and escrow fees did not violate RESPA)].

A seller of property in a transaction subject to RESPA may not directly or indirectly require, as a condition of the sale, that the buyer purchaser title insurance on the property from any particular title company [12 U.S.C. § 2608(a)]. In the event of a violation, the seller is liable to the buyer in an amount equal to three times all charges made for the title insurance [12 U.S.C. § 2608(b)].

Certain controlled business arrangements do not constitute payments prohibited by law. A controlled business arrangement is an arrangement in which (1) a person who is in a position to refer business incident to or part of a real estate settlement service involving a federally related mortgage loan, or an associate of such a person, has either an affiliate relationship with or a direct or beneficial ownership interest of more than one percent in a provider of settlement services, and (2) either of those persons directly or indirectly refers the business to that provider or affirmatively influences the selection of that provider [12 U.S.C. § 2602(7)]. A controlled business arrangement is not unlawful if all of the following conditions are satisfied [12 U.S.C. § 2607(c)]:

- At or before the time of referral, full disclosure of the arrangement is made to the person being referred, and that person is provided with an accurate written estimate of the charge or range of charges.

- The person is not required to use any particular provider of settlement services.

- The only thing of value that is received from the arrangement (other than payments authorized by statute) is a return on ownership interest or franchise relationship.

[3] Restrictions on Advance Deposits in Escrow or Reserve Accounts

A lender in a transaction subject to RESPA is limited as to the amount it may require a borrower or prospective borrower to deposit in any escrow or trust account established for the payment of taxes, insurance premiums, or other charges on the mortgaged property. The lender may not require the deposit of any amount in excess of the maximum specified by statute either before or on the date of settlement, or in any month after the first full installment payment under the mortgage becomes due [12 U.S.C. § 2609(a)(1), (2)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.25

§ 25.25 California Disclosure Requirements

[1] Arrangers of Credit and Seller Financing

Certain disclosures are required for any transaction involving the purchase of a dwelling for not more than four families if the purchase includes an extension of credit by the vendor and there is an arranger of credit [Civ. Code § 2956; see Civ. Code § 2957(d) (credit must involve finance charge or be payable in more than four installments)]. An arranger of credit is a person, other than a party to the credit transaction, who (1) is involved in developing or negotiating credit terms and in completing the credit documents, and (2) directly or indirectly receives compensation for these services or from any transaction or transfer of real property that is facilitated by these services. Excluded from this definition are (1) attorneys who represent one of the parties, (2) persons acting as escrow holders in the transaction, and (3) escrow holders who do not act as arrangers of credit [see Civ. Code § 2957(a)]. If a real estate licensee or a licensed attorney is a party, that person is considered an arranger of credit unless neither party to the transaction is represented by a real estate licensee [Civ. Code § 2957(a)(2)].

The disclosures must be made before execution of any note or security documents [Civ. Code § 2959], and must be made to the purchaser by the arranger of credit and the vendor, and to the vendor by the arranger of credit and the purchaser [Civ. Code §§ 2956, 2959, 2963]. Specified information must be disclosed [see Civ. Code § 2963]. The California Association of Realtors has prepared a standard form containing this information [see § 25.255].

These disclosures need not be made to a purchaser or seller entitled to receive alternative disclosures pursuant to the Truth in Lending Act [15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.; see § 25.23], the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act [12 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.; see § 25.24], selected sections of the Business and Professions Code pertaining to mortgage loan transactions [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10232.4, 10232.5, 10240; see also §§ 25.250, 25.260], or the qualification or exemption requirements of Corp. Code § 25110 [Civ. Code § 2958; see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues].

[2] Adjustable-Payment, Adjustable-Rate Residential Loans

Any lender offering adjustable rate residential mortgage loans must give prospective borrowers a copy of the most recent available publication of the Federal Reserve Board that is designed to provide the public with descriptive information concerning adjustable-rate mortgages. The lender must provide this publication either at the prospective borrower's request or at the same time the lender first provides written information, other than direct mail advertising, concerning any adjustable rate residential mortgage loan or credit sale to the prospective borrower, whichever is earlier [Civ. Code § 1921(b); see Civ. Code § 1921(c) (alternative distribution method available to lenders subject to specified federal lending and disclosure requirements)]. Any lender who fails to comply with this disclosure requirement may be enjoined by any court of competent jurisdiction and will be liable for actual damages, the costs of the action, and reasonable attorneys' fees as determined by the court. The court may make any orders necessary to prevent future violations [Civ. Code § 1921(b)].

An adjustable rate residential mortgage loan is any loan or credit sale that is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, that bears interest at a rate subject to change during the term of the loan (whether predetermined or otherwise), and that is made on the security of real property containing one to four dwelling units [Civ. Code § 1921(a)(1)]. A lender subject to the disclosure requirement is any person, association, corporation, partnership, limited partnership, or other business entity making more than 10 loans or credit sales, in any 12-month period, on the security of residential real property containing one to four dwelling units [Civ. Code § 1921(a)(2)].

[3] Home Equity Loans

The Home Equity Loan Disclosure Act [Civ. Code § 2970 et seq.] applies to any open-end consumer credit plan in which a consensual security interest is created or retained against the consumer's dwelling (called a home equity loan) [Civ. Code § 2970]. A creditor must provide an applicant for a home equity loan with a disclosure in either of two specified forms, unless similar disclosure requirements are imposed by a federal statute or regulation, and the creditor has complied with those requirements [Civ. Code § 2971(a)(1), (2), (c); see § 25.202]. The disclosure explains that the loan will be secured by the prospective borrower's home, and that a default could result in the loss of the home. It must be made by (1) a separate and specific document attached to or accompanying the application, or (2) a clear and conspicuous statement on the application [Civ. Code § 2971(b)].

[4] Notice of Right to Receive Appraisal

A lender in a loan transaction secured by real property must provide a notice to a loan applicant of the applicant's right, on request, to receive a copy of the appraisal, provided the applicant has paid for the appraisal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11302(b) (appraisal defined)]. If the loan is to be secured by residential real property [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(a)(3) (real property in California containing only a one- to four- family residence)], the notice must be set forth in at least 10 point boldface type in a separate document that the applicant may retain. Further, the notice must contain specified information, including an address to which the request should be sent [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(d)], and must be given no later than 15 days after the lender receives the written loan application [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(d)].

If the loan is to be secured by nonresidential real property, the notice must be given within 15 days of the lender's receipt of the appraisal. The notice must state, among other things, that the applicant is only entitled to receive the appraisal or appraisals obtained by the lender for the purpose of evaluating the applicant's pending request for an extension of credit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(e)].

An applicant's written request for a copy of an appraisal must be received by the lender no later than 90 days after (1) the lender has provided notice of the action taken on the application or a notice of incompleteness, or (2) the application has been withdrawn [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(d)]. The lender must mail or deliver a copy of the appraisal within 15 days after receiving the applicant's request, or within 15 days after receiving the appraisal, whichever occurs later [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(c)]. Release of the appraisal to the applicant may be conditioned upon payment of (1) the cost of the appraisal, and (2) in the case of a loan secured by nonresidential real property, the cost of duplicating the appraisal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(d), (e)].

The above requirements are in addition to any right of access to appraisals that exists under any other provision of state or federal law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(i)]. They are not intended to effect a change in current law in any manner with respect to reliance on an appraisal by anyone other than the lender who released the appraisal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(f)].

These requirements do not apply to appraisals obtained by a lender on property owned by the lender, or to appraisals obtained by the lender in anticipation of modifying any existing loan agreement if the lender has not charged for the appraisal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(g)]. In the case of loans secured by residential real property, compliance with Regulation B [see 12 C.F.R. § 202.1 et seq.] is deemed to be compliance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11423(h)].

§ 25.26 Application of Statute of Frauds

A contract, promise, undertaking, or commitment to lend money or to grant or extend credit, in an amount greater than $100,000, is invalid unless the contract, or some note or memorandum of it, is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by the party's agent, if both of the following apply [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(7)]:

- It is made by a person engaged in the business of lending or arranging for the lending of money or extending credit; and

- It is not primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

A contract, promise, undertaking, or commitment to lend money secured solely by residential property consisting of one to four dwelling units is deemed to be for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(7)] and, therefore, is not subject to the statute of frauds.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.110

§ 25.110 Evaluating Available Sources of Loans

1. Consider general type of loan usually made by specific class of lender.

a. For commercial banks: commercial, FHA insured, and VA guaranteed loans on all types of real property in locale of bank, generally for short term and for bank customers [see § 25.12[2]].

b. For savings associations: conventional, FHA insured, VA guaranteed, and amortized first-lien loans on all types of real property (but mostly single-family dwellings) in locale of association [see § 25.12[3]].

c. For insurance companies: large conventional, FHA insured, and VA guaranteed loans on all types of property made:
(1) Through mortgage companies acting as loan correspondents; or

(2) Directly if local real estate loan office can make appraisals and process loan.

d. For pension, profit-sharing, and welfare funds: real estate loans, usually obtained through mortgage companies or mortgage brokers.

e. For mortgage companies: conventional loans from their own funds and FHA-insured and VA guaranteed loans if company has amount of capitalization and approval required.

NOTE:

A mortgage company cannot negotiate a loan for, or sell a loan to, a person or entity without obtaining a real estate broker's license [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10131(d), (e)] and complying with regulations concerning the closing of the transactions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10230 et seq.] and maximum fees and commissions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10240 et seq.; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2840 et seq.]. When a mortgage company lends its own funds the usury law [Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1; Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1] applies, but otherwise regulation is minimal.

f. For FHA insured loan [see § 25.13[1]], whether loan is:

(1) For single-family residences and industrial, commercial, and other types of construction.

(2) Made by supervised financial institutions, including banks, savings associations, any institution whose deposits are insured by Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and approved mortgage companies or pension funds.

NOTE:
FHA insured loans are regulated as to purpose of loan, type of structure, loan-to-value ratio, interest rate, amount insurable, term of loan, service charge, and application fee. For a guide to obtaining an FHA insured loan, see § 25.130.

g. For VA guaranteed loan, whether borrower is veteran qualified for guaranty to purchase or improve home or farm [see § 25.13[2]; see also § 25.110].

h. For Cal-Vet loan, whether borrower is veteran qualified for guaranty to purchase or improve home or farm [see § 25.13[3]; see also § 25.110].

2. Compare maximum loan terms of specific lenders:

a. Commercial banks (state and national): for improved property, 30 years on fully amortized loans [Fin. Code § 1227(b); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 371, 1828(o); see also 12 C.F.R. §§ 34.1, 34.2].

b. California savings associations: for home loans, 40 years [see Fin. Code § 7504(b)].

NOTE:
Home loans are loans made on the security of one-to-four-unit residential dwellings (including condominiums and cooperatives), combinations of those dwellings and business property (if no more than 20 percent of the total appraised value of the real estate is attributable to the business use), farm residences, and combinations of farm residences and commercial farm real property [Fin. Code § 7504(a)(2)].

c. Federal savings associations: up to 40 years, depending on type of property [12 C.F.R. § 545.33].

d. Insurance companies [Ins. Code § 1192.2]:

(1) 30 years if loan secured by unencumbered lease.

(2) No statutory maximum on other loans.

e. FHA [12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(3)]:

(1) 30-year limitation if deed of trust not approved for insurance before construction.

(2) 35 years in all other cases.

f. VA: normally 25 years and 32 days, but may approve term of up to 30 years and 32 days, at time of origination [38 C.F.R. § 36.4505(a); see 38 U.S.C. § 3703(d)(1)].

NOTE:

The use of the longer term may be approved if (1) the income and expenses of the veteran applicant, under customary credit standards, would prevent him or her from making the required payments for a loan with a term of 25 years and 32 days, and (2) the veteran would be able to make the payments for a longer term [38 C.F.R. § 36.4505(a)]. In no event may the maturity date of a loan exceed the estimated economic life of the property securing the loan [38 C.F.R. § 36.4505(b)].

g. Cal-Vet: maximum of 40 years for farms or homes, 30 years for mobilehomes located in a mobilehome park [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(b)].

3. Compare lenders' requirements governing ratio of loan to appraised value:

a. California commercial banks [Fin. Code § 1227]:

(1) 60 percent of sound market value of real property (as determined by proper appraisal) for term not in excess of 10 years.

(2) 90 percent for 30 years when repayable in substantially equal installments not less often than monthly, unless security is guaranteed or insured by private insurer, licensed by Insurance Commissioner, in which case ratio may exceed 90 percent.

(3) 90 percent of appraised value of productive agricultural lands, including farms, for 30 years when repayable in substantially equal installments not less often than annually.

(4) 85 percent for short-term loans (not exceeding six months).

(5) 85 percent for building or refinancing loans when term does not exceed 60 months.

b. Commercial banks (national): varies, depending on type of property [see 12 U.S.C. §§ 371(a), 1828(o); see also 12 C.F.R. §§ 34.1, 34.2].

c. California savings associations: for home loans [see § 25.110], maximum permitted by Fin. Code § 7509, as determined by association's board of directors (but not exceeding 100 percent) [Fin. Code § 7504(b)(4)(A)].

NOTE:

At the time of origination, a real estate loan by a California savings association may not exceed 100 percent of the market value of the security property. The board of directors of the association must establish maximum loan-to-value ratios for loans secured by real estate [Fin. Code § 7509(a)]. A home loan may exceed the adopted ratio if it is secured by real estate and a savings account, and if the amount that exceeds the adopted ratio is secured by the savings account [Fin. Code § 7509(a)]. Additional statutory requirements and restrictions apply to loans in excess of 90 percent of the appraised value of the security property [see Fin. Code § 7509(a)-(c)*]. The association may not make a loan secured by unimproved real property if the loan-to-value ratio would exceed 80 percent of the appraised value of the unimproved real property [Fin. Code § 7509(d)].

d. Federal savings associations: generally up to 90 percent for improved real property, but may be increased to 100 percent if certain requirements are met [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 545.32(d), 545.33(b)].

e. Insurance companies: 80 percent [see Ins. Code § 1194.81].

f. FHA: principal obligation not exceeding appraised value of property and not exceeding smallest of following [12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(2)]:

(1) In case of single-family residence, 115 percent of median single-family house price in area;

(2) In case of duplex, triplex, or four-family residence, percentage of such median price that bears same ratio to such median price as dollar limitation in 12 U.S.C. § 1454(a)(2), stated below, bears to $93,750 (which is dollar limitation in such section for single-family residence), namely:

(a) $120,000 for duplex residence;

(b) $145,000 for triplex residence; and

(c) $180,000 for four-family residence; or

(3) In any case, 150 percent of dollar limitation stated in P (2), above, for residence of applicable size.

NOTE:

The dollar limitation in effect for a residence of any size in any area may not be less than the greater of (1) the dollar limitation in effect under 12 U.S.C. § 1709 for the area on October 21, 1998, and (2) 65 percent of the dollar limitation stated in P (2), above, for a residence of the applicable size [12 U.S.C. § 1709(b)(2)(A)].

g. VA: varies with lender [see 38 U.S.C. § 3703].

h. Cal-Vet: 98 percent [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71].

NOTE:

Cal-Vet may waive the initial payment in any case when the appraised value of the property equals the amount to be paid by Cal-Vet plus at least 5 percent. The purchaser may be required to pay a loan origination fee, not to exceed 1 percent of the loan amount, which may be added to the loan amount. In the case of a purchase requiring a VA guaranty, the department may waive the initial payment and the purchaser must pay the loan guaranty fee, which may be added to the loan amount [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(a)].

When a purchaser makes an initial payment of less than 20 percent of the selling price of the property, Cal-Vet must take prudent measures to minimize losses from loan defaults and loan delinquencies and must ensure the continued financial solvency of the loan program by charging fees to cover the costs of any loan guaranty, primary mortgage insurance, or other similar arrangement. Fees charged may be included in the amount of the loan, collected in advance, or collected as part of the monthly payment [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(g)]. The department may provide initial payment assistance to lower income first-time purchasers by providing a deferred-payment second loan, on which simple interest must be charged at a rate established by the department [Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.71(h)(1)]. This deferred-payment second loan is subject to all of the following conditions: (1) the loan may not exceed 3 percent of the selling price of the farm or home; (2) the loan must be secured by a deed of trust; and (3) the loan must be due and payable on payment in full of the contract or on the sale or transfer of the farm or home [Mil.

& Vet. Code § 987.71(h)(2)].

The maximum amount that Cal-Vet may pay for a home, condominium, mobilehome, or farm, or for the construction of a dwelling and other improvements, is regulated by statute [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.65]. The amount may be increased for the acquisition or construction of a home equipped with solar energy heating devices. However, the increase is not permitted for swimming pools, hot tubs, saunas, or spas except in the case of wounded or disabled veterans who provide satisfactory medical evidence that the pool, tub, sauna, or spa is therapeutically necessary [see Mil. & Vet. Code § 987.92].

4. Consider types of real property preferred by specific lender for real property loans:

a. Commercial banks (national and state): homes, small multiple residences, farms, and commercial properties.

b. Savings associations (federal and state): homes and multiple dwellings of all sizes.

c. Insurance companies: homes, large multiple residences, farms, and commercial properties.

d. FHA: all types of residential properties [12 U.S.C. §§ 1709, 1713, 1715].

e. VA: homes, condominiums, farms, or manufactured homes [38 U.S.C. § 3710(a)].

f. Cal-Vet: homes (including condominiums and mobilehomes) and farms [see Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 987.51, 987.53(b)].

5. Compare characteristics of specific types of loan and needs of client borrower.

a. Generally, fixed interest rates offered by various lenders may be ranked in following order from lowest to highest:

(1) Cal-Vet.

(2) VA.

(3) FHA.

(4) Insurance companies.

(5) Commercial banks.

(6) Savings associations.

NOTE:
The initial rate for adjustable-rate loans offered by conventional lenders may be much lower than for Cal-Vet, VA, or FHA loans.

b. Government-assisted loans and loans by savings associations typically have:

(1) Longest terms.

(2) Greatest loan-to-appraised-value percentage.

c. FHA is strict about borrower's financial profile.

d. Savings associations may be more concerned with security than borrower's financial capabilities.

e. Commercial banks:

(1) Are conservative in appraisals and lending practices.

(2) Prefer to deal with previous customers.

(3) Are less aggressive than savings associations in lending maximum permitted amounts.

f. Secondary financing is generally prohibited in government-assisted loans but is permitted by most institutional lenders.

g. Generally, compared with other institutional lenders:

(1) For banks:

(a) Interest rates are medium.

(b) Length of loan is shortest.

(c) Down payment is highest.

(2) For savings associations:

(a) Interest rate is highest.

(b) Length of loan is medium.

(c) Down payment is lowest.

(3) For insurance companies:

(a) Interest rate is medium.

(b) Term is longest.

(c) Down payment is medium.

(d) Total amount loaned is highest.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.111

§ 25.111 Applicability of Truth in Lending Act (TILA)

NOTE:
For further discussion of the Truth in Lending Act as it applies to real estate transactions, see § 25.23.

1. Determine whether all of following conditions exist [12 C.F.R. § 226.1(c)(1)]:

a. Lender is creditor, namely person [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(17)(i)]:
(1) Who regularly extends consumer credit that is:
(a) Subject to finance charge; or

(b) Payable by written agreement in more than four installments (not including a down payment); and

(2) To whom obligation is initially payable, either:

(a) On face of note or contract; or

(b) By agreement when there is no note or contract.

NOTE:
Credit is the right to defer payment of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(14)]. Consumer credit is credit offered or extended to a consumer primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(12)]. A consumer is a natural person to whom credit is offered for personal, family, or household purposes. For purposes of the right of rescission [see § 25.141], that term also includes a natural person in whose principal dwelling a security interest is or will be retained or acquired, if that person's ownership interest in the dwelling is or will be subject to the security interest [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(11), (12)]. A person regularly extends consumer credit only if that person extended it more than 25 times (or more than five times for transactions secured by a dwelling) in the preceding calendar year or will satisfy these numerical standards in the current calendar year [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(17)(i) n.3].

b. Credit is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

NOTE:

The extension of credit primarily for business, commercial, or agricultural purposes, or to governmental entities, is specifically exempted from coverage by the Truth in Lending Act [15 U.S.C. § 1603(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.3(a)]. A loan that is secured by a deed of trust on a residence and obtained in order to invest in a limited partnership (formed to purchase real property) may be considered to have a business or commercial purpose under certain circumstances [see Thorns v. Sundance Properties (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1417, 1418-1419 ; see also § 25.23[1]].

2. Determine whether transaction is exempt from TILA because it [15 U.S.C. § 1603(3); 12 C.F.R. § 226.3(b)]:

a. Involves extension of credit of more than $25,000; and

b. Does not require acquisition or retention or security interest in:

(1) Real property; or

(2) Personal property to be used as consumer's principal dwelling.

3. If transaction is subject to TILA and involves security interest (including security interests arising by law) that will be retained or acquired in consumer's principal dwelling [see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(a)], determine whether transaction is:

a. Open-end transaction, that is, any transaction involving consumer credit extended by creditor under plan in which [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(20)]:

(1) Creditor reasonably contemplates repeated transactions;

(2) Creditor may impose finance charge from time to time on unpaid balance; and

(3) Amount of credit that may be extended to consumer during term of plan (up to any limit set by creditor) is generally made available to extent that any outstanding balance is repaid.

b. Closed-end transaction, that is, any transaction involving consumer credit other than open-end credit [12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(10)].

NOTE:

If the underlying credit transaction is a contract for goods that requires the consumer to grant the creditor a security interest in real property, counsel should review the contract to confirm that the primary goods involved are to be attached to the real property in which the security interest is granted. Any contract for goods that provides for a security interest in real property violates California law if the primary goods sold are not to be attached to the real property [Civ. Code § 1804.3(b)].

4. In case of open-end or closed-end transaction described above, determine whether consumer does not have right to rescind because:

a. In case of open-end transaction, transaction involves:

(1) Credit extension made under open-end credit plan, if extension is made in accordance with previously established credit limit for plan [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(4); 12 C.F.R. § 226.15(a)(1)(ii)];

(2) Credit plan in which creditor is state agency [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(3); 12 C.F.R. § 226.15(f)(2)]; or

(3) Residential mortgage transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.15(f)(1)].

NOTE:
A residential mortgage transaction is a transaction in which a mortgage, trust deed, purchase money security interest arising under an installment sales contract, or equivalent consensual security interest is created or retained in the consumer's principal dwelling to finance its acquisition or initial construction [15 U.S.C. § 1602(w); 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)(24)].

b. In case of closed-end transaction, transaction involves any of following:

(1) Residential mortgage transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(1)].

(2) Refinancing or consolidation by same creditor of credit extension already secured by consumer's principal dwelling [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(2); see § 25.231].

(3) Transaction in which creditor is state agency [15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(3); 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(3)].

(4) Advance, other than initial advance, in series of advances or in series of single-payment obligations that is treated as single transaction [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.17(c)(6)], if following have been given to consumer [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(4); see 15 U.S.C. § 1635(e)(4)]:

(a) Notice of right to rescind [see 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(b)]; and

(b) All material disclosures.

(5) Renewal of optional insurance premiums that is not considered refinancing [12 C.F.R. § 226.23(f)(5); see 12 C.F.R. § 226.20(a)(5)].

CHAPTER 25 REAL ESTATE LOANS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.112

§ 25.112 Applicability of Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA)

NOTE:
A loan that meets all of the specified requirements and is not made to finance an exempt transaction will be considered a federally related mortgage loan subject to RESPA [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1) (definition); see 24 C.F.R. §§ 3500.2, 3500.5 (definitions of terms; coverage of RESPA].

1. Determine whether loan meets or will meet following requirements:

a. Loan will not be temporary financing, such as construction loan [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)].

b. Loan will be secured by first or subordinate lien (including refinancing of any secured loan) on residential real property, which is located in United States [24 C.F.R. § 3500.2 (definition of federally related mortgage loan: see par. (2))], and either:
(1) At least one structure designed principally for occupancy by one-to-four families (including individual units of condominiums or cooperatives) is located on property or, following settlement, will be constructed on property using proceeds of loan [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)(A)]; or

(2) Manufactured home is located on property or, following settlement, will be placed on property using proceeds of loan [24 C.F.R. § 3500.2 (definition of federally related mortgage loan: see par. (1)(i)(B))].

c. Loan will satisfy one of following requirements:

(1) Made in whole or in part by any lender that is regulated by, or whose deposits or accounts are insured by, any agency of United States [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)(B)(i)]; or

(2) Made in whole or in part, or insured, guaranteed, supplemented, or assisted in any way [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)(B)(ii)]:

(a) By Secretary of Housing and Urban Development or any other officer or agency of United States; or

(b) Under or in connection with housing or urban development program administered by Secretary of Housing and Urban Development or housing or related program administered by any other officer or agency of United States; or

(3) Intended to be sold by originating lender to either [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)(B)(iii)]:

(a) Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae);

(b) Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae);

(c) Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac); or

(d) Financial institution from which it is to be purchased by Freddie Mac; or

(4) Made in whole or in part by creditor [see 15 U.S.C § 1602(f) (definition)] that makes or invests in residential real estate loans aggregating more than $1,000,000 per year [12 U.S.C. § 2602(1)(B)(iv)]; or

NOTE:

For these purposes, a state agency or state instrumentality is not a creditor, and a residential real estate loan is any loan secured by residential property, including single-family and multifamily residential property [24 C.F.R. § 3500.2 (definition of federally related mortgage loan: see par. (1)(ii)(D))].

(5) Originated by dealer or, if obligation is to be assigned to any maker of mortgage loans listed in (1)-(4) above, originated by mortgage broker [24 C.F.R. § 3500.2 (definition of federally related mortgage loan: see par. (1)(ii)(E))]; or

(6) Secured by home equity conversion mortgage (also called reverse mortgage) issued by any maker of mortgage loans listed in (1)-(4) above [24 C.F.R. § 3500.2 (definition of federally related mortgage loan: see par. (1)(ii)(F))].

2. Determine whether loan or transaction falls within one of following categories, which are exempt from RESPA:

a. Loan on property constituting 25 or more acres, regardless of [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(1)]:

(1) Whether land is vacant;

(2) Whether land contains residential structure; or

(3) Purpose of loan.

b. Extension of credit primarily for business, commercial, or agricultural purpose [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(2)].

NOTE:

The definition of such an extension of credit for these purposes generally parallels Regulation Z [see 12*

C.F.R. § 226.3(a)(1)], and persons may rely on Regulation Z in determining whether the exemption applies. However, the exemption for business purpose loans does not include any loan to one or more persons acting in an individual capacity (natural persons) to acquire, refinance, improve, or maintain one- to four-family residential property used, or to be used, to rent to other persons. An individual who voluntarily chooses to act as a sole proprietorship is not considered to be acting in an individual capacity for these purposes [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(2)].

c. Temporary financing, such as construction loan [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(3)].

NOTE:

This exemption does not apply to a loan made to finance construction of one- to four-family residential property if the loan is used as, or may be converted to, permanent financing by the same lender or is used to finance transfer of title to the first user. If a lender issues a commitment for permanent financing, with or without conditions, the loan is covered by RESPA. Any construction loan for new or rehabilitated one- to four-family residential property, other than a loan to a bona fide builder (that is, a person who regularly constructs one- to four-family residential structures for sale or lease), is subject to RESPA if its term is for two years or more. A bridge loan or swing loan in which a lender takes a security interest in otherwise covered one- to four-family residential property is not covered by RESPA [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(3)].

d. Loan secured by vacant or unimproved property, unless within two years from date of loan settlement, any structure or manufactured home will be constructed or placed on that property using loan proceeds [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(4)].

NOTE:

If a loan for a structure or manufactured home to be placed on vacant or unimproved property will be secured by a lien on that property, the transaction is covered by RESPA [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(4)].

e. Any assumption in which lender does not have right expressly to approve subsequent person as borrower on existing federally related mortgage loan [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(5)].

NOTE:

Any assumption in which the lender's permission is both required and obtained is covered by RESPA, whether or not the lender charges a fee for the assumption [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(5)].

f. Any conversion of federally related mortgage loan to different terms that are consistent with provisions of original mortgage instrument, as long as new note is not required, even if lender charges additional fee for conversion [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5(b)(6)].

g. Bona fide transfer of loan obligation in secondary market, except as otherwise provided in RESPA and Regulation X [24 C.F.R. § 3500.5; see 24 C.F.R. § 3500.21].

B. Preliminary Determinations

10-25 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 25.113

§ 25.113 Miscellaneous

1. In case of new loan [see § 25.120], determine person who will negotiate with lender on buyer's behalf:

a. Buyer.

b. Attorney for buyer.

NOTE:
Counsel may negotiate a loan for a client without being deemed a mortgage loan broker [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131(d), 10230 et seq., 10240 et seq.; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2840 et seq.] because an attorney is expressly excluded from the definition of broker for purposes of licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133(a)(3); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.1(a)(5)].

c. Buyer's real estate broker.

NOTE:
The broker should have current information on the terms and availability of specific loans. The client may also wish to have the broker recommend a lender, obtain an informal commitment for the loan on the property, or prepare or assist in the preparation of material to be submitted by the buyer. For further discussion of real estate brokers, see Ch. 21, Agreements With Real Estate Brokers and Agents **.

d. Loan broker.

NOTE:
Loan brokers are usually either loan correspondents of institutional lenders (for example, mortgage companies) representing the lenders in the placement of loans, or brokers who are employed by borrowers and are aware of the needs and policies of institutional and private lenders.

2. If client wishes to obtain VA guaranteed loan [see § 25.131], determine whether client is qualified borrower, that is, whether client [38 U.S.C. § 3702(a)]:

NOTE:

If a veteran served on active duty during two or more of the periods below, entitlement derived from service during the most recent period (1) will cancel any unused entitlement derived from service during any earlier period and (2) will be reduced by the amount by which entitlement from service during any earlier period has been used to obtain certain direct, guaranteed, or insured housing loans [see 38 U.S.C. § 3702(a)(1)].

a. Was on active duty at least 90 days at any time during World War II, Korean Conflict, or Vietnam Era.

b. After September 15, 1940, was discharged or released from active duty for service-connected disability.

c. Satisfies either of following criteria:

(1) Served more than 180 days after July 25, 1947, and was discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable; or

(2) Has served more than 180 days in active duty status and continues on active duty without break in service.

d. Served on active duty at least 90 days at any time during Persian Gulf War, other than veteran ineligible for benefits by reason of 38 U.S.C. § 5303A(b) (imposing certain minimum active-duty service requirements).

3. If client wishes to obtain Cal-Vet loan [see § 25.132], determine whether client:

NOTE:

The veteran must satisfy all of the following criteria to be eligible for a Cal-Vet loan [see Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 980, 987.52]. The surviving spouses of eligible California veterans may also be eligible for benefits under certain circumstances. A veteran who served during more than one qualifying war period, as specified in Mil. & Vet. Code § 980, and who repaid in full a Cal-Vet loan, will be granted a subsequent opportunity to purchase a property under the Cal-Vet loan program if, among other things, the qualifying war periods were served during different periods of enlistment, even if there was no distinct break during enlistments [12 Cal. Code Reg. § 305.1(b), (d); see 12 Cal. Code Reg. § 305.1(a) (overnight reenlistment qualifies as separate period of service); see also 12 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 305.1(c), 305.2].

a. Satisfies any of following service requirements:

NOTE:

Active duty is full-time duty in the active military service of the United States, and active service is service on active duty or full-time National Guard duty [Mil. & Vet. Code § 980(c); see 10 U.S.C. § 101(d)].

(b) After June 26, 1950, and before February 1, 1955.

(d) After August 4, 1964, and before May 8, 1975.
