The form in [2], below, is a form that a public agency would use to enter into a contract with an environmental consultant to prepare environmental documentation for a project. It could cover an initial study, negative declaration, full environmental impact report (EIR), or whatever appropriate documents are needed. Although this form is usually prepared by public agency counsel and is often on a standard form, it is included here because there are some terms and conditions that the applicant's attorney should carefully review.

The form is drafted as a two-party agreement between the agency and the consultant. Some agencies will allow the developer to contract directly with the consultant, even though the agency itself is responsible under CEQA to prepare the documentation, and the consultant ultimately must take direction from the agency [see Pub. Res. Code § 21082.1; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15084]. In that event, the form can be modified to be used as a contract between the developer and the consultant.

[b] Conditions of Concern to Developer

Below is a discussion of the major terms of concern to the developer. Note that some of these terms are not contained in the form, but are in the exhibits to the form which would be different for each project. These exhibits must be carefully reviewed, particularly if they are taken directly from the consultant's proposal, since in that event they may not pin down the consultant to a sufficiently precise scope of work or schedule of performance.

- Price. Is the basis for the price to be charged clearly spelled out, e.g., fixed price, time and materials, or time and materials with a "not to exceed" number?

- Scope of Work. This would normally be produced by the consultant in response to a request for a proposal, and must be acceptable to the agency. Review it carefully for completeness. Does it include all activities reasonably foreseeable in the process, for example, meetings with applicant and staff, appearance at public hearings, etc.? Does it include drafting findings, and/or the mitigation monitoring plan? Does it provide for a suitable number of deliverables and include the full costs of reproduction and printing?

- Schedule. Is the schedule detailed? Is it realistic? Does it allow time for the agency staff and the developer to review administrative drafts of the EIR and of the responses to comments? What turnaround time does it assume for responding to comments? Does it include a time schedule for deliverables?

- Subconsultants. If technical studies are being done by others, make sure that the prices are stated and that the companies chosen are acceptable.

- Designated Individuals. It is often desirable to get the commitment of certain named individuals to supervise the work, do the work, and/or be available for presentations at hearings.

- Cancellation Clause. Since the developer's plans or time schedule may change, the contract should be terminable on notice without fault and with the only obligation to pay for work done to date.

[c] Requirements on Developer to Fund Work

Assuming the form is prepared as a contract between the agency and the consultant as set forth in [2], below, there will normally be a companion agreement between the developer and the agency obligating the developer to fund the work of the consultant [s ee § 30B.213].

PRACTICE TIP:

Use a Three-Party Agreement? It is possible to draft an agreement for preparation of environmental documentation to which the agency, the developer, and the consultant are all parties. This approach is not recommended, however, because it is difficult to spell out precisely who owes what duties to whom in a three-party agreement. The benefit, if any, of having only one agreement instead of two is likely to be outweighed by the extra drafting and negotiation time and expense necessary to create such a document.

Contract Between Public Agency and Environmental Consultant to Prepare Environmental Impact Report

AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT ("Agreement") is made and entered into on_____[date], by and between the City of_____[name of city], a Municipal Corporation ("City"), and_____[name of Consultant], a [capacity of consultant, e.g., California corporation] ("Contractor").

WHEREAS, City desires to retain consulting services to assist City in providing an Environmental Impact Report for the _____ project, and

WHEREAS, City desires to engage Contractor to provide these services by reason of its qualifications and experience for performing such services, and Contractor has offered to provide the required services on the terms and in the manner set forth herein;

NOW, THEREFORE, with reference to the foregoing recitals and in consideration of the mutual promises, obligations, and covenants contained in this Agreement, City and Contractor agree as follows:

1) PROJECT COORDINATION

a) City. The Planning Director of City shall be the representative of City for all purposes under this Agreement. Mr./Ms. _____ hereby is designated as the Project Manager for the Planning Director, and shall supervise the progress and execution of this Agreement.

b) Contractor. Contractor shall assign a single person to have overall responsibility for the progress and execution of this Agreement for Contractor, and to be Contractor's representative for all purposes under this Agreement (the "Project Director"). Mr./Ms. _____ hereby is designated as the Project Director for Contractor. The Project Director may not be replaced or substituted without the prior written consent of City's Project Manager, which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld.

2) DUTIES OF CONTRACTOR

a) Services to be Furnished. Contractor shall provide all specified services as set forth in, and in strict compliance with, Exhibit A-"Scope of Work," which is attached to this Agreement and incorporated herein by this reference. Such services shall be supplied, and the specified deliverables shall be delivered as set forth in, and in strict compliance with, Exhibit B-"Schedule of Services," which is attached to this Agreement and incorporated herein by this reference. Time is of the essence of each and every obligation calendared in Exhibit B.

b) Further Obligations. Contractor shall:

i) Procure all permits and licenses, pay all charges and fees, and give all notices which may be necessary and incident to the due and lawful prosecution of the services to be performed by Contractor under this Agreement;

ii) Keep itself fully informed of all existing and future federal, state, and local laws, ordinances, regulations, orders, and decrees which may affect those engaged or employed under this Agreement, any materials used in Contractor's performance under this Agreement, or the conduct of the services under this Agreement;

iii) At all times observe and comply with, and cause all of its subcontractors and employees, if any, to observe and comply with, all of said laws, ordinances, regulations, orders, and decrees mentioned above; and

iv) Immediately report to the Project Manager in writing any discrepancy or inconsistency it discovers in said laws, ordinances, regulations, orders, and decrees mentioned above in relation to any plans, drawings, specifications, or provisions of this Agreement.

c) Release of Reports and Information. Any reports, information, data, or other material given to, or prepared or assembled by, Contractor or its subcontractors, if any, under this Agreement shall be the property of City and shall not be made available to any individual or organization by Contractor or its subcontractors, if any, without the prior written approval of City.

d) Qualifications of Contractor. Contractor represents that it is qualified to furnish the services described under this Agreement.

3) COMPENSATION

For the full performance of the services described in this Agreement by Contractor, City shall pay Contractor based on fees shown in Exhibit C-"Payment Schedule," attached to this Agreement and incorporated herein by this reference. Contractor shall submit monthly bills to City specifying the amount due for services performed by Contractor's staff and a list of incurred expenses for the past calendar month. On approval of the services performed and the bill, City shall pay Contractor in accordance with such bills up to the agreed-upon maximum. Bills will be payable within thirty (30) days of invoice date.

4) TERM

The services to be performed under this Agreement shall commence on the execution of this Agreement by City and shall continue until terminated by either party or until completion.

5) SUSPENSION AND TERMINATION

a) Right to Suspend or Terminate. City may suspend or terminate this Agreement for any reason with or without cause by giving fifteen (15) days' written notice to Contractor. On receipt of such notice, Contractor shall immediately discontinue his/her performance under this Agreement.

b) Payment. On such suspension or termination, Contractor shall be paid for all services actually rendered to City to the date of the suspension or termination; provided, however, if this Agreement is suspended or terminated for fault of Contractor, City shall be obligated to compensate Contractor only for that portion of Contractor's services which are of benefit to City.

c) Return of Materials. On such suspension or termination, Contractor shall, on written demand, turn over to the Planning Director immediately any and all copies of studies, sketches, drawings, computations, and other data, whether or not completed, prepared by Contractor or its subcontractors, if any, or given to Contractor or its subcontractors, if any, in connection with this Agreement. Such materials shall become the permanent property of City. Contractor, however, shall not be liable for City's use of incomplete materials or for City's use of complete documents if used for other than the project contemplated by this Agreement.

6) ASSIGNMENT

Contractor shall not assign, transfer, convey, or otherwise dispose of this Agreement or any right, title, or interest in or to the same or any part thereof, nor delegate its duties under this Agreement, without the prior written consent of City, which consent may be withheld in City's sole and absolute discretion. A consent to one assignment shall not be deemed to be a consent to any subsequent assignment. This Agreement and any interest herein shall not be assignable by operation of law without the prior written consent of the other party.

7) SUBCONTRACTORS; EMPLOYEES

Contractor shall be responsible for employing or engaging all persons necessary to perform the services of Contractor under this Agreement. No subcontractor of Contractor will be recognized by City as such; rather, all subcontractors are deemed to be employees of Contractor, and it agrees to be responsible for their performance. Contractor shall give its personal attention to the fulfillment of the provisions of this Agreement by all of its employees and subcontractors, if any, and shall keep the work under its control. If any employee or subcontractor of Contractor fails or refuses to carry out the provisions of this Agreement or appears to be incompetent or to act in a disorderly or improper manner, he/she shall be discharged immediately from the work under this Agreement on demand of the Project Manager.

8) NOTICES

All notices required or provided for under this Agreement shall be in writing and delivered in person or sent by certified mail, postage prepaid, by overnight delivery or by facsimile.

Notices required to be given to City shall be addressed as follows:

_____ [name, address, and fax number]

Notices required to be given to Contractor shall be addressed as follows:

_____ [name, address, and fax number]

A party may change its address for notices by giving notice in writing to the other party, and thereafter all notices shall be addressed and transmitted to the new address. Notices shall be deemed given and received on the earlier of personal delivery, or if mailed, on the expiration of 48 hours after being deposited in the United States Mail or on the delivery date or attempted delivery date shown on the return receipt, air bill, or facsimile.

9) INTEREST OF CONTRACTOR

Contractor covenants that it presently has no interest, and shall not acquire any interest, direct or indirect, financial or otherwise, which would conflict in any manner or degree with the performance of the services under this Agreement. Contractor further covenants that, in the performance of this Agreement, no subcontractor or person having such an interest shall be employed. Contractor certifies that no one who has or will have any financial interest under this Agreement is an officer or employee of City. It is expressly agreed that, in the performance of the services under this Agreement, Contractor shall at all times be deemed an independent contractor and not an agent or employee of City.

10) INDEMNIFICATION

Contractor agrees to defend, indemnify, and hold harmless City, and its elected and appointed councils, boards, commissions, officers, agents, employees, and representatives from any and all claims, costs, and liability for any personal injury or property damage which may arise directly or indirectly as a result of any actions or negligent omissions by the Contractor, or any actions or negligent omissions of Contractor's subcontractors, agents, or employees in connection with the performance of services under this Agreement; provided, however, the provisions of this Paragraph shall not apply to the extent the City or its elected and appointed councils, boards, commissions, officers, agents, employees, or representatives, are found to have been negligent or to have committed willful misconduct.

11) INSURANCE

a) Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance. During the term of this Agreement, Contractor shall maintain in effect a policy of comprehensive general liability insurance with a per-occurrence combined single limit of not less than One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) and a deductible of not more than _____ Thousand Dollars ($_____) per claim. The policy so maintained by Contractor shall name the City as an additional insured and shall include either a severability of interest clause or cross-liability endorsement.

b) Workers Compensation Insurance. During the term of this Agreement, Contractor shall maintain Workers Compensation insurance for all persons employed by Contractor for work under this Agreement. Contractor shall require each contractor and subcontractor similarly to provide Workers Compensation insurance for its respective employees. Contractor agrees to indemnify the City for any damage resulting from Developer's failure to maintain any such insurance.

c) Evidence of Insurance. Prior to City Council approval of this Agreement, Contractor shall furnish City satisfactory evidence of the insurance required in this Agreement and evidence that the carrier is required to give the City at least thirty (30) days' prior written notice of the cancellation or reduction in coverage of a policy. The insurance shall extend to the City, its elective and appointive boards, commissions, officers, agents, employees and representatives and to Contractor and each subcontractor performing work under this Agreement.

12) AGREEMENT BINDING

The terms, covenants, and conditions of this Agreement shall apply to, and shall bind, the heirs, successors, executors, administrators, assigns, and subcontractors of both parties.

13) WAIVERS

The waiver by either party of any breach or violation of any term, covenant, or condition of this Agreement or any provision, ordinance, or law shall not be deemed to be a waiver of any other term, covenant, condition, ordinance, or law or of any subsequent breach or violation of the same or of any other term, covenant, condition, ordinance, or law.

14) COSTS AND ATTORNEYS' FEES

The prevailing party in any action brought to enforce or interpret the terms of this Agreement or arising out of this Agreement may recover its reasonable costs and attorneys' fees (including experts' costs and fees) expended in connection with such an action from the other party.

15) EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Contractor represents that it is an equal opportunity employer and it shall not discriminate against any subcontractor, employee, or applicant for employment because of race, religion, color, natural origin, handicap, ancestry, sex, or age. Such non-discrimination shall include, but not be limited to, all activities related to initial employment, upgrading, demotion, transfer, recruitment or recruitment advertising, layoff, or termination. Contractor shall also comply with all relevant portions of City's Minority Business Enterprise program, Affirmative Action Plan, or other related programs or guidelines currently in effect or enacted at a later time.

16) ENTIRE AGREEMENT. This document represents the entire and integrated Agreement between City and Contractor and supersedes all prior negotiations, representations, or agreements, either written or oral. This document may be amended only by written instrument, signed by both City and Contractor. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of California.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, City and Contractor have executed this Agreement the day and year first above written.

§ 30B.213 Contract Between Public Agency and Developer to Pay for CEQA Services

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a sample contract between a public agency and a developer to pay for CEQA related services. It is a companion form to the form in § 30B.212[2] (Contract Between Public Agency and Environmental Consultant to Prepare EIR), which would also be used for other appropriate CEQA documentation, such as an initial study and negative declaration [see §§ 30B.214, 30B.217]. It should be reviewed carefully to see that its terms for payment and delivery of product by the consultant are consistent with the contract between the agency and the consultant.

Below are some provisions the parties should consider before entering this agreement:

- Timing of Reimbursement. The developer should try for a provision that will require it to put up a minimal deposit, but pay bills promptly on receipt. There should be some mechanism for questioning a bill without being in breach of the agreement.

- Deposit. Normally the agency will want a deposit to start the consultant doing its work. Some agencies may want all or a significant portion of the total estimated costs deposited at the start of the project, but this is usually negotiable.

- Cancellation. The agreement should be cancelable on notice from the developer, with the obligation to pay for work to date.

- Payment of Actual Bills. The developer should try to limit the payments to reimbursement of actual bills from the consultant, without agency markup.

Note that this agreement is not intended necessarily to cover all aspects of the relationship between the agency and the developer with regard to the CEQA process. For example, other agency procedures may govern application fees and reimbursement for staff time. Similarly, there may be other, informal working agreements, such as a staff commitment to periodic meetings with the consultant and the developer.

[2] FORM

Contract Between Public Agency and Developer to Pay for CEQA Services

AGREEMENT FOR COST REIMBURSEMENT RELATED TO ENVIRONMENTAL DOCUMENTATION SERVICES

This agreement (the "Agreement") is made and entered on_____[date], by and between the City of _____, a municipal corporation ("City"), and _____, ("Developer"), and is made with respect to the following facts and circumstances:

A. Developer has applied for entitlements to allow for the permitting and construction of the _____ ("Project") and City staff has determined that the following documentation is required to be prepared in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act ("CEQA") in order to allow the City to process the requested entitlements for the Project: _____ [e.g., an EIR or an initial study and a mitigated negative declaration] (collectively, the "CEQA Documents").

B. To prepare the CEQA Documents, City has retained the services of _____ ("Consultant") based on the proposal for services (the "Proposal") City received from Consultant, dated _____ [date]. City will retain Consultant's services with the express understanding by City and Developer that all of the costs and expenses incurred by City under the Proposal shall be reimbursed promptly to City in full by Developer.

C. This Agreement provides for reimbursement to City by Developer of all costs and expenses incurred by City under its agreement with Consultant to implement the Proposal (the "City-Consultant Contract").

NOW, THEREFORE, with reference to the above recitals and in consideration of the mutual promises, obligations, and covenants contained in this Agreement, City and Developer agree as follows:

SECTION 1. Cost Reimbursement

1. Developer acknowledges that Consultant is or will be entitled to a maximum compensation in the amount of _____ dollars (the "Contract Amount") under the City-Consultant Contract, and hereby agrees to reimburse City in full for any and all costs or expenses incurred, billed, or charged to City pursuant to the City-Consultant Contract, or an amendment thereto, up to a maximum amount of the Contract Amount on certification by City that the work has been performed in a satisfactory manner.

2. Developer shall provide City with an initial deposit of _____ dollars within ten (10) days of execution of this Agreement, and shall pay the remainder of costs and expenses incurred by City under the City-Consultant Contract within ten (10) days of demand for said payment by City, which shall be based on a bill submitted by Consultant to City and provided to Developer. If Developer questions a bill from Consultant, Developer's and City's representatives shall promptly meet to review the matter, but Developer shall be bound by City's good faith decision as to the bill.

SECTION 2. Use of Funds

1. City shall use the funds provided to City by Developer pursuant to SECTION 1, above, solely to compensate Consultant for work and services provided and charged to City under the City-Consultant Contract, without adjustment or markup by City.

2. City shall promptly return to Developer all excess, unexpended, and unencumbered funds provided by Developer under SECTION 1, if any, remaining after City determines that Consultant has completed all work and services required under the City-Consultant Contract or after the termination of this Agreement.

SECTION 3. Entire Agreement. This Agreement contains the entire agreement of the parties with respect to the subject matter covered hereby, and no other agreement, statement, or promise made by any party, or made to any employee, officer, or agent of any party, with respect to the matters covered in this Agreement shall be binding.

SECTION 4. Compliance with Laws. Each party shall comply with all applicable laws, ordinances, codes, and regulations of the federal, state, and local governments in rendering performance under this Agreement.

SECTION 5. Governing Law and Venue. The parties agree that the law governing all aspects of this Agreement shall be that of the State of California. In the event that suit shall be brought by either party to this Agreement, the parties agree that venue shall be exclusively vested in the state courts of the County of _____.

SECTION 6. Termination. Either party shall have the right to terminate this Agreement, without cause, by giving not less than fifteen (15) days' prior written notice of the termination to the other party. In the event of termination, City shall refund any unexpended and unencumbered portion of the funds provided by Developer under SECTION 1, above. Any termination of this Agreement shall not affect Developer's obligation to reimburse City for any costs incurred by or charged to City pursuant to the City-Consultant Contract before the effective date of the termination of this Agreement so long as City has certified that said work has been satisfactorily performed by Consultant.

SECTION 7. Notices. All notices required or provided for under this Agreement shall be in writing and delivered in person or sent by certified mail, postage prepaid, by overnight delivery or by facsimile.

Notices given to City shall be addressed as follows:

_____ [name, address, and fax number]

Notices given to Developer shall be addressed as follows:

_____ [name, address, and fax number]

A party may change its address for notices by giving notice in writing to the other party, and thereafter all notices shall be addressed and transmitted to the new address. Notices shall be deemed given and received on the earlier of personal delivery, or if mailed, on the expiration of 48 hours after being deposited in the United States Mail or on the delivery date or attempted delivery date shown on the return receipt, air bill, or facsimile.

SECTION 8. Amendments. This Agreement may be modified only by a written amendment duly executed by the parties to this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have caused this Agreement to be executed as of the date and year first above written.

§ 30B.214 Environmental Information Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the environmental information form contained in Appendix H of the CEQA Guidelines [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15000 et seq.]. A lead agency [see Pub. Res. Code § 21067; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15367; see also § 30B.210[1][b][v]] may elect to use this form (which must be completed by a project applicant) and the environmental checklist form set forth in Appendix G of the CEQA Guidelines [see § 30B.215] (which must be completed by the agency) to satisfy the initial study requirements of CEQA [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(f); see [b], below].

[b] Preparation of Initial Study

An "initial study" is a preliminary analysis prepared by a lead agency to determine whether an environmental impact report (EIR) or a negative declaration must be prepared for a particular project or to identify the significant environmental effects to be analyzed in an EIR [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15365]. The lead agency normally prepares the initial study immediately after conducting a preliminary review and determining that the project is subject to CEQA. However, if the lead agency determines (after a preliminary review) that an EIR will clearly be required for the project, an initial study is not required but may still be desirable [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:
Skip the Initial Study? The initial study is primarily designed to be used as a tool to decide whether an EIR is necessary. In recent years, initial studies have often become bloated documents that are nearly the size of full EIRs themselves. They may take months to prepare, particularly if the agency requires the same technical studies to be prepared as would be required for the ultimate EIR. An initial study is not required if the decision has already been made to do an EIR [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(a)], either because there are unmitigatable environmental impacts or because of project controversy. Some practitioners recommend doing an initial study in that case anyway, as a means to help focus the ultimate EIR. This can, however, result in the additional time and expense of preparing two bulky environmental documents instead of one. Therefore, in many cases it is better to skip the initial study altogether, and apply the time and money saved directly to preparation of the EIR.

The lead agency must determine, within 30 days after accepting an application as complete, whether it intends to prepare an EIR or a negative declaration or use a previously prepared EIR or negative declaration. However, the lead agency and project applicant may agree to extend that 30-day period an additional 15 days [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15102; but see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15111].

[c] Alternative Forms

As an alternative to using the model forms in Appendices G and H of the CEQA Guidelines, a public agency may devise its own initial study form [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(f)] or use either an environmental analysis or similar analysis prepared pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(a)(2)], or a previously prepared EIR [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(f)], as an initial study.

[d] Required Contents

The initial study must consider all phases of project planning, implementation, and operation [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(a)(1)]. It must also contain all of the following in brief form [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(d)]:

- A description of the project, including its location;
- An identification of the environmental setting;
- An identification of environmental effects by use of a checklist, matrix, or other method;
- A discussion of ways to mitigate any significant effects identified;
- An examination of whether the project would be consistent with existing zoning, plans, and other applicable land use controls; and
- The name of the person(s) who prepared or participated in the initial study.

Generally speaking, if the form in [2], below, and the environmental checklist form in Appendix G of the CEQA Guidelines [see § 30B.215] are used to comprise the initial study, the first two bullet points above will be covered in the environmental information form in [2], below, while the checklist will cover the remaining four bullets (with some slight overlap).

The study may rely on expert opinion supported by facts, technical studies, or other substantial evidence to document its findings. However, it is neither intended nor required to include the level of detail included in an EIR [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(a)(3)].

[e] Submission of Data by Private Individuals and Private Organizations

If the project is to be carried out by a private person or private organization, the lead agency may require the person or organization to submit data and information that will enable the lead agency to prepare the initial study. Any person may submit any information in any form to assist the lead agency in preparing the initial study [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(e)].

[f] Consultations

As soon as it determines that an initial study will be required, the lead agency must consult informally with all responsible agencies and all trustee agencies responsible for resources affected by the project to obtain the recommendations of those agencies as to whether an EIR or a negative declaration should be prepared. During or immediately after preparation of an initial study for a private project, the lead agency may consult with the applicant to determine if the applicant is willing to modify the project to reduce or avoid the significant effects identified in the initial study [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(g)].

[g] Purposes of Initial Study

An initial study is designed to accomplish the following purposes [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(c)]:

- Provide the lead agency with information to use as the basis for deciding whether to prepare an EIR or a negative declaration.
- Facilitate environmental assessment early in the design of a project.
- Enable an applicant or lead agency to modify a project, mitigating adverse impacts before an EIR is prepared, and thereby enabling the project to qualify for a negative declaration.
- Assist in the preparation of an EIR, if one is required, by (1) focusing the EIR on the effects determined to be significant, (2) identifying the effects determined insignificant, and (3) explaining the reasons for determining that potentially significant effects would not be significant.
- Provide documentation of the factual basis for the finding in a negative declaration that a project will not have a significant effect on the environment.
- Determine whether a previously prepared EIR could be used with the project.
- Determine whether one of the tiering approaches encouraged by CEQA [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(b)(1)(C)] can be used so that portions of an earlier EIR can be supplemented by a more limited analysis in the new EIR or negative declaration.

[h] Results of Initial Study

If the lead agency determines from the initial study that there is substantial evidence that any aspect of the project, either individually or cumulatively, may significantly affect the environment, regardless of whether the overall effect of the project is adverse or beneficial, the lead agency must do one of the following [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(b)(1); see § 30B.210[1][b][i]]:

- Prepare an EIR;
- Use a previously prepared EIR that the lead agency determines would adequately analyze the project at hand; or
- Determine, pursuant to a program EIR, tiering, or "another appropriate process," which of the project's effects were adequately examined by an earlier EIR or negative declaration. The lead agency must then ascertain which effects, if any, should be analyzed in a later EIR or negative declaration.

"Another appropriate process" may include, for example, a master EIR, a master environmental assessment, approval of housing and neighborhood commercial facilities in urban areas, approval of residential projects pursuant to a specific plan, approval of residential projects consistent with a community plan, general plan, or zoning, or an environmental document prepared under a state certified regulatory program [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(b)(1)(C)].

The lead agency must prepare a negative declaration if the agency perceives no substantial evidence that the project or any of its aspects may cause a significant effect on the environment [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(b)(2); see § 30B.217].

§ 30B.215 Environmental Checklist Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the model CEQA environmental checklist form [Appendix G of the CEQA Guidelines, 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15000 et seq.] which, when completed by the lead agency and used in conjunction with the model environmental information form [see § 30B.214], will satisfy the CEQA requirements for an initial study. For further discussion, see the comment to § 30B.214.

PRACTICE TIP:

Use the Checklist--But Supplement It. Although the CEQA Guidelines clearly state that no particular form need be used for an initial study, and that agencies are free to develop their own forms [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15063(f)], it is common practice to use the checklist in Appendix G, often with extensive augmentation. An attorney defending an initial study in court will surely want to show the judge that the recommended format has been used, so that there will be no implication of evasion of the Code or the Guidelines. An initial study will typically include the checklist with an extensive discussion after each section of checked boxes.

[b] Sample Language

The statements made in an initial study must be supported by factual data; merely checking the boxes is not adequate [see Sundstrom v. County of Mendocino (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 296, 305-306, 248 Cal. Rptr. 352] . As a result, the analysis and conclusions in the initial study are often similar in format and scope to the environmental findings that must be made by the lead agency to approve the project [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15091].

The following examples illustrate two sample analyses adapted from an initial study for a residential development in a hillside area:

Analysis of Visual Impacts where the box "Less than Significant Impact" is checked

Discussion: The project site is located on a slope in a rural open space area. Existing views of the site are shown in Photographs 1 through 4.

Although the site is located in a scenic area, given the topography of the site, its separation from XYZ Road, and the dense vegetation on and surrounding the site, it has been determined that no scenic vistas would be affected by this project. While the project area is located in a scenic area, the house and improvements would only be visible from ABC Lane at the property's frontage, because the house would be set back from ABC Lane and dense vegetation in the area screens the site from view. There are no scenic resources (i.e., historic buildings, outcroppings, etc.) that would be impacted by the proposed development. Furthermore, the development would be required to meet the City's design standards and would conform to current architectural and landscaping standards.

Finding: While the project would alter the view of the site by replacing rural open space with a private residence and other improvements, the project would not result in a significant aesthetic impact. Completion of the City's design review process for the proposed new building, site improvements required by the zoning code, and the City's open space policies will ensure that development of the site is compatible with the surrounding development and the City's design standards. (Less Than Significant Impact)

Analysis of Impact of Health and Safety Risk Due to Wildfires where the box "Less than Significant Impact with Mitigation" is checked

Impact: In the event of a wildfire, residents and structures could be exposed to a significant risk of loss and injury.

Mitigation: The following measures are included in the project to reduce the risk of fire:

- ABC Lane from XYZ Road to the project site would be improved to 20 feet in width with a 13 foot, six inch vertical clearance. The road would be designed to meet the weight bearing requirements of fire equipment (60,000 pounds) and provide for a turning radius of 36 feet. The road improvements would be all weather from XYZ Road and shall reach to within 150 feet of any point on the first floor exterior.

- A fire hydrant would be installed at a distance not greater than 200 feet from the structure, with additional hydrants spaced at a maximum of 500 feet from XYZ Road to the driveway entrance.

- The residence shall be equipped with a fire sprinkler system that meets the requirements of NFPA Standard No. 13.

Finding: Implementation of the above mitigation measures will reduce impacts from the risk of fire to a less than significant level. (Less Than Significant)

§ 30B.216 Notice of Preparation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the Notice of Preparation (NOP) under CEQA that can be found in Appendix I of the CEQA Guidelines [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15000 et seq.]. This form is the one that is customarily used by public agencies. When a lead agency determines to prepare an environmental impact report (EIR) for a project, it sends out a NOP to the State Clearinghouse responsible agencies, trustee agencies (i.e., those state agencies having jurisdiction by law over natural resources affected by the project), and involved federal agencies [see Pub. Res. Code § 21080.4; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15082(a), 15375]. Note that this notice is sometimes misleadingly called a "notice of determination," but that terminology is normally reserved for the notice sent at the end of the process, when the agency has approved the project based on an EIR or a negative declaration [see §§ 30B.217, 30B.218].

Responsible and trustee agencies and the State Clearinghouse must respond to the lead agency with their concerns and suggestions for the scope and content of information to be included in the draft EIR. If there is no response within 30 days, then the lead agency may presume that they have no response to give [see Pub. Res. Code § 21080.4; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15082(b), 15103]. In response to the tendency of some state agencies in the past to respond with very detailed comments and suggestions about matters that were not within the jurisdiction of that agency, the Code and CEQA Guidelines were amended to provide that responses must be specific, and must concern that agency's area of responsibility [see Pub. Res. Code § 21080.4; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15082(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Verify the Address List for the NOP. It can cause delays and embarrassment if a public agency, some time late in the process, suddenly surfaces with the claim that they have environmental concerns that have not been addressed, and that they did not respond to the NOP because it was not sent to them. Although the NOP is sent out by the lead agency, counsel for a private developer should verify that it was sent out, that it contains the required information, and that the address list is complete.

[b] Contents of Notice of Preparation

The Notice of Preparation (NOP) must include all of the following [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15082(a)(1)]:

- A description of the project;
- A location map or street address; and
- A list of probable environmental effects.

This is normally accomplished by attaching the Initial Study prepared for the project [see § 30B.214]. If an Initial Study was not prepared, as sometimes happens if the agency has always intended to do an EIR for the project, then similar information must be prepared and attached to the NOP.

PRACTICE TIP:

Importance of Project Description in Notice of Preparation. The primary function of the Notice of Preparation is to alert other public agencies, including potential responsible agencies, that an EIR is being prepared on a project, so that they can make suggestions for issues and analyses that should be included. There is a danger that if the project is significantly modified or expanded during the approval process, a public agency could claim that its advice might have been different; this could conceivably lead to the requirement of additional environmental analysis by a responsible agency that felt that it had been misled by the NOP. The obvious moral is to make sure that the project description in the original NOP is sufficiently broad and general to cover any foreseeable project modifications. If the project description is changed after the Initial Study was prepared, then either an amended Initial Study should be prepared, or the NOP should explicitly note the revised description.

§ 30B.217 Negative Declaration

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the negative declaration form used by the City of Oakland. A "negative declaration" is a written statement by a lead agency briefly describing the reasons that a proposed project, not exempt from CEQA, will not have a significant effect on the environment and therefore does not require an environmental impact report (EIR) [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 21064, 21064.5; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15369.5, 15371].

[b] Decision to Prepare Negative Declaration

CEQA requires the lead agency to determine whether an EIR or a negative declaration is required for any project subject to CEQA [Pub. Res. Code § 21080.1]. If the lead agency determines that a proposed project not otherwise exempt from CEQA will not have a significant effect on the environment, the agency must adopt a negative declaration to that effect. The negative declaration must be prepared for the proposed project in either of the following circumstances [Pub. Res. Code § 21080(c); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15070]:

- When there is no substantial evidence in light of the whole record before the lead agency that the project may have a significant effect on the environment; or

- An initial study [see § 30B.214] identifies potentially significant effects on the environment but (1) revisions made, or agreed to, by the applicant would avoid the effects or mitigate them to where no significant effect on the environment would occur, and (2) there is no substantial evidence in light of the whole record before the lead agency that the revised project would have a significant effect on the environment. This approach has been formally recognized and codified by the Legislature as a "Mitigated Negative Declaration" [see Pub. Res. Code § 21064.5; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15369.5].

The lead agency must determine within 30 days after accepting an application as complete whether it intends to prepare a negative declaration or use a previously prepared negative declaration. However, the lead agency and the applicant may agree to extend the 30-day period an additional 15 days [Pub. Res. Code § 21080.2; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15102; but see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15111 (special rules for projects subject to conflicting time limits)].

With private projects involving the issuance of a lease, permit, license, certificate, or some other entitlement for use by one or more public agencies, the negative declaration must be completed and approved within 180 days from the date when the lead agency accepted the application as complete [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15107].

A negative declaration circulated for public review [see [d] and [e], below] must include all of the following [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15071]:

- A brief description of the project, including a commonly used name for the project, if any;
- The location of the project, preferably shown on a map;
- The name of the project proponent;
- A proposed finding that the project will not have a significant effect on the environment;
- An attached copy of the initial study [see § 30B.214] documenting reasons to support the finding; and
- Mitigation measures, if any, included in the project to avoid potentially significant effects.

[d] Notice Requirements

The lead agency must provide public notice of its intent to adopt a negative declaration within a reasonable time before its final adoption of the negative declaration [Pub. Res. Code § 21092(a); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15072(a)]. The notice must specify the period during which comments will be received on the negative declaration, and must include all of the following [Pub. Res. Code § 21092(b)(1)]:

- The date, time, and place of any public meetings or hearings on the proposed project;
- A brief description of the project and its location;
- The project's significant environmental effects, if any; and
- The address where copies of the negative declaration, and all documents referenced in the negative declaration, are available for review.

The notice must be mailed to all organizations and individuals who have filed a written request to receive such notices [Pub. Res. Code § 21092(b)(3)]. In addition, the lead agency must publish the notice by at least one of the following methods [Pub. Res. Code § 21092(b)(3); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15072(a)]:

- Publishing the notice at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the area affected by the proposed project. If more than one area will be affected, the notice must be published in the newspaper of largest circulation from among the newspapers of general circulation in the affected areas;

- Posting the notice on-site and off-site in the area where the project is to be located; or

- Mailing the notice to the owners and occupants of contiguous property.

If it chooses to, the lead agency may provide additional notice by other means [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15072(c)].

The lead agency must send a copy of the notice to every responsible agency and trustee agency concerned with the project and every other public agency with jurisdiction by law over resources affected by the project [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073(c)]. When at least one state agency will be a responsible agency or a trustee agency or will exercise jurisdiction by law over natural resources affected by the project, the lead agency must send copies of the negative declaration to the State Clearinghouse for distribution to the state agencies [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073(d)].

[e] Public Review

The lead agency must provide a public review period for a proposed negative declaration of not less than 20 days. If the proposed negative declaration is submitted to the State Clearinghouse for review, the review period must be at least 30 days [Pub. Res. Code § 21091(b); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073(a)]. If the State Clearinghouse review period is actually longer than the prescribed review period, the public review period must be at least as long as the State Clearinghouse review period [Pub. Res. Code § 21091(c); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073(b)].

[f] Recirculation Before Adoption

A lead agency is required to recirculate a negative declaration when the document must be substantially revised after public notice of its availability has previously been given, but before its adoption. The notice of recirculation must comply with 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15072 and 15073, which are discussed in [d] and [e], above [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073.5(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15073.5(b) ("substantial revision" defined for these purposes)].

[g] Consideration and Approval

Before approving a project, the decision-making body of the lead agency will consider the proposed negative declaration or mitigated negative declaration together with any comments received during the public review process. Unlike with EIRs, however, there is no requirement to respond in writing to comments received, nor to produce a "final" negative declaration. The decision-making body will adopt the proposed negative declaration or mitigated negative declaration only if it finds, on the basis of the whole record before it (including the initial study and any comments received), that [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15074(b)]:

- There is no substantial evidence that the project will have a significant effect on the environment; and

- The negative declaration or mitigated negative declaration reflects the lead agency's independent judgment and analysis.

In adopting a mitigated negative declaration, the agency must also adopt a mitigation monitoring program [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081.6; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15097; see also § 30B.220].

[h] Notice of Determination

After deciding to carry out or approve a project for which a negative declaration has been approved, the lead agency must file a notice of determination [Pub. Res. Code § 21152(a); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §

15373; see also § 30B.221]. The notice of determination must include all of the following [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(b)]:

- An identification of the project including the project title as identified on the proposed negative declaration, its location, and the State Clearinghouse identification number for the proposed negative declaration if the notice of determination is filed with the State Clearinghouse;
- A brief project description;
- The agency's name and the date on which the agency approved the project;
- The agency's determination that the project will not have a significant effect on the environment;
- A statement that a negative declaration or a mitigated negative declaration was adopted pursuant to CEQA;
- A statement indicating whether mitigation measures were made a condition for project approval, and whether a mitigation monitoring plan or program was adopted; and
- The address where a copy of the negative declaration or mitigated negative declaration can be examined.

Each public agency may devise its own form as long as these minimum content requirements are met [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(h)].

If the lead agency is a local agency, it must file the notice of determination with the county clerk of the county or counties in which the project will be located within five days after the lead agency approved the project. If the project requires a discretionary approval from any state agency, the lead agency must also file the notice with the Office of Planning and Research within five days of approval [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(d)].

A notice of determination filed with the county clerk must be available for public inspection and must be posted by the clerk within 24 hours of receipt for at least 30 days. Thereafter, the clerk must return the notice to the local lead agency with a notation of the period during which it was posted. The local lead agency must retain the notice for not less than 12 months [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(e)]. A notice of determination filed with OPR must be available for public inspection and must be posted for at least 30 days, and OPR must retain it for at least 12 months [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(f)]. Public agencies are also encouraged to make copies of all notices of determination available on the Internet [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075].

The filing of the notice of determination for state agencies and the filing and posting of the notice of determination for local agencies start the 30-day statute of limitations on court challenges to the approval under CEQA [Pub. Res. Code § 21167(b); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15075(g)].

§ 30B.218 Environmental Impact Report (Table of Contents, Introduction, and Summary Sections)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a sample environmental impact report (EIR) that includes only (1) a "Table of Contents," (2) an "Introduction," and (3) a portion of the summary table of impacts. An EIR may be hundreds of pages long. Depending on the degree of technical analysis required, the budget for its preparation can be in the hundreds of thousands, or millions, of dollars. Accordingly, the form in [2], below, is merely the shadow of an EIR. It does illustrate, however, some of the required contents of an EIR, and gives an example of the kind of language in which EIRs are written. It is adapted from an EIR for a research and development/office commercial project.

The Table of Contents in [2], below, is a fairly typical list of contents, designed to contain all of the information required to be in a draft EIR [see § 30B.210[1][e]]. The "Alternatives" discussion should be in a separate chapter of the EIR, due to the importance placed on it by the courts. Sometimes "Cumulative Impacts" are placed in a separate chapter as well, or, as here, they can be analyzed along with the project impacts.

Chapter 1 in the form summarizes the project and the EIR process. It contains more explanatory verbiage than is required by CEQA itself. The reason is that the EIR may be read by many persons, such as neighbors to the project, and even perhaps elected officials, who are relatively unfamiliar with the CEQA process. Thus, many EIR consultants prefer to include an explanatory section generally introducing the CEQA process to their readers.

As with most EIRs, the citations to authority given are to the CEQA Guidelines [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15000 et seq.], rather than to CEQA itself [Pub. Res. Code § 21000 et seq.]. The Guidelines are more complete and more logically organized than the Public Resources Code. Thus, most consultants are more familiar with the Guidelines and sometimes have never even read the Code. This can occasionally be important, for example, if an in-house disagreement arises over the scope of an EIR regarding an issue that is not required by the Public Resources Code, but is suggested for inclusion by the CEQA Guidelines.

Note that there is a brief summary of the alternatives given at the beginning of this section. This EIR is unusual in that an alternative in addition to the proposed project is also being analyzed at a sufficient level of detail that it could be approved as a project in lieu of the proposed project.

PRACTICE TIP:

Level of Analysis of Alternatives. The alternatives need not be analyzed in the same level of detail as the proposed project [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15126.6(d)]. However, if there is a good chance an alternative will become the approved project, then that alternative should be analyzed in the same level of detail as the proposed project, and the EIR should explicitly state that it is doing so. This is particularly important when such an alternative might have different impacts than the proposed project, not just the same impacts to a lesser degree, as is the case with most reduced density impacts. For example, reducing land coverage to avoid sensitive habitat might result in increased visual impacts of redesigned buildings which now would be taller to accommodate the reduced footprint. Sometimes such an alternative will be called a "mitigated alternative," or a similar term indicating that it is being analyzed from the start as an environmentally superior alternative.

The other alternatives are not discussed in the introduction, since the point of the reference to the alternatives was to alert the reader that throughout the EIR, two separate alternatives are receiving serious consideration.

PRACTICE TIP:

Choice of Alternatives. Alternatives are generally to be chosen such that they would feasibly attain "most of the basic objectives of the project but would avoid or substantially lessen any of the significant effects of the project" [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15126.6(a)]. One of the alternatives must be the "no project" alternative. However, another alternative should be an off-site alternative, and there should be one or more alternative projects. Typically such alternative projects might include a modification of uses, e.g., adding some retail to an office project, and at least one alternative with reduced density. Although increased density often is not an alternative that would reduce environmental effects, its study can be beneficial when it would arguably achieve more of the public agency's objectives than would the proposed project. An example might be adding density to a housing development with some earmarking for low income or senior housing.

The discussion in Section 1.2 and 1.2.2 in the form in [2], below, focuses on the CEQA process, and the issues that were raised in the initial scoping sessions and in response to the notice of preparation [see § 30B.216]. It is helpful to be able to show a reviewing court that all issues suggested to be studied by interested persons and agencies have in fact been analyzed.

Note, however, that a project EIR need not reanalyze previously adopted general plan or area-wide land use policies.

PRACTICE TIP:

Do Not Reinvent the Analytical Wheel. In the 1980's, projects were being challenged on broad-ranging EIR grounds, with the result that EIRs were frequently invalidated for failure to analyze whether a certain type of land use was appropriate in that location, even though it was consistent with the applicable general plan. Thus, an EIR on a sewage disposal plant or a road widening project might be required to analyze growth inducement, even though it was being proposed to service growth that had been analyzed in a general plan EIR. The California Supreme Court put a stop to that trend in Citizens of Goleta Valley v. Board of Supervisors (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 553, 276 Cal. Rptr. 410, 801 P.2d 1161 . The Court noted that decisions made and analyzed in adopting comprehensive planning documents did not have to be reanalyzed in the context of approval of individual projects consistent with that planning.

Section 1.2.4 in the form in [2], below, contains the definition of the various levels of impacts. These should be carefully reviewed for accuracy and possible overbreadth.

PRACTICE TIP:

Do Not Mitigate Non-Significant Impacts. In the form, the EIR authors note after the definition of "Less than Significant" the following: "(no mitigation required under CEQA, but may be recommended)." One often finds in an administrative draft EIR that the EIR authors have, in an excess of well-intentioned zeal, included suggested "mitigations" for effects found not to be significant. This is not required by CEQA, and the inclusion of such surplusage in the EIR is not recommended. The problem is that the legal status of such "pseudo-mitigations" is not defined. For example, must the agency make a finding as to why such a mitigation is not included in the project approval? If it is made part of the approval, must it also be included in the mitigation monitoring program? How would a court judge the adequacy of such a pseudo-mitigation? It is better to eliminate all such references entirely.

[f] Summary

In the form in [2], below, the summary of project impacts in Chapter 2 states that in this particular case, all project impacts can be mitigated to a level of significance. This means that in this example, the agency could decide to approve this project on the basis of a mitigated negative declaration, instead of an EIR.

PRACTICE TIP:

Should an EIR be Prepared Even When it Is Not Warranted? Technically, a full EIR is only required when there are significant impacts that cannot be fully mitigated, so a project can only be approved with a Statement of Overriding Considerations under Pub. Res. Code § 21081. However, when a project is controversial, it can be preferable to do an EIR when legally a negative declaration or a mitigated negative declaration would suffice. One reason is the general belief that an EIR is more "bullet-proof" than a negative declaration, because the substance of an EIR is held to a lower standard of review than is the decision to do a negative declaration instead of an EIR. In addition, there may be political pressure to calm critics by producing a full EIR, which is perceived by most agencies as more of a full-disclosure document than a negative declaration. A supportive elected official may not want to be seen to be allowing the developer to shortcut environmental analysis by not doing an EIR.

[g] Summary Table of Impacts and Mitigations

Table 2-1 is one of the most important sections of the EIR, as it is frequently the only part that is actually examined by reviewers. Great care should be used to make sure that the entries are all accurate, and that if the body of the EIR is changed after the draft is circulated, the summary table is revised accordingly.

Because of the prominence of the summary table, it may be appropriate also to list beneficial impacts of the project. There is no need to do so under CEQA, but it may have a positive impact on readers.

PRACTICE TIP:

Do Not Overload the Table. Some EIR authors like to discuss impacts that are not found to be significant in the body of the EIR, just to show that the possible effect has not been overlooked. Often they will include these non-impacts in the summary table, as in Table 2-1 under "Land Use." However, these should be taken out. They are not required by CEQA to be in the summary, and their inclusion can negatively impact the project. They make the number of impacts look greater to the casual reader, and can be used by an opponent to overstate the environmental effects of the project.

Chapter 1. Introduction

1.1 Purpose of the Environmental Impact Report

This Draft Environmental Impact Report (EIR) has been prepared in compliance with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) of 1970 (as amended), State CEQA Guidelines, and City CEQA Guidelines. CEQA requires the preparation of a full disclosure document to inform the public, Lead Agency, and Responsible/Trustee Agencies of the direct and indirect environmental effects of the proposed project on the local and regional environment. This document must also provide alternatives and mitigation measures that could reduce or eliminate any identified potential significant impacts.

1.2 CEQA EIR Process

This EIR assesses the environmental impacts of a proposed rezoning. Approval of this request would allow construction of a research and development (R&D)/office complex. This EIR also evaluates, at an equal level of detail, the environmental impacts of an alternative that would involve the same size R&D/office complex as the project plus 105 apartment units. The proposal involving only the R&D/office complex is referred to as the "Proposed Project" in this EIR, while the alternative is referred to as the "R&D+Housing Alternative." Other alternatives are also examined in the EIR (refer to Chapter 6), but in less detail than the proposed project consistent with CEQA Guidelines Section 15126.6(d).

1.2.2 Initial Study and Notice of Preparation

In accordance with Section 15063 of the CEQA Guidelines, the City, as Lead Agency, prepared an Initial Study and Notice of Preparation of an EIR. Copies of these documents are on file at the Community Development Department. The Notice of Preparation (NOP) for this EIR was issued on_____[date]. The NOP and Initial Study were circulated to local, state and federal agencies and other interested parties. The Initial Study determined that the project could result in significant impacts on the environment, although some of the project's potential impacts were determined to be less than significant. The Initial Study is included as Appendix A of this document. The Initial Study required preparation of an EIR, and focused the EIR on the following issues:

- Land Use, Plans, and Policies
- Aesthetics
- Geology and Soils
- Hydrology and Water Quality
- Traffic and Circulation
- Air Quality

- Noise
- Cultural Resources

The Initial Study addresses all other issues as identified by the CEQA Guidelines.

1.2.3 Scoping

Subsequent to circulation of the Initial Study and NOP, responses to the NOP were received, raising the following concerns:

- California Department of Transportation. A traffic impact analysis is recommended and it should include: the project's trip generation, distribution, assignment; average daily traffic (ADT) and peak hour volumes at all significantly affected intersections; evaluation of existing, existing + project, and cumulative conditions at these intersections; and mitigation measures (including financing, scheduling, and implementation responsibilities), with particular attention to solutions that do not rely on highway construction.
- _____ [other issues]

These issues as well as those already identified in the Initial Study are addressed in this EIR.

1.2.4 Draft EIR

This document constitutes the Draft EIR. It contains a description of the project, description of the environmental setting (existing conditions), identification of project impacts and mitigation measures for impacts found to be significant or potentially significant, and an analysis of project alternatives. This EIR addresses the issues that were identified by the Initial Study as potentially significant environmental impacts of the project as well as issues that were raised in the responses to the Notice of Preparation.

Significance criteria vary for each environmental issue analyzed in this EIR and are defined at the beginning of each impact analysis section. Impacts are categorized as follows:

- Significant and Unavoidable (no feasible mitigation or mitigation does not reduce impact to a less-than-significant level)
- Potentially Significant (impacts that could occur but are mitigable to a less-than-significant level)
- Less than Significant (no mitigation required under CEQA, but may be recommended)

Significance is the basis for determining whether or not mitigation is required for a potential project impact. CEQA requires that, under most circumstances, a lead agency shall neither approve nor carry out a project as proposed unless the significant environmental effects have been reduced to an acceptable or less-than-significant level (CEQA Guidelines Sections 15091 and 15092). Mitigation is required for impacts that are significant and must, when implemented, accomplish a reduction of the impacts to a level that is less than significant. A less-than-significant or acceptable level is defined as eliminating, avoiding, or substantially lessening the significant effects. Under certain circumstances, the lead agency may allow significant, unavoidable impacts to occur.

1.2.5 Public Review

The information in this report is subject to review by the City, responsible and interested agencies, as well as the public for a period of 45 days. Publication of this Draft EIR marks the beginning of the public review period, during which written comments will be received by the City at the following address:_____[address].

1.2.6 Final EIR and EIR Certification

Following the close of the 45-day review period, relevant written and oral comments received on the Draft EIR will be responded to in writing in a Comments and Responses document. The Comments and Responses document, together with the Draft EIR, will constitute the Final EIR. After circulation of the Final EIR, the Planning Commission and City Council will hold public hearings on the Final EIR to consider EIR certification. Upon EIR certification, the City may proceed with project approval actions.

If the lead agency approves the project with significant unavoidable impacts, the agency must state in writing the reasons for its actions. A Statement of Overriding Considerations must be included in the record of project approval and mentioned in the Notice of Determination (CEQA Guidelines Section 15093(c)).

1.3 EIR Organization

The Draft EIR has been organized into the following sections:

Chapter 1, Introduction. This section describes the purpose of the EIR, the CEQA review and certification process, and organization of the EIR.

Chapter 2, Summary. This section summarizes the project description, significant environmental impacts that would result from project implementation, and mitigation measures proposed as part of the project or recommended by the EIR to reduce or eliminate impacts.

Chapter 3, Project Description. This section describes the project location and the objective's of the project sponsor, as well as providing a detailed project description.

Chapter 4, Environmental Setting, Potential Impacts, and Mitigation Measures. These sections describe existing conditions in the vicinity of proposed facilities, discuss project consistency with relevant local plans and policies, identify the environmental impacts associated with project construction and operation, and present mitigation measures for the eight issue areas studied by this Draft EIR.

Chapter 5, Other CEQA Considerations. This section discusses several issues required by CEQA, including significant unavoidable impacts, growth inducing impacts, and cumulative impacts.

Chapter 6, Alternatives. This section discusses and evaluates the environmental impacts of alternatives to the project.

Chapter 7, Report Preparation and Persons/Agencies Consulted.

Chapter 8, Appendices. The appendices provide relevant reference material and data that support discussions in the EIR. In addition, the appendices contain the amended Initial Study.

Chapter 2. Summary

2.1 Project Description

The project applicant is requesting approval of a zone change from CM to CM:PD (Planned Development) to allow development of an R&D/office complex. [Describe project].

2.2 Summary of Environmental Impacts and Mitigation

Chapter 4 of the Draft EIR presents a description of the existing environmental setting, an analysis of environmental impacts resulting from development of the proposed R&D/office complex project or the R&D+housing alternative, and required or proposed mitigation measures. These impacts and mitigation measures are summarized in Table 2-1. Impacts are identified as either "potentially significant" or "less than significant." If an impact is potentially significant, mitigation measures are listed to reduce the impact to less-than-significant levels.

The impact analysis indicates that all identified environmental impacts could be mitigated to a less-than-significant level. There would be no unavoidable adverse impacts associated with construction or operation of the proposed project or R&D+housing alternative. The project or the R&D+housing alternative would not be considered growth-inducing, since no new roads or utilities would be extended to any contiguous undeveloped areas.

When the proposed project or R&D+housing alternative is considered with other nearby proposed or approved developments in the City and adjacent communities, potential cumulative impacts that could result would relate primarily to increases in traffic on local roadways and associated noise and air emissions. [Describe cumulative impacts].

For the proposed project, this EIR identified potentially significant impacts related to geology and traffic. All of these impacts could be reduced to a less-than-significant level by incorporating mitigation measures or implementing appropriate construction methods. For the R&D+housing alternative, these impacts would also occur but there would be one additional significant traffic impact at the _____ intersection during the A.M. peak hour. This impact could be mitigated to a less-than-significant level by implementation of a Transportation Demand Management (TDM) Program to reduce trip generation and by adding a second westbound left-turn lane at that intersection.

Summary of Environmental Impacts and Mitigation Measures

Potential Impact	Significance	Mitigation Measures	Significance After Mitigation
Land Use
4.1-1: The project and R&D+ housing alternative would alter former and existing land uses on the site.	Less than Significant	None Required	Less than Significant

Geology and Soils
4.3-1: The project and R&D+ housing alternative would likely be subject to one or more severe earthquakes and associated seismic hazards during the life of the project.	Potentially Significant	4.3-1: Prior to issuance of the building permit, project plans shall demonstrate compliance with 1997 Uniform Building Code requirements for structural and seismic loads and recommendations made in the geological report, as required by the Building Department.	Less than Significant
Traffic
4.5-1: The R&D+ housing alternative result in traffic increases at local intersections and incrementally degrade the level of service at these intersections.	Potentially Significant	4.5-1: Institute and Operate a Transportation Demand Management Program. 4.5-2: Install a second left-turn lane on westbound _____Street at _____Ave.	Less than Significant

§ 30B.219 Resolution Making CEQA Findings

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a sample "Resolution" that makes a variety of specific CEQA "findings." A public agency approving a project is required to make written findings for every significant effect identified in the EIR. For each such effect, the agency must find that the effect has been mitigated, that mitigation is the responsibility of another public agency, or that there are overriding considerations that make the identified mitigation measures infeasible [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15091, 15093].

The form in [2], below, contains several main sections. It is adapted from one used for a large, mixed use project, and contains sample language illustrating an appropriate level of analytic detail for the findings. They must be based on substantial evidence in the record of the proceedings as a whole [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081.5; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15091(b)], which includes not only the EIR, but also all written and oral communications received by the agency during the project approval process, including at public hearings.

The findings are in the form of a resolution to be adopted by the legislative body of the agency, here the city council. They contain the following four main sections:

- Recitals [see [c], below];
- Findings concerning significant impacts [see [d], below];
- Findings concerning alternatives [see [e], below]; and

- A statement of overriding considerations [see [f], below].

[c] Recitals

The Recitals should give some of the procedural history of the project, and explain the respective roles of the legislative body and the planning agency in the approval process of the EIR. This is also a good place to define basic terms used in the findings.

[d] Findings Concerning Significant Impacts

This section contains the required finding for each impact found in the EIR to be significant, whether or not it can be mitigated. There is no specific statutory form required for these findings; the style presented here is a generic format that is adaptable to a wide range of impacts.

PRACTICE TIP:

Long-Winded Findings. Lawyers are continually urged by legal writing experts to be brief and to the point. While they should not exemplify useless long-windedness, findings are one category of legal writing where a writer's sins should be those of commission rather than of omission. An extra finding on a marginal impact, a few extra recitals, or an extra paragraph or two of explanation will not invalidate the findings, but leaving out a required finding surely may. And a judge who lacks the time to read the findings completely may be impressed by the thoroughness of weighty, thoughtfully-crafted findings.

The form in [2], below, contains two sample findings. The first, for tree removal, is one for which a finding of complete mitigation can be made. In other words, the described mitigations reduce the impact to a level of insignificance. The second sample finding is for traffic impact to a freeway segment. For this impact, the EIR recommends various mitigation measures, but the city cannot find that this provides adequate mitigation. As a result, a Statement of Overriding Considerations [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15093], must be made. Alternatively, if the EIR had examined the possibility of widening the freeway and found that such widening was physically feasible and would mitigate the impact of increased traffic, then the third type of finding allowed by Pub. Res. Code § 21081 could have been made: that a mitigation does exist, but it is within the responsibility and jurisdiction of another public agency (here, the State), and such mitigation either has been adopted by the State or can and should be adopted. If it has not been adopted by the other jurisdiction, then a Statement of Overriding Considerations should still be made (although Pub. Res. Code § 21081 is actually ambiguous on this point).

[e] Findings Concerning Alternatives

Many cases have held that the core of an EIR is the analysis of alternatives [see, e.g., Citizens of Goleta Valley v. Board of Supervisors (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 553, 564, 276 Cal. Rptr. 410, 801 P.2d 1161] . CEQA requires that an EIR identify alternatives to a project as proposed which "would feasibly attain most of the basic objectives of the project, but would avoid or substantially lessen many of the significant effects of the project" [Pub. Res. Code § 21002; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15126.6]. Thus, it is extremely important that findings be made that explain why the chosen project has been approved, particularly if there are alternatives that are environmentally superior.

PRACTICE TIP:

Are Alternatives Infeasible? Often an EIR will conclude that the environmentally superior alternative, required to be identified by 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15126.6(e)(2) is not the project as proposed. If the proposed project is approved, then the EIR findings should include a thorough explanation of why any environmentally superior alternatives are rejected. It is not enough that they be less desirable than the approved project. Instead, they must explicitly be found to be "infeasible" for specific economic, legal, social, technological, or other considerations [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081(a)(3); 14 Cal. Code Reg. §

15091(a)(3)]. Alternative sites mentioned in the EIR must also be found to be infeasible [see San Bernardino Valley Audubon Society, Inc. v. County of San Bernardino (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 738, 753, 202 Cal. Rptr. 423] .

The form in [2], below, contains sample findings comparing and rejecting alternatives to the proposed project. Several sample alternatives are given for illustration. These include the statutorily required "No Project" alternative, a modified project alternative (here, reduced density), and an alternative to build the project at a different site.

PRACTICE TIP:

"No Project" May Not Mean "No Build." The classic no project alternative is environmentally superior to the normal development project, because it would leave the land undeveloped. However, that is not always the case. For example, the no project condition may predictably lead to pressures for some other development, which may have more environmental consequences than the proposed project. Or, for public infrastructure projects such as roads, waste disposal facilities, flood control projects, and the like, it may be argued that the no project alternative would have more impact on the environment than the proposed work of improvement. Thus, do not assume that the no project alternative is either a no build alternative, or one that is environmentally superior to the proposed development [see generally 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15126.6(e)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Information in the Record. All information relied on to justify findings must be in the administrative record of the proceedings, but need not necessarily be in the EIR itself. For example, information as to the financial feasibility of alternatives to the project should not normally be in the EIR, but would normally be presented to the agency by the developer in written form [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15131(c)]. Note that a court may be skeptical of a conclusory finding based on a statement by the developer that an alternative "doesn't pencil out" [see Citizens of Goleta Valley v. Board of Supervisors (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1167, 243 Cal. Rptr. 339] . Thus, agencies should use caution in finding an alternative to be infeasible for this reason. A finding of infeasibility for a reduced scale alternative is more defensible if based on failure to meet the goals and objectives of City plans and policies, than if based on alleged financial infeasibility for the developer.

[f] Statement of Overriding Considerations

This section explains which impacts cannot feasibly be mitigated, and then explains why the benefits of the project outweigh these unmitigated impacts.

PRACTICE TIP:

Each Benefit Is Individually Significant. Note that the form in [2], below, contains the following statement: "The City Council finds that each of the benefits set forth below in this Statement constitutes a separate and independent ground for finding that the benefits of the Project outweigh the risks of its potential significant adverse environmental impacts." This is included because an opponent might challenge the approval on the basis that one or more of the factors given in the statement of overriding considerations is not supported by substantial evidence. If a court agrees with the challenge, it could decide to remand the matter to the agency to reevaluate the statement, as happened when a court found three of 12 benefits to be unsupported by substantial evidence [see Sierra Club v. Contra Costa County (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1212, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182] . The quoted language allows the agency to argue that any remaining factors are sufficient to support the decision.

RESOLUTION NO.

A RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF _____ MAKING CERTAIN FINDINGS CONCERNING IMPACTS AND MITIGATION MEASURES, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE CALIFORNIA ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY ACT FOR THE _____ PROJECT FOR WHICH AN ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT HAS BEEN PREPARED.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF _____:

WHEREAS, the City Council of the City of _____ ("City") intends to approve Planned Development Zoning for construction of approximately [describe project, e.g., 1,000,000 square feet of office space, 315 multi-family residential units, and 700 hotel rooms on an approximately 40-acre site]; and

WHEREAS, on_____[date] the Planning Commission of the City certified that the Final Environmental Impact Report ("FEIR") for the _____ Project ("Project") was completed in accordance with the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act of 1970 ("CEQA"), as amended; and

[Or, if City Council is certifying body for EIR]

WHEREAS, on_____[date] the Planning Commission of the City held a hearing on the Final Environmental Impact Report ("FEIR") for the _____ Project ("Project") at which hearing the Commission voted to recommend that the City Council certify the document as having been completed in compliance with the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act of 1970 ("CEQA"), as amended; and

WHEREAS, the City Council of the City is the decision-making body for [describe approval, e.g., Planned Development rezoning]; and

WHEREAS, CEQA requires that in connection with the approval of a project for which an EIR identifies one or more significant environmental effects, the decision-making agency must make certain findings regarding those effects.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

THAT THE CITY COUNCIL does hereby find that the FEIR has been presented to it, that it has independently reviewed and analyzed the FEIR and other information in the record and has considered the information contained therein including the written and oral comments received at the public hearings on the FEIR and on the Project, prior to acting upon or approving the Project, and has found that the FEIR represents the independent judgment and analysis of the City as Lead Agency for the Project, and designates the Director of Planning, Building and Code Enforcement at his/her office at_____[address], as the custodian of documents and records of proceedings on which this decision is based; and

[If City Council is certifying body for EIR, add:]

THAT THE CITY COUNCIL does hereby find that the FEIR has been completed in compliance with CEQA; and

THAT THE CITY COUNCIL does hereby make the following findings with respect to the significant effects on the environment of the Project, as identified in the FEIR:

FINDINGS CONCERNING SIGNIFICANT IMPACTS

[Sample language for fully mitigated impact:]

IMPACT: Redevelopment of the site may result in the removal of up to 131 ordinance size trees. (Significant Impact)

MITIGATION: The following measures are included in the Project to minimize impacts to trees: Loss of ordinance size trees would be mitigated by implementation of landscaping plans approved by the City, in conformance with the City's Landscaping Guidelines. Tree replacement ratios typically required include: (1) 1:1 ratio for trees less than 11 inches in diameter, (2) 2.1 ratio for trees 12 to 17 inches in diameter, and (3) 4:1 ratio for trees 18 inches or greater in diameter.

FINDING: The above mitigation measures, which are incorporated into the Project as a condition of approval, will avoid or substantially lessen the significant environmental impact described above to a less than significant level.

[Sample language for impact that cannot be fully mitigated:]

IMPACT: The Project will add more than 1 percent of segment capacity to the ABC Freeway in City, which will operate at an unacceptable LOS F during at least one of the peak hours under project conditions.

PARTIAL MITIGATION: Mitigation measures proposed to reduce impacts to the above freeway are the following Immediate Implementation Actions:

- Bike Lockers, Racks, and Facilities
- Bus Stop and Transit Improvements
- Public Information Programs for carpooling and transit use
- HOV Parking Preference Program
- Bike Storage at Residential Development Sites
- Shuttle Service to transit
- An onsite Transportation Demand Management (TDM) Program

FINDING: The mitigation measures listed above will reduce but not eliminate impacts to the freeway. No feasible mitigation measures are available to the City that would fully reduce impacts to the freeway. Therefore, implementation of the Project will result in a significant unavoidable traffic impact.

FINDINGS CONCERNING ALTERNATIVES

CEQA requires that an EIR identify alternatives to a project as proposed which "would feasibly attain most of the basic objectives of the project, but would avoid or substantially lessen many of the significant effects of the project." The significant unmitigated impacts identified for the proposed Project are impacts to traffic and air quality; therefore, the EIR examined the following alternatives which might reduce those impacts.

No Project Alternative: Under this alternative the property would physically remain as is. It is assumed that the existing uses could continue indefinitely or another office/industrial user would take over a portion or the entire site and reuse the existing buildings and facilities. No new construction or expansion of facilities would occur under this alternative.

Potential impacts to traffic, air quality, vegetation and wildlife, and cultural resources resulting from the proposed redevelopment of the site would be avoided under this alternative. This alternative would not result in an increase in traffic impacts or air quality impacts as with the proposed Project.

Finding: This alternative would be environmentally superior to the proposed project. This alternative would not, however, be compatible with any of the Project objectives. This alternative would not add to the economic vitality of the area. In addition, the site would remain underutilized and would not support the identified land uses of the City's General Plan and the Specific Plan.

Reduced Scale Alternative: The reduced scale alternative would consist of clearing the site of existing structures and redeveloping the property with mixed uses totaling approximately the same square footage as the existing development onsite. All of the proposed uses would remain the same but at a lower density.

Reduction in the size of the project would generate fewer trips and less associated congestion. Because this alternative would only replace the existing development with an equivalent amount of square footage (albeit in a mixed-use configuration) this alternative could result in an incremental improvement in traffic in the region. Therefore, this alternative would have less air quality impact than the proposed Project. By replacing existing square footage with a mix of uses in equivalent building space, this alternative could result in an overall reduction in air pollution.

Finding: This alternative is environmentally superior to the Project as proposed because less density would lead to corresponding reductions in air quality, and traffic. If the entire site is developed the loss of habitat would still occur. To the extent that this alternative provides some economic benefits it meets some of the Project objectives. This alternative includes fewer jobs, and thereby falls short of having the same beneficial effects on City's jobs/housing balance as the proposed Project. It also provides less housing and less hotel space, and this, along with fewer jobs causes it to fail to fulfill the objectives of the City's economic development policies and of the Specific Plan.

Alternative Location: The XYZ Redevelopment Area (the "Area") located in the southern part of City contains a possible alternative location for the office portion of the Project. Currently more than 300 acres of vacant land are available for development in the Area.

Development of the proposed project in the Area would result in an expected higher rate of trip generation because the Area does not have a planned rapid transit station; therefore, the project would not have the same potential for transit diversion. Because the Area is still rural, costly infrastructure is needed, including internal roadways. Thus, there is a potential that this alternative would have greater localized congestion impacts than the proposed Project.

To the extent that development of the proposed square footage at an alternative location generates approximately the same amount of traffic, the emissions will not be significantly reduced. The net result of over a million square feet of development will remain a significant impact on regional air quality.

Finding: This alternative is not environmentally superior to the Project as proposed because it would convert vacant land to urban uses, thus resulting in other significant unavoidable impacts including loss of open space, and loss of agricultural land, while still having significant traffic and air quality impacts. This alternative also fails to provide housing proximate to the rapid transit and an existing concentration of jobs in the northern part of City. This alternative also would not fully meet the objectives of the proposed Project to provide uses to support the Specific Plan.

Conclusion: Of the alternatives studied, The No Project and the Reduced Scale would be environmentally superior to the Project. All are rejected by the City as infeasible because none would fully meet the objectives of the Project or of the City's economic development policies, nor would they maximize the use of the Project area contemplated by the Specific Plan.

The No Project alternative basically leaves an underdeveloped, semi-blighted site that detracts from the adjoining residential neighborhood, does little to interact adjacent development, and does not take advantage of the new light rail transit opportunities nearby.

The Reduced Scale alternative includes fewer jobs, and thereby falls short of having the same beneficial effects on City's jobs/housing balance as the proposed Project. It also provides less housing and less hotel space, and this, along with fewer jobs causes it to fail to fulfill the objectives of the City's economic development policies and of the Specific Plan. While the Reduced Scale alternative does meet some of the Project objectives, it fails to take maximum advantage of the infill opportunities presented by the site, and thus does less than the Project to meet the City's economic development goals and the objectives of the Specific Plan. Although it does have reduced environmental effects, it does not eliminate significant unavoidable effects on traffic and air quality, and the City Council finds that the incremental reductions in these impacts are outweighed by the Project benefits.

STATEMENT OF OVERRIDING CONSIDERATIONS

After review of the entire administrative record, including the Final EIR, the staff report, and the oral and written testimony and evidence presented at public hearings, the City Council finds that specific economic, legal, social, technological and other considerations justify the approval of this Project in spite of the existence of unavoidable environmental effects that are deemed significant and that cannot be completely mitigated to a level of insignificance.

The City Council adopts and makes this Statement of Overriding Considerations regarding the significant unavoidable impacts of the Project and the anticipated benefits of the Project. The City Council finds that each of the benefits set forth below in this Statement constitutes a separate and independent ground for finding that the benefits of the Project outweigh the risks of its potential significant adverse environmental impacts. The benefits of the Project, which constitute the specific economic, legal, social, technological and other considerations that justify the approval of the Project are as follows:

1. The Project is consistent with the City's economic development strategy and will help to revitalize an already urbanized area of the City characterized by older, inefficient and partly vacant industrial/office development.

2. The Project is consistent with, and will help the City to accomplish, all nine key objectives of the Specific Plan for this area of the City, as follows [list all objectives, such as]:

- Support Transit Use and Create a Pedestrian Friendly Environment. Project design emphasizes pedestrian access, open space, and use of landscaping and walkways, etc.

_____ [List all other objectives].

3. The Project is consistent with the housing strategy of the general plan and will provide up to 315 units of housing to help satisfy the demand in the County for new housing, which is currently estimated to be for 25,000 units.

§ 30B.220 Mitigation Monitoring Program

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, constitutes a mitigation reporting or monitoring program. CEQA was amended in 1989 in an attempt to make the imposition of mitigation measures on projects more effective. Mitigation measures imposed pursuant to an environmental impact report (EIR) [see § 30B.218] or mitigated negative declaration [see § 30B.217] are required to be made fully enforceable through permit conditions, agreements, or other measures [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081.6(c); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15091(d)]. In addition, an agency imposing mitigation measures is required to adopt a "reporting or monitoring program" for the mitigation measures [see Pub. Res. Code § 21081.6(a); 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 15091(d), 15097]. The difference between a reporting program and a monitoring program is not necessarily clear, and for a normal construction project, the resulting document may contain a mixture of both reporting and monitoring conditions.

The operative document for construction projects is commonly called a Mitigation Monitoring Program (MMP). There is no statutory form, nor is there a form suggested in the CEQA Guidelines. As a result, in practice a wide variety of formats may be encountered. Often the MMP is adopted as an appendix to another CEQA document, e.g., a resolution making CEQA findings [see § 30B.219], or a resolution actually granting the entitlements sought. The form in [2], below, is drafted as a fairly generic form containing some sample language for typical mitigation measures.

PRACTICE TIP:

Circulate the MMP with the Draft EIR? There is no requirement that the MMP be circulated for public review. Although some agencies see such circulation as good public policy, it is rarely in the developer's best interest to have the MMP circulated with the Draft EIR, as it just gives project opponents another target at which to shoot. To make the approvals as defensible as possible, however, the developer's attorney should verify that the adopted MMP does cover each and every mitigation imposed on the project.

[b] Contents of Mitigation Monitoring Program

Some MMPs do not contain a "General Conditions" section. If enforcement provisions are specifically spelled out, the developer should try to insert protective provisions, such as a notice of default, cure period, and administrative appeal process.

Typically, this section lists for each mitigation a responsible party for performance and a responsible party or agency for verifying the performance. A column could be added to the table defining a time, or project stage (e.g., before issuance of building permits) for implementation of each mitigation measure.

PRACTICE TIP:

Must the Mitigation be Successful? The monitoring/reporting required by CEQA is to ensure that the appropriate mitigation measure has been carried out, not that it has worked. For example, if the developer must mitigate intersection traffic by adding a left turn lane, then his or her responsibility normally ends with the construction of the lane, and he or she is not required to do another traffic study to verify that the congestion has been cured. There is a tendency now, however, to mandate more complex reporting and monitoring, in some cases with follow on mitigation measures imposed if the mitigation is not successful. This may be appropriate, for example, if the developer is required to create a certain kind of biological habitat, such as a wetland.

[2] FORM

Mitigation Monitoring Program

Mitigation Monitoring Program

General Conditions

It is required that the City use the attached monitoring checklist for the proposed project. The monitoring program shall be implemented as follows:

1. The Planning Director shall be responsible for coordination of the monitoring program, including the monitoring checklist. The Planning Director shall be responsible for completing the monitoring checklist and distributing the checklist to the responsible individuals or agencies for their use in monitoring the mitigation measures.

2. Each responsible individual or agency will then be responsible for determining whether the mitigation measures contained in the monitoring checklist have been complied with. Once all mitigation measures have been complied with, the responsible individual or agency shall submit a copy of the monitoring checklist to the Planning Director to be placed in the project file. If the mitigation measure has not been complied with, the monitoring checklist should not be returned to the Planning Director.

3. Prior to issuance of an occupancy permit, the Planning Director shall review the checklist to ensure that all mitigation measures and additional conditions of project approval included in the monitoring checklist have been complied with. An occupancy permit shall not be issued until all mitigation measures and additional conditions of project approval included in the monitoring checklist have been complied with.

4. If the Planning Director determines that a non-compliance has occurred, a written notice should be delivered by certified mail to the developer within 10 days describing the non-compliance and requiring compliance within a specified period of time. If a non-compliance still exists at the expiration of the specified period of time, construction may be halted and/or fines may be imposed at the discretion of the City. The developer shall have the right to an administrative hearing pursuant to the City's administrative hearings procedures in the event of any dispute over whether there has been compliance.

§ 30B.221 Notice of Determination

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a sample Notice of Determination (NOD). It can be found as Appendix D to the CEQA Guidelines [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15000 et seq.]. When a lead agency approves a project for which an environmental impact report (EIR) [see § 30B.218] or a negative declaration [see § 30B.217] has been prepared, it files a NOD with the county clerk of each county within which the project will be located [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 21108, 21152; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15094]. Although CEQA only prescribes a minimal content for the notice, the CEQA Guidelines add additional items as set forth in the form in [2], below.

[b] Filing Notice of Determination

The NOD must be filed by the lead agency within five working days of the final approval of the project, although there is no sanction for either not filing the notice, or filing late. There is, however, one very important consequence attached to the filing of the notice: It starts the 30-day statute of limitations to challenge the project approval on the grounds of non-compliance with CEQA [see Pub. Res. Code § 21167(b)]. If no NOD is filed, the statute of limitations is normally 180 days from final approval [see Pub. Res. Code § 21167(a)]. Counsel should also note that on the filing of the NOD, any fees due to the State Department of Fish and Game must be paid [see Pub. Res. Code § 21089; Fish & Game Code § 711.4].

For obvious reasons, counsel for a private developer should verify that the NOD has been filed, and that it is properly posted by the County Clerk (an affidavit of posting can normally be obtained if needed for litigation), as required by CEQA [see Pub. Res. Code § 21152(c); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 15094(d)].

PRACTICE TIP:

When is Final Approval? It is not always obvious when final approval of a project occurs. Since an NOD filed too early is probably ineffective (whereas a late-filed NOD just starts the 30-day clock running on the date of filing), counsel must be careful of early filing. One common situation of concern is when the project is approved by ordinance (e.g., a rezoning). Technically an ordinance is first "introduced," then not less than five days later it can be "adopted" [see Gov. Code § 36934]. Sometimes this process is referred to as the "first reading" and the "second reading" of the ordinance. Since the major public hearing is at the first reading, the city staff may assume that is when the NOD should be filed. However, the proper procedure is to file the NOD after the second reading, or formal adoption, of the ordinance.

§ 30B.222 Application for Coastal Development Permit--Marin County Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a multi-purpose Marin County application form, which may be used to obtain a coastal development permit (discussed in this comment) or various other permits and entitlements. Any person wishing to undertake a development in the coastal zone must obtain a coastal development permit in addition to any other permits required by law [Pub. Res. Code § 30600(a)]. As explained below, the permit-issuing authority will be either the California Coastal Commission or the coastal city or county in which the proposed development is to be located. This application form is representative of the forms prepared by these local coastal entities.

For extensive discussions of development in coastal areas, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 66, Coastal Zone Regulation (Matthew Bender), and California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 300, Regulation in the Coastal Zone (Matthew Bender).

[b] Coastal Zone Defined

Under the California Coastal Act of 1976 [Pub. Res. Code § 30000 et seq.; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13001 et seq. (implementing regulations)], most developments in the "coastal zone" require a coastal development permit. The "coastal zone" extends from the northern to the southern border of California. It extends seaward to the outer limit of California's jurisdiction and extends inward, generally, 1,000 yards from the mean high tide line of the sea. It includes all offshore islands. In significant coastal estuarine, habitat, and recreational areas it extends inland to the first major ridgeline paralleling the sea or five miles from the mean high tide line of the sea, whichever is less. In developed urban areas the zone generally extends inland less than 1,000 yards. The coastal zone does not include the area under the jurisdiction of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission [see Gov. Code § 66600 et seq.; see also § 30B.223] or any area contiguous thereto [Pub. Res. Code § 30103(a)].

A detailed map of the coastal zone, prepared and adopted by the California Coastal Commission, is on file with the county clerk of each coastal county [Pub. Res. Code § 30103(b)].

[c] California Coastal Commission and Local Coastal Programs

The California Coastal Commission ("Commission") has the primary responsibility for implementing the provisions of the Coastal Act, and is the state coastal zone planning and management agency for all purposes [Pub. Res. Code § 30330]. The principal function of the Commission is to supervise the adoption and continual updating of local coastal programs by local governments [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30004, 30519.5; see also [e], below]. Other powers and duties of the Commission include the power to adopt or amend rules and regulations to carry out the purposes and provisions of the Act [see Pub. Res. Code § 30333].

The Commission operates six district offices, each of which performs various functions relating to the Act, such as assisting in the completion and initial processing of applications for proposed coastal developments to be located within certain specified counties.

PRACTICE TIP:

Coastal Commission Information Online. The locations of the Coastal Commission offices can easily be found online, along with much information about the activities of the Commission, including downloadable versions of the applicable statutes and regulations. The home page of the Commission is at http://www.coastal.ca.gov.

The Act originally provided for the establishment of six regional coastal commissions [see former Pub. Res. Code §§ 30300, 30304.5]. These regional commissions were terminated on July 1, 1989 [see Pub. Res. Code § 30305].

[d] Disclosures Regarding Contacts

Any person applying to the Commission for approval of a development permit must provide the Commission with the names and addresses of all persons who, for compensation, will be communicating with the Commission or the Commission's staff on the applicant's behalf or on behalf of the applicant's business partners. Full disclosure of the names and addresses must be provided before any such communication. Failure to comply with this disclosure requirement is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment in the county jail for up to six months. Further, such a failure will result in the immediate denial of the permit [Pub. Res. Code § 30319; see Pub. Res. Code § 30319.5 (if permit is denied for this reason, applicant may not reapply for two years)].

[e] Local Governments and Local Coastal Programs (LCPs)

The principal purpose of the Coastal Act is to require local governments (i.e., cities and counties) [Pub. Res. Code § 30109] to protect the portion of the coastal zone lying in each of their jurisdictions [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30004, 30108.6]. Each local government lying, in whole or in part, within the coastal zone must prepare a local coastal program ("LCP") for that portion of the coastal zone within its jurisdiction [Pub. Res. Code § 30500(a)]. An LCP consists of a local government's land use plans, zoning ordinances, zoning district maps, and, if applicable, other implementing actions for sensitive coastal resources [Pub. Res. Code § 30108.6]. These documents must collectively meet the requirements of, and implement the provisions and policies of, the Act at the local level [Pub. Res. Code § 30108.6]. The Commission must certify every LCP [Pub. Res. Code § 30512]. A local government may request, in writing, that the Commission prepare all or a portion of its LCP [Pub. Res. Code § 30500(a)]; however, even LCPs prepared in that manner must be adopted by the local government and then certified by the Commission [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30500(a), 30512].

As of mid-2001, the Commission had certified LCPs for 88 of the 125 total "segments" contained in the 58 cities and 15 counties lying within the coastal zone.

[f] Requirement to Obtain Coastal Development Permit

The California Coastal Act of 1976 provides that any person wishing to undertake a development in the coastal zone must obtain a coastal development permit in addition to any other permits required by law [Pub. Res. Code § 30600(a)]. Under the Coastal Act, most activities that alter existing conditions within the coastal zone are considered developments. Specifically, for purposes of the Act, "development" means any of the following activities occurring on land or in or under water [Pub. Res. Code § 30106]:

- The placement or erection of any solid material or structure. "Structure" includes any building, road, pipe, flume, conduit, siphon, aqueduct, telephone line, and electrical power transmission and distribution line.

- The discharge or disposal of any dredged material or of any gaseous, liquid, solid, or thermal waste.

- The grading, removing, dredging, mining, or extraction of any materials.

- A change in the density or intensity of use of land, including subdivision under the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.; see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation], unless the division occurs in connection with the purchase of the land by a public agency for public recreational use.

- A change in access or intensity of use of water.

- The construction, reconstruction, demolition, or alteration of the size of any structure, including any facility of any private, public, or municipal utility.

- The removal or harvesting of major vegetation other than for agricultural purposes, kelp harvesting, and timber operations that are in accordance with a timber harvesting plan submitted pursuant to the provisions of the Z'berg-Nejedly Forest Practice Act of 1973 [Pub. Res. Code § 4511 et seq.].

A coastal development permit is required for a lot line adjustment because, like a subdivision of land, it can result in changes in the density or intensity of use and constitutes a division of land [La Fe, Inc. v. Los Angeles County (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 231, 240, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

[g] Developments Exempt From Permit Requirements

Certain types of development in the coastal zone do not require a coastal development permit [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30608-30610.5; for a complete list of these exemptions, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 300, Regulation in the Coastal Zone (Matthew Bender), and California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 66, Coastal Zone Regulation (Matthew Bender)]. The principal types of exempted developments are the following:

- Improvements to existing single-family residences, unless the improvement belongs to a class of development that is identified in a regulation as involving a risk of adverse environmental effect [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13250].

- Improvements to any structure other than a single-family residence or a public works facility, unless the improvement is a type that, according to a regulation, either involves a risk of adverse environmental effect, adversely affects public access, or involves a change in use contrary to any policy of the Act [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(b); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13253].

- Repair or maintenance activities that do not result in additions, enlargements, or expansions, unless a permit is required by regulation because the Commission has found that the methods of repair or maintenance involve a risk of substantial adverse environmental impact [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(d); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13252].

- Certain categories of developments described or identified by two-thirds vote of the Commission [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(e); 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13240-13249].

- The replacement of any structure, other than a public works facility, destroyed by a disaster, provided that the replacement structure (1) conforms to existing zoning requirements; (2) has the same use as the destroyed structure; (3) does not exceed the floor area, height, or bulk of the destroyed structure by more than 10 percent; and (4) is sited in the same location as the destroyed structure [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(g)].

- Any activity involving the conversion of any existing multiple-unit residential structure to a time-sharing project, estate, or use, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212 (effective July 1, 2005) [see Ch. 33A, Time-Share Projects] and any related improvement that is otherwise exempt from the permit requirements of the Act [Pub. Res. Code § 30610(h)].

- Developments for which a vested right existed before enactment of the Act [Pub. Res. Code § 30608].

[h] Issuance of Permit After LCP Certified

After a local government has had its local coastal program (LCP) certified by the Commission, only that local government will have the authority to issue coastal development permits for new developments (with certain exceptions noted below) proposed within the area to which the LCP applies [Pub. Res. Code §§ 30519(a), 30600(d)]. A permit must be issued if the local government, or the Commission on appeal, finds that the proposed development conforms to the certified LCP [Pub. Res. Code § 30604(b)].

Even after an LCP has been certified, the Commission, rather than the local government, retains sole authority to review and issue permits for any development proposed or undertaken in any of the following areas [Pub. Res. Code § 30519(b)]:

- On any tidelands, submerged lands, or on public trust lands [but see Pub. Res. Code § 30613], whether filled or unfilled, lying within the coastal zone;

- Within certain enumerated port districts [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30700-30721; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13600-13648]; or

- Within any state university or college or private university within the coastal zone [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30605, 30606; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13500-13577].

Considering the limited scope of Pub. Res. Code § 30519(b), there will be a substantial reduction in the number of permits issued by the Commission once all the LCP's of the coastal cities and counties have been certified. As a result, the regulations governing the issuance of permits by the Commission pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 30519(b) [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13050-13109.6, 13156-13170] are not discussed in this comment. For a detailed discussion of those regulations, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 300, Regulation in the Coastal Zone (Matthew Bender), and California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 66, Coastal Zone Regulation (Matthew Bender).

Because the process of preparing and certifying an LCP typically takes several years, alternative interim procedures govern the precertification processing and approval of coastal development permit applications. Although a detailed discussion of those temporary procedures is beyond the scope of this discussion, they are summarized below. For an extensive discussion of the interim procedures, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 300, Regulation in the Coastal Zone (Matthew Bender), and California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 66, Coastal Zone Regulation (Matthew Bender).

Before certification of an LCP, a local government has the option of establishing its own interim procedures for handling the filing, processing, reviewing, modification, and approval or denial of coastal development permits [Pub. Res. Code § 30600(b); see Pub. Res. Code § 30620.5]. These procedures may be incorporated into the procedures relating to any other appropriate land use development permit issued by the local government [Pub. Res. Code § 30600(b)]. A coastal development permit cannot be issued by a local government under such an optional interim procedure, but instead must be obtained from the Commission, if the application involves the development of tidelands, submerged lands, or public trust lands, whether filled or unfilled, or any development by a public agency for which a local government permit is not otherwise required [Pub. Res. Code § 30600(b), (c); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13300(c)].

[j] Exemptions From Normal Permit Application Procedures

[i] Administrative Permits

The standard coastal development permit application and processing procedures do not apply under the circumstances specified in Pub. Res. Code § 30624. If a permit is issued pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 30624 under nonemergency circumstances, it is referred to as an "administrative permit" [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13145-13153; see also [ii], below]. Under Pub. Res. Code § 30624 either of the following persons are authorized (under the circumstances indicated) to issue administrative permits [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(a)]:

- The executive director of the Commission, if the Commission has the authority to issue a coastal development permit for the proposed project [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30519(b), 30600(c)]; or

- A designated local official, if the local government has the authority to issue a permit before certification of its LCP [Pub. Res. Code § 30600.5; see [i], above].

Although this discussion concentrates on Pub. Res. Code § 30624, it is important to note that the certified LCP of a local government may authorize and regulate the issuance of an administrative permit [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30519(a), 30600(d)]. This type of local procedure would likely be similar to the statutory and regulatory procedures discussed throughout this section.

Under Pub. Res. Code § 30624, only the following developments may qualify for an administrative permit [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(a)]:

- Improvements to any existing structure;

- Any single-family dwelling;

- Any development of four dwelling units or less within any unincorporated area that does not require demolition;

- Any other developments not in excess of $100,000 other than a division of land; and

- Any development specifically authorized as a principal permitted use and proposed in an area for which the land use portion of the applicable local coastal program has been certified.

Because a large number of proposed developments will qualify for an administrative permit under the above provisions, the regulatory procedure for obtaining these permits from the Commission's Executive Director pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 30624 [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13145-13153] is set forth below. A similar regulatory procedure governs the pre-certification issuance of administrative permits by a local government pursuant to Pub. Res. Code §§ 30624 and 30600.5 [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13328-13328.9].

To apply for an administrative permit, the applicant must submit an official application form, together with a $2,500 filing fee [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13055(a)(1)] and one copy of whatever maps and drawings are reasonably required to describe the proposal [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13148; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13053.3, 13146]. A reasonable number of additional copies may subsequently be required [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13148]. At the time of filing, the applicant must post, in a conspicuous place at the project site, a standardized notice form that is furnished by the Commission [14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13054(d), 13149]. The applicant may also be required to provide the Commission with stamped envelopes for mailing a notice of public hearing to all addresses on a list prepared by the applicant of adjacent landowners and residents and other interested persons [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13054(b)]. The Executive Director may also require the applicant to provide additional notice to the public [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13149]. The Commission will notify any persons known to be interested in the proposed development [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13149; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13328.4].

The Executive Director will approve or modify the application on the same grounds that the Commission may approve an ordinary application, and may include reasonable terms and conditions required for the development to comply with the policies of the Act [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13150(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13328.5(a)]. The format, receipt, and acknowledgment of administrative permits are governed by the same rules that apply to other coastal development permits [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13150(b); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13156, 13158].

If the Executive Director finds that an application does not meet the criteria of Pub. Res. Code § 30624, he or she will notify the applicant that a regular permit application is required [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13147]. With the applicant's concurrence, the Executive Director may accept the application for filing as a regular permit and will adjust the application fees accordingly [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13147]. If the application is properly filed but the Executive Director denies the permit, the Executive Director must promptly mail written notice of the denial to the applicant with an explanation of the reasons for this determination [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13151; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13328.6(a)]. The applicant may then file an application for a standard (nonadministrative) permit [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13151; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13328.6(b)].

The issuance of an administrative permit will not be effective until after reasonable public notice and adequate time for the review of the issuance has been provided [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(a)]. It also will not be effective if, at the first meeting following the issuance, one third of the appointed members of the Commission or one third of the members of the governing body of the agency, as the case may be, request that the issuance not become effective [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(b), (c); 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13153, 13328.7]. If the issuance is ineffective, the application will be treated and processed as an application for a standard (nonadministrative) coastal development permit [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(b), (c); 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13153, 13328.7]. No approved permit will become effective until a copy of the permit has been returned to the Commission, on which all permittees or their authorized agents have acknowledged that they have received a copy of the permit and have accepted its contents. The acknowledgment should be returned within 10 days following issuance of the permit [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13158(b), (d)].

Special application procedures apply to emergencies. An "emergency" is a sudden unexpected occurrence demanding immediate action to prevent or mitigate loss or damage to life, health, property, or essential public services [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13009]. Depending on the nature of the emergency, one of the two alternative procedures discussed below are applicable to work that would have required a coastal development permit under nonemergency circumstances.

If the emergency requires a person or public agency performing a public service to take immediate action to protect life and public property from imminent danger, or to restore, repair, or maintain public works, utilities, or services destroyed, damaged, or interrupted by natural disaster, serious accident, or other emergency, then the permit requirement may be waived [see Pub. Res. Code § 30600(e)]. However, a waiver cannot be obtained for emergency work that consists of a permanent erection of structures valued at more than $25,000 [Pub. Res. Code § 30611].

In recognition of the fact that these emergencies require "immediate action" [see Pub. Res. Code § 30611], waivers are obtained after the fact by reporting specified information to the Executive Director shortly after the disaster or the discovery of the danger [see Pub. Res. Code § 30611; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13144]. Although a permit is not required under these circumstances, any person performing this exempt work must also comply, to the maximum extent feasible, with the regulatory procedure (discussed below) for obtaining an emergency permit [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13137; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13136-13143].

If any emergency coastal development does not qualify for a waiver of the permit requirements of the Act [see discussion, above], it may be possible to obtain a coastal development permit through an expedited application process [Pub. Res. Code § 30624; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13009 ("emergency" defined)]. These emergency permits are issued by the Commission in the manner prescribed by regulation [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13138, 13139] if the Commission has jurisdiction over the proposed development pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 30519(b) [Pub. Res. Code § 30624; see [h], above]. A local government may issue an emergency permit if a certified LCP authorizes and regulates the issuance [see Pub. Res. Code § 30519(a)], or if the local government has been delegated the authority to issue coastal development permits before certification of its LCP pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 30600.5 [see [i], above], in which case the method of application is governed by regulation [Pub. Res. Code § 30624(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 13329.1].

[iii] "De Minimis" Developments

The Executive Director may issue a waiver from coastal development permit requirements for any de minimis development [Pub. Res. Code § 30624.7; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 13238-13238.2]. A proposed development is "de minimis" if the Executive Director determines that it will be consistent with the coastal resources planning and management policies of the Act [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 30200-30265.5], and that it involves no potential for any adverse effect, either individually or cumulatively, on coastal resources [Pub. Res. Code § 30624.7].

[k] Violations of California Coastal Act

A person may be civilly liable if he or she performs or undertakes development in violation of the California Coastal Act, or performs or undertakes development that is inconsistent with any coastal development permit previously issued by the Commission, a local government that is implementing a certified local coastal program, or a port governing body that is implementing a certified port master plan. The maximum and minimum amounts of the fines vary depending on whether or not the person intentionally and knowingly violated the Act or permit requirements [see Pub. Res. Code § 30820(a)-(c)]. The Commission may also maintain an action for exemplary damages against a person who intentionally and knowingly violates any provision of the Act or an order issued under the Act [Pub. Res. Code § 30811].

When the Executive Director has determined that real property has been developed in violation of the Coastal Act, he or she may issue a notification of intention to record a notice of violation (NOV) to be mailed to the owner of the property [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(a), (h)]. The owner then has the opportunity to object to the filing of the NOV. If no objection is made, the NOV will be filed in each county in which all or part of the property is located [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(b)]. If the owner files an objection, a public hearing will be held at which the owner may present evidence as to why the NOV should not be recorded [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(c)]. If, following the hearing, the Commission finds that a violation has occurred, the NOV will be recorded. If there is a finding that no violation occurred, a clearance letter will be issued to the property owner [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(d)].

When the NOV is properly recorded and indexed, it will be considered notice of the violation to all successors in interest in the subject property. It is for informational purposes only, however, and does not constitute a defect, lien, or encumbrance on the property [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(e)(2)]. Once the violation has been finally resolved, a clearance letter will be mailed to the owner and a notice of rescission will be recorded in each county office in which the NOV was recorded. The notice will indicate that the NOV is no longer valid and has the same effect as a withdrawal or expungement under Code Civ. Proc. § 405.61 [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(f)].

An NOV may not be issued until existing methods (excluding the commencement of formal administrative or judicial proceedings) for resolving the violation have been utilized and the property owner has been made aware of the possibility that the NOV will be recorded [Pub. Res. Code § 30812(g)].

The Commission, a local government that is implementing a certified local coastal program, or a port governing body that is implementing a certified port master plan may, after a public hearing, order restoration of a site if it finds all of the following [Pub. Res. Code § 30811]:

- Development has occurred without a coastal development permit from the Commission, local government, or port governing body;
- The development is inconsistent with the California Coastal Act; and
- The development is causing continuing resource damage.

§ 30B.223 Application for Permit From San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the official application for a permit from the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission ("BCDC"). Under the McAteer-Petris Act ("Act") [Gov. Code § 66600 et seq.], any project involving a substantial change [see definition in [d], below] in the use of San Francisco Bay or its shoreline requires a permit. These changes may consist of shoreline construction, or dredging, filling, or diking the Bay [see Gov. Code § 66632(a)].

This application form may be used to obtain any of the following:

- An administrative permit [see [f], below];
- A major permit from the BCDC [see [g], below]; or
- Authorization to proceed with a project under a BCDC regionwide permit [see [i], below].

This comment also covers emergency permits, even though this form is not used for those permits [see [h], below].

Copies of this application form are available from the BCDC office at 50 California Street, Suite 2600, San Francisco, CA 94111, (415) 352-3600. The BCDC has also prepared detailed instructions for completing this application [see BCDC Application Instructions (March 1998)]. Those instructions recommend that applicants contact the BCDC's staff for assistance in completing the application.

PRACTICE TIP:

BCDC Information Is Available Online. The BCDC has a very helpful internet web site. There is contact information, information on their programs, and downloadable versions of the applicable statutes, regulations, and forms. The BCDC Application Instructions is also available online, as is a companion publication, Applying for Project Approval from BCDC (September 1994). The home page of BCDC is at http://www.bcdc.ca.gov.

For extensive discussions of development in the San Francisco Bay area, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 67, The San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission (Matthew Bender), and California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 301, Control by the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission (Matthew Bender).

[b] General Guidelines to Completing Application

The form is divided into 12 sections; each section appears in a numbered box. In addition to the completed application, the applicant must provide the BCDC with the materials listed in the checklist that appears at page 2 of the form. These items are described in detail in the BCDC Application Instructions.

The BCDC strongly encourages applicants to submit a draft application if the project is large or complex. The use of a draft application permits the BCDC staff to better advise the applicant on the applicable policies and procedures and on the information that is required to complete the application [see Applying for Project Approval From BCDC (September 1994), p. 3].

[c] Overview of Jurisdiction of BCDC

The BCDC administers two state laws, the McAteer-Petris Act [Gov. Code § 66600 et seq.; see [d], below] and the Suisun Marsh Preservation Act of 1977 [Pub. Res. Code § 29000 et seq.; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 11200 et seq.]. In doing so, it issues two legally different types of permits: (1) San Francisco Bay permits, and (2) Suisun Marsh development permits. This comment focuses on the provisions of the McAteer-Petris Act. If counsel is dealing with a project in the Suisun Marsh, he or she should contact the BCDC for information regarding the unique requirements that apply to projects located in that area.

[d] McAteer-Petris Act and San Francisco Bay Plan

The McAteer-Petris Act [Gov. Code § 66600 et seq.] was enacted to protect San Francisco Bay as a natural resource and to plan for and control the development of the Bay and its shoreline to their highest potential [Gov. Code §§ 66600, 66651]. The BCDC promulgated these policies [see Gov. Code § 66620] in the San Francisco Bay Plan (the Plan) [Gov. Code §§ 66603, 66651].

Among other things, the Plan provides for all of the following:

- Controlling bay fill [Gov. Code §§ 66601, 66605];
- Developing and preserving shoreline [Gov. Code §§ 66602, 66605.1]; and
- Preserving saltponds and managed wetlands [Gov. Code § 66602.1].

This is accomplished by the issuance or denial of applications for permits for proposed substantial changes in the use of the Bay [Gov. Code §§ 66604, 66632, 66653]. A "substantial change in use" means, as to any salt pond or managed wetland, any change in use, including abandonment or the draining of water (except temporary draining for a short period of time in accordance with routine operating practices) [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10125(a)]. As to other areas, that term means any construction, reconstruction, alteration, or other activity (whether or not involving a structure), if the activity [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10125(b)]:

- Has an estimated cost of $250,000 or more;
- Involves a change in the general category of use of a structure or of land;
- Involves a substantial change in the intensity of use;
- Adversely affects existing public access or future public access as shown on any BCDC permit, the San Francisco Bay Plan, any BCDC special area plan, or any other BCDC planning document; or
- Is a subdivision under the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.; see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation] or another division of land, including a lot split, that (1) will substantially affect either present or future public access to or along the shoreline, or (2) will substantially affect either the present or future suitability of a water-oriented priority land use site for that priority use. However, this category does not include any subdivision or other division of land that is brought about in connection with the acquisition of an interest in the land by a public agency for wildlife habitat, marsh restoration, public recreation, or public access [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10125(b)].

[e] Area of Jurisdiction of BCDC

The BCDC has jurisdiction over all areas of San Francisco Bay that are subject to tidal action. These subject areas include specifically named creeks, rivers, and flood control channels, sloughs, marshlands (land between the mean high tide and five feet above mean sea level), tidelands (land between the mean high tide and the mean low tide), and submerged lands (land below the mean low tide). The area of jurisdiction also includes (1) a shoreline bank of land extending 100 feet inland (except for any land within this band that the BCDC has specifically excluded from its area of jurisdiction as not being of regional importance to the Bay); and (2) saltponds and managed wetlands that have been diked off from the Bay and that have been used or maintained from November 10, 1966 [Gov. Code § 66610; 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10121-10123, 10130-10132; see Gov. Code § 66660.1 (exempting certain planned community developments approved before July 1, 1969); see also Gov. Code § 66432.2; 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10660 (exempting construction of certain public service facilities)].

[f] Administrative Permits

[i] Issued for Minor Repairs or Improvements

This form may be used to obtain an administrative permit. An administrative permit is generally processed and issued faster than a major permit [see Applying for Project Approval From BCDC (September 1994), p. 3; see also [g], below (major permits)]. The Executive Director of the BCDC issues administrative permits for projects involving minor repairs or improvements [Gov. Code § 66632(f); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10600; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10601-10624]. For these purposes, "minor repairs or improvements" means any activity that (1) requires a permit from the BCDC, (2) is either consistent with applicable laws or necessary to the health, safety, or welfare of the public in the entire Bay Area, and (3) falls into one or more of the numerous categories specified in the BCDC regulations [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10601]. These categories include construction of a new single boat dock no larger than 1,000 square feet or a new multiple boat dock no larger than 5,000 square feet, routine repairs, reconstruction, replacement, removal, and maintenance that do not involve substantial enlargement or change in use, and building one- and two-family residences and ancillary residential structures on certain parcels [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10601(a), (b)(2); see also 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10601(f), 10602 (permit process for maintenance dredging and disposal)].

[ii] Submission and Processing of Application

An applicant for an administrative permit must submit one copy of this form, certain supporting documentation, and a filing fee [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10610; see also 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10330(a), 10610(e) (filing fee)]. If the Executive Director believes that the application is complete and properly qualifies for processing as an administrative permit application, he or she will file the application and notify the applicant of that fact [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10611(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10611(b) (notification of rejection of application)].

Before acting on a complete application, the Executive Director will prepare a listing that (1) summarizes the proposed work, (2) provides a summary of all significant environmental points raised during the review process and a staff response to each of those points, and (3) indicates whether the Executive Director recommends approval or denial or has yet to reach a decision [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10620(a)]. This listing will be mailed at least five days before a regularly scheduled BCDC meeting date [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10620(b)]. Thereafter, the Executive Director cannot act on the application if either of the following sets of circumstances occurs [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10621(a); but see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10621(b) (limited exception to following restrictions)]:

- The BCDC holds a meeting within 14 days of the mailing of the listing, and a majority of the commissioners at that meeting determine (by a vote) that the application should be processed as an application for a major permit; or

- The BCDC does not hold a meeting within 14 days of the mailing, but (1) at least one commissioner submits to the Executive Director, within that 14-day period, a written objection to the issuance of the administrative permit, and (2) at the next BCDC meeting following the objection, a majority of the commissioners at the meeting determine (by a vote) that the application should be processed as an application for a major permit.

If the BCDC determines that the application should be processed as an application for a major permit, the Executive Director will, within five working days, notify the applicant that the permit has been denied and provide information on how the applicant should proceed [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10621(c)]. If the BCDC does not make such a determination, the Executive Director will act on the application within five working days [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10621(d)].

The Executive Director will approve the application if he or she determines that the proposed activity, including reasonable terms and conditions, qualifies as a minor repair or improvement and is consistent with applicable laws [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10622]. If the Executive Director rejects the application, he or she will notify the applicant of the reasons for the denial [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10623]. Thereafter, the applicant may resubmit it to the BCDC as an application for a major permit.

[g] Major Permits

[i] Contents of Application Package

A major permit is any BCDC permit other than an administrative permit, an emergency permit, or a regionwide permit [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10300; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10310-10381]. The application package must consist of all of the following [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10310]:

- This official application form;

- Supporting documentation; and

- Filing fees [see Appendix M of BCDC regulations (filing fees)].

[ii] Filing and Processing of Application

The BCDC has 30 days from its receipt of the application to determine whether or not it is complete [see Gov. Code § 65943 (imposing 30-day deadline for review of application for any development project); see also § 30B.123, PP 5-7], unless the applicant requests in writing that the application not be accepted as submitted for filing at that time [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10350(a); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10350(b)]. The Executive Director will either file the application [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10351(a)] or decide that it cannot be filed and notify the applicant of this decision [14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10351(b), 10352].

If the application is accepted and filed, the Executive Director will prepare a summary of the application [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10380] and will normally distribute it to certain interested parties no less than 10 days before the public hearing [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10381(a); see [v], below]. However, if the summary application contains an environmental assessment, the Executive Director will distribute it no less than 30 days before the scheduled hearing [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10381(b)].

[iii] Staff Recommendation

The Executive Director must prepare a staff recommendation on the application for presentation at the meeting at which the BCDC will vote on the application [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500]. This recommendation must be in the form of a proposed BCDC resolution [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(b); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10501 (required contents of resolution of approval), 10502 (required contents of resolution of denial)]. A resolution of approval must state any terms and conditions to which the permit will be subject [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10501(c); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10503(b) (permit must contain those terms and conditions)]. The Executive Director must also prepare for presentation at the meeting a summary of all significant environmental points raised during the process of reviewing the application and a staff response to each of those points [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(c)].

[iv] Public Hearing

The BCDC will hold a public hearing on the application [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10400-10423] after the Executive Director has provided notice of the hearing in the manner required by regulation [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10401]. At the hearing, the applicant may present any additional information, and other persons may also speak concerning the application [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10410]. Ordinarily, the BCDC will complete the hearing in one BCDC meeting. However, the BCDC may continue the hearing if it feels that there is good reason to do so [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10420].

[v] Disapproval or Approval and Permit Issuance

Within 90 days after it files the application, the BCDC will deny or grant the permit. If the application is denied, the BCDC will notify the applicant in a letter that will (1) specify the reasons for the denial and the relevant vote count or contain the text of the resolution of denial, and (2) be mailed no later than 15 working days following denial [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10530(a), (b)]. The applicant may then contest the denial in court, provided the legal proceeding is commenced within 90 days following the date of the BCDC's action [Gov. Code § 66632(i)], or submit another application to the BCDC more than 90 days after the date of denial [Gov. Code § 66632(g)].

The BCDC will issue the permit if 13 of its members (excluding the two nonvoting federal members) vote to do so [Gov. Code § 66632(f); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10500-10505 (use of staff recommendations), 10510-10515 (voting)], after determining that the project is either necessary to the health, safety, or welfare of the public in the entire Bay Area, or of such a nature that it will be consistent with the Act and the San Francisco Bay Plan [Gov. Code § 66632(f)]. The permit may be granted subject to reasonable terms and conditions [Gov. Code § 66632(f); see 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10503].

Within two weeks of completion of the work authorized in the permit, the permittee must file an executed notice of completion with the Executive Director [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10540].

[h] Emergency Permits

The Executive Director must grant an emergency permit, on reasonable terms and conditions, if he or she finds all of the following [Gov. Code § 66632(f); 14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10652; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10640-10660]:

- An emergency exists;
- The emergency requires action more quickly than can reasonably occur when the BCDC's procedures for issuing permits are followed; and
- The proposed work would be consistent with applicable laws.

For these purposes, an "emergency" is a situation that poses an immediate danger to life, health, or property [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10120].

Applications for emergency permits may be made by letter if time allows, or by telephone or in person otherwise [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10640]. The application or applicant must describe the nature and location of the emergency and the proposed work. The amount of information provided to describe these aspects of the emergency must be consistent with the time the emergency allows [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10641]. The Executive Director must verify the facts surrounding the emergency, particularly the existence and nature of the emergency, insofar as time allows [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10650]. Within five working days after the receipt of the emergency permit, the permittee must submit to the Executive Director (1) descriptive material concerning the emergency work that is substantially similar to the documentation required in applications for administrative permits [see [f], above], and (2) all appropriate fees for the work [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 10653].

[i] Regionwide Permits

The BCDC may issue, by resolution, a regionwide permit to authorize throughout its jurisdiction a specific category or categories of activities that the BCDC determines will have no substantial impact on the subject areas, such as routine repair and maintenance of existing structures located within San Francisco Bay [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 11700; see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11710-11716]. A regionwide permit has the same force and effect as other BCDC permits, and the BCDC may enforce the terms and conditions of a regionwide permit in the same manner as it enforces other permits [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 11700].

If the project sponsor believes that the proposed work is covered by such a permit, he or she must submit to the Executive Director a written notice of intent to proceed. The Executive Director will determine whether or not the project is covered by an existing regionwide permit and therefore can be approved without a public hearing or review by the BCDC [see 14 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 11712, 11713]. If the project is approved, the Executive Director will provide the sponsor with a copy of the applicable regionwide permit [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 11714(a)]. If the project does not qualify under the regionwide permit, the sponsor will be provided with the reasons for the disapproval [14 Cal. Code Reg. § 11714(b)]. Thereafter, if the sponsor wishes to proceed with the work, he or she must apply for a major permit [see [g], above].

§ 30B.224 Mitigation Agreement Between California Department of Fish and Game and Developer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a mitigation agreement between a developer and the California Department of Fish and Game (the "Department"). The creation of a mitigation agreement would be used in an environmental impact report (EIR) [see § 30B.218] or mitigated negative declaration [see § 30B.217] as a mitigation measure. It would be deemed to mitigate a significant impact to existing animals or plants, and/or to their habitat, to a level of insignificance. The form comes from an actual agreement in which the developer agreed to relocate a species of special concern, the Western burrowing owl, and to either provide mitigation habitat or to pay the Department a sum sufficient to fund the purchase.

A mitigation agreement would typically come about through the investigation of a site and the preparation of California Environmental Quality Act ("CEQA") documentation. If the area is known to contain habitat for a sensitive species, the Department might suggest at the earliest scoping phase of CEQA compliance (for example, in response to a notice of preparation [see § 30B.216]) that there would be such an impact that must be mitigated. Alternatively, if the impact were discovered by the EIR preparers, the Department might raise its concerns in response to receipt of the draft EIR [see § 30B.210 for a fuller discussion of the CEQA process].

[b] Recitals

Recitals set out the factual background of the Agreement. They describe the existing species problem, and also specify that this agreement does not authorize the "take" of individual wildlife (i.e., it is assumed that no wildlife will be killed, since any individuals found on the site will be relocated).

[c] Protection of Existing Wildlife

Section 3 contains standard measures to be implemented during construction to prevent the loss of any individual animals. Depending on the species, these can have a large financial impact on the contractor. The developer must make sure that his or her contractors understand and honor these provisions, as any violation ultimately will be attributed to the developer.

[d] Habitat Enhancement

In addition to the costs of providing substitute habitat, the developer must also enhance the habitat, if applicable, and must demonstrate that the property selected has suitable habitat values [see Section 6].

[e] Funding Requirements

Section 7 is the heavily-negotiated financial heart of the agreement. The Department will want not only that the lands be purchased or conserved, but also that their future management be funded, as well as having its own transaction costs reimbursed. The developer will normally want to fund as little as possible up front, but will have to post some kind of security for the balance. Here the security is in the form of a deposit of funds into an irrevocable escrow account.

[f] Certificate of Public Purpose

Exhibit A to the Agreement is a certificate that must be attached to a deed conveying the property or an easement on the property to a public agency [see Gov. Code § 27281]. The form was supplied by the Department.

[g] Escrow Instructions

Exhibit B embodies the security required by the agreement for the balance of the developer's financial obligations under the agreement (unless the mitigation land costs more than foreseen, see Section 7E). Alternatively, a bond or letter of credit might be procured.

[2] FORM

Mitigation Agreement Between California Department of Fish and Game and Developer

MITIGATION AGREEMENT Between _____ [developer], a California limited liability company and the CALIFORNIA
DEPARTMENT OF FISH AND GAME

Ref. No. _____

This Mitigation Agreement ("Agreement") is made and entered into by and between_____[name of developer], a California limited liability company ("Owner") and the California Department of Fish and Game (the "Department"), a Department of the State of California, collectively the "Parties."

The purpose of this Agreement is to mitigate significant environmental impacts to the Western burrowing owl (Athene cunicularia, sometimes referred to herein as "burrowing owl" or "owl"), caused by the build out of the existing_____[property name] and an adjacent 4.5 acre grassland area. The Western burrowing owl is a State designated Species-of-Special-Concern.

RECITALS

A. WHEREAS, Owner proposes razing and redeveloping a commercial/residential community on the land of an existing shopping center located [location], and approximately 4.5 acres of undeveloped grassland habitat in_____[city], California (the "Project"). Owner proposes to mitigate for impacts to a single owl or a pair of burrowing owls and habitat essential for their survival which occurs on the parcels proposed for development; and

B. WHEREAS, the Environmental Impact Report ("EIR") for the Project found that significant environmental impacts to the Western burrowing owls will occur as a result of development; and whereas the Department is a responsible agency under the California Environmental Quality Act ("CEQA"); and

C. WHEREAS, Owner and the Department have reached agreement on one acceptable way to mitigate the significant environmental impacts to the Western burrowing owls; and

D. WHEREAS, the Department requires mitigation of Western burrowing owl habitat at the ratio of 6.5 acres of owl habitat for every pair of owls or single owl located in the project area; and

E. WHEREAS, the Department is trustee for the fish and wildlife resources of the State of California and has jurisdiction over the conservation and protection of fish, wildlife, and native plants, and the habitat necessary for biologically sustainable populations thereof pursuant to California Fish and Game Code Section 1802; and

F. WHEREAS, Western burrowing owls and approximately 4.5 acres of habitat occurs on the parcel identified for development; and

G. WHEREAS, development of the present Project will result in permanent impacts to a single owl or a pair of burrowing owls; and

H. WHEREAS, the Department desires, consistent with the policies of California Fish and Game Code Section 1802, that there be permanent protection for burrowing owls and their habitat to assure the conservation, restoration, and long-term survival of this species; and

I. WHEREAS, Owner agrees to undertake the mitigation measures set forth in this Agreement to offset the adverse impacts to burrowing owls caused by the project; and

J. WHEREAS, the Project will not result in the take of individual burrowing owls, which is prohibited by Fish and Game Code Section 3503.5, and whereas measures will be implemented to assure that no take will occur through the eviction of burrowing owls from the proposed construction site during the nesting season.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals and of the mutual promises, obligations, and covenants herein contained, the Parties agree as follows:

1. NOTIFICATION

Owner intends to pursue development of the Project upon execution of this Agreement. This Agreement serves as notification that Owner intends to commence ground disturbing activities on the land underlying the Project, including some or all of the approximately 4.5 acres.

2. RESPONSIBLE PARTY

By execution of this Agreement, Owner is notifying the Department that_____[name of individual], or his/her designee, is responsible for overseeing compliance with this Agreement.

3. EVICTION OF OWLS, BUFFER ZONES, AND REPORTING OF TAKE

Owner agrees to comply with the following restrictions during construction of the Project:

A. No burrowing owls will be evicted from burrows during the nesting season (February 1 through August 31). This Agreement authorizes eviction outside the nesting season pending receipt of formal written approval from the Department authorizing the eviction.

B. A 250-foot buffer, within which no new activity will be permissible, will be maintained between Project activities and nesting burrowing owls. This protected area will remain in effect during the Western burrowing owl's nesting season, or at the Department's discretion and based upon monitoring evidence, until the young owls, if any, are foraging independently.

C. If an accidental take occurs, Owner will contact the Department immediately.

4. ACQUISITION OF HABITAT LANDS

A. Owner agrees to acquire and preserve an area of 6.5 acres of existing burrowing owl foraging and breeding habitat management (HM) lands. Alternatively, suitable habitat not currently sustaining a burrowing owl population but that (at Owner's expense) can be suitably modified to become HM lands may be provided. This acreage is based on 6.5 acres of habitat for a single owl or a pair of owls.

B. HM lands acquired by Owner shall be transferred to the Department in fee title or preserved through a conservation easement or a declaration of deed restriction that is approved by the Department. In lieu of transfer to the Department, the HM lands may be transferred to a non-profit corporation or public entity approved by the Department under terms approved by the Department. Owner agrees to obtain the Department's approval of the HM lands for their biological suitability prior to acquisition under this agreement or any transfer.

5. LAND RATIO REQUIREMENT

The required HM lands acreage is based upon the agreement between Owner and the Department that the development site is utilized for foraging and/or breeding habitat by one pair of owls, or by a single owl and that one acceptable method of mitigating impacts to burrowing owls and their habitat is off-site preservation of existing burrowing owl habitat at a ratio sufficient to sustain the displaced birds or an equivalent population of burrowing owls.

6. CONDITIONS OF HABITAT ENHANCEMENT

A. The HM lands must comprise existing burrowing owl habitat, or Owner must undertake habitat enhancement measures. Enhancement measures intended to fulfill suitability requirements for HM lands must be reviewed and approved by the Department. Owner agrees to demonstrate that the HM lands are suitable for burrowing owl mitigation by providing information that shows burrowing owl distribution on the proposed HM lands or in the vicinity. The total acreage of HM lands protected through this Agreement may exceed the 6.5 acres required, because areas of the HM lands that are not suitable for burrowing owls will not be applied to the total mitigation requirement. Any HM lands protected for the purposes of this Agreement must include areas on-site where burrowing owls can breed successfully. Owner will be responsible for creating breeding habitat (artificial burrows) on the HM lands if it is determined to be necessary by the Department. Owner agrees to provide the Department a recent preliminary title report and Level I environmental report for the HM lands. All documents conveying HM lands and all conditions of title are subject to the approval of the Department, the Department of General Services and, if applicable, the Fish and Game Commission.

B. Owner agrees to acquire 6.5 acres of HM lands within 18 months of the execution of this Agreement. This requirement will mitigate impacts to burrowing owl habitat caused by grading and development activities from the Owner project.

C. If Owner fails to complete the acquisition of 6.5 acres of HM lands within 18 months, or fails to perform other duties identified in this Agreement within the time periods specified, the Department, at its option, may demand that Owner cure its breach forthwith. The Department may draw upon the security to complete the required acquisition, enhancement, and management of HM lands and may pursue other remedies if Owner fails to cure its breach upon demand.

7. FUNDING REQUIREMENTS FOR MITIGATION LANDS

A. Owner shall enhance burrowing owl habitat on the HM lands if the species is not already found on the HM lands, and if the Department approves proposed enhancements as a means of fulfilling suitability requirements on lands not presently suitable. In addition, Owner shall be responsible for initial protection and enhancement measures on the HM lands; these measures may include but are not limited to fencing, trash clean-up, artificial burrow creation, grazing or mowing, and any habitat restoration deemed necessary by the Department. Alternatively, Owner may fund the Department's initial protection and enhancement activities on the HM lands by providing the Department a check in the amount of $_____ drawn from a banking institution located within California. Any unobligated funds for initial protection and enhancement of the HM lands shall be returned to Owner upon completion of all such activities.

B. Owner agrees to provide the Department (or non-profit corporation or other public entity, as applicable) with a check in the amount of $_____ to establish an endowment for the long-term management of the HM lands. Owner shall transfer these funds to the Department, or its designee, upon the Department's approval of the biological suitability of the HM lands, exceptions and conditions of title, and acquisition by the Department or an agent approved by the Department of HM lands as provided herein. The funds shall be in the form of a check drawn from a banking institution located within California. Such funding shall be used as principal for a permanent capital endowment. Interest from this amount shall be available for operations, management, and protection of the HM lands acquired pursuant to this Agreement. Operation, management, and protection activities may include reasonable administrative overhead, biological monitoring, improvements to biological carrying capacity, law enforcement measures, and any other actions designed to protect or improve the habitat values of the HM lands. Money received by the Department pursuant to this provision shall be deposited in a special account established pursuant to Government Code Section 16370. The Department may pool the endowment with other endowments for the operation, management, and protection of HM lands for local populations of the Western burrowing owl.

C. Owner agrees to reimburse the Department for reasonable expenses incurred as a result of the approval and implementation of this Agreement, including costs of title and documentation review, expenses incurred from other state agency reviews, and reasonable overhead directly related to this Agreement. The Parties estimate that this Agreement will create an additional cost to the Department of up to $_____ per HM lands acquisition transaction processed regardless of the number of acres in each transaction.

D. Owner plans to proceed with the Project prior to fully performing the mitigation described in this Agreement. Owner therefore agrees to secure the performance of its mitigation duties by providing the Department with security in the amount of $_____ within 10 working days from the date of execution of this Agreement. If Owner has not fully performed its duties and obligations under this agreement within 18 months of the execution of this Agreement, Owner shall pay the Department the estimated cost of performing any unperformed obligation. In the event that Owner does not pay such a sum to the Department within 10 days' written notice of such an amount being due, the Department may draw upon the security provided pursuant to this Agreement and use such funds to acquire, protect, enhance, and manage HM lands. The security shall be approved by the Department and shall be in the form of a trust account, escrow account subject to irrevocable instructions attached as Exhibit B, irrevocable letter of credit, cash payment, or a combination of the aforementioned, or other security approved by the Department. The amount of security specified above includes: (1) $_____ for initial protection and enhancement of the HM lands, (2) $_____ (6.5 acres at an estimated $_____ an acre) for the acquisition and/or preservation of the HM lands, (3) $_____ for an endowment for the long-term management of the HM lands, and (4) $_____ for transaction processing, if required. It is the intention of Owner to post said security by depositing cash with the Department in the amount of $_____, and to provide the remainder of the required security, $_____, in one of the acceptable forms described above.

E. The Parties estimate that Owner's costs for the acquisition and transfer of suitable HM lands totaling 6.5 acres of burrowing owl habitat will be $_____, at an estimated cost of $_____ an acre. In the event that acquisition costs are less than estimated, Owner's obligation shall be the actual acquisition cost and associated expenses described in this Agreement. In the event that actual acquisition costs are greater than estimated, Owner shall not be released from performance of the requirements hereunder unless the Department and Owner agree to modify this Agreement to provide for alternate burrowing owl mitigation measures acceptable to the Department, provided, however, Owner's obligations for the actual acquisition costs shall not exceed $_____ an acre.

F. The Department will authorize the release or return of security to Owner as mitigation duties are completed by Owner. Upon timely request and upon presentation of documentary evidence of full compliance with the terms and conditions of this Agreement, the Department shall release or request the release of the remaining security.

8. OTHER PROVISIONS

A. The Department, its designee, or successor shall hold title to and protect all HM lands conveyed in fee title under this Agreement solely for the purposes of conservation, protection, restoration, and enhancement of the Western burrowing owl and/or its habitats. This covenant shall remain in effect with the land and no use of such land shall be permitted by the Department or any subsequent title holder or assignee which is in conflict with the stated conservation purposes of this Agreement. The Department, its designee, or successor may allow some limited grazing on the HM lands if said uses or the management of said uses do not conflict in any way with the Department's conservation goals for burrowing owls.

B. The Department, its designee, or successor shall record on each deed a statement that the HM lands described in the deed of record have been conveyed to the Department, its designee, or successor for purposes of conservation, protection, restoration, and enhancement of the burrowing owl and its habitat.

C. In the event Owner defaults on any of its material obligations under this Agreement, the Department shall have all rights with respect to any cash security and all remedies available at law or in equity, including specific performance injunction, and without limitation all rights of a secured party pursuant to the California Uniform Commercial Code.

D. All notices required or provided for under this Agreement shall be in writing and delivered in person or sent by certified mail, postage prepaid, by overnight delivery or by facsimile.

Notices required to be given to Owner shall be addressed as follows:

_____ [name, address, and fax number]

Notices required to be given to Department shall be addressed as follows:

A party may change its address for notices by giving notice in writing to the other party, and thereafter all notices shall be addressed and transmitted to the new address. Notices shall be deemed given and received upon the earlier of personal delivery, or if mailed, upon the expiration of 48 hours after being deposited in the United States Mail or on the delivery date or attempted delivery date shown on the return receipt, air bill, or facsimile.

E. Any sale or assignment of this Agreement or any of the rights or obligations thereunder is void absent the written consent of the Parties; provided, however, that no consent shall be required for assignment or pledge made by Owner (a) to any company that shall succeed by purchase, merger or consolidation to the properties of Owner; or (b) as security for a debt under the provision of any mortgage, deed of trust, indenture, bank credit agreement, or similar instrument.

F. This Agreement comprises the entire agreement and understanding between the Parties concerning the project, and the mitigation of significant environmental impacts regarding Western burrowing owls and their habitat. This Agreement supercedes all prior and contemporaneous agreements, representations or understandings, whether oral or written.

G. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of California. Actual or threatened breach of this Agreement may be prohibited or restrained by a court of competent jurisdiction.

H. This Agreement is solely for the benefit of the People of the State of California, by and through the Department or its designated representative, and Owner.

I. From time to time, the Parties shall by mutual agreement execute such instruments and other documents, and take such other actions, as may be reasonably necessary to carry out the terms of this Agreement. This Agreement cannot be amended or modified in any way except by a written instrument duly executed by the Parties. In any action requiring the agreement or approval of either of the Parties, such agreement or approval shall not be unreasonably denied or withheld, so long as it does not substantially alter the Agreements, duties, and remedies of the parties.

J. It is acknowledged that the purpose of this Agreement is to set forth the obligations and rights of the Parties with respect to the project and the mitigation of significant environmental impacts on the Western burrowing owl and its habitat. The Department will not seek further mitigation or compensation for the Western burrowing owl or its habitat from Owner for impacts within the project area.

K. This Agreement shall be immediately effective upon execution by the Parties.

L. This Agreement includes and incorporates the following:

§ 30B.231 Application for Building Permit--Santa Clara County Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the application for a building permit used by the Santa Clara County Building Inspection Office for unincorporated areas of that county. It is representative of application forms used throughout the state by city and county building standards enforcement agencies. When properly executed, the applicant's copy of this application becomes the building permit.

This form is reproduced here for illustrative purposes only. The form, along with other county building permit applications, can be filled in and filed using the E-Permit application for online filings [see http://www.sccgov.org].

For the application form for a permit to construct a mobilehome park or a related enterprise or facility in a mobilehome park [see 25 Cal. Code Reg. § 1032(a); see also Health & Safety Code § 18500], see Ch. 39, Mobilehome Parks .

[b] Filing Procedures

The main types of permits issued by cities and counties for construction projects are building, plumbing, electrical, and mechanical (or heating and ventilation). Although some local jurisdictions only require one application for these four types of permits, most require separate applications for each. This chapter does not reproduce applications for plumbing, electrical, and mechanical permits.

Various names are applied to local building standards enforcement agencies, including "central permit bureau," "building department," "building inspection department," and "building and safety department." Some local jurisdictions have centralized permit issuance procedures, with one agency having either sole control over the approval and issuance of all construction permits or the responsibility for transferring the applicant's papers to other concerned agencies for their approval. The majority of local jurisdictions are centralized only as to the four basic permits (building, plumbing, electrical, and mechanical) and usually require the applicant to seek other permits or approvals from the appropriate local agencies. Under this arrangement the function of the building department is usually ministerial and not discretionary. That is, it checks the plans for compliance with the applicable building codes, ordinances, rules, and regulations and issues permits based on this compliance. The discretionary function is handled by a planning department or other development control agency.

Although the issuance of building permits has traditionally been thought of as a ministerial action, it is possible for local ordinances to include provisions that actually make their grant a discretionary action [see § 30B.211 (Notice of Exemption From CEQA Requirements) for further discussion].

[c] Supporting Documents

Building permit applications generally must be accompanied by an appropriate set of plans and supporting materials. For example, the County of Santa Clara form requires all of the following supporting documents:

- Plot plan.
- Deed showing access, if not shown on assessor's parcel map.
- Foundation plan.
- Floor plan.
- Exterior elevations.
- Cross sections.
- Framing plan.
- Roof plan.
- Construction details.
- Soil report, for new buildings.
- Manufacturers' engineering reports for prefabricated structural framing components.
- Title 24 energy calculations.

The plans and specifications must be accompanied by a signed statement that the person who prepared or was in responsible control of the plans and specifications is licensed to perform those functions. The person's signature and stamp or seal on the plans and specifications constitutes compliance with this requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.2]. Persons designing any of the following are exempt from the requirement to furnish a signed statement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537(a)]:

- A single-family wood frame dwelling not more than two stories high and garages or other appurtenant buildings;
- Multiple dwellings containing no more than four dwelling units of wood frame construction not more than two stories high; or

- Farm or ranch buildings of wood frame construction.

[d] Special Permit Requirements

A city may enact an ordinance prohibiting the issuance of residential building permits until local educational, sewage disposal, and water supply facilities comply with specified standards. The ordinance need not be required by a compelling state interest but must be reasonably related to the welfare of the region it affects [see Associated Home Builders of the Greater Eastbay, Inc. v. Livermore (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 582, 607-610, 135 Cal. Rptr. 41, 557 P.2d 473] .

Special statutory provisions govern the terms of building permits issued by a county before the incorporation or annexation of the subject real property. Generally, if an application for a building permit is filed with a county before a vote on incorporation affecting that property, and the permit is issued by the county before the effective date of the incorporation, the permit will remain valid for 180 days from its date of issuance [Health & Safety Code § 19829(a)]. A building permit issued by a county for construction on real property subsequently annexed to a city will remain valid for the life of the permit as issued [Health & Safety Code § 19829(b)]. Both of the above provisions are subject to various statutory qualifications and to any conflicting local ordinances [see Health & Safety Code § 19829].

As a condition to issuing a building permit, an enforcement agency [see Health & Safety Code § 19870(b)(2) (definition)] may require a permittee to participate in a preconstruction conference before the process of checking the permittee's submitted plans and specifications can be completed. The purpose of the conference is to review the plans to ensure that the building code is interpreted consistently and that the plans are adequately and sufficiently detailed [Health & Safety Code § 19872(a); see Health & Safety Code § 19872(b) (participation of other appropriate enforcement agencies)]. The agency may require the permittee to maintain at the project site a set of plans and specifications that reflect any points of discussion, understandings, or agreements derived from the conference [Health & Safety Code § 19872(c)].

With some exceptions, once a tentative map or a parcel map has been approved for a subdivision of single-or multiple-family residential units, a local agency may not condition the issuance of a building permit or equivalent permit on the satisfaction of conditions that the city or county could have imposed as a condition to the previously approved tentative map or parcel map. This prohibition applies from the time the tentative or parcel map is approved until five years after the final or parcel map was recorded [Gov. Code § 65961; but see Gov. Code § 65961(e), (f)]. Exceptions to this prohibition permit a local jurisdiction to (1) impose subsequent conditions if they are required by state or federal law or are necessary to protect the health or safety of the residents, (2) withhold or refuse to issue a permit if the local agency finds it must do so to comply with state or federal law, or (3) assure compliance with the applicable zoning ordinance [Gov. Code § 65961(a)-(c)]. The section does not prevent the imposition of later-enacted development fees (nor, presumably, application of later-enacted building code requirements) [see Golden State Homebuilding Associates v. City of Modesto (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 601, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 572] .

No city or county may require an applicant for a building or encroachment permit to file a certificate of insurance evidencing coverage for bodily injury or property damage liability as a condition to the issuance of either (or both) of those permits, unless that requirement is imposed by ordinance [Gov. Code § 53080.5(a)]. This does not apply to contracts for public works of improvement entered into by a city or county [Gov. Code § 53080.5(b)].

Required fees often include the following:

- Filing fees;

- Plan checking fees;
- Site inspection fees;
- Permit issuance fees;
- Development or aesthetic control fees [Health & Safety Code §§ 17951, 18502, 19132.3];
- Plan maintenance fees [Health & Safety Code § 19852];
- Strong motion instrumentation fees [Pub. Res. Code § 2705];
- Hazard zone administration fees [Pub. Res. Code § 2625]; and Various kinds of development impact mitigation fees or dedications may also be imposed by local ordinance at the building permit stage. These might include, for example, a public facilities fee, transit development fee, or an open space dedication requirement [see Gov. Code § 65567 (building permit must be consistent with open space element of general plan)].

CHAPTER 30C AGREEMENTS WITH ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, AND OTHER DESIGN PROFESSIONALS

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter discusses agreements for the performance of professional design services in connection with a construction project. The design professionals that commonly participate in construction projects include architects, engineers, surveyors, landscape architects, building designers, and interior designers. These professionals may serve in either of the following capacities on a construction project: as the prime design professional, who is solely responsible (pursuant to a contractual agreement with the owner) for the successful completion of the design work; or as a consultant who is retained by the prime design professional, the owner, or the prime contractor to provide a specialized service. This chapter considers several types of design professionals, but focuses on architects because they are usually the prime design professionals for construction projects. Engineers also receive relatively extensive coverage in this chapter because they frequently serve as construction consultants, and are sometimes retained as prime design professionals.

The Legal Background describes the construction services performed by a variety of design professionals. The Transaction Guide contains a guide to the creation of the owner-design professional and design professional-consultant relationships. The Forms section and the appendices reproduce standardized owner-architect and owner-engineer agreements as well as interprofessional agreements (such as an architect-consultant agreement).

One of the first steps that an owner should take after deciding to commence a construction project is to retain a design professional whose services will be required early in the planning and design of the proposed project. Once the design has been completed, the owner will hire a contractor to execute the drawings or plans. Thus, in using this chapter, the practitioner should also consult Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts, which examines the owner-contractor relationship and contract. There is some overlap in the coverage of these two chapters because they both consider the secondary services performed by design professionals after the completion of the planning and design work. These post-design duties include assisting the owner in retaining a contractor and in supervising, observing, and/or administering the construction work. In most cases, the discussions of post-design work in this chapter will be relatively general and will contain cross-references to the more detailed discussions in Ch. 30D.

In addition to Ch. 30D, the practitioner should consult the following for coverage of construction-related topics: Ch. 30A, Construction Financing ; Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits ; Ch. 30E, Joint (Builders') Control Agreements ; Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens ; Ch. 88, Licensing of Contractors ; Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts ; Ch. 90A, State Government Contracts ; Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts .

This chapter does not consider construction litigation in detail because that topic is beyond the scope of this publication. However, this chapter does suggest precautionary steps that may improve the position of the design professional in any litigation that may arise. For a comprehensive discussion of actions by and against architects, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 56, Architects (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.10

§ 30C.10 Overview of Professional Areas of Competence

[1] Architecture

The practice of architecture consists of offering or performing, or being in responsible control of, professional services that require the skills of an architect in the planning of sites and the designing (in whole or in part) of buildings or groups of buildings and structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.1 ("responsible control" defined)]. An architect's professional services may include any of the following: (1) investigation, evaluation, consultation, and advice; (2) planning, schematic and preliminary studies, designs, working drawings, and specifications; (3) coordination of the work of technical and special consultants; (4) compliance with generally applicable codes and regulations; (5) assistance in the governmental review process; (6) technical assistance in the preparation of bid documents and agreements between clients and contractors; (7) contract administration; and (8) construction observation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(b)]. For further discussion of an architect's role in the construction process, see § 30C.12.

[2] Engineering and Civil Engineering

A "professional engineer" is a person who renders services or creative work requiring education, training, and experience in engineering sciences and the application of special knowledge of the mathematical, physical, and engineering sciences in certain professional or creative work. This work includes (1) consultation, investigation, evaluation, planning, or design of public or private utilities, structures, machines, processes, circuits, buildings, equipment, or projects, and (2) supervision of construction for the purpose of securing compliance with applicable specifications and design [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6701; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6700 et seq.].

Civil engineering has a greater impact on small construction projects than any other branch of engineering. The practice of civil engineering involves the following activities, which are performed in connection with certain fixed works (discussed below): the determination of the physical qualities, economics, use, and design of construction materials; the supervision of engineering construction; the investigation of natural forces; the performance of appraisals or valuations; the preparation or submission of designs, plans, specifications, and engineering reports; the coordination of the work of professional, technical, or special consultants; and the creation, preparation, or modification of electronic or computerized data in the performance of the aboveactivities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731]. The practice of civil engineering also includes city and regional planning (insofar as the above activities are involved) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731], work involving the alignment or elevation of fixed works [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731.1(a), (c)], and incidental land surveying work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731.2; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731]. Civil engineers perform these services in connection with fixed works for, among other things, irrigation, flood control, drainage, water power, water supply, sewerage, refuse disposal, foundations, framed and homogeneous structures, and buildings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731].

In addition to the above activities, a registered civil engineer may practice or offer to practice, either in a public or private capacity, construction project management services. These services include construction project design review and evaluation, construction mobilization and supervision, bid evaluation, project scheduling, cost-benefit analysis, claims review and negotiation, and general management and administration of a construction project [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731.3; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6731.4].

For discussion of an engineer's responsibilities with respect to the preparation of engineering documents [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6735-6735.6], see § 30C.16[2].

[3] Landscape Architecture

The practice of landscape architecture consists of offering or performing professional land planning and design services for the purposes of landscape preservation, development, and enhancement. These services include consultation, investigation, research, planning, design, responsible construction observation, and the preparation of drawings, specifications, and construction documents [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5615].

The practice of a landscape architect may include the following: investigation, selection, and allocation of land and water resources for appropriate uses; feasibility studies; formulation of graphic and written criteria to govern the planning and design of land construction programs; preparation review and analysis of master plans for land use and development; production of overall site plans, landscape grading and landscape drainage plans, irrigation plans, planting plans, and construction details; specifications; cost estimates and reports for land development; collaboration in the design of roads, bridges, and structures with respect to the functional and aesthetic requirements of the areas on which they are to be placed; negotiation and arrangement for execution of land area projects; and field observation and inspection of land area construction, restoration, and maintenance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5615].

It is a misdemeanor to engage in the practice of landscape architecture or to use the title or term "landscape architect," "landscape architecture," "landscape architectural," or any other titles, words, or abbreviations that would imply or indicate that the person is a landscape architect without possessing a valid, unrevoked license to practice landscape architecture in California. It is also a misdemeanor for a person without a valid, unrevoked license to use the stamp of a licensed landscape architect, or to advertise or put out a sign, card, or other device that might indicate to the public that he or she is a licensed landscape architect or qualified to engage in the practice of landscape architecture [Bus. & Prof.Code § 5640; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5615 ("landscape architect" defined), 5650-5659 (licenses)]. Any landscape architect who agrees to provide professional services must provide every client with a detailed written contract. The contract must include, but is not limited to, all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5616(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5616(d) ("written contract" includes contract in electronic form)].

- A description of the services to be provided by the landscape architect to the client.

- A description of any basis of compensation applicable to the contract, including the total price that is required to complete the contract, and the method of payment agreed on.

- A notice that reads: "Landscape architects are licensed by the State of California."

- The landscape architect's name, address, and license number.
- The client's name and address.
- A description of the procedure the parties will use to accommodate additional services.
- A description of the procedure to be used by either party to terminate the contract.

These contract requirements may be waived if the client, after full disclosure, knowingly and in writing states that a contract that complies with the requirements is not necessary [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5616(b)].

The contract requirements also do not apply when [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5616(c)]:

- The professional services to be rendered by a landscape architect will not require compensation by the client.
- An arrangement as to the basis for compensation and manner of providing professional services may be implied from the fact that the landscape architect's services are of the same general kind that the architect has previously rendered to and received payment from the same client.
- The professional services to be rendered by a landscape architect are (1) to another landscape architect, a licensed architect, a licensed professional engineer, a licensed professional land surveyor, a licensed contractor, a licensed geologist or geophysicist, or (2) to an industrial corporation, if the services are provided in connection with, or incidental to, the products, systems, or services of that corporation or its affiliates.
- The professional services are to be rendered to a public agency.

The laws governing landscape architects in California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5615 et seq.] do not apply to any person who wishes to make plans, drawings, or specifications for any property that he or she owns, or who wishes to make plans or drawings for the selection, placement, or use of plants when the execution of the plans or drawings does not affect the public health, safety, and welfare [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5641]. The landscape architect laws also do not apply to golf course architects [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5641.5], irrigation consultants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5645], and other licensed professionals acting within the scope of their professions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5644].

[4] Land Surveying

The practice of land surveying [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8700 et seq.] includes the following activities: locating, relocating, establishing, reestablishing, or retracing any property line or boundary of any parcel of land, right-of-way, easement, or alignment of those lines or boundaries [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8726(c)]; and making any survey for a subdivision [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8726(d)]. This practice does not include making surveys for geological and landscaping purposes, provided they do not determine any property lines [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8727].

Any person practicing or offering to practice land surveying in California must be licensed as a land surveyor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 8725; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8701 ("land surveyor"); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 8740-8752 (licensing procedures and requirements), 8730, 8731 (limited exemptions from licensing requirements)].

A certified interior designer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5800(a) (definition); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5800-5805]

may obtain a stamp from an interior design organization [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5800(b) (definition)] that certifies that the interior designer has provided the organization with evidence of passage of an interior design examination approved by that organization and certain evidence regarding the education, training, and/or experience that he or she has received in the field of interior design [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5801]. A certified interior designer is exempt from the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.; see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts] to the extent that he or she designs systems for work to be performed by a licensed contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5803]. The statutes regulating interior design professionals are scheduled for repeal on January 1, 2013, unless a later-enacted statute, which is enacted before that date, deletes or extends the automatic repeal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5810(b)].

Architects, engineers, and other design professionals commonly belong to professional, trade, or comparable organizations that represent the interests of their members at the national, state, and local levels. Examples of these organizations include the American Institute of Architects (AIA) and the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC). These organizations promulgate ethical standards and educate and assist their members in the performance of construction-related functions. Perhaps their most important function, from the attorney's perspective, is the publication of standard forms of construction contracts and related documents. These forms are widely used and are considered by many commentators and construction participants to be complete and fair [see, e.g., Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21 Prac. Law. 28 (Mar. 1975)].

The forms part of this chapter reproduces numerous agreements prepared by professional associations of engineers. AIA forms have been set forth in separate appendices at the end of this chapter pursuant to the terms of the license governing the reproduction of those forms in this publication. The standardized agreements have been reproduced solely for illustrative purposes, and should not be used by counsel in lieu of blank versions obtained from the preparer organizations. Instead, counsel should use the reproduced forms to determine which agreements should be ordered and to commence work on the transaction before receiving the blank originals.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.12

§ 30C.12 Regulation and Role of Architects

[1] Licensing

[a] In General

Unless a person is licensed to practice architecture under the Architects Practice Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. (Act); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535 ("person" defined)], it is a misdemeanor for the person to affix a stamp or seal, which represents that the person is licensed in California, to plans, specifications, or instruments of service [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a)].

A licensed architect may form a business entity or collaboration with unlicensed persons but the architect's name must appear as the architect on all instruments of service and in no case may the other partners be designated as architects [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.2; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.25 ("business entity" and "collaboration" defined)]. However, such a partnership may not recover compensation for any partnership architectural work done by an unlicensed person unless it is done under the licensed architect's responsible direction and control [Palmer v. Brown (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 54-57, 273 P.2d 306] .

The Act allows a corporation to furnish or supply architectural services by contract, as long as any architects' professional services are offered and provided under the responsible control of a licensed architect or architects [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.3]. The corporation and its shareholders, officers, directors, and employees rendering professional services who are licensed architects must comply at all times with the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [Corp. Code § 13400 et seq.], the laws regulating professional architectural corporations [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5610-5610.7], and all other applicable statutes and regulations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5610; see W.M. Ballard Corp. v. Dougherty (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 35, 39-41, 234 P.2d 745 ; see also Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

Effective January 1, 1986, the design professional classification of "building designer" was abolished in California [see former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5500.2, 5500.3, 5552.1]. It is a misdemeanor for any person to advertise or represent that he or she is a "registered building designer" or is registered or otherwise licensed by California as a building designer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(c)].

The Architects Practice Act does not apply to structural, professional, and civil engineers, contractors, landscape architects, and land surveyors when they are working within their own fields of expertise [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5537.1-5537.7]. Further, the Act does not prohibit unlicensed persons from preparing plans, drawings, or specifications for certain specified structures [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537; see also § 30C.16[1][b]].

For further discussion of the relevant licensing requirements, see California Real Estate Law Practice, Ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender).

[2] Overview of Services

The owner usually retains an architect after obtaining the property and making preliminary planning decisions concerning the use of the land [see § 30C.120]. Most owner-architect contracts require the architect to perform basic architectural services in the following areas: schematic design, design development, construction documents, bidding and negotiation, and contract administration [see app. A (AIA Doc. B141); § 30C.101, P 2 (examples of these basic services); see also Architect's Handbook of Profess ional Practice, Ch. 2.2, Contractual Issues (AIA 1987)].

For coverage of some of the most important services typically performed by a project architect, see [3]-[5], below. For a discussion of an architect's responsibilities with respect to work performed pursuant to plans, specifications, reports, or other documents signed by the architect [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25], see Section 30C.16[1][c], below.

[3] Services Rendered Prior to Commencement of Construction

Initially, the architect investigates all aspects of the proposed project and explores alternative approaches to it, arriving at a conclusion concerning the best approach and recommending that approach to the owner. After obtaining the owner's approval of a particular approach, the architect designs the project and translates that design into working documents, project drawings, technical specifications, and contractual and bidding information [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts]. While studying and designing the proposed project, the architect serves as an independent contractor for the owner [Trane Co. v. Gilbert (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 720, 726, 73 Cal. Rptr. 279] .

During this planning and design phase, the architect will prepare a statement of probable construction cost, which the owner will use to assess the economic feasibility of the project [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. A decision by the owner that the project is not feasible would conclude the owner-architect relationship.

After performing the basic planning and design work, the architect will usually assist the owner in selecting a contractor [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts]. If the owner uses competitive bidding to select the contractor [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts] and receives bids that are too high, he or she may have the architect modify the drawings and specifications to reduce the cost of construction.

During the course of construction, the architect will typically serve as the owner's agent or representative [see Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 575, 126 P. 351 ; Trane Co. v. Gilbert (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 720, 726 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; see also [5], below]. The architect's specific duties, as described in the owner-architect agreement, will be based on the allocation of responsibilities contained in the owner-contractor agreement [see Sweet, Owner-Architect-Contractor: Another Eternal Triangle, 47 Cal. L. Rev. 645, 646 (1959)].

During this stage, the architect is essentially responsible for administering the owner-contractor agreement. Among other things, this involves interpreting the contract documents and any changes to them, establishing standards of acceptability, and judging the contractor's performance [see [5], below]. The architect is normally expected to be impartial while interpreting the contract documents and judging the performance of the participants [Walker & Rohdenburg, Legal Pitfalls in Architecture, Engineering, and Building Construction, ch. 2, Legal Pitfalls in the Owner-Architect (Engineer) Relationship: Professional Services, p. 53 (McGraw-Hill 1968)]. Other construction-related duties of the architect include supervising or observing the work [see [5], below], issuing certificates authorizing payments to the contractor, determining when the work is substantially complete, and deciding when to authorize final payment [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts ; see also Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.92 (AIA 1994)].

The owner-architect contract documents normally give the architect limited authority to order extra work, to authorize changes in the work, and/or to determine whether or not compensation is due for work claimed by the contractor to be "extra." Usually any such action requires the owner's approval [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts ; see also app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997), P 2.6.13]; however, the parties may agree that the architect's action or decision is binding on the contractor and the owner. For further discussion, see the Legal Background to Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts.

The supervision of construction work does not require a contractor's license [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051] or an architect's license [see McDowell v. Long Beach (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 634, 637-638, 55 P.2d 934] . However, licensed architects are qualified to supervise or observe construction [see Peak v. Richmond Elementary School Dist. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 366, 368, 326 P.2d 860] , and to act as the owner's agent or representative when supervising construction work [see Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 278, 299, 136 Cal. Rptr. 603] .

The extent of the architect's role as project supervisor will usually depend on the make-up of the project team. For relatively large projects, the owner may hire a project representative or construction manager (generally selected by the architect) to provide continuous on-site supervision and to report to the architect [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, Prac. Law., p. 29 (March 1975); see also §§ 30C.200[1][d][i] (project representative), 30C.220 [1] (construction manager)]. On smaller projects, the architect, contractor, or owner may have the primary responsibility for supervising the construction work [see Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, Ch. 7, Architects and Engineers (Cal. C.E.B. 2d ed. 1990)].

Regardless of the size of the project, when a prime contractor is involved, the architect's responsibility for the construction work is typically limited to observing and administering the work [see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, ch. 24, Construction Contracts (Bancroft-Whitney 2d ed. 1990)]. Under the Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Architect: Design and Construction Administration prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997), arts. 2.1-2.9)], however, the parties can choose to allocate to the architect a wide range of responsibilities. These include the traditional responsibility of the overall management and administration of the project, which includes consulting with the owner, researching design criteria, attending meetings, maintaining communications, issuing progress reports, and coordinating the work of the architect's consultants with work performed by the owner's consultants. Other responsibilities that may be specifically allocated to the architect include providing (1) project administration services, such as evaluating the owner's proposed budget, schedule and project site; (2) planning and evaluation services, such as space schematics and flow diagrams, on-site and off-site utility services, energy studies, and site survey; (3) design services, including materials research and specifications; (4) construction and procurement services, which may generally include either bidding or negotiation services; (5) contract administration services, such as site visitation, administration of changes in the work, and construction management; and (6) facility operations services, such as maintenance and operational programming, warranty review, and post-contract evaluation.

An architect must exercise due care in conducting any supervisory responsibilities required by the owner-architect contract. This means properly inspecting and testing the work and carefully certifying that the work is done properly [Hart v. Buckley (1912) 164 Cal. 160, 163-164, 128 P. 29 ; see Pancoast v. Russell (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 909, 913-914, 307 P.2d 719 ; see also § 30C.19[1]].

The owner-architect agreement may also require the architect to serve as an arbiter, resolving disputes between the owner and the prime contractor. When performing this duty, the architect is serving as a quasi-judicial officer with limited immunity from suit, provided that his or her decisions as arbiter do not involve wilful misconduct or malice [see Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 278, 300, 306, 136 Cal. Rptr. 603] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.13

§ 30C.13 Owner-Architect Agreement

[1] Contents Generally

While there are obvious practical reasons to justify a formal, written agreement between architect and owner, with the exceptions noted below, such an agreement is also required by statute. The contract must be executed by the architect and the client, or the client's representative, before the architect begins work unless the client knowingly states in writing that work may begin before the contract is executed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(a)]. At a minimum, the contract must include the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(a)]:

(1) A description of the services the architect will provide.

(2) A description of any basis for compensation under the contract and the payment method to which the parties agree.

(3) The names and addresses of both the architect and the client.

(4) A description of the procedure to be used to accommodate additional services under the contract.

(5) A description of the procedure to be used by either party to terminate the contract.

The forms in this chapter meet these requirements.

A written contract is not required by statute under the following circumstances [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(b)]:

(1) When the architect will not be compensated for providing the client with professional services.

(2) When the architect and the client have an arrangement as to the basis for compensation and manner of providing professional services, which is implied by the fact that the services are of the same general kind that the architect has previously rendered to and received payment from the same client.

(3) When the client knowingly states in writing, after full disclosure of the right to use a written contract, that a written contract is not required.

(4) When the architect is rendering services to a registered professional engineer or a licensed land surveyor.

These circumstances notwithstanding, it is good practice to reduce this type of agreement to writing.

A licensed architect who enters into a contract for the performance of architectural services must sign, and affix a stamp to, the contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a); see § 30C.16[1]].

The owner-architect agreement should provide for the architect's compensation [see § 30C.12 [1] regarding the requirement that an architect possess a license before receiving compensation for architectural services]. Most agreements provide for one of the following methods of compensation: lump sum plus reimbursable expenses; percentage of construction cost; direct labor cost times a factor; direct labor cost times a factor plus a fixed fee; or salary costs times a factor.

The agreement may establish one or more conditions precedent to the owner's obligation to pay the architect. For example, the parties may condition payment on the owner's ability to obtain financing for the project based in part on initial drawings prepared by the architect [see Rosenheim v. Howze (1918) 179 Cal. 309, 311-312, 176 P. 456 (requiring good faith effort on part of owner to obtain financing)]. If the owner cannot obtain financing, the owner-architect relationship will terminate, and the terms of the agreement will determine whether or not the architect will be compensated for the preparation of the initial drawings or for other services rendered [see, e.g., Parsons v. Bristol Development Co. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 861, 868, 44 Cal. Rptr. 767] .

Under some agreements, separate fees apply to specified stages of the work, and the owner has the right to terminate the agreement at any time. If the owner exercises the right to terminate, then the architect is compensated according to the schedule of payments for the work performed, and the owner is not liable for any further compensation [see Kingsbury v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 33, 39, 271 P.2d 40] .

If the agreement does not provide for the architect's compensation, then California law implies an agreement to pay the reasonable value of services rendered, based on the customary charges for architects for similar services [Laver v. Hotaling (1897) 115 Cal. 613, 616, 47 P. 593 ; Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824] .

An owner will retain an engineer as the prime design professional when the major design work involves the practice of engineering [see § 30C.10[2]]. Subdividers in particular are likely to hire a registered civil engineer to plan the subdivision and to prepare the necessary improvement plans, subdivision maps [see Gov. Code § 66434 (final map must be prepared by or under direction of registered civil engineer or licensed surveyor)], and studies and analyses of soil and site conditions [see § 30C.202[2] (subdivision development agreement between owner and civil engineer)].

Engineers frequently serve as consultants on construction projects when the prime design professional is an architect. Typically, the engineer/consultant is retained by, and serves as an independent advisor to, the architect [see § 30C.15].

An engineer has a duty to exercise the same care, skill, and diligence ordinarily exercised by professional engineers under similar circumstances. The engineer can not insure that the contractor will perform properly in every respect [see Wynner v. Buxton (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176, 158 Cal. Rptr. 587] . Instead, the engineer has a duty to exercise reasonable care to see that the contractor complies with the contract documents [see Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 249, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127 (holding engineering firm liable for damages proximately caused by its failure to conform to prevailing good soils engineering practices in supervising and inspecting a contractor's grading work); see also Acret, Architects and Engineers, Ch. 1, Liability for Negligence (Shepard's/McGraw-Hill 2d ed. 1977)].

For coverage of the responsibilities of a registered civil engineer for plans, specifications, or other documents prepared and signed by the engineer [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6735, 6735.1], see § 30C.16[2].

CHAPTER 30C AGREEMENTS WITH ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, AND OTHER DESIGN PROFESSIONALS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.15

§ 30C.15 Professional Consultants

Professional consultants are often employed to supplement the knowledge and experience of the prime design professional. These consultants offer services in highly specialized areas, such as engineering, site planning, landscaping, interior design, elevators, lighting, traffic, parking, and the construction of special building types such as airports, hospitals, laboratories, and schools [see § 30C.102[1], P 1]. Professional engineers provide the majority of consulting services [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.43 (AIA 1994); see also § 30C.14].

A consultant may be retained by the prime design professional or by the owner. When the design professional is an architect, he or she typically retains any structural, mechanical, or electrical engineers, while the owner normally retains the other consultants [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

When the prime design professional retains a consultant, the consultant serves as an independent advisor to the design professional and has no contractual relationship with the owner. The consultant assists the design professional in fulfilling the latter's responsibilities under the owner-design professional contract. The consultant accomplishes this by becoming familiar with the foregoing responsibilities; recommending avenues for their proper execution; and assisting the design professional in planning the project, executing the contract documents, and administering the owner-prime contractor contract. During their association, the design professional coordinates the consultant's activities and provides the consultant with all pertinent information concerning the work.

If the owner contracts directly with a consultant, the latter serves as an advisor to the owner or a project coordinator, and does not have a contractual relationship with the prime design professional. The owner may wish to enter into such a contract when, for example, (1) the owner has worked with the consultant in the past, (2) the owner seeks independent advice, or (3) the services to be performed by the consultant are significantly different from the design professional's contractual obligations [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.43 (AIA 1994)]. Under this arrangement, the consultant and the design professional cooperate and coordinate their activities so that each may fulfill his or her obligations to the owner [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

The project documentation must recognize and formalize the mutual interdependence between the prime design professional and the consultant. Consequently, the parties must coordinate the design professional's responsibilities under the owner-design professional agreement with the nature, timing, and sequence of the consultant's performance and compensation as described in the consultant's agreement with the design professional or owner [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.43 (AIA 1994)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.16

§ 30C.16 Design Documents

[1] Requirements of Architects Practice Act

[a] Preparer's Signature and Stamp

Under the Architects Practice Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.; see also § 30C.12[1]], all persons who prepare or are in responsible control of plans, specifications, and instruments of service for others must sign those documents and all related contracts. If that person is a licensed architect, he or she must affix a stamp to the documents and contracts as evidence of his or her responsibility for them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b) (requirements for stamp or seal)].

[b] Preparation by Unlicensed Persons

Although it is a misdemeanor for a person who is not licensed under the Architects Practice Act to practice architecture in California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a); § 30C.12[1]], the Act does not prohibit unlicensed persons from preparing plans, drawings, or specifications for any of the following structures: (1) single-family dwellings of woodframe construction not more than two stories high (excluding any basement); (2) garages or other structures appurtenant to any of the buildings falling within this exemption, provided they are of woodframe construction and are not more than two stories high (excluding basement); (3) agricultural and ranch buildings of woodframe construction, unless the building official having jurisdiction deems that an undue risk to the public health, safety, or welfare is involved; or (4) multiple dwellings of woodframe construction not more than two stories high (excluding basement) and containing no more than four dwelling units [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537(a)]. The above exemption for multiple dwellings must not be construed as allowing an unlicensed person to design multiple clusters of up to four dwelling units each to form apartment or condominium complexes when the total exceeds four units on any lawfully divided lot [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537(a)(2)].

If any portion of any of the structures described above deviates from substantial compliance with conventional framing requirements for woodframe construction in the most recent edition of Title 24 of the California Code of Regulations or tables of limitation for woodframe construction, as defined by the applicable state or local building code, the appropriate building official must require the preparation of plans, drawings, specifications, or calculations for that portion by, or under the responsible control of, a licensed architect or registered engineer. The documents for that portion must bear the stamp and signature of the licensee/preparer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537(b)].

It is a misdemeanor for any person who is not licensed to practice architecture in California to affix a stamp or seal to plans, specifications, or instruments of service, if the stamp or seal bears the legend "State of California" or words or symbols that represent or imply that the person is licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(b)].

[c] Liability and Responsibility of Person Signing Documents

A licensed architect who signs and stamps plans, specifications, reports, or other documents will not be responsible for damages caused by subsequent changes to or uses of those plans or other documents if the following apply: (1) the architect/signer did not authorize or approve those changes or uses in writing; (2) the architect/signer did not unreasonably withhold written authorization or approval; and (3) the architectural service rendered by the architect was not a proximate cause of the damage [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(a)].

The signing and stamping of plans, specifications, reports, or other documents that relate to the design of fixed works will not impose a legal duty or responsiblity on the signer to observe the construction of the fixed works that are the subject of the plans or other documents. However, this does not preclude an architect from entering into a contract to provide construction observation services [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(c) (definition)] for a client, or modify the liability of an architect for rendering these services, whether pursuant to a contract or otherwise [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(b); see § 30C.12[5]].

[2] Civil Engineering Documents

[a] Preparation

All civil (including structural and geotechnical) engineering plans, calculations, specifications, and reports (also referred to as "documents") must be prepared by, or under the responsible charge of, a licensed civil engineer and must include the engineer's name and license number. Interim documents must include a notation as to the intended purpose of the document, such as "preliminary," "not for construction," "for plan check only," or "for review only" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735(a)]. All plans and specifications that are permitted or to be released for construction, and all final calculations and reports, must include [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735(a)]:

- The licensee's signature and seal or stamp; and
- The date they were signed and sealed or stamped.

If the plans that are permitted or to be released for construction have multiple sheets, the information listed above must appear on each sheet. If the specifications, final calculations, and reports have multiple pages, the listed information must appear at a minimum on the title sheet, cover sheet, or signature sheet [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735(a)].

Similar requirements apply to electrical and mechanical engineers [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6735.3(a), 6735.4(a) (electrical and mechanical engineers, respectively)].

[b] Liability and Responsibility of Person Signing Plans

Notwithstanding Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735(a) [see [a], above], a licensed civil engineer who signs civil engineering documents is not responsible for damage caused by subsequent changes to or uses of those documents, if subsequent changes or uses, including changes or uses made by state or local government agencies, are not authorized or approved by the engineer who originally signed the documents, provided the engineering service rendered by that engineer was not also a proximate cause of the damage [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735(b)]. Similar protection is afforded to licensed civil engineers and licensed land surveyors who prepare land surveying documents [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8761.2] as well as to electrical and mechanical engineers [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6735.3(b), 6735.4(b) (electrical and mechanical engineers, respectively)].

The signing of civil engineering plans, specifications, reports, or other documents that relate to the design of fixed works will not impose a legal duty or responsibility on the signer to supervise the construction of engineering structures or the construction of the fixed works that are the subject of the plans or other documents. However, this does not preclude a civil engineer from entering into a contract to provide construction supervision services for a client, or modify the liability of a civil engineer for rendering these services, whether pursuant to a contract or otherwise [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6735.1].

[3] Ownership

Standardized forms usually provide that the design professional owns the project drawings and specifications, whether or not the project is executed [see, e.g., app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997), P 1.3.2.1; see also Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts]. In the absence of such an agreement, it appears that the plans and specifications belong to the owner by virtue of the fact that he or she employed and paid the design professional to prepare these documents [see May v. Morganelli-Heumann & Assoc. (9th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 1363, 1368-1369 ; see also Nimmer On Copyright, Ch. 2, The Subject Matter of Copyright (Matthew Bender); Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, Ch. 24, Construction Contracts (Bancroft-Whitney 2d ed. 1990)].

§ 30C.17 Insurance

Most design professionals maintain professional liability (errors and omissions) insurance, public liability insurance, property damage insurance, workers' compensation insurance, and comprehensive liability insurance [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. Some design professionals choose not to carry professional liability policies because they consider it inordinately expensive [see Acret, Architects and Engineers, ch. 13, Insurance (Shepard's/McGraw-Hill 2d ed. 1977)]. Counsel should carefully review any professional liability insurance carried by his or her client because there is little uniformity in the available coverage [Walker & Rohdenburg, Legal Pitfalls in Architecture, Engineering, and Building Construction, ch. 21, Legal Pitfalls in the Owner-Architect (Engineer) Relationship: Professional Services (McGraw-Hill 1968)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 30C.18 Design Professionals' Liens

A licensed architect, registered professional engineer, or licensed land surveyor is entitled to a design professionals' lien if he or she enters into a contract with a landowner for the design, engineering, or planning of a work of improvement, and the landowner defaults in or refuses to make any payment required by the contract [see Civ. Code §§ 3081.1-3081.3]. To create the lien, the design professional must make a written demand for payment [Civ. Code § 3081.3(b)], and then record a notice of lien within the time specified by statute [Civ. Code § 3081.3(c); for a payment demand and notice of lien, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens]. The lien will be for the lesser of the following: the amount of the design professional's fee for any services rendered prior to commencement of the work of improvement, or the reasonable value of those services. This amount must be reduced, however, by the amount of any deposit or prior payments [Civ. Code § 3081.2].

A number of conditions and restrictions apply to design professionals' liens. For example, the lien does not apply to a work of improvement relating to a single-family, owner-occupied residence when the construction costs are less than $100,000 [Civ. Code § 3081.10]. Further, the lien will not arise unless a building permit or other governmental approval has been obtained for the work [Civ. Code § 3081.2].

For additional discussion, including coverage of the enforcement and expiration of these liens, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.19

§ 30C.19 Actions Against Architects

An architect's liability for negligence extends not only to the owner but also to persons other than those in privity of contract with the architect if they foreseeably and with reasonable certainty might be injured by the architect's actions, whether during the course of construction [see Mallow v. Tucker, Sadler & Bennett, Architects etc., Inc. (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 700, 703, 54 Cal. Rptr. 174] or after the owner has accepted the completed structure(s) [see Montijo v. Swift (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 352, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133] . The duty even extends to the contractor because the architect, as the judge of performance under the construction contract and the official interpreter of its conditions, must exercise impartial judgment [Macomber v. State of California (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 391, 398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 393] .

Because persons who sell their services for the guidance of others in their economic, financial, and personal affairs are not liable in the absence of negligence or intentional misconduct [Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 487, 275 P.2d 15] , the services of a design professional are not subject to the doctrine of strict liability [see Swett v. Gribaldo, Jones & Associates (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 573, 575-576, 115 Cal. Rptr. 99] or the doctrine of implied warranty [see Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 855-857, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259] .

For further discussion of liability for the performance of architectural services, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 56, Architects , Pt. II (Matthew Bender).

[2] Cost Estimates

An architect's estimates concerning the cost of a construction project are often the subject of litigation because of the frequency of cost overruns. The architect's attorney can reduce the likelihood that the architect will be held liable for costs exceeding the estimate and the architect's commission by providing exculpatory language in the owner-architect contract [see Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, Ch. 7, Architects and Engineers (2nd ed., Cal. CEB 1990)]. For example, the contract may provide that the architect cannot and does not warrant or represent that bids or negotiated prices will be consistent with estimates prepared by the architect [see app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997), P 5.2.1].

A determination regarding an architect's liability for underestimates must be based on the facts of the particular case because there are no concrete judicial or statutory guidelines to apply. However, as a general rule, the architect will be held liable when he or she also serves as the contractor on the job and the underestimate is fraudulent [see Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 573-574, 126 P. 351 ; see also Goldberg v. Underhill (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702, 213 P.2d 516] , or when the underestimate violates an agreement to keep construction costs below a specified amount [see Spurgeon v. Buchter (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 198, 204-205, 13 Cal. Rptr. 354] . However, a finding of architect liability is less likely if the owner should have realized that the estimate was unrealistic and proceeded to enter into contracts that were likely to exceed the estimated amount [see Benenato v. McDougall (1913) 166 Cal. 405, 407-408, 137 P. 8] .

§ 30C.110 Budgetary Considerations

1. Is owner's budget realistic, i.e., does it include amounts for all potentially applicable expenses and charges?

NOTE:

The design professional and his or her attorney may wish to make a preliminary assessment of the economic feasibility of the proposed project before the design professional enters into a contract with the owner. Whether or not such a preliminary assessment is performed, a design professional who has entered into a contract with an owner should help the owner select the best approach to the project, and then prepare a statement of the probable cost for the project, which the owner and design professional may use to assess the economic feasibility of the project. This Section lists potential expenses that should be taken into account when making either of the foregoing assessments. The following list is based on a checklist set forth in AIA Document D200, Project Checklist (AIA 1995).

a. Land acquisition.

b. Survey and soils reports.

c. Site preparation.

d. Predesign and programming.

e. Architectural and engineering compensation.

f. Special consultants.

g. On-site and off-site improvements.

h. Testing and inspections.

i. Construction.

j. Tenant improvements.

k. Furniture.

l. Equipment.

m. Telecommunications systems.

n. Security.

o. Landscaping.

§ 30C.120 Selection of Prime Design Professional

NOTE:
The following procedures are not required by law and are offered here as a suggested approach to the retention of a prime design professional for a construction project. Although they are normally used to select an architect, they may be used when the prime design professional is an engineer.

1. If direct selection is desired, take following steps:

NOTE:
This method of selection is most commonly used when the owner has previously worked with a particular design professional and wishes to do so again [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.23 (AIA 1994)].

a. Choose one or more design professionals to contact.

NOTE:
This selection may be based on, among other things, the owner's past experiences with the selected design professional(s), recommendations, the reputation of the design professional(s), or factors peculiar to the project or the owner.

b. Advise owner to request following data from potential prime design professional(s), to extent owner has not already acquired this information:

(1) Legal status:
(a) Individual.

(b) Partnership.

(c) Corporation.

(d) Other.

(2) Names and professional histories of likely key participants in project.

(3) List of recent design projects.

(4) Business and project record-keeping procedures.

(5) Any other information that may be instrumental in determining thoroughness, financial responsibility, and adequacy of candidate's construction supervision functions.

c. Have owner personally interview candidate(s), preferably in offices of candidate(s).

d. Encourage owner to take following steps to investigate work of candidate(s):

(1) Visit prior projects.

(2) Interview owners and contractors of prior projects.

2. If comparative selection method is desired, take following steps:

NOTE:

This method is typically used by sophisticated owners for relatively large projects [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender); Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.23 (AIA 1994)]. As a practical matter, there is no method of "comparative selection." Instead, that term essentially refers to a relatively formal process of soliciting information from interested design professionals, comparing the candidates, and selecting one of them [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

a. Solicit submissions from interested and qualified design professionals.

NOTE:

In many cases, the owner will publish or otherwise circulate invitations to apply in the architectural or engineering community. Alternatively, the owner may target particular potential candidates, based on their experience or the recommendations of other owners [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.23 (AIA 1994)]. The invitations will provide a general description of the proposed project and the information to be submitted by interested candidates. This information should describe the design professional's experience (including prior projects) and capabilities in terms of staff and available time. The owner may also ask for specific proposals or ideas regarding the proposed project [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 431, The Owner-Architect Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

b. Assist owner in reviewing submissions and selecting most attractive candidates for interviews.

NOTE:

During the interviews, the candidates will make presentations or otherwise indicate how they would approach the project. The owner may wish to have a committee review the submissions, conduct the interviews, and make the final selection or a recommendation to the owner.

3. Once owner has made final selection, take following steps:

a. Negotiate design professional's compensation.

NOTE:

For coverage of common methods of compensating engineers, see § 30C.200[1][h]. In the case of architects, the AIA's Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Architect with Standard Form of Architect's Services [see app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997)] allows the parties to describe their own compensation arrangements, which may include stipulated sums, multiples, and percentages. If necessary, the compensation provision should identify project phases to which particular compensation methods apply. For additional coverage of the compensation of architects and engineers, see Construction Law, ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender).

b. Prepare or select contract and have owner and design professional execute it.

NOTE:

Under the Architects Practice Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.], all persons who prepare or are in responsible control of plans, specifications, and instruments of service for others must sign those documents and all related contracts. If that person is a licensed architect, he or she also must affix a stamp to the documents and contracts as evidence of his or her responsibility for them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b)(requirements for stamp or seal); see also § 30C.16[1]].

For an owner-engineer agreement prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee, see § 30C.200[2]. A custom-drafted subdivision development agreement between an owner and a civil engineer is set forth at § 30C.202[2]. Finally, for an owner-architect agreement prepared by the American Institute of Architects, see Appendix A.

§ 30C.121 Selection and Retention of Consultants

1. For each consultant needed for project [see § 30C.102], have owner or prime design professional:

a. Verify ability of consultant to comply with requirements of project.

b. Negotiate compensation that is consistent with provisions of one or more of the following documents, as appropriate:
(1) Agreement between engineer and architect [see § 30C.221[1][e]].

(2) Agreement between architect and consultant [see app. B (AIA Doc. C141-1997)].

2. If design professional is retaining consultant, have design professional disclose to consultant any terms and conditions of owner-design professional agreement from which consultant's duties are derived.

3. Obtain proof of consultant's professional liability insurance coverage, for example:

a. Cancelled check or receipt for premium payment.

b. Any documentation consultant has received from insurer, for example:

(1) Endorsement page(s).

(2) Declaration sheet(s).

4. If applicable, have owner approve design professional's proposed consultant in manner required in owner-design professional agreement, for example:

a. Orally.

b. By any form of writing.

NOTE:

The obligation of a prime design professional to arrange for the performance of services by a consultant is normally an "additional service"--it is not considered one of the basic or standard services provided by the design professional and therefore is not applicable unless specifically mentioned by the parties in the owner-design professional agreement. The agreement will usually require the owner to authorize, in advance and in writing, the performance of this and other additional services listed in the basic agreement [see, e.g., app. A (AIA Doc. B141-1997, P 2.8.3)]. It is highly unlikely that the provisions of any standardized agreement will impose a more specific requirement governing the authorization of any additional service.

5. Have owner or design professional and consultant enter into contract setting forth terms governing consultant's work on project [see § 30C.221 (engineer-architect agreement); app. B (AIA Doc. C141-1997, architect-consultant agreement)].

NOTE:

Under the Architects Practice Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.], all persons who prepare or are in responsible control of plans, specifications, and instruments of service for others must sign those documents and all related contracts. If that person is a licensed architect, he or she also must affix a stamp to the documents and contracts as evidence of his or her responsibility for them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b)(requirements for stamp or seal); see also § 30C.16[1]].

6. If consultant is retained by design professional, provide consultant with copy of owner-design professional agreement.

NOTE:

The American Institute of Architects (AIA) has prepared an excellent checklist of the procedures an architect should follow for the typical construction project [see AIA Doc. D200, Project Checklist (AIA 1995)]. It divides the architect's responsibilities into eight phases, lists the duties commonly required during each phase, and includes space following each item for notes. Counsel may wish to obtain this checklist from any office of the AIA so that he or she can intelligently discuss and monitor the progress of the project. Further, the attorney should advise the owner to maintain his or her own set of records, which need not be as detailed as the design professional's.

1. Advise owner and design professional to maintain detailed records of all construction activity.

2. Periodically, confirm that owner and design professional are maintaining adequate project documentation.

For smaller projects, the design professional will probably be responsible for this activity. Larger projects typically require the attorney to serve as a team leader simply because of the large number of participants in the construction project (for example, the owner, design professional, construction manager, consultants, contractor, and subcontractors).

2. Monitor actions of project participants as they:

a. Supervise or administer construction work [see § 30C.12[4], [5]; see also Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts].

b. Complete and manage completion of work [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts].

PART IV. FORMS
A. Owner-Engineer Agreements

§ 30C.200 Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Engineer for Professional Services [EJCDC Form 1910-1]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form consists of the Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Engineer for Professional Services prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC). Under the terms of this agreement, the engineer will serve as the prime design professional for a particular construction project. For forms that may be used when an architect rather than an engineer will be the prime design professional, see Appendices A (Agreements Between Owner and Architect) and B (Agreements Between Architect and Other Design Professionals) at the end of this chapter.

The EJCDC is a joint committee made up of members of the following national professional organizations of engineers: the National Society of Professional Engineers (NSPE); the American Consulting Engineers Council (ACEC); and the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE). The EJCDC offers a group of standardized documents intended to guide engineers in their contractual relationships with owners. The provisions of many of these standardized forms are discussed in the EJCDC User's Guide (EJCDC Doc. No. 1910-50). Counsel should consult that extremely helpful publication before using any of the EJCDC forms, including Form 1910-1 [see [2], below]. Further, because the EJCDC regularly revises its forms, the attorney must confirm that he or she has the most recent edition of the form and any related guides or commentaries.

This form is intended to be used in conjunction with the Standard General Conditions of the Construction Contract (EJCDC Document 1910-8), which is reproduced in Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts .

Standardized forms prepared by the EJCDC are designed to be used in conjunction with each other and offer the advantages of (1) uniformity from project to project, and (2) savings in time spent reviewing and understanding the documents. However, the attorney for any party to a construction contract should be aware that any standardized form will be somewhat slanted in favor of the members of the preparing organization, and therefore should not hesitate to suggest modifications to the forms that would benefit his or her client. Also, as noted in the forms themselves, a change in one form often necessitates changes in other related forms, and counsel should be diligent in ensuring that the terms of the forms are harmonized.

Modifications to EJCDC Form 1910-1 can be accomplished by completing its preprinted exhibits. Exhibit A ("Engineer's Services"), for example, sets out in detail the services the engineer will perform, supplementing the rather cursory provision contained in the main body of the form. Accordingly, counsel can merely amend the exhibit rather than altering the substance of the primary agreement. Similarly, Exhibits F ("Construction Cost Limit"), G ("Insurance"), H ("Dispute Resolution") and I ("Allocation of Risks") are designed to modify specified portions of the agreement. Finally, Exhibit J ("Special Provisions") may be used to modify any other provisions of the form.

Exhibit A, as incorporated by Article 1 of this form, describes the basic services to be performed by the engineer, dividing them into the following customary phases: study and report phase; preliminary design phase; final design phase; bidding or negotiating phase; construction phase [see [d], below]; and the post-construction phase. However, because each project will have unique characteristics and requirements, the form and Exhibit A should be modified to describe any services necessitated by those peculiarities and the timing of those services.

[d] Construction Phase Obligations Relating to Project Site

[i] Resident Project Representative

This form and Exhibit A generally presume that the engineer will provide a Resident Project Representative at the project site during the construction phase of the project [see [2], P 101(C) and Exhibit A, P A1.05(A)(2), below]. This duty is generally considered a "basic service" because many engineers are unwilling to assume responsibility for full construction phase services without providing regular resident services at the site. The scope of the resident's duties should be described in detail in Exhibit D ("Duties, Responsibilities, and Limitations of Authority of Resident Project Representative"). The preprinted provisions of that exhibit provide, among other things, that to protect the owner against defects and deficiencies in the contractor's work, the resident project representative will make extensive on-site observations of the construction work and field checks of the construction materials and assistants. However, the exhibit also provides that the engineer will not supervise, direct, or have control over the contractor's work [see [2], Exhibit D, below].

For a standardized owner-architect agreement that considers this type of project representation to be an additional service, see Appendix A, AIA Document B141-1997.

[ii] Engineer's Visits to Project Site

Exhibit A of this form provides generally that the engineer will make visits to the construction site at appropriate intervals in order to observe the progress and quality of the work. These visits are not intended to be exhaustive, or to extend to all aspects of the contractor's work. Exhibit A also provides that the engineer will not supervise or control the contractor's work, nor will the engineer have authority over the methods of completion. Finally, the exhibit states that the engineer does not guarantee the contractor's performance or assume responsibility for the contractor's failure to perform on its contractual obligations [see [2], Exhibit A, P A1.05(A)(6), below]. If, based on these visits, the engineer concludes that the project will not be completed in conformity with the integrity of the design concept, the engineer is to recommend to the owner that the contractor's work be disapproved and rejected while in progress [see [2], Exhibit A, P A1.05(A)(7), below].

[e] Additional Services

In addition to the foregoing services, Exhibit A of this form lists a number of additional services to be performed by the engineer when the owner authorizes them in writing [see [2], Exhibit A, P A*2.01, below*]. Examples of these additional services include the following:

- Preparation of various governmental documents, including loan or grant applications, or environmental impact statements.
- Providing renderings or models for the owner's use.
- Services resulting from changes in scope, extent, or character of the project.
- Preparing special investigations and studies, such as feasibility studies, cash flow and economic evaluations, and rate schedules and appraisals.

Because these services are considered to be additional, the engineer will be entitled to additional compensation for performing them, as provided in Article 4 and Exhibit C of the form.

Exhibit A also details some additional services the engineer must perform or furnish without requesting or receiving express advance authorization from the owner [see [2], Exhibit A, P A*2.02, below*]. Generally, these services are limited to those in which the consent of the owner can be inferred, or that arise from emergency situations requiring quick action.

[f] Project Data

Exhibit B ("Owner's Responsibilities") of this form requires the owner to furnish certain project information to the engineer, including all criteria and requirements as to the project, property descriptions, any land use restrictions, and environmental assessment and impact statements [see [2], Exhibit B, P B*2.01, below*]. In some cases, the owner may not have access to all portions of this project data, and the parties may contract to have the engineer procure the necessary information. Doing so would be an additional service by the engineer, entitling the engineer to additional compensation [see [e], above].

[g] Owner's Use of Consultants

Exhibit B ("Owner's Responsibilities") of this form states that if the owner hires a construction manager or other consultant to represent the owner at the site, the parties should prepare an attachment to the exhibit describing the consultant's functions and the extent to which they will affect the obligations of the engineer [see [2], Exhibit B, P B2.01(L), below]. Counsel should also consider whether the hiring of the consultant will necessitate changes in the portions of the agreement describing the engineer's obligations with respect to the construction [see [d], above], or in the standard general conditions that relate to the engineer's functions.

[h] Method of Payment of Engineer

Article 4 of this form provides that the owner will pay the engineer for basic and additional services and reimbursable expenses pursuant to the provisions of Exhibit C ("Payments to Engineer for Services and Reimbursable Expenses"). Exhibit C contains alternative compensation provisions, which permit the parties to chose from several possible methods of compensation. As to basic services with a determined scope, Exhibit C provides six options for payment: (1) lump sum; (2) hourly rates; (3) percentage of construction cost; (4) direct labor costs times a factor; (5) direct labor costs, plus overhead, plus a fee; and (6) salary costs times a factor [see [2], Exhibit C, alternative PP C*4.01, below*]. The parties should select one of these methods of compensation, complete the appropriate version of the Paragraph C4.01 of Exhibit C, and discard the remaining versions.

When the services or some portion thereof are of indeterminate scope, certain of these payment options are basically out of the question. In particular, neither side should agree to a lump sum when the scope of the project is uncertain. The remaining portions of Exhibit C recognize this reality, providing for only three payment options as to basic services of an indeterminate scope: (1) hourly rates; (2) direct labor costs times a factor; and (3) salary costs times a factor [see [2], Exhibit C, alternative PP C4.02, C*4.03, below*]. Again, the parties should agree on one of these methods of compensation and complete the appropriate versions of Paragraphs C4.02 and C4.03 of Exhibit C.

Reimbursable expenses are provided for in C4.04 and in Appendix 1 to Exhibit C.

[i] Agreements for Less Than Customary Full Engineering Services

Engineers sometimes agree to provide less than the full services customarily performed by members of their profession during a construction project. These agreements fall into three categories. Under the first type, the engineer agrees to perform only design services, that is, the services typically performed during the study and report, preliminary design, and final design phases [see [c], above]. The second type of agreement is also for design services only, but is used when the parties anticipate that, following the completion of the design services, the engineer will be retained to provide some construction services under a separate or supplemental agreement. If the parties wish this form to serve as the basis for either of those types of agreements, they should make the modifications described in the EJCDC User's Guide (EJCDC Doc. No. 1910-50).

The third type of limited service agreement calls on the engineer to perform construction services only, with no participation in the design phases. However, the EJCDC recommends that engineers refuse to perform contraction services when the related design phases were performed by another party.

[j] Mediation and Binding Arbitration

This form provides for the optional attachment of Exhibit H ("Dispute Resolution"), which requires the parties to submit any dispute to mediation or arbitration. Under that exhibit, the parties may designate a cap on the amount of the claims that are subject to mandatory arbitration, leaving any claims in excess of that cap for litigation.

§ 30C.202 Contract Between Owner and Civil Engineer to Plan, Map, and Supervise Development of Subdivision

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between an owner and a civil engineer under which the engineer agrees to perform a variety of services in connection with the development of a new subdivision. When an owner decides to create a subdivision on undeveloped land, he or she will probably retain a registered civil engineer to do the following: (1) make a survey and conduct soil tests of the property to determine whether or not it can be economically developed; (2) prepare and gain approval of the tentative and final subdivision maps required by the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.]; and (3) supervise the construction of the required off-site or public improvements [see Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, ch. 22, Development and Subdivision , pt. C (Matthew Bender)].

For a complete discussion of the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation . For a consideration of the financing of subdivision off-site improvements, see Ch. 30A, Construction Financing . Finally, for standardized owner-engineer agreements that may be used for any type of construction project, see § 30C.200.

Because this contract will be executed prior to the preparation of the subdivision maps and the determination of the construction costs, this form provides that the engineer will be paid a fixed professional fee plus an amount equal to a specified multiple of the engineer's direct personnel expenses (i.e., the wages paid to the engineer and the engineer's staff for the work). This form also provides that the direct personnel expenses and all allowable costs will be paid to the engineer monthly, but that the engineer's professional fee will be paid in progress payments following completion of specified portions of the contract.

[2] FORM

Contract Between Owner and Civil Engineer to Plan, Map, and Supervise Development of Subdivision

ENGINEERING CONTRACT

This Contract is made between _____[name] of _____ County, California ("Owner"), and _____[name] of _____ County, California ("Engineer").

Preamble

Owner wishes to develop a [residential subdivision or residential and commercial subdivision or planned community subdivision] on the real property ("the Property") [in the City of _____, or in an unincorporated area of] _____ County, California, described as follows: [legal description of property].

Owner and Engineer hereby agree as follows:

Engineer's Duties

1. Engineer will furnish and perform the following professional services:

(1) Prepare a complete boundary survey of the Property showing all rights-of-way, easements, and other physical burdens now encumbering the land, and stake out all property corners of the Property.

(2) Make necessary soil-bearing tests, investigations, and reports to determine the soil-bearing capacity of the Property, the types of soil contained in the Property, and the amount of filling and other remedial work that may be necessary to render the Property suitable for the purposes intended by Owner.

(3) Prepare a tentative subdivision map for the Property as required by Government Code Section 66426 and any applicable local ordinances.

(4) Do all things reasonably required to gain approval or conditional approval of the tentative subdivision map by the governmental agencies required by the California Subdivision Map Act or local ordinances to approve the tentative subdivision map.

(5) Prepare a survey and final subdivision map for the Property as required by the California Subdivision Map Act and any applicable local ordinances.

(6) Do all things reasonably required of a licensed civil engineer to gain approval of the final subdivision map by the appropriate governmental agencies; provided, however, that Engineer will not be required to post or become bound on or for any bond or other security required by any governmental agency as a condition to the approval of the map.

(7) Prepare detailed plans, specifications, and cost estimates for all streets, utilities, and other improvements ("the off-site improvements") required by law or otherwise to be installed on the Property by Owner.

(8) Prepare, subject to Owner's approval, the invitations for bids, instructions to bidders, and bid forms reasonably required to enable Owner to award a beneficial contract or contracts for construction and installation of the off-site improvements.

(9) Receive bids, and assist Owner in evaluating any bids received, for the construction and installation of the off-site improvements.

(10) Exercise general supervision over the work of any contractor or contractors employed by Owner to construct and install the off-site improvements; provided, however, that Engineer will not guarantee the performance of any contract or contracts for the construction and installation of the off-site improvements awarded by Owner to any contractor or contractors.

Amount of Compensation Payable to Engineer

2. Owner will pay to Engineer, as compensation for the services agreed to be furnished and performed by Engineer under this Contract, the following amounts:

(1) A professional fee of $_____.

(2) An amount equal to _____ times the direct personnel expenses incurred by Engineer in performing this Contract. The term "direct personnel expenses incurred by Engineer" means the cost to Engineer of time spent by Engineer or Engineer's employees, including engineers, designers, draftspersons, specification writers, surveying crews, typists, and project representatives, in performing services required by this Contract. In determining these costs, Engineer's own time must be valued at $_____ per hour, and the time of Engineer's employees must be calculated according to their regular rates of pay and the costs of vacation, sick leave, and other employee benefits furnished the employees pursuant to union contracts or Engineer's normal employment practices.

(3) Actual expenses incurred by Engineer under this Contract for the following: long distance telephone calls; telegrams; travel by Engineer or Engineer's employees to locations more than _____ miles from the Property (including transportation costs not exceeding _____ cents per mile and living expenses while on the trips of $_____ per day); and fees paid pursuant to statute or ordinance to governmental agencies or bodies required to approve the tentative or final subdivision maps for the Property.

Manner of Payment of Costs

3. On or before the _____ day of each calendar month, Engineer must prepare, certify as correct, and deliver to Owner an itemized statement of all expenses described in Paragraphs 2(2) and 2(3) of this Contract incurred by Engineer during the preceding calendar month. Within _____ days after delivery to Engineer of the itemized statement, Owner will pay to Engineer the full amount of all expenses shown on that statement. Engineer must keep records of the foregoing expenses in accordance with generally accepted accounting practices, and must make copies of those records available to Owner upon request.

Manner of Payment of Fee

4. Owner will pay to Engineer the professional fee specified in Paragraph 2(1) of this Contract in installments as follows:

(1) _____ percent on execution of this Contract, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged by Engineer.

(2) _____ percent on [specify, e.g., completion of the boundary survey, soil-bearing tests, investigations, and reports specified in Paragraphs 1(1) and 1(2) of this Contract].

(3) _____ percent on [specify, e.g., approval or conditional approval of the tentative subdivision map for the Property by all appropriate governmental agencies or bodies].

(4) _____ percent on [specify, e.g., approval of the final subdivision map by all appropriate governmental agencies and bodies].

(5) _____ percent on [specify, e.g., completion of construction and installation of all the off-site improvements].

Indemnity Agreement

5. Engineer will indemnify and hold Owner and the property of Owner free and harmless from any and all claims, losses, damages, injuries, and liabilities arising from the death or injury of any person or persons (including employees of Engineer), or from the damage or destruction of any property or properties, caused by or connected with the performance of this Contract by Engineer or Engineer's agents or employees.

Workers' Compensation Insurance

6. Engineer, at Engineer's own cost and expense, must procure and maintain during the continuance of this Contract a policy of workers' compensation or employer's liability insurance for the protection of Engineer's employees (including executive, managerial, and supervisorial employees) engaged in work required by this Contract. Further, Engineer must, on demand, deposit a certificate evidencing the policy with Owner.

Ownership of Plans, Maps, Drawings

7. All maps, plans, drawings, specifications, and other instruments prepared by Engineer pursuant to this Contract will remain the property of Engineer and may not be used by Owner for any project or purpose other than the construction and development of the subdivision described in this Contract.

Termination Without Fault

8. If the requirements imposed on Owner by any governmental agency or body required to approve the tentative or final subdivision map for the Property render the subdivision of the Property as contemplated by this Contract economically unfeasible, Owner may cancel this Contract by giving _____ days' written notice of the cancellation to Engineer. Upon cancellation of this Contract by Owner, Engineer will be paid (1) all expenses described in Paragraphs 2(2) and 2(3) of this Contract incurred by Engineer prior to expiration of the notice period, and (2) the percentage of _____[his or her] professional fee specified in Paragraph 4 of this Contract applicable to the services furnished or performed by Engineer under this Contact prior to the expiration of the notice period. The subdivision of the Property contemplated by this Contract will be economically unfeasible if, after the sale of all lots in the subdivision proposed or allowed for the Property at prices not exceeding $_____ per lot, the net profit to Owner would be less than _____ percent of the cost of acquiring the Property and creating the subdivision.

Termination With Fault

9. If either party to this Contract is declared a bankrupt, makes a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, or commits a substantial breach of this Contract, the other party to this Contract will be excused from rendering or accepting any further performance under this Contract.

Assignment

10. Neither this Contract nor any rights or duties under it may be assigned or delegated to any other person or entity by either party to this Agreement without the express written consent of the other party.

Arbitration

11. If any dispute arises between the parties to this Contract concerning this Contract or their rights and duties under it, the dispute must be settled by arbitration held in accordance with the Construction Industry Rules of the American Arbitration Association in effect at the time a demand for arbitration is filed with the Association. Either party may file, in the manner provided by the Construction Industry Rules of the Association, a demand for arbitration. The written decision of the arbitrator or arbitrators appointed by the Association will be final and conclusive as to the parties to this Contract.

Notices

12. Any and all notices or other matters required or permitted by this Contract or by law to be served on, given to, or delivered to either Owner or Engineer by the other party to this Contract must be in writing and will be deemed duly served, given, or delivered when (1) personally delivered to the party to whom it is addressed [or to a supervisorial employee of that party], or (2) deposited in the United States mail, first-class postage prepaid, addressed to Owner at _____[address], California, or to Contractor at _____[address], California. Either party may change the party's address for these purposes by giving written notice of the change to the other party in the manner provided in this paragraph.

Attorneys' Fees

13. If any legal action or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Contract is brought by either party to this Contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to receive from the other party, in addition to any other relief that may be granted, the reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses incurred in the action or proceeding by the prevailing party.

Sole and Only Agreement

14. This Contract constitutes the sole agreement of the parties to this Contract relating to the Property and correctly sets forth the rights, duties, and obligations of each to the other as of its date. Any prior agreements, promises, negotiations, or representations not expressly set forth in this Contract are of no force or effect.

Binding on Heirs

15. This Contract will inure to and be binding on the heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns of the parties to this Contract. However, nothing contained in this paragraph will constitute a consent to the assignment or delegation by either party of any rights or duties under this Contract.

§ 30C.220 Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Construction Manager [AGC Document 510]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an owner and a construction manager in which the construction manager will be the owner's on-site agent, and the owner will enter into separate agreements with the contractors. This form was prepared by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC), and is compatible with AGC Document 520 (Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Trade Contractor) [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts]. This form should not be used if the construction manager is also the primary contractor; instead, the AGC and the American Institute of Architects (AIA) have jointly published standard forms of agreement for that circumstance [see AGC Documents 565, 566; AIA Documents 121/Cmc, 131 Cmc].

An owner may wish to retain a construction manager to provide continuous on-site supervision of the construction work, particularly when (1) the project is relatively large, or (2) the parties have agreed to strictly limit the supervisorial responsibilities of the design professional [see § 30C.12[5]].

As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for informational purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC at 1957 E Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20006, (202) 393-2040. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

The construction manager on a construction project may be a design professional, such as an architect or engineer, or a contractor (other than the prime contractor who is responsible for actual construction of the project). The construction manager coordinates all aspects of the construction project during both the design and actual construction phases. This relieves the owner and prime contractor from many administrative duties, ensures an independent review of the prime contractor's performance, and should result in better coordination of labor and materials needs and improved integration of project phases [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

For further coverage of construction management, see Construction Law, ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[c] Requirements of Form

Under this form and the related general conditions, the construction manager basically agrees to act as the owner's advisor and consultant prior to the commencement of construction [see [2], P 2.1, below] and then to administer construction of the project using contractors retained by the owner (referred to as trade contractors) [see [2], PP 3.2, 5.2, 5.3, below]. For this work, the construction manager receives (1) an initial payment upon execution of the agreement; (2) compensation for services in the preconstruction phase based on a lump sum, reimbursable costs, or a combination of the two; and (3) a fee for construction phase services [see [2], art. 7, below]. The construction manager's compensation is subject to equitable adjustment in the event of events or circumstances specified in the agreement [see [2], PP 7.1, 7.5, below]. In addition to the fee, the construction manager also is reimbursed for costs specified in the agreement [see [2], art. 8, below]. Progress payments are made based on the construction manager's submission of a monthly statement to the owner, listing compensation due. The owner is obligated to then make the payment in the statement amount within 10 days after the statement is submitted.

For extensive coverage of this form and additional construction management forms, see Construction Law, ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender).

14-30C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30C.221

§ 30C.221 Standard Form of Agreement Between Engineer and Architect for Professional Services [EJCDC Document 1910-10]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) standard form of agreement between an engineer and an architect for the performance of professional services. Under this agreement, the engineer retains the architect to provide architectural services in connection with a construction project for which the engineer is the prime design professional. In other words, the architect is to serve as a consultant to the engineer. For coverage of the role of consultants in the construction process, see § 30C.15.

This form assumes that it will be used in conjunction with the standardized EJCDC documents for construction and design services, such as the Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Engineer for Professional Services [see § 30C.200[2]] and the EJCDC's Standard General Conditions of the Construction Contract [see Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts]. The preamble to the form provides for the attachment and incorporation by reference of the portions of the underlying owner-engineer agreement governing the architect's responsibilities, compensation, and timing of services. Thus, if changes are made to this form, amendments may also be necessary to these related forms.

For a discussion of the EJCDC, see § 30C.200[1][a]. For an agreement between an architect and a consultant that may be used when the consultant is not an engineer [see AIA Doc. C141], see Appendix B.

[b] Engineer-Architect Relationship

The EJCDC Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Engineer for Professional Services provides that the engineer will serve as the owner's prime design professional for the project and may employ any consultants the engineer deems necessary to assist in the performance or furnishing of professional engineering and related services under that agreement [see § 30C.200[2], P 6.01(C)]. This form states that the architect will serve as the engineer's independent professional associate and will assist the engineer in performing services under each phase of the project as set out in the owner-engineer agreement [see [2], Exhibit A, below]. Paragraph E of the preamble to the form states that the architect is an independent contractor, not a joint venturer with the engineer.

[c] Architect's Services

Exhibit A, which is incorporated by Article 1 of this form, describes the services to be performed by the architect. It divides these services into the same phases in which the work is divided in the primary owner-engineer agreement, that is: study and report phase; preliminary design phase; final design phase; bidding or negotiating phase; construction phase; and, post-construction phase. Exhibit A also sets out any additional services the architect is to perform.

These provisions are adequate when the architect is to provide comprehensive assistance throughout the entire project. However, because an architect is sometimes hired to assist in some discrete portion of the project, it may be necessary to amend Exhibit A accordingly. In addition, if applicable, Exhibit A should clarify the extent to which (1) the architect's design responsibilities will require the services of other consultants, and (2) the architect may rely upon the services of others employed by the engineer.

The standard form of agreement between the owner and the engineer generally presumes that the engineer will provide a Resident Project Representative at the project site during the construction phase of the project [see § 30C.200[1][d]]. Similarly, this form and its Exhibit A provide for the architect to provide the services of an on-site architectural project representative [see [2], Exhibit A, P A.1.06(A)(2), below]. The scope of the architectural project representative's duties should be described in detail in Exhibit D ("Duties, Responsibilities, and Limitations of Authority of Architectural Project Representative"). This description should include an indication of how the architectural project representative will work in conjunction with the Resident Project Representative at the site.

Article 4 of this form provides that the engineer will pay the architect for architectural services pursuant to the provisions of Exhibit C ("Payments to Architect for Services"). The form also includes several alternatives for Exhibit C, which are based on the method of compensation chosen by the parties. As to basic services with a determined scope, Exhibit C provides four options for payment: (1) lump sum; (2) hourly rates; (3) percentage of construction cost; and (4) direct labor costs times a factor [see [2], Exhibit C, P C.4.01, below]. The engineer and the architect should select one of these methods of compensation, complete the appropriate version of Paragraph C.4.01, and discard the remaining versions.

The remaining portions of Exhibit C provide only two payment options as to basic services of an indeterminate scope, and for additional services: (1) hourly rates; or (2) direct labor costs times a factor [see [2], Exhibit C, PP C.4.02, C.4.03, below]. Again, the parties should agree on one of these methods of compensation and complete the appropriate versions of Paragraphs C.4.02 and C.4.03.

Reimbursable expenses are provided for in Paragraph C.4.06 and in Appendix 1 to Exhibit C.

[f] Insurance

Paragraph 6.05 of this agreement states that both the engineer and the architect will procure and maintain insurance coverage as described in detail in Exhibit G of the agreement. Any specific coverages, amounts, or deductible provisions that are required by law or by the engineer or owner should be set forth in Exhibit G. An owner will often require both the engineer and the consultant architect to maintain professional liability or malpractice insurance.

[g] Signature and Certificate Number of Preparer of Plans

Under the Architects Practice Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.], persons who prepare or are in responsible control of plans, specifications, and instruments of service for others must sign those documents and all related contracts. If that person is a licensed architect, he or she also must affix a stamp to the documents and contracts as evidence of his or her responsibility for them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b) (requirements for stamp or seal); see also § 30C.16[1]]. The signature and stamp should be included (to the extent applicable) on the last page of this form.

CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter discusses private construction contracts and subcontracts, with an emphasis on bidding procedures and contract drafting considerations. Counsel should use this chapter in conjunction with Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals, which examines the contracts under which a design professional agrees to design a proposed project and (in most cases) to observe and inspect the future construction work. While the design professional may complete the design duties before the owner retains a contractor, the observation and inspection responsibilities will obviously be performed after the execution of the owner-contractor agreement and the commencement of the construction work. Consequently, this chapter contains numerous cross-references to the construction observation discussions in Ch. 30C.

This chapter does not cover public works projects, swimming pool construction contracts, home improvement contracts, or service and repair contracts. For comprehensive coverage of those topics, see Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts , Ch. 90A, State Government Contracts , and Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts .

The Legal Background of this chapter discusses applicable contract laws, methods for selecting licensed contractors, the role of the design professional in the construction process [for a more detailed discussion of that topic, see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals] construction contracting methods, the documents making up a construction contract, financial considerations (for example, compensation for extra work, bid security, and indemnity clauses), joint ventures, and subcontracts.

The Transaction Guide contains a step-by-step guide to the establishment of a contractual relationship between an owner and a contractor. The Forms section contains numerous bidding documents, documents that collectively make up a construction contract (including various owner-contractor agreements and alternative general conditions of the construction contract), related notices and other documents, joint venture forms, and subcontract agreements and conditions. Several of these construction documents are standardized agreements that have been prepared by major construction industry organizations. Additional standardized forms, prepared by the American Institute of Architects (AIA), have been set forth in appendices at the end of this chapter pursuant to an agreement with the AIA. The standardized forms have been reproduced in recognition of the fact that they are widely used in the California construction industry.

For discussions of other aspects of construction law, see Ch. 30A, Construction Financing , Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits , Ch. 30E, Joint (Builders') Control Agreements , Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens , and Ch. 33, Contamination Considerations in Real Property Transactions .

CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.10

§ 30D.10 Laws Governing Construction Contracts

[1] In General

A contract is an agreement to do or not to do a certain thing [Civ. Code § 1549] that creates a legal duty enforceable by a civil action or proceeding [Civ. Code §§ 1427, 1428]. A construction contract is simply a contract between the owner of a parcel of land and a prime contractor (who is usually a general contractor) to construct a specified building or project on the parcel.

In general, the laws that govern other types of contracts in California [see Civ. Code §§ 1549-1701] also apply to construction contracts. For coverage of the law of contracts, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions . However, because of the nature of the construction industry, the statutory provisions governing the enforcement of liens for labor or materials [see Civ. Code §§ 3082-3267; see also Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens], and the fact that a completed building becomes part of the land to which it is affixed [Civ. Code § 658], a somewhat specialized field of law also applies to construction contracts. This chapter focuses on those unique characteristics of construction contracts.

[2] Exemption From Unruh Act

The Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.], which regulates retail installment sales contracts, does not apply to any contract or series of contracts providing for the following: (1) the construction, sale, or construction and sale of an entire residence (including a mobilehome), or all or part of a structure designed for commercial or industrial occupancy, with or without a parcel of real property or an interest in real property; or (2) the sale of a lot or parcel of real property, including any site preparation incidental to the sale [Civ. Code § 1801.4].

[3] Public Construction Contracts

This chapter does not discuss the detailed statutory requirements governing construction contracts awarded by governmental agencies and entities. For discussion of publicly-financed construction contract bid and award procedures, see Ch. 90A, State Government Contracts , and Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts .

[4] Home Improvement, Swimming Pool, and Specialty Contracts

Unique sets of statutory requirements regulate home improvement and service and repair contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] and contracts for the construction of swimming pools [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168]. For these purposes, "home improvement" means repairing, remodeling, altering, converting, adding to, or modernizing residential property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151]. Contracts for specialty construction work, such as plumbing or painting work, are not subject to special statutory requirements but do have a unique format as a result of practical considerations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058 ("specialty contractor")]. For a consideration of these types of construction contracts, which are not discussed in this chapter, see Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts .

[5] Liability Immunity for Persons Providing Independent Quality Review Services

A person or other legal entity who is under contract with an applicant for a residential building permit to provide independent quality review of (1) the plans and specifications provided with the application to determine their compliance with the State Housing Law, or (2) the work of improvement to determine compliance with the plans and specifications, is immune from liability arising from his or her review provided he or she has completed not less than five years of verifiable experience in the appropriate field, and [Civ. Code § 43.99(a)]:

- Has been certified as a building inspector, combination inspector, or combination dwelling inspector from the International Conference of Building Officials and has successfully passed the technical written examination for those certification categories; or

- Is a registered professional engineer, licensed general contractor, or licensed architect rendering independent quality review of the work of improvement or plan examination services within the scope of his or her registration or license.

A qualified person must also maintain at least $2,000,000 in professional errors and omissions coverage [Civ. Code § 43.99(f)].

The immunity will not extend to protect a qualified person from liability for damages caused solely by that person's negligence of willful misconduct while performing services under a contract with an applicant [Civ. Code § 43.99(g)].

The fact that an independent quality review has been performed by a qualified person has no effect on the potential liability of those who are actually responsible for designing and constructing the work of improvement. Information related to such a review is inadmissible in any subsequent construction defect action initiated by anyone other than the applicant who retained the qualified person [Civ. Code § 43.99(b)].

A qualified person who performs an independent review may not have any other involvement in the work of improvement for which he or she is providing quality review services [Civ. Code § 43.99(e)].

[6] Owner's Obligation to Provide Security for Payment Obligations on Certain Projects

[a] Background

The potential failure of an owner to make timely progress payments under a construction contract led to use of a "pay if paid" provision in subcontracts, pursuant to which payment by the owner to the general contractor is a condition precedent to the general contractor's obligation to pay the subcontractor. In Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (Safeco), however, the California Supreme Court held that a "pay if paid" provision effects an impermissible indirect waiver or forfeiture of the subcontractor's constitutionally protected mechanic's lien rights in the event of nonpayment by the owner and is therefore against public policy and unenforceable [Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco

Ins. Co. of America (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 886, 888-890, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372] . This put the prime contractor in the undesirable position of being obligated under the subcontract to make payments to the subcontractor without having the funds from the owner to do so. To remedy this situation, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3110.5, which requires owners of certain private works of improvement to provide security for their payment obligations under the construction contract. The owner's obligations under § 3110.5 are discussed in [b]-[d], below.

[b] Nature of Obligation

An owner of property who contracts for a private work of improvement in an amount exceeding $5 million if the owner's interest is a fee simple absolute interest, or $1 million if the owner's interest is less than a fee simple interest, including a leasehold interest, has an obligation to do both of the following [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)(2), (b)]:

- If a lender is providing a construction loan, the owner must provide the original contractor with a certified copy of the recorded construction mortgage or deed of trust, which must disclose the amount of the construction loan; and

- If the owner is not the majority owner of the original contractor, the owner must provide security for his or her contractual payment obligations to the original contractor to be used only when the owner defaults on those obligations [see Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)-(3); see also [c], below].

A lessee of real property is considered to be the owner of a fee simple absolute interest if, and only if (1) the initial term of the lease is at least 35 years, and (2) the lease covers one or more lawful parcels under the Subdivision Map Act [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)(1); see Gov. Code § 66410 et seq. (Subdivision Map Act)]. The status of the owner of a fee simple absolute interest is not affected by the fact that the property is encumbered by any mortgages, deeds of trust, ground leases, or other liens or encumbrances or rights of occupancy [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)(1)].

When the contracting owner is the holder of less than a fee simple absolute interest, the owner of the fee simple absolute interest has no obligation to provide security for the contracting owner's contractual payment obligations. Similarly, when the contracting owner is the holder of the fee simple absolute interest, the owner of a lesser interest has no obligation to provide security for the contracting owner's payment obligations [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)(1)].

If a contracting owner fails to provide or maintain the security as required, the original contractor may demand in writing that the owner do so. If the owner fails to provide and maintain that security within 10 days after the written demand is made, the contractor may suspend work until the security is provided and maintained as required [Civ. Code § 3110.5(c)].

Any contractual waiver of the obligation to provide security is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 3110.5(g)].

The contracting owner's obligation to provide security does not affect a subcontractor's rights under the statutory provisions providing for mechanics' liens, stop notices, bond remedies, or prompt payment rights, including the original contractor's payment responsibilities set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 and Pub. Contract Code § 10262 [Civ. Code § 3110.5(d)].

[c] Exempt Projects and Owners

The obligation to provide security for an owner's contractual payment obligations does not apply to any of the following projects [Civ. Code § 3110.5(e)]:

- Construction of single-family residences (i.e., real property improvements used or intended to be used as dwelling units for one family), including those located within a subdivision, and any associated fixed works that require the services of a general engineering contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7056];

- Public works projects; or
- Housing developments that are eligible for a density bonus [see Gov. Code § 65915].

The security requirement also does not apply to any contract when the contracting owner is a qualified publicly traded company, a qualified private company, or a wholly-owned subsidiary of either, provided the subsidiary's obligations under the construction contract are guaranteed by the parent company [Civ. Code § 3110.5(f)]. A qualified publicly traded company is any company with a class of equity securities listed for trading on the New York, American, or NASDAQ stock exchange, and whose nonsubordinated debt securities are rated as "investment grade" [Civ. Code § 3110.5(f)(1)]. A qualified private company is any company that has no equity securities listed for trade on one of the major stock exchanges, and that has a net worth in excess of $50 million [Civ. Code § 3110.5(f)(2)]. The exemption from the security requirement will no longer apply if, before final payment on the construction is due, a qualified publicly traded company's debt securities are downgraded to below investment grade, or if a private company's net worth falls below the $50 million threshold [Civ. Code § 3110.5(f)(1), (2)].

[d] Amount of Security Required

Regardless of which means of security a contracting owner uses, when the construction contract is a fixed price contract, the security posted must be in the amount of either of the following [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1), (2), (3)(B)]:

- Not less than 25 percent of the total amount of the construction contract when the contract provides that the work of improvement is scheduled to be substantially completed within six months after it is begun; or
- Not less than 15 percent of the total amount of the construction contract when the contract provides that the work is scheduled to take longer than six months.

When the construction contract is not a fixed price contract, the amount of security to be provided must be determined with reference to the guaranteed maximum price, if there is one. If there is no guaranteed maximum price, the amount must be determined with reference to the contracting owner's and original contractor's good faith estimate as to the total cost anticipated to be incurred under the contract [Civ. Code § 3110.5(c)].

The security for a contracting owner's payment obligations under a construction contract must be provided by one of the following means [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)-(3)]:

- A payment bond;
- An irrevocable letter of credit; or
- An escrow account.

If a contracting owner chooses the payment bond alternative, the bond must be payable if the owner defaults on payment of any undisputed amount under the contract that has been due and payable for more than 30 days. It must be from a listed California admitted surety that has an underwriting limit greater than the value of the contract amount of the bond [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)].

If an irrevocable letter of credit is used, it must be from a financial institution [see Fin. Code § 5107] inuring to the benefit of the original contractor. The letter's maturity date and other terms are to be determined by agreement between the contracting owner, the original contractor, and the institution issuing the letter of credit; provided that the contracting owner is required to maintain the letter of credit in effect until the owner has satisfied all of its payment obligations to the original contractor [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(2)].

If the contracting owner opts to establish an escrow account (designated as a "construction security escrow account"), it must be maintained in California with one of the following [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(3)(A); see Fin. Code § 17006(a)(1), (3)]:

- An escrow agent licensed under the Escrow Law [see Fin. Code § 17000 et seq.];

- A California or federally regulated financial institution, such as a bank, trust company, building and loan or savings and loan association, or insurance company; or

- A title insurer doing business under California law.

The original contractor is not obligated to accept a construction security escrow account as security unless the contracting owner establishes to the contractor's reasonable satisfaction that the owner has granted the contractor a perfected, first priority security interest in the funds and proceeds from the funds deposited in the account. A written opinion of the owner's legal counsel is suggested as a means of establishing the contractor's first priority status. The funds on deposit in the account remain the sole property of the owner, subject to the contractor's security interest. The owner and contractor will instruct the escrowholder to disburse the funds in the account only on the joint authorization of the owner and contractor, or in accordance with a court order that is binding on both the owner and the contractor. A construction lender cannot be required to deposit construction loan proceeds in the account [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(3)(A)].

In addition to the amount of security required to be deposited in the account as discussed in [b], above [see Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(3)(B)(i), (ii)], if the construction contract provides for a so-called retainage or retention to be withheld from periodic payments to the original contractor, the owner must deposit all amounts withheld as retainage or retention in the escrow account at the same time the owner makes the corresponding payment to the contractor. In no event, however, can the amount required to be maintained on deposit exceed the total amount of remaining payments due the contractor under the contract. Whenever the amount of funds on deposit equals or exceeds the total amount of the remaining payments, the escrowholder is authorized to disburse to the contractor funds on deposit to pay progress payments then due under the contract. In no event, however, can either party be obligated to authorize funds to be disbursed when doing so would cause the amount remaining on deposit to be less than the total amount of future payments remaining to be due to the contractor. Once the contractor has been paid all amounts due under the contract, any remaining funds must be disbursed to the owner [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(3)(B)].

[7] Statutory Scheme Governing Actions for Construction Defects in New Residences Sold On or After January 1, 2003

In accordance with Title Seven of Part Two of Division Two of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 895 et seq. ("Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects")], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residence (excluding a condominium conversion) for which the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action is preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all in accordance with statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938].

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title Seven are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Homeowners' associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

These provisions do not apply to any action by a claim to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of any other statute [Civ. Code § 943(a)]. In addition, for a claim involving a single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is generally limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the personal use exception as developed under common law [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

To make a claim for violation of these statutory standards [see Civ. Code § 896 et seq.], a homeowner only needs to demonstrate, in accordance with the applicable evidentiary standard, that the home does not meet the applicable standard, subject to the affirmative defenses set forth in Civ. Code § 945.5. No further showing of causation or damages is required to meet the burden of proof regarding a violation of a standard, provided that the violation arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction [Civ. Code § 942].

Title Seven is primarily concerned with handling defects in construction, a subject which, at first blush, would seem more appropriate for coverage in the materials dealing with construction and development. However, Title Seven imposes obligations and responsibilities on sellers of property subject to its provisions that must be satisfied in connection with the sales agreement and before close of escrow. Thus, for more detailed coverage and sample language in a general form of contract for the sale of real property, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements, §§ 23.20A, 23.200[2]. The California Association of Realtors (CAR) applicable form is set forth in § 23.205.

[8] Wrap-Up Insurance Programs

[a] Use of Wrap-Up Insurance

A "wrap-up" insurance policy is an insurance policy, or series of policies, written to cover risks associated with a work of improvement, and covering two or more of the builders, general contractors, or subcontractors that work on that work of improvement [Ins. Code § 11751.82(b); see Civ. Code § 3106 ("work of improvement" defined)]. Wrap-up insurance policies are generally purchased by project owners, builders, or general contractors to cover themselves as well as any subcontractors and other participants involved with a project. The policy generally includes general liability, workers' compensation, umbrella, and builders' risk coverage. Because such insurance covers an entire project (or, in some cases, more than one project) and involves a single insurer, the potential for duplication and overlap of coverage that invariably accompanies the alternative approach in which owners, general contractors, and subcontractors each purchase their own insurance, is minimized. This should result in reduced litigation and cost savings for project owners and contractors.

[b] Use of Wrap-Up Insurance in Public and Other Non-Residential Projects Put Out for Bid After January 1, 2009

If an owner, builder, or general contractor obtains a wrap-up insurance policy (or some other consolidated insurance program) for a public work [see Labor Code § 1720 ("public work" defined)] or any other project other than residential construction [see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.] that is put out for bid after January 1, 2009, the bid documents must clearly delineate the total amount or method of calculating any credit or compensation for premium required from the subcontractor for that policy [Civ. Code § 2782.96(a)]. The contract documents must disclose the policy limits, known exclusions, and the length of time the policy is intended to remain in effect. On written request and once available, copies of the wrap-up policy must be provided to all those who are to be covered. Until the actual policy is available, the named insured may satisfy this requirement by providing a copy of the insurance binder or declaration of coverage. Any subcontractor or their insurance broker or attorney who receives a copy of the policy, binder, or declaration may not disclose it to third parties unless required by law to do so [Civ. Code § 2782.96(b)].

These disclosure requirements do not apply to any policy purchased by an owner, builder, or general contractor that provides additional coverage beyond what was contained in the original wrap-up policy if the subcontractor is not required to pay a credit or compensation for premium for the additional policy [Civ. Code § 2782.96(c)].

[c] Requirements for Wrap-Up Policy Insuring Private Residential Project Commencing After January 1, 2009

The contract documents for any private residential work of improvement that commences construction after January 1, 2009, and is insured by a wrap-up insurance policy (or other consolidated insurance program) must disclose the total amount or method of calculation of any credit or compensation for premium required from a subcontractor for the policy [Civ. Code § 2782.95(a); see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.]. If and to the extent known, the contract documents must also disclose [Civ. Code § 2782.95(b)(1)-(6)]:

1. The policy limits.

2. The scope of coverage.

3. The policy term.

4. The basis upon which the deductible or occurrence is triggered by the insurance carrier.

5. If the policy covers more than one work of improvement, the number of units, if any, indicated on the policy application.

6. A good faith estimate of the amount of available limits remaining under the policy as of a date indicated in the disclosure obtained from the insurer.

The requirement to provide the information described in 1.-4., above, may be satisfied by providing the subcontractor with a copy of the policy, binder, or declaration of coverage [Civ. Code § 2782.95(c)]. Because the disclosures required by 5. and 6., above, are based on information at a given moment in time, they may not accurately reflect either the actual number of units covered by the policy or the amount of any available insurance when a later claim is made. Thus, there is a presumption that these disclosures are made in good faith if the disclosure required by 5. is the same as that contained in the application to the wrap-up insurer, and the disclosure required by 6. was obtained from the insurer or broker. Overcoming the presumption requires a showing that the insurer, broker, builder, or general contractor intentionally misrepresented the facts [Civ. Code § 2782.95(7)].

If available, a copy of the insurance policy showing the coverage terms, including the policy limits, scope of coverage, policy term, and the basis on which the deductible or occurrence is triggered by the carrier, must be provided on the written request of any project subcontractor [Civ. Code § 2782.95(c); see Civ. Code § 2782.95(b)(1)-(4)]. If the actual policy is not available when a request is made, a copy of the insurance binder or declaration of coverage may be provided instead. Any subcontractor, or their insurance broker or attorney who receives a copy of the policy, binder or declaration may not disclose it to third parties unless required by law [Civ. Code § 2782.95(c)].

If the owner, builder, or general contractor (1) requires a subcontractor to offset the original bid amount with a deduction for the wrap-up insurance policy, but (2) fails to disclose the total amount or method of calculation of the premium credit or compensation related to wrap-up insurance to be charged the subcontractor before it submits its bid [see Civ. Code § 2782.95(a)], the subcontractor is not legally bound by the bid unless the subcontractor has the right to increase that bid up to the amount equal to the difference between any amount the subcontractor included in the original bid for insurance and the amount of the actual bid credit required [Civ. Code § 2782.95(d)].

[d] Enforceability of Indemnity Provisions in Post-January 1, 2009, Residential Construction Contracts For Projects Covered by Wrap-Up Insurance

All contracts, provisions, clauses, amendments, or agreements entered into after January 1, 2009, for a residential construction project that is covered by a wrap-up insurance policy (or other consolidated insurance program), that require an enrolled and participating subcontractor to indemnify, hold harmless, or defend another for any claim or action covered by that policy or program, arising out of that project, are unenforceable [Civ. Code § 2782.9(a)]. To the extent any contractual provision is deemed unenforceable, any party may pursue an equitable indemnity claim against another party for a claim or action unless the claim or action is covered under the wrap-up policy [Civ. Code § 2782.9(b)].

This does not prohibit a builder or general contractor from requiring a subcontractor to make a reasonably allocated contribution to the self-insured retention or deductible required under the wrap-up policy if the maximum amount and method of collecting the contribution is disclosed in the contract, and the contribution is reasonably limited so that each subcontractor may have some financial obligation in the event of a claim alleged to be caused by that subcontractor's scope of work. The contribution may only be collected when and as the builder or contractor incurs a self-insured retention or deductible in an amount that bears a reasonable and proportionate relationship to the alleged liability arising from the claim alleged to be caused by the subcontractor's scope of work, when viewed in the context of the entirety of the alleged claim. Any contribution will only be collected after written notice to the subcontractor of the amount and basis for the contribution. In no event may the total amount of contributions collected from subcontractors exceed the amount of any self-insured retention of deductible due and payable by the builder or contractor for the claim. This does not, however, prohibit any legally permissible recovery of costs and legal fees to collect a subcontractor's contribution if that contribution is reasonable and is not paid when due [Civ. Code § 2782.9(b)].

§ 30D.11 Selection of Project Delivery Approach

[1] Overview and Design-Award-Build Approach

One of the first steps in the construction process is the selection of an approach to be used for the design and construction of the project. In making this selection, the owner must make two determinations. First, the owner must decide whether the design and construction tasks will be performed by one entity or by separate entities. Traditionally, separate entities are used, with a design professional providing professional design services and one or more contractors providing goods and construction services [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.22 (AIA 1994)]. One entity is used when the owner wishes to enter into a design and build contract [see [2], below].

The second preliminary determination the owner must make is whether or not construction is to commence before the completion of the construction documents. Usually, the owner does not enter into a construction contract with a prime contractor until the owner's design professional has completed the construction documents and all other design work. This standard approach is sometimes referred to as the "design-award-build" process [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.22 (AIA 1994)]. A significant advantage of this approach is the fact that interested contractors are able to base their bids on the completed design. A disadvantage is the time it takes to complete the construction documents. Time constraints may cause an owner to reject the design-award-build process in favor of a design and build or fast track arrangement [see [2], [3], below].

Under a design and build ("design-build") contract, which is sometimes referred to as a turnkey contract, a single contractor assumes responsibility for the design and construction of the project [see § 30D.228 (design-build agreement); see also §§ 30D.242-30D.244 (agreements between design-builder and subcontractor), 30D.245 (agreement between design-builder and architect/engineer)]. This differs from the traditional construction contract, which simply requires the contractor to perform construction work that has already been designed pursuant to a separate, owner-design professional contract [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals].

Most design-build contracts apply to large construction projects, such as industrial plants, because they provide for complete coordination of the many phases of the work, which in turn results in lower administrative costs, more effective utilization of equipment and personnel, simplified lines of communication, savings in materials costs (through the use of large volume orders with substantial lead time), and time savings [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. Participants in these projects commonly include (1) contractors and other builders who have architects and engineers on their staffs or who hire these design professionals as consultants, (2) architects and engineers who act as general contractors on projects they design, and (3) developers, contractors, architects, and engineers who enter into joint ventures to design and build structures for a specific client or a speculative market [see Construction Law, Ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Fast Track Contracts

An owner may wish to enter into "fast track" contracts that provide for the commencement of the construction work while the design professional is still preparing the initial design studies and the design documents. This approach frequently requires the owner (or the owner's prime contractor) to enter into multiple contracts covering different phases of the work [see [5], below]. In many cases, the owner will retain a construction manager to coordinate the design and construction work [see [4], below], particularly if the owner is contracting directly with multiple contractors rather than with one prime contractor.

This approach is intended to shorten the duration of the project, and is most likely to be used when interest rates are high, strict time limits apply to land-use entitlements, or the project involves tight occupancy schedules [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.2, Practice Topic 3.22 (AIA 1994); Acret, Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, Ch. 2, Drafting Construction Contracts (Cal. C.E.B. 2d ed. 1990)].

[4] Use of Single or Multiple Construction Contracts

While deciding on a project delivery approach, the owner should determine whether to utilize a single prime construction contract or multiple prime contracts. A single contract should be used when one prime contractor is to supervise (and is to be solely responsible for completion of) all of the work. This centralized supervision often results in lower administrative costs. In many cases, the prime contractor will subcontract a large portion of the work.

Rather than utilizing one prime contract, the owner may wish to award separate prime contracts to different contractors for the primary areas of work to be performed. Typically, one contractor is responsible for the general construction work, while other contractors are individually responsible for the other major divisions of work, such as electrical and mechanical work. This multiple contract system must be used by some governmental entities, and may be preferable to the single contract system for some projects because it assigns tasks to qualified specialists [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

This chapter assumes that one prime contractor will be used for a particular project. However, the coverage also applies to projects involving multiple prime contracts.

[5] Construction Management Contracts

A construction management contract is an agreement between an owner and a construction manager under which the manager assumes responsibility for overseeing an entire construction project. The agreement may provide for the construction manager to construct the project using prime contractors retained by the owner (referred to as trade contractors) [for an example of such an agreement, see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals]. Alternatively, the construction management agreement may be used in connection with either a design-build agreement [see [2], above] or a fast track agreement [see [3], above]. Management contracts are commonly used for large projects in order to relieve the owner and prime contractor of responsibility for administrative duties and to provide for an independent review of the prime contractor's performance. These contracts are also designed to improve coordination of labor and material needs and the integration of project phases [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.12

§ 30D.12 Selection of Type of Contract

[1] Stipulated Sum Agreement

Construction contracts are usually classified by the method of compensation of the contractor. The two basic types of construction contracts are the "stipulated sum" (also referred to as "lump sum") agreement and the "cost-plus" contract [see [2], below]. Under a stipulated sum agreement, the contractor performs the construction work for a specified sum that includes the contractor's costs, overhead, and profit and that is paid in the form of progress payments. This type of agreement is more common than the cost-plus contract, and is almost always used when the prime contractor is selected by competitive bidding [see § 30D.22[2]]. Its advantages for the owner include knowledge, at the time the contract is awarded, of the cost of construction, and an uncomplicated method for making payments to the contractor [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.44 (AIA 1994)].

There are some disadvantages to the use of stipulated sum agreements. First, inexperienced owners and attorneys often fail to realize that construction projects almost inevitably require additional expenditures (that is, beyond the amount specified in the stipulated sum agreement) for changes in work, dispute resolutions, delays, and inadequate performances. Second, the concomitant use of competitive bidding [see § 30D.22[2]] means emphasizing price over the contractor's qualifications and experience. Thus, a low-bidding contractor who is not concerned about his or her business reputation or with obtaining repeat business may cut corners to minimize costs and maximize profit. This inherent temptation may result in the owner having to take extra steps to monitor the contractor's work [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 34 (Mar. 1, 1975)].

[2] Cost-Plus Contracts

Under a cost-plus contract, the prime contractor receives the cost of the construction work and a fee (in the form of a fixed amount or a percentage of construction cost) for overhead and profit. Thus, although the total cost is not fixed, the only construction costs the owner must pay are those that are actually incurred by the contractor. In the case of the contractor's fee, the owner normally will prefer a fixed fee rather than a percentage of construction cost because the fixed fee does not provide the contractor with an incentive to increase costs.

A common variation of these cost-plus agreements is the cost-plus contract that includes a guaranteed maximum price. Under this type of agreement, the contractor receives a fixed fee and is reimbursed for costs up to a specified ceiling or target cost. Any costs above the stated maximum are the contractor's sole responsibility. The contract may include an incentive clause that permits the parties to share in savings (according to a predetermined formula) if the final cost is below the specified ceiling [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.44 (AIA 1994)].

A cost-plus agreement provides the contractor with an interest in the timely, economical, and satisfactory completion of the contract. Consequently, this type of agreement may be desirable if the parties wish the contractor to commence construction at an earlier date (that is, before completion of the drawings and specifications) than he or she would under a stipulated sum agreement.

Cost-plus agreements have some drawbacks. First, because these contracts are usually negotiated, there is no price competition among potential bidders. Second, the guaranteed profit may remove some of the contractor's incentive to do a good job; thus, the owner will probably spend more time and money supervising the work [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. Third, the owner does not know in advance what the project will cost. However, it is questionable whether the stipulated sum agreement offers an accurate estimate either [see [1], above].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.13

§ 30D.13 Parts of Construction Contract

[1] In General

An entire, integrated construction contract consists of the owner-prime contractor agreement ("agreement"), drawings and specifications, conditions (general, supplementary, and other), addenda (changes made to the contract documents prior to the execution of the agreement), and modifications (post-execution changes).

Since construction contract documents tend to be complex, inconsistency among the provisions of the various documents is a common problem. This is particularly true when the parties modify or do not use standardized forms [see § 30D.20[2]]. One precaution, in addition to a careful review of the documents, is to expressly rank the documents so that some take precedence over others. Another possibility for the owner's attorney is to provide in the documents that any work prescribed under any of the documents should be considered necessary under all of the documents [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 33 (Mar. 1, 1975)].

[2] Owner-Prime Contractor Agreement

The owner-prime contractor agreement is the most important of the contract documents [see §§ 30D.221-30D.229; see also App. C (AIA Doc. A101-1997)]. It should set forth the responsibilities of the parties, the name of the design professional, the work to be performed, the contract price, the time of commencement and completion of work, and the method of payment of the contractor, and incorporate by reference the other contract documents. Further, it must contain specified information regarding the owner, contractor, and construction lender, and a statutory statement indicating (1) that contractors are required by law to be licensed and regulated by the Contractors' State License Board, and (2) that the Board has jurisdiction to investigate complaints against contractors that are filed within four years of the alleged violation in the case of patent acts or omissions, and 10 years of the alleged violation in the case of latent acts or omissions [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5; Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. Additional information must be included if the contract provides for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164].

[3] General, Supplementary, and Other Conditions of Construction Contract

The general conditions of a construction contract describe and allocate the rights, duties, responsibilities, and relations of the owner and prime contractor. They also set forth responsibilities of the design professional, even though the design professional is contractually bound by the owner-design professional contract and is not a party to the owner-prime contractor agreement [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, A201 Commentary (AIA 1994); see also App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. Consequently, the attorney must confirm that the provisions of the general conditions do not conflict with the owner-prime contractor and owner-design professional agreements, and with the other contract documents.

Supplementary conditions are frequently used to modify or expand the general conditions to accurately reflect unique aspects of the project, such as local legal, geological, or climatic conditions. They often include provisions relating to payments and insurance, and are particularly useful when the project involves multiple prime construction contracts or phased construction. Occasionally, the supplementary conditions are modified through the use of "other" conditions [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, A201 Commentary (AIA 1994)].

The drawings (also referred to as "plans") and specifications of a proposed project are prepared by the design professional and assist the contractor in preparing estimates and in performing the work. The drawings are graphic portrayals of the design, location, and dimensions of the proposed project. They usually contain, among other things, site and building plans, elevations, schedules, and diagrams. However, they do not, as a general rule, contain explicit information on every detail of the project. Although a single drawing may be used, it is more common to depict structural, mechanical, and electrical work on separate drawings [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.8, Practice Topics 3.81, 3.82 (AIA 1994); Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

Specifications complement the drawings by providing written requirements governing the materials, equipment, installation methods, systems, and techniques to be used for the construction work [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.8, Practice Topics 3.81, 3.82 (AIA 1994); Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)]. The specifications are frequently broken down into sections by individual construction trades, such as sitework, masonry, mechanical, and electrical. The specifications within each section may list acceptable brand names and models for products and assemblies, set forth performance standards for products and assemblies, incorporate by reference standards published by various testing organizations or industry or trade associations, or adopt some other approach. Many design professionals have a set of master specifications that they modify to use for a particular project [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.8, Practice Tips 3.81, 3.82 (AIA 1994)].

For coverage of statutory requirements governing the preparation and contents of plans [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5536.1, 6735], see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals . For a discussion of various methods for authorizing substitutions of specified materials, see § 30D.120.

[5] Soils Report as Part of Specifications

From the owner's perspective, it is essential that the drawings and specifications contain accurate subsurface information, because the owner can be held liable for the financial damages resulting from a contractor's justifiable and detrimental reliance on an incorrect soils report [see Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 404]. Thus, the owner, the owner's attorney, and the design professional should consider the risk of subsurface problems as early as possible in the planning stage of the project [see Sweet, Your First Construction Project, 21 Prac. Law. No. 2 (March 1, 1975) at 36], and see that the project drawings and specifications presented to prospective bidders include an adequate soils report.

The owner may attempt to limit his or her potential liability for inaccuracies in the soils report by (1) requesting the bidders to conduct independent soil investigations, or (2) expressly disclaiming liability for the accuracy of the owner's report. A disclaimer shifts the risk of unforeseen subsurface conditions from the owner to the prime contractor. In other words, if the owner uses such a disclaimer, the contractor will not receive additional compensation for any unanticipated work required by the unexpected condition [see Wunderlich v. State of California (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 777, 785-787, 56 Cal. Rptr. 473, 423 P.2d 545 ; see also § 30D.14]. However, this shifting of the burden from the owner to the contractor causes an increase in construction costs because the bidders will take that increased risk and the soils report preparation costs into account when making their bids [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

The owner may bear the risks of subsurface conditions (and therefore avoid the increased costs associated with contractor-ordered soils reports) by using a changed conditions clause in the construction contract that permits the contractor to claim an equitable adjustment of the contract price following the discovery of unusual subsurface conditions. This type of clause usually requires prompt notice to the owner of the conditions and prohibits any action on the conditions until a determination of the right to an equitable adjustment is made [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Construction Contracts

§ 30D.14 Extra Work and Change Orders

The construction contract documents typically provide that any extra work or other changes in the work occurring after the execution of the contract documents must be authorized by written change orders [see, e.g., Appendix E at the end of this chapter (AIA Doc. A201-1997, General Conditions of the Contract for Construction), Art. 7]. For these purposes, "extra work" is work that is not required or controlled by a construction contract and that was not contemplated by the parties when the contract documents were executed [Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A.J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 676, 683, 276 P.2d 52] . The change order is usually prepared by the design professional or the contractor and signed by the owner or the design professional. It should describe the change and specify the modification, if any, in the contract price [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.92 (AIA 1994)].

Whether the contractor is entitled to additional compensation for work that the contractor asserts is "extra" depends generally on whether the contract can be construed to include the work in the stated price (which would make additional compensation unavailable). Of particular importance to this determination is the construction placed on the contract by the parties; thus, an agreement by the parties that additional compensation is due precludes a claim that the original contract requires the work [Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A.J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 676, 683, 276 P.2d 52] .

Many contracts require the parties to agree on the price of any extra work before proceeding with the work. If the work and materials are of the same character as the work and materials covered by a price schedule in the contract, the general rule is that the price schedule will apply to the extra work [see Frank T. Hickey, Inc. v. L.A.J.C. Council (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 676, 684, 276 P.2d 52] . If the work is unlike the contract work and the parties cannot agree on the amount of the compensation, the contractor is entitled to recover the reasonable value of the work [see C.F. Bolster Co. v. J.C. Boespflug etc. Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 143, 151, 334 P.2d 247] .

In the absence of a contractual provision requiring the use of written change orders, the parties can order extra work and changes by oral agreement [see Murray v. California Conserving Co. (1920) 49 Cal. App. 625, 630, 193 P. 959] . Even when the contract requires written change orders, the parties may waive this requirement. A waiver may be implied when the extra work is performed without a change order at the request and with the full knowledge of the owner [Howard J. White, Inc. v. Varian Associates (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 348, 353, 2 Cal. Rptr. 871 ; Wilson v.

Keefe (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180-181, 309 P.2d 516] . Consequently, the owner's attorney should discourage the client from issuing oral change orders, paying for changes that were not made pursuant to written change orders, or engaging in any other activities that could result in a waiver of the requirement for written change orders.

The owner's attorney should also consider utilizing a change order clause that expressly authorizes the owner to order extra work but prohibits any other person (including any agent, employee, or subordinate of the owner) from ordering extra work. The clause should also state that the contractor will not be compensated for extra work ordered by anyone other than the owner [see Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 887, 910-912, 92 Cal. Rptr. 723 ; Bennett v. Carlen (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 307, 310, 28 Cal. Rptr. 647] .

Under the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.], an owner must notify the prime contractor and construction lenders of any changes in the contract if the change has the effect of increasing the price stated in the contract by 5 percent or more [Civ. Code § 3123(c)]. For further discussion of the mechanics' lien law, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens .

For coverage of the design professional's role in the approval of change orders, see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals . For a discussion of unanticipated work resulting from the discovery of unexpected soils conditions, see § 30D.13[5].

CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.15

§ 30D.15 Indemnity in Connection With Construction Contracts

[1] In General

"Indemnity" is basically the obligation of one party to make good a loss or damage incurred by another party [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; see Civ. Code § 2772]. Construction contracts usually contain provisions that provide for indemnification of the owner and design professional by the contractor for loss or liability on account of injuries to or the deaths of third persons arising from or in connection with the construction work. These indemnity clauses may, among other things (1) provide for the indemnification of the indemnitee for his or her passive, but not active, negligence, or (2) indemnify the indemnitee for his or her liabilities caused by the indemnitor, provided that the indemnitee was not contributorily negligent [see Western Contracting Corp. v. Southwest Steel Rolling Mills, Inc. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 532, 539-540, 129 Cal. Rptr. 782] . For further discussion of various types of indemnity agreements, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity , and California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender).

[2] Contractor Liability Under Negligence and Warranty Theories

A contractor has a duty to use reasonable care to prevent damage to persons who the contractor may reasonably expect will be affected by his or her work, regardless of their relationship to the contractor or owner [Chance v. Lawry's, Inc. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 368, 378, 24 Cal. Rptr. 209, 374 P.2d 185 ; Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 249, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127 (duty not limited to those in privity of contract with contractor); J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 802-808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 (duty extends to tenant when undue injury to tenant's business is reasonably foreseeable)]. A contractor remains potentially liable for negligence even after the construction work has been completed and accepted by the owner [Dow v. Holly Manufacturing Co. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 720, 725, 321 P.2d 736] .

When a contractor agrees to build an entire building, there is an implied warranty of fitness that protects the owner from defective construction [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 626, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] . However, if the contractor faithfully performs the work pursuant to owner-supplied plans, there is no implied warranty that the contractor will supplement any inadequacy in the plans [see Sunbeam Constr. Co. v. Fisci (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 181, 185, 82 Cal. Rptr. 446] .

For further discussion of contractor liability, and a consideration of owner liability, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 104, Building Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[3] Statutory Limitations on Construction-Related Indemnity Provisions

[a] General Rule

An indemnity provision in a construction contract will be void and unenforceable (with certain exceptions discussed below) if it purports to indemnify a promisee against liability for damages (1) for death or bodily injury to persons, injury to property, or any other loss, damage or expense arising from the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the promisee or the promisee's agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the promisee, or (2) for defects in design furnished by the foregoing persons [Civ. Code § 2782(a); see National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Nationwide Ins. Co. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 709, 717-718, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 ; see also Civ. Code §§ 2772 ("indemnity" defined), 2784 ("design defect" defined)]. Such a provision would also be a violation of the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7034(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (Contractors' State License Law)].

When interpreting express indemnity agreements, courts have historically focused on the indemnitee's active or passive negligence [see Macdonald & Krause, Inc. v. San Jose Steel Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 419-420, 105 Cal. Rptr. 725] . More recently, however, courts have moved away from a mechanical application of an active-passive dichotomy, emphasizing instead a contractual interpretation approach subject to certain public policy limitations, such as those imposed by Civ. Code § 2782 [see Heppler v. J.M. Peters Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1265, 1276-1277, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 ; Hernandez v. Badger Construction Equipment Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1818-1823, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732 ; see also Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628, 632, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97] . Thus, the parties may establish a duty in the indemnitor to save the indemnitee harmless from the results of his or her active negligence, provided the language of the indemnity agreement is sufficiently specific and clear to evidence this intent [see E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 507, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 ; but see Goldman v. Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 40, 44, 41 Cal. Rptr. 73, 396 P.2d 377 (these agreements will be strictly construed against indemnitee)]. Likewise, the parties may require negligence by the indemnitor as a condition to indemnification [see Peter Culley & Associates v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1492, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624] , or they may establish a duty in the indemnitor to save the indemnitee harmless even if the indemnitor is not negligent [see Continental Heller Corp. v. Amtech Mechanical Services, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 500, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 668] .

There are several significant statutory exemptions from, or qualifications of, the general rule stated in Civ. Code § 2782(a). For example, § 2782(a) itself exempts any insurance contract, workers' compensation, or agreement issued by an admitted insurer as defined by the Insurance Code [see Ins. Code §§ 23, 24 (definitions of "insurer" and "admitted," respectively)]. A second exemption authorizes the use of an accommodation agreement under which the contractor fully indemnifies a person or entity who is not a party to the construction contract but who agrees to permit the contractor to enter upon or adjacent to its property for the purpose of performing the construction contract for others [Civ. Code § 2782.1]. Additional exemptions apply to agreements to indemnify (1) a professional engineer for negligence in providing inspection services [see Civ. Code § 2782.2], and (2) a professional engineer or geologist from liability in providing hazardous materials identification [see Civ. Code § 2782.6].

Another important exception provides that nothing in Civ. Code § 2782 prevents a party to a construction contract and the owner or other party for whose account the contract is being performed from "negotiating and expressly agreeing" [ see definition, below] with respect to the allocation, release, liquidation, exclusion, or limitation as between the parties of any liability (1) for design defects [see Civ. Code § 2784 (definition of "design defects")], or (2) of the promisee to the promisor arising out of or relating to the construction contract [Civ. Code § 2782.5]. For these purposes, the phrase "negotiating and expressly agreeing" does not impose an affirmative duty on one party to specifically advise the other party of the existence of the clause and to inform that other party of the risks involved in the construction project [Markborough California, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 705, 712-713, 277 Cal. Rptr. 919] . Instead, this statutory exception requires that the parties have a fair opportunity to accept, reject, or modify a limitation of liability clause [Markborough California, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 705, 714, 277 Cal. Rptr. 919] .

[b] Indemnity By Subcontractor in Specified Residential Construction Defect Situations

For all construction contracts, and amendments to such contracts, entered into after January 1, 2009, for residential construction [see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.; § 30D.10[7]], all provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting any construction contract that purport to insure or indemnify, including the cost to defend, the builder, or the general contractor or contractor not affiliated with the builder, by a subcontractor against liability for construction defect claims are unenforceable to the extent the claims either [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Civ. Code §§ 911, 2782(h) ("builder" and "construction defect" defined); see also Civ. Code § 895 et seq.; § 30D.10[7]]:

1. Arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder or contractor or the builder's or contractor's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder;

2. Are for defects in design furnished by the persons described in 1., above; or

3. Do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties.

This prohibition on indemnification may not be waived or modified by contract, act or omission; but contractual provisions, clauses, covenants, or agreements that are not expressly rendered unenforceable by the prohibition are reserved to the parties' agreement [Civ. Code § 2782(c)]. This does not affect the obligations of a builder or subcontractor pursuant to the statutory scheme applicable to actions for defective construction in new residences sold on or after January 1, 2003 [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.; § 30D.10[7]], including the right to attempt to repair any alleged construction defect prior to litigation [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Civ. Code § 910 et seq.; § 34.49]. It also does not affect a subcontractor's insurance carrier's obligation to provide a complete defense in a construction defect action when the subcontractor added the builder to its liability insurance policies as an additional insured [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Presley Homes, Inc. v. American States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575-577, 108 Cal. Rptr. 686] .

The prohibition on indemnification does not prohibit a subcontractor and builder or general contractor from mutually agreeing to the timing or immediacy of the defense and provisions for reimbursement of defense fees and costs so long as that agreement does not waive or modify the above-described prohibition on indemnity. Before a subcontractor may be obligated to provide a defense or indemnify a builder or general contractor, the builder or contractor must first provide the subcontractor with a written tender of the claim, or a portion of the claim, that includes all of the information provided to the builder or general contractor by the claimant, including, but not limited to the information required for a notice of claim for an action for defective residential construction related to claims caused by the subcontractor's scope of work [Civ. Code § 2782(d); see Civ. Code § 910(a); § 34.49[5][b]]. The tender has the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of a legal proceeding. If a builder or general contractor tenders a proper claim for construction defects to a subcontractor, the subcontractor must elect to either:

1. Defend the claim with counsel of its choice, in which case the subcontractor will maintain control of the defense for any claim to which the defense obligation applies [Civ. Code § 2782(d)(1).]; or

2. Pay, within 30 days of receipt of an invoice, a reasonable allocated share of the builder's or general contractor's defense fees and costs on an ongoing basis during the pendency of the claim, including any amounts reallocated on final resolution of the claim by settlement or judgment [Civ. Code § 2782(d)(2)].

If, as described in 1., above, a subcontractor elects to defend, the subcontractor must give the builder or general contractor notice of its election within a reasonable time period not to exceed 90 days from receipt of the written tender. The defense must be a complete defense of the builder or general contractor of all claims to the extent alleged to be caused by the subcontractor, including any vicarious liability claims resulting from the subcontractor's scope of work, but not including claims resulting from the scope of work of any other party. Any vicarious liability imposed on a builder or general contractor for claims caused by a subcontractor electing to defend will be directly enforceable against the subcontractor by the builder, general contractor, or claimant [Civ. Code § 2782(d)(1)]. If a subcontractor elects to defend, and fails to timely and adequately perform its obligation to do so, the builder or general contractor will have the right to pursue a claim against the subcontractor for any resulting damages and reasonable attorney's fees. The builder or general contractor will bear the burden of proof to establish a subcontractor's failure to defend and any resulting damages [Civ. Code § 2782(e)].

If, as described in 2., above, a subcontractor elects to pay its reasonably allocated share of the builder's or general contractor's defense costs, the builder or general contractor must allocate a share to itself to the extent a claim is alleged to be caused by its work, actions, or omissions, and a share to each subcontractor to the extent a claim is alleged to be caused by the subcontractor, regardless of whether the builder or general contractor actually tenders the claim to any particular subcontractor, and regardless of whether that subcontractor is participating in the defense. Any amount not collected from any particular subcontractor may not be collected from any other subcontractor [Civ. Code § 2782(d)(2)]. If a subcontractor fails to perform its obligation to pay its share of defense costs, the builder or general contractor will have the right to pursue a claim against the subcontractor for any resulting compensatory and consequential damages, as well as for interest on defense and indemnity costs, and for its reasonable attorney's fees. The builder or general contractor will bear the burden of proof to establish the subcontractor's failure to perform and any resulting damages. If, on a subcontractor's request, a builder or general contractor does not reallocate defense fees within 30 days following final resolution of a claim, the subcontractor will have the right to pursue a claim against the builder or general contractor for resulting damages as well as for interest on the fees, from the date of final resolution. The subcontractor will bear the burden of proof to establish both the failure to reallocate and any resulting damages [Civ. Code § 2782(e)].

[c] Parties' Right to Seek Equitable Indemnity for Claims Governed by Civil Code Section 2782

A builder, general contractor, or subcontractor will have the right to seek equitable indemnity for any claim governed by Civil Code Section 2782, and nothing in that section limits, restricts, or prohibits the right of a builder, general contractor, or subcontractor to seek equitable indemnity against any supplier, design professional, or product manufacturer [Civ. Code § 2782(f), (g)].

[4] Wording of Indemnity Clause

The negotiations over the inclusion and wording of an indemnity provision are relatively unimportant to most parties to a proposed contract because they are actually bargaining for their insurance carriers and any resulting increase in liability premiums will be minimal compared to the contract price. Accordingly, contractors rarely decline to enter into a construction contract because of the wording of a proposed indemnity clause, and the parties are likely to use the wording proposed by the owner (who is in a stronger bargaining position) or the indemnity clauses included in the standardized documents prepared by the American Institute of Architects, the Associated General Contractors of America, and other construction organizations [see Acret, Architects and Engineers, Ch. 12, Indemnity (Shepard's/McGraw-Hill 2d ed. 1977)]. Those standardized forms tend to utilize broad and sweeping indemnity provisions [see, e.g., App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 3.18.1 (requiring contractor to indemnify and hold harmless owner and architect from damages, etc. "caused by the negligent acts or omissions of the Contractor, a Subcontractor, anyone directly or indirectly employed by them or anyone for whose acts they may be liable")]. Contractors and subcontractors accept broadly worded indemnity clauses at their peril, however. Courts hav e enforced indemnity agreements even for losses caused by acts over which the indemnitor had no control on the basis that the parties enjoy great freedom of action in allocating risk [see, e.g., Continental Heller Inc. v. Amtech Mech. Servs. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 500, 504-507, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 668] .

CHAPTER 30D CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Contractors and Construction Organizations

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.20

§ 30D.20 Construction Organizations

[1] In General

Most participants in the construction industry belong to one or more professional, business, technical, or trade organizations that exist to educate and assist their members in the performance of construction-related functions. Examples of these organizations include the American Institute of Architects (AIA) and the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC). Trade directories, available in most public libraries, provide detailed information concerning these organizations.

[2] Use of Standardized Forms

Many organizations of construction professionals offer standardized, copyrighted construction contracts and related documents for use by their members. Most commentators and construction participants consider these forms to be complete, fair, and particularly useful when the attorneys for the parties to a project do not have the time or experience to prepare individualized documents [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 28 (1975)]. Although these preprinted forms may be slanted in favor of the members of the preparer-organization, it is not unusual for one organization to endorse the use of specified forms prepared by another organization.

This chapter reproduces numerous forms prepared by various construction organizations. Although the reproductions are to be used solely for illustrative purposes and must not be used in lieu of blank versions obtained from the appropriate organizations, this exposure to the contents of the forms will provide counsel with the opportunity to review their contents, target provisions that may be modified following negotiations with the other parties, and select from competing versions of the same type of agreement before ordering or being presented with blank originals.

Counsel should exercise great care in modifying any standardized construction documents. Any interlineations, deletions, or other modifications to standardized forms defeat one of the principle attractions of these forms, which is the familiarity most construction participants have with their contents. Further, modifications to one form might cause it to be inconsistent with other standardized documents making up the construction contract. For these reasons, the attorney should use addenda or riders whenever changing standardized forms [see §§ 30D.202, 30D.230].

§ 30D.21 Contractors' State License Law

[1] In General

The Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.] imposes a set of licensing requirements on any person who engages in construction work for more than $500 in compensation [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7048]. The statute is administered by the Contractors' State License Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7010; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7000.5-7020]. Many of the administrative duties of the Board are carried out by the Registrar, who is the executive officer and secretary of the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7011 (to remain in effect until January 1, 2011, and repealed as of that date, unless later enacted statute that is enacted before January 1, 2011, deletes or extends that date)].

[2] Definition of Contractor

Under the Contractors' State License Law, the terms "contractor" and "builder" are synonymous. "Contractor" means any person who undertakes to construct, alter, repair, add to, subtract from, improve, move, wreck, or demolish any building, highway, road, parking facility, railroad, excavation, or other structure, project, development, or improvement, whether or not the performance of the work involves the addition to or fabrication of any structure, project, development, or improvement of any material or article of merchandise. Certain work performed in connection with the foregoing tasks, such as erecting scaffolding, cleaning grounds or structures, or preparing and removing roadway construction zones, lane closures, flagging, or traffic diversions, or installing, repairing, maintaining, or calibrating monitoring equipment for underground storage tanks, is also the work of a contractor. Further, the term "contractor" specifically includes subcontractors and specialty contractors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026; see Civ. Code § 3104 ("subcontractor") discussed in § 30D.30[1]].

Every licensed contractor is classified into one or more of the following categories by the Registrar: general building contractor, general engineering contractor, or specialty contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7055; 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 830(a)]. A general building contractor's principal contracting business involves structures used for people, animals, chattels, or any kind of movable property, requiring in their construction the use of at least two unrelated building trades or crafts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7057(a)]. A general engineering contractor deals primarily with fixed works requiring specialized engineering knowledge and skill, such as irrigation projects, highways, and excavations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7056]. Finally, specialty contractors perform construction work that requires special skill and involves the use of specialized building trades or crafts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058(a)].

For additional coverage of these classifications, see Ch. 88, Licensing of Contractors .

[4] License Requirement

No person engaged in the business of, or acting in the capacity of, a contractor may bring or maintain an action, or recover in law or equity in any action, for the collection of compensation under the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.] without alleging that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the subject act or contract, regardless of the merits of the cause of action brought by the person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 430-431, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(d) (if licensure or proper licensure is controverted, proof of licensure must be made by production of verified certificate of licensure from Contractors' State License Board; burden of proof to establish licensure or property licensure is on licensee; Advantec Group, Inc. v. Edwin's Plumbing Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 621, 627, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 (general denial is sufficient to "controvert" contractor's pleading of licensure so that contractor must produce verified certificate of licensure))]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 does not allow a contractor who was unlicensed at any time during contractual performance to recover compensation for individual acts performed while he or she was duly licensed [MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 425, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41] . However, if fully licensed at all times during contractual performance, a contractor is not barred from recovering compensation for the work solely because he or she was unlicensed when the contract was executed [MW Erectors, Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 440, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41] .

The prohibition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 does not apply to contractors who are each individually licensed under the Contractors' State License Law but who enter into a joint venture without obtaining a joint venture license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029; see also § 30D.31]. The prohibition does apply to "master builders" or "master developers," that is, developers who provide labor and materials through licensed, third-party general contractors [Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 929, 939-943, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] . The prohibition also applied to a licensed contractor whose unlicensed corporation entered in a subcontract with a general contractor who could not sue to recover compensation, even though the contractor's license number appeared on all documents relating to the contract. The corporation was the contracting party, and recovery therefore was barred [Opp v. State Farm Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 260] . A similar statutory prohibition provides that a security interest taken to secure any payment for the performance of any act or contract for which a contractor's license is required is unenforceable if the person performing that act or contract was not a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(c)].

If an unlicensed contractor is paid for performing work for which a professional license is required, the person who utilized the contractor's services and paid the compensation has a cause of action against the contractor to recover all compensation paid for work for which a license was required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b)].

As a general rule, the judicial doctrine of substantial compliance does not apply in these circumstances. However, under narrowly-defined circumstances in most cases commenced on or after January 1, 1995, a court may determine that there has been substantial compliance with the licensure requirements. To sustain a claim of substantial compliance, all of the following must be shown at an evidentiary hearing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e), (f)]:

- The contractor had been duly licensed in California before the contract was performed;

- The contractor acted reasonably and in good faith to maintain proper licensure;

- The contractor did not know or reasonably should not have known that he or she was not duly licensed; and

- The contractor acted promptly and in good faith to reinstate his or her license on learning it was invalid.

Slightly different rules apply to cases commenced before January 1, 1995 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e); see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 430, Licensing of Contractors (Matthew Bender)].

For a detailed discussion of the licensing of contractors, see Ch. 88, Licensing of Contractors .

[5] Exemptions From Licensing Requirements

Some persons, projects, and businesses are exempt from the requirements of the Contractors' State License Law. For example, improvements made by a homeowner on his or her own principal residence are exempt [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(a)(3)]. Another important exemption applies to improvements made by the owner of the affected property, if the work is not done for purposes of sale and certain other requirements are met [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(a)(1)]. For a complete list of these exemptions, see Ch. 88, Licensing of Contractors .

[6] Required Licensing Information

Every contractor licensed in California must include his or her license number in all construction contracts, subcontracts, and all forms of advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.5]. Further, a prime contractor must include a statutory statement (in at least 10-point type) on all construction contracts, except home improvement and service and repair contracts. The statement indicates (1) that contractors are required by law to be licensed and regulated by the Contractors' State License Board, and (2) that the Board has jurisdiction to investigate complaints against contractors that are filed within four years of the alleged violation in the case of patent acts or omissions, and 10 years of the alleged violation in the case of latent acts or omissions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(a); see § 30D.229]. Home improvement contracts written pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151.2 and service and repair contracts written pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10 must include a statement informing the owner of the Contractors' State License Board's role in regulating contractors and warning the owner to use only a licensed contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(b)]. For complete coverage of home improvement and service and repair contracts, see Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts .

[7] Construction Supervision

Although the supervision of construction work does not require a contractor's license [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051], the prime contractor for a relatively small construction project may supervise the work, or may share the supervisorial responsibilities with the design professional [see Acret, Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, Ch. 7, Architects and Engineers (Cal. C.E.B. 2d ed. 1990)]. It is unlikely that the contractor will perform these duties in connection with a larger project [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 29 (Mar. 1, 1975)]. For further discussion of construction supervision, see Chapter 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals .

[8] Local Business Tax Requirements

Nothing in the Contractors' State License Law prohibits a city, county, or city and county from (1) requiring a contractor to show proof that the contractor is in compliance with local business tax requirements prior to issuing any city, county, or city and county permit, or (2) denying the issuance of a permit to a licensed contractor who is not in compliance with these local requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000.2].

§ 30D.22 Method of Selecting Prime Contractor

[1] In General

After the owner of a parcel of land has hired a design professional (usually an architect or engineer) to prepare drawings and specifications for a proposed development project on the parcel [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals], the owner and the design professional will select and commence contract negotiations with a prime contractor. As used in this chapter, "prime contractor" means the contractor who (1) contracts directly with the owner, and (2) supervises and directs the construction work. Usually, the prime contractor is a general contractor [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches (AIA 1987)].

Unlike the owner of a public project, a private owner is not required to award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder [see Pub. Contract Code § 10180 (public award requirement); see also Ch. 90, Government Contracts]. However, the primary goal for any private or public owner normally is to obtain the best product and performance for the lowest possible price. To accomplish this goal, a private owner typically employs either of the following methods to solicit bids and award the contract: competitive bidding [see [2], below]; or direct selection [see [3], below].

[2] Competitive Bidding

Competitive bidding is the most common method for selecting prime contractors. As its name suggests, competitive bidding involves issuing an invitation (in the form of a letter or published advertisement) to prospective contractors to bid on a proposed project [see §§ 30D.200, 30D.201]. This invitation for bids is a mere request to submit a bid or an offer for work and is not an offer to contract [Universal By-Products, Inc. v. City of Modesto (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 145, 155-156, 117 Cal. Rptr. 525] unless the owner indicates that he or she will accept the lowest bid. Unlike public construction projects [see Ch. 90, Government Contracts], private construction contracts are not governed by statutory bidding procedures.

This method is based on the theory that head-to-head competition for the work will produce the lowest realistic contract price consistent with marketplace conditions [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches, App. C (AIA 1987)]. However, the owner should not give the impression that the contract will automatically be awarded to the lowest bidder. Instead, the invitation for bids should notify the bidders that the owner reserves the right to reject any and all bids, and to award the contract to other than the lowest bidder. In this way, the owner may take all of the bidders' qualifications into account, and will not be forced to accept a low but otherwise inadequate bidder [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender); see also § 30D.200[1]].

Invitations to make competitive bids may be made to all interested contractors in the area (open bidding), or to a restricted number of selected, prequalified contractors (restricted or closed bidding). In the latter case, the prequalification process is designed to identify prospective bidders who have the ability, experience, reputation, financial integrity, and other qualifications necessary to complete the owner's project. The architect typically assists the owner in making these determinations [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)]. For a contractor's qualification statement that may be used to obtain relevant information from potential contractors [see AIA Doc. A305], see Appendix A.

The bid invitations will be accompanied by supporting documentation that may be used by the contractors to prepare their bids. The supporting documentation typically includes the following, as appropriate: the proposed owner-contractor agreement, general conditions of the contract, drawings, specifications, addenda [see § 30D.202], instructions to bidders [see Pt. III(A)(3) of the Transaction Guide], bonds, and information on bid security or bonds [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation]. This bidding package will also include a blank bid form [see § 30D.203 [2]], which the bidder must complete and submit as the formal bid.

[3] Direct Selection and Negotiation

Under the direct selection method, the owner and design professional select a capable, interested contractor and negotiate solely with that contractor. The direct selection method may be preferable to competitive bidding when (1) construction is to be commenced prior to the completion of detailed drawings and specifications, (2) the selected contractor is particularly well-qualified for the proposed project, or (3) the owner and contractor have worked together successfully in the past [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender); Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches, App. C (AIA 1987)].

The primary disadvantage of direct selection is that the contractor does not have a competitive incentive to specify a low contract price. However, the owner and design professional can refuse to award the contract unless they determine that the price is reasonable. Further, the owner may provide the contractor with an incentive to keep costs down by using a cost-plus construction contract that includes a guaranteed maximum price [see § 30D.12].

§ 30D.23 Withdrawal and Other Relief From Bid Mistakes

[1] Prior to Acceptance

Because an invitation for bids is merely a request for bids and not an offer to contract, there is no contractual relationship between a bidder and the owner until after the bid is accepted [see Universal By-Products, Inc. v. City of Modesto (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 145, 155-156, 117 Cal. Rptr. 525 ; Civ. Code § 1586]. Thus, a bidder should be permitted to withdraw the bid at any time prior to its acceptance. Notwithstanding the foregoing, a subcontractor may not be permitted to withdraw an erroneous bid if the prime contractor, in making a bid to the owner, relied on the subcontractor's bid [see § 30D.30[3]].

[2] After Acceptance

After a bid has been accepted, the bidder's right to withdraw the bid or to rescind the contract will depend on several factors. As a general rule, a contractor who had made a material mistake of fact in the bid may rescind if the mistake was not due to neglect of a legal duty, if enforcement of the contract as made would be unconscionable, and if the other party can be placed in his or her original position. However, the bidder must give prompt notice of the mistake and the election to rescind [see M.F. Kemper Const. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 701, 235 P.2d 7 (rescission was granted when city had been notified, prior to its acceptance of bid, of clerical error that did not constitute a neglect of legal duty); see also Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)].

Courts distinguish between bid mistakes that are due to clerical error and those that are the result of poor business judgment. Generally, relief is allowed for clerical or mathematical mistakes, such as underestimating the cost of labor or materials, because a failure to grant relief would force the contractor to perform an agreement he or she had no intention of making [M.F. Kemper Const. Co. v. City of L.A. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 703, 235 P.2d 7 ; see Elsinore Union etc. Sch. Dist v. Kastorff (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 380, 388-389, 6 Cal. Rptr. 1] . On the other hand, relief is normally denied for an error in judgment [see M.F. Kemper Const. Co. v. City of L.A. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 703, 235 P.2d 7 ; see also Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982) (withdrawal should not be permitted for errors of judgment)]. Relief has also been denied for a contractor's failure to independently investigate and calculate the cost of construction work [see Kneer v. Baruch

If a bid is withdrawn, the bidder should be disqualified from rebidding on the same project, and the remaining bids should be handled as if the withdrawn bid had never been submitted [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender); Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Contractors and Construction Organizations

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.24

§ 30D.24 Construction Security

[1] Bid Bonds and Bid Guarantees

Owners usually require some form of bid security. The most common type of required security is the bid bond. A bid bond is a guarantee to the owner that the selected bidder will execute the construction contract and furnish performance and payment bonds (if required) within a specified period of time or forfeit the penal sum of the bond. This penal sum is an amount (up to the amount of the bid security) intended to cover the difference between the defaulting bidder's proposal and the price at which the owner contracts in good faith with another party to perform the work [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982); Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)].

Other forms of bid security are occasionally used. These alternatives include other types of bonds and negotiable securities [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982); see § 30D.111].

The advertisement or invitation for bids should specify the amount and form of the security, stating the amount as a lump sum (usually determined by the design professional) or as a percentage of the base bid proposal [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)].

[2] Performance Bonds and Labor and Material Payment Bonds

Although there is no statutory requirement that performance or labor and material bonds be furnished in connection with private construction projects, a property owner will usually require the prime contractor to provide both. A performance bond guarantees that the contractor (or the surety in the event of the contractor's default) will fulfill the terms of the contract. The owner usually has an exclusive, non-transferable right of action on the bond.

The labor and material bond, also referred to as a payment bond, guarantees the payment of all bills incurred by the contractor for labor, materials, and supplies used in connection with the contract. The owner may receive additional protection by recording the bond in the manner set forth in the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code §§ 3082-3267]. This will limit the owner's potential liability to unpaid suppliers [see Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236; for additional coverage, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens ; Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity].

Owners should permit contractors to obtain surety bonds from any reputable company acceptable to the owner [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

For a detailed discussion of surety bonds, see Volume 14, Chapter 79, Suretyship, Guaranty and Indemnity. Part D of that chapter sets forth and discusses numerous construction contract bonds. The American Institute of Architects has also prepared bond forms [see AIA Doc. A311 (performance bond and labor and material payment bond), A312 (performance bond and payment bond)]. For further discussion, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Volume 12, Chapter 422, Insurance and Bonding Practice, and Volume 13, Chapter 453, Payment Bonds (Matthew Bender).

[1] In General

A subcontractor is any contractor who does not have a direct contractual relationship with the owner [Civ. Code § 3104]. The term includes those who subcontract with the general contractor to furnish the material and construct for the general contractor some part of that which the general contractor has agreed with the owner to construct [Theisen v. Los Angeles County (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 170, 180, 5 Cal. Rptr. 161, 352 P.2d 529] . The essential feature of the relationship is that in the course of performance, the subcontractor constructs a definite, substantial part of the improvement in accordance with the drawings and specifications of the basic contract between the general contractor and owner [Theisen v. Los Angeles County (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 170, 183, 5 Cal. Rptr. 161, 352 P.2d 529] .

Subcontractors are often specialty contractors, that is, contractors who are licensed in certain specialized fields [see § 30D.21 [3]]. For a detailed discussion of specialty contractors, see Volume 16, Chapter 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts.

[2] Overview of Bidding Procedure

A general contractor who is preparing to bid on a construction project must have an accurate idea of the cost of any necessary subcontract work because the contractor must incorporate the subcontract prices into the bid on the prime construction contract. Therefore, the contractor will solicit bids from subcontractors before bidding on the basic construction contract. General contractors make the solicitations in the same manner as owners when they invite bids from general contractors, for example, by placing advertisements in trade journals or by direct mailing to known and capable subcontractors [see § 30D.22[2]].

The deadline for bids on the prime contract is also the closing date for the subcontractors' bids. In fact, subcontractors often submit their bids a matter of hours before the opening of the general contractors' bids. This is done to prevent a general contractor from engaging in "bid shopping," that is, using a specific bid to initiate a bidding competition among several subcontractors. Instead, after receiving the subcontractors' bids at the last possible moment (commonly over the phone), the general contractor only has the time to record the bids and then prepare and submit his or her own bid [see Saliba-Kringlen Corp. v. Allen Engineering Co. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 95, 100, 92 Cal. Rptr. 799 ; see also California Real Estate Law & Practice, ch. 433, Subcontractors and Subcontracts (Matthew Bender); Comment, Bid Shopping and Peddling in the Subcontract Construction Industry, 18 UCLA L. Rev. 389 (1970)].

The general contractor who is awarded the contract will negotiate with the subcontractor over the scope of the subcontractor's work. The contractor is free to choose another subcontractor unless the owner requires otherwise [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, ch. 433, Subcontractors and Subcontracts , (Matthew Bender)].

Owners almost always reserve the right to approve the subcontractors. Owners exercise this right in one of two ways. Some owners require bidders to list in their bids all prospective subcontractors, and then use those lists as one of the factors in awarding the contract. In this case, the bidding documents should state whether and how unlisted subcontractors can be substituted for the listed ones (for example, only with the owner's consent) [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 36 (Mar. 1, 1975)].

Alternatively, the owner will (1) require the successful bidder to submit a list of subcontractors for the owner's approval, and (2) prohibit the contractor from contracting with unapproved or rejected subcontractors. When this method is used, the owner will agree that any material change in construction costs caused by the substitution of a subcontractor rejected by the owner must be subtracted from or added to the contract price [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Liability of Subcontractor for Erroneous Bid

A subcontractor has a duty to exercise reasonable care in preparing a bid and is presumed to foresee the harm that could befall a general contractor from an erroneous underestimate [see Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 416, 333 P.2d 757] . Thus, if a general contractor, in making a bid to an owner, relies on an erroneous bid from a subcontractor, the doctrine of promissory estoppel will be invoked to prevent the subcontractor from withdrawing its bid unless the general contractor had knowledge of the error before making his or her bid to the owner [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 416, 333 P.2d 757 ; see H. W. Stanfield Constr. Corp. v. Robert McMullan & Son, Inc. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 848, 852, 92 Cal. Rptr. 669] . For a detailed discussion of the effect of the doctrine of promissory estoppel on erroneous bids by subcontractors, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 433, Subcontractors and Subcontracts (Matthew Bender).

[4] Extra Work Performed by Subcontractors

Subcontractors typically seek compensation for extra work from the prime contractor rather than the owner because they are in privity of contract with the former. After reviewing the request, the prime contractor should either reject the request in writing (specifying the reasons for the rejection) or forward the request to the owner for payment. Prime contractors sometimes provide in the subcontract agreement that the subcontractor will not be compensated until the prime contractor receives the funds from the owner [see § 30D.241].

§ 30D.31 Construction-Related Joint Ventures

Two or more licensed contractors may jointly submit a bid for a construction project, provided that they first obtain a joint venture license. The joint venture license may be issued in any classification in which at least one of the contractors is licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029]. After obtaining the joint venture license, the contractors will usually enter into an agreement to prepare and submit the joint bid [see § 30D.210]. If the owner accepts the bid, the contractors will then enter into a formal joint venture agreement [see App. B].

Architects, engineers, and other design professionals also commonly enter into joint ventures for construction projects, either with members of their own professions or with other types of professionals. Unlike contractors, these design professionals are not subject to any special joint venture licensing requirements.

B. Preliminary Determinations

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.110

§ 30D.110 Selection of Project Delivery Approach and Contract System

1. Will design and construction tasks be performed by one entity or by separate entities?

NOTE:
Traditionally, a design professional provides professional design services, and one or more contractors provide goods and construction services [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches (AIA 1987); see also § 30D.11 [1]]. One entity is used when one prime contractor will design and build the project [see P 3a, below].

2. Will construction commence before completion of construction documents [see P 3c, below]?

NOTE:
If time constraints or other considerations make it important to commence construction prior to the completion of the design work, the owner should utilize either a design-build contract or a fast track contract [see P 3b, c, below].

3. What project delivery approach should be used, based on answers to Paragraphs 1 and 2, above, and on owner's wishes in general?

a. Design-award-build approach.

NOTE:
When this standard approach is used, the owner does not enter into a construction contract with a prime contractor until the owner's design professional has completed the construction documents and all other design work [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches (AIA 1987); see also § 30D.11[1]].

b. Design and build approach.

NOTE:
Under a design-build contract, a single contractor assumes responsibility for the design and construction of the project. This approach is often used for large construction projects, such as industrial plants, to provide complete coordination of the many phases of the work [see § 30D.11[2]].

c. Fast track approach.

NOTE:
Fast track contracts provide for the commencement of the construction work while the design professional is still preparing the design documents. This approach is intended to shorten the duration of the project when, for example, strict time limits apply to land-use entitlements [see § 30D.11 [3]]. Frequently, an owner utilizing the fast track approach will enter into multiple prime contracts covering different phases of the work [see § 30D.11 [4]], and will retain a construction manager to coordinate the design and construction work [see § 30D.11[5]].

4. Will owner utilize a single construction contract or multiple prime contracts?

NOTE:
A single contract should be used when one prime contractor is to supervise the work. Alternatively, the owner may wish to award a separate prime contract for each of the primary areas of work to be performed [see § 30D.11[4]].

Although this chapter assumes that only one prime contract will be used, the coverage also applies to projects involving multiple prime contracts (unless the discussion indicates otherwise).

5. What type of construction contract (based on compensation of contractor) will be used?

a. Stipulated sum (or "lump sum") agreement.

NOTE:
Under a stipulated sum agreement, the contractor performs the construction work for a specified sum that includes the contractor's costs, overhead, and profit. This type of agreement is almost always used when the prime contractor is selected by competitive bidding [see § 30D.111, P 3].

b. Cost-plus contract, with or without guaranteed maximum price.

NOTE:
Under a cost-plus contract, the prime contractor receives the cost of the construction work and a fee, in the form of a fixed amount or a percentage of construction cost, for overhead. A ceiling (a "guaranteed maximum price") may be placed on the amount of fees that will be reimbursable [see § 30D.12[2]].

6. Will owner hire a construction manager?

NOTE:

A construction manager is responsible for overseeing the entire construction project. These managers are often used in connection with design and build or fast track delivery approaches, or with relatively large projects in general, when the parties desire to (1) relieve the owner and prime contractor from administrative duties, and (2) provide for an independent review of the prime contractor's performance [see § 30D.11[5]].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.111

§ 30D.111 Method of Selecting Contractor and Related Bidding Requirements

NOTE:
This Section sets forth preliminary determinations that may assist the attorney and client in deciding on a method for the selection of a prime contractor. For a procedural guide to the selection of a contractor, see Section 30D.121.

1. Concerning project design work:

a. Has owner already retained a design professional [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals]?

b. Does owner intend to have contractor perform design work [see 30D.110, P 1]?

2. How will prime contractor be selected?

a. Competitive bidding [see P 4, below].

NOTE:
The head-to-head competition that occurs during the competitive bidding process is intended to produce the lowest realistic contract price consistent with marketplace conditions [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.1, Delivery Approaches, App. C (AIA 1987); see also § 30D.22[2]].

b. Direct selection of one capable contractor [see § 30D.22[3]].

3. If owner selects competitive bidding:

a. Who will be invited to submit bids?

(1) All licensed contractors in area (open bidding); or

(2) Selected, pre-screened contractors (restrictive or closed bidding).

NOTE:
The prequalification process is designed to identify prospective contractors who have the experience, reputation, and other qualifications necessary to complete the owner's project [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiations; see also App. A (illustrative contractor's qualification statement)].

b. What will be the basis for bid price?

(1) Project as specified; or

(2) Alternative cost estimates based on:

NOTE:
An alternate bid is an amount bid for a specified change in the proposed project drawings and specifications [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982); see also § 30D.13 [4]]. For example, an owner may list a series of similar project alternatives, each of which contains a different number of structures. In that case, the instructions to bidders [see § 30D.120, P 3] should state which alternates are preferred if bids do not go above a specified amount [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21 Prac. Law. No. 2 (March 1, 1975) at 35]. The AIA and AGC recommend that owners solicit alternate bids only when they are necessary to insure a proposal within a limited budget or to reach an important decision concerning materials or processes, and further recommend that owners keep the number of alternates to a minimum and avoid complex alternates [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

(a) Alternative methods of construction; or

(b) Different types of equipment and materials.

c. Will time for performance be an element to be bid on?

d. Who will be designated to receive bids?

NOTE:
There are no legal requirements governing bid recipients. It is likely that the owner or design professional (or a designated member of their staffs) will receive the bids.

e. What deadline should invitation indicate for submission of bids?

f. When should bids be opened?

NOTE:

Normally, bids should be opened immediately after the deadline in order to prevent any possibility of bid tampering and eliminate disputes with respect to late bids. Further, the bids should be opened in the presence of the bidders (public bidding) [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

g. Will owner accept late bids?

NOTE:

In the construction industry, the prevailing view is that owners should automatically reject any bids received after the applicable deadline for submission to prevent bid shopping by late bidders [Acret, Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, ch. 3, Private Contract Disputes (Cal. C.E.B. 2nd ed. 1990)].

4. Concerning bidding documents:

a. How will bidders examine or obtain bidding documents, e.g.:

(1) Sent with letter inviting bids;

(2) Available for inspection at offices of owner, design professional, or builders' exchange?

b. What will be amount of refundable deposit for documents?

c. What is deadline for return (in good condition) of project documents by unsuccessful bidders?

5. Concerning bid security [see § 30D.24]:

a. What will be required amount?

b. What form must it be in?

(1) Bid bond.

(2) Cash.

(3) Certified check.

(4) Bank draft.

(5) Cashier's check.

(6) Money order.

6. Should owner require contractor to provide performance bond and/or labor and material payment bond [see § 30D.24[4]]?

1. What procedures will contract documents establish for authorizing extra work or other changes in work (including adjustments to contract price or time of completion) [see § 30D.14]?

a. Who will have power to issue written change order?
(1) Owner.

(2) Design professional.

(3) Both of the foregoing.

b. What form of written change order will be used?

NOTE:
Most general contractors and active developers have their own change order forms.

c. If contract documents will permit use of oral change orders, should they be:

(1) Made by owner and/or design professional; and

(2) If made by design professional, should contract require approval by owner before work commences?

2. Should contract documents favor owner by prohibiting:

a. Issuance of written change order by anyone not expressly authorized to do so [see P 1a, above]; and

b. Compensation for extra work ordered by any unauthorized person?

3. Regarding responsibility for potential problems with subsurface conditions, should construction contract contain "changed conditions" clause that provides for equitable adjustment of contract price following discovery of unusual subsurface conditions [see § 30D.115, P 3b]?

1. What portions of project work will be performed by subcontractors?

Subcontractors are usually paid monthly progress payments, and are typically required to submit an application for each payment. After completing the work, the subcontractor may be required to submit evidence that all known indebtedness connected with his or her work has been satisfied [see, e.g., App. F (AIA Doc. 3. Will subcontractor be charged for using general (prime) contractor's equipment?

4. How will contractor authorize additional or extra work?

a. Written order signed by contractor and/or owner.

NOTE:
In this case, the contractor should be required to give the owner prior written notice of the order.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.115

§ 30D.115 Miscellaneous Considerations

1. Does proposed work involve:

a. Government contract [see Ch. 90, Government Contracts]?

b. Home improvement, swimming pool, or specialty work [see § 30D.10[4]; see also Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts]?

c. Single-family dwelling to be retained by owner for at least one year [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164]?

NOTE:
Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of such a dwelling, and any changes to such a contract, must be evidenced in writing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a)]. The writing must be signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a)] and must contain (1) specified information regarding the contractor and the work, (2) official notices regarding the mechanics' lien laws and the value of commercial general liability insurance encouraging the owner to verify the contractor's insurance coverage and status, and (3) a notice describing the right of the owner to require the contractor to provide performance and payment bonds [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b), (d)]. For further discussion, see § 30D.229[1][b][iii].

2. If project involves joint venture between two or more contractors or other construction professionals [see § 30D.31]:

a. Do contractors possess joint venture license?

b. If contractors have yet to obtain joint venture license:

(1) Does each potential joint venturer possess current contractor's license?

(2) Does at least one potential joint venturer hold license in same classification as that desired for joint venture license?

3. How will owner allocate responsibility for potential problems with subsurface conditions [see § 30D.13[5]]?

a. Will owner shift responsibility to bidders by:

(1) Requiring them to conduct independent soil investigations; or

(2) Expressly disclaiming owner's liability for accuracy of owner's report?

NOTE:
If either of the foregoing approaches is used to shift the risk of unforeseen subsurface conditions from the owner to the bidders, construction costs will increase because interested bidders, when making their bids, will take into account the increased risk and the soils report preparation costs [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender).

b. Will owner bear risks by agreeing to inclusion in construction contract of "changed conditions" clause that:

(1) Permits contractor to claim equitable adjustment of contract price following discovery of unusual subsurface conditions;

(2) Requires prompt notice to owner of the discovery; and

(3) Prohibits action on unanticipated conditions until owner makes determination regarding right to equitable adjustment?

4. How will contract price be paid to contractor?

NOTE:
The manner in which progress or other payments are to be made to the contractor will, in many cases, be determined by the manner in which the lending institution requires the construction loan proceeds to be disbursed. For a discussion of the various methods lending institutions use for the disbursement of construction loan funds, see Ch. 30A, Construction Financing **.

a. In progress payments as specified stages of construction are completed [see § 30D.221[1][c][ii]].

b. In progress payments equal to specified percentage of value of work completed during identified time period [see § 30D.221[1][c][iii], [iv]].

c. Under "voucher system" directly to subcontractors and suppliers.

d. Under "warrant system" reimbursing contractor for expenses and costs actually paid.

e. Pursuant to terms of joint (builders') control agency agreement [see Ch. 30E, Joint (Builders') Control Agreements].

5. Do any of following types of governmental regulations and requirements apply to proposed project [see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits]?

a. Zoning requirements.

b. Setback and parking requirements.

c. Requirements of local building codes and regulations.

d. Local, regional, state, and federal environmental requirements.

e. Licensing requirements for members of project team.

6. Is owner required to obtain security for payment obligations under contract [see Civ. Code § 3110.5]? If so, owner must:

NOTE:
Generally, the owner must provide security if the contract does not exceed $5 million if the owner's interest is a fee simple absolute interest, or $1 million if the owner's interest is less than a fee simple interest (including a leasehold interest) [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)]. The requirement does not apply to contracts for construction of single-family residences, public works projects, or housing developments that are eligible for a density bonus [Civ. Code § 3110.5(e)]. For coverage of the owner's obligation to provide security for its contractual payment obligations, see § 30D.10[6].

a. Provide original contractor with certified copy of recorded construction mortgage or deed of trust, which must disclose amount of construction loan [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)].

b. Determine amount of security required based on amount of contract, either [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)]:

(1) Not less than 25 percent of contract price if project is to be substantially completed within six months; or

(2) Not less than 15 percent of contract price for all other contracts.

c. Determine appropriate form of security [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)-(3)]:

(1) Payment bond;

(2) Irrevocable letter of credit; or

(3) Escrow account.

§ 30D.120 Preparing or Selecting Bidding and Contract Documents

NOTE:

This Section covers the preparation and selection of the bidding and contract documents. As a practical matter, these two sets of project documents should be prepared at roughly the same time because the vast majority of the bidding documents will eventually become contract documents.

For a guide to the solicitation of bids, see § 30D.121.

1. Insert following (if applicable) into at least one of the bidding documents discussed in remainder of this Section:

a. If multiple prime contracts will be used, or if owner will perform part of work, include identification of:

NOTE:

When multiple prime contracts are used, the owner awards separate contracts to different contractors, with each contract covering a different portion of the work [see § 30D.11 [4]]. In that case, it is obviously extremely important that the bidding documents describe the division of work so that bidders know exactly what portion they are bidding on [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

(1) Separate elements of work.

(2) Party responsible for coordinating work of prime contractor(s) and owner.

b. Provision reserving right of owner to reject any and all bids [see § 30D.200[1][f]].

2. If competitive bidding will be used, prepare one of following invitations for bids:

a. Letter inviting bids from prime contractors selected by owner or design professional [see § 30D.200].

b. Formal public notice or advertisement inviting bids [see § 30D.201].

NOTE:
Public advertisements for bids are rarely used in connection with private construction projects [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

3. Prepare or obtain standardized, preprinted instructions to bidders, and include in them information concerning following matters:

NOTE:
The instructions to bidders should set forth in detail information concerning the preparation, submission, and consideration of bids. The following list is based on the contents of the commonly-used Instructions to Bidders prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see AIA Doc. A701; see also Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, Ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)].

a. Relevant definitions.

b. Procedure for examination by bidders of bidding documents.

c. Representations of bidders that they have:

(1) Read bidding documents; and

(2) Become familiar with project site.

d. Bidding procedures, including submission, execution, withdrawal, modification, and opening of bids.

e. Substitutions of specified materials or supplies [see P 7, below].

f. Qualifications of bidders.

g. Rejection of bids.

h. Addenda to bidding documents [see § 30D.202].

i. Return of bidding documents.

j. Procedures for clarification of bidder's questions.

k. Submission of post-bid information by successful bidder, such as:

(1) Statement of construction costs.

(2) Description of work to be performed by contractor.

(3) List of names of subcontractors and suppliers of materials.

l. Performance bond and labor and material payment bond requirements.

m. Schedule of drawings, if not contained in another contract document.

4. Prepare or obtain standardized contractor's qualification statement [see App. A (AIA Doc. A305)].

NOTE:

A contractor's qualification statement contains questions concerning the organization, history, experience, operational methods, character, and financial references of the contractor [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.91 (AIA 1994)]. The owner may use the completed statements to evaluate the contractors' financial responsibility.

5. Prepare rough draft of, or select particular standardized version of, contract to be executed by owner and successful bidder.

NOTE:

This chapter reproduces standardized owner-contractor forms prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see Apps. C, D], the Engineers Joint Contract Documents Committee [see §§ 30D.224, 30D.226], and the Associated General Contractors of America [see § 30D.228]. It also includes custom-drafted (that is, nonstandardized) construction contracts [see §§ 30D.221-30D.223].

6. Instruct design professional to prepare project drawings pursuant to his or her contract with owner [see § 30D.13[4]].

7. Have design professional prepare specifications [see § 30D.13[4]] which, if desired, adopt one of the following methods for specifying acceptable alternative materials and supplies [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

a. Insert "or approved equal" after each specification, but only if none of remaining alternatives listed below can be used.

NOTE:

The AIA has noted that use of the foregoing phrase, without prior determination of acceptable materials or products, often leads to differences of opinion concerning the acceptability of a contractor-proposed substitute, and that it should be used with caution [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

b. If only one product will suffice, utilize "closed specifications" that:

NOTE:

Narrowing the choices in this fashion may increase costs [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

(1) List one acceptable trade name for each item; and

(2) Prohibit substitutions.

c. Set forth "contractor's option specifications" that list trade names of all acceptable products.

d. Adopt "product approval specifications" that:

(1) List one or more acceptable trade names for each product;

(2) Permit bidders to submit written proposals for substitutions at specified time before deadline for submission of bids; and

(3) Allow bidders to use substitutes in their bids if substitution proposal is approved by addendum.

e. Use "substitute bid specifications" that:

(1) List one or more acceptable trade names for each product; and

(2) Require bidder to use those specified products in base bid, unless:
(a) Bidder attaches substitution proposal to bid;

(b) Proposal indicates how base bid would be affected if proposal is accepted; and

(c) Proposal is accepted.

8. Assemble information regarding bid security, including, if applicable, blank bid bond form [see § 30D.24[1]].

9. Prepare information concerning any performance bond and labor and material payment bond requirement [see § 30D.24[2]].

10. Prepare or obtain standardized general conditions of construction contract.

NOTE:
This chapter reproduces preprinted general conditions prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)] and the Engineers Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) [see § 30D.226 (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8)]. It also includes a cross reference sheet, prepared by the EJCDC, that indicates where specified topics are covered in the two foregoing documents [see § 30D.227 (EJCDC Doc. 1910-11)].

11. If necessary, prepare supplementary conditions that modify or expand general conditions [see § 30D.13[3]].

12. Draft any desired changes to other standardized documents mentioned above.

13. Confirm that all project documents are consistent.

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.121

§ 30D.121 Selecting Prime Contractor by Competitive Bidding

NOTE:
As an alternative to the competitive bidding method of contractor selection, the owner and design professional may select one contractor who they know to be capable of performing the proposed work, and then negotiate solely with that contractor [see § 30D.22[3]].

1. Have design professional or owner solicit bids as follows:

NOTE:
When soliciting bids, the owner should not state or imply that he or she will accept the lowest bid. The selection should be based not only on the bid amount but also on the bidders' qualifications. Thus, the owner should provide in the bid invitation or advertisement [see P 2a, b, below] that the bid will go to the lowest responsible bidder (or similar wording), and specifically reserve the right to reject any and all bids [see § 30D.22[2]].

a. If bidding is to be restricted to selected bidders, mail bid invitation letters (and contractor qualification statements, if desired) [see § 30D.120, P 4] to those bidders.

NOTE:
The design professional ordinarily helps the owner select prospective bidders. The bidders should have the ability, experience, reputation, financial integrity, and other qualifications necessary to complete the owner's project.

An owner may distribute contractor qualification statements before issuing invitations to bid, in which case the completed qualification statements are used to select the contractors who will actually be invited to bid on the project. More commonly, the owner will distribute blank qualification statements along with the bid invitations, and require the bidders to submit the completed statements along with their bids [see P 9, below] or after the submission of the bids but before the award of the construction contract.

b. If bidding is to be open to all licensed contractors in area, publish formal notice inviting bids in:

NOTE:
Although public advertisements for bids may be used in connection with private construction projects, it is much more common to restrict the bidding in the manner described in P 1a, above [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

(1) Local construction industry periodical; or

(2) Newspaper.

2. Provide invited bidders with opportunity to inspect (and obtain copies of) bidding documents [see § 30D.120].

3. If desired, demand refundable deposit for bidding documents.

4. If any bidder requests extra copies of bidding documents, consider charging bidder for them.

5. Provide potential subcontractors, material suppliers, and vendors with opportunity to review project documents at offices near project site.

NOTE:
These potential participants in the construction project may be approached at this stage by the owner, design professional, or the prime contract bidders.

6. If owner desires to extend original deadline for receipt of bids, notify bidders and potential bidders as soon as possible before original deadline.

NOTE:
The AIA and AGC recommend that this notification be given at least three working days before the original deadline [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

7. Consider holding pre-bid conference to answer bidders' questions orally.

8. If any project documents must be modified:

a. Prepare addendum in written and/or graphic form [see § 30D.202].

b. Send addendum to every potential bidder.

NOTE:
An addendum should not be issued later than four working days before the scheduled deadline for receipt of bids, except to withdraw the request for bids or to postpone the deadline for receipt [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

c. Assemble record of addenda.

9. Require delivery of bids and bid security to designated place, not later than a specified time.

NOTE:

A contractor whose license has been suspended or revoked for disciplinary reasons within the last eight years must disclose that fact in writing, whether or not the suspension or revocation was stayed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.1(a), (b)]. For further discussion of these requirements, see § 30D.10[5].

10. Open bids at specified time.

NOTE:

The bid opening may be public or private. The AIA and AGC suggest that the bids be opened in the presence of the interested bidders [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contracts Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)]. At a public opening, the bids are read aloud by the design professional or owner. He or she should announce what each proposal indicates, and indicate whether or not the bidder has provided all required information, bonds, securities, and attachments. The AIA and AGC advise against making any additional statements regarding the bidders or identifying a bid as the low bid [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.91 (AIA 1994)]. A private opening attended by the owner and design professional (and perhaps by other parties) may be more informal [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.91 (AIA 1994)].

11. If bids are not opened in presence of all interested bidders, furnish tabulation of all bids to each bidder shortly (e.g., 10 days) after bid opening date [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1995)].

12. After bid opening, review bids (and accompanying qualifications statements, if applicable) with owner and design professional, paying particular attention to following issues for each bidder:

a. Net worth and financial ability.

b. General experience as contractor.

c. Similar projects previously completed, and opinions of occupants of those projects.

d. Reputation among subcontractors and material suppliers for satisfying payment obligations and for quality of work.

e. Mechanics' liens and collection problems of subcontractors and material suppliers who performed labor or furnished material for previous projects constructed by contractor.

NOTE:

As with the information described in P 12d, above, the best source of this information will be the municipal and superior court plaintiff/defendant indices and local subcontractors and material suppliers. For other potential sources, see P 12g, below.

f. Contractor's general credit history.

NOTE:
The contractor's general credit history can be determined from a review of a credit report obtained from a credit bureau. It is highly desirable to do this in order to make sure that the contractor is a responsible party with whom to deal.

g. Existence of any complaints filed against contractor with nearest office of:

(1) Contractors' State License Board [see § 30D.21[1]; see also Ch. 88, Licensing of Contractors].

(2) Better Business Bureau.

h. Ability of bidder to post any required performance and payment bonds for project [see § 30D.24[2]].

i. Legal status of contractor (e.g., joint venturer) [see § 30D.31].

13. Select two or three lowest bidders.

14. Have owner or design professional visit projects previously completed by each finalist and interview their owners, or take other additional steps to investigate finalists.

15. If necessary, assist owner in negotiations with finalists.

NOTE:
Assuming the owner is not obligated by the bid documents to accept the low bid [see § 30D.200[1][f]], the owner will commonly negotiate with one or more of the bidders after the bids have been opened. The owner may attempt to obtain a lower bid from the lowest responsible bidder or from one of the other bidders, or may simply wish to negotiate minor changes with the lowest responsible bidder [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.91 (AIA 1994)].

16. Have owner select lowest responsible bidder [see § 30D.200[1][f]].

NOTE:
Alternatively, the owner may wish to reject all bids [see § 30D.200[1][f]].

17. Have owner or design professional notify successful bidder in writing of award of construction contract [see Southern Cal. Acoustics Co. v. C.V. Holdler, Inc. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 719, 722, 79 Cal. Rptr. 319 (silence in face of offer is not acceptance unless it would be understood as acceptance because of parties' relationship or previous course of dealing)].

2. Insist that each unsuccessful bidder return project documents:

    a. When contract is awarded; or

    b. When bidder is eliminated from consideration.

3. Return document deposit [see § 30D.121, P 3] to each unsuccessful bidder who returns project documents in good condition within specified period of time.

4. Retain bid security of successful bidder until he or she signs construction contract.

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.123

§ 30D.123 Executing Contract Documents and Commencing Work

1. If owner wishes to authorize commencement of work before execution of contract, prepare and have owner execute and issue letter of intent to contractor [see § 30D.220].

NOTE:

Owners frequently use letters of intent to authorize contractors to commence construction on a limited basis prior to the execution of a more formal form of construction agreement. This may be done for a variety of reasons, such as an anticipated delay in the completion of the final drawings and specifications (which will be a part of the more formal construction contract package) or a desire to have the construction work performed before the rainy season. For further discussion, see Section 30D.220[1].

2. Have parties execute owner-contractor agreement.

3. Have parties initial and date drawings and specifications as they exist at time contract is signed.

NOTE:

This will prevent the initial documents from being confused with any addenda and further drawings and specifications that are prepared during the course of the construction work [Acret, Attorney's Guide to California Construction Contracts and Disputes, ch. 2, Drafting Construction Contracts (Cal. C.E.B. 2d ed. 1990)].

4. Have contractor obtain and transmit performance and labor and material payment bonds [see § 30D.24[2]].

5. Require contractor to:

a. Obtain liability and property damage insurance; and

b. File certificate of insurance with owner.

6. Have contractor obtain and pay for all required permits.

NOTE:

For a detailed discussion of permits that are commonly required in connection with construction projects, see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits .

As a result of a construction inspection, an enforcement agency [see Health & Safety Code § 19870(b)(2) (definition)] must not impose a new or modified building standard that is different from those specified in the drawings and specifications approved during plan checking functions for which a building permit is issued, unless any of certain specified circumstances exists [see Health & Safety Code § 19870(a)].

7. Review contractor's list of subcontractors with owner and, if appropriate, assist owner in exercising right to reject subcontractor [see § 30D.30[2]].

8. Instruct owner to review and approve any drawings, estimates, and schedules that contractor is required to submit.

9. Instruct owner to apply for permanent services to work site (e.g., electricity and telephone).

10. Advise owner to file copies of all project insurance policies with contractor.

11. If contract does not specify date for commencement of work:

a. Decide on date; and

b. Prepare notice to proceed and have owner execute it and issue it to contractor [see § 30D.231].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Procedural Guide

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.124

§ 30D.124 Executing Subcontracts

NOTE:

When a subcontractor makes a bid to a general contractor knowing the general contractor will rely on it in making the bid for the general contract, the subcontractor is estopped from revoking the bid and is bound by it [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 413, 333 P.2d 757] .

The following procedure for approving and retaining subcontractors is commonly followed, and is required by the American Institute of Architect's General Conditions of the Contract for Construction [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), Art. 5].

1. As soon as practicable after award of contract, require contractor to provide list of proposed subcontractors.

NOTE:

In most cases, bidders will have been required to submit a list of proposed subcontractors along with their bids. In that case, the bidding documents should have reserved to the owner the right to approve the proposed subcontractors, and the list would have been one of the factors considered by the owner in selecting the bidder.

2. Have design professional promptly provide contractor with written indication of:

a. Owner or design professional's approval or rejection of each proposed subcontractor; and

b. Authorization to execute contracts with accepted subcontractors.

NOTE:
Failure of the owner or design professional to reply promptly will constitute notice of no reasonable objection [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 5.2.1].

3. If owner or design professional has reasonable objection to any proposed subcontractor, have contractor promptly suggest substitute.

NOTE:
The contractor may not unilaterally change a subcontractor if the owner or design professional makes reasonable objection to the proposed substitute [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 5.2.4].

4. If proposed but rejected subcontractor was reasonably capable of performing work:

a. Increase or decrease contract sum and contract time by any difference occasioned by change;

b. Issue appropriate change order before commencement of substitute subcontractor's work; and

c. Notify contractor of authorization to execute subcontract.

NOTE:
The owner or design professional is not required to allow an increase in the contract sum or contract time for a change in subcontractor unless the contractor acted promptly and responsively in submitting names of alternative subcontractors [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 5.2.3].

5. If proposed substitute is unacceptable, encourage parties to agree on another subcontractor.

NOTE:
Because the subcontractor will enter into a contractual relationship with the contractor and not with the owner or design professional, the owner and design professional should not require the contractor to contract against his or her will with a particular subcontractor [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 5.2.2].

a. Survey project site;

b. Conduct soil tests; and

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.130

§ 30D.130 Supervising or Administering Construction Work

NOTE:

The extent of the design professional's role as project supervisor will usually depend on the make-up of the project team. When a prime contractor is involved, the design professional's responsibility for the construction work is usually limited to observing and administering the progress of the work [see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, ch. 24, Construction Contracts; (Bancroft-Whitney 2d ed. 1990); see also Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals].

Under the General Conditions of the Contract of Construction prepared by the American Institute of Architects, the design professional provides administration of the contract as described in the contract documents. He or she, as an owner's representative, will visit the site at appropriate intervals to become generally familiar with and keep the owner informed about the progress and quality of the work, and to guard the owner against defects and deficiencies. The design professional will not have control or charge of, nor be responsible for, construction means and methods and safety procedures [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), PP 4.2.1, 4.2.2].

1. Monitor compliance of design professional with construction supervision or administration responsibilities (if any) set forth in owner-design professional agreement, such as obligation:

a. To visit site to observe work and to determine whether or not it is being performed in accordance with the construction contract.

b. To prepare field reports on work progress.

c. To review contractor's applications for payment.

2. Instruct design professional to review contractor's applications for payment and, if application is in order, issue certificates of payment.

NOTE:

Contractors typically receive progress payments for their work on construction projects. Normally, the contractor must submit an application for a progress payment to the design professional. If the design professional determines that the contractor has adequately performed the work described in the application, he or she will indicate this approval by issuing a certificate of payment (or other written payment recommendation). The certificate is then presented to the owner for payment. Unless otherwise provided in writing, the payment by the owner of progress payments is subject to statutory restrictions [see Civ. Code § 3260.1(b); see also § 30D.221[1][c][i]]. For further discussion, see Sections 30D.221[1][c] and 30D.226[1][d].

The contractor's applications for payment will include amounts owed by the contractor to the subcontractors pursuant to the contractor-subcontractor agreement [see § 30D.30].

3. Instruct design professional to notify owner regarding extent of contractor's compliance with conditions stated in prime contract for reduction in amount of retainage when work reaches point at which contract calls for reduction [see § 30D.221[1][c][iii]].

4. Advise owner to comply with contractual procedures for approving extra work or changes in work [see § 30D.14].

a. Issue, or have design professional issue, written change order for extra work or other changes in work occurring after execution of contract documents.

b. Avoid oral change orders.

c. Do not pay for any changes not done pursuant to written change order.

5. Notify owner of his or her obligation to notify prime contractor and construction lenders of any change in contract that has effect of increasing price stated in contract by 5 percent or more [Civ. Code § 3123(c)].

6. If one or more construction loans are obtained after commencement of construction, instruct owner to provide name and address of construction lender(s) to each person who has given owner a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(n); see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens].

NOTE:
The following procedures are based on the provisions of the General Conditions of the Contract of Construction prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see App. A (AIA Doc. A201-1997), PP 9.8, 9.10].

1. After design professional receives contractor's notification of substantial completion of work, confirm that design professional satisfies contractual obligations to:

NOTE:
Under the forms prepared by the American Institute of Architects, work is "substantially complete" when the owner can occupy or utilize the work for its intended purpose [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 9.8.1].

a. Inspect work; and

b. If work is adequate, prepare certificate of substantial completion that:

NOTE:
If the design professional's inspection reveals any item, whether or not included on the contractor's list, that prevents the work from being substantially complete, the contractor must, before the certificate of substantial completion can be issued, complete or correct the item on notification by the design professional. The contractor must then submit a request for another inspection by the design professional to determine substantial completion [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 9.8.3].

(1) Establishes date of substantial completion;

NOTE:
Unless the certificate of substantial completion provides otherwise, warranties required by the contract documents will commence on the date of substantial completion [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 9.8.4].

(2) Establishes responsibilities of owner and contractor for security, maintenance, heat, utilities, damage to work, and insurance; and

(3) Fixes time within which contractor must finish all items on list accompanying certificate.

c. Submit to certificate of substantial completion to owner and contractor for their written acceptance of assigned responsibilities.

NOTE:
On acceptance, the owner must pay any retainage that applies to the work or a designated portion of the work. The payment must be adjusted for work that is incomplete or not in accordance with the requirements of the contract documents [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997), P 9.8.5].

2. Notify contractor of materials he or she must submit after completing work specified in certificate of substantial completion, including following documents:

a. Written notice that work is ready for final inspection and acceptance.

b. Application for final payment.

c. Release of liens [see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens].

d. Consent of surety (if applicable).

3. After receiving above documents:

a. Have design professional:

(1) Inspect work for compliance with certificate of substantial completion; and

(2) If work is adequate and complete, issue final certificate for payment.

b. Have owner make final payment.

4. Arrange for any required governmental pre-occupancy inspections and apply for any required certificate of occupancy or occupancy permit [see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits].

1. Instruct owner to do the following:

NOTE:
The following steps are commonly required by construction lenders as a way of protecting the priority of their deeds of trust on the lots in the subdivision over any mechanics' liens recorded against the on-site improvement work. For further discussion, see § 30D.223[1][b].

a. Retain different contractors to do off-site and on-site improvements; and

b. Instruct contractor for off-site improvements to refrain from doing any on-site improvement work.

2. After completion of off-site improvements, have owner record notice of completion and follow contract procedure for making final payment to off-site contractor [see § 30D.131].

3. On completion of each house or other on-site improvement in subdivision, have owner:

a. Record notice of completion.

b. Within 10 days of recordation, notify original contractor and any claimant other than original contractor who has provided preliminary 20-day notice that notice of completion has been recorded [see Civ. Code § 3259.2(a); see also Civ. Code § 3259.2(b) ("owner" defined for these purposes)].

NOTE:

Notice must be sent by registered or certified mail, or by first-class mail, evidenced by a certificate of mailing. Failure to give timely notice will extend the period of time in which that contractor or claimant may file a mechanics' lien or stop notice to 90 days beyond the date that a notice of completion has been recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.2(a)].

c. Thirty-one days after recordation, request mechanics' lien report on lot on which improvement was constructed.

NOTE:

The reason for waiting 31 days is that a mechanics' lien claimant has 30 days after the completion of his or her services to record a claim of lien [see Civ. Code § 3116]. For further discussion, see § 30D.221[1][c][v], and Chapter 31, Mechanics' Liens **.

d. Withhold final payment for improvement from contractor until:

(1) Lot has been freed from effects of any recorded mechanics' liens; and

(2) Contractor has delivered waiver of lien for improvement to owner.

However, if any defect amounts to a breach of contract, then this one-year guarantee will not constitute a limitation period for a breach of contract action [see *Southern Counties Gas Co. v. PART IV. FORMS
A. Bidding Procedures

§ 30D.200 Letter Inviting Construction Bids From General Contractors

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter inviting general contractors to bid on a proposed project. It may be used when (1) the prime contractor for the project is to be selected by competitive bidding [see § 30D.22[2]], and (2) invitations are to be sent only to preselected contractors. The letter is a mere request for bids rather than an offer to contract [Universal By-Products, Inc. v. City of Modesto (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 145, 155-156, 117 Cal. Rptr. 525] .

Even when the owner selects the alternative bid invitation procedure of publishing an advertisement inviting bids from all contractors in the project area [see § 30D.201], the owner or design professional may wish to send a copy of a letter invitation to contractors he or she knows might be interested in bidding on the project and are competent to construct the project, but who may have overlooked the published notice inviting bids.

The invitation to bid is only one of a number of bidding documents. The others are a contractor's qualification statement [see [d], below], instructions to bidders [see § 30D.120, P 3], a blank bid form [see § 30D.203], proposed contract documents, and addenda to the foregoing bidding documents [see § 30D.202].

[b] Use of Form as Invitation for Subcontract Bids

This form may be adapted by a general contractor for the purpose of soliciting bids for subcontracts [see § 30D.30[2]]. In that case, in addition to making appropriate changes to the existing language, the general contractor must include his or her contractor's license number in the letter [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.5].

[c] Selection of Potential Bidders

The owner and design professional should select potential bidders who have demonstrated financial capacity and integrity and an ability to construct projects similar to the one for which bids are being solicited. Further, the invitees should be licensed contractors [see § 30D.21 [4]] who have adequate staffs (including qualified supervisors). Finally, the number of invitees should not exceed the number required to insure adequate price competition [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

[d] Use of Contractor's Qualification Statement

Many owners require potential bidders to complete a contractor's qualification statement [see App. A (AIA Doc. A305)]. The statement should contain questions concerning the organization, history, experience, operational methods, character, and financial references of the contractor/bidder [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)].

An owner may distribute qualification statements before issuing invitations to bid, in which case the completed qualification statements are used to select the contractors who will actually be invited to bid on the project. More commonly, the owner will require bidders to return the completed statements along with their bids or after the submission of the bids but before the award of the construction contract. This form contains optional language requiring the submission of a qualification statement along with the bid.

[e] Contents of Letter Invitation

Although there are no requirements governing the form or contents of invitations to bid, the attorney and client should consider including the following information in the invitation, to the extent applicable [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)]:

(1) Name and location of project.

(2) Names and addresses of owner and design professional.

(3) Name and address of party making bid invitation, and date of issuance of invitation.

(4) Short description of project.

(5) Type of owner-contractor agreement to be used (that is, whether owner will use one or multiple prime contracts).

(6) Date, place, and time for receipt of bids.

(7) Indication of whether or not opening of bids will be public.

(8) Place and requirements for obtaining bidding documents.

(9) Amount and type of deposit for bidding documents.

(10) Locations where bidding documents may be examined.

(11) Requirements governing submission of proposals.

(12) Bid security requirements.

(13) Statement regarding right of owner to accept or reject bids.

(14) List of applicable laws and regulations.

[f] Lowest Responsible Bidder and Rejection of All Bids

It is important that the owner not create the impression that the contract will automatically be awarded to the lowest bidder. Instead, the owner should reserve the right to reject any and all bids, and to award the contract to other than the low bidder. This form contains such a provision. By following this approach, the owner will be able to consider all relevant information, including contractor's qualification statements [see [d], above], and will not be forced to accept a low but otherwise inadequate bidder. The owner should not exercise these rights, however, in order to accept a bid that was not submitted before other bids were made public, or solely to obtain an estimate of the cost of the proposed work [see Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

The language providing for an award to other than the low bidder may indicate that the contract will be awarded, if at all, to the lowest responsible bidder, the lowest qualifying bidder, or the lowest and best bidder. This approach is based on the mandatory bidding procedure for public contracts, which requires that the contract be awarded to the "lowest responsible bidder" [see Pub. Contract Code § 10180]. For coverage of that procedure, see Volume 16, Chapter 90, Government Contracts.

[g] Bid Bond

Owners frequently require bidders to provide a bid bond. The bond guarantees the owner that the successful bidder will execute the construction contract and furnish performance and payment bonds (if required) within a specified period of time. If the bidder fails to do so, he or she must forfeit the penal sum of the bond. This sum is an amount (up to the amount of the bid security) equal to the difference between the successful bid and the next bid (but not exceeding the amount of the bond) [see § 30D.24 [1]; see also Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

PART IV. FORMS
A. Bidding Procedures

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.201

§ 30D.201 Advertisement Inviting Construction Bids

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a public advertisement soliciting bids from general contractors for a specified private construction project. It is designed to be published in a newspaper or a trade periodical circulated among contractors in the area where the project is to be located. Even when the owner publishes such an advertisement, the owner and/or design professional may choose to send letters inviting bids as well [see § 30D.200[1]].

The advertisement should contain the same information that is commonly included in an invitation to bid [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 2.7, Bidding and Negotiation (AIA 1987)]. For a list of that information, see Section 30D.200[1][e].

[b] Comparison of Public Advertisements and Letter Bids

The owner of a project must decide whether to send letters inviting bids to selected general contractors [see § 30D.200] or to publish a public advertisement for bids of the type illustrated in this form. Public advertisements are rarely utilized for private projects. In fact, the American Institute of Architects and the Associated General Contractors of America recommend that the letter method be used when public bidding is not required by law [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982); see [c], below]. This recommendation appears to be based on other AIA/AGC statements that encourage the owner and design professional to be selective in choosing potential bidders [see § 30D.200[1][c]]. Nevertheless, public announcements may be used under certain circumstances, such as when the owner and design professional are not familiar with local contractors, or when the proposed work does not require special skills.

An owner who wishes to publish an announcement and to limit the number or specify the quality of potential bidders may do so by specifying bidding-eligibility prerequisites (for example, membership in a stated professional association) in the public notice. The owner may also publish the notice in a medium having a limited circulation.

[c] Use of Notice on Public Projects

This form should not be used in connection with public works projects because it does not specify the prevailing rate of per diem wages for each craft that will be involved in the construction of the project, or include a statement that copies of the prevailing rates are on file at the principal office of the awarding body and available to any interested party on request [see Lab. Code § 1773.2 (requiring inclusion of foregoing information in bidding documents for public works projects)]. For a discussion of public works construction contracts, see Volume 16, Chapter 90, Government Contracts.

§ 30D.202 Addendum to Bidding Document

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a bidding addendum that may be used prior to the execution of the construction contract to modify or interpret one or more of the bidding documents. The addendum becomes part of the contract documents when the construction contract is executed. For a document that may be used following the execution of the construction contract to modify one or more of the contract documents, see Section 30D.230[2].

Each potential bidder must receive the same information concerning the project. Thus, when a bidder asks for an explanation of some provision of the bidding documents, or when a correction or change is made in the bidding documents before the bids are opened, the design professional must (1) prepare an addendum containing the explanation or describing the change or correction, and (2) mail a copy of the addendum to each prospective bidder. Each addendum should be consecutively numbered so that a bidder can be sure he or she has received all addenda that have been issued.

[b] Timing for Distribution of Addendum

As a general rule, an addendum should not be distributed less than four working days before the date set for receipt of bids, unless the addendum withdraws the request for bids or postpones the date for receipt of bids [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)].

This form is a bid form on which bidders can be required to submit their bids for a particular construction project. The instructions to bidders [see § 30D.120, P 3] usually contain instructions for the completion of the form. Each bidder should receive at least two copies of the blank bid form.

The design professional for the project usually prepares the bid forms [Recommended Guide for Competitive Bidding Procedures and Contract Awards for Building Construction (AIA Doc. A501, AGC Doc. 325, 1982)]. By requiring all bidders to use the same bid form, the owner and design professional can be assured that all bids will set forth, in a standardized format, the information required by the owner as outlined in the instructions to bidders.

B. Joint Ventures Between Contractors

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.210

§ 30D.210 Agreement to Jointly Bid and to Execute Joint Venture Agreement if Awarded Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between two general contractors to prepare and submit, or at least to attempt to prepare and submit, a joint bid for a specified construction project. Paragraph 3 of the form provides that if the joint bid is successful and the contract for the construction project is awarded to the joint bidders, they will execute a formal joint venture agreement for the construction of the project. For an illustrative joint venture agreement prepared by the American Institute of Architects (AIA), see Appendix B (AIA Document C801, Joint Venture Agreement) [see [e], below].

If the parties are unable to agree on a joint bid, Paragraph 6 of this form allows either of them to withdraw from the agreement without liability at any time before the joint bid is actually submitted to the project owner.

For a more detailed discussion of joint ventures, see Ch. 29A, Joint Ventures .

[b] Definition of Joint Venture

A joint venture is an association of two or more persons who combine their property, skill, or knowledge for the purpose of carrying out a particular business transaction or conducting business for a certain period of time [Holtz v. United Plumbing & Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 501, 506, 319 P.2d 617] . It resembles a partnership, which is an association of two or more persons to carry on (as co-owners) a business for profit [Corp. Code § 16100(7)]. The main difference between a partnership and a joint venture is that a joint venture typically is formed for a single transaction or a single series of transactions, while a partnership ordinarily is formed to engage in a continuing business for an indefinite or fixed period of time [Rickless v. Temple (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 893, 84 Cal. Rptr. 828] .

[c] Advantages of Joint Ventures in Connection With Construction Projects

The creation of a joint venture permits the joint venturers to combine their resources, experience, and expertise to work on a particular project, while allowing each of them to continue to undertake other projects outside of the joint venture [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 1.13, Interprofessional Relationships (AIA 1988)]. A joint venture can also result in decreased overhead costs for the joint venturers, and lessen their need to hire temporary help.

[d] Requirement for Joint Venture Contractor's License

Two or more contractors, each of whom is licensed to act separately as a contractor within California, must obtain a joint venture license before they may be awarded a contract jointly or otherwise act as a contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029.1(a)]. However, before obtaining a joint venture license, licensed contractors may jointly bid for the performance of work for which a joint venture license is otherwise required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029.1(b)].

A joint venture license is a license issued to any combination of individuals, corporations, partnerships, or other joint ventures, each of which holds a current, active contractor's license in good standing. The joint venture license may be issued in any classification in which at least one of the entities is licensed. An active joint venture license will be suspended automatically by operation of law during any period in which any member of the entity does not hold a current, active license in good standing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029].

A violation of the above license requirement may result in disciplinary action. Further, if a combination of licensed contractors submits a bid for the performance of work for which a joint venture license is required, a failure to obtain the license will not prevent the imposition of any penalty specified by law for the failure of a contractor/bidder to enter into a contract pursuant to the bid [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029.1(b)].

[e] Joint Venture Agreement

As mentioned in [a], above, Appendix B consists of a standardized joint venture agreement prepared by the American Institute of Architects [see AIA Doc. C801]. That form provides for the creation of a policy board consisting of a representative and an alternate representative from each joint venturer [see App. B, Art. 3]. The board is responsible, among other things, for the management of the joint venture and the project [see App. B, Art. 4].

Other significant features of the AIA joint venture agreement include the two alternative versions of Article 21, which set forth different methods of joint venture operations that specify how profits or losses are to be allocated to the joint venturers. Under the "division of compensation" method, each joint venturer is assigned, at the outset of the construction project, a portion of the total compensation for the project. This compensation may be expressed in percentages or dollar amounts, and is based on the services allocated to each party in Article 19 of the form ("Schedule of Services"). From this portion, the joint venturer must absorb all costs of the services he or she provides, except for expenses reimbursed under the construction agreement.

The second version of Article 21 provides for a "profit/loss" arrangement, under which each joint venturer bills the joint venture at cost plus a specified amount for overhead. At the conclusion of the project, any remaining profit or loss is divided among the joint venturers according to the percentages set forth in the article [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.4, Practice Topic 3.43 (AIA 1994)].

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.220

§ 30D.220 Owner-Contractor Letter of Intent

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter of intent authorizing a contractor to commence construction of a project on a limited basis. Once accepted and executed by the contractor, it becomes a bilateral contract. A letter of intent is normally used when the work must be commenced before more formal forms of agreement have been prepared. Because the content of the letter of intent is dictated by the particular facts of each case, this form is presented solely for illustrative purposes.

For a similar document that instructs the contractor to proceed with the construction work but which is not to be executed until after execution of the formal construction contract, see § 30D.231[2].

For a discussion of the Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.], see § 30D.21.

[b] Nature and Recommended Contents of Letter

Because the nature of the responsibilities and obligations of the parties to the letter of intent agreement are intended to be very limited, the letter should expressly and clearly specify all limitations. For example, the letter should (1) provide that the contractor may enter into subcontracts only on a contingency basis, and (2) prohibit the contractor from placing orders for materials that are not required for the work described in the letter. Further, it should indicate that the insurance requirements set forth in the contract documents will apply to the work performed pursuant to the letter. Finally, the letter should expressly state it will expire after a specified period of time, and that it will be superseded by the execution of the formal contract documents [see Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice, ch. 3.9, Practice Topic 3.91 (AIA 1994)].

The normal basis for payment under a letter of intent is the cost-plus method [see § 30D.12[2]]. This form provides for that method of payment.

[c] Contractor's Statement and License Number Required by California Law

California law requires a licensed contractor to include his or her contractor's license number and a statutory statement on all written construction contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5]. This form contains the required statement and a space for the contractor's license number. For a discussion of these statutory requirements, see § 30D.221[1][d].

[d] Name and Address of Owner and Construction Lender

Every written contract entered into between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner to enter his or her name, residence address, and place of business (if any) [Civ. Code § 3097(l)]. Further, unless the contract is a home improvement or service and repair contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168], the contract must also provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m)]. This form provides for the inclusion of this information.

[e] Construction of Single-Family Dwelling to Be Retained by Owner

Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, and any changes in such a contract, must be evidenced in writing and must contain certain information and notices [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164]. Because of the limited applicability of this requirement, the foregoing information is not set forth in this form. For further discussion and illustrative provisions that may be added to this form to satisfy the above requirements, see § 30D.229.

PART IV. FORMS
C. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.221

§ 30D.221 Construction Contract (Stipulated Sum)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between a property owner and a general building contractor for the construction of a building. It is a stipulated sum agreement [see § 30D.221[1][b]] that requires the owner to make progress payments to the contractor, and sets forth two alternative methods for making these payments [see § 30D.221[1][c]]. The form is designed to be the sole and only agreement of the parties [see § 30D.221[2], P 23]. Consequently, the only other documents it refers to are the drawings and specifications for the building [see § 30D.221[2], P 1]. Thus, it differs from the standardized construction contracts included in this chapter, which are designed to be used in conjunction with one or more other forms (for example, the general conditions of the contract prepared by the American Institute of Architects) [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. Although this form is particularly useful for relatively small development projects, such as the construction of a single-family dwelling, duplex, or small commercial building, it may be used for larger construction projects as well.

For provisions that may be inserted into this form when the development is to include subdivision off-site improvements, see § 30D.222[2]. For standardized stipulated sum agreements prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) and the American Institute of Architects (AIA), see § 30D.224 and Appendix C, respectively.

[b] Stipulated Sum Agreements

A stipulated or lump sum agreement specifies the amount that the contractor will receive for the construction work. This amount must cover the contractor's costs, overhead, and profit, and is normally distributed in the form of progress payments. For further discussion, see § 30D.12[1].

[c] Alternative Methods of Making Progress Payments

[i] Overview and Statutory Restrictions

Because contractors rarely have sufficient funds to finance an entire construction project, most construction contracts provide that the owner will make progress payments to the contractor. Paragraph 2 of this form provides two alternative methods for making progress payments. For discussion of these alternatives, see § 30D.221[1][c][ii] and [iii].

Except as otherwise agreed in writing, the owner must pay to the contractor, within 30 days following receipt of a demand for payment in accordance with the contract, any progress payment due under the contract, provided there is no good faith dispute between the parties relating to the payment. In the event of a dispute between the owner and the contractor, the owner may withhold from the progress payment an amount not to exceed 150 percent of the disputed amount. If any amount is withheld in violation of the foregoing requirements, the contractor will be entitled to an amount equal to 2 percent per month on the improperly withheld amount, in lieu of any interest otherwise due. Further, in an action for the collection of funds wrongfully withheld, the contractor will be entitled to his or her attorneys' fees and costs [Civ. Code § 3260.1(b); see Civ. Code § 3260(g); McAndrew v. Hazegh (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1563, 1566, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 836 (before penalty or attorneys' fees may be recovered under Civ. Code § 3260(g), contractor must establish that owner being sued has actually withheld retention proceeds/payments); see also Civ. Code § 3260.1(a) (statute applies to any contract entered into on or after January 1, 1992, for the construction of a private work of improvement)]. The alternative versions of Paragraph 2 of this form incorporate the above requirements for all progress payments, but not for the final payment due under the contract [see § 30D.221[1][c][ii]-[v] for discussion of these final payments]. It is unlikely that Civ. Code § 3260.1 applies to such a final payment. However, even if it does, § 3260.1 permits the parties to enter into a written agreement that supersedes the requirements of that statute, as discussed above.

The requirements of Civ. Code § 3260.1 do not supersede any requirement of Civ. Code § 3260 [Civ. Code § 3260.1(c)]. Section 3260 sets forth requirements governing retained funds [see § 30D.221[1][c][iv]].

If a progress payment (or other payment) has not been made under the contract, the original contractor may serve the owner with a "10-day stop work order." If the amount due is not paid within 10 days, the contractor is entitled to seek a judicial determination of liability for the amount not paid in addition to any and all other rights he or she has under law [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a), (b), (d)]. For coverage of this remedy, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens .

For purposes of Civ. Code § 3260.1, a progress payment is a payment other than a down payment that is to be made before the project is completed [Murray's Iron Works Inc. v. Boyce (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1279, 1299, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 317] . Thus, penalties for the wrongful withholding of progress payments [Civ. Code §§ 3260(g), 3260.1(b)] were inapplicable where a contract provided for "50% Deposit/Net upon Satisfactory Completion of Project" and the homeowner did not pay the total amount due. The payment that was alleged to have been withheld was a portion of the final payment. Since the payment was not due until the project was completed, it was a "final payment" and not a progress payment [Murray's Iron Works Inc. v. Boyce (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1279, 1299, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 317] .

[ii] Stages of Construction

The first alternative version of Paragraph 2 of this form sets forth the standard "stages of construction" progress payment plan insisted on by many construction lenders when they finance the construction of a relatively small building. Under this plan, 20 percent of the total contract price is paid to the contractor as each of four specified portions of the building are completed; the remaining 20 percent is retained until the project is completed and the owner and his or her construction lender are assured no mechanics' liens are outstanding against the project or the land on whic h it is located. Of course, the parties may agree on different percentages or stages.

[iii] Overview of Retention of Percentage of Progress Payment

The second alternative version of Paragraph 2 provides that on or about a specified day of each month the owner will make a progress payment to the contractor in an amount equal to a stated percentage of the value, based on the contract price, of the work completed by the contractor during the preceding calendar month. It also provides that the owner will retain the balance of the contract price for a specified period of time following the completion of the work. The retention language reflects statutory requirements governing the handling and release of retained funds [see Civ. Code § 3260; see also [iv], below].

This type of arrangement permits the owner to retain the withheld funds until the work is complete and the owner is assured that no mechanics' liens have been recorded against the property on which the construction project was built [see [v], below]. The retained sum or retainage would also compensate the owner (at least in part) for any expenses caused by the contractor's failure to complete the job.

The amount of the retainage will vary with the type of work. For small projects, it commonly amounts to 10 percent of the value of the work completed. The percentage may be reduced or eliminated after a designated portion of the work is completed [see Sweet, Your First Construction Contract, 21(2) Prac. Law. 27, 28 (Mar. 1975)]. However, any reduction of retainage should be conditioned on a finding by the design professional that the work is proceeding satisfactorily. In addition, if the contractor has furnished a bond, the contractor should be required to provide a consent of the surety to the reduction [see, e.g., AIA Doc. G707A (Consent of Surety to Reduction in or Partial Release of Retainage)].

[iv] Statutory Requirements Governing Retentions

If an owner wishes to retain a percentage of progress payments [see [iii], above] in connection with the construction of a private work of improvement, the retention must comply with statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 3260 (applicable to retainage withheld by an owner from an original contractor, or by an original contractor from a subcontractor); but see Civ. Code § 3260(i) (statute does not apply to retention withheld by a lender in accordance with a construction loan agreement)]. Except as provided below, the statutory requirements apply to contracts entered into on or after July 1, 1991 [Civ. Code § 3260(a)].

Under Section 3260, within 45 days after the date of completion, the retention withheld by the owner must be released [Civ. Code § 3260(c); see Civ. Code § 3260(a) (this version of subdivision (c) applies only to contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1993)]. For these purposes, "date of completion" means any of the following [Civ. Code § 3260(c)]:

> (1) The date of completion indicated on a valid notice of completion recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3093 [see [v], below; see also Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens].
> (2) The date of completion as defined in Civ. Code § 3086 [see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens].
> (3) The date of issuance of any certificate of occupancy covering the work by the public agency issuing the building permit.

The term "certificate of occupancy" as used in Item (3), above, is not defined by statute. However, building inspectors or other officials in many local jurisdictions issue a certificate of occupancy after a notice of completion is filed, to finalize the local review of the construction of a work of improvement.

There are two exceptions to the foregoing release requirement. First, in the event of a dispute between the owner and the original contractor, the owner may withhold from the final payment an amount not to exceed 150 percent of the disputed amount. Second, in the case of retentions withheld for any portion of the work that ultimately will become the property of a public agency, the release may be conditioned on the acceptance of the work by the public agency [Civ. Code § 3260(c)].

As a general rule, within 10 days from the time that the original contractor receives all or any portion of the retention proceeds, the original contractor must pay each subcontractor from whom proceeds have been withheld the subcontractor's share of the released funds. However, if released proceeds received by the original contractor are specifically designated for a particular subcontractor, the original contractor must distribute the proceeds to the designated subcontractor, provided the payment is consistent with the terms of the subcontract [Civ. Code § 3260(d)]. If there is a bona fide dispute between a subcontractor and the original contractor, the original contractor may withhold from that subcontractor its portion of the retention proceeds. The amount withheld from the retention payment must not exceed 150 percent of the estimated value of the disputed amount [Civ. Code § 3260(e)].

Within 10 days of receipt of written notice by the owner from the original contractor or by the original contractor from the subcontractor that any work in dispute has been completed in accordance with the terms of the contract, the owner or original contractor must advise the notifying party of the acceptance or rejection of the disputed work. Within 10 days of acceptance of the disputed work, the owner or original contractor must release the retained portion of the retention proceeds [Civ. Code § 3260(f)]. This provision is applicable only to contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1994, relating to the construction of any private work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3260(a)].

If retention payments are not made within the above time periods, the owner or original contractor withholding the unpaid amounts will be subject to a charge of 2 percent per month on the improperly withheld amount, in lieu of any interest otherwise due. Additionally, in any action for the collection of wrongfully withheld funds, the prevailing party will be entitled to his or her attorneys' fees and costs [Civ. Code § 3260(g)].

It is against public policy for any party to require any other party to waive any provision of § 3260 [Civ. Code § 3260(h)].

[v] Mechanics' Liens and Retainages

As mentioned under [iii], above, one of the reasons for retaining a percentage of each progress payment is to assure the owner that, at the time the final payment is requested, no mechanics' liens have been recorded against the property on which the construction project was built. The following is a brief explanation of the impact of mechanics' liens.

Any person who performs labor on or furnishes materials or supplies used in the construction of any work of improvement is entitled to a lien on the work of improvement for the reasonable value of his or her labor, materials, or supplies [Civ. Code § 3110]. Any lien claimant other than an original contractor must first give a written preliminary notice [see Civ. Code § 3097(a); see also Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens]. Thereafter, the claimant must record a claim of lien after completing his or her services and before the expiration of 30 days after the owner gives notice that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded. If the owner fails to give notice, the time to record a claim of lien is extended to 90 days after the work of improvement is completed [Civ. Code §§ 3116, 3259.5(a)]. If the owner occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units, he or she is not obligated to notify the claimant that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded, in which case the 30-day period within which the claimant must record a claim of lien begins to run when the notice of completion or cessation is recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3116, 3259.5(b)].

An owner who intends to record a notice of completion can assure himself or herself of the opportunity to check for recorded mechanics' liens before making the final disbursement to the original contractor by providing in the construction contract that retained funds will be withheld from the original contractor for a specified period exceeding 30 days, but not exceeding 45 days [see Civ. Code § 3260(c); see also [iv], above], after recordation of the notice of completion [see § 30D.221[2], second version of P 2]. Under this arrangement, the owner or owner's agent will be able to check, after the expiration of the 30-day lien period [see discussion of that period, above] and before the statutory deadline for the release of the retained funds, for any recorded claims of lien. Thereafter, the release or continued withholding of the retained funds must comply with the requirements set forth in Civ. Code § 3260 [see [iv], above].

If the owner or any contractor disputes the correctness or validity of the recorded claim of lien, he or she may record (either before or after commencement of an action to enforce the lien) a surety bond in a penal sum equal to 11/2 times the amount of the claim guaranteeing the payment of any sum that the claimant may recover on the claim. Thereafter, the real property is freed from the effect of the claim of lien and any action brought to foreclose the lien [Civ. Code § 3143].

For further discussion of this release bond and of mechanics' liens, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens .

[d] Contractor's License Number and Related Statutory Statement

A licensed contractor must include his or her contractor's license number on all construction contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.5]. This form provides for the inclusion of the number immediately below the contractor's signature. Further, the contractor must include a statutory statement in at least 10-point type on all written contracts with respect to which the contractor is a prime contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(a); see § 30D.221[2], P 26]. For further discussion of these requirements, see § 30D.220[1].

[e] Name and Address of Owner and Construction Lender

Every written contract entered into between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner to enter his or her name, residence address, and business address (if any) [Civ. Code § 3097(l)]. In this form, the owner's name should appear in the first paragraph, and the address or addresses should be set forth below the owner's signature. Further, unless the contract is a home improvement contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168], the contract also must provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m); see § 30D.221[2], P 25].

[f] Construction of Single-Family Dwelling to Be Retained by Owner

Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, and any changes in such a contract, must be evidenced in writing and signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a)]. The writing must include all of the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b), (d)]:

- The contractor's name, address, and license number.
- The approximate dates when the work will begin and be substantially completed.
- A legal description of the location where the work will be done.
- A statutorily-prescribed statement with the heading "Mechanics' Lien Warning," which informs the owner of the contractor's rights under the Mechanics' Lien Law and suggests measures the owner can take to protect himself or herself from liens [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b)(4) (text of statement)].
- A CSLB statement that emphasizes the value of commercial general liability insurance and encourages the owner to verify the contractor's coverage and status, and a check box indicating whether or not the contractor carries commercial general liability insurance, and if so, the insurer's name and telephone number [see § 30D.232 (form)].
- A notice in close proximity to the parties' signatures, in at least 10-point bold type or all capital letters, stating that the owner has the right to require the contractor to have a performance and payment bond and that the expense of the bond may be borne by the owner.

The contract may also contain other matters agreed to by the parties. It must clearly describe any other document incorporated into the contract. Before work begins, the owner must be furnished with a copy of the contract signed by the contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(c)].

[f.1] Owner's Obligation to Provide Security for Contractual Payment Obligations

To protect general contractors from the undesirable position of being obligated under a subcontract to make payments to a subcontractor without having the funds from the owner to do so, in some situations the owner must provide security for its payment obligations under the construction contract. Generally, this security requirement applies when the contract exceeds $5 million if the owner's interest is a fee simple absolute interest, or $1 million if the owner's interest is less than a fee simple interest (including a leasehold interest) [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)]. The requirement does not apply to contracts for construction of single-family residences, public works projects, or housing developments that are eligible for a density bonus [Civ. Code § 3110.5(e)]. The security may be in the form of a payment bond, an irrevocable letter of credit, or establishment of an escrow account [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)-(3)].

The amount of security required depends on the contract's duration. If the contract calls for the work to be substantially completed within six months, the security provided cannot be less than 25 percent of the amount of the contract price. If the contract is scheduled to take longer to complete, the security cannot be less than 15 percent of the contract price [see Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)].

For further discussion of the owner's security requirement, see § 30D.10[6].

[g] Provisions Favoring Either Party

[i] Description of Boundaries

The last (optional) sentence of Paragraph 1 of this form provides that it is the owner's responsibility to identify the boundaries of the project site. This language has been included because the owner usually specifies the location of the construction and therefore should (at least from the contractor's perspective) be held responsible for encroachments [see Acret, California Construction Law Manual, Ch. 2, What to Put In (and Keep Out of) Contracts (West 5th ed. 1997)].

[ii] Authorization of Extra Work

The attorney should select one of the two alternative extra work provisions set forth as Paragraph 3 of this form. The first version favors the contractor by authorizing compensation for extra work ordered by the owner, his or her design professional, or any public agency. The second version favors the owner by specifying that only the owner has the right to authorize compensable extra work. Note that both versions authorize written or oral requests for extra work. For provisions requiring the use of written change orders, see Article 7 of Appendix E (AIA Doc. 201-1997, General Conditions of the Contract for Construction). For further discussion of extra work and change orders, see § 30D.14.

Under the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.], an owner must notify the prime contractor and construction lenders of any changes in the contract if the change has the effect of increasing the price stated in the contract by 5 percent or more [Civ. Code § 3123(c)].

[iii] Contractor's Authority to Stop Work

Under Paragraph 15 of this form, the contractor may, by following a specified procedure, stop work on the project following any missed payment. It is possible for the parties to provide that the contractor cannot stop work over any dispute, and that the dispute must be submitted to arbitration after completion of the project [see B.C. Richter Contracting Co. v. Continental Casualty Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 491, 500-501, 41 Cal. Rptr. 98] . However, it is unlikely that a contractor would agree to this provision and thereby waive the right to rescind the contract.

[iv] Recordation of Notice of Completion

A notice of completion may be signed and verified by the owner or the owner's agent [Civ. Code § 3093]. Because the timing of the contractor's final payment depends on the recordation of the notice of completion [see § 30D.222[2], P 2; see also [c][v], above], Paragraph 17 of this form authorizes the contractor to serve as the owner's agent for this purpose so that the contractor may trigger the 35-day retention period if the owner is lax for any reason in recording the notice of completion.

[v] No Waiver by Payment

Paragraph 18 of this form provides, among other things, that the owner does not waive the right to make a claim for defective work when he or she makes a progress or final payment to the contractor. An owner who makes progress payments and does not include such a waiver in the construction contract cannot subsequently claim that the work is inadequate [see Sirch Electrical & Testing Laboratories v. Garbutt (1910) 13 Cal. App. 435, 439, 110 P. 140] .

[h] Miscellaneous Provisions

[i] Commencement of Work

The owner-prime contractor agreement should state the dates of commencement and completion of the work or provide a method for determining these times. If the contract provides for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, it must contain the approximate dates when the work will begin and will be substantially completed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b); see [f], above]. This form states that the work must commence within a specified number of calendar days after the execution of the contract, and must be completed not more than a specified number of days after commencement. It also contains optional language setting forth the approximate dates required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 [see § 30D.221[2], P 4].

If the contract is not subject to Section 7164 and the dates of commencement and completion will not be established prior to the execution of the agreement, the agreement should provide that the owner will subsequently specify the applicable dates by providing the contractor with a notice to proceed [see § 30D.231].

For a letter of intent that may be used to authorize commencement of construction work prior to the execution of the contract documents, see § 30D.220.

[ii] Arbitration

The attorney should include an arbitration provision in the contract in order to facilitate the resolution of disputes between the owner and prime contractor and avoid lengthy and costly delays resulting from litigation. The arbitration clause in this form provides that the arbitration proceedings will be governed by the Construction Industry Rules of the American Arbitration Association [see § 30D.221[2], P 19]. For further discussion of arbitration and the American Arbitration Association, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions , and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

If the contract is for work on residential property with four or fewer units and includes an arbitration provision, it must also include a disclosure statement to be initialed by both parties. The wording of the disclosure is prescribed by statute. In such contracts, both the arbitration provision itself, and the disclosure must be set out either in at least 10-point roman boldface type or in contrasting red print in at least 8-point roman boldface type. If the contract is typed, the provision and disclosure must be set out in capital letters. Failure to comply with these requirements will preclude the contractor from being able to enforce the contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191].

[2] FORM

Construction Contract (Stipulated Sum)

CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

Preamble

_____[Name] of _____ County, California ("Owner"), and_____[name] of _____ County, California ("Contractor"), agree as follows:

Construction of Building

1. Contractor will furnish all labor and materials necessary to construct [describe type of building, e.g., an apartment building] ("the Project"), according to drawings and specifications prepared by [name of architect or other design professional], for Owner on the real property [in the City of _____, or in the unincorporated area of _____,] _____ County, California, described as follows: [insert description of property; must be legal description if contract is for construction of single-family dwelling to be retained by owner for at least one year (see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b))]. [Owner will identify the property lines to Contractor, and will provide a report prepared by a licensed land surveyor and a map if there is any uncertainty concerning the property lines.]

Contract Price

2. Owner will pay Contractor $_____ (the "contract price") for labor and materials, as follows:

[EITHER, if progress payments will be made as specified portions of project are completed:]

Twenty percent when the foundations and subflooring, if required, for the project have been completed.

Twenty percent when the exterior walls for the project have been completed, the roof is finished, and the utilities have been roughed in.

Twenty percent when the interior walls of the project are ready for painting or papering and doors and windows have been installed.

Twenty percent when the project has been completed and a notice of completion, signed by Owner, has been duly recorded in the county where the project is located.

The balance at such time, at least [number, e.g., 35] days after a notice of completion of the project has been duly recorded by Owner, as Owner is assured by_____[name of title company] that the project and the real property on which it is located are free from all liens recorded or recordable pursuant to Civil Code Sections 3115-3117.

If Owner fails to make any of the first four payments described above, Contractor may submit a written demand for payment to Owner. In that case, Owner must provide Contractor with the progress payment within 30 days following receipt of the demand. Notwithstanding the foregoing, if a dispute exists between Owner and Contractor regarding any of those progress payments, Owner may withhold from the payment an amount not exceeding 150 percent of the disputed amount.

[OR, if owner will retain percentage of each progress payment (see Civ. Code § 3260):]

(a) On or about the _____ day of each month an amount equal to _____ percent of the value, based on the contract price, of all work performed on and materials actually used in the construction of the project during the preceding calendar month as certified by [Architect or other design professional]. If Owner fails to make any of these progress payments, Contractor may submit a written demand for payment to Owner. In that case, Owner must provide Contractor with the progress payment within 30 days following receipt of the demand. Notwithstanding the foregoing, if a dispute exists between Owner and Contractor regarding any progress payment, Owner may withhold from the payment an amount not exceeding 150 percent of the disputed amount.

(b) The balance within 45 days after the date of completion. For these purposes, "date of completion" means any of the following: (1) the date of completion indicated on a valid notice of completion recorded pursuant to Civil Code Section 3090; (2) the "date of completion" as that term is defined in Civil Code Section 3093; or (3) the date of issuance of a certificate of occupancy covering the Project. Notwithstanding the foregoing, if a dispute exists between Owner and Contractor, Owner may withhold from the final payment an amount not exceeding 150 percent of the disputed amount.

(c) Within 10 days of receipt of written notice by Owner from Contractor that any work in dispute has been completed in accordance with the terms of the contract, Owner must advise Contractor of the acceptance or rejection of the disputed work. Within 10 days of acceptance of the disputed work, Owner must release the retained portion of the retention proceeds.

Extra Work

[EITHER, if owner and certain others may authorize extra work:]

3. If Owner,_____[his or her] [architect or other design professional], or any public agency directs or requests that additional work not shown on the present drawings and specifications for the project be done by Contractor, the cost of the additional work will be added to the contract price and paid by Owner on completion of the additional work. The term "cost" as used in this paragraph means the actual cost to Contractor of the labor, materials, or subcontracts required for the additional work increased by [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's overhead and another [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's profits. Contractor is entitled to be paid for all additional work requested or directed, in writing or orally, by any of the persons or entities identified above. Further, any related expenses incurred by Contractor because of unusual ground conditions will be paid for by Owner as additional work done by Contractor.

[OR, if only the owner may authorize extra work:]

3. If Owner directs or requests that additional work not shown on the present drawings and specifications for the project be done by Contractor, the cost of the additional work will be added to the contract price and paid by Owner on completion of the additional work. No other person, including the project [architect or other design professional], is authorized to direct or request additional work. The term "cost" as used in this paragraph means the actual cost to Contractor of the labor, materials, or subcontracts required for the additional work, increased by 10 percent for Contractor's overhead and another 10 percent for Contractor's profits. Contractor is entitled to be paid for all additional work requested or directed, in writing or orally, by Owner. Further, any related expenses incurred by Contractor because of unusual ground conditions will be paid for by Owner as additional work done by Contractor.

Time for Completion

4. Contractor must commence work on the project within _____ calendar days after the execution of this Contract and, unless delayed by one of the causes mentioned in Paragraph 16 of this Contract, complete construction of the project in not more than _____ working days thereafter. [Add if contract is for construction of single-family dwelling to be retained by owner for at least one year (see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b)): For purposes of Business and Professions Code Section 7164(b), the approximate date when the work will begin is _____, and the approximate date when the work will be substantially completed is _____.]

Correlation Between Drawings, Specifications, and Contract

5. The drawings for the project, the specifications for the project, and this Contract are intended to supplement each other so that any work mentioned in one of those instruments but not in the others will be performed in the same manner as if mentioned in all of the instruments. If a conflict arises between the instruments, the specifications will control over the drawings, and this Contract will control over both the drawings and the specifications.

Charges and Liens

6. Contractor must pay all charges incurred by [him or her] for labor and materials used in the construction of the project as they become due. If Contractor fails to pay any such charge, Owner may pay the charge on Contractor's behalf and will be reimbursed by Contractor, on request, for the payment. Owner, however, will not be entitled to collect from Contractor any greater amount under this paragraph than the amount actually paid by Owner in settlement or discharge of the charge.

Examination by Contractor

7. Contractor has by careful examination ascertained the following: (1) the nature and location of the project; (2) the condition of the ground on which the project is to be erected; (3) the character, quality, and quantity of the materials, equipment, and facilities necessary to complete the project; (4) the general and local conditions pertaining to the project; and (5) all other matters that in any way can affect the performance of this Contract by Contractor. Contractor enters into this Contract solely because of the results of that examination and not because of any representations pertaining to the project or the completion of the project made to [him or her] by Owner or any agent of Owner and not contained in this Contract.

Indemnity Agreement

8. Contractor will indemnify and hold Owner and the property of Owner free and harmless from any and all claims, losses, damages, injuries, and liabilities arising from the death or injury of any person or persons, or from the damage or destruction of any property or properties, caused by or connected with the performance of this Contract by Contractor or Contractor's agents, subcontractors, or employees.

Workers' Compensation Insurance

9. Contractor, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, must procure and maintain during the continuance of this Contract a policy of workers' compensation or employer's liability insurance for the protection of_____[his or her] employees (including executive, managerial, and supervisorial employees) engaged in work on the project, and must, on demand, deposit with Owner a certificate evidencing the policy.

Subcontractor's Insurance

10. Contractor must require each subcontractor employed by [him or her] to perform labor on the project to do the following: (1) to procure and maintain during the performance of the labor, at the subcontractor's own cost and expense, a policy of workers' compensation or employer's liability insurance for the protection of the subcontractor's employees (including executive, managerial, and supervisorial employees) engaged in work on the project, and (2) to deposit with Contractor a certificate satisfactory to Contractor evidencing that insurance.

Fire Insurance

11. Owner, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, must procure promptly after the execution of this Contract and maintain during the continuance of this Contract a policy of fire insurance with course of construction, vandalism, and malicious mischief clauses attached, insuring the project and all materials delivered to the project site for their full insurable value with loss thereunder payable to the following, as their interests may appear: Owner; any beneficiary of a deed of trust encumbering the property on which the project is located; and Contractor.

Destruction of Project

12. If all or any portion of the project is destroyed by fire, theft, vandalism, accident, act of God, or other cause not the fault of Contractor, any work done or materials furnished by Contractor in restoring or rebuilding the project will be paid for by Owner as extra work performed by Contractor pursuant to Paragraph 3 of this Contract.

Owner's Power to Terminate Contract

13. If Contractor commits any of the acts specified in this paragraph, Owner may, without prejudice to any other rights or remedies given Owner by law or by this Contract, do the following by giving _____ days' written notice to Contractor: terminate the services of Contractor under this Contract; take possession of the project and the premises on which it is located; take possession of all materials, tools, and appliances located on the premises; and complete the project by whatever method_____[he or she] deems expedient. Contractor will be deemed to have committed an act covered by this paragraph if Contractor is adjudged bankrupt or does any of the following:

(1) Makes a general assignment for the benefit of _____ [his or her] creditors;

(2) Refuses or fails, except as provided in Paragraph 16 of this Contract, to supply enough properly skilled workers or proper materials to complete the project in the time specified in this Contract;

(3) Fails to make prompt payment to subcontractors, laborers, or material suppliers for labor performed on or materials furnished to the project;

(4) Persistently disregards any law or ordinance relating to the project or the completion of it; or

(5) Otherwise commits a substantial violation of any provision of this Contract.

Rights on Termination by Owner

14. If Owner terminates the services of Contractor under this Contract and completes the project pursuant to Paragraph 13 of this Contract, Contractor will not be entitled to receive any further payment under this Contract until the project is fully completed. On completion of the project by Owner, if the unpaid balance of the contract price exceeds the expenses incurred by Owner in completing the project, including any compensation paid by Owner for managerial, administrative, or supervisorial services in completing the project, Owner must promptly pay the excess to Contractor. If, however, on completion of the project by Owner the expenses incurred by Owner in completing the project, including any compensation paid by Owner for managerial, administrative, or supervisorial services in completing the project, exceed the unpaid balance of the contract price, Contractor must promptly pay the excess to Owner.

Contractor's Power to Terminate Contract

15. If Owner fails to pay to Contractor within _____ days after it becomes due any amount payable by Owner to Contractor pursuant to this Contract, Contractor may, by giving _____ days' [or hours'] written notice to Owner, stop work on the project. Thereafter, Contractor may use all lawful means, including actions by labor or contractors' associations induced by Contractor, to prevent further work from being done on the project until all past due payments have been received by Contractor and Owner has posted a bond satisfactory to Contractor for the payment of all amounts that will thereafter become due to Contractor under this Contract.

Unavoidable Delays and Defaults

16. Either party to this Contract will be excused for any delays or defaults by that party in the performance of this Contract that are unavoidably caused by any of the following: an act of the other party; an act of any agent of the other party; an act of any governmental authority; an act of any public enemy; an act of God; the elements; war; war defense conditions; riots; litigation; strikes; walkouts; or any other causes beyond that party's control. Each party must use reasonable diligence to avoid any such delay or default and to resume performance under this Contract as promptly as possible after any such delay or default.

Notice of Completion

17. Owner will execute, acknowledge, and record in the manner provided by law a notice of completion of the project within _____ days after final inspection and approval of the project. [Owner hereby appoints Contractor as Owner's agent to sign and record a notice of completion on Owner's behalf if Owner, following the foregoing final inspection and approval, fails to record a notice of completion. This agency is irrevocable and is coupled with an interest.]

No Waiver by Payment

18. The recordation of a notice of completion of the project by Owner, the payment to Contractor by Owner of any progress payment or the full contract price, or the occupation of the project by Owner will not relieve Contractor of liability (1) for defective materials or workmanship used in the completion of the project, or (2) for failure to construct the project according to this Contract or according to the drawings and specifications mentioned in this Contract. Acceptance by Contractor of any payment provided for in this Contract will be a representation by Contractor to Owner that all work on the project required by this Contract to be performed before the payment became due has been completed by Contractor in accordance with the terms of this Contract and in accordance with the drawings and specifications mentioned in this Contract.

[If contract is for work on residential property with four or fewer units, arbitration provision and disclosure that follows must be in 10-point boldface type or 8-point red boldface type; if contract is typed, provision must be in capital letters. (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191(a)):]

Arbitration of Disputes

19. If any dispute arises concerning the project, any provision of this Contract, or any provision of a subcontract that is subject to this Contract, the dispute will be settled by arbitration held in accordance with the Construction Industry Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association in effect at the time a demand for arbitration is filed with the Association. Any party to the dispute may file, in the manner provided by the Construction Industry Arbitration Rules of the Association, a demand for arbitration. The written decision of the arbitrator or arbitrators appointed by the Association will be final and conclusive as to all parties to the dispute. If any party fails or refuses to appear or participate in the arbitration proceedings, the arbitrator(s) may decide the dispute on the evidence presented in the proceedings by the other party or parties to the dispute. The arbitrator(s) will have the power to award to any party or parties to the dispute any sums for costs, expenses, and attorneys' fees that the arbitrator(s) deem(s) proper. Judgment may be entered on the award in any court of competent jurisdiction. This provision will be binding on Owner, Contractor, and any subcontractor or sub-subcontractor who signs this Contract or another contract that incorporates this Contract by reference.

[Include if contract is for work on residential property with four or fewer units (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191(b)):]

MECHANICS' LIEN WARNING:

Anyone who helps improve your property, but who is not paid, may record what is called a mechanics' lien on your property. A mechanics' lien is a claim, like a mortgage or home equity loan, made against your property and recorded with the county recorder.

Even if you pay your contractor in full, unpaid subcontractors, suppliers, and laborers who helped to improve your property may record mechanics' liens and sue you in court to foreclose the lien. If a court finds the lien is valid, you could be forced to pay twice or have a court officer sell your home to pay the lien. Liens can also affect your credit.

To preserve their right to record a lien, each subcontractor and material supplier must provide you with a document called a "20-day Preliminary Notice." This notice is not a lien. The purpose of the notice is to let you know that the person who sends you the notice has the right to record a lien on your property if he or she is not paid.

BE CAREFUL. The Preliminary Notice can be sent up to 20 days after the subcontractor starts work or the supplier provides material. This can be a big problem if you pay your contractor before you have received the Preliminary Notices.

You will not get Preliminary Notices from your prime contractor or from laborers who work on your project. The law assumes that you already know they are improving your property.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM LIENS. You can protect yourself from liens by getting a list from your contractor of all the subcontractors and material suppliers that work on your project. Find out from your contractor when these subcontractors started work and when these suppliers delivered goods or materials. Then wait 20 days, paying attention to the Preliminary Notices you receive.

PAY WITH JOINT CHECKS. One way to protect yourself is to pay with a joint check. When your contractor tells you it is time to pay for the work of a subcontractor or supplier who has provided you with a Preliminary Notice, write a joint check payable to both the contractor and the subcontractor or material supplier.

For other ways to prevent liens, visit CSLB's Web site at www.cslb.ca.gov or call CSLB at 800-321-CSLB (2752).

REMEMBER, IF YOU DO NOTHING, YOU RISK HAVING A LIEN PLACED ON YOUR HOME. This can mean that you may have to pay twice, or face the forced sale of your home to pay what you owe.

PART IV. FORMS
C. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.222

§ 30D.222 Contractual Provisions for Construction of Subdivision Off-Site Improvements

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains provisions for the construction of subdivision "off-site improvements" [see [b][i], below (definition)]. The attorney can create a complete contract for the construction of these improvements by substituting the provisions of this form for Paragraphs 1-3 of § 30D.221[2]. However, the contract must be supplemented by an improvement plan that describes the improvements in detail [see Gov. Code § 66456.2(d) ("improvement plan" defined); § 30D.222[2], P 1 (providing for attachment of improvement plan); see also Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation]. This form does not attempt to list or enumerate subdivision off-site improvements because the number and type of improvements will vary greatly from subdivision to subdivision, depending on local ordinances, the requirements imposed by the California Real Estate Commissioner, and the nature of the proposed subdivision.

In addition to the substitution of the provisions of this form for Paragraphs 1-3 of § 30D.221[2], the words "the off-site improvements" should be substituted for the words "the project" wherever they appear in the other provisions of § 30D.221[2]. Finally, Paragraph 11 of § 30D.221[2] dealing with fire insurance should be deleted and the remaining paragraphs of that form renumbered accordingly.

[b] Subdivision Off-Site Improvements

[i] In General

Subdivision "off-site improvements" consist of the public facilities that are reasonably necessary for the general use of lot owners in the subdivision, the local neighborhood traffic, and area drainage needs [see Gov. Code §§ 66418, 66419, 66451, 66473], such as streets, gutters, and sidewalks. Typically, the owner has these off-site improvements installed before constructing the "on-site improvements," that is, the homes or other structures on the subdivided lots. It is extremely important that the owner award the off-site and on-site improvements under separate contracts to different general engineering and/or general building contractors because that practice will give the construction lenders' deeds of trust on the subdivided lots priority over any mechanics' liens recorded against the on-site improvements [see Civ. Code § 3135]. For a discussion of the lending requirements and laws providing for that result, see [ii], below.

[ii] Use of Separate Construction Contracts

Subdividers usually arrange to have the construction of off-site improvements commenced before construction of homes or other on-site improvements on the subdivided lots [Hopkins, Selected Mechanics' Lien Priority Problems, 16 Hastings L.J. 155, 158 (1964)]. Financing for the off-site improvements is provided by the subdivider or by the formation of a special assessment district [see Ch. 30A, Construction Financing]. In the case of on-site improvements, private lenders usually provide the financing. These private lenders often record a deed of trust on all lots in the subdivision or separate deeds of trust on each of the lots in the subdivision. This recordation typically takes place after commencement of the work on the off-site improvements.

The practice of recording deeds of trust is important because of the laws governing the priority of mechanics' liens in California. With one exception (that is, when the holder of a subordinate deed of trust alters some of the standard priority rules by recording a specified type of payment bond) [see Civ. Code § 3138], a mechanics' lien has priority over any lien, mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance on the "work of improvement" and the site that attaches subsequent to the commencement of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3134; see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens]. "Work of improvement" means the entire scheme of improvement as a whole [Civ. Code § 3106]. The "commencement" of a work of improvement means doing some work and labor on the ground, the effects of which are apparent, easily seen by everybody, and easily understood by everybody as the beginning of construction [Arthur B. Siri, Inc. v. Bridges (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 599, 602, 11 Cal. Rptr. 322 ; English v. Olympic Auditorium, Inc. (1933) 217 Cal. 631, 637, 20 P.2d 946 ; Simons Brick Co. v. Hetzel (1925) 72 Cal. App. 1, 5, 236 P. 357] .

If the entire scheme of improvement for a subdivision consists of both the off-site improvements and the on-site improvements for each subdivided lot, and the off-site construction work is commenced first, all mechanics' liens will relate back to the time work was commenced on the off-site improvements and will have priority over any deeds of trust subsequently recorded on the subdivided land. However, if the contract for the construction of the off-site improvements is separate from any contract governing the construction of subdivision structures, the off-site improvements will be deemed a separate work of improvement and the commencement of work on those improvements will not constitute the commencement of the "work of improvement" of erecting the subdivision on-site improvements [Civ. Code § 3135]. For a discussion of the steps construction lenders frequently take in order to maintain this on-site/off-site separation, see § 30D.223[1][b].

[2] FORM

Contractual Provisions for Construction of Subdivision Off-Site Improvements

CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

_____[Name] of _____ County, California ("Owner"),
and_____[name] of _____ County, California ("Contractor"), agree as follows:

Construction of Improvements

1. Contractor will furnish all labor and materials necessary to construct all the improvements ("the off-site improvements") described in the improvement plan that is attached to this Agreement as Exhibit A and hereby incorporated by reference, on the real property in_____[the City of _____, or the unincorporated area of _____,] _____ County, California, shown on the Official Map of_____[name of subdivision] recorded_____[date], in Book _____ of Maps, Map No. _____, of the Official Records of that county. Contractor must construct the off-site improvements according to drawings and specifications prepared by_____[name of engineer] ("Engineer").

Contract Price

2. Owner will pay Contractor $_____ ("the contract price") for labor and materials, as follows: [set forth terms of payment (see § 30D.222[2], P 2)].

Extra Work

3. If Owner, Engineer, or any public agency directs or requests in writing that additional work not shown on the present drawings and specifications for the off-site improvements be done by Contractor, the cost of the additional work must be added to the contract price and paid by Owner on completion of the additional work. The term "cost" as used in this paragraph means the actual cost to Contractor of the labor, materials, or subcontracts required for the additional work, increased by [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's overhead and another [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's profits. Notwithstanding the foregoing, no driveways for prospective building sites may be bladed out, no pads may be leveled or rolled for any building or material stockpile, no holes for slab foundations may be dug, and no other work not described in Exhibit A that might reasonably be considered by persons engaged in the construction industry in _____ County, California to be part of any "on-site" improvement may be done by Contractor unless expressly authorized in a writing signed by both Owner and an authorized representative of_____[name of lending institution that is to make construction loans for on-site improvements].

[Continue with remaining paragraphs of § 30D.222, to extent applicable]

[Attach Exhibit A (improvement plan)]

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.223

§ 30D.223 Construction Contract (Houses in a Subdivision)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a construction contract designed for use when an owner chooses to contract directly with a general contractor for the construction of houses in a subdivision. This form assumes that detailed arrangements for the necessary construction loans will not be finalized prior to the execution of the form, and therefore provides that the contractor will (1) receive progress payments [see § 30D.223 [2], P 3], or (2) comply with any joint control agreement or other agreement for disbursement of funds required by a construction lender [see § 30D.223 [2], P 9]. If arrangements for the construction loans are completed prior to the execution of this form, the attorney should omit Paragraph 9 of this form and insert in Paragraph 3 the lender's requirements governing the disbursement of construction funds to the contractor.

[b] Possible Priorities of Mechanics' Liens Over Construction Loans

As discussed in Section 30D.222[1][b][ii], mechanics' liens on a work of improvement have priority over encumbrances that attach after the commencement of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3134; see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116]. If the off-site improvements and on-site improvements for a subdivision are constructed under separate contracts, commencement of the work on the off-site improvements does not constitute commencement of work on the on-site improvements [Civ. Code § 3135; see § 30D.222[1][b][ii]].

Because the foregoing provisions of Civil Code Section 3135 apply only to separate contracts for on-site and off-site improvements, it is unclear whether each house constructed under a subdivision development contract is a separate project for lien purposes or whether all liens, even for work on the last house built in the subdivision, relate back to the time work was commenced on the first house to be built in the subdivision. Civil Code Section 3131 does provide that if a work of improvement consists of the construction of two or more separate residential units, each unit will be considered a separate work of improvement, and the time for filing claims of liens against each residential unit will commence to run on the completion of each such residential unit. However, Civil Code Section 3131 mentions nothing about the commencement of construction of each such residential unit, and its wording suggests that it was intended to define each unit as a separate work of improvement only for completion, not commencement, purposes [see Bowman, Ogden's Revised California Real Property Law, vol. II, ch. 20, Mechanics' Liens (Cal. C.E.B. 1975)]. As a result, all liens of the contractor, subcontractors, and material suppliers for any labor performed or materials furnished for any house in a subdivision may relate back to and take priority over any deed of trust recorded after work on the first house was begun [see Hopkins, Selected Mechanics' Lien Priority Problems, 16 Hastings L.J. 155, 157 (1964)].

The law discussed above governing priorities of mechanics' liens concerns private lenders who provide financing for subdivision on-site improvements (that is, construction loans) and consequently record a deed of trust on all lots in the subdivision or separate deeds of trust on each of the lots in the subdivision. To avoid the possibility that their construction loan deeds of trust may become subordinated to mechanics' liens, most construction lenders insist that the following occur [see Hopkins, Selected Mechanics' Lien Priority Problems, 16 Hastings L.J. 155, 157 (1964)]:

(1) The off-site and on-site improvements be constructed under separate contracts [see 30D.222[1][b] [ii]];

(2) The off-site improvement contractor be careful not to perform any on-site improvement work, such as the grading of driveways;

(3) No work of any kind be done on any house in the subdivision and no materials to be used in the building of any such house be delivered to the jobsite or to property adjoining the jobsite until the construction loan deeds of trust for the houses have been recorded; and

(4) All construction loan deeds of trust be recorded at the same time, before commencement of work on any house to be built in the subdivision.

Paragraph 5 of this form provides that the contractor will not commence any work on any house in the subdivision until notified in writing by the owner to do so.

[c] Contractor's Statement and License Number

California law requires all licensed contractors to include on all written construction contracts a prescribed statement and their California contractor's license number [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5; see § 30D.229[1][b][i]]. This form contains the required statement and a space for the contractor's license number.

[d] Name and Address of Owner and Construction Lender

Every written contract entered into between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner's name, residence address, and place of business (if any) [Civ. Code § 3097(l)]. Further, unless the contract is a home improvement contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7173], the contract also must provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m)]. This form provides for the inclusion of the foregoing information.

CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT

Preamble

This Contract is entered into on_____[date], by and between_____[name] of _____ County, California ("Owner"), and_____[name] of _____ County, California ("Contractor").

Contract Price

2. Owner will pay Contractor for each house completed by Contractor pursuant to this Contract one of the following amounts, as appropriate (the "contract price"):

(1) For houses constructed pursuant to Plan A, $

_____ .

Payment of Contract Price

3. Owner will pay to Contractor the contract price for each house constructed by Contractor pursuant to this Contract in installments as follows: _____ [specify installments, e.g.:

Twenty percent when the foundations and subflooring, if required, for the house have been completed.

Twenty percent when the exterior walls have been completed, the roof is finished, and the utilities for the house have been roughed in.

Twenty percent when the interior walls of the house are ready for painting or papering and doors and windows have been installed.

Twenty percent when the house has been completed and a notice of completion, signed by Owner, has been duly recorded in the county where the house is located.

The balance at least 35 days after a notice of completion of the house has been duly recorded by Owner.]

Extra Work

4. If Owner, any authorized agent of Owner, or any public agency directs or requests that additional work not shown on the plan designated by Owner for any house be done on the house by Contractor, the cost of the additional work will be added to the contract price for the house and paid by Owner to Contractor on completion of the house. The term "cost" as used in this paragraph means the actual cost to Contractor of the labor, materials, or subcontracts required for the additional work, increased by [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's overhead and another [e.g., 10] percent for Contractor's profits. Contractor is entitled to be paid for all additional work requested or directed, in writing or orally, by any of the persons or entities identified above.

Commencement of Work

5. Contractor must not commence work of any kind under this Contract or allow any materials that are to be used in the performance of this Contract to be delivered to any of the property described in this Contract or to be delivered to any property, including any streets or alleys, adjoining the property described in this Contract until_____[he or she] has received written notice from Owner to do so.

Completion of Houses

6. Unless delayed by one of the causes mentioned in Paragraph 11 of this Contract, Contractor must complete construction of the houses covered by this Contract in not more than _____ working days after receiving a written notice from owner (pursuant to Paragraph 5 of this Contract) to commence construction.

Charges and Liens

7. Contractor must pay all charges incurred by [him or her] for labor and materials used in the construction of each house as they become due. All charges incurred by Contractor for labor or materials used in the construction of any particular house must be paid by [him or her] within [e.g., 30] days after a notice of completion of the house has been duly recorded by Owner. If a claim of lien for any such charge or alleged charge is recorded against a house, Owner will notify the Contractor in writing of the recordation of the claim. Within _____ days after receipt of that notice, Contractor must either obtain a release of the claim of lien or procure and record, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, the bond that is required by Civil Code Section 3143 to free the house and the real property on which it is located from the effects of the claim of lien and any action brought to foreclose the claim of lien. Contractor's failure to record the bond or obtain a release of the claim of lien as provided in this paragraph shall constitute a substantial breach of this Contract by [him or her].

Owner's Right to Demand Bond

8. Contractor must, on demand of Owner at any time during the continuance of this Contract, secure and furnish to Owner at Owner's sole cost and expense the following:

(1) A bond issued by a corporate surety authorized to issue surety insurance in California in an amount equal to _____ percent of the contract prices for all uncompleted houses covered by this Contract, securing the faithful performance by Contractor of this Contract; and

(2) A bond issued by a corporate surety authorized to issue surety insurance in California in an amount equal to

_____ percent of the contract prices for all uncompleted houses covered by this Contract, securing the payment of claims for materials furnished for or labor performed in the construction of the houses.

Joint Control Agreement

9. In lieu of the installment provisions contained in Paragraph 3 of this Contract, Contractor must accept, execute, and abide by any joint control agreement or other type of agreement for the disbursement of funds under this Contract required by any financial institution that loans money to Owner to finance the construction of any houses covered by this Contract.

Failure of Payments

10. If Owner fails to pay to Contractor within _____ days after it becomes due any amount payable by Owner to Contractor pursuant to this Contract or pursuant to any joint control agreement or other agreement referred to in Paragraph 9 of this Contract, Contractor may, by giving _____ days' written notice to Owner, stop work on all houses covered by this Contract. Thereafter, Contractor may use all lawful means, including actions by labor or contractors' associations induced by Contractor, to prevent further work from being performed on those houses until all past due payments have been received by [him or her] and Owner has posted a bond satisfactory to Contractor for the payment of all amounts that will thereafter become due to Contractor under this Contract.

Unavoidable Delays and Defaults

11. Either party to this Contract will be excused for any delays or defaults by that party in the performance of this Contract that are unavoidably caused by any of the following: an act of the other party; an act of any agent of the other party; an act of any governmental authority; an act of any public enemy; an act of God; the elements; war; war defense conditions; riots; litigation; strikes; walkouts; or other causes beyond that party's control. The insurance must be in amounts not less than the following:

(1) $

_____ for injury to or death of one person and, subject to that limitation for the injury to or death of one person, $ _____ for injury to or death of two or more persons as a result of any one accident or incident; _____ for damage to or destruction of any property of others.

Workers' Compensation Insurance

14. Contractor, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, must procure and maintain during the performance of this Contract by [him or her] a policy of workers' compensation or employer's liability insurance issued by an insurance company acceptable to Owner for the protection of Contractor's employees (including executive, managerial, and supervisorial employees) engaged in any work required by this Contract.

Subcontractor's Insurance

15. Contractor must require each subcontractor employed by [him or her] to work on the project to procure and maintain, at the subcontractor's own cost and expense, a policy of workers' compensation or employer's liability insurance issued by an insurance company acceptable to Owner for the protection of the subcontractor's employees (including executive, managerial, and supervisorial employees) engaged in any work on the project.

Evidence of Insurance

16. Before Contractor commences work under this Contract and before any subcontractor commences work under any subcontract executed pursuant to this Contract, Contractor must deposit or cause the subcontractor to deposit a certificate evidencing each policy of insurance required by this Contract with Owner.

Fire Insurance

17. Owner, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, must procure promptly after the execution of this Contract and maintain during the continuance of this Contract the policies of insurance that insure each house being constructed pursuant to this Contract and all materials delivered to the site of each house for their full insurable value against loss or destruction during the course of construction by fire, the elements, vandalism, or malicious mischief. The loss under those policies must be payable to the following, as their interests may appear: Owner; any beneficiary of a deed of trust encumbering the property on which any house is located; and Contractor.

Destruction of Work

18. If all or any portion of any house being constructed pursuant to this Contract is destroyed by fire, theft, vandalism, accident, act of God, or other cause that is not the fault of Contractor, any work done or materials furnished by Contractor in restoring or rebuilding the house will be paid for by Owner as extra work performed by Contractor pursuant to Paragraph 4 of this Contract.

Permits and Inspections

19. Each house required to be constructed by this Contract must be constructed in strict compliance with all laws, statutes, ordinances, rules, and regulations of any governmental agency or public authority having jurisdiction over the house. Contractor must obtain, at_____[his or her] own cost and expense, all permits, inspections, and approvals for each house required by any governmental agency or public authority.

Water and Power

20. Contractor must arrange for and furnish at_____[his or her] own cost and expense temporary facilities that furnish to the jobsite for any houses covered by this Contract any water or power, electric or otherwise, needed by Contractor during the course of construction of any house to allow [him or her] to successfully perform this Contract.

Security Devices

21. Contractor must furnish, install, and operate at_____[his or her] own cost and expense any fences, warning lamps or lights, and other security devices, including security guards, that any insurance company insuring any portion of the property or houses covered by this Contract against loss by fire, theft, or vandalism deems necessary or advisable to prevent unauthorized persons from trespassing on the property and committing acts of theft, vandalism, or destruction on it.

Bankruptcy, Insolvency, or Incompetency

22. If either party to this Contract is adjudged bankrupt, makes a general assignment for the benefit of the party's creditors, or is adjudged an insane or incompetent person in a proceeding brought to have a guardian or conservator appointed for the party's estate, the other party to this Contract may terminate this Contract by giving written notice to the trustee, assignee, guardian, or conservator of the party within _____ days after_____[his or her] appointment. In that case, all progress payments specified in Paragraph 4 of this Contract or in any agreement referred to in Paragraph 9 of this Contract due Contractor at 5:00 P.M. on the date of the notice, and the reasonable value of all other work performed or materials furnished by Contractor pursuant to this contract prior to that time, must be paid to Contractor or to the person legally entitled to manage_____[his or her] affairs.

Breach by Contractor

23. If Contractor commits a substantial violation of any provision of this Contract, Owner may, by giving written notice to Contractor, do the following: terminate Contractor's services under this Contract; take possession of the real property and houses covered by this Contract; evict Contractor and any agent, servants, subcontractors, or employees of Contractor from the property and houses; and complete the houses by whatever method Owner in_____[his or her] absolute discretion deems expedient. On final completion of all the houses, Contractor must immediately pay to Owner (1) the full amount by which the costs incurred by Owner in completing the houses (including any compensation paid by Owner for managerial, administrative, or supervisorial services) exceeded the total contract prices for the houses as specified in this Contract, and (2) all other damages suffered by Owner because of the breach by Contractor.

Notice of Completion

24. Owner will execute, acknowledge, and record in the manner provided by law a notice of completion for each house covered by this Contract within _____ days after final inspection and approval of the house.

Final Payment for House

25. The payment by Owner to Contractor of the full contract price for any house will not relieve Contractor of liability for (1) defective materials or workmanship used in the completion the house, or (2) failure to construct the house in the manner required by this Contract and the applicable set of plans. Acceptance by Contractor of any payment provided for in this Contract will be a representation by Contractor to Owner and to Owner's successors and assigns that all work required to be performed before the payment became due has been completed by Contractor in accordance with the terms of this Contract and the applicable set of plans.

Assignment by Contractor

26. This Contract is for the personal services of Contractor in constructing the houses covered by this Contract. Contractor may not assign this Contract or any payments due under this Contract to any other person or entity without the written consent of Owner.

Notices

27. Any and all notices, demands, requests, or other matters required or permitted by this Contract or by law to be served on, given to, or delivered to either Owner or Contractor by the other party to this Contract must be in writing and will be deemed duly served, given, or delivered when (1) personally delivered to the party to whom it is addressed [or to a supervisorial employee of that party], or (2) deposited in the United States mail, duly registered or certified, with postage prepaid, and addressed to Owner at_____[address], _____, California, or to Contractor at_____[address], _____, California. Either party may change the party's address for these purposes by giving written notice of the change to the other party in the manner provided in this paragraph.

Attorneys' Fees

28. If any legal action or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Contract is brought by either party to this Contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to receive from the other party, in addition to any other relief that may be granted, the reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses incurred in the action or proceeding by the prevailing party.

Sole and Only Agreement

29. This Contract constitutes, together with the attached plans, the sole and only agreement of the parties to this Contract relating to the work, materials, or houses described in this Contract, and correctly sets forth the rights, duties, and obligations of each to the other as of its date. Any prior agreements, promises, negotiations, or representations not expressly set forth in the Contract are of no force and effect.

Construction _____ [Lender or Lenders]

30. The following name[s] and address [es] of the construction lender [s] for the project are provided by Owner in accordance with Civil Code Section 3097(m):

Construction lender[s]:
_____ [name]
_____ [address]

[Repeat for each additional lender.]

Licensing and Regulation of Contractors

[Include following statement in at least 10-point type (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(a)):]

31. Contractors are required by law to be licensed and regulated by the Contractors' State License Board which has jurisdiction to investigate complaints against contractors if a complaint regarding a patent act or omission is filed within four years of the date of the alleged violation. A complaint regarding a latent act or omission pertaining to structural defects must be filed within ten years of the date of the alleged violation. Any questions concerning a contractor may be referred to the Registrar, Contractors' State License Board, P.O. Box 26000, Sacramento, California 95826.

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.224

§ 30D.224 Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Contractor on the Basis of a Stipulated Price [EJCDC Document 1910-8-A-1]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an owner-contractor construction contract in which the basis of payment for the prime contractor's services is a stipulated sum [see [c], below]. It was prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) [see [b], below] for use when the primary design work for the project will involve the practice of engineering [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals].

This form is intended to be part of an integrated set of contract documents that will include other EJCDC forms, such as the EJCDC general conditions of the construction contract [see § 30D.226]. Because most of the provisions of this form have more detailed counterparts in the EJCDC general conditions, the practitioner should refer to § 30D.226[1] for further discussion. The basic concept of these forms is that the standard general conditions form will remain essentially untouched, while unique characteristics of the particular project will be accounted for in this form or in supplementary conditions or other modifications to the contract documents.

For a pair of stipulated-sum agreements published by the American Institute of Architects (AIA), see Appendices C and D [AIA Docs. A101-1997, A107-1997]. For a standard form of stipulated sum agreement published by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC), see AGC Document 200. A brief comparison of the various standardized stipulated-sum agreements is contained in [c], below. For a custom-drafted stipulated-sum construction contract that contains all agreements between the parties and is not intended to be used with any other documents (other than project drawings and specifications), see § 30D.221. Finally, for an EJCDC owner-contractor agreement that provides for the cost-plus method of contractor compensation, see § 30D.225.

[b] Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC)

The Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) is a joint committee made up of members of the following national professional organizations of engineers: the National Society of Professional Engineers (NSPE); the American Consulting Engineers Council (ACEC); and the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE). The EJCDC offers a group of standardized documents intended to guide engineers in their contractual relationships with owners (also referred to as clients in the literature prepared by the foregoing organizations). Because it is the policy of the EJCDC to review every one of its documents within three years of publication, the practitioner must confirm that he or she has the most recent edition of the form and any related guides or commentaries.

[c] Stipulated-Sum Agreements

A stipulated-sum or lump-sum agreement specifies the amount that the contractor will receive for the construction work. This amount must cover the contractor's costs, overhead, and profit, and is normally distributed in the form of progress payments. For further discussion, see § 30D.12[1].

Each of the construction industry's professional organizations has published at least one standardized form of agreement between owner and contractor based on a stipulated sum for the contract price. These forms are much the same, but there are some notable differences. The primary distinction between the forms is their coordination with other forms. Two of the forms are intended to be rather self-contained, and so contain not only the primary owner-contractor agreement, but also the general conditions of the contract [see App. D (AIA Doc. A107-1997); see also AGC Doc. 200]. In contrast, other forms incorporate by reference a separate document that sets out the general conditions of the contract [see [2], below; App. C (AIA Doc. A101-1997)]. Those standardized forms setting out the general conditions are discussed in §§ 30D.13, 30D.226, 30D.227.

Whether to use a single form containing the general conditions or separate forms is largely a matter of individual choice, but single forms are generally more suitable to projects of limited scope when not much alteration to the contract documents will be required. On larger projects, the flexibility provided by multiple contract documents is more suitable to address the greater number of contingencies inherent in these projects. Additionally, if earlier agreements such as the owner-design professional agreement have come from a particular organization, use of the stipulated sum contract from the same organization is highly recommended for the sake of consistency.

[d] Effective Date of Agreement

The effective date of the agreement is the date indicated in the form on which it becomes effective [see § 30D.226[2], P 1.01(A)(18) (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8)]. The parties may use the space just above the signature lines for the owner and contractor in this form to indicate the effective date. If no such date is indicated, the general conditions specify that the effective date of the agreement will be the date on which the agreement is signed and delivered by the last of the two parties to sign and deliver [see § 30D.226[2], P 1.01(A)(18) (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8)].

[e] Substantial Completion and Final Payment

The owner-contractor agreement must establish a contract completion date. Each of the stipulated sum contracts requires the contractor to achieve substantial completion either by a specified date or within a certain specified time as measured from the commencement of the work or the contract [see [2], P 4.02, below ; App. C, P 3.3 (AIA Doc. A101-1997); App. D, P 2.3 (AIA Doc. A107-1997)]. Substantial completion is usually defined by the general conditions as the point at which the owner can occupy or utilize the work for the intended purpose [see, e.g., § 30D.226[2], P 1.01(A)(43) (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8); App. E, P 9.8.1 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. The design professional generally determines when the work is substantially complete and issues a certificate of substantial completion accordingly [see, e.g., § 30D.226[2], P 14.04 (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8); App. E, P 9.8 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)].

Although the time requirements of the contract are satisfied when the work is substantially complete, the contractor will not be entitled to the final payment until he or she brings the work to final completion. This essentially means completing or correcting any work that was unfinished or defective at time the project was found to be substantially complete. After completing or correcting this work, the contractor must submit an application for final payment. On receipt of the application, the design professional will inspect the work for compliance with the requirements of the contract and of the certificate of substantial completion and for any outstanding claims, including mechanics' liens. If all applicable requirements have been satisfied, the design professional will certify the final completion of the project and approve the contractor's final request for payment [see § 30D.226[2], PP 14.06-14.09 (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8); App. E, P 9.10 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)].

[f] Liquidated Damages

Standardized contracts usually include a liquidated damages provision that specifies in advance the amount of damages a contractor must pay the owner for the latter's losses arising from delayed construction [see [2], P 4.03, below]. The AIA stipulated sum agreements provide for optional liquidated damages clauses drafted by counsel [see App. C, P 3.3 (AIA Doc. A101-1997); App. D, P 2.3 (AIA Doc. A107-1997)]. A promise to pay liquidated damages for a breach of a construction contract is valid unless it is established that the promise was unreasonable under the circumstances existing when the contract was made [see Civ. Code § 1671(b)]. Any liquidated damages provision relating to the failure to complete the work by the completion date should contain explicit and reasonable conditions to its enforcement [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)]. For further discussion of liquidated damages, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[g] Contractor's Statement and License Number

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.229.

[h] Name and Address of Owner and Lender

Every written contract entered into between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner's name, residence address, and place of business, if any [Civ. Code § 3097(l)]. In this form, the owner's name should appear in the first paragraph, and the address or addresses may be added following the owner's signature.

Unless the contract is a home improvement contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168], the contract also must provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m)]. This information should be set forth in Paragraph 9.5 of this form or in an addendum to the form [see § 30D.229[2] (addendum)].

[i] Construction of Single-Family Dwelling to be Retained by Owner

Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, and any changes in such a contract, must be evidenced in writing and must contain certain information and notices [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164]. For further discussion and an addendum that may be used to add this information to this form, see § 30D.229.

[j] Owner's Obligation to Provide Security for Contractual Payment Obligations

To protect general contractors from the undesirable position of being obligated under a subcontract to make payments to a subcontractor without having the funds from the owner to do so, in some situations the owner must provide security for its payment obligations under the construction contract. Generally, this security requirement applies when the contract does not exceed $5 million if the owner's interest is a fee simple absolute interest, or $1 million if the owner's interest is less than a fee simple interest (including a leasehold interest) [Civ. Code § 3110.5(a)]. The requirement does not apply to contracts for construction of single-family residences, public works projects, or housing developments that are eligible for a density bonus [Civ. Code § 3110.5(e)]. The security may be in the form of a payment bond, an irrevocable letter of credit, or establishment of an escrow account [Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)(1)-(3)].

The amount of security required depends on the contract's duration. If the contract calls for the work to be substantially completed within six months, the security provided cannot be less than 25 percent of the amount of the contract price. If the contract is scheduled to take longer to complete, the security cannot be less than 15 percent of the contract price [see Civ. Code § 3110.5(b)].

For further discussion of the owner's security requirement, see § 30D.10[6].

§ 30D.225 Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Contractor on the Basis of Cost-Plus [EJCDC Document 1910-8-A-2]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the EJCDC owner-contractor construction contract in which the basis of payment for the services of the prime contractor is the contractor's costs plus a specified fee or profit. It was prepared for use when the primary design work will involve the practice of engineering [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Design Professionals]. The only significant differences between this form and the EJCDC stipulated sum contract [see § 30D.224[2]] are the additional requirements set forth in this form relating to the cost-plus method of compensation [see [b], below].

This form, like the EJCDC stipulated sum contract, is intended to be part of an integrated set of contract documents that will include other EJCDC forms, such as the EJCDC general conditions of the construction contract [see § 30D.226].

[b] Cost-Plus Requirements

[i] Calculation of Contractor's Fee

Under cost-plus agreements, the owner agrees to pay the prime contractor all of the latter's costs plus a fee for overhead and profit [see § 30D.12[2]]. Article 7 of this agreement contains alternative fee provisions for the "plus" portion of the fee: one establishes a fixed fee and the other one a percentage fee. The percentage-fee alternative provides the parties with the opportunity to specify different percentages for different categories of costs (for example, payroll costs and material and equipment costs).

[ii] Progress Payments

Both this form and the EJCDC stipulated sum agreement [see § 30D.224[2]] provide for progress payments. However, in keeping with the cost-plus method of compensation, only this form establishes two progress payment schedules; one for the cost of the work, and the other for the contractor's fee [see [2], P 10.02, below].

[iii] Guaranteed Maximum Contract Price

If the parties agree to establish a maximum contract price, that ceiling may be set forth in Article 8 of this form. The ceiling would serve as an incentive to the contractor to keep costs down. However, many contractors are hesitant to agree to such a limitation [see § 30D.12[2]]. Consequently, many of the provisions of this form set forth alternatives that are based on the presence or absence of a maximum contract price [see [2], P 9.01A, below].

In addition to providing an optional cap on the overall price, this form also provides an optional cap on the "plus" portion of the fee when it is calculated as a percentage of costs [see [2], P 7.02, below].

[c] Contractor's Statement and License Number

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.229.

[d] Name and Address of Owner and Lender

Every written contract entered into between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner's name, residence address, and place of business, if any [Civ. Code § 3097(l)]. In this form, the owner's name should appear in the first paragraph, and the address or addresses may be added following the owner's signature.

Unless the contract is a home improvement contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168], the contract also must provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m)]. This information should be set forth in Paragraph 15.05 of this form or in an addendum to the form [see § 30D.229[2] (addendum)].

[e] Construction of Single-Family Dwelling to be Retained by Owner

Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, and any changes in such a contract, must be evidenced in writing and must contain certain information and notices [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164]. For further discussion and an addendum that may be used to add this information to this form, see § 30D.229.

§ 30D.226 Standard General Conditions of the Construction Contract [EJCDC Document 1910-8]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a set of standard general conditions of a construction contract that may be used when engineering is the primary design discipline for the construction project. It was prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC) [see § 30D.224[1][b]]. It is important to note that the standard conditions are not a stand-alone agreement; instead, they were designed to be used with and incorporated by reference into either of the owner-contractor agreements prepared by the EJCDC [see §§ 30D.224[2] (stipulated price), 30D.225[2] (cost-plus)]. The general conditions were also designed to be used in conjunction with an owner-engineer contract prepared by the EJCDC [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Design Professionals].

This form describes the rights, responsibilities, and relationships of the parties to the owner-contractor agreement. It also assigns responsibilities to the project engineer as the owner's representative, even though the engineer is not a party to the owner-contractor agreement [see [2], Art. 9, below]. As a result, the engineer and his or her attorney must review this form at the same time that they examine the proposed owner-engineer agreement.

For general conditions prepared by the American Institute of Architects for use when the primary design work will be performed by an architect [see AIA Doc. A201-1997], see Appendix E. For discussion of differences between the AIA and EJCDC general conditions, see [b], below. Extensive coverage of the contents of the AIA general conditions is set forth in the Architect's Handbook of Professional Practice (AIA 1994) and in Construction Law, ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[b] Comparison of EJCDC and AIA General Conditions

The EJCDC and AIA general conditions are similar in many ways. Both provide for progress payments following certification by the design professional of the amount due [see [2], Art. 14, below; App. E, Art. 9; see also [d], below], and require substantial completion within the time specified in the contract [see § 30D.226[2], P 14.04, below ; App. E, PP 8.2.3, 9.8 (AIA Doc. A201-1997); see also § 30D.224[1][e]]. The design professional is authorized to interpret the contract documents [see [2], P 9.04, below ; App. E, PP 4.2.11, 4.2.12 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)] and to decide certain disputes between the owner and contractor (subject to arbitration) [see [2], P 10.05, below ; App. E, PP 4.3, 4.4 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. He or she may reject, and require the correction of, nonconforming work [see [2], P 9.06, Art. 13, below; App. E, P 4.2.6, Art. 12 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. Further, the design professional may require the contractor (1) to make covered work available for inspection or testing if the design professional suspects that the work is defective, and (2) to bear the cost of the inspection or testing if the work proves defective [see [2], Art. 13, below; App. E, P 12.1 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. Following substantial completion of the work by the contractor, he or she must specifically correct, within one year, any defects or deficiencies in the work [see [2], P 13.07, below ; App. E, P 12.2.2 (AIA Doc. A201-1997); see also § 30D.224[1][e]].

Notwithstanding the foregoing similarities, there are several substantive differences and significant language variations between the EJCDC and AIA general conditions. For example, the EJCDC form places greater emphasis on site conditions, hazardous materials [see [2], Art. 4, below], unit-price work [see [2], P 11.03, below], and substitutions [see [2], P 6.05, below]. Further, it provides that the contract documents generally include the bidding documents [see [2], P. 1.01(A)(12), below], whereas the AIA form states that the contract documents do not include the bidding documents unless the latter are "specifically enumerated" in the owner-contractor agreement [see App. E, P 1.1.1 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. The AIA form contains more detailed requirements governing the selection and payment of subcontractors [see App. E, arts. 5, 9 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)] than its EJCDC counterpart [see [2], P 6.06, below].

For an EJCDC cross-reference sheet that shows where subject matter covered by this form is discussed in the AIA general conditions (or other AIA forms), see § 30D.227[2].

[c] Modifications to Standard General Conditions (Supplementary Conditions)

Because no set of standard general conditions can cover every contingency or reflect the unique aspects and characteristics of any particular project, this form should be modified when necessary through the use of supplementary general conditions [Walker & Rohdenburg, Legal Pitfalls in Architecture, Engineering, and Building Construction, Ch. 2, Legal Pitfalls in the Owner-Architect (Engineer) Relationship: Professional Services at 35 (McGraw-Hill 1968); see § 30D.13[3]]. For an addendum/modification form that illustrates the format for any written changes to contract documents, see § 30D.230. For AIA and EJCDC guidelines for the preparation of supplementary conditions, see AIA Document A511 (Guide for Supplementary Conditions) and EJCDC Document 1910-17 (Guide to the Preparation of Supplementary Conditions).

[d] Progress Payments

[i] In General

Although the owner-contractor agreement will specify the contract sum and the schedule of progress payments [see § 30D.221[1][c]], the general conditions should set forth all applicable preconditions to those payments [see [2], Art. 14, below; App. E, Art. 9 (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. Most payment arrangements require the contractor to submit an application for each progress payment to the design professional. The exact procedures for this submission should be reasonable and fair to the owner and the contractor, and should be consistent with the conditions of disbursement of the owner's construction loan [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

For coverage of statutory requirements governing the payment and withholding of progress payments that apply unless the owner and contractor agree in writing to an alternative arrangement [see Civ. Code § 3260.1; see also Civ. Code § 3260], see § 30D.221[1][c]. Because this form sets forth an "alternative arrangement," the remainder of this discussion examines the types of progress payment provisions typically included in standardized agreements, and does not discuss the foregoing statutory requirements.

[ii] Certificates of Payment

Most general conditions require the design professional to issue a certificate of payment (or other written payment recommendation) under specified circumstances [see [2], P 14.02(B), below (written payment recommendation); App. E, PP 9.4.1, 9.4.2 (certificate of payment)]. This certificate is an indication of the design professional's approval of the contractor's application for payment. Usually, the issuance of a certificate is a condition precedent to a progress payment. Therefore, it is only after the issuance of a certificate that the corresponding installment payment becomes payable and a right of action for nonpayment can accrue, unless the design professional unreasonably refuses to issue the certificate [see Ahlgren v. Walsh (1916) 173 Cal. 27, 31, 158 P. 748 ; Coplew v. Durand (1908) 153 Cal. 278, 281, 95 P. 38] .

When the design professional is to issue certificates of payment, the general conditions must clearly define the design professional's authority and limitations for withholding payment, with the causes for withholding enumerated. Typical enumerated causes include the following: defective work; claims of third persons; unexcused delay by the contractor; reasonable expectation that work will not be completed within the contract time; contractor's failure to pay subcontractors or to make other project payments; damage to another contractor; reasonable doubt that the contract can be completed for the contract price; and unsatisfactory performance by the contractor [see California Real Estate Law and Practice, ch. 432, The Owner-Prime Contractor Relationship and Contract (Matthew Bender)].

The general conditions should also describe the effect of an unjustified refusal to issue a certificate for payment on the contractor's obligation to continue to perform under the contract. For example, the contactor may be given the right to stop work (after giving proper notice) until paid, to seek arbitration, or to terminate the agreement [see [2], P 15.04, below ; App. E, PP 9.7.1, 14.1].

Finally, the general conditions should provide for the issuance by the design professional of (1) a certificate of substantial completion, and (2) a final certificate for payment (or other written recommendation for final payment) [see [2], PP 14.07- 14.09, below ; App. E, art 9]. For coverage of these certificates, see § 30D.224[1][e].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, prepared by the Engineers' Joint Contract Documents Committee (EJCDC), is a cross-reference sheet that (1) lists every paragraph of the EJCDC standard general conditions of the construction contract [see § 30D.226[2] (EJCDC Doc. 1910-8)], and (2) indicates where comparable provisions appear in the American Institute of Architect's general conditions of the contract for construction (or other AIA forms) [see App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)]. The cross-reference is two-way, so that the user can find the comparable provision in either document if starting from the other. For discussion of those two standardized general condition forms, see § 30D.226.

This form cross-references the 1990 edition of the EJCDC form against the 1987 edition of the AIA form. Both of these editions have been superseded by more current versions, but the cross-references in this form have not been revised accordingly. Nevertheless, the cross-references remain useful because the revisions, though significant in many respects, were not organizational, so the references remain largely accurate.

§ 30D.228 Standard Form of Design-Build Agreement and General Conditions Between Owner and Design-Builder (When Basis of Payment Is Cost of Work Plus Fee With Guaranteed Maximum Price) [AGC Document 410]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the standard form of "design-build agreement" between an owner and design-builder, with general conditions, prepared by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC). The design-build method of construction contracting utilizes a single construction contract under which the design-builder assumes responsibility for both designing and constructing the project (typically a large industrial project) in accordance with the contract documents. The actual design work may be performed by members of the design-builder's staff or by a consultant designer pursuant to a contract with the design-builder [see § 30D.11[2]]. This method of contracting is an alternative to the traditional method, which awards separate contracts for design and for construction [see § 30D.11[1]]. The methods for awarding the contract and compensating the design-builder are the same ones used for traditional construction contracts.

Under this form, the design-builder agrees to provide design and construction services on a cost-plus basis, subject to a guaranteed maximum price [see § 30D.228[2], P 3.2 and arts. 7 (compensation), 8 (cost of the work); see also § 30D.12[2] (coverage of cost-plus contracts)].

Architectural and engineering services are either to be (1) procured from licensed, independent design professionals retained by the design-builder, or (2) furnished by licensed employees of the design-builder [see [2], P 2.2, below; see also § 30D.245 (agreement between design-builder and architect/engineer)]. Fees for these services are to be shown as separate items on applications for payment if an architect/engineer is retained by the design-builder [see [2], P 7.1.1, below].

[b] Relationship to Other AGC Forms

This form is only one of a series of design-build documents prepared by the AGC. The other agreements include a preliminary design-build agreement [see AGC Doc. 400], which may be used when (1) the design-builder is to provide preliminary design work that will be used to establish the scope of the project, and (2) the owner and design-builder will enter into a subsequent design-build agreement providing for a lump sum payment based on the owner's program [see AGC Doc. 415], which will include schematic design documents addressed in the preliminary design-build agreement. The AGC also offers design-builder/subcontractor agreements [see §§ 30D.242-30D.245].

[c] Information Required by California Law

California laws requires construction contracts to include specified information (when applicable) regarding the project contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], the owner [see Civ. Code § 3097(l)], the construction lender [see Civ. Code § 3097(m)], and the project [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 (applicable when project involves construction of single-family dwelling to be retained by owner for at least one year)]. For coverage of those requirements and an illustrative addendum that may be used to add the required information to this form, see § 30D.229.

§ 30D.228A Standard Form of Agreement Between Owner and Trade Contractor [AGC Document 520]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an owner and a trade contractor for use when the owner has hired a construction manager as the owner's on-site agent, and the owner will enter into separate agreements with the contractors. An owner may wish to retain a construction manager to provide continuous on-site supervision of the construction work, particularly if (1) the project is relatively large, or (2) the parties have agreed to strictly limit the supervisory responsibilities of the design professional.

[b] Relation to Other AGC Forms

This form was prepared by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) and is compatible with AGC Document 510 (Standard Form of Construction Management Agreement Between Owner and Construction Manager) [see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Design Professionals]. This form should not be used if the construction manager is also the primary contractor; instead, the AGC and the American Institute of Architects (AIA) have jointly published standard forms of agreement for that circumstance [see AGC Documents 565, 566; AIA Documents 121/Cmc, 131 Cmc].

For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

§ 30D.229 Addendum Containing Mandatory Disclosures [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5, 7164; Civ. Code § 3097(m)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an addendum to a standardized owner-contractor construction contract. It ensures that the contract will comply with California law requiring the inclusion of specified information regarding the project owner and contractor, the construction lender, and certain rights of the parties. An addendum such as this form is necessary because standardized printed contracts prepared by national construction organizations [see § 30D.20[2]] do not, as a general rule, contain all of the required information.

For an addendum that may be used to amend or replace existing contractual provisions (or to add provisions other than the statutory disclosures), see § 30D.230[2]. That addendum may also be used to modify a construction contract after it has been executed.

[b] Required Information

[i] Contractor's Statement and License Number

Every person licensed pursuant to the California Contractors' State License Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.] must include his or her contractor's license number on all construction contracts, subcontracts, calls for bid, and all forms of advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.5; see § 30D.220[2], P 2(a)]. A licensed contractor must also include the statutory statement set forth in Paragraph 2(b) of this form in at least 10-point type on all written contracts with respect to which the contractor is a prime contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(a)]. The term "prime contractor" is not defined by statute for these purposes, but presumably refers to any contractor who has a direct contractual relationship with an owner or an owner's agent, as opposed to a subcontractor whose only contractual relationship is with a general contractor.

[ii] Name and Address of Owner and Construction Lender

Every written contract between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner to enter his or her name, residence address, and place of business (if any) [Civ. Code § 3097(l); see § 30D.220[2], P 3(b), (c)]. Further, unless the contract is a home improvement contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7164] or a swimming pool contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168], the contract also must provide space for the owner to enter the name and address of the construction lender or lenders [Civ. Code § 3097(m); see § 30D.220[2], P 3(a)].

[iii] Construction of Single-Family Dwelling to Be Retained by Owner

Every contract between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year, and any changes in such a contract, must be evidenced in writing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a)]. The writing must be signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a)], and must contain the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b), (d)]:

- The contractor's name, address, and license number.
- The approximate dates when the work will begin and be substantially completed.
- A legal description of the location where the work will be done.
- A statutorily-prescribed statement with the heading "Mechanics' Lien Warning," which informs the owner of the contractor's rights under the Mechanics' Lien Law and suggests measures the owner can take to protect himself or herself from liens [see P 4 of form].
- A CSLB statement that emphasizes the value of commercial general liability insurance and encourages the owner to verify the contractor's coverage and status, and a check box indicating whether or not the contractor carries commercial general liability insurance, and if so, the insurer's name and telephone number [see § 30D.232 (form)].
- A notice in close proximity to the parties' signatures, in at least 10-point bold type or all capital letters, stating that the owner has the right to require the contractor to have a performance and payment bond and that the expense of the bond may be borne by the owner.

Some of the information described above will appear in standardized construction contracts. Consequently, this form provides for the inclusion of the information required by Bus. and Prof. Code § 7164 to the extent that it is not set forth in the contract.

The writing may also contain other matters agreed to by the parties. The writing must be legible and must clearly describe any other document that is to be incorporated into the contract. Prior to commencement of any work, the owner must be furnished with a copy of the written agreement, signed by the contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(c)].

The provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 are not exclusive and do not relieve the contractor from the obligation to comply with all other applicable provisions of law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(c)].

[iv] Arbitration Disclosure in Small Residential Contracts

An arbitration provision in a contract for work on residential property with four or fewer units must be clearly titled and set out according to statutory specifications. In addition, immediately preceding the place in the contract where the parties are to evidence their assent or nonassent to the arbitration provision, there must appear a statutory notice, also set out according to statutory specifications, relating the consequences of agreeing to arbitrate any disputes under the contract. An arbitration provision that does not comply with these requirements "may not be enforceable against any person other than the licensee" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191], which apparently is intended to preclude the contractor from enforcing the contract.

[c] Execution

There is no formal requirement that addenda be signed by the affected parties. However, this form provides signature blocks so that the contractor and owner can indicate that they satisfied their statutory obligations to supply the required disclosures. Further, by including signature blocks, counsel may comply with the requirement of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 that any contract subject to that statute contain, in close proximity to the signatures of the owner and contractor, a notice regarding payment and performance bonds [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(d); see also [b][iii], above].

(3) The following is a legal description of the location where the work covered by the contract will be done: _____.

(4) The following is a notice required by Business and Professions Code Section 7164:

MECHANICS' LIEN WARNING:

Anyone who helps improve your property, but who is not paid, may record what is called a mechanics' lien on your property. A mechanics' lien is a claim, like a mortgage or home equity loan, made against your property and recorded with the county recorder.

Even if you pay your contractor in full, unpaid subcontractors, suppliers, and laborers who helped to improve your property may record mechanics' liens and sue you in court to foreclose the lien. If a court finds the lien is valid, you could be forced to pay twice or have a court officer sell your home to pay the lien. Liens can also affect your credit.

To preserve their right to record a lien, each subcontractor and material supplier must provide you with a document called a "20-day Preliminary Notice." This notice is not a lien. The purpose of the notice is to let you know that the person who sends you the notice has the right to record a lien on your property if he or she is not paid.

BE CAREFUL. The Preliminary Notice can be sent up to 20 days after the subcontractor starts work or the supplier provides material. This can be a big problem if you pay your contractor before you have received the Preliminary Notices.

You will not get Preliminary Notices from your prime contractor or from laborers who work on your project. The law assumes that you already know they are improving your property.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM LIENS. You can protect yourself from liens by getting a list from your contractor of all the subcontractors and material suppliers that work on your project. Find out from your contractor when these subcontractors started work and when these suppliers delivered goods or materials. Then wait 20 days, paying attention to the Preliminary Notices you receive.

PAY WITH JOINT CHECKS. One way to protect yourself is to pay with a joint check. When your contractor tells you it is time to pay for the work of a subcontractor or supplier who has provided you with a Preliminary Notice, write a joint check payable to both the contractor and the subcontractor or material supplier.

For other ways to prevent liens, visit CSLB's Web site at www.cslb.ca.gov or call CSLB at 800-321-CSLB (2752).

REMEMBER, IF YOU DO NOTHING, YOU RISK HAVING A LIEN PLACED ON YOUR HOME. This can mean that you may have to pay twice, or face the forced sale of your home to pay what you owe.

[For the notice referred to in (5), below, see § 30D.232[2]]

(5) The attached Contractors' State License Board notice "Information About Commercial General Liability Insurance," is hereby incorporated by reference in this Addendum.

PART IV. FORMS
C. Construction Contracts

15-30D California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30D.230

§ 30D.230 Contract Modification or Addendum

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to modify one or more of the construction documents used in connection with a particular construction project. It is designed to be used as an addendum or as any modification other than a change order [see [b], below]. It is not intended to be used as a change order because most construction organizations and contractors have their own change order forms [see, e.g., AIA Doc. G701].

For an addendum that may be used to add certain statutory disclosures to a standardized owner-contractor agreement prior to the execution of the agreement, see § 30D.229. Unlike that addendum, this form may be used to modify any standardized or custom-drafted construction document, including documents that have already been executed by the parties [see [b], below]. For an addendum to a bidding document, see § 30D.202.

The construction documents for a particular project will necessarily be interrelated. Therefore, a modification of the terms of one document may create a conflict or inconsistency in the other contract documents unless the attorney makes any necessary corresponding changes to the other documents. Further, the attorney should take the additional precaution of providing in any addendum or modification that the change governs not only the document being modified but also the other contract documents [see [2], below, P 2].

For an addendum to a bidding document, see § 30D.202.

[b] Distinction Between Modification and Addendum

If a modification occurs prior to execution of the basic construction contract, then the change is referred to as an addendum. Post-execution changes are known as contract modifications. Any addendum or contract modification is considered one of the project documents.

Examples of contract modifications include written amendments to the contract signed by both parties, change orders, and written orders for changes in the work issued by the design professional [see App. E, P 1.1.1 (AIA Doc. A201)].

[c] Execution

Although there is no formal requirement that addenda or modifications be signed by the affected parties, a cautious attorney should always obtain the signatures of the parties affected by alterations to the contract documents. This form provides appropriate signature blocks.

[d] Notification of Certain Changes

Under the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.], an owner must notify the prime contractor and construction lenders of any changes in the contract if the change has the effect of increasing the price stated in the contract by 5 percent or more [Civ. Code § 3123(c)]. For comprehensive coverage of the mechanics' lien law, see Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens .

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice that may be used to notify the prime contractor for a construction project of the required dates of commencement and completion of the work for which the contractor is responsible. When these dates are not set forth in the owner-contractor agreement, the agreement should require the owner to subsequently specify the applicable dates in a notice to proceed (this form). The notice may set forth specific dates, or require commencement or completion within a specified number of working days after a triggering event (such as the execution of the owner-contractor agreement).

[b] Authorizing Commencement Before Execution of Contract

A notice to proceed cannot be used to authorize commencement of work before the formal execution of the construction contract. However, the owner may use a letter of intent [see § 30D.221] to authorize pre-execution work.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form, developed by the Contractors' State License Board to comply with Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164, sets forth requirements for contracts between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year. Among those requirements is a statement that:

- Emphasizes the value of commercial general liability insurance;
- Encourages the owner to verify the contractor's coverage and status; and
- Includes a check box indicating whether or not the contractor carries commercial general liability insurance, and if so, the insurer's name and telephone number.

The form is available at www.cslb.ca.gov/forms/glisfd.pdf. It should be included with the contract addendum containing mandatory disclosures that is the subject of § 30D.229 when the information required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 is a required part of the contract.

§ 30D.240 Standard Form of Agreement Between Contractor and Subcontractor (When Contractor Assumes Risk of Owner Payment) [AGC Document 650]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standardized subcontract agreement for building construction that may be used when the contractor assumes the risk of owner payment. It was prepared by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) and is compatible with (1) AGC Document 200, Standard Form of Agreement and General Conditions Between Owner and Contractor (Where Contract Price Is a Lump Sum), and (2) the American Institute of Architect's general conditions [see [2], below; see also App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)], which do not mandate the use of an AIA subcontract. The AGC endorses the use of other AIA forms as well [see Construction Law, Ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender)].

As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for information purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized, and this form is not intended for use as a model for the drafting of an agreement. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

For a subcontract agreement when the contractor and subcontractor agree to share the risk of owner payment, see § 30D.241. For a subcontract agreement prepared by the AIA, see Appendix F [AIA Doc. A401-1997].

[b] Role of Subcontracts

A construction subcontract is a construction agreement between a general contractor and a "subcontractor," defined as any contractor who does not have a direct contractual relationship with the owner [Civ. Code § 3104]. Subcontracts permit general contractors to let out a part of the work for which they are responsible under a construction contract with an owner [Theisen v. Los Angeles County (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 170, 183, 5 Cal. Rptr. 161 ; see § 30D.30[1]].

[c] Assumption of Risk of Owner Payment

In this form, payment by the contractor to the subcontractor is not conditioned on payment by the owner to the contractor for the subcontracted work [see [2], P 8.2.5, below]. In other words, the contractor is obliged to pay for the subcontracted work even if the owner defaults on its payment obligations to the contractor, provided, of course, that the failure of the owner to pay is not due to any fault of the subcontractor.

The alternative to this arrangement is a "pay if paid" provision pursuant to which payment by the owner to the contractor is a condition precedent to the contractor's obligation to pay the subcontractor. In California, however, if a "pay if paid" provision effects an impermissible indirect waiver or forfeiture of the subcontractor's constitutionally protected mechanics' lien rights in the event of the owner's nonpayment, the provision is against public policy and unenforceable [see Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 886, 888-890, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372] . As a result, under a "pay if paid" arrangement, a contractor, rather than the owner or the construction lender, is at risk of becoming, in effect, the project's guarantor. To remedy this situation, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3110.5, which requires owners of certain private works of improvement to provide security for their payment obligations under the construction contract. The owner's obligations under § 3110.5 are discussed in § 30D.10[6].

[d] Comparison With AIA Subcontract

An alternative standard form of subcontract agreement has been published by the American Institute of Architects (AIA), and is set out in Appendix F [AIA Doc. A401-1997]. The primary distinction between the AIA subcontract and this form is that the AIA document naturally assumes that the design specialty at issue is architecture, while this form may be used in a project designed by an engineer or by an architect. It is important to note that both the AIA subcontract and this form place the risk of owner non-payment on the contractor [see [c], above; [2], P 8.2.5, below; App. F, P 11.3].

Some additional distinctions of note between this form and the AIA subcontract include the following:

- Designation of representatives. This form requires each party to designate a representative for all communications between the parties [see [2], PP 3.11, 4,1, below]; the AIA form contains no such provisions.

- Safety precautions. Although both forms require the subcontractor to perform the work in a safe and reasonable manner, this form's provisions are substantially more exhaustive than those of the AIA form [see [2], P 3.14, below ; App. F, P 4.3].

- Completion of work. The AIA form employs the typical "substantial completion" test [see App. F, P 11.9], while this form requires "fulfillment of the Subcontractor's obligations" [see [2], P 8.3.1, below].

[e] Information Required by California Law

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.220.

To facilitate a subcontractor's ability to give a preliminary notice before recording a mechanic's lien, filing a stop notice, or asserting a claim against a payment bond, every contract between an original contractor and a subcontractor, or between subcontractors, must provide a space for the name and address of the owner, original contractor, and any construction lender [Civ. Code § 3097(m)].

§ 30D.241 Standard Form of Agreement Between Contractor and Subcontractor (When Contractor and Subcontractor Share Risk of Owner Payment) [AGC Document 655]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standardized subcontract agreement for building construction under which the contractor and the subcontractor agree to share the risk of owner payment. Although it was prepared by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC), it was drafted to be compatible with the American Institute of Architect's general conditions [see [2], below; see also App. E (AIA Doc. A201-1997)], which do not mandate the use of an AIA subcontract. The AGC endorses the use of other AIA forms as well [see Construction Law, Ch. 3, Construction and Design Contracts (Matthew Bender)].

As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for information purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized, and this form is not intended for use as a model for the drafting of an agreement. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

For a subcontract agreement under which the contractor assumes the risk of owner payment, see § 30D.240. For a subcontract agreement prepared by the AIA, see Appendix F [AIA Doc. A401-1997].

For further discussion of particular requirements of California law and of the role of subcontracts, see § 30D.240[1].

[b] Shared Risk of Owner Payment

In this form, payment by the owner to the contractor for the subcontracted work is a "condition precedent" to the payment of the subcontractor [see [2], P 8.2.5, below]. In other words, if the owner refuses to pay for the subcontracted work, the contractor is under no obligation to pay the subcontractor. In California, this "pay if paid" arrangement has been held to be against public policy and therefore unenforceable if the arrangement effects an impermissible indirect waiver or forfeiture of the subcontractor's constitutionally protected mechanics' lien rights in the event of the owner's nonpayment [see Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 886, 888-890, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372] . As a result, under a "pay if paid" arrangement, a contractor, rather than the owner or the construction lender, is at risk of becoming, in effect, the project's guarantor. To remedy this situation, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3110.5, which requires owners of certain private works of improvement to provide security for their payment obligations under the construction contract. The owner's obligations under § 3110.5 are discussed in § 30D.10[6].

For an AGC subcontract in which payments to the subcontractor are not conditioned on owner payment, see § 30D.240.

[c] Comparison With AIA Subcontract

An alternative form of subcontract agreement has been published by the American Institute of Architects (AIA), and is set out in Appendix F [AIA Doc. A401-1997]. The most important distinction between the AIA subcontract and this form is that the AIA form does not condition payment to the subcontractor on owner payment for the subcontracted work [see App. F, P 11.3]. Other distinctions between this form and the AIA form are discussed in § 30D.240[1][d].

§ 30D.242 Standard Form of Agreement Between Design-Builder and Subcontractor (When Design-Builder Assumes Risk of Owner Payment) [AGC Document 450]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standardized subcontract agreement for building construction for use when project delivery is based on the design-build approach [see § 30D.11] and the design-builder assumes the risk of owner payment [see [d], below; see also § 30D.243 (form providing for shared risk of owner payment)]. This form is designed for use in the usual circumstances in which the subcontractor has not been retained to provide substantial portions of the design for the project, but will instead construct the project as designed by or under the supervision of the design-builder. If the subcontractor is to furnish substantial portions of the design for the project, see § 30D.244.

This form is published by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC). As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for information purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized, and this form is not intended for use as a model for the drafting of an agreement. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

[b] Design-Build Agreements

Under a design-build contract, a single contractor (the design-builder) assumes responsibility for both the design and construction of the project. The actual design work may be performed by members of the design-builder's staff, or by a consulting design professional hired by contract with the design-builder [see § 30D.245]. This approach is often used for large construction projects, such as industrial plants, to provide complete coordination of the many phases of the work. For a sample standardized design-build agreement between the owner and the design-builder, see § 30D.228.

[c] Relation to Other AGC Forms

This form is compatible with the other AGC forms for design-build agreements [see § 30D.228]. This agreement is a stand-alone document that does not incorporate by reference any general conditions for its performance.

[d] Assumption of Risk of Owner Payment

In this form, payment by the design-builder to the subcontractor is not conditioned on payment by the owner to the design-builder for the subcontracted work [see [2], P 8.2.5, below]. In other words, the design-builder is obliged to pay for the subcontracted work even if the owner defaults on its payment obligations to the design-builder, provided, of course, that the failure of the owner to pay is not due to any fault of the subcontractor. Progress payments to the subcontractor are to be made within seven days after the design-builder receives payment from the owner for the subcontract work. If, through no fault of the subcontractor, the owner does not pay the design-builder for the subcontract work, the design-builder assumes that responsibility to pay the subcontractor "within a reasonable time." A "reasonable time" allows the design-builder to try to secure payment from the owner.

The alternative to this arrangement is a "pay if paid" provision pursuant to which payment by the owner to the contractor is a condition precedent to the contractor's obligation to pay the subcontractor. In California, however, if a "pay if paid" provision effects an impermissible indirect waiver or forfeiture of the subcontractor's constitutionally protected mechanics' lien rights in the event of the owner's nonpayment, the provision is against public policy and unenforceable [see Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 886, 888-890, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372] . As a result, under a "pay if paid" arrangement, a contractor, rather than the owner or the construction lender is at risk of becoming, in effect, the project's guarantor. To remedy this situation, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3110.5, which requires owners of certain private works of improvement to provide security for their payment obligations under the construction contract. The owner's obligations under § 3110.5 are discussed in § 30D.10[6].

[e] Information Required by California Law

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.220.

To facilitate a subcontractor's ability to give a preliminary notice before recording a mechanic's lien, filing a stop notice, or asserting a claim against a payment bond, every contract between an original contractor and a subcontractor, or between subcontractors, must provide space for the name and address of the owner, original contractor, and any construction lender [*Civ. § 30D.244 Standard Form of Agreement Between Design-Builder and Design-Build Subcontractor (When Subcontractor Provides Guaranteed Maximum Price and When Design-Builder Assumes Risk of Owner Payment) [AGC Document 460]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standardized subcontract agreement for building construction for use when project delivery is based on the design-build approach [see §§ 30D.11, 30D.242[1][b]]. This form is designed for use when the design-builder hires the subcontractor early in the design phase of the project, so that the subcontractor performs virtually the same design services as those required by the prime contract. Thus, the subcontractor retained in this form is referred to as a "design-build subcontractor." For forms in which the design-builder performs the design services and wishes to subcontract some portion of the construction work, see §§ 30D.242 and 30D.243.

This form is published by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC). As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for information purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized, and this form is not intended for use as a model for the drafting of an agreement. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

[b] Guaranteed Maximum Price

In this form the design-build subcontractor is compensated on a cost-plus basis [see § 30D.12[2]], including a guaranteed maximum price (GMP) [see [2], P 3.3, below]. If the design-builder is dissatisfied with the GMP and no adjustment can be agreed on, the design-builder retains the option to proceed without a GMP, or to terminate the agreement and hold the project out for bidding based on the design documents prepared by the subcontractor [see [2], P 3.3.4, below].

In this form, payment to the subcontractor is not conditioned on the design-builder having received from the owner payment for subcontract work satisfactorily performed [see [2], P 9.1.5, below]. Progress payments to the subcontractor are to be made within seven days after the design-builder receives payment from the owner for the subcontract work. If, through no fault of the subcontractor, the owner does not pay the design-builder for the subcontract work, then the design-builder assumes the responsibility to pay the subcontractor "within a reasonable time."

The alternative to this arrangement is a "pay if paid" provision pursuant to which payment by the owner to the contractor is a condition precedent to the contractor's obligation to pay the subcontractor. In California, however, if a "pay if paid" provision effects an impermissible indirect waiver or forfeiture of the subcontractor's constitutionally protected mechanics' lien rights in the event of the owner's nonpayment, the provision is against public policy and unenforceable [see Wm. R. Clarke Corp. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 882, 886, 888-890, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 578, 938 P.2d 372] . As a result, under a "pay if paid" arrangement, a contractor, rather than the owner or the construction lender is at risk of becoming, in effect, the project's guarantor. To remedy this situation, the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3110.5, which requires owners of certain private works of improvement to provide security for their payment obligations under the construction contract. The owner's obligations under § 3110.5 are discussed in § 30D.10[6].

[d] Information Required by California Law

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.220.

To facilitate a subcontractor's ability to give a preliminary notice before recording a mechanic's lien, filing a stop notice, or asserting a claim against a payment bond, every contract between an original contractor and a subcontractor, or between subcontractors, must provide space for the name and address of the owner, original contractor, and any construction lender [Civ. Code § 3097(m)].

§ 30D.245 Standard Form of Agreement Between Design-Builder and Architect/Engineer for Design-Build Projects [AGC Document 420]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standard form of agreement used to delineate the respective rights and responsibilities assumed by a design-builder and a design professional such as an architect or engineer when project delivery is based on the design-build approach and the design professional will assist in the design portion of the contract [see §§ 30D.11, 30D.242[1][b]]. Although technically not a subcontract, this agreement is included in the subcontracts part of this chapter because the obligations in this form reflect the obligations imposed by the related agreement between the owner and the design-builder [see [2], P 3.1, below]. For a discussion of the more common situation, in which the design professional is hired directly by the owner prior to any involvement with the contractor, see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Design Professionals .

This form is published by the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) and is designed for use in conjunction with an AGC owner and design-builder agreement [see § 30D.228 (AGC Doc. 410); see also AGC Doc. 415]. As a copyrighted document of the AGC, this form has been reproduced with the permission of the AGC for information purposes only, as an illustration of a standard form used in the construction industry. Further reproduction in whole or in part is not authorized, and this form is not intended for use as a model for the drafting of an agreement. Copies of this document may be purchased from the AGC. For additional information on all AGC contract documents, consult the AGC website at www.agc.org.

[b] Architect/Engineer's Responsibilities

Inapplicable provisions should be stricken from the architect/engineer's statement of basic services [see [2], P 3.2, below]. For example, if the form is used in conjunction with AGC Document 415, which establishes a lump sum price, then reference to a guaranteed maximum price [see [2], P 3.2.4, below] should be stricken.

The form includes a designation of a representative by the architect/engineer [see [2], P 3.6, below]. Further, it provides for a listing of the architect/engineer's key project personnel, including the percentage of their time to be devoted to the project [see [2], P 3.7, Example D, below].

[c] Information Required by California Law

Every licensed contractor in California must include his or her contractor's license number and a specified statement on all construction contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030(a), 7030.5], including this standardized form. For the required statement and further discussion, see § 30D.220.

CHAPTER 30E JOINT (BUILDERS') CONTROL AGREEMENTS

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers joint control agreements and joint control agents. A joint control agent is a type of escrow agent. The exclusive function of this entity is to properly allocate and render all payments during the course of construction of a building project. Although the industry frequently refers to the joint control mechanism by other names, such as "builders' control," "builders' disbursement control," or "builders' construction control service," this chapter uses "joint control" because it is the one contained in the applicable laws.

The Legal Background to this chapter discusses certain basic concepts relating to the joint control industry and reviews the relevant statutory and regulatory provisions. The Transaction Guide outlines the steps followed by a joint control agent in processing a construction disbursement assignment. Finally, the Forms part features examples of the primary papers that must be drafted by a control agent in order to arrange for and execute its services.

Obviously, entering into a joint control agreement is only one optional step in the construction process. Therefore, the attorney should use this chapter in conjunction with the following chapters, which cover other aspects of construction law: Chapter 30A, Construction Financing; Chapter 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits; and Chapter 31, Mechanics' Liens. Further, because control funds are usually disbursed to the general contractor, the attorney may wish to consult the following chapters: Chapter 88, Licensing of Contractors, and Chapter 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts.

CHAPTER 30E JOINT (BUILDERS') CONTROL AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30E.10

§ 30E.10 Need for Management of Construction Funds

Joint control arrangements were developed to solve the problems connected with construction fund management. Problems frequently develop in this area because the parties involved in a construction project are expected to, but typically do not, possess the expertise or the capability to adequately handle construction funds. For example, general contractors are normally responsible for charging the customer for subcontractors' services and then distributing payments to the subcontractors while retaining a profit. However, many contractors are inexperienced in financial matters for the following reasons: they have little capital because they deal primarily with services rather than goods; in addition, they have few assets because they typically lease equipment and perform at a site belonging to another person.

Other parties to a construction transaction may also be unable to handle the funds competently. In most cases, the owner will not be equipped with either the information or the expertise to supervise the general contractor's financial arrangements, and cannot afford to hire the construction manager, certified public accountants, inspectors, or other personnel needed to perform this supervision. Even the lending institution often does not have a sufficient staff of investigators or an adequately detached interest to satisfactorily perform a construction audit. Thus, owners and lending companies may find it advantageous to accept financial supervision of building projects.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 30E JOINT (BUILDERS') CONTROL AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30E.11

§ 30E.11 Applicability of Escrow Law

[1] Overview of Law

Joint control agents are governed by the Escrow Law [see Fin. Code §§ 17005.1, 17005.6; see also Fin. Code § 17000 et seq. (Escrow Law); see also [2], below]. The Escrow Law defines an escrow as any transaction in which one person, for the purpose of effecting the sale, transfer, encumbrance, or leasing of real or personal property to another person, delivers a written instrument, evidence of title, money, or other thing of value to a third person to be held by the third person until the happening of a specified event or the performance of a prescribed condition, when it is to be delivered to a grantee, grantor, promisee, promisor, obligee, obligor, bailee, bailor, or the agent or employee of one of those parties [Fin. Code § 17003(a)].

With regard to internet escrow companies, "escrow" also includes any transaction in which one person, for the purpose of effecting the sale or transfer of personal property or services to another person, delivers money (or its internet-authorized equivalent) to a third person to be held by that third person until the happening of a specified event or the performance of a prescribed condition, when it is then to be delivered by that third person to a grantee, grantor, promisee, promisor, obligee, obligor, bailee, bailor, or any agent or employee of any of those parties [Fin. Code § 17003(b)].

Under the Escrow Law, any person engaged in the business of receiving escrows for deposit or delivery for compensation is classified as an "escrow agent" [Fin. Code § 17004]. Only a corporation licensed under the Escrow Law may engage in business as an escrow agent [see Fin. Code § 17200]. Notwithstanding the foregoing, certain classes of professional escrow holders are exempted from the requirements of the Escrow Law [see Fin. Code § 17006].

For comprehensive coverage of the Escrow Law, see Ch. 26, Real Property Escrows .

[2] Joint Control Agents

"Escrow agent" as used in the Escrow Law includes joint control agents [Fin. Code § 17005.6; see [1], above; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1710]. A "joint control agent" is a person or entity [see Fin. Code § 17002.5] engaged in the business of receiving money or other property for disbursal or use in payment of the cost of labor, materials, services, permits, fees, or other expenses incurred in the construction of improvements on real property. "In the business" means conducting any of the above transactions as a primary business or as an incidence to another business, whether or not for compensation, but does not include real estate lending or acting as an authorized representative, agent, or loan correspondent for a real estate lender [Fin. Code § 17005.1]. Although this business involves the disbursement of funds, joint control agents are exempt from the provisions of the Check Sellers, Bill Payers and Proraters Law [Fin. Code § 12100(d); see Fin. Code § 12000 et seq.].

[3] Escrow Regulations

Because a joint control agent is a type of escrow agent, a joint control agent is governed by the regulations that apply to escrow agents [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1710; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1709 et seq.; see also Fin. Code § 17400]. As a result, joint control agents must be licensed as escrow agents [see Fin. Code § 17200 et seq.] and comply with other regulatory requirements discussed in this chapter.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 30E JOINT (BUILDERS') CONTROL AGREEMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30E.12

§ 30E.12 Services Performed by Joint Control Agents

[1] In General

The term "joint" is used in connection with the control agent designation to indicate that control over project funds is officially shared by the joint control agent and certain other parties, typically the contractor, lender, and owner. However, as the following discussion of the standard control arrangement indicates, the joint control agent has the exclusive right to disburse project funds, while other parties have only an advisory or ministerial role in the disbursement process.

A joint control agent will not enter into a joint control agreement unless the agent independently determines that the estimates of the contractor or owner are realistic and that there appears to be sufficient funds available to complete the project in the manner required by the construction contract. Once this has been established, the joint control agreement executed by the parties will (1) require the owner to assign the construction funds to the agent, and (2) require the lender to pay these funds directly to the agent according to a pre-arranged schedule. As they are received, the funds must be deposited by the agent in a trust account that is established solely for the particular project [Fin. Code § 17409(a); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737] and is not subject to the agent's own liabilities [Fin. Code § 17410]. If desired, the funds may subsequently be deposited into an interest-bearing account [see Fin. Code § 17409(a); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737].

[2] Disbursements

The joint control agreement will set forth the requirements governing the disbursement of project funds by the joint control agent. Typically, the agreement will require the use of voucher forms (also referred to as disbursement orders or applications for payment) supplied by the agent [see § 30E.202]. Each voucher should describe the work or supplies that are the subject of the payment request, and should be signed by the payee (that is, the subcontractor or material supplier) and the contractor or owner. It should also contain, or be accompanied by, a waiver of the payee's mechanics' lien rights.

In addition to requiring the use of vouchers, the joint control agreement may also grant the joint control agent the discretion to pay certain specified costs without a disbursement order or other request for payment.

Unless the principals have prepared written instructions specifying a different disbursement arrangement, project funds cannot be disbursed for the payment of the cost of labor, materials, services, permits, fees, or other expenses incurred in the construction of the project until the joint control agent has determined that the person furnishing the labor, materials, services, permits, fees, or other items has substantially complied with the specifications contained in the control agreement [Fin. Code § 17422]. As a practical matter, the joint control agreement will probably (1) strictly limit the agent's obligation to inspect the property, and (2) expressly provide that the agent does not guarantee the performance of the other parties or the completion or quality of any part of the project. Further, it may provide that the signature of the contractor or the owner on a voucher will conclusively establish the agent's right to draw a check for the work covered by the voucher.

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30E.110

§ 30E.110 Establishing Control Mechanism

1. Confirm that joint control agreement accomplishes the following, to extent applicable:

NOTE:

The contents of a joint control agreement will be determined by agreement between the parties. However, as a practical matter, most joint control companies use their own agreement forms [see, e.g., § 30E.200[2]], and it is up to the owner and contractor to decide whether or not the provisions in those agreements are acceptable. It is rare that a joint control company will amend such a form to satisfy another party. This Section contains a nonexclusive list of some of the more common types of provisions found in these forms. Most statutory and regulatory requirements affecting the control relationship do not affect the provisions of the agreement and therefore are discussed elsewhere in this chapter.

If a joint control agent, or a person or company related to or affiliated with the agent, is a principal in a particular joint control transaction or is acting or has acted as a broker or salesperson in relation to the transaction, the agent must include a notice of that fact on the face of the joint control agreement. The notice may also be transmitted electronically to all parties [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1740.1]. For further discussion, see § 30E.200[1][c].

a. Requires owner to assign all construction loan funds to joint control agent [see P 3, below].

b. Requires owner and/or contractor to deposit, upon request, additional funds if existing funding is prematurely exhausted or appears inadequate.

c. Guarantees application of all funds to purposes described in agreement, except in cases of fraud, forgery, or misrepresentation.

d. Does not guarantee:
(1) Progress, quality, or completion of construction; or

(2) Complete payment of construction costs.

NOTE:
Although the joint control agent must release available funds upon completion of specified tasks, the agent does not guarantee that the other parties will satisfy their contractual obligations, or that the funds will be adequate to pay all construction costs.

e. Requires joint control agent to pay for extra work, but only if owner and contractor have:

(1) Approved extra work in writing; and

(2) Deposited reasonable cost of extra work.

NOTE:
The agreement may provide that extras or changes may be permitted without prior consent if a deposit (including a reserve fund) is made, and a specified fee is paid.

f. Specifies method of charging for services, e.g. [see § 30E.200[1][b]]:

(1) Minimum charge for nominal job.

(2) Regular percentage of all costs disbursed through control.

(3) If project not completed on time, a late charge (equaling specified percentage of total fee payable at end of original construction period) for each additional month beyond specified period.

g. Authorizes advances for general contractor's overhead expenses [see § 30E.111, P 9].

h. Specifies circumstances triggering joint control agent's right to take possession of premises and to complete project, e.g.:

(1) Abandonment of project by contractor.

(2) Inability of contractor to demonstrate availability of sufficient construction funds.

(3) Contractor's death, incapacity, or bankruptcy.

(4) Contractor's violation of joint control agreement or owner-contractor agreement.

NOTE:
Joint control agents typically insist on the inclusion of this type of provision, and will frequently elect to have the project completed following the occurrence of one of the triggering events described in the agreement. In many cases, particularly after all construction funds have been received from the lender and/or the project is close to completion, it is easier to complete the project than to transfer the remaining funds, documents, and obligations to the lender. Owners are often pleased with this result because they do not necessarily want the project to be cancelled solely due to the occurrence of one of the triggering events.

i. Provides that if contractor elects not to exercise right to complete project [see P h, above], lender will succeed to agent's rights.

2. Instruct joint control agent to prepare and maintain books adequately reflecting joint control transaction as follows [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1732.2]:

NOTE:
These books should be preserved for at least five years [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737.3(a)].

a. Prepare ledger sheet.

b. Set up liability controlling account.

NOTE:
This account is simply a record of all the money that has been deposited with the agent in connection with a particular control job.

c. Reconcile ledger sheet at least once each week with liability controlling account.

d. Once a month, reconcile ledger and liability controlling accounts with bank statements of trust account.

e. Set up cash receipt and disbursement journal or file containing copies of all receipts and checks (and/or check stubs) for posting to above records.

3. Handle deposits of funds in following manner:

a. Have all right and title to funds assigned to joint control agent [see § 30E.200[1][c]].

b. Have lender pay out funds to joint control agent in appropriate installments, such as:

(1) Initial advance on acquisition of property or furnishing of loan.

(2) Foundation advance when all foundations are laid, subfloors are in, and basic building materials are gathered at construction site.

(3) Exteriors (hull or shell) advance when outside facing and roof are completed or are finished except for decorative factors.

(4) Interiors advance when inside walls have been completed or finished except for decorative factors.

(5) Completion funding when all construction is finished and claims period has expired or danger is cleared by agreements or indemnities.

c. Issue consecutively prenumbered receipts for all money or checks to be deposited, and keep copies of receipts in separate file [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1741.1].

4. Establish and operate special trust account as follows [Fin. Code § 17409(a); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737]:

a. Receive first deposit of money for control job from owner, lender, contractor, or other source.

b. On or before close of next full working day after initial receipt of funds, deposit funds in account designated "trust" or "escrow" account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(a)].

NOTE:
No funds other than those received as part of an escrow transaction can be deposited in the account or otherwise commingled with escrow money [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(a)].

c. Do not commingle funds with other funds [see Fin. Code § 17411].

5. If desired, instruct joint control agent to arrange for subsequent deposit of trust funds into interest-bearing escrow account, and to maintain account, as follows [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737; see Fin. Code § 17409(a)]:

NOTE:
Because the joint control agent will probably receive the construction funds from the lender in periodic installments and then immediately use those funds to pay costs incurred up to that point, it is unlikely that the funds will be in the agent's possession long enough to justify the establishment of an interest-bearing escrow account. However, this option may be desirable if, for example, the owner will be depositing cash with the agent.

The following procedural requirements must be followed unless the joint control agent first receives a written waiver or variance from the Commissioner of Corporations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(k)].

a. Establish account solely for deposit of trust funds [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(b)]:

(1) At bank, savings bank, savings and loan association, or credit union; and

(2) In name of joint control agent as trustee for principals to control job identified by control number.

b. Prepare escrow instructions that [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(c)]:

NOTE:
The attorney for the joint control agent will usually prepare these instructions.

(1) Authorize opening of above account;

(2) Specify type of account to be opened and amount of deposit;

(3) Identify name and location of bank or other institution;

(4) Specify disposition of:
(a) Interest both at close of escrow and in event that escrow fails to close; and

(b) Any accrued interest retained in account after close of escrow;

(5) Indicate that principals have been advised by agent of possible restrictions and/or penalties for early withdrawal of funds; and

(6) Prohibit agent from withdrawing funds from account except for redeposit into trust or escrow account.

c. Have joint control agent:

(1) Take steps to ensure that funds are fully insured or guaranteed [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(d)]; and

(2) Establish and maintain adequate controls over passbooks and certificates issued by financial institution in connection with account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(e)].

d. Establish and maintain control ledger summarizing deposits in account or make memo entry on each individual escrow ledger.

NOTE:
The posting of the ledger must include the control number, interest-bearing account number, date of deposit, and amount of deposit [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(f)].

e. Transfer all funds in account, and any interest paid on those funds, into "trust" or "escrow account" [see P 4, above] before close of escrow [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(g)].

NOTE:
Notwithstanding the foregoing, a specified portion of the accrued interest may be retained in the interest-bearing account until the end of the current calendar quarter, if the escrow instructions so provide [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(g)].

f. Do not make disbursements from trust or escrow account against funds in interest-bearing account until those funds have been transferred and receipted into trust or escrow account with proper posting to particular control job [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(h)].

g. When transferring funds between trust or escrow account and interest-bearing accounts [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(i)]:

(1) Comply with regulatory transfer requirements [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1740.4; see also P 7, below].

(2) Transfers may be made electronically.

h. Confirm that interest paid on account is paid over to principal having deposited moneys in escrow unless escrow instructions clearly specify that interest is to be paid to named person other than agent [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1787(j)].

NOTE:
Notwithstanding any provisions in any escrow instructions, the interest paid or payable on the interest-bearing account must not be transferred to the account of, accrue to the benefit of, or otherwise be treated as an asset of the agent [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1737(j)].

6. Instruct joint control agent to refrain from using funds from control account for following purposes [Fin. Code § 17420]:

a. Referral fee for obtaining joint control business.

b. Broker fee that is contingent on any performance under applicable construction or loan contracts unless and until control job is completed.

7. If transfer is to be made between any joint control accounts, instruct joint control agent to take following steps to consummate transfer [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1740.4(a)]:

a. Make appropriate book entries.

b. Write check from one account and deposit in other.

c. Obtain and retain receipt for transfer deposit.

d. Include in files documentation of reasons for, and parties' approval of, transfer.

§ 30E.111 Disbursing Funds

NOTE:

The procedure for disbursing funds will vary from project to project. The disbursement responsibilities of the joint agent will depend in part on the experience of the project participants and the size and complexity of the project. In any event, the disbursement procedure should be described in detail in the joint control agreement.

Many joint control agreements provide for the use of a voucher system for the disbursement of funds. This Section describes such a system.

1. Confirm that joint control agent provides general contractor with blank vouchers, disbursement orders, or other applications for payment [see § 30E.202].

2. Have general contractor prepare voucher for subcontractor or material supplier ("payee") on following occasions:

a. If payee is performing single phase operation, on completion of item.

b. If payee is responsible for completing several phases of work, on completion of each major item requiring substantial expenditure.

3. Confirm that completed voucher form contains all relevant information, e.g.:

a. Description of item completed, including:
(1) Names of owner, contractor, and payee.

(2) Address or other description of site.

(3) Types of materials used and labor performed.

(4) Separate cost figures for labor and materials.

b. Appropriate representations by payee, e.g.:

(1) That services and/or materials identified in voucher were performed for or used on project covered by voucher.

(2) That subcontractor has not potentially incurred mechanics' liens for property involved.

(3) That materials identified in voucher conform with specifications.

(4) That all independent entities performing for and under subcontractor have been fully compensated.

c. Agreement by payee to waive all mechanic's lien rights to extent of payment covered by voucher [see Civ. Code § 3262].

NOTE:
For complete coverage of the waiver of mechanics' lien rights, see Chapter 31, Mechanics' Liens **.

4. Confirm that joint control agent fulfills contractual obligation to inspect jobsite [see Fin. Code § 17422; see also § 30E.12[2]].

5. Instruct joint control agent to take following steps when making disbursements from trust account:

a. Comply with disbursement provisions of joint control agreement [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1738; see Fin. Code § 17421].

b. Unless above agreement provides otherwise, when paying for construction items, make payment only after determining that person furnishing item has substantially complied with specifications contained in control agreement [Fin. Code § 17422; see Fin. Code § 17421].

c. Obey any order of court of competent jurisdiction [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1738].

6. Instruct joint control agent to refrain from withdrawing, paying out, or transferring money, or drawing, executing, or dating check, in excess of amount in account [10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1738.1, 1741.2].

7. If work is unsatisfactory, have joint control agent call in contractor (and subcontractor, when necessary) and explain standards to be met before disbursement will be made.

8. Whenever any construction problems develop, advise joint control agent to call all principals in for conference to discuss possible solutions.

9. Instruct joint control agent to make advances to general contractor for overhead operations in following manner:

a. Estimate overhead in advance and decide on total figure for all advances.

b. Space out draws for overhead over life of project.

10. After all costs have been paid, have joint control agent use remaining funds to:

a. Provide contractor with his or her profit; and

b. Distribute remainder to owner or lender as required by control agreement.

11. On completion of control disbursements, instruct joint control agent to give each principal a written statement of account that meets following requirements [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1741.3]:

NOTE:

Joint control agents frequently use a computer printout rather than a preprinted form to satisfy this requirement. The statement of account may be transmitted electronically to the principals. In the event a person is not able to electronically receive the statement, the joint control agent will mail a true and correct copy within 24 hours of its completion.

a. Specifies all receipts and disbursements made during job.

b. Clearly designates charges made for control services and for any commissions paid to other sources, and sets these apart from other disbursements.

c. Shows any payments made outside of control arrangement, and sets these apart from payments made by or to agent.

PART IV. FORMS

15-30E California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 30E.200

§ 30E.200 Joint Control (or Cost Disbursement) Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a "cost disbursement" or joint control agreement that was prepared by Builders Cost Disbursement & Evaluation Services, Inc. of Walnut Creek, California. As discussed in § 30E.110, very few statutory or regulatory requirements apply to these agreements. Thus, the contents are largely determined by the parties. However, as a practical matter, many joint control agents routinely use standard forms such as this one.

For a step-by-step description of the typical functions performed by a joint control agent pursuant to this type of agreement, see § 30E.110. For a discussion of the joint control industry, see the Legal Background.

[b] Fee Provision

This form was designed to be used in conjunction with a separate control fee authorization agreement establishing the joint control agency's fee for its services [see [2], P 12, below]. Other control agreements contain a provision that specifies this fee. For an example of such a provision, see § 30E.201[2].

[c] Summary of Other Provisions

This form requires the owner to assign to the joint control agent the proceeds of the owner's construction loan [see [2], P 2, below]. The agent must place the proceeds (and any additional money deposited by the owner or contractor) [see [2], P 1, below] in a segregated building fund account, and must use the funds to pay construction costs covered by the agreement [see [2], PP 3, 4, below]. Thereafter, disbursements must be made by the agent, either (1) following the receipt of a disbursement order [see § 30E.202] containing any of the signatures specified in Paragraph 19 of the agreement, or (2) at the discretion of the agent, to pay any of the construction costs covered by the agreement [see [2], P 19, below]. The agent may make the payments to the contractor, a subcontractor or material supplier, or other appropriate payee, and must secure mechanics' lien releases when appropriate [see [2], PP 3, 7, below]. If, during the term of the agreement, the funds provided by the owner prove to be inadequate to pay the construction costs and to maintain a reasonable reserve, the owner or contractor will be required to deposit additional amounts with the agent [see [2], P 6, below]. Further, the owner must deposit with the agent any additional sums necessary to pay the cost of any extra work approved in writing by the owner and contractor [see [2], P 5, below].

Under this agreement, the joint control agent guarantees that the money received by it will be applied solely to the purposes specified in the agreement [see [2], P 7, below]. The agent does not guarantee that the construction work will proceed or be completed, or that the fund established pursuant to the agreement will be sufficient to satisfy all incurred expenses [see [2], PP 7, 8, below]. Further, the agent does not guarantee that the work will comply with the plans and specifications or building code requirements, or meet minimum performance standards [see [2], P 10, below].

If the contractor abandons the project or certain other specified events occur, the agent may take possession of the premises and complete the work [see [2], P 11, below]. If the agent elects not to proceed with the work under those circumstances, the project lender will have the right to do so [see [2], PP 9, 11, below]. If the lender elects to exercise that right, the agent must (on demand) disburse to the lender all unused funds and will then be relieved of any further obligation under the agreement [see [2], P 9, below].

[d] Notice of Other Involvement in Transaction

If a joint control agent or a person or company related to or affiliated with the agent is a principal in a particular joint control transaction, or is acting or has acted as a broker or salesperson in relation to the transaction, the agent must notify all parties to the transaction of that fact before being employed by them as the joint control agent. This notification must be accomplished by including an appropriate notice, in at least eight-point bold type (or its equivalent), on the face of the joint control agreement. The notice may also be transmitted electronically to all parties [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1740.1]. As a practical matter, the neutral third party role of the joint control agent [see § 30E.11 [1]] makes it unlikely that a joint control agent would also be a principal, broker, or salesperson for the same joint control transaction.

§ 30E.201 Fee Provision for Joint Control Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision that establishes the fee a joint control agent is to receive for his or her services. It is designed to be inserted into a joint control agreement [see § 30E.200[1][b], [2]].

There are no legal requirements governing joint control fees. However, the typical fee is approximately 1 1/2 or 1 3/4 percent of the total contract price.

[2] FORM

Fee Provision for Joint Control Agreement

Fee

The regular fee for the usual services to be performed by [name or other designation of joint control agent] as outlined in this Agreement will be $ _____ or _____ percent of the gross contract amount to be paid to [name or other designation of joint control agent] by the other signatories to this Agreement, in cash or from the construction funds received by [name or other designation of joint control agent] from Lender, Contractor, or Owner. The signatories other than [name or other designation of joint control agent] will also pay the following to [name or other designation of joint control agent]: (1) a fee of _____ percent of all sums disbursed by [name or other designation of joint control agent] or paid or payable to Contractor by Owner in addition to the contract price, whether paid for "extras" or otherwise; and (2) a sum of money equal to the reasonable value of any services rendered, or money expended, or indebtedness incurred, including any indebtedness incurred for reasonable attorneys' fees in connection with this Agreement, by [name or other designation of joint control agent], outside of the usual services rendered by [name or other designation of joint control agent] in performance of the Agreement. Further, unless contrary to governmental regulation, the other signatories will pay to [name or other designation of control agent] an amount equal to [specify fraction, e.g., one eighth] of the total fee payable under this Agreement, for each month in excess of [number ;] required to complete the construction and render a final accounting.

§ 30E.202 Voucher for Disbursement of Joint Control Funds

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an order of disbursement and waiver of liens that was prepared by Builders Cost Disbursement & Evaluation Services, Inc., of Walnut Creek, California. It is representative of the disbursement orders, vouchers, or applications for payment that are usually used to request that a joint control agent disburse funds to a designated payee.

Typically, at the outset of the project, the joint control agent provides the parties with blank voucher forms. Thereafter, each time a subcontractor or material supplier wishes to be paid for services rendered and/or materials supplied in connection with the project, a voucher is completed. It should identify each type of service performed or material supplied by the payee, and set forth the amount due for each service or material. By signing, the payee certifies that the voucher is accurate. The payee will also be required to waive mechanics' lien rights, either by signing the voucher or by attaching a waiver. The attorney should confirm that the waiver satisfies statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 3262; see also Ch. 31, Mechanics' Liens (complete coverage of waiver and release requirements)]. The contractor should verify the accuracy of the information set forth in the voucher, sign it, and then submit it to the joint control agent for payment [see [b], below].

For a procedural guide to the use of vouchers, see Section 30E.111.

[b] Inspection and Disbursement by Joint Control Agent

Unless the principals have prepared written instructions specifying a different disbursement arrangement, joint control funds cannot be disbursed until the joint control agent has determined that the person furnishing the labor, materials, services, permits, fees, or other items has substantially complied with the specifications contain ed in the control agreement [Fin. Code § 17422]. As a practical matter, the joint control agreement will usually contain language strictly limiting the inspection obligations of the agent. For example, the agreement may provide that the agent will inspect the construction site solely to determine what services or materials have been supplied to the site, and that the agent does not guarantee the quality or completion of the work. Further, the agreement may make the contractor or owner responsible for verifying the accuracy of requests for payment, and provide that the signature of the contractor or owner on a payment voucher will conclusively establish the right of the agent to disburse the funds covered by the voucher. After satisfying all of its obligations regarding the processing of the voucher and the inspection of the work, the agent will disburse the funds directly to the payee.

Proposed Revision of California Mechanics' Lien Law

In 1999, the California Law Revision Commission was requested to undertake a study of the law governing mechanics' liens, and associated construction remedies in California. The resulting recommendation, which includes proposed legislation, was sent to the Governor and the Legislature in February, 2008 [see http://www.clrc.ca.gov/pub/Printed-Reports/REC-H821.pdf]. The recommendation provided the basis for SB 1691, which was introduced during the 2007-2008 session, passed both the Assembly and Senate but was vetoed by the governor as not being of sufficiently high priority. The legislation has been resurrected in the 2009-2010 session as SB 189, which, as of December, 2009, is under consideration by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. In its current form, SB 189 closely tracks the Commission's proposed legislation, and if enacted, would be operative January 1, 2011. Provided the legislation is enacted, it will be fully incorporated into the text in a future release.

Some of the more significant changes to current law that would be made by the proposed legislation include:

1. Reorganization. The proposed legislation relocates the provisions of the mechanics' lien law relating to private works of improvement to the end of the Civil Code, beginning with Section 8000. This avoids the confusion of using old section numbers for new and different provisions and allow for future expansion of the law without having to resort to decimal section numbering.

The proposed legislation also relocates the statutes governing public work construction remedies, such as the stop notice and payment bond. The public work provisions would be moved into the Public Contract Code commencing with Section 41010. This is intended to solve the problems created by multiple sets of corresponding, but dissimilar provisions for public and private works.

2. Terminology. The proposed legislation cleans up and systematizes the statutory definitions to provide more consistent usage throughout the mechanics lien law.

3. Standardization of various notice provisions. The current mechanics lien law provides for many types of notice, including: preliminary notice, stop notice, notice of overdue laborer compensation, notice of non-responsibility, notice to principal and surety, stop work notice, notice of completion, and notice of cessation. Each notice is subject to unique provisions governing such things as content, service, and proof of service. The proposed legislation standardizes these notice provisions to provide consistency throughout the range of remedies [see proposed Civ. Code §§ 8100-8118]. For example, the legislation prescribes standard content applicable to all notices [see proposed Civ. Code § 8102; Pub. Con. Code § 42120]. It replaces the individual variants in existing law applicable to one type of notice or another by establishing a general procedure for giving notice to be applied throughout the mechanics lien law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.20]. It also standardizes the proof of mailing and proof of delivery provisions and adds a provision for proof of electronic notice [see proposed Civ. Code § 8118; Pub. Con. Code § 42190].

4. Preliminary notice. While the proposed legislation retains most of the substance of the preliminary notice provisions of existing law, the existing provisions are broken into smaller, more comprehensible pieces, which streamlines and simplifies their wording, and clarifies the language of the notice [compare Civ. Code §§ 3097, 3098 with proposed Civ. Code §§ 8200-8214].

The proposed legislation eliminates the appearance in existing law that seems to require a direct contractor to both give preliminary notice to the construction lender and exempt the contractor from having to do so [see Civ. Code § 3097(b)]. Under the proposed legislation, the contractor is required to give the lender preliminary notice [see proposed Civ. Code § 8200].

5. Notice of claim of lien. Existing law does not require a lien claimant to notify the owner when a claim of lien is recorded; nor does it require the county recorder to do so, except in some counties on request. Recognizing that the constitutionality and fairness of the mechanics lien law would be enhanced if the lien claimant were required to notify the owner on recording a claim of lien, the proposed legislation imposes a recording requirement [see proposed Civ. Code §§ 8418, 8420].

6. New lis pendens requirement. The proposed legislation requires that a claimant who commences an action to enforce a lien claim record a lis pendens disclosing the enforcement action within 110 days of recording the lien claim. Failure to do so results in expiration of the claim, rather than having to wait a year or more [see proposed Civ. Code § 8460(a)].

This chapter covers the legal and practical aspects of the three remedies available under the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.]: mechanics' liens, stop notices, and payment bonds. It includes discussion of payment bonds for private works and state public works, but does not include coverage of payment bonds for federal public works. It discusses the rights and remedies of the various parties involved in construction projects, including the property owner. This chapter also covers design professionals' liens [see Civ. Code §§ 3081.1-3081.10].

For further discussion of construction contract bonds, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity, § 79.240 et seq. For a detailed discussion of the mechanics' lien law, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Chs. 450- 453 (Matthew Bender).

§ 31.10 Governing Law

The California Constitution states that mechanics, persons furnishing materials, artisans, and laborers of every class will have a lien on the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished materials, for the value of the labor done or material furnished [Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 3]. Civ. Code § 3082 et seq., referred to as the mechanics' lien law, governs the legal enforcement of these liens. Except as otherwise provided, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure governing civil actions in general [see Code Civ. Proc. § 307 et seq.] govern proceedings brought under the mechanics' lien law. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to new trials and appeals also govern proceedings under the mechanics' lien law, except when inconsistent with the provisions of that law [Civ. Code § 3259]. Transactions governed by the Oil and Gas Lien Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.50 et seq. (labor or services for oil or gas wells)] or Pub. Contract Code §§ 20457-20464 (former Sts. & Hy. Code §§ 5290-5297, relating to labor or services for street work) are not governed by the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3266].

§ 31.11 Definitions

[1] "Claimant"

A "claimant" is any person entitled under the mechanics' lien law to record a claim of lien, to give a stop notice in connection with any work of improvement, to recover on any payment bond, or any combination of the above [Civ. Code § 3085].

[2] "Original Contractor"

An "original contractor" is any contractor who has a direct contractual relationship with the property owner [Civ. Code § 3095].

[3] "Work of Improvement"

A "work of improvement" includes, but is not restricted to, the construction, alteration, addition to, or repair in whole or part of any building, wharf, bridge, ditch, flume, aqueduct, well, tunnel, fence, machinery, railroad, or road, the seeding, sodding, or planting of any tract of land for landscaping purposes, the filling, leveling, or grading of any lot or tract of land, the demolition of buildings, and the removal of buildings. This term refers to the entire structure or scheme of improvement as a whole [Civ. Code § 3106].

A work of improvement must result in a permanent improvement to give rise to a mechanic's lien. However, in United Rentals Northwest, Inc. v. Snider Lumber Products, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1479, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 , the court of appeal concluded that the permanency requirement cannot have much significance when the improvement is the removal or demolition of a building. In that case the improvement consisted of the removal of wood drying kilns that were 68 and 120 feet long, made of a steel frame and bolted to concrete slabs. There is no requirement in the statute that the land remain vacant permanently after the removal or demolition. Logically, the permanency doctrine must be satisfied in such a context by the fact that the removed or demolished building is removed or demolished [United Rentals Northwest, Inc. v. Snider Lumber Products, Inc. (200) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1479, 1484-1485, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d

§ 31.12 Cumulative Remedies Available to Claimants

A person who has contributed to a work of improvement but has not received full payment may pursue several remedies simultaneously. That person may file a mechanics' lien claim and foreclosure action on the work of improvement and the real property on which it is situated [see Civ. Code §§ 3109-3154]. He or she may file a stop notice, also known as a notice to withhold, on the construction lender or person holding unexpended construction funds, thus requiring funds in the amount of the claim to be withheld rather than paid out to the original contractor [see Civ. Code §§ 3156-3214]. If the original contractor has given the property owner a payment bond, also known as a labor and materials bond, the claimant can bring an action directly against the surety on the bond to recover the amount of the claim [see Civ. Code §§ 3225-3252]. These three remedies under the mechanics' lien law are cumulative [see Consolidated Elec. Distributors, Inc. v. Kirkham, Chaon & Kirkham, Inc. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 54, 61, 95 Cal. Rptr. 673] , and may be enforced in any order [see Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 653, 149 Cal. Rptr. 711] .

In addition, the claimant may maintain an action against the person who contracted for the labor or materials furnished [Civ. Code § 3152]. He or she may also seek recovery against the contractor's bond if the contractor has an active license [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7071.5, 7071.6]. Finally, if a payment has not been made under the contract, the original contractor may serve the owner with a "10-day stop work order." If the amount due is not paid within 10 days, the contractor is entitled to seek a judicial determination of liability for the amount not paid in addition to any and all other rights he or she has under law [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a), (b), (d); see Civ. Code § 3260.1 (requires owner to pay progress payment within 30 days following payment demand, except as otherwise agreed to in writing)].

Any money collected on a judgment obtained by the claimant in a personal action or mechanics' lien action will offset the amount of the lien [Civ. Code § 3152].

CHAPTER 31 MECHANICS' LIENS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15-31 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 31.13

AUTHOR: Timothy F. O'Leary Practice Consultant

§ 31.13 Mechanics' Liens

[1] Nature of Remedy

A mechanics' lien is an encumbrance on the improved property that may be foreclosed in a court action [see § 31.16[1]]. Mechanics' liens do not apply to public works [Civ. Code § 3109]. A "public work" is any work of improvement contracted for by a public entity [Civ. Code § 3100]. A "public entity" is the state, Regents of the University of California, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision or public corporation in the state [Civ. Code § 3099].

Because of principles of sovereign immunity, any right to impress a mechanic's lien on public property must be expressly, not implicitly, provided for by statute [Mayrhofer v. Board of Education (1891) 89 Cal. 110, 112, 26 P. 646; see North Bay Construction, Inc. v. City of Petaluma (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 552, 557, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455]. Thus, a paving contractor who contracted with a developer to perform grading work on property leased by the developer from the city could not enforce a mechanic's lien against the city's property, even though the express exemption for public work provided by Civ. Code § 3109 did not apply. No statute imposes liability on a public entity for debts incurred by a tenant for improving property owned by and leased from the public entity [North Bay Construction, Inc. v. City of Petaluma (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 552, 557-558, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455].

[2] Entitlement to Lien

Mechanics, materialmen, contractors, subcontractors, lessors of equipment, artisans, architects, registered engineers, licensed land surveyors, machinists, builders, teamsters, draymen, and all persons and laborers of every class who perform labor on, bestow skill or other necessary services on, furnish materials or leasing equipment to be used or consumed in, or furnish appliances, teams, or power to a work of improvement, have a lien on the property that has benefitted from their labor, for the value of labor done or materials furnished, and for the value of the use of any appliances, equipment, teams, or power [Civ. Code § 3110].

In addition, an express trust fund to which a portion of a laborer's total compensation is to be paid pursuant to an applicable employment agreement or a collective bargaining agreement for the provision of benefits (including, but not limited to, employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1), is entitled to assert the same rights and claims as laborers performing labor on, or bestowing skill or other necessary services on, a work of improvement, to the extent of the compensation agreed to be paid to that express trust fund for labor on that improvement only [Civ. Code § 3111]. As amended in 1999 [see Stats. 1999, ch. 795, § 7], Civ. Code § 3111 is intended to reinstate the ability of laborers and employee trust funds to use mechanics' liens and creditor priorities to obtain payment of unpaid wages and fringe benefits. The amendment was drafted in an attempt to avoid having state remedies for collection of those wages and fringe benefits be preempted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [24 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.]. Before this amendment, the California Supreme Court held that Civ. Code § 3111 was preempted by ERISA [see Carpenters So. Cal. Admin. Corp. v. El Capitan Development Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1041, 1049-1054, 282 Cal. Rptr. 277, 811 P.2d 296] . The Ninth Circuit has subsequently held that ERISA does not preempt California's stop notice and payment bond remedies [Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Trust Funds v. Standard Industrial Electric. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 247 F.3d 920, 925] .

Finally, any claimant who has made any site improvement at the instance or request of the owner of any lot or tract of land has a lien on that lot or tract for work done or materials furnished [Civ. Code § 3112]. A site improvement means any of the following [Civ. Code § 3102]:

- Demolishing or removing improvements, trees, or other vegetation;
- Drilling test holes;
- Grading, filling, or otherwise improving any lot or tract of land, or the street, highway, or sidewalk in front of or adjoining any lot or tract of land;
- Constructing or installing sewers or other public utilities; or
- Constructing any areas, vaults, cellars, or rooms under sidewalks or making any improvements on them.

A mechanics' lien does not attach until construction has been undertaken by the doing of actual visible work on the land or the delivery of construction materials to the land [Walker v. Lytton Sav. & Loan Assn. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 152, 156-157, 84 Cal. Rptr. 521, 465 P.2d 497] . Thus, a claimant is not entitled to a lien for preparing preliminary plans and specifications for a work of improvement if actual physical construction of the intended improvement is never commenced [Tracy Price Associates v. Hebard (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 778, 787, 72 Cal. Rptr. 600 ; D'Orsay Int'l Partners v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 836, 842, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 399] . However, under the design professional's lien law, a design professional has a lien remedy in cases when no actual construction of the planned work of improvement is commenced before recordation of the notice of lien [Civ. Code § 3081.1 et seq.; see § 31.180]. Nevertheless, in enacting the design professional's lien law, the Legislature did not establish a general public policy supporting the protection of design/planning work in all cases. Thus, a contractor who performed design and planning services for a project on which construction never commenced could not rely on the principles underlying the design professional's lien to file a mechanic's lien [D'Orsay Int'l Partners v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 836, 841, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 399] .

[3] Authorization of Owner Required

For a mechanics' lien to encumber property, the work or materials must be done or furnished at the instance of the owner or of a person acting by the owner's authority. For this purpose, every contractor, subcontractor, sub-subcontractor, architect, builder, or other person having charge of all or any part of a work of improvement is deemed to be an agent of the owner [Civ. Code § 3110]. Every work of improvement constructed on any land, and all work or labor performed or materials furnished in connection with that work with the knowledge of the owner or of any person having or claiming any estate in the property, will be held to have been constructed, performed, or furnished at the instance of the owner or person claiming an estate, unless the owner or person claiming an estate gives a notice of nonresponsibility [Civ. Code § 3129; see § 31.20[1]].

[4] Amount of Lien

A mechanics' lien is a direct lien for either the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished, or for the price agreed on by the claimant and the person with whom the claimant contracted, whichever is less [Civ. Code § 3123(a)]. The lien will not be limited by the contract price unless the property owner records the contract and original contractor's payment bond [Civ. Code § 3123(a); see § 31.22[3]]. The lien may include any amount due for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished based on a written modification of the contract or as a result of the rescission, abandonment, or breach of the contract. The amount of any lien based on modification, rescission, abandonment, or breach, however, may not exceed the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished [Civ. Code § 3123(b)]. The amount that an original contractor or subcontractor is entitled to recover on a claim of lien is net of all claims of other claimants for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished and embraced within the contract of the original contractor or subcontractor [Civ. Code § 3140].

[5] Property Subject to Lien

A mechanics' lien attaches to the work of improvement for which the claimant has provided labor or materials and the land on which it is situated. It also encumbers as much of the property surrounding the work as is required or convenient for the use and occupation of the improvement [Civ. Code § 3128]. If the person causing the work to be constructed owned less than a fee simple estate in the land, then only that lesser interest is subject to the lien, unless the owner of the fee simple knew of the work of improvement but failed to post and record a notice of nonresponsibility [see Civ. Code §§ 3128, 3129; see also § 31.20[1]].

§ 31.14 Priority of Mechanics' Liens

[1] Relationship to Other Liens

In general, different liens on the same property have priority according to the time of their creation [see Civ. Code § 2897]. Mechanics' liens, with one exception [see Civ. Code § 3138; see also [3], below], are preferred to any lien, mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance on the work of improvement and the site, that attaches subsequent to the commencement of the work of improvement. They are also preferred to any lien, mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance of which the claimant had no notice and which was unrecorded at the time of commencement of the work [Civ. Code § 3134]. A mortgage or deed of trust that would be prior to the liens to the extent of obligatory advances made in accordance with the commitment of the lender will also be prior to the liens as to any other advances, secured by the mortgage or deed of trust, that are used in payment of any claim of lien recorded at the dates of the other advances and thereafter in payment of costs of the work of improvement. The priority will not exceed the original obligatory commitment of the lender as shown in the mortgage or deed of trust [Civ. Code § 3136].

PRACTICE TIP:

Maintaining Priority. A principal concern of construction lenders is whether a contractor has "broken priority" by performing work before the trust deed was recorded. Representations by the borrower in the loan instruments that no such work has been performed is not binding on the third party contractor. The construction lender usually will purchase title insurance to insure its loan's priority. The title company will conduct inspections just prior to funding to ensure that no work of improvement has been performed. Such inspections are not fool-proof. Any work of improvement that has begun before the loan is funded may jeopardize the trust deed's priority vis-'a-vis the entire work of improvement and all the liens that are enveloped by the general contractor's lien. Commentary by Timothy F. O'Leary

[2] Site Improvements

Any site improvement that is provided for in a separate contract with respect to the erection of residential units or other structures will be considered a separate work of improvement. Commencement of the site improvement will not constitute commencement of the work of improvement consisting of the erection of any residential unit or other structure [Civ. Code § 3135].

Liens for site improvements [Civ. Code § 3112] are, subject to one exception [see Civ. Code § 3129; see also [3], below], preferred to (1) any mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance that attaches subsequent to the commencement of the site improvement work; (2) any mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance of which the claimant had no notice and that was unrecorded at the time of the commencement of the site improvement; and (3) any mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance recorded before the commencement of the site improvement work that was given for the sole or primary purpose of financing the site improvements, unless the loan proceeds are, in good faith, placed in the control of the lender under a binding agreement with the borrower to the effect that the proceeds are to be applied to the payment of claims of claimants and that no portion of those proceeds will be paid to the borrower in the absence of satisfactory evidence that all claims have been paid or that the time for recording claims of liens has expired and no such claims have been recorded [Civ. Code § 3137].

To preserve the priority of a mortgage or deed of trust recorded before the commencement of site improvement work, the lender is required to do more than secure a binding agreement that references the borrower's obligations and merely hold the funds in good faith. Civ. Code § 3137(c) further requires the lender to control the loan proceeds until all liens have been paid. Thus, a construction lender was not entitled to have its earlier recorded deed of trust maintain priority over an asphalt contractor's mechanics' lien for site improvements when evidence indicated the lender knew that the developer used a portion of the loan funds for other than site improvement costs, and the loan officer did not refer to the construction loan agreement to determine when, where, and how funds should be disbursed [see Schmitt v. Tri Counties Bank (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 1244-1246, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257] .

[3] Effect of Payment Bond

If the holder of any mortgage or deed of trust that is subordinate to any mechanics' lien procures a payment bond in an amount not less than 75 percent of the principal amount of the mortgage or deed of trust, and records the bond in the county recorder's office in the county where the site is located, then the mortgage or deed of trust will be preferred to all liens for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished after recording [Civ. Code § 3138]. Similarly, if the owner or holder of any mortgage or deed of trust that is subordinate to any lien for site improvements [see Civ. Code § 3137] procures a payment bond in an amount no less than 50 percent of the principal amount of the mortgage or deed of trust, and records the payment bond in the office of the county recorder's office in the county where the site is located before completion of the work of improvement, then the mortgage or deed of trust will be preferred to all such site improvement liens [Civ. Code § 3139].

§ 31.15 Filing Mechanics' Liens

[1] Preliminary 20-Day Notice

Most claimants are entitled to enforce a mechanics' lien only after giving a preliminary notice no later than 20 days after they first furnish labor, services, equipment, or materials to the jobsite [Civ. Code §§ 3097, 3114]. Every person who furnishes labor, services, equipment, or materials for which a mechanics' lien can be claimed, a stop notice given, or a claim against a payment bond asserted (other than persons under direct contract with the owner, persons performing actual labor for wages, and persons or entities, such as express trust funds, to whom a portion of a laborer's compensation is paid by agreement with that laborer or the laborer's collective bargaining agent) must serve a written preliminary notice on the owner or reputed owner, the original contractor or reputed contractor, and to the construction lender or reputed construction lender, if any [Civ. Code § 3097(a); see Civ. Code § 3089; see also Civ. Code § 3111 (express trust funds)]. All persons under direct contract with the owner and who furnish labor, service, equipment, or material for which a mechanics' lien can be claimed, a stop notice given, or a claim against a payment bond asserted (other than the original contractor, persons performing actual labor for wages, and persons or entities, such as express trust funds, to whom a portion of a laborer's compensation is paid by agreement with that laborer or the laborer's collective bargaining agent) must give a written preliminary notice only to the construction lender or the reputed construction lender, if any [Civ. Code § 3097(b); see Civ. Code § 3089; see also Civ. Code § 3111 (express trust funds)]. A claimant who fails to give preliminary notice is not precluded from giving notice at a later time, but that claimant will only be entitled to record a lien, file a stop notice, or assert a claim against a payment bond only for labor, service, equipment, or material furnished within 20 days before the date the preliminary notice was served and at any time thereafter [Civ. Code § 3097(d)].

To accommodate those entitled to give a preliminary 20-day notice, every written contract between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner to enter his or her name and residential and business addresses. If the contract is not one for home improvements or swimming pool construction, it must also include space for the owner to enter the name and address of any construction lenders. The original contractor must make the owner's and lender's information available to anyone seeking to serve a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. If a private work of improvement involves subcontracting any of the work, any contract between an original contractor and a subcontractor, or between subcontractors, must provide space for the name and address of the owner, original contractor, and any construction lender [Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. If the owner secures construction financing after construction is under way, he or she must provide all lenders' names and addresses to each person who has given the owner a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(n)].

Any person who has properly served a preliminary 20-day notice may file the notice with the county recorder in the county in which any portion of the property is located [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(1)]. Thereafter, the recorder will notify the person whenever a notice of completion or notice of cessation is recorded on the property [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(2)].

For a discussion of the preliminary 20-day notice, see § 31.202[1].

[2] Claim of Lien

To enforce a mechanics' lien, every claimant must record a written claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3115]. An original contractor must record the claim of lien between completion of the contract and either 90 days after the completion of the work of improvement if no notice of completion [see § 31.20[2]] or notice of cessation [see § 31.20[3]] has been recorded, or 60 days after recordation of a notice of completion or cessation [Civ. Code § 3115]. A contract is complete for purposes of commencing the recordation period under Civ. Code § 3115 when all work under the contract has been performed, excused, or otherwise discharged [Howard S. Wright Construction Co. v. BBIC Investors (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 228, 241, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 769 (recording of mechanic's lien was not premature because contract was "complete" on anticipatory breach of other contracting party)].

Any claimant other than an original contractor must record the claim of lien after the claimant has ceased furnishing labor, services, equipment, or materials, and before the expiration of 90 days after completion of the work of improvement if no notice of completion or cessation has been recorded, or 30 days after recordation of a notice of completion or cessation [Civ. Code § 3116]. The 90-day period of limitation on an action to foreclose the lien begins to run on recording the lien [Civ. Code § 3144(b)].

However, if the owner does not occupy an improved property of four or fewer units as a personal residence, he or she is obligated to notify the original contractor and any claimants who have provided a preliminary 20-day notice that a notice of completion or notice of cessation has been filed. Failure to notify the contractor and claimants extends the time within which they have to file a claim of lien to 90 days beyond the date a notice of completion or cessation is recorded [see Civ. Code § 3259.5].

A person who willfully includes in the claim of lien labor, services, equipment, or materials not furnished for the property described in the claim will forfeit the lien [Civ. Code § 3118]. However, no mistakes or errors in the statement of the demand, or of the amount of credits and offsets allowed, or of the balance asserted to be due the claimant, or in the description of the property against which the lien is recorded, will invalidate the lien, unless a court finds that the mistake or error was made with the intent to defraud. The lien may also be invalidated if the court finds that an innocent third party, without direct or constructive notice, has become the bona fide owner of the property since the claim was recorded, and that the notice of claim was so deficient that it did not put the party on further inquiry in any manner [Civ. Code § 3261].

For a discussion of the required contents of the claim of lien, see § 31.220[1].

[3] Mechanics' Lien Release Bond

If the owner of the property, the owner of any interest in the property, any original contractor, or any subcontractor disputes the correctness or validity of any claim of lien, that person may record, either before or after commencement of an action to enforce the lien, a surety bond in a penal sum equal to one and one-half times the amount of the claim or one and one-half times the amount allocated in the claim of lien to the parcel of property sought to be released, and conditioned on the payment of any sum that the claimant may recover on the claim. When this bond is filed, the real property is released from the lien and from any action brought to foreclose the lien. The principal on the bond may be either the owner of the property, the owner of any interest in the property, any original contractor, subcontractor, or sub-subcontractor affected by the claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3143].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.], which applies to all bonds given pursuant to any California statute unless the statute is inconsistent or prescribes a different rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.020(a)], allows two other forms of security to be given in lieu of a bond. An undertaking that otherwise satisfies the requirements for a bond may be given in its place with the same effect as if a bond were given [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210(a)].

§ 31.16 Foreclosing Mechanics' Liens

[1] Action to Foreclose

No recorded mechanics' lien will bind any property for longer than 90 days after recording, unless within that time the lien claimant brings an action in the proper court to foreclose the lien. The time for filing a foreclosure suit may be extended if the lien claimant gives an extension of credit to the lien debtor and records notice of the fact and terms of the extension before expiration of the 90-day period. The lien will continue in force until 90 days after the expiration of the credit, but in no case longer than one year from the time of completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3144(a)]. However, no giving of credit or extension of the lien or the time to enforce the lien will be effective as against any purchaser or encumbrancer for value and in good faith whose rights are acquired subsequent to the expiration of the 90-day period following recordation of the claim of lien, unless a notice or agreement is recorded before the acquisition of the rights of the purchaser or encumbrancer [Civ. Code § 3145]. If the claimant fails to commence an action to foreclose the lien within these time limitations, the lien automatically becomes null and void [Civ. Code § 3144(b)].

[2] Failure to File Suit

The failure to file suit, while barring the right to foreclosure, does not extinguish the lien itself. The claimant retains an inchoate personal right, created by the Constitution, to a lien. Consequently, he or she may file and enforce a second claim of lien for the same work, provided the owner has not petitioned for a decree to release the property from the lien pursuant to Civ. Code § 3145 [Coast Central Credit Union v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 703, 711, 257 Cal. Rptr. 468] . The same result obtains when the claimant voluntarily records a release of the lien [Solit v. Tokai Bank, Ltd. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1443-1445, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243] , unless the release states that the claim of lien has been "fully satisfied," in which case the claimant's inchoate right to a lien is extinguished because the release expressly provides that the underlying obligation has been paid [Koudmani v. Ogle Enterprises, Inc. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1650, 1658-1659, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330] . Similarly, the failure to file suit to foreclose a lien does not preclude the lien from being granted a valid preference under federal bankruptcy law [see In re Paul Potts Builders, Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 1279, 1280-1283] .

[3] Release of Lien by Court

At any time after the time for bringing an action to enforce the claim of lien has expired [Civ. Code § 3144] without the commencement of an action, the owner of the property or any interest in the property may petition the proper court for a decree to release the property from the lien [Civ. Code § 3154(a)]. A decree cancelling the claimant's lien will bar the claimant from bringing an action to foreclose the lien, but will not bar that claimant from other forms of relief [Civ. Code § 3154(h)]; in fact, it may not bar the claimant from filing another, otherwise timely, lien based on the same inchoate right to a lien for satisfaction of the underlying obligation [see Solit v. Tokai Bank, Ltd. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1443-1445, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 (dicta)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Second Lien Recording. A common tactic employed by contractors is to record a lien when the project is not yet complete. The purpose of the lien is to place the owner on notice of its claim. If the lien is not satisfied within the next 90 days, but other work is continuing, the contractor may wait to file suit. Instead, the contractor may record a second lien, thus extending for another 90 days the time within which the contractor may file suit. The statutes do not appear to prohibit this common practice of multiple lien recordings. While the owner may file a petition to expunge the first lien, owners rarely elect to do so when the contractor has recorded a second, valid lien. Commentary by Timothy F. O'Leary

§ 31.17 Stop Notices

A stop notice, also known as a notice to withhold, is a written notice to a property owner or construction lender from a claimant who has furnished labor, services, materials, or equipment to the work of improvement but has not been paid, demanding that sufficient funds be withheld from the construction fund for payment of the claim [see Civ. Code § 3103]. A "construction lender" is any mortgagee or beneficiary under a deed of trust lending funds with which the cost of the work of improvement is to be wholly or partially defrayed; any assignee or successor in interest of either; or any escrow holder or other party holding any funds furnished or to be furnished by the owner, lender, or any other person as a fund from which to pay construction costs [Civ. Code § 3087]. Although separate provisions of the mechanics' lien law govern stop notices for private works of improvement [see Civ. Code §§ 3156-3175] and those for public works [see Civ. Code §§ 3179-3214], stop notices given for either type of work must contain the same information [see Civ. Code § 3103; see also § 31.150]. While the amount that may be claimed in a stop notice is not set by statute, that amount should be determined by analogy to the amount for mechanics' liens [University Casework Systems, Inc, v. Superior Court (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 263, 266-267, 115 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; see § 31.13[4]].

A "bonded stop notice" is a stop notice given to any construction lender that is accompanied by a bond with good and sufficient sureties in a penal sum equal to one and one-quarter times the amount of the claim. The bond must be given with the condition that if the defendant recovers judgment in an action brought on the verified claim or on the lien filed by the claimant, the claimant will pay all costs awarded against the owner, original contractor, or construction lender and all damages that they may sustain by reason of the equitable garnishment effected by the claim or by reason of the lien, not exceeding the sum specified in the bond [Civ. Code § 3083].

§ 31.18 Stop Notices on Private Works

[1] Entitlement and Service

Any person entitled to a mechanics' lien claim [see § 31.13[2]], other than the original contractor, may give the property owner a stop notice. An owner may also demand a stop notice from a potential lien claimant, in order to satisfy the claim from construction funds rather than from a foreclosure action on the real property. If the claimant fails to serve a stop notice after such a demand, that claimant forfeits any right to a mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3158; see also § 31.233[1]].

Any person entitled to a mechanics' lien claim, including the original contractor, may also give a construction lender a stop notice or bonded stop notice for materials, equipment, or services furnished or labor performed [see Civ. Code §§ 3159, 3235]. If that notice is filed by the original contractor or by a subcontractor contracting directly with an owner, the claimant will be entitled to recover only the net amount due the claimant after deducting the stop notice claims of all subcontractors or material suppliers who have filed bonded stop notices on account of work done on behalf of the original contractor or the subcontractor [Civ. Code § 3159].

Claimants who are required to give a preliminary 20-day notice before filing a mechanics' lien [see § 31.15[1]] must also give the 20-day notice as a prerequisite to serving a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3160(a); see Civ. Code § 3097(a)]. The stop notice must be served during the period within which a claim of lien must be recorded [Civ. Code § 3160; see Civ. Code §§ 3115-3117; see also § 31.15[2]].

[2] Effect of Stop Notice

A property owner who receives a stop notice must withhold from the original contractor, or from any person acting under the contractor's authority to whom labor or materials (or both) have been furnished or agreed to be furnished, sufficient money due or to become due to answer the claim and any claim of lien that may be recorded. However, if a payment bond [see Civ. Code § 3235] has been recorded, the owner is not obligated to withhold the money, but may still do so. If the owner elects not to withhold, he or she must, within 30 days after receipt of the stop notice, (1) send the claimant, at the address shown in the stop notice, a written notice that the bond has been recorded, and (2) give the claimant a copy of the bond [Civ. Code § 3161].

As a general rule, a construction lender receiving a stop notice may, and on receipt of a bonded stop notice must, withhold from the borrower or other person to whom it or the owner is obligated to make payments or advancement out of the construction fund, sufficient money to answer the claim and any claim of lien that may be recorded. However, if a payment bond [see Civ. Code § 3235] is recorded in the office of the county recorder where the site is located at any time before the serving of the first stop notice, the construction lender (1) must withhold funds pursuant to a bonded stop notice filed by an original contractor, and (2) may, at its option, withhold funds pursuant to a stop notice or bonded stop notice given by anyone other than an original contractor [Civ. Code §§ 3159, 3162]. If the construction lender elects not to withhold because of prior recordation of a payment bond, the lender must furnish the claimant with a copy of the bond within 30 days after making the election, so long as the claimant provided the construction lender with a written request for notice of the election and a preaddressed, stamped envelope at the time the claimant gave the lender the stop notice or bonded stop notice [see Civ. Code §§ 3159, 3162]. A lender will not be liable for a failure to furnish a copy of the bond if (1) the failure was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error, (2) the lender maintains reasonable procedures to avoid such an error, and (3) the lender corrects the error not later than 20 days from the date on which the violation was discovered [Civ. Code § 3162; see Civ. Code § 3159].

If a construction lender objects to the sufficiency of the sureties on the bond accompanying a bonded stop notice, the lender must give the claimant written notice of the objection within 20 days after service of the bonded stop notice. If the claimant fails to substitute another bond of like amount executed by a corporate surety licensed to write bonds in California, the construction lender may disregard the bonded stop notice and release all withheld funds [Civ. Code § 3163].

[3] Effect on Assignment of Construction Loan Funds

No assignment of construction loan funds by the owner or contractor, whether made before or after a stop notice or bonded stop notice is given to a construction lender, will take priority over the stop notice or bonded stop notice. Further, such an assignment will have no effect on the rights of the stop-notice claimants [Civ. Code § 3166].

[3A] Voluntary Release

A stop notice claimant may reduce the amount of, or release in its entirety, a properly served private work stop notice without prejudicing the claimant's right to serve a subsequent timely and proper stop notice. The reduction or release must be in writing, but is not required to conform to the statutory forms of release required by Civ. Code § 3262(d) for use in a mechanics' lien context [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)]. To the extent of the reduction or release, it [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)(A)-(D)]:

- Releases the owner from any obligation to withhold money on account of the stop notice;
- Is effective to release the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice; and
- Does not operate as a release of any right that the claimant may have, other than the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice.

[4] Stop Notice Release Bond

A property owner, construction lender, original contractor, or subcontractor who disputes the correctness or validity of a private work stop notice or bonded stop notice may file a bond with the person on whom the notice was served. The bond must be executed by good and sufficient sureties in a penal sum equal to one and one-quarter times the amount stated in the notice, conditioned on the payment of any sum not exceeding the penal obligation of the bond that the claimant may recover on the claim together with the costs of suit in the action, if recovered. Once a bond is filed, the funds withheld to respond to the stop notice or bonded stop notice will be released [Civ. Code § 3171].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210 et seq.; see also § 31.15[3]].

[5] Actions to Enforce Payment of Claim

An action against the owner or construction lender to enforce payment of the claim stated in the stop notice or bonded stop notice may be commenced at any time after 10 days from the date of service, but no later than 90 days following the expiration of the period within which claims of liens must be recorded [see § 31.16[1]]. If an action is not brought within that period, the stop notice will cease to be effective, and the money will be paid or delivered to the contractor or other person to whom it is due [Civ. Code § 3172]. Any number of persons who have given stop notices or bonded stop notices may join in the same action [Civ. Code § 3175]. Notice of commencement of the action must be given within five days after commencement [Civ. Code § 3172].

If the action involves a bonded stop notice, the prevailing party will be entitled to collect from the party held liable by the court for payment of the claim, reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to other costs and to any liability for damages [Civ. Code § 3176]. If the plaintiff is the prevailing party, any amount awarded on the claim will include interest at the legal rate, calculated from the date the bonded stop notice was served on the owner or construction lender [Civ. Code § 3176.5]. The court, on notice and motion by a party,will determine who is the prevailing party for these purposes [see Civ. Code § 3176].

§ 31.19 Stop Notices on Public Works

[1] Entitlement and Service

Any of the following persons may serve a stop notice on the public entity responsible for a public work:

- Any person, other than an original contractor, who would be entitled to a mechanics' lien on a private work of improvement [see Civ. Code §§ 3110-3112; § 31.13[2]].

- A hazardous waste hauler subcontractor [see Pub. Contract Code § 4107.7; see also Health & Safety Code § 25163].

- Any person who furnished provisions, provender, or other supplies [Civ. Code § 3181].

The stop notice and payment bond are the exclusive remedies for persons contributing labor or materials to a public work of improvement, since mechanics' liens do not apply to public works [see Civ. Code § 3109].

Any person furnishing labor or materials for a public work who is entitled to file a stop notice and who has no direct contractual relationship with the original contractor (other than a person who performed actual labor for wages or an express trust fund [see Civ. Code § 3111]) must give a preliminary notice to the contractor and the public agency concerned no later than 20 days after the claimant has first furnished labor, services, equipment, or materials to the jobsite [Civ. Code § 3098(a)]. If the contract price to be paid to any licensed subcontractor on a public work of improvement exceeds $400, the failure to give the preliminary notice constitutes grounds for disciplinary action by the Registrar of Contractors [Civ. Code § 3098(b)].

A claimant must serve the stop notice within 30 days after the property owner records a notice of completion or cessation, provided the owner notifies the claimant that the notice of completion or cessation has been recorded, or within 90 days after completion or cessation if either the owner fails to so notify the claimant, or a notice of completion or cessation was not recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3184, 3259.5].

[2] Public Entity's Duty to Withhold

On receipt of a stop notice, the public entity has a duty to withhold from the original contractor, or from any person acting under the contractor's authority, money or bonds (when bonds are to be issued as payment for the work of improvement) due or to become due to the contractor in an amount sufficient to answer the claim stated in the stop notice and to provide for the reasonable cost of any litigation relating to the claim [Civ. Code § 3186]. However, this withholding requirement does not prohibit (1) the payment of any money or bonds to the original contractor or contractor's assignee, unless a stop notice is on file before the disbursing officer has actually surrendered possession of either the warrant, check, bonds, or money; or (2) the payment to the original contractor or the contractor's assignee of any money due in excess of an amount sufficient to answer the total amount of the claims stated in stop notices on file at the time of payment, plus interest and court costs that might be reasonably anticipated in connection with the claims [Civ. Code § 3187].

[2A] Voluntary Release

A stop notice claimant may reduce the amount of, or release in its entirety, a properly served public work stop notice without prejudicing the claimant's right to serve a subsequent timely and proper stop notice. The reduction or release must be in writing, but is not required to conform to the statutory forms of release required by Civ. Code § 3262(d) for use in a mechanics' lien context [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)]. To the extent of the reduction or release, it [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)(A)-(D)]:

- Releases the owner from any obligation to withhold money on account of the stop notice;
- Is effective to release the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice; and
- Does not operate as a release of any right that the claimant may have, other than the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice.

[3] Release by Bond

If the original contractor or subcontractor disputes the correctness, validity, or enforceability of any stop notice, the public entity may permit that person to file with the public entity a bond executed by a corporate surety in an amount equal to 125 percent of the claim stated in the stop notice, conditioned on the payment of any sum that the stop notice claimant may recover on the claim, together with the costs of suit in the action, if recovered. Once the bond is filed with the public entity, the entity will not withhold any money or bonds from the original contractor on account of the stop notice. The sureties on the bond will be jointly and severally liable to the stop notice claimant with the sureties on any payment bond [Civ. Code § 3196; see § 31.22[1]].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of the bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210 et seq.; see also § 31.15[3]].

[4] Release by Summary Proceedings

The original contractor may bring summary court proceedings to contest a stop notice and release the funds held. The contractor must serve on the public entity an affidavit alleging the legal grounds on which the claim is based, and demand the release of any money alleged to be improperly withheld or excessive [Civ. Code §§ 3197, 3198; see § 31.235]. The public entity will then serve on the claimant a copy of the affidavit and demand for release, together with a written notice that the public entity will release the demanded money unless the claimant files a counter-affidavit with the public entity [Civ. Code § 3199]. If the claimant wishes to contest the affidavit, the claimant must serve a counter-affidavit alleging the details of the claim and the basis on which the affidavit is contested [Civ. Code § 3200]. Either the original contractor or the claimant may then file an action in superior court for a summary declaration of the rights of the respective parties [Civ. Code § 3201].

[5] Actions to Enforce Stop Notice

A claimant may bring an action against the original contractor and the public entity to enforce payment of the claim stated in the stop notice at any time after 10 days from the date of service of the stop notice on the public entity, but not later than 90 days following the expiration of the period in which stop notices must be filed [Civ. Code § 3210; see Civ. Code § 3184; see also [1], above]. The money or bonds cannot be withheld by reason of the stop notice longer than the expiration of the 90-day period, unless proceedings have been commenced by the claimant in a proper court within that time. If timely proceedings are not initiated, the stop notice will cease to be effective and the money or bonds withheld will be paid or delivered to the contractor or other person to whom they are due [Civ. Code § 3210]. Notice of commencement of the action must be given to the public entity within five days after commencement [Civ. Code § 3211].

[6] Priorities

If the money withheld pursuant to stop notices is insufficient to pay all of the valid claims stated in those notices, the money will be distributed among the stop notice claimants in the same ratio that their respective claims bear to the aggregate of valid claims, without regard to the order of time in which their respective notices were served or actions commenced [Civ. Code § 3190]. However, any person who willfully gives a false stop notice to the public entity or who willfully includes in the stop notice labor, services, equipment, or materials not furnished for the work of improvement with respect to which the notice is given, forfeits all right to participate in the pro rata distribution [Civ. Code § 3192].

No assignment by the original contractor of any of the money due or to become due to the original contractor under the contract, whether made before or after the service of a stop notice, takes priority over a stop notice, and such an assignment has no effect on the rights of stop notice claimants. Any garnishment of that money by any creditor of the original contractor [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 708.710-708.795] and any statutory lien thereon are subordinate to the rights of all stop notice claimants [Civ. Code § 3193]. Nothing in the statutes impairs the right of a stop notice claimant to recover from the contractor or the contractor's sureties any deficit that may remain unpaid after a pro rata distribution in an action on a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3191].

§ 31.20 Protecting Against Liens and Stop Notices

[1] Notice of Nonresponsibility

An owner or person with an interest in property may avoid the presumption of having requested work or labor performed or materials furnished in connection with a work of improvement on the property, and thus liability for amounts due any claimants, by filing a notice of nonresponsibility [Civ. Code § 3129]. The person claiming nonresponsibility must post the notice in some conspicuous place on the site within 10 days after he or she becomes aware of the work of improvement, and record the notice within that same period [Civ. Code § 3094]. For a discussion of the notice requirements, see § 31.201[1].

A notice of nonresponsibility will not insulate the property from a lien for construction work if the property owner "participated" in the construction work through lease provisions requiring the tenant to make improvements on the property [Howard S. Wright Construction Co. v. Superior Court (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 314, 326, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641 (notice of nonresponsibility posted and recorded by property owner did not insulate property from lien for construction work; undisputed evidence showed that contractor was likely to succeed in its claim that property owner participated in construction work through lease provisions requiring tenant to make improvements on property); Ott Hardware Co. v. Yost (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 593, 597-601, 159 P.2d 663 (lessor not entitled to notice of nonresponsibility protection when lease required lessee to build improvements that lessor would benefit from on return of property)].

[2] Notice of Completion

To limit the time in which claims of lien may be recorded or stop notices served by claimants, the owner of a private work of improvement must notify the original contractor, and any other claimant who has provided a preliminary 20-day notice, that a notice of completion has been recorded. The notice must be sent by registered or certified mail, or first class mail evidenced by a certificate of mailing, within 10 days after the notice of completion or cessation was recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.5(a)].

For these purposes, "owner" means a person who has an interest in real property, or the person's successor in interest on the date of notice of completion or cessation from labor is recorded, who causes a building, improvement, or structure, to be constructed, altered, or repaired on the property. If the property is owned by two or more persons as joint tenants or tenants in common, any one of the cotenants may be deemed to be the owner. "Owner" does not include a person who occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units. In addition, "owner" does not include a person who has a security interest in the property or obtains an interest by virtue of a court order, a default on a mortgage, or a transfer by a fiduciary in the course of administering a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust [Civ. Code § 3259.5(b); see Civ. Code § 1102.2(b)-(d)].

Owners who are not required to give notice of the filing of a notice of completion may limit the time in which claims of lien may be recorded or stop notices served by claimants simply by recording a notice of completion within 10 days after completion of the work [see Civ. Code § 3116].

Although "completion" of a nonpublic work of improvement means actual completion, the following will be deemed equivalent to completion [Civ. Code § 3086]:

- The occupation or use of a work of improvement by the owner, or the owner's agent, accompanied by a cessation of labor.

- The acceptance by the owner or the owner's agent of the work of improvement.

- After commencement of a work of improvement, a cessation of labor for a continuous period of 60 days, or a cessation of labor for a continuous period or 30 days or more if the owner files a notice of cessation.

If a work of improvement is subject to acceptance by any public entity, the completion of that work will be deemed to be the date of acceptance. However, except as to contracts awarded under the State Contract Act [see Pub. Contract Code § 10100 et seq.], a cessation of labor on any public work for a continuous period of 30 days will be a completion [Civ. Code § 3086].

[3] Notice of Cessation

An owner of property may also limit the time in which claims of lien may be recorded or stop notices given by claimants by recording a notice of cessation in the county recorder's office where the jobsite is located, if there has been a continuous cessation of labor for at least 30 days before recording [see Civ. Code § 3092]. For purposes of this notice, "owner" has the same meaning as for a notice of completion [Civ. Code § 3092(g); see Civ. Code § 3093; see also [2], above]. For a discussion of the required contents of a notice of cessation, see § 31.211[1].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15-31 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 31.21

AUTHOR: Timothy F. O'Leary Practice Consultant

§ 31.21 Right to Serve 10-Day Stop Work Order When Payments Are Untimely

For private construction project contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1999, a special remedy exists for an original contractor who is not paid money owed pursuant to the contract within 35 days from the date payment is due, when there is no dispute as to the contractor's satisfactory performance [see Civ. Code § 3260.2; see also Civ. Code § 3260.1 (requires owner to pay progress payment within 30 days following payment demand, except as otherwise agreed to in writing); for discussion of Civ. Code § 3260.1, see § 30D.221[1][c]]. In this case, the original contractor may serve the owner with a "10-day stop work order" stating that the original contractor will stop work on the project unless all amounts then due him or her are paid within 10 days from the date notice is provided. If payment is not made within 10 days from the date the notice is served, the original contractor or his or her surety may stop work and may seek a judicial determination of liability for the unpaid amount in an expedited proceeding in the superior court in the county in which the work of improvement is located [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a), (d)]. The right to stop work does not apply to retentions withheld by a lender in accordance with the construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3260.2(f)].

If all procedural requirements are met, the original contractor or his or her surety, or a subcontractor or his or her surety, will not be liable for any delays or damages that the owner or contractor of a subcontractor may suffer as a result of the original contractor serving the owner with a 10-day stop work order, and subsequently stopping work for nonpayment [Civ. Code § 3260.2(c)].

An original contractor's or original subcontractor's liability to a subcontractor or material supplier resulting from the cessation of work is limited to the amount of monetary damages the subcontractor or material supplier could recover under the mechanics' lien law for goods and services provided up to the date the "subcontractor" [see Civ. Code § 3260.2(c) (statute refers to "subcontractor" here, but it appears that "contractor" was intended)] ceases work, provided that the following conditions are satisfied [Civ. Code § 3260.2(c)]:

- Liability continues for work performed and materials supplied up to and including the 10-day notice period and not beyond; and

- There is no limitation on monetary damages for custom work, including materials that have been fabricated, manufactured, or ordered to unique specifications.

The right to stop work by serving a 10-day notice is in addition to any and all other rights the contractor may have under the law [Civ. Code § 3260.2(b)]. Any contractual waiver of this right to stop work is against public policy [Civ. Code § 3260.2(e)].

For the procedural requirements associated with a 10-day stop work order, see §§ 31.190 and 31.191. For an illustrative 10-day stop work order, see § 31.214[2].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 31.22 Payment Bonds

[1] Nature of Bond

A payment bond is a bond that is conditioned on full payment of the claims of all claimants and gives all claimants a right to recover on the bond in any suit brought to foreclose the liens or any separate suit brought on the bond [Civ. Code § 3096]. Any bond given under the mechanics' lien law is a good and sufficient bond if the surety is an admitted surety insurer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.120, 995.610]. Either an owner, an original contractor, or a subcontractor may be the principal on any payment bond [Civ. Code § 3096]. Any claimant who is entitled to a mechanics' lien [see § 31.13[2]] and who has not been paid the full amount of that claim for contributions to a work of improvement may recover against a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3226].

[2] Liability of Sureties

A bond given under the mechanics' lien law is construed most strongly against the surety and in favor of the persons for whose benefit the bond was given [Civ. Code § 3226]. A surety will not be released or exonerated from the bond due to any of the following [Civ. Code §§ 3225, 3226]:

- A change or alteration in, or modification of, any contract, plans, specifications, or agreement relating to any scheme or work of improvement, or relating to the furnishing of labor, materials, or equipment for that work.

- A change or modification of any terms of payment, or extension of the time for any payment relating to any scheme or work of improvement.

- A rescission or attempted rescission of the contract, agreement, or bond.

- Any conditions precedent or subsequent in the bond attempting to limit the right of recovery to which claimants are otherwise entitled under the contractor agreement or under the bond.

- Any fraud practiced by any person other than the claimant seeking to recover on the bond, if the bond is given for the benefit of claimants.

- A breach of the contract between the owner and the original contractor, or a breach by any other obligee named in the bond.

[3] Payment Bond on Private Works

A property owner may protect against any failure of the original contractor to perform the contract and make full payment for all work done and materials furnished on a private work of improvement by exacting a bond or any other security necessary [Civ. Code § 3236]. Although the original contractor is not required by statute to furnish a payment bond on a private work of improvement, unlike some public works [see [4], below], it is customary for a property owner to require a payment bond in the contract with the original contractor. If the property owner files the original contract in the county recorder's office before the work is commenced, and records the original contractor's payment bond (for not less than 50 percent of the contract price), the owner's liability to claimants will be limited to the contract price. A court, when it is equitable to do so, must restrict the recovery under lien claims to an aggregate amount equal to the amount due from the owner to the original contractor, and render judgment against the original contractor and the contractor's sureties for any deficiency or difference that may remain between the amount due to the original contractor and the whole amount due to claimants [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236].

To enforce a claim against a payment bond given in connection with a private work contract entered into on or after January 1, 1995, the claimant must give the same 20-day preliminary notice that is required as a prerequisite to establishing a mechanics' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3242(a); see Civ. Code § 3097; see also § 31.202[2] (preliminary 20-day notice)]. If preliminary notice is not given, a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3242(b); see § 31.241[2] (notice to surety and bond principal)].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of the bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210; see also § 31.15[3]].

[4] Payment Bond on Public Works

Every original contractor who is awarded a contract by a public entity other than a "state entity" [see discussion of Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d), below] involving an expenditure in excess of $25,000 for any public work must, before beginning performance of the work, file a payment bond with the officer or public entity that awarded the contract [Civ. Code § 3251]. The bond must be approved by that officer or entity, and must be in a sum that is not less than 100 percent of the amount payable by the terms of the contract [Civ. Code § 3247(a)]. Unless a payment bond is filed and approved, no claim in favor of the original contractor arising under the contract will be audited, allowed, or paid by the public entity awarding the contract [Civ. Code § 3251].

Similarly, every original contractor who is awarded a contract by a "state entity" involving an expenditure in excess of $25,000 for any public work must, before beginning performance of the work, file a payment bond with the officer or state entity that awarded the contract. The bond must be approved by that officer or entity, and must be in a sum that is not less than 100 percent of the amount payable by the terms of the contract [Pub. Contract Code § 7103(a)]. A state entity is any state office department, division, bureau, board, or commission other than the Legislature, the courts, any agency in the judicial branch of government, or the University of California [Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d)]. Providers of architectural, engineering, and land surveying services under a contract with a public or state entity for a public work will not be deemed to be original contractors and will not be required to post or file a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3247(c); Pub. Contract Code § 7103(c)]. For a discussion of the requirements of the payment bond, see § 31.240[1].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of the bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210; see also § 31.15[3]]. However, a deposit may not be given in lieu of a bond [Civ. Code § 3248(d)].

To enforce a claim against a payment bond given in connection with a public work contract entered into on or after January 1, 1995, the claimant must give the same 20-day preliminary notice that is required as a prerequisite to enforcing a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3252(a); see Civ. Code § 3098; see also § 31.202[2] (preliminary 20-day notice)]. If preliminary notice is not given, a claimant may nonetheless enforce a claim against the bond by giving written notice to the surety and the bond principal within 15 days after a notice of completion has been recorded. If a notice of completion is not recorded, the time for giving written notice to the surety is extended to 75 days after completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3252(b); see § 31.241[2] (notice to surety and bond principal)]. Any claimant may bring suit against the surety or sureties on the payment bond at any time after the claimant has furnished the last of the labor or materials, but must commence the suit within six months after the period in which stop notices may be filed [Civ. Code § 3249; see Civ. Code § 3184; see also § 31.19[1]]. The filing of a stop notice is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against the surety on the payment bond. An action on the bond may be brought separately from and without the filing of an action against the public entity [Civ. Code § 3250].

For a discussion and example of payment bonds on federal public works under the Miller Act [40 U.S.C. §§ 270a-270f], see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity, § 79.240.

§ 31.23 Arbitration

Any claimant who wishes to file an action to enforce a mechanics' lien will not waive any right of arbitration that the claimant may have under a written agreement to arbitrate if, in filing the action to enforce the claim of lien, the claimant either [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.5(a)(1), (2)]:

- Includes an allegation in the complaint that the claimant does not intend to waive any right of arbitration and intends to move the court, within 30 days after service of the summons and complaint, for an order to stay further proceedings in the action; or

- At the same time the complaint is filed, files an application that the action be stayed pending the arbitration of any issue, question, or dispute that is claimed to be arbitrable under the agreement and is relevant to the action to enforce the claim of lien.

Within 30 days after service of the summons and complaint, the claimant must file and serve a motion and notice of motion to stay the action pending the outcome of the arbitration proceeding. Failure to comply with this requirement waives the claimant's right to compel arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.5(b)]. For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading & Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Split Litigation. The general practice is to split the litigation. The contractor will file an action to foreclose on mechanic's lien in superior court, and ask the court to stay the action pending arbitration. The contractor will proceed with the arbitration, and an award will be rendered. The contractor will petition to confirm the award as a judgment in superior court, and seek an order of judicial foreclosure if the award is not satisfied. Commentary by Timothy F. O'Leary.

§ 31.24 Design Professionals' Liens

[1] Persons Entitled to Lien

A certificated architect, registered professional engineer, or licensed land surveyor is entitled to a design professionals' lien if he or she enters into a contract with a landowner for the design, engineering, or planning of a work of improvement, and the landowner defaults in or refuses to make any payment required by the contract [see Civ. Code §§ 3081.1-3081.3]. The lien will be for the lesser of the amount of the design professional's fee for any services rendered before commencement of the work of improvement, or the reasonable value of those services. This amount must be reduced, however, by the amount of any deposit or prior payments [Civ. Code § 3081.2].

A number of conditions and restrictions apply to design professionals' liens. For example, the lien does not apply to a work of improvement relating to a single-family, owner-occupied residence when the construction costs are less than $100,000 [Civ. Code § 3081.10]. Further, the design professional is not entitled to the lien if (1) construction work has commenced on the proposed improvement or (2) no building permit or other governmental approval has been obtained for the work [Civ. Code §§ 3081.2, 3081.4(b)(1)]. To create the lien, the design professional must make a written demand for payment [Civ. Code § 3081.3(b); see § 31.260[2]], and then record a notice of lien within the time specified by statute [Civ. Code § 3081.3(c); see § 31.261[2]].

[2] Expiration, Enforcement, or Satisfaction

A design professionals' lien automatically expires and is void on the occurrence of either of the following [Civ. Code § 3081.4(b)]:

- The commencement of the work of improvement for which the design professional furnished services; or

- The expiration of 90 days after the recordation of the notice of lien, unless the design professional files suit to enforce the lien within that 90-day period.

If the design professional does file suit, the lien must be enforced in accordance with the enforcement provisions of the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3081.5; see Civ. Code § 3082 et seq. (law); Civ. Code §§ 3143-3154 (enforcement provisions)].

If the landowner partially or fully satisfies the lien, the design professional must execute and record a document that evidences a partial or full satisfaction and release of the lien, as appropriate [Civ. Code § 3081.4(c); see § 31.262[2]].

[3] Impact on Other Laws

The laws governing design professionals' liens do not affect the ability of a design professional to obtain a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3081.6]. Further, a perfected design professionals' lien will not affect the ability of the design professional to pursue other remedies [Civ. Code § 3081.8]. Finally, the lien will not affect or take priority over: (1) the interest of a purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer in the real property subject to the contract between the design professional and the landowner, if the interest of the purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer in the real property was duly recorded before recordation of the design professionals' lien; or (2) an encumbrance of a construction lender, when the construction loan is used to commence the work of improvement for which the design professional furnished services [Civ. Code § 3081.9].

NOTE:
A "claimant" is any person entitled under the mechanics' lien law to record a claim of lien, to give a stop notice in connection with any work of improvement, to recover on any payment bond, or any combination of the above [Civ. Code § 3085].

B. Preliminary Determinations

15-31 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 31.110

AUTHOR: Timothy F. O'Leary Practice Consultant

§ 31.110 Claimant

1. Determine whether prospective claimant is entitled to record claim of mechanics' lien [see § 31.13[2]].

NOTE:
The prospective claimant must satisfy both of the prerequisites enumerated in (a) and (b), below, to be able to file a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3110].

a. Is prospective claimant one of following?

NOTE:
In addition to those persons enumerated below, an express trust fund and any claimant making site improvements at the owner's instance are entitled to file a mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3111, 3112; see also § 31.13[2]].

(1) Mechanic.

(2) Materialman.

(3) Contractor or subcontractor.

(4) Lessor of equipment.

(5) Artisan.

(6) Architect.

(7) Registered engineer.

(8) Licensed land surveyor.

(9) Machinist.

(10) Builder.

(11) Teamster.

(12) Drayman.

(13) Other laborer who does one of the following for work of improvement:
(a) Performs labor;

(b) Bestows skill or other necessary services;

(c) Furnishes materials;

(d) Leases equipment; or

(e) Furnishes appliances, teams, or power.

b. Was work done or were materials furnished at instance of owner or owner's agent?

NOTE:
Work or materials provided after the owner has posted and recorded a timely notice of nonresponsibility were not furnished at the owner's instance [see Civ. Code § 3129; see also § 31.132].

c. Is project private work of improvement?

NOTE:
Mechanics' liens are not available for public works [Civ. Code § 3109].

2. Determine whether prospective claimant is entitled to serve stop notice [see §§ 31.18[1], 31.19[1]].

NOTE:
The prospective claimant must satisfy the following prerequisites in order to be able to file a stop notice.

a. For private work, is person [Civ. Code § 3158]:

(1) Not the original contractor; and

(2) Entitled to mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3110-3112; see also P 1, above]?

b. For public work, is person [Civ. Code § 3181]:

(1) Not original contractor; and

(2) Either:
(a) Entitled to mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3110-3112; see also P 1, above];

(b) Registered hazardous waste hauler [Pub. Contract Code § 4107.7; see Health & Safety Code § 25163]; or

(c) Furnisher of provisions, provender, or other supplies for work?

3. If work is private work of improvement, ascertain whether claimant should seek recovery by means of mechanics' lien, stop notice, or both.

NOTE:
Mechanics' liens are not available for public works [Civ. Code § 3109]. The remedies available under the mechanics' lien law may be pursued simultaneously, since they are cumulative [see Consolidated Elec. Distributors, Inc. v. Kirkham, Chaon & Kirkham, Inc. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 54, 61, 95 Cal. Rptr. 673 ; see also § 31.12]. However, one remedy may be more advantageous than the other.

a. Have other claims with priority to a mechanics' lien been recorded?

NOTE:
The existence of other claims with priority should be ascertained from the county recorder's office before a mechanics' lien is filed. If such other claims exist, it may be advantageous to serve a stop notice instead of or in addition to the lien. For a discussion of the priority of mechanics' liens over other claims, see § 31.14[1], [2].

b. Are unexpended construction funds available?

NOTE:
A stop notice may have more potential for recovery on the claim when there are construction funds available, since a mechanics' lien will have to compete with a lender's foreclosure on the deed of trust on the property. However, a lien is a better remedy when no unexpended construction funds are available.

c. Has property owner made demand for stop notice [see § 31.152]?

NOTE:
If such a demand has been made, the claimant must serve a stop notice within the required deadlines, even if it is not the preferred remedy, or that claimant forfeits any right to a mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3158].

4. Determine whether property owner has already filed notice of completion or cessation.

NOTE:
Provided the owner timely notifies the claimant that a notice of completion or cessation has been filed, the time period in which to file a claim of lien or stop notice is 60 days for the original contractor and 30 days for other claimants from the filing of the notice of completion or cessation. If the owner does not provide this notice, the claimant has 90 days to file a claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3259.5(a)]. This does not apply to resident owners of properties consisting of four dwelling units or less [Civ. Code § 3259.5(b)]. They have no obligation to notify claimants that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded. The 60- or 30-day period within which to file a lien claim begins to run when the notice of completion or cessation has been filed [see Civ. Code § 3116]. For stop notices on private works, the filing deadlines correspond to those for mechanics' liens [Civ. Code §§ 3160(b), 3259.5]. For stop notices on public works, any claimant has 30 days in which to file after recording a notice of completion or cessation [Civ. Code § 3184].

5. Ascertain whether claimant is required to file preliminary 20-day notice before filing mechanics' lien or stop notice.

a. For private work, claimant must file notice if claimant [Civ. Code § 3097(a), (b)]:

NOTE:
A claimant meeting these requirements who is not an original contractor must give notice to the owner, the original contractor, and the construction lender. An original contractor meeting these requirements is required only to give notice to the owner [Civ. Code § 3097(a), (b)].

(1) Is not under direct contract with owner;

(2) Is not performing actual labor for wages [see Civ. Code § 3089(a)];

(3) Is not person or entity to whom portion of laborer's compensation is paid by agreement with laborer or laborer's collective bargaining agent [see Civ. Code §§ 3089(b), 3111]; and

(4) Furnishes labor, service, equipment, or material for which lien can otherwise be claimed or notice to withhold can otherwise be given.

b. For public work, claimant must file notice if claimant [Civ. Code § 3098(a)]:

(1) Furnishes labor or materials;

(2) Has not been paid;

(3) Is entitled to file stop notice or assert claim against payment bond; and

(4) Has no direct contractual relationship with contractor.

NOTE:
The notice requirements do not apply to a laborer, described in Civ. Code § 3089, or to an express trust fund, described in Civ. Code § 3111 [Civ. Code § 3098(c)].

6. Determine whether any stop notice should be bonded or unbonded.

NOTE:
A property owner receiving an unbonded notice must withhold construction funds in the amount of the claim [Civ. Code § 3161]. A construction lender is required to withhold funds on receiving a bonded stop notice when the stop notice is filed either by an original contractor, regardless of whether a payment bond has been previously recorded [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(1)], or by any person entitled to do so [see Civ. Code § 3159(a)*] other than an original contractor and a payment bond was not recorded before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(2); see Civ. Code § 3235* (payment bonds)]. A lender may, but is not required to, withhold funds on receipt of a bonded stop notice when the notice is filed by any person entitled to do so, other than an original contractor, and a payment bond was recorded before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(2)].

7. Ascertain whether original contractor has recorded a payment bond.

NOTE:

A construction lender is obligated to withhold funds pursuant to a bonded stop notice filed by an original contractor, regardless of whether a payment bond has previously been recorded [Civ. Code § 3159(a)(1)]. However, if a payment bond has been filed and anyone other than an original contractor files a stop notice, whether bonded or unbonded, the lender is not required to withhold funds, but may do so at its option [Civ. Code § 3159(a)(2)].

8. Determine whether claimant is entitled to recover on any payment bond.

NOTE:

The claimant must be one of those persons entitled to a claim of lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3110-3112*; see also § 31.13[2]*] to recover on a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3226].

9. Ascertain whether claimant is an original contractor and is entitled to stop work due to nonpayment by owner [see Civ. Code § 3260.2].

NOTE:

This remedy is available only when the construction contract was entered into on or after January 1, 1999 [Civ. Code § 3260.2(f)]. For coverage of this remedy, see § 31.21. For the procedural requirements associated with this remedy, see §§ 31.190 and 31.191. For an illustrative 10-day stop work order, see § 31.214[2].

a. Has original contractor not been paid money owed pursuant to written contract for private work of improvement within 35 days of due date?

NOTE:

This 35-day deadline for payment reflects the requirements for progress payments set forth in Civ. Code § 3260.1. Under that provision, unless the construction contract specifies otherwise, the owner must pay to the contractor, within 30 days following receipt of a demand for payment in accordance with the contract, any progress payment due as to which there is no good faith dispute between the parties. If there is such a dispute, the owner may withhold from the progress payment an amount equal to no more than 150 percent of the disputed amount [Civ. Code § 3260.1(b); see § 30D.221[1][c]*].

b. Is there a dispute as to original contractor's satisfactory performance?

NOTE:

The remedy is not available if such a dispute exists [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a)].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

§ 31.111 Property Owner

1. Ascertain present status of work of improvement on owner's property.

NOTE:
The status of the project determines the type of remedy available [see P 3, below].

a. Owner has signed construction contract but construction has not commenced.

b. Owner has not signed any contract and has just become aware of work on property.

c. Work has commenced but has not yet ceased.

d. Work has ceased but is not completed.

e. Work has been completed and one or more of following legal actions has been taken:
(1) Lien has been filed.

(2) Stop notice has been served.

(3) Action to enforce claim of lien or stop notice has been filed.

2. Ascertain which of following procedures is most appropriate to protect client's rights at present stage.

a. Obtaining and recording payment bond from original contractor [see § 31.121].

NOTE:

The bond is recorded before the work of improvement is commenced [Civ. Code § 3236]. The bond should be filed to limit the owner's liability to potential claimants on the work to the contract price [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236].

b. Posting and recording notice of nonresponsibility [see § 31.132].

NOTE:

The notice is posted and recorded after the person asserting nonresponsibility learns of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3094]. Recording the notice prevents the presumption that all labor or materials on the work were furnished at the instance of the owner. After recordation, the property will not be subject to mechanics' liens [see Civ. Code § 3129].

c. Recording notice of cessation [see § 31.134].

NOTE:

This notice is recorded when there has been a continuous cessation of labor on the project [Civ. Code § 3092]. By filing a notice of cessation, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)].

d. Recording notice of completion [see § 31.135].

NOTE:

The notice is recorded after completion of work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3093]. By filing a notice of completion, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)].

e. Serving written demand for stop notice on potential lien claimants [see § 31.152].

NOTE:

The demand may be made at any time, but a claimant is not required to serve the stop notice until after the work has been completed or after a notice of completion or cessation has been filed [Civ. Code § 3158]. An owner should demand a stop notice from potential lien claimants in order to withhold funds from payments due the original contractor and satisfy the claims of subcontractors and materialmen. If the claimant fails to serve a stop notice after the demand, that claimant forfeits any right to a mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3158].

f. Recording mechanics' lien release bond [see § 31.133].

NOTE:

The bond may be recorded either before or after a claimant has filed an action to enforce the lien [Civ. Code § 3143]. The bond should be recorded if the correctness or validity of the lien claim is in dispute, in order to release the real property from the lien [Civ. Code §§ 3143, 3144.5].

g. Obtaining and filing stop notice release bond [see § 31.153].

NOTE:

The bond should be filed if the correctness or validity of the stop notice or bonded stop notice is in dispute, in order to release funds withheld to respond to stop notice [see Civ. Code §§ 3171, 3196].

h. Filing petition for release from mechanics' lien [see § 31.137].

NOTE:

The petition should be filed if a claimant fails to bring an action to enforce a lien within the time allowed [Civ. Code § 3154; see Civ. Code § 3144].

3. Determine whether appropriate remedy is still available to property owner.

NOTE:

Some owner remedies have strict deadlines, after which they become unavailable. For this reason, the attorney should also anticipate the desirability of a particular remedy and advise the client to notify the attorney on the event, e.g., completion of the project, that starts the deadline period running.

a. For notice of nonresponsibility, have more than 10 days elapsed since owner first became aware of work on site [Civ. Code § 3094]?

b. For notice of cessation, have less than 30 days elapsed since there has been a continuous cessation of labor on project [Civ. Code § 3092]?

c. For notice of completion, have more than 10 days elapsed since the date of completion of project [Civ. Code § 3093]?

d. For petition for decree releasing property from lien, have more than 90 days since filing of lien elapsed without commencement of action to foreclose?

§ 31.120 Procedures to Protect Rights of Claimants

1. If claimant is original contractor and wishes to enter into contract for construction of single-family dwelling to be retained by another for at least one year, ensure that contract satisfies requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b), including "Mechanics' Lien Warning."

NOTE:
The warning (1) explains to the owner the nature of a mechanics' lien and (2) provides information to the owner regarding how to protect himself or herself from mechanics' liens [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b)(4)].

2. If claimant is original contractor, before beginning work on project:

a. Obtain and file payment bond for public work if contract involves expenditure over $25,000 ($5,000 for contract with "state entity") [Civ. Code § 3247(a); see Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d) (definition of state entity); see also § 31.170].

b. Obtain and record payment bond and contract for private work if contract requires contractor to furnish payment bond [Civ. Code § 3236; see § 31.171].

3. Serve preliminary notice within 20 days after first furnishing labor or services [Civ. Code § 3097(a), (b); see § 31.130].

NOTE:
Every claimant other than an original contractor or a laborer as defined by Civ. Code § 3089 must give the preliminary notice as a prerequisite to recording a mechanics' lien, filing a stop notice, or asserting a claim against a payment bond [see Civ. Code § 3097(a), (b)]. To facilitate this process, the original contractor on a private work of improvement must give any person seeking to serve a preliminary 20-day notice the owner's name and residence address and the lender's name and address [Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. If an owner obtains construction financing after construction has begun, he or she must also provide the lender's name and address to each person who has given a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(n)].

4. Record claim of mechanics' lien after original contractor completes contract, or after claimant other than original contractor has ceased furnishing labor, services, equipment, or materials [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116; see § 31.131]:

NOTE:

A contract is complete for purposes of commencing the recordation period under Civ. Code § 3115 when all work under the contract has been performed, excused, or otherwise discharged [see Howard S. Wright Construction Co. v. BBIC Investors (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 228, 241, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 769 (recording of mechanic's lien was not premature because contract was "complete" on anticipatory breach of other contracting party)].

The deadline for recording may be 60 days for the original contractor, 30 days for other claimants, or 90 days for both, depending on whether a notice of completion or cessation is recorded, and whether the owner notifies the original contractor and claimants who have recorded preliminary 20-day lien notices that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259.5; see also § 31.131, P 2].

5. If claimant is original contractor and has not been paid within 35 days of deadline for payment of any amount governed by written contract entered into on or after January 1, 1999, and no dispute exists as to claimant's satisfactory performance, serve 10-day stop work order on owner [see Civ. Code § 3260.2; see also §§ 31.190, 31.191].

6. Serve stop notice or bonded stop notice after completion or cessation of work.

NOTE:

A stop notice requires the construction lender or owner to withhold funds in the amount of the claim, instead of paying them out to the original contractor. If the project is a private work, the stop notice must be served during the same period in which lien claims must be recorded [Civ. Code § 3160(b); see § 31.150]. If the project is a public work, the deadline may be 30 or 90 days, depending on whether a notice of completion or cessation has been filed and whether or not the owner has notified the claimant that a notice of completion or cessation has been filed [see Civ. Code §§ 3184, 3259.5; see also § 31.151].

7. If original contractor wishes to challenge stop notice, serve affidavit stating grounds for challenge [Civ. Code § 3197; see § 31.155, P 1].

8. If claimant is served with original contractor's affidavit challenging stop notice, serve counteraffidavit rebutting allegations [Civ. Code § 3200; see § 31.155, P 2].

9. If there is payment bond on project and preliminary 20-day notice was not given, draft and serve written notice on surety and bond principal within either [Civ. Code §§ 3242(b) (private works), 3252(b) (public works)]:

a. Within 15 days after notice of completion is recorded; or

b. If no notice of completion is recorded, within 75 days after completion of work of improvement.

NOTE:
For a form for the written notice from the claimant to the surety and bond principal, see § 31.241[2].

10. If claim is paid, execute written waiver and release [see Civ. Code § 3262; see also § 31.136].

11. If claim remains unpaid, bring action to foreclose mechanics' lien within 90 days after recording claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3144; see § 31.138].

NOTE:
The time for filing the complaint may be extended by giving credit and recording a notice of extension of credit [Civ. Code § 3144(a); see § 31.138, P 1].

12. Record lis pendens after filing complaint to foreclose lien [Civ. Code § 3146; see § 31.138, P 2].

§ 31.121 Procedures to Protect Rights of Owners

1. Obtain payment bond from original contractor and record bond along with contract before private work of improvement is commenced [Civ. Code § 3236; see § 31.171].

NOTE:
Recordation of the bond limits the owner's liability on the work to the contract price [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236].

2. Post and record notice of nonresponsibility within 10 days after person asserting nonresponsibility learns of work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3094; see § 31.132].

NOTE:
Recording the notice prevents the presumption that all labor or materials on the work were furnished at the instance of the owner. After recordation, the property will not be subject to mechanics' liens [see Civ. Code § 3129].

3. Record notice of cessation if there has been a continuous cessation of labor for at least 30 days [Civ. Code § 3092; see § 31.134].

NOTE:
By filing a notice of cessation, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)].

4. Record notice of completion within 10 days after completion of work of improvement [Civ. Code §

3093; see § 31.135].

NOTE:

By filing a notice of completion, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)].

5. Serve written demand for stop notice on potential lien claimants on completion of work or on filing of notice of completion or cessation [Civ. Code § 3158; see § 31.152].

NOTE:

An owner may demand a stop notice from potential lien claimants in order to withhold funds from payments due the original contractor and satisfy the claims of subcontractors and materialmen. The demand may be made at any time, but a claimant is not required to serve the stop notice until after the work has been completed or after a notice of completion or cessation has been filed [Civ. Code § 3158]. If the claimant fails to serve a stop notice after the demand, that claimant forfeits any right to a mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3158].

6. Record mechanics' lien release bond if correctness or validity of lien claim is in dispute, in order to release real property from lien [Civ. Code §§ 3143, 3144.5; see § 31.133].

NOTE:

The bond may be recorded either before or after the filing of an action to enforce the lien [Civ. Code § 3143].

7. Obtain and file stop notice release bond if correctness or validity of stop notice or bonded stop notice is in dispute, in order to release funds withheld to respond to stop notice [see Civ. Code §§ 3171, 3196; see also § 31.153].

8. File petition for release from mechanics' lien if claimant fails to bring action to enforce lien within time allowed [Civ. Code § 3154; see Civ. Code § 3144].

b. Serve notice in following manner [Civ. Code § 3097(f)]:

NOTE:
A claimant need only give one notice with regard to all materials, service, labor, or equipment furnished for the entire structure or work of improvement as a whole, unless it is furnished under contracts with more than one subcontractor. In the latter case, the notice requirements must be met with regard to materials, services, labor, or equipment furnished to each contractor [Civ. Code § 3097(g)].

(1) If person to be notified resides in California:

(a) By personal delivery;

(b) By leaving notice at residence or place of business with person in charge; or

(c) By first-class registered or certified mail, addressed to recipient at recipient's residence, business address, address shown on building permit on file with authority issuing permit, or address recorded on mortgage, deed of trust, or other instrument securing construction loan [*see Civ. 5. After notice has been served, notify claimant of owner's obligation to provide claimant with name and address of lender of any construction loan obtained after commencement of construction [Civ. Code § 3097(n)].

6. If dealing with private work of improvement, consider filing notice with county recorder in county in which any portion of property is located.

NOTE:
Under Civ. Code § 3097(o), any person who has served a preliminary 20-day notice in connection with a private work of improvement may file the notice with the county recorder in any county in which any portion of the property is located [see *Civ. NOTE:

By filing a notice of cessation, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)].

For the notice to be effective, there must have been a continuous cessation of labor for at least 30 days before recordation [Civ. Code § 3092].

NOTE:
For purposes of notices of completion or cessation, an "owner" is the person who causes a building, improvement, or structure to be constructed, altered, or repaired, whether the interest or estate is in fee, as a vendee under a contract of purchase, as lessee, or other interest or estate less than fee. § 31.135 Notice of Completion

NOTE:

By filing a notice of completion, a property owner shortens the time in which a claimant may file a claim of lien [see § 31.131, P 2] or a stop notice [see §§ 31.150, P 4 (private work), 31.151, P 5 (public work)]. For a public work, this notice is also known as a notice of acceptance [Civ. Code § 3184]. For a form for acceptance and completion by a public entity, see § 31.212[2].

1. Draft notice of completion containing [Civ. Code § 3093; see § 31.210]:

a. Date of completion (other than cessation of labor).

NOTE:

Although "completion" of a private work means actual completion, the following will be deemed equivalent to completion: (1) the occupation or use of a work of improvement by the owner, or the owner's agent, accompanied by a cessation of labor; (2) the acceptance by the owner or the owner's agent of the work of improvement; and (3) after commencement of a work of improvement, a cessation of labor for a continuous period of 60 days, or a cessation of labor for a continuous period of 30 days or more if the owner files a notice of cessation [Civ. Code § 3086]. In the case of a public works project, completion is deemed to be the date of acceptance by the public agency responsible for the project rather than the date of actual completion. Except for certain state contracts [see Pub. Contract Code §§ 10100-10105], a cessation of labor for a continuous period of 30 days will also be deemed a completion of the work [Civ. Code § 3086(c)].

An erroneous date will not affect the validity of the notice if the correct date of completion is within 10 days preceding the date of recording [Civ. Code § 3093(a); see Fontana Paving, Inc. v. Hedley Brothers, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 (notice recorded more than 10 days after completion was invalid)].

b. Name and address of owner.

c. Nature of owner's interest or estate.

d. Description of site sufficient for identification, including street address, if any.

NOTE:

If a sufficient legal description of the site is given, the validity of the notice will not be affected by an absent or erroneous street address [Civ. Code § 3093(d)].

e. Name of original contractor, if any.

NOTE:

If the notice covers only completion of a contract for a particular portion of the work [see Civ. Code § 3117], the name of the original contractor under the contract and a general statement of the kind of work done or the materials furnished under the contract must be included [Civ. Code § 3093(e)].

f. If there is more than one owner, and notice is signed by less than half of all co-owners, names and addresses of all co-owners.

NOTE:

For the definition of an "owner" for purposes of notices of completion or cessation, see § 31.134, P 1c.

g. If notice is signed by successor in interest, names and addresses of transferor(s).

2. Record notice in county recorder's office where jobsite is located within 10 days after completion of work [Civ. Code § 3093(e)].

NOTE:

If a work of improvement is made in whole or in part in accordance with two or more original contracts, each covering a particular portion of the work, the owner may record a notice of completion within 10 days after completion of a contract for a particular portion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3117].

§ 31.170 Filing and Approval of Bond on Public Work

NOTE:

Every original contractor who is awarded a contract by a public entity involving an expenditure in excess of $25,000 ($5,000 for a contract with a "state entity") [see Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d) (definition)] for any public work must file a payment bond with the public entity before beginning work on the project [Civ. Code § 3247(a)]. Providers of architectural, engineering, and land surveying services are excluded from this requirement [Civ. Code § 3247(c)]. Although there is no statutory bond requirement on private works, property owners are entitled to require that the original contractor furnish a bond [see Civ. Code § 3236; see also § 31.22[3]] and customarily do make this requirement in construction contracts [see § 31.121].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of the bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210; see also § 31.15[3]]. However, the payment bond cannot be in the form of a deposit in lieu of a bond [Civ. Code § 3248(d)].

1. Obtain payment bond rather than cash deposit [Civ. Code § 3248(d)].

2. Ensure that bond [Civ. Code § 3248(a)-(c); see § 31.240[2]]:

a. Is in amount not less than 100 percent of total amount payable by terms of contract.

b. Provides that surety will pay any of following if original contractor fails to do so:
(1) Any person entitled to give public works stop notice [Civ. Code § 3181; see § 31.18[1]].

(2) Amounts due under Unemployment Insurance Code with regard to work or labor performed by claimant.

(3) Any amount required to be deducted, withheld, and paid over to Franchise Tax Board from wages of employees of contractor and subcontractor [Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020].

c. Provides for reasonable attorneys' fee to be fixed by court if suit is brought on bond.

d. Inures to benefit of persons entitled to give public works stop notice [see Civ. Code § 3181] so as to give right of action to those persons (or their assigns) if suit is brought on bond.

3. Obtain approval of bond from officer or public entity that awarded contract [Civ. Code § 3247(a)].

NOTE:

Unless a payment bond is filed and approved, no claim in favor of the original contractor arising under the contract may be audited, allowed, or paid by the public entity or officer awarding the contract [Civ. Code § 3251].

4. File bond with officer or public entity that awarded contract [Civ. Code § 3247(a)].

§ 31.171 Obtaining Bond on Private Work

NOTE:

Although a payment bond is not required by statute on private works as it is on large public works [Civ. Code § 3247(a); see § 31.150], most property owners require the original contractor to furnish the bond. For examples of payment bonds on private works, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity*, §§ 79.244, 79.245*

1. Ensure that construction contract of property owner requires payment bond of at least 50 percent of contract price from original contractor.

2. Record contract and payment bond in county recorder's office in county where property is located before work of improvement is commenced [Civ. Code § 3236].

NOTE:

If the property owner records the payment bond and contract in the recorder's office before the work of improvement is commenced, then a court, when it is equitable to do so, must restrict the recovery under lien claims to an aggregate amount equal to the amount found to be due from the owner to the original contractor, and render judgment against the original contractor and the contractor's sureties for any deficiency or difference that may remain between the amount found due to the original contractor and the whole amount found to be due to claimants [Civ. Code § 3235].

§ 31.201 Notice of Nonresponsibility

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the notice of nonresponsibility that a person who owns or has an interest in real property may post to avoid mechanics' liens for works of improvement which that person has not caused to be constructed on the property [Civ. Code § 3094(d)]. For the notice to be effective, the person claiming the benefits of nonresponsibility must give notice within 10 days after he or she has obtained knowledge of the work [Civ. Code § 3094].

[b] Necessity of Giving Notice

For a mechanics' lien to encumber property, the work or materials must be done or furnished at the instance of the owner or of any person acting by the owner's authority. For this purpose, every contractor, subcontractor, sub-subcontractor, architect, builder, or other person having charge of all or part of a work of improvement is deemed to be an agent of the owner [Civ. Code § 3110]. Every work of improvement constructed on any land, and all work or labor performed, or materials furnished in connection with that work with the knowledge of the owner or of any person having or claiming any estate therein, will be deemed to have been constructed, performed, or furnished at the instance of the owner or person claiming an estate, and therefore subject to any mechanics' lien filed, unless the owner or person claiming an estate gives a notice of nonresponsibility [Civ. Code § 3129].

[c] Contents of Notice

The notice must be written and must contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 3094]:

- A description of the site sufficient for identification;

- The name and nature of the title or interest of the person giving the notice;
- The name of the purchaser under contract, if any, or lessee if known; and
- A statement that the person giving the notice will not be responsible for any claims arising from the work of improvement.

The notice must be signed and verified by the person owning or claiming an interest in the site who has not caused the work of improvement to be performed, or by that person's agent [Civ. Code § 3094]. However, the failure to verify a notice that otherwise complies with the statutory requirements will not cause the notice to be insufficient. The absence of verification relates solely to the question of the assurance of good faith in the statements of the declarant rather than to the issue of the sufficiency of notice to the lien claimants [Baker v. Hubbard (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 226, 232-233, 161 Cal. Rptr. 551] .

[d] Giving and Recording Notice

The person claiming nonresponsibility must post the notice in some conspicuous place on the site of the work of improvement within 10 days after he or she first obtains knowledge of the work. That person must also record the notice in the office of the county recorder of the county in which the site or some part of it is located within the same time period [Civ. Code § 3094].

§ 31.202 Preliminary 20-Day Notice

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a general form for a preliminary 20-day notice for use by an individual subcontractor or materialman who has furnished labor, services, equipment, or material to a work of improvement owned by a private person or entity. It may be used for either a private or public work of improvement. Printed versions of the preliminary notice are also available from commercial publishers.

[b] Purpose of Preliminary Notice

The preliminary 20-day notice is intended to provide early notice to the general contractor, lender, and property owner or public agency that there are persons present on the job, including contractors, who are entitled to file a mechanics' lien, and the amount of their potential liens [51 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 65, 69 (1968)] . On a typical construction job, it is not unusual for the property owner or public agency and lending institution to be unaware of the identity of the persons, other than the general contractor with whom they have dealt directly, who are furnishing labor and supplies. The preliminary 20-day notice is intended as a means of identifying these unknown persons, who are potential lien claimants, so that there can be meaningful communications among the property owner, lending institution, and general contractor to insure timely payment of these persons' claims and avoidance of costly work stoppages, mechanics' liens foreclosure sales, and double payments by the owner [51 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 65, 69 (1968) ; see Schrader Iron Works, Inc. v. Lee (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 621, 630, 103 Cal. Rptr. 106] .

[c] Persons Required to Give Notice

[i] Private Works

For a private work of improvement, every person not under direct contract with the owner who furnishes labor, services, equipment, or material for which a lien otherwise can be claimed, a stop notice can otherwise be given, or a claim against a payment bond can otherwise be asserted, must give a written preliminary notice to the owner or reputed owner, the original contractor or reputed contractor, and any construction lender or reputed construction lender as a prerequisite to the validity of any valid claim of lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3097(a)]. A claimant who has a direct contract with the owner must give a written preliminary notice only to any construction lender or reputed construction lender [Civ. Code § 3097(b)]. The persons required by statute to give notice must do so despite a waiver by the owner. Any agreement by an owner to waive the rights or privileges conferred on the owner pursuant to the preliminary notice provisions will be void [Civ. Code § 3097(e)].

[ii] Public Works

For a public work, any person who has no direct contractual relationship with the contractor, has furnished labor or materials for a public work, and who is entitled to file a stop notice or assert a claim against a payment bond, must give a preliminary 20-day notice to the original contractor and the public agency for whom the job is being done as a prerequisite to filing a stop notice or asserting a claim against a payment bond [Civ. Code §§ 3183(a), 3098(a)].

[iii] Exceptions to Notice Requirement

The preliminary notice requirements for both private and public works of improvement do not apply to a person who performed actual labor for wages [see Civ. Code § 3089(a)] or to a person or entity, including an express trust fund [see Civ. Code § 3111; see also [iv], below], to whom a portion of a laborer's compensation is paid by agreement with the laborer or the laborer's collective bargaining agent [Civ. Code §§ 3097(a), 3098(a), (c); see Civ. Code § 3089(b)].

[iv] Express Trust Funds

For purposes of the mechanics' lien law, an express trust fund to which a portion of a laborer's total compensation is to be paid pursuant to an applicable employment agreement or a collective bargaining agreement for the provision of benefits (including, but not limited to, employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1) is entitled to assert the same rights and claims as laborers performing labor on, or bestowing skill or other necessary services on, a work of improvement, to the extent of the compensation agreed to be paid to that express trust fund for labor on that improvement only [Civ. Code § 3111]. As amended in 1999 [see Stats. 1999, ch. 795, § 7], Civ. Code § 3111 is intended to reinstate the ability of laborers and employee trust funds to umechanics' liens and creditor priorities to obtain payment of unpaid wages and fringe benefits. The amendment was drafted in an attempt to avoid having state remedies for collection of those wages and fringe benefits be preempted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [24 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.]. Before this amendment, the California Supreme Court held that Civ. Code § 3111 was preempted by ERISA [see Carpenters So. Cal. Admin. Corp. v. El Capitan Development Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1041, 1049-1054, 282 Cal. Rptr. 277, 811 P.2d 296] . The Ninth Circuit has subsequently held that ERISA does not preempt California's stop notice and payment bond remedies [Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Trust Funds v. Standard Industrial Electric. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 247 F.3d 920, 925] .

[d] Single Notice Required

A person who is required to give a preliminary notice on a private work need give only one notice with respect to all materials, services, labor, or equipment that person furnished for a work of improvement as a whole. However, if the materials, services, labor, or equipment are furnished under contracts with more than one subcontractor, the notice requirements must be met with respect to that furnished to each contractor [Civ. Code § 3097(g)].

[e] Disciplinary Action for Failure to Give Notice

If the contract price to be paid to any licensed subcontractor on a particular work of improvement exceeds $400, the failure of that contractor to give the notice constitutes grounds for disciplinary action by the Registrar of Contractors [Civ. Code §§ 3097(h), 3098(b)]. If the notice for a private work is required to contain information regarding supplemental fringe benefits [see Civ. Code § 3097(c)(6)], a failure to give a notice including that information that results in the filing of a lien or delivery of a stop notice by the express trust fund to which the obligation is owing constitutes grounds for disciplinary action by the Registrar of Contractors against the subcontractor if the amount due the trust fund is not paid [Civ. Code § 3097(h); see § 31.213].

[f] Time for Giving Notice

The notice must be given no later than 20 days after the claimant has first furnished labor, services, equipment, or materials to the jobsite as a prerequisite to the validity of any claim of lien or notice to withhold [Civ. Code §§ 3097(c), 3098(a)]. If labor, services, equipment, or materials have been furnished to a jobsite by a claimant who did not give a preliminary notice within 20 days, that claimant is not precluded from subsequently giving notice. However, any payment bond claim asserted, stop notice filed, or (in the case of private works) mechanics' lien recorded, will only apply to labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished within 20 days before service of the preliminary notice and any time thereafter [Civ. Code §§ 3097(d), 3098(d)].

A certified architect, registered engineer, or licensed land surveyor who has furnished services for the design of a private work of improvement and who gives a preliminary notice no later than 20 days after the work of improvement has commenced will be deemed to have complied with the notice requirements with respect to architectural, engineering, or surveying services furnished or to be furnished [Civ. Code § 3097(c)].

[g] Contents of Notice

For a private work, the preliminary 20-day notice must be written and must contain the following information [Civ. Code § 3097(c)]:

- A general description of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or to be furnished.

- An estimate of the total price of the labor, services, equipment, or material described in the item above [see Rental Equipment, Inc. v. McDaniel Builders, Inc. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 445, 449-450, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 (estimate of the total price of labor, service, equipment, or materials must be "a derived figure, arrived at by rational analysis")].

- The name and address of the person furnishing the labor, service, equipment, or materials.

- The name of the person who contracted for the purchase of the labor, service, equipment, or materials.

- A description of the jobsite sufficient for identification.

- A boldface statement notifying the property owner that nonpayment of bills for labor and service on the jobsite may result in the filing of a mechanics' lien, and of the obligation of most private project owners to notify the original contractor and any lien holder who provided a 20-day preliminary notice that a notice of completion or notice of cessation has been filed [see [2], below, for exact text of statement].

- If notice is given by a subcontractor who has failed to pay all compensation due to his or her laborers on the job, the identity and address of any laborer and any express trust fund [see Civ. Code § 3111] to whom employer payments are due.

If an invoice for materials contains the required information, a copy of that invoice transmitted as required will constitute sufficient notice [Civ. Code § 3097(c)].

A preliminary notice on a public work need only state with substantial accuracy a general description of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or to be furnished to the job site, and the name of the party to whom they were furnished [Civ. Code § 3098(a)].

[h] Names of Owner and Construction Lender

To accommodate those entitled to give preliminary 20-day notice in connection with private works of improvement, every written contract between a property owner and an original contractor must provide space for the owner to enter his or her name and residential and business addresses. If the contract is not one for home improvements or swimming pool construction, it must also include space for the owner to enter the name and address of any construction lenders. The original contractor must make the owner's and lender's information available to anyone seeking to serve a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. If a private work of improvement involves subcontracting any of the work, any contract between an original contractor and a subcontractor, or between subcontractors, must provide space for the name and address of the owner, original contractor, and any construction lender [Civ. Code § 3097(l), (m)]. If the owner secures construction financing after construction is underway, he or she must provide all lenders' names and addresses to each person who has given the owner a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3097(n)].

[i] Service of Notice

On a private work, a claimant may serve the notice on a California resident by personal service, by leaving it at the person's residence or place of business with some person in charge, or by mailing it by first-class registered or certified mail to the person's residence address, business address, address shown on the building permit, or address recorded on the mortgage or other loan instrument [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(1)]. If a person residing outside California cannot be served by any of the foregoing methods, notice may be given by first-class certified or registered mail addressed to the construction lender or the original contractor [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(2)]. A proof of service affidavit must also be completed [see Civ. Code §§ 3114, 3097.1; see also § 31.204].

On a public work, notice may be given to the contractor by personal service, or by first-class, registered, or certified mail, postage prepaid, at any place the contractor maintains an office, conducts business, or resides. In case of public works constructed by the Department of Public Works or the Department of General Services, the notice may be given by first-class, registered, or certified mail to the office of the disbursing officer of the department constructing the work, or by personal service on that officer. When service is by registered or certified mail, service is complete at the time of deposit [Civ. Code § 3098(a)].

[j] Filing With Recorder

[i] Right of Notification

Any person who has served a preliminary 20-day notice on a private work pursuant to Civ. Code § 3097(f) may file the notice with the county recorder in the county in which any portion of the property is located [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(1)]. Thereafter, if a notice of completion or notice of cessation is recorded on the property, the recorder must notify the person who has served the notice of the recordation. This notification (which must be by mail) will include the date of recordation of the notice of completion or notice of cessation [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(2)].

If the county recorder fails to notify the person who filed the preliminary 20-day notice of the recordation, or that person does not receive the notification, the failure will not affect the period within which a claim of lien must be recorded.

However, the county recorder must make a good faith effort to mail the notification within five days after the recording of a notice of completion or notice of cessation [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(3)].

[ii] Required Contents

A preliminary 20-day notice cannot be filed with a county recorder unless it contains all of the following [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(1)]:

- The name and address of the person furnishing the labor, service, equipment, or materials.
- The name of the person who contracted for purchase of the labor, service, equipment, or materials.
- The common street address of the job site.

With the possible exception of the common street address, all of the foregoing information will appear on any preliminary 20-day notice [see Civ. Code § 3097(c); see also [g], above].

[iii] Purpose and Effect of Filing

The limited purpose of this filing procedure is to facilitate the mailing of notice by the county recorder of recorded notices of completion and notices of cessation. The filed notice is not a recordable document, will not be entered into official county records that by law impart constructive notice, and will be indexed separately. Further, the filed notice will not give rise to (1) any actual or constructive notice of the existence or contents of the filed notice, or (2) any duty of inquiry as to the existence or contents of the notice [Civ. Code § 3097(o)(5)].

§ 31.203 Cover Letter Accompanying Preliminary 20-Day Notice

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is an informal cover letter designed to accompany the preliminary 20-day notice. The cover letter is especially useful to describe the purpose of the preliminary notice to owners of property who are only infrequently involved in construction projects and who can be expected to be unfamiliar with the operation of the mechanic's lien laws. The letter explains that the notice is being given to satisfy statutory requirements and is not intended to reflect adversely on the integrity or credit standing of any other party, such as the general contractor, connected with the construction project. This form has been adapted from a printed cover letter form used in connection with the standard preliminary notice jointly prepared by the California Society of Professional Engineers, the Consulting Engineers Association of California, the California Council of Landscape Architects, the California Council of the American Institute of Architects, the Structural Engineers Association of California, and the California Council of Civil Engineers and Land Surveyors.

§ 31.204 Proof of Service Affidavit (Private Work)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a proof of service affidavit that is designed to prove that the preliminary 20-day notice [see § 31.202[2]] was served in accordance with the requirements set forth in Civ. Code § 3097(f). The term "proof of service affidavit" is defined as an affidavit of the person making the service, showing the time, place, and manner of service, and facts showing that service was made in accordance with Civ. Code § 3097. The affidavit is required to show the name and address of the person on whom a copy of the preliminary 20-day notice was served and, if appropriate, the title or capacity in which the person was served [Civ. Code § 3097.1(c)].

A mechanics' lien claimant is entitled to enforce a lien only if the claimant has given the preliminary 20-day notice (private work) [see § 31.202[2]] when required by Civ. Code § 3097 and has made proof of service in accordance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 3097.1 [Civ. Code § 3114].

[b] Manner of Service of Preliminary 20-Day Notice

Under Civ. Code § 3097(f), the permissible methods of serving the preliminary 20-day notice differ slightly depending on the intended recipient's state of residence. A California resident may be served with the notice by any of the following methods: (1) by delivering the notice personally; (2) by leaving it at the person's residence address or place of business with some person in charge; or (3) by first-class registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the person to be notified at that persons' residence or place of business, or at the address shown by the building permit on file with the authority issuing a building permit for the work, or at an address shown on a recorded construction trust deed [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(1); see Civ. Code § 3097(j); see also Ch. 30A, Construction Financing, § 30A.204[1]]. Normally one of those methods must also be used to serve an out-of-state resident; however, if such a person cannot be served by any of those methods, service must be by first-class certified or registered mail, addressed to the construction lender or to the original contractor [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(2)].

When service is made on any person by first-class certified or registered mail, service is complete at the time the mail is deposited [Civ. Code § 3097(f)(3)]. "First-class certified or registered mail" means by certified or registered mail only, and notice by ordinary first-class mail will not be effective [IGA Aluminum Products, Inc. v. Manufacturers Bank (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 699, 704, 181 Cal. Rptr. 859] .

[c] Proof of Service by Affidavit

If the preliminary 20-day notice is delivered personally or is left at a residence or place of business in the manner specified in Civ. Code § 3097(f), proof of service must be made by preparing the proof of service affidavit [Civ. Code § 3097.1(b)]. If the preliminary 20-day notice is served by mail, the proof of service affidavit must be accompanied either by the return receipt of certified or registered mail, or by a photocopy of the record of delivery and receipt maintained by the post office, showing the date of delivery and to whom delivered [Civ. Code § 3097.1(a)]. In the event of nondelivery, the affidavit must be accompanied by the returned envelope itself [Civ. Code § 3097.1(a)].

[d] Proof of Service by Declaration

The form in [2], below, is an affidavit in the form prescribed by Civ. Code § 3097.1. However, since a declaration under penalty of perjury has the same force and effect as a sworn affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], the following form may be adapted by using a declaration under penalty of perjury clause in lieu of the affidavit.

§ 31.210 Notice of Completion of Project--Private Work

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the notice of completion that a property owner may record to limit the time in which mechanics' liens may be recorded against a construction project [see Civ. Code § 3093]. For this purpose, an "owner" is the person who causes a building, improvement, or structure to be constructed, altered, or repaired, whether the interest or estate is in fee, as a vendee under a contract of purchase, as lessee, or other interest or estate less than fee. If the interest is held by two or more persons as joint tenants or tenants in common, any one or more of the cotenants may be deemed to be the owner [Civ. Code §§ 3092(g), 3093].

This form is for use in connection with a private work of improvement. For a notice of completion and acceptance by a public entity, see § 31.212.

[b] "Completion" Defined

Although "completion" of a nonpublic work of improvement means actual completion, the following will be deemed equivalent to completion for purposes of this notice: (1) the occupation or use of a work of improvement by the owner or the owner's agent, accompanied by a cessation of labor; or (2) the acceptance by the owner or the owner's agent of the work of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3086]. The owner should file a notice of cessation [see § 31.211[2]] rather than a notice of completion if there has been a cessation of labor [Civ. Code § 3093(a); see Civ. Code § 3092].

A contract is complete for purposes of commencing the recordation period under Civ. Code § 3115 when all work under the contract has been performed, excused, or otherwise discharged. Thus, a contractor's recording of a mechanic's lien was not premature when the contract was "complete" on the anticipatory breach of the other contracting party [

Howard S. Wright Construction Co. v. BBIC Investors (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 228, 241, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 769] .

[c] Purpose of Notice

The purpose of filing a notice of completion is to obtain the benefit of a shorter lien-filing period [Fontana Paving, Inc. v. Hedley Brothers, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295] .

If the owner records the notice within the applicable time period [see [e], below] and notifies the original contractor that the notice has been recorded, the contractor has 60 days from the date the notice is recorded to record a claim of lien against the project [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3259.5(a)]. If the owner occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units, the 60-day period applies and the owner is not required to give notice that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded; provided such a notice has, in fact, been recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.5]. If a notice of completion or cessation is not recorded, or if the owner fails to notify the original contractor or a claimant who filed a preliminary 20-day notice, the contractor and claimant have 90 days to file a lien claim [see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259.5].

[d] Contents of Notice

The notice must be written, signed, and verified by the owner or the owner's agent, and contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 3093]:

- The date of completion (other than a cessation of labor). An erroneous date will not affect the validity of the notice if the correct date of completion is within 10 days preceding the date of recording.

- The name and address of the owner.

- The nature of the interest or estate of the owner.

- A description of the site sufficient for identification, including the street address of the site, if any. If a sufficient legal description of the site is given, the validity of the notice will not be affected by the absence or erroneous street address.

- The name of the original contractor, if any. If the notice covers only completion of a contract for a particular portion of the work [see Civ. Code § 3117], it must include the name of the original contractor under that contract and a general statement of the type of work done or the materials furnished under the contract.

- If there is more than one owner and the notice is signed by less than half of all co-owners, the names and addresses of all the co-owners.

- If the notice is signed by a successor in interest, the names and addresses of the transferors.

[e] Recording and Fees

The owner must record the notice in the office of the county recorder of the county where the site is located within 10 days after the work of improvement is completed [Civ. Code § 3093]. If all or part of the work of improvement is made in accordance with two or more original contracts, each covering a particular portion of the work of improvement, the owner may record a notice of completion within 10 days after completion of a contract for a particular portion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3117]. A notice of completion that is not filed within 10 days of completion of the work of improvement will not serve to shorten the statutory 90-day lien-filing period [Fontana Paving, Inc. v. Hedley

Brothers, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295] .

§ 31.211 Notice of Cessation of Labor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the notice of cessation of labor that a property owner may record after work on a construction project has ceased, to limit the time in which mechanics' liens may be recorded against the project. For this purpose, an "owner" is the person (or that person's successor in interest at the date the notice is filed) who causes a building, improvement, or structure to be constructed, altered, or repaired, whether the interest or estate is in fee, as a vendee under a contract of purchase, as lessee, or other interest or estate less than fee. If the interest is held by two or more persons as joint tenants or tenants in common, any one or more of the cotenants may be deemed to be the owner [Civ. Code § 3092(g)].

For a notice to be used on completion rather than cessation of the project, see § 31.210[2].

[b] Purpose of Notice

If the owner records the notice within the applicable time period [see [d], below] and notifies the original contractor that the notice has been recorded, the contractor has 60 days from the date the notice is recorded to record a claim of lien against the project [Civ. Code § 3259.5(a)]. If the owner occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units, the 60-day period applies and the owner is not required to give notice that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded; provided such a notice has, in fact, been recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3259.5]. If a notice of completion or cessation is not recorded, or if the owner fails to notify the original contractor or a claimant who filed a preliminary 20-day notice, the contractor and claimant have 90 days to file a lien claim [see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259.5].

[c] Contents of Notice

A notice of cessation must be written, signed, and verified by the owner or the owner's agent, and contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 3092]:

- The approximate date on which the cessation of labor commenced.
- A statement that the cessation has continued until the recording of the notice of cessation.
- The name and address of the owner.
- The nature of the interest or estate of the owner.
- A description of the site sufficient for identification, containing the street address of the site, if any. If a sufficient legal description of the site is given, the validity of the notice will not be affected by the fact that the street address is erroneous or omitted.
- The name of the original contractor, if any, for the work of improvement as a whole.
- If the notice is signed by less than all of the cotenants, the names and addresses of all cotenants.

[d] Recording and Fees

The owner must record the notice in the office of the county recorder of the county where the site is located. The notice will be effective only if there has been a continuous cessation of labor for at least 30 days before recording [Civ. Code § 3092].

§ 31.211A Owner's Notice That Notice of Completion or Cessation Has Been Recorded

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the notice that a property owner must give to the original contractor and any claimant who has provided a preliminary 20-day notice informing them that a notice of completion or notice of cessation has been recorded. If the owner gives proper notice, the time within which a claim of lien must be recorded is 60 days from the recording of the notice of completion or cessation for the contractor and 30 days for a claimant who has provided a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259(a)]. If the owner fails to give notice, this period expands to 90 days [Civ. Code § 3259(a)].

The notice must be sent by registered or certified mail, or first class mail evidenced by a certificate of mailing, within 10 days after the notice of completion or cessation was recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.5(a)].

For these purposes, "owner" means a person who has an interest in real property, or the person's successor in interest on the date of notice of completion or cessation from labor is recorded, who causes a building, improvement, or structure, to be constructed, altered, or repaired on the property. If the property is owned by two or more persons as joint tenants or tenants in common, any one of the cotenants may be deemed to be the owner. "Owner" does not include a person who occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units. "Owner" also does not include a person who has a security interest in the property or obtains an interest by virtue of a court order, a default on a mortgage, or a transfer by a fiduciary in the course of administering a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust [Civ. Code § 3259.5(b); see Civ. Code § 1102.2(b)-(d)].

§ 31.212 Notice of Completion and Acceptance of Public Works Project

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of completion and acceptance that may be recorded by a public agency after it accepts a completed public works project. "Completion" for this purpose means the date of acceptance by the public agency responsible for the project, rather than the date of actual completion as in the case of private works projects [Civ. Code § 3086].

The filing of a notice of completion and acceptance triggers the commencement of the 30-day period within which a subcontractor, materialman, laborer, or other eligible claimant may file a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3184(a)]. If such a notice is not recorded, that 30-day period is extended to 90 days after completion (acceptance) of the project [Civ. Code § 3184(b)].

For all public works projects except those awarded under the State Contract Act [Pub. Contract Code §§ 10100-10285.5], a cessation of labor for 30 consecutive days will also constitute a completion. Following such a cessation, the public agency may record a notice of cessation to shorten the applicable 90-day stop notice period to 30 days from the date of recordation of the notice of cessation [Civ. Code §§ 3086(c), 3184; see Civ. Code § 3092 (notice of cessation); see also § 31.211[2]].

§ 31.213 Notice of Delinquent Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice that every contractor or subcontractor who employs laborers [see Civ. Code § 3089(a)] must give to those laborers, their bargaining representatives (if any), and any construction lender or reputed construction lender when the contractor or subcontractor has failed to pay those laborers their full compensation when it became due, including any employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1. The notice is required regardless of whether the work was performed on a private or public work project. It must be given no later than the date the compensation became delinquent. Failure to do so constitutes grounds for disciplinary action by the Registrar of Contractors [Civ. Code § 3097(k)].

[b] Rights of Express Trust Funds

For purposes of the mechanics' lien law, an express trust fund to which a portion of a laborer's total compensation is to be paid pursuant to an applicable employment agreement or a collective bargaining agreement for the provision of benefits (including, but not limited to, any employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1), is entitled to assert the same rights and claims as laborers performing labor on, or bestowing skill or other necessary services on, a work of improvement, to the extent of the compensation agreed to be paid to that express trust fund for labor on that improvement only [Civ. Code § 3111]. As amended in 1999 [see Stats. 1999, ch. 795, § 7], Civ. Code § 3111 is intended to reinstate the ability of laborers and employee trust funds to use mechanics' liens and creditor priorities to obtain payment of unpaid wages and fringe benefits. The amendment was drafted in an attempt to avoid having state remedies for collection of those wages and fringe benefits be preempted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [24 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.]. Before this amendment, the California Supreme Court held that Civ. Code § 3111 was preempted by ERISA [see Carpenters So. Cal. Admin. Corp. v. El Capitan Development Co. (1991) 53

Cal. 3d 1041, 1049-1054, 282 Cal. Rptr. 277, 811 P.2d 296] . The Ninth Circuit has subsequently held that ERISA does not preempt California's stop notice and payment bond remedies [Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Trust Funds v. Standard Industrial Electric. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 247 F.3d 920, 925] .

[c] Contents of Notice

The notice must be written and contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 3097(k)]:

- The name of the owner and the contractor.
- A description of the jobsite sufficient for identification.
- The identity and address of any express trust fund to which a portion of a laborer's total compensation is paid pursuant to an applicable employment or collective bargaining agreement for the provision of benefits, including any employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1 [see Civ. Code § 3111].
- The total number of straight-time and overtime hours on each job.
- The amount then past due and owing.

§ 31.214 Ten-Day Stop Work Order

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is for use by an original contractor under a private construction project contract entered into on or after January 1, 1999, when (1) there is no dispute over the contractor's performance, and (2) a payment under the contract is at least 35 days overdue. If payment is not made within 10 days from the date the notice is served, the original contractor may stop work, and the contractor or his or her surety may seek a judicial determination of liability for the unpaid amount in an expedited proceeding in the superior court in the county in which the work of improvement is located [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a), (d)]. The right to stop work does not apply to retentions withheld by a lender in accordance with the construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3260.2(f)].

[b] Prior Posting of Notice of Intention to File Stop Work Order

At least five days before the owner is served with a 10-day stop work order, the contractor must post in a conspicuous place at the job site and the job site main office, if any, a notice that he or she intends to file the stop work order [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a)].

[c] Service of Stop Work Order; Copy to Lender

The stop work order must be served on the owner and on all subcontractors with whom the original contractor has a direct contractual relationship [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a)]. If the person to be served resides in California, service must be by (1) personal delivery; (2) leaving notice at the person's residence or place of business with a person in charge; or (3) first-class registered or certified mail, addressed to the recipient at the recipient's residence or business address, the address shown on building permit on file with authority issuing permit, or the address recorded on the mortgage, deed of trust, or other instrument securing the construction loan [Civ. Code § 3260.2(g)(1); see Civ. Code § 3097(j)].

If the person to be served resides outside California and cannot be served in a manner prescribed for residents, service must be by first class certified or registered mail addressed to the construction lender [Civ. Code § 3260.2(g)(2)]. Service by certified mail is effective on receipt. Service by registered mail is effective five days after mailing [Civ. Code § 3260.2(g)(3)].

Within five days of receiving the notice, the owner must forward a copy by first class mail to the construction lender, if any, at the address on the construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3260.2(a)].

[d] Liability to Others; Relationship to Other Laws; Waiver

If all procedural requirements are met, the original contractor or his or her surety, or a subcontractor or his or her surety, will not be liable for any delays or damages that the owner or contractor of a subcontractor may suffer as a result of the original contractor serving the owner with a 10-day stop work order and subsequently stopping work for nonpayment [Civ. Code § 3260.2(c)].

An original contractor's or original subcontractor's liability to a subcontractor or material supplier resulting from the cessation of work is limited to the amount of monetary damages the subcontractor or material supplier could recover under the mechanics' lien law for goods and services provided up to the date the "subcontractor" [see Civ. Code § 3260.2(c) (statute refers to "subcontractor" here, but it appears that "contractor" was intended)] ceases work, provided that both of the following conditions are satisfied [Civ. Code § 3260.2(c)]:

- Liability continues for work performed and materials supplied up to and including the 10-day notice period and not beyond; and

- There is no limitation on monetary damages for custom work, including materials that have been fabricated, manufactured, or ordered to unique specifications.

The right to stop work by serving a 10-day notice is in addition to any and all other rights the contractor may have under the law [Civ. Code § 3260.2(b)]. Any contractual waiver of this right to stop work is against public policy [Civ. Code § 3260.2(e)].

§ 31.220 Claim of Mechanics' Lien

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a mechanics' lien claim that may be used in connection with a private work of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3109 (mechanics' liens not available on public works)]. To enforce a mechanics' lien, the claimant must take the following actions: give a preliminary 20-day notice, if required [see Civ. Code § 3097; see also § 31.202[2]], and then record a written claim of lien (this form) with the recorder of the county in which the subject property is located [Civ. Code § 3115; see [d], below].

For a preprinted claim of lien, see § 31.221[2].

[b] Required Contents

The claim of lien must be written, signed, and verified, and must contain all of the following [Civ. Code § 3084]:

- A statement of the claimant's demand (after deducting all just credits and offsets).
- The name of the owner or reputed owner, if known.
- A general statement of the kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished by the claimant.
- The name of the person by whom the claimant was employed or to whom the claimant furnished the labor, services, equipment, or materials.
- A description of the site sufficient for identification.

No acknowledgment is required as a prerequisite to recording the claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3084].

[c] Amount of Lien

A mechanics' lien is a direct lien for the lesser of (1) the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished, or (2) the price agreed on by the claimant and the person with whom he or she contracted. As a general rule, the lien will not be limited in amount by the contract price [Civ. Code § 3123(a); see Civ. Code § 3140]. However, if the property owner records the contract and the original contractor's payment bond, the owner's liability to claimants will be limited to the contract price [Civ. Code §§ 3235, 3236; see § 31.22[3]]. The claimant may include in the lien any amount due for labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished pursuant to a written modification of the contract or as a result of the rescission, abandonment, or breach of the contract. However, in the event of rescission, abandonment, or breach of the contract, the amount of the lien may not exceed the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, and materials furnished by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3123(b)]. The above provisions of Civ. Code § 3123(b) permit a claimant to include in the lien an amount for the reasonable value of the labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished based on the owner's breach of contract, even if based on oral modifications to the contract [Basic Modular Facilities, Inc. v. Ehsanipour (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1480, 1485, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462] .

[d] Recordation of Claim

If the owner records a notice of completion or notice of cessation, and notifies the original contractor and any claimants who provided a preliminary 20-day lien notice that the notice of completion or cessation has been recorded, the contractor has 60 days and the claimants have 30 days from the date the notice is recorded to record a claim of lien against the project [Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259.5(a)]. If the owner occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units, the 60- and 30-day periods apply and the owner is not required to give notice that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded; provided such a notice has, in fact, been recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.5]. If a notice of completion or cessation is not recorded, or if the owner fails to notify the original contractor or a claimant who filed a preliminary 20-day notice, the contractor and claimant have 90 days to file a lien claim [see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116, 3259.5].

For a procedural guide to filing a mechanics' lien on a private project, see §§ 31.130-31.138.

§ 31.222 Notice of Extension of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of extension of credit that a claimant may use to extend the time that a mechanics' lien will bind property. No recorded mechanics' lien will bind any property for longer than 90 days after recording, unless within that time either an action to foreclose the lien is commenced in the proper court or the lien claimant gives an extension of credit to the claimant's debtor and records notice of that fact and the terms of the extension before expiration of the 90-day period. If a notice of extension of credit is recorded, the mechanics' lien will continue in force for a period of 90 days after the expiration of the credit, but no more than one year after the original date of the completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3144]. In computing time periods, the first day is excluded and the last day is included [see Ziganto v. Taylor (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 603, 605, 609, 18 Cal. Rptr. 229] .

[b] Necessity of Recording Extension of Credit

The notice of extension of credit must be recorded in order to be effective against any purchaser or encumbrancer for value and in good faith whose rights are acquired subsequent to the expiration of the 90-day period following the recording of the claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3145]. If the notice is not recorded within that period and the lien expires, it may be revived by the subsequent recording of a notice of extension of credit, but only as against persons who are not bona fide purchasers or encumbrancers for value subsequent to the expiration of the 90-day period [Richards v. Hillside Development Co. (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 776, 781, 2 Cal. Rptr. 693] .

[c] Multiple Extensions of Credit

Since there is no restriction to a single extension of credit, multiple extensions of credit may be given and will successively extend the period during which a mechanics' lien may be foreclosed [Richards v. Hillside Development

Co. (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 776, 780-781, 2 Cal. Rptr. 693] . However, the lien may not be extended beyond one year from the time of the completion of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3144].

§ 31.223 Notice of Lis Pendens

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of lis pendens that a lien claimant may record after filing a complaint to foreclose a mechanics' lien. A lis pendens is a notice that an action that affects the title or right of possession of designated real property is pending. After the claimant has recorded a lis pendens, potential purchasers or encumbrancers of the property are deemed to have constructive notice of the pendency of the action [Civ. Code § 3146]. If those persons ultimately acquire an interest in the property, they will take their interest subject to any judgment rendered in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1908(a)(2)].

[b] Commencement of Action

Within 90 days after recording a claim of lien, a claimant must either give an extension of credit [see § 31.222[2]] or file a complaint to foreclose the mechanics' lien. For an example of a complaint to foreclose the lien, see California Forms of Pleading & Practice, Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens (Matthew Bender). After the complaint is filed in the proper court, the claimant may record the notice of lis pendens [Civ. Code § 3146].

[c] Content and Filing Requirements

The notice of lis pendens must contain the names of the parties, the object of the action, and a description of the property affected. It may be filed in the office of the county recorder of the county or counties in which the property is situated [Civ. Code § 3146; Code Civ. Proc. § 405.20].

§ 31.230 Stop Notice

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a stop notice for use on either a public or private work of improvement. Printed versions of stop notices are also available from commercial form publishers. Various public entities may require claimants to give stop notices on particular forms used by each entity. For an example of the printed stop notice form used by the state Department of Transportation, see § 31.231[2].

[b] Nature of Remedy

A stop notice, also known as a notice to withhold, is a written notice to a property owner, public entity, or construction lender from a claimant who has furnished labor, services, materials, or equipment to the work of improvement but has not been paid, demanding that sufficient funds be withheld from the construction fund for payment of the claim. "Public entity" means the state, the Regents of the University of California, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision or public corporation in the state [Civ. Code § 3099]. A "construction lender" is any mortgagee or beneficiary under a deed of trust lending funds with which the cost of the work of improvement is to be wholly or partially defrayed; any assignee or successor in interest of either; or any escrow holder or other party holding any funds furnished or to be furnished by the owner, lender, or any other person as a fund from which to pay construction costs [Civ. Code § 3087].

[c] Persons Entitled to Serve Notice

[i] Private Works

Any person entitled to a mechanics' lien claim [Civ. Code §§ 3110-3112; see § 31.13[2]], other than the original contractor, may give the property owner a stop notice. Any person who fails to serve a stop notice after a written demand by the owner [see § 31.234] will forfeit any right to a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3158].

Any person entitled to a mechanics' lien claim (including the original contractor) may also give a construction lender a stop notice or bonded stop notice [Civ. Code § 3159; see [e][i], below]. The notice may be given only for materials, equipment, or services furnished or labor performed. In the case of a stop notice or bonded stop notice filed by the original contractor or by a subcontractor contracting directly with an owner, the claimant will be entitled to recover on his or her notice only the net amount due the claimant after deducting the stop notice claims of all subcontractors or material suppliers who have filed bonded stop notices on account of work done on behalf of the claimant contractor or subcontractor [Civ. Code § 3159].

An express trust fund to which a portion of a laborer's total compensation is to be paid pursuant to an applicable employment agreement or a collective bargaining agreement for the provision of benefits (including, but not limited to, any employer payments described in Lab. Code § 1773.1), is entitled to assert the same rights and claims as laborers performing labor on, or bestowing skill or other necessary services on, a work of improvement, to the extent of the compensation agreed to be paid to that express trust fund for labor on that improvement only [Civ. Code § 3111]. As amended in 1999 [see Stats. 1999, ch. 795, § 7], Civ. Code § 3111 is intended to reinstate the ability of laborers and employee trust funds to use mechanics' liens and creditor priorities to obtain payment of unpaid wages and fringe benefits. The amendment was drafted in an attempt to avoid having state remedies for collection of those wages and fringe benefits be preempted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) [24 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.]. Before this amendment, the California Supreme Court held that Civ. Code § 3111 was preempted by ERISA [see Carpenters So. Cal. Admin. Corp. v. El Capitan Development Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1041, 1049-1054, 282 Cal. Rptr. 277, 811 P.2d 296] . The Ninth Circuit has subsequently held that ERISA does not preempt California's stop notice and payment bond remedies [Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Trust Funds v. Standard Industrial Electric. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 247 F.3d 920, 925] .

[ii] Public Works

Any person who contributes labor, services, or materials to a work of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3110], who is an express trust fund [see Civ. Code § 3111], who has made site improvements at the request of the owner [see Civ. Code § 3112], who is a registered hazardous waste hauler [see Health & Safety Code § 25163; Pub. Contract Code § 4107.7], or who furnishes provisions, provender, or other supplies to a public work of improvement may serve a stop notice on the public entity responsible for the public work [Civ. Code § 3181]. The stop notice and payment bond [see § 31.240[2]] are the exclusive remedies for persons contributing labor or materials to a public work of improvement, since mechanics' liens do not apply to public works [see Civ. Code § 3109].

ERISA [see 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.] preempts state laws relating to enforcement of public works employee benefit plans. However, the Ninth Circuit has held that ERISA does not preempt California's stop notice and payment bond remedies because they do not require the establishment of a separate benefit plan, impose no new reporting, disclosure, funding, or vesting requirements for ERISA plans, do not tell employers how to write ERISA benefit plans or how to determine ERISA beneficiary status, and do not condition requirements on how ERISA benefit plans are written [Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Trust Funds v. Standard Industrial Electric. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 247 F.3d 920, 925] .

[d] Contents of Notice

The stop notice for a public or private work of improvement must state in general terms all of the following [Civ. Code § 3103]:

- The kind of labor, services, equipment, or materials furnished or agreed to be furnished by the claimant;

- The name of the person to or for whom the labor, service, equipment, or materials were furnished;

- The amount in value, as accurately as possible, of that already done or furnished, and of the whole agreed to be done or furnished; and

- The claimant's name and address.

No notice will be invalid by reason of any defect in form if it is sufficient to substantially inform the owner of the information required [Civ. Code § 3103].

[e] Effect of Stop Notice

[i] Private Works

On receipt of a stop notice, a property owner must withhold from the original contractor or from any person acting under the contractor's authority and to whom labor or materials (or both) have been furnished or agreed to be furnished, sufficient money due or to become due to answer the claim and any claim of lien that may be recorded. The only time this duty to withhold is not imposed is when the owner has recorded a payment bond [see § 31.22[1]] provided by the original contractor [Civ. Code § 3161; see Civ. Code § 3235]. In that event, the owner may withhold the money, but is not obligated to do so. If the owner does not withhold, he or she must, within 30 days after receipt of the stop notice, (1) send the claimant, at the address shown in the stop notice, a written notice that the bond has been recorded, and (2) give the claimant a copy of the bond [Civ. Code § 3161].

A construction lender's responsibilities on receiving a stop notice depend on whether a payment bond has been previously recorded and whether the stop notice itself is bonded. A bonded stop notice is a stop notice accompanied by the claimant's bond in a penal sum equal to one and one-quarter times the amount of the claim, conditioned that if the defendant recovers judgment in an action brought on the claim or on the lien filed by the claimant, the claimant will pay all costs and damages that may be awarded to the owner, original contractor, construction lender, or any of them, up to the sum specified in the bond [Civ. Code § 3083; see § 31.232].

A construction lender is required to withhold funds when (1) the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by an original contractor, regardless of whether a payment bond has been previously recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(1), 3162(a)(1)]; or (2) the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by any person entitled to do so [see Civ. Code § 3159(a)] other than an original contractor and a payment bond was not recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3235 before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(2), 3162(a)(2), (3)].

A construction lender may, but is not required to, withhold funds on receipt of a stop notice when (1) the stop notice is not bonded, regardless of who gives it [Civ. Code § 3161(a)]; (2) the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by any person entitled to do so, other than an original contractor; and (3) a payment bond was recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3235 before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(2), 3162(a)(2), (3)].

If the lender elects not to withhold funds, it must furnish the claimant with notice of its election within 30 days after it so elects; provided that, at the time it gives the lender the stop notice or bonded stop notice, the claimant includes a written request for notice of the election accompanied by a pre-addressed, stamped envelope. The lender will not be liable for failing to furnish a copy of the bond if (1) the failure was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error; (2) the lender maintains reasonable procedures to avoid such errors; and (3) the error was corrected not more than 20 days from the date the violation was discovered [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(3), 3162(a)(3)].

When a stop notice or bonded stop notice is filed by the original contractor or by a subcontractor, the recovery is limited to the net amount due the claimant after deducting the stop notice claims of all subcontractors or material suppliers who have filed bonded stop notices for work done on behalf of the original contractor or subcontractor [Civ. Code §§ 3159(b), 3162(b)]. In no event is a construction lender required to withhold more than this net amount on receipt of a bonded stop notice. This amount represents the limit of the lender's liability [Civ. Code §§ 3159(c), 3162(c)].

[ii] Public Works

On receipt of a stop notice, the public entity has a duty to withhold from the original contractor, or from any person acting under the contractor's authority, money or bonds (when bonds are to be issued as payment for the work of improvement) due or to become due to the contractor in an amount sufficient to answer the claim stated in the stop notice and to provide for the reasonable cost of any litigation thereunder [Civ. Code § 3186]. However, this does not prohibit (1) the payment of any money or bonds to the original contractor or contractor's assignee unless a stop notice is on file before the disbursing officer has actually surrendered possession of either the warrant, check, bonds, or money, or (2) the payment to the original contractor or the contractor's assignee of any money due in excess of an amount sufficient to answer the total amount of the claims stated in stop notices on file at the time of payment, plus interest and court costs that might be reasonably anticipated in connection with the claims [Civ. Code § 3187].

[f] Time for Giving Notice

[i] Private Works

If the owner records a notice of completion or notice of cessation, and notifies the original contractor and any claimants who provided a preliminary 20-day lien notice that the notice of completion or cessation has been recorded, the contractor has 60 days, and a claimant has 30 days from the date the notice is recorded to record a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3259.5(a); see Civ. Code § 3160(b)]. If the owner occupies the property as a personal residence and the dwelling contains not more than four residential units, the 60- and 30-day periods apply and the owner is not required to give notice that a notice of completion or cessation has been recorded; provided such a notice has, in fact, been recorded [Civ. Code § 3259.5]. If a notice of completion or cessation is not recorded, or if the owner fails to notify the original contractor or a claimant who filed a preliminary 20-day notice, the contractor and claimant have 90 days to file a lien claim [see Civ. Code §§ 3160(b), 3259.5].

[ii] Public Works

The service of a stop notice or a bonded stop notice will be effective only if a claimant who is required to do so has given a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3183(a); see § 31.202]. The stop notice must be served before the expiration of 30 days after the recording of any notice of completion or cessation [Civ. Code § 3184(a); see §§ 31.210[2], 31.211[2]]. If no notice of completion or cessation is recorded, the notice must be served before the expiration of 90 days after cessation [Civ. Code § 3184(b)].

A public entity must give notice to the claimant of the expiration of the period for filing stop notices no later than 10 days after the filing of a notice of completion, after the cessation of labor has been deemed a completion of the public work, or after the acceptance of completion, whichever is later. However, the notice is only required if the claimant has paid the public entity a sum of $2 at the time of filing the stop notice [Civ. Code § 3185].

[g] Service of Notice

A stop notice must be delivered to a property owner personally, left at the owner's residence or place of business with some person in charge, or delivered to the owner's architect, if any. A stop notice served on a construction lender must be given to or served on the manager or other responsible officer or person at the office or branch office administering or holding the construction funds [Civ. Code § 3103].

If the public work is for the state, the notice must be filed with the director of the department that let the contract. In the case of other public works, the notice must be filed in the office of the controller, auditor, or other public disbursing officer whose duty it is to make payments under the provisions of the contract, or with the commissioners, managers, trustees, officers, board of supervisors, board of trustees, common council, or other body by whom the contract was awarded [Civ. Code § 3103].

Any stop notice may be served by registered or certified mail with the same effect as personal service [Civ. Code § 3103].

[g.1] Voluntary Release

A stop notice claimant may reduce the amount of, or release in its entirety, a properly served public or private work stop notice without prejudicing the claimant's right to serve a subsequent timely and proper stop notice. The reduction or release must be in writing, but is not required to conform to the statutory forms of release required by Civ. Code § 3262(d) for use in a mechanics' lien context [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)]. To the extent of the reduction or release, it [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(2)(A)-(D)]:

- Releases the owner from any obligation to withhold money on account of the stop notice;
- Is effective to release the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice; and
- Does not operate as a release of any right that the claimant may have, other than the claimant's right to enforce the stop notice.

[h] Release by Bond

[i] Private Works

When a property owner, construction lender, or any original contractor or subcontractor for a private work disputes the correctness or validity of a stop notice or bonded stop notice, that person may file a release bond with the person on whom the notice was served. When the bond is filed, the funds withheld to respond to the stop notice or bonded stop notice will be released [Civ. Code § 3171].

For an example and discussion of release bonds, see § 31.251.

[ii] Public Works

When the original contractor or subcontractor for a public work disputes the correctness, validity, or enforceability of any stop notice, the public entity may permit the original contractor to file a release bond with the public entity. Once such a bond is filed with the public entity, the entity will not withhold any money or bonds from the original contractor on account of the stop notice. The sureties on the bond will be jointly and severally liable to the stop notice claimant with the sureties on any payment bond [Civ. Code § 3196].

[i] Release by Summary Proceedings

The original contractor on a public work may bring summary court proceedings to contest a stop notice and release the funds held by serving on the public entity an affidavit alleging the legal grounds on which the claim is based, and demanding the release of any money alleged to be improperly withheld or excessive [Civ. Code §§ 3197, 3198]. For a discussion of this procedure, see § 31.235.

[j] Enforcement of Stop Notice

To enforce payment of the stop notice claim, a court action against the property owner or construction lender for a private work, or the original contractor and the public entity for a public work, must be commenced any time after 10 days from the date of service of the stop notice but not later than 90 days after the expiration of the period for recording a claim of lien (for private works) or filing a stop notice (for public works) [Civ. Code §§ 3172, 3210; see Civ. Code § 3184]. If timely proceedings are not initiated, the stop notice will cease to be effective and the money or bonds withheld will be paid or delivered to the contractor or other person to whom they are due [Civ. Code §§ 3172, 3210]. For a discussion of the action to enforce a stop notice, see § 31.237[1].

§ 31.232 Stop Notice Bond--Printed Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a standard printed stop notice bond. It is available from Building News, Inc. Bookstore, 1612 S. Clementine Street, Anaheim, California 92802, 1-888-264-2665, http://bnibooks.com. It is to be used by a lien claimant, together with the stop notice form [see § 31.230[2]], to give a bonded stop notice to a construction lender on a private project.

A bonded stop notice is a stop notice given to any construction lender, accompanied by a bond with good and sufficient sureties in a penal sum equal to one and one-quarter times the amount of the claim [Civ. Code § 3083]. The purpose of a bond on a stop notice is to provide that if the defendant recovers judgment in an action brought on the claim or lien filed by the claimant, then the claimant will pay all costs that may be awarded against the owner, original contractor, or construction lender and all damages that the owner, original contractor, or construction lender may sustain by reason of the equitable garnishment effected by the claim or by reason of the lien, not exceeding the sum specified in the bond [Civ. Code § 3083].

[b] Effect of Bonded Stop Notice

A construction lender is required to withhold funds on receiving a bonded stop notice when the stop notice is filed either by an original contractor, regardless of whether a payment bond has been previously recorded [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(1)], or by any person entitled to do so [see Civ. Code § 3159(a)] other than an original contractor and a payment bond was not recorded before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(2); see Civ. Code § 3235 (payment bonds)]. A lender may, but is not required to, withhold funds on receipt of a bonded stop notice when the notice is filed by any person entitled to do so, other than an original contractor, and a payment bond was recorded before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code § 3162(a)(2)].

[c] Service of Notice

To be effective, a bonded stop notice must either be delivered to the manager or other responsible officer or person at the office of the construction lender, or sent to that office by registered or certified mail. If the construction lender maintains branch offices, the bonded notice must be delivered or sent to the office or branch administering or holding the construction funds [Civ. Code § 3083].

[d] Objection to Sufficiency of Sureties

If a construction lender objects to the sufficiency of the sureties on the bond accompanying the bonded stop notice, the lender must give the claimant written notice of the objection. For a discussion of the objection procedure, see § 31.233[1].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the notice of objection that a construction lender may use to object to the sufficiency of the sureties on the bond accompanying a bonded stop notice [see § 31.232]. The written notice must be given to the claimant within 20 days after service of the bonded stop notice. The claimant has 10 days after receiving the notice of objection to substitute another bond executed by a corporate surety licensed to write bonds in California. If the claimant fails to substitute bonds, the construction lender may disregard the bonded stop notice and release all funds held thereunder [Civ. Code § 3163].

§ 31.234 Owner's Demand for Stop Notice

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is an owner's demand for a stop notice on potential lien claimants who have not been paid by the general contractor. If any lien claimant fails to serve a stop notice after receipt of a written demand from the owner, that claimant forfeits any right to a mechanic's lien [Civ. Code § 3158]. The owner may wish to use this device on projects when the general contractor has not filed a payment (also known as a labor and materials) bond [see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity] which would protect the owner against the necessity of having to make a double payment to unpaid subcontractors or materialmen after making payment in full to the general contractor. By demanding a stop notice from unpaid subcontractors and materialmen, the owner will be able to withhold sufficient funds from the payments due to the general contractor to cover the claims of the subcontractors and materialmen. For a discussion of stop notices on private works, see § 31.230[1].

§ 31.235 Declaration of Original Contractor on Public Work Demanding Release of Funds

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a declaration of an original contractor on public works demanding the release of funds. The original contractor may bring summary proceedings by asserting that (1) the claim on which the stop notice is based is not included within the types or classifications of claims under the mechanics' lien law; (2) the claimant is not one of the persons authorized to serve a stop notice [see Civ. Code § 3181]; (3) the amount of the claim as specified in the stop notice is excessive; or (4) there is no basis in law for the claim as referred to and set out in the stop notice [Civ. Code § 3197].

[b] Service of Affidavit

The contractor must serve on the public entity an affidavit (and a copy of the affidavit) that alleges the legal grounds on which the claim is based, states the facts in support of the claim, and demands the release of any money alleged to be improperly withheld or excessive. The affidavit must also state the original contractor's address in California, for purposes of service by mail of any notices or legal documents [Civ. Code § 3198].

After the public entity has been served, it must then serve on the claimant, either personally or by registered or certified mail addressed to the last known address of the claimant, a copy of the original contractor's affidavit and demand for release. The public entity must also serve a written notice that it will release the demanded money or bonds unless the claimant files a counteraffidavit with the public entity on or before a time designated in the notice, which must be no less than 10 or more than 20 days after service on the claimant. Proof of service must be made by affidavit [Civ. Code § 3199]. If the claimant wishes to contest the affidavit, the claimant must serve a counteraffidavit alleging the details of the claim and the basis on which the affidavit is contested [Civ. Code § 3200; see § 31.236].

§ 31.236 Counterdeclaration by Claimant Contesting Original Contractor's Declaration and Demand for Release of Funds

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a counteraffidavit that a stop notice claimant may use to contest the affidavit and demand for release filed by the original contractor on a public works project with the public entity holding money or bonds [see § 31.235[2]]. It is in the form of a declaration under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[b] Purpose and Contents of Counteraffidavit

If the claimant wishes to contest the original contractor's affidavit and demand for release, the claimant must serve a counteraffidavit on the public entity within the time specified in the public entity's notice [Civ. Code § 3200]. That time period may not be less than 10 or more than 20 days after service on the claimant of copy of the original contractor's affidavit [Civ. Code § 3199]. The counteraffidavit must allege the details of the claim and set forth in detail the specific basis on which the claimant contests or rebuts the allegations of the original contractor's affidavit. The claimant must include proof of service of a copy of the counteraffidavit on the original contractor [Civ. Code § 3200]. If no counteraffidavit with proof of service is served on the public entity within the time allowed, the public entity may release the money or bonds or the portion that was demanded in the original contractor's affidavit, without liability in any manner for making the release [Civ. Code § 3200].

[c] Determination of Rights by Court Action

If both an affidavit and counteraffidavit have been filed with the public entity, either the original contractor or the stop notice claimant may file an action in the appropriate superior court for a declaration of the respective rights of the parties [Civ. Code § 3201]. After the filing of an action, either party is entitled to a hearing by the court for the purpose of determining their rights under the affidavit and demand for release and the counteraffidavit [Civ. Code § 3201].

At the conclusion of the hearing, the court must make and enter its order determining whether the demand for release will be allowed or not, and that order will be determinative as to the right of the stop notice claimant to have the money or bonds further withheld by the public entity [Civ. Code § 3203].

§ 31.237 Notice of Commencement of Action on Stop Notice Claim

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of the commencement of an action by a stop notice claimant to enforce payment of the claim stated in the stop notice. It may be used for both public and private works of improvement.

[b] Time for Filing Action

[i] Private Works

An action against the owner or construction lender to enforce payment of the claim stated in a private work stop notice or bonded stop notice may be commenced at any time after 10 days from the date of service of the stop notice on either the owner or construction lender, and must be commenced within 90 days following the expiration of the period within which stop notices are required to be filed [Civ. Code § 3172]. The applicable period is the same as that for recording a claim of lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3115, 3116]. If no action is commenced, the stop notice will cease to be effective and the money paid or delivered to the contractor or other person to whom they are due [Civ. Code § 3172].

[ii] Public Works

An action against the original contractor and the public entity to enforce payment of the claim may be commenced at any time after 10 days from the date of service of the stop notice but before 90 days following the expiration of the period within which stop notices must be filed [Civ. Code § 3210]. The filing period for stop notices on public works is 30 days after the recording of a notice of completion or cessation, or, if neither was recorded, 90 days after completion or cessation of the work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3184]. If no action is brought within the appropriate period, the stop notice will cease to be effective and the money or money withheld must be paid to the contractor or other person to whom they are due [Civ. Code § 3210].

[c] Service of Notice

[i] Private Works

The notice of commencement must be given to the owner or construction lender within five days after commencement of the action [Civ. Code § 3172]. If the notice is served on the owner, it may be delivered personally, left at the owner's residence or place of business with some person in charge, or delivered to the owner's architect, if any [Civ. Code § 3103; see Civ. Code § 3172]. If it is served on a construction lender holding construction funds and maintaining branch offices, it must be served on the manager or other responsible officer or person at the office or branch administering or holding the construction funds [Civ. Code § 3103; see Civ. Code § 3172]. The notice of commencement may be served by registered or certified mail with the same effect as by personal service [Civ. Code § 3103; see Civ. Code § 3172].

[ii] Public Works

Notice of the commencement of the action must be given to the public entity within five days after commencement of the action. The notice must be served in the same manner as a stop notice [Civ. Code § 3211]. In the case of any public work for the state, the notice must be filed with the director of the department that let the contract. In the case of other public works, the notice must be filed in the office of the controller, auditor, or other public disbursing officer whose duty it is to make payments under the provisions of the contract; or with the commissioners, managers, trustees, officers, board of supervisors, board of trustees, common council, or other body that awarded the contract [Civ. Code § 3103].

[d] Attorneys' Fees in Action Relating to Private Work

In any action against an owner or construction lender to enforce payment of a claim stated in a bonded stop notice on a private work, the prevailing party will be entitled to collect from the party held liable by the court for payment of the claim, reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to other costs and to any liability for damages [Civ. Code § 3176]. If the plaintiff is the prevailing party, any amount awarded on the claim will include interest at the legal rate, calculated from the date the bonded stop notice was served on the owner or construction lender [Civ. Code § 3176.5]. The court, on notice and motion by a party, will determine who is the prevailing party for these purposes [see Civ. Code § 3176].

§ 31.240 Public Work Payment Bond

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the payment bond that an original contractor files with the public entity on a public work. Every original contractor who is awarded a contract by a public entity involving an expenditure exceeding $25,000 ($5,000 for a contract with a "state entity") [see Pub. Contract Code § 7103(d) (definition)] must file a payment bond with the officer or public entity by whom the contract was awarded [Civ. Code § 3247(a)]. A deposit will not be accepted in lieu of a bond [Civ. Code § 3248(d)]. However, the Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] permits an undertaking to be substituted for the payment bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210; for discussion of the Bond and Undertaking Law requirements generally, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity].

The public entity must state in its call for bids for any such contract that a payment bond is required in the case of an expenditure exceeding $25,000 [Civ. Code § 3247(a)]. For a discussion and a form for a payment bond on a private work of improvement, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity, §§ 79.244, 79.245.

[b] Approval and Amount of Bond

The payment bond must be approved by the public entity that awarded the contract [Civ. Code § 3247]. To be approved, the bond must be in a sum not less than 100 percent of the total amount payable by the terms of the contract [Civ. Code § 3248(a)].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] requires that the payment bond be executed by two or more sufficient personal sureties [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.510, 995.520], or one sufficient admitted surety insurer, or any combination of sufficient personal sureties and admitted surety insurers [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.310]. An "admitted surety insurer" is a corporate insurer or a reciprocal or interinsurance exchange that has been certified by the Insurance Commissioner to transact surety insurance in California [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.120(a); see Ins. Code § 105; see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.610-995.650].

[c] Contents of Bond

The payment bond must provide that the surety or sureties will pay any of the following if the original contractor fails to pay them [Civ. Code § 3248(b)]:

- Any of the persons entitled to give a public works stop notice under Civ. Code § 3181.

- Amounts due under the Unemployment Insurance Code with respect to work or labor performed by a claimant.

- Any amount required to be deducted, withheld, and paid over to the Franchise Tax Board from the wages of employees of the contractor or subcontractors pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 18663 with respect to the work or labor.

The bond must also provide for reasonable attorneys' fees to be fixed by the court in case suit is brought on the bond [Civ. Code § 3248(b)]. Another litigation-related requirement is that the bond must, by its terms, inure to the benefit of any persons entitled to give a public works stop notice under Civ. Code § 3181 so as to give a right of action to those persons or their assigns in any suit brought on the bond [Civ. Code § 3248(c)]. As a prerequisite to enforcing a claim on a public works payment bond, any claimant other than a person who performs actual labor for wages, an express trust fund, or a person who has a direct contractual relationship with the original contractor must give the public entity a preliminary 20-day notice [see Civ. Code § 3098; see also § 31.202[2]].

[d] Exemption From Bond Requirements

For purposes of the payment bond requirements of Civ. Code § 3247(a), providers of architectural, engineering, and land surveying services pursuant to a contract with a public entity for any public work are not original contractors and are not required to post or file a payment bond [Civ. Code § 3247(c)].

[e] Recovery on Payment Bond

To enforce a claim on a public work payment bond, a claimant (other than one who performs actual labor for wages, is under direct contract with the original contractor, or an express trust fund) must give a preliminary 20-day notice [Civ. Code § 3098; see § 31.202[2]]. An action against the surety must be brought after the claimant has last furnished labor or materials or both, but before the expiration of six months after the period in which stop notices must be filed [Civ. Code § 3184]. For an example of a complaint against the surety on a payment bond, see California Forms of Pleading & Practice, Ch. 481, Public Works (Matthew Bender).

PAYMENT BOND FOR PUBLIC WORKS

KNOW ALL PERSONS BY THESE PRESENTS:

WHEREAS, the _____[name of public entity], and [name of contractor] (hereafter designated as "Principal") have entered into a written agreement, dated _____, for the furnishing of all materials, labor, services and transportation, necessary, convenient, and proper to [specify], which Agreement, and all of the Contract Documents attached to or forming a part of that Agreement, are hereby referred incorporated by reference;

WHEREAS, the Principal is required by Chapter 5 (commencing at Section 3225) and Chapter 7 (commencing at Section 3247), Title 15, Part 4, Division 3 of the California Civil Code to furnish a bond in connection with the contract;

NOW THEREFORE, we, the Principal and _____ and _____ as Sureties, are held and firmly bound unto the Public Entity under the above statutory obligations in the penal sum of $_____, lawful money of the United States of America for the payment of which sum we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns, jointly and severally.

THE CONDITION OF THIS OBLIGATION IS SUCH that if the Principal, the Principal's heirs, executors, administrators, successors or assigns, or subcontractors, fails to pay any of the persons named in Civil Code Section 3181, or any amounts due under the Unemployment Insurance Code with respect to work or labor performed by any such claimant, or any amounts required to be deducted, withheld, and paid over to the Employment Development Department from the wages of employees of the Contractor and the Contractor's subcontractors pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 13020, with respect to this work and labor, that the Sureties will pay for the work and labor, otherwise the above obligation shall be void. If suit is brought on this bond, the Sureties will pay a reasonable attorneys' fee to be fixed by the Court.

This bond shall inure to the benefit of any of the persons named in Civil Code Section 3181 to give a right of action to these persons or their assigns in any suit brought on this bond. It is further stipulated and agreed that the Sureties on this bond shall not be exonerated or released from the obligation of this bond by any of the following: (1) any change, extension of time for performance, addition, alteration, or modification affecting any contract, plans, specifications, or agreement pertaining or relating to any scheme or improvement work described above or pertaining to or relating to the furnishing of labor, materials, or equipment therefor; (2) any change or modification of any terms of payment or extension of the time for any payment pertaining or relating to any scheme or improvement work described above; (3) by any rescission or attempted rescission of the contract, agreement, or bond; (4) any conditions precedent or subsequent in the bond attempting to limit the right of recovery of claimants otherwise entitled to recover under any such contract or agreement or under the bond; or (5) any fraud by any person other than the claimant seeking to recover on the bond. This bond shall be construed most strongly against the Sureties and in favor of all persons for whose benefit this bond is given, and under no circumstances shall the Sureties be released from liability to those for whose benefit this bond has been given, by reason of any breach of contract between the owner or Public Entity and original contractor or on the part of any obligee named in this bond. The sole conditions of recovery shall be that the claimant is a person described in Civil Code Section 3110 or 3112, and has not been paid the full amount of his or her claim. The Sureties hereby waive notice of any change, extension of time, addition, alteration, or modification herein mentioned.

§ 31.241 Notice to Surety and Bond Principal on Private or Public Work Payment Bond

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a claimant's notice of his or her claim to be served on the surety and bond principal on a private or public work payment bond. § 31.250 Mechanics' Lien Release Bond

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a release bond used to release real property from a mechanics' lien. If the owner of the property, the owner of any interest in the property, or any original contractor or subcontractor disputes the correctness or validity of any claim of lien, that person may record a surety bond in the office of the county recorder where the claim of lien was recorded, either before or after commencement of an action to enforce the lien. When the bond is recorded, the real property is released from the lien and from any action brought to foreclose the lien [Civ. Code § 3143].

[b] Bond Requirements

The bond must be executed by a corporation authorized to issue surety bonds in California. It must be in a penal sum equal to one and one-half times the amount of the claim or one and one-half times the amount allocated in the claim of lien to the parcel of property sought to be released, and conditioned for the payment of any sum that the claimant may recover on the claim, together with any costs of suit in the action. The principal on the bond may be either the owner of the property, the owner of any interest in the property, any original contractor, subcontractor, or sub-subcontractor affected by the claim of lien [Civ. Code § 3143].

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of the bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210 et seq.]. For a discussion of this alternative, see § 31.15[3].

[c] Notice to Lienholder

Any person who obtains and records a lien release bond must give notice of the recording to the lienholder by mailing a copy of the bond to the lienholder at the address appearing on the lien. Service of the notice may be by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested. Failure to give notice will not affect the validity of the lien release bond, but the statute of limitations on any action on the bond will be tolled until notice is given. The claimant must commence any action on the lien release bond within six months after the bond is recorded [Civ. Code § 3144.5].

§ 31.251 Stop Notice Release Bond

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is the stop notice release bond used in connection with public work projects handled by the State of California Department of Transportation. The form is available on the Internet at http://www.dot.ca.gov/hq/asc/oap/payments/release.pdf. It is illustrative of the type of release bond that may be used on a public or private project on which a stop notice has been filed.

[b] Use of Stop Notice Release Bond for Private Work

Any owner, construction lender, original contractor, or subcontractor who disputes the correctness or validity of any stop notice or bonded stop notice may file a release bond with the person on whom the stop notice was served. Once such a bond has been filed, the funds withheld in response to the stop notice or bonded stop notice must be released [Civ. Code § 3171]. The release bond filed on a private work must be executed by good and sufficient sureties in a penal sum equal to one and one-quarter times the amount stated in the stop notice or bonded stop notice and must be conditioned for the payment of any sum not exceeding the penal obligation of the bond which the claimant may recover on the claim, together with his or her costs of suit in an action, if he or she recovers in the action [Civ. Code § 3171].

[c] Use of Stop Notice Release Bond for Public Work

If a stop notice has been served on a public entity that contracted for a public work and the original contractor or subcontractor disputes the correctness, validity, or enforceability of the stop notice, the public entity may, in its discretion, permit the original contractor to file a release bond [see Civ. Code § 3196]. Once a release bond has been filed with the public entity, the public entity will not withhold any money or bonds (if bonds are to be issued in payment for the work of improvement) from the original contractor on account of the stop notice [Civ. Code § 3196].

The release bond must be executed by a corporate surety in an amount equal to 125 percent of the claim stated in the stop notice, conditioned for the payment of any sum that the stop notice claimant may recover on the claim together with any costs of suit in the action, if the claimant recovers in the action [Civ. Code § 3196]. The surety or sureties on the release bond will be jointly and severally liable to the stop notice claimant with the surety or sureties on any payment bond [Civ. Code § 3196; see § 31.240[2]].

[d] Application of Bond and Undertaking Law

The Bond and Undertaking Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.] allows an undertaking to be given in lieu of a stop notice release bond on both public and private works [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210 et seq.]. For a discussion of this alternative, see § 31.15[3].

§ 31.252 Legal Release of Claim of Mechanics' Lien

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a printed release of claim of mechanics' lien. It is available from Building News, Inc. Bookstore, 1612 S. Clementine Street, Anaheim, California 92802, 1-888-264-2665, http://bnibooks.com. Publications available from Building News, Inc. include materials on building codes, legal references, and forms.

To remove any cloud on the title of the property that was created by recordation of the mechanics' lien, a written release by the lien claimant must be recorded [see Civ. Code § 1541 (obligation is extinguished by a written release given by creditor to debtor)]. The release should contain the legal description and address of the property on which the lien was recorded, and the signature of the lien claimant. This form must be recorded in the same county recorder's office in which the lien was recorded. For other examples and discussion of the release, see California Forms of Pleading & Practice, Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens (Matthew Bender).

§ 31.253 Contractor's Declaration to Procure Payment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a printed contractor's declaration to procure payment. It is available from Building News, Inc. Bookstore, 1612 S. Clementine Street, Anaheim, California 92802, 1-888-264-2665, http://bnibooks.com. The person holding construction funds may require the contractor to execute a declaration such as this before disbursing any construction funds, to ascertain which persons contributing labor or materials to the work of improvement have been paid and thus minimize exposure to any unknown lien claims. The contractor must state in the declaration, under penalty of perjury, the names of all persons or firms that have done work on or supplied materials to the project, and the amount of money that has not yet been paid to each. Before disbursing any funds, the person holding the construction funds may require the contractor to obtain a full or conditional release [see §§ 31.255-31.258] from each person listed in the declaration, and submit any such releases along with the declaration to procure payment.

[b] Criminal Liability for Wrongful Use of Construction Funds

Various Penal Code provisions are applicable to the acts of wrongfully obtaining or using construction funds. Any person who receives money for the purpose of obtaining or paying for services, labor, materials, or equipment and willfully fails to apply that money for that purpose by either willfully failing to complete the improvements for which funds were provided or willfully failing to pay for services, labor, materials, or equipment provided incident to the construction, and wrongfully diverts the funds to a use other than that for which the funds were received may be subject to fine and/or imprisonment [Penal Code § 484b].

Any person who submits a false voucher to obtain construction loan funds and does not use the funds for the purpose for which the claim was submitted is guilty of embezzlement [Penal Code § 484c].

Any person who receives money for the purpose of obtaining or paying for services, labor, materials, or equipment incident to constructing improvements on real property and willfully rebates any part of the money to or on behalf of anyone contracting with that person, for provision of the services, labor, materials, or equipment for which the money was given, is guilty of a misdemeanor. However, a normal trade discount for prompt payment is not considered a violation of this section [Penal Code § 532e].

§ 31.254 Waiver of Lien by General Contractor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a waiver by an original contractor of any mechanics' lien rights that the contractor may have against a construction project. It should be used only for a waiver made by an original contractor. If the waiver is made by any other person, such as a subcontractor or supplier of materials, this form will be ineffective and cannot be used. When a waiver is made by a person other than a general contractor, the person making the waiver must do so by executing the appropriate statutory form [Civ. Code § 3262(d); see §§ 31.255-31.258].

[b] Who May Waive Rights

Mechanics' lien rights may be waived by the party entitled to those rights, except as otherwise provided by law or when the waiver would be against public policy [see Civ. Code § 3268]. Neither the owner nor the original contractor, by any term of their contract or otherwise, may waive or impair the claims or liens of any other party without the consent of that party, and any contract term to that effect is void [Civ. Code § 3262(a); for additional discussion, see § 31.255[1][b]].

[c] Reasons for Waiver

An original contractor has 60 days after a notice of completion is recorded within which to record a claim of lien, provided the owner timely notifies the contractor that a notice of completion has, in fact, been recorded. If the owner fails to notify the contractor that a notice of completion has been recorded, the time to record a claim of lien increases to 90 days [see Civ. Code § 3259.5]. One reason why this time period is significant is that most construction contracts permit the owner to retain a specified portion of the contract price until 35 days after the notice of completion has been recorded or until the real property on which the project is located has been freed from all mechanics' liens recorded against the project, whichever occurs last. Thus, in paying the retained portion or final portion of the contract price to the original contractor before expiration of the 30- or 90-day lien period, the owner should insist on the execution of this form or take other steps to guarantee that the original contractor will not exercise mechanics' lien rights during the remainder of the lien period.

[d] Waiver Procedure

Mechanics' lien rights may be waived either by a formal contract or by the actions of the parties [E.K. Wood Lumber Co. v. Higgins (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 91, 94, 4 Cal. Rptr. 523, 351 P.2d 795] . An original contractor will usually refuse to waive these rights in the prime contract, unless the owner's financial security indicates that all amounts can be paid and/or the waiver is conditioned on the receipt of progress payments [see California Mechanics Liens and Related Construction Remedies, Ch. 8, Representing the Owner, § 8.27 (Cal. C.E.B. 3d ed. 1998)]. It is more likely that the original contractor will deliver a formal, duly executed waiver of lien at the time (within the contractor's 60-day lien period) [see [c], above] that the owner makes the final payment. This form includes such a waiver.

§ 31.255 Conditional Waiver and Release of Mechanics' Lien Claims on Progress Payment--Claimant Other Than Original Contractor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory waiver and release of mechanics' lien claims. It must be used when a claimant other than the original contractor (1) is required to execute a waiver and release in exchange for, or to induce the payment of, a progress payment; and (2) is not, in fact, paid in exchange for the waiver and release, or a single payee check or joint payee check is given in exchange for the waiver and release [Civ. Code § 3262(d)(1)].

A potential claimant other than an original contractor can waive or impair its mechanics' lien claims only by completing the appropriate statutory waiver and release form [Civ. Code § 3262(a); see [b], below]. There are four different statutory forms, each of which applies to a different set of circumstances. This statutory form must be used only under the conditions discussed in the preceding paragraph. For an unconditional waiver and release on receipt of a progress payment, § 31.256[2] must be used in place of this form. For waivers and releases that are effective on receipt of a final payment, see §§ 31.257[2] (conditional waiver) and 31.258[2] (unconditional waiver). For a waiver of lien executed by an original contractor (and therefore not subject to the requirements discussed in the comment to this form [see Civ. Code § 3262(a)]), see § 31.254[2].

A conditional lien waiver and release under Civ. Code § 3262(d)(1) waives mechanic's lien rights, bond rights, and stop notice rights for services rendered and materials provided up to the date stated on the receipt, even if those services and materials were not compensated by the progress payment. However, waiver is limited only to those express lien rights. By executing the release, the subcontractor or materialman does not waive his or her rights to pursue compensation for unpaid services and materials under the terms of the contract or as otherwise provided by law or equity [Tesco Controls, Inc. v. Monterey Mechanical Co. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 780, 797, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 751] .

[b] Waiver of Mechanics' Lien Claims by Owner or Original Contractor

An owner or original contractor cannot, by any term of their contract or otherwise, waive, affect, or impair the claims and liens of other persons except with their written consent. Any term of a contract violating that requirement will be null and void [Civ. Code § 3262(a)].

Any written consent given by a claimant will be null, void, and unenforceable unless and until the claimant executes and delivers a waiver and release. The waiver and release will be binding and effective to release the owner, construction lender, and surety on a payment bond from claims and liens only if the waiver and release follows substantially one of the forms specified by statute [see Civ. Code § 3262(d)(1)-(4); see also [a], above] and is signed by the claimant or the claimant's authorized agent. Further, in the case of a conditional release, there must be evidence of payment to the claimant. Evidence of payment may consist of the claimant's endorsement on a single or joint payee check that has been paid by the bank on which it was drawn or by written acknowledgment of payment given by the claimant [Civ. Code § 3262(a)].

The statutory restrictions on waivers and releases discussed throughout this comment do not affect the enforceability of either an accord and satisfaction regarding a bona fide dispute, or any agreement made in settlement of an action pending in any court, provided the accord and satisfaction or agreement and settlement specifically refer to the mechanics' lien, stop notice, or bond claims [Civ. Code § 3262(c)].

An oral or written statement purporting to waive, release, impair, or otherwise adversely affect a mechanics' lien claim that does not comply with the waiver and release procedures discussed in this comment will still be enforceable or create an estoppel or impairment of the claim if the claimant had actually received payment in full for the claim [Civ. Code § 3262(b)(1)(B)].

§ 31.256 Unconditional Waiver and Release on Progress Payment--Claimant Other Than Original Contractor

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory waiver and release that must be completed by any claimant (other than an original contractor) who is required to execute a waiver and release of mechanics' lien claims in exchange for or to induce payment of a progress payment. Unlike the form in § 31.255[2], this form asserts that the claimant has, in fact, received the progress payment [Civ. Code § 3262(d)(2)]. If this form is not used, any such waiver or release is null, void, and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 3262(d)]. For a discussion of other requirements applicable to any waiver and release of mechanics' lien claims, see § 31.255[1].

For a waiver of lien executed by an original contractor (and therefore not subject to the requirements discussed in the comment to this form [see Civ. Code § 3262(a)]), see § 31.254[2].

§ 31.257 Conditional Waiver and Release on Final Payment--Claimant Other Than Original Contractor

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a statutory waiver and release that must be completed by a claimant (other than an original contractor) who is required by an owner or original contractor to execute a waiver and release in exchange for, or to induce the payment of, a final payment. It must only be used when the claimant is not in fact paid in exchange for the waiver and release, or a single payee check or joint payee check is given in exchange for the waiver and release [Civ. Code § 3262(d)(3)].

The fact that this waiver and release will not become effective until the claimant receives the final payment makes this a conditional waiver and release. For an unconditional waiver and release that should be used when the claimant has in fact received the final payment, see § 31.258[2].

A waiver or release that is subject to but does not comply with the above requirements is null, void, and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 3262(d)]. For a discussion of additional requirements governing the use of this form, see § 31.255[1].

15-31 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 31.260

AUTHOR: Timothy F. O'Leary Practice Consultant

§ 31.260 Demand for Payment [Civ. Code § 3081.3(b)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a demand by a design professional for the payment by a landowner of amounts owed the design professional under the terms of a contract between these two parties. A design professional must make such a demand as a prerequisite to the creation and enforcement of a design professionals' lien [see [b]-[f], below]. For these purposes, "design professional" means any certificated architect, registered professional engineer, or licensed land surveyor who furnishes services pursuant to a written contract with a landowner for the design, engineering, or planning of a work of improvement [Civ. Code § 3081.1].

For comprehensive coverage of agreements for the performance of professional design services in connection with a construction project, see Ch. 30C, Agreements With Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals .

[b] Design Professionals' Lien

A design professional is entitled to a lien on the real property that is subject to the contract between the design professional and the landowner, if construction of the planned work of improvement has not commenced [see Civ. Code §§ 3081.2, 3081.4(b)(1), 3081.7] and all of the following occur or have occurred:

- A building permit or other governmental approval for the work of improvement has been obtained in connection with or by utilizing the services rendered by the design professional [Civ. Code § 3081.2].

- The landowner has defaulted in any payment required pursuant to the terms of the contract, or refuses to comply with a demand for payment made by the design professional in accordance with the written contract [Civ. Code § 3081.3(a)].

- The design professional mails (by first-class registered or certified mail, postage prepaid) a written demand for payment (this form) that is addressed to the landowner and that states (1) that a default has occurred under the contract, and (2) the amount of the default [Civ. Code § 3081.3(b)].

- At least 10 days after the design professional mails the foregoing demand, and no later than 90 days after the design professional learns or has reason to know that the landowner is not commencing the work of improvement, the design professional records, in the recorder's office for the county in which all or some portion of the real property is located, a notice of lien [Civ. Code §§ 3081.3(c), 3081.7; see § 31.261; see also Civ. Code §§ 3081.2 (landowner must be owner of subject real property at time of recordation of lien), 3081.4(a) (lien is created in favor of named design professional on recordation of notice of lien)].

A design professionals' lien will not apply to a work of improvement relating to a single-family, owner-occupied residence when the construction costs are less than $100,000 in value [Civ. Code § 3081.10].

[c] Amount of Lien

The lien will be for the amount of the design professional's fee for any services rendered before commencement of the work of improvement or the reasonable value of those services, whichever is less. The amount of the lien must be reduced by the amount of any deposit or prior payments made pursuant to a written contract entered into by the design professional and by the landowner or his or her agent [Civ. Code § 3081.2].

[d] Expiration of Lien

The lien will automatically expire and will be null and void and of no further force or effect on the occurrence of either of the following [Civ. Code § 3081.4(b)]:

- The commencement of the work of improvement for which the design professional furnished services at the request of the landowner.

- The expiration of 90 days after the recordation of the notice of lien, unless the design professional files suit to enforce the lien within that 90-day period [see [e], below].

[e] Enforcement or Satisfaction of Lien

As discussed in [d], above, the lien will automatically expire 90 days after the recordation of the notice of lien unless the design professional files suit to enforce the lien within this 90-day period [Civ. Code § 3081.4(b)(2)]. Thereafter, the lien must be enforced pursuant to the enforcement provisions of the mechanics' lien law [Civ. Code § 3081.5; see Civ. Code § 3082 et seq. (mechanics' lien law); see also Civ. Code §§ 3143-3154 (enforcement provisions)]. For discussion of those enforcement provisions, see § 31.16.

If the landowner partially or fully satisfies the design professional's lien, the design professional must execute and record a document that evidences a partial or full satisfaction and release of the lien, as appropriate [Civ. Code § 3081.4(c); see § 31.262[2]].

[f] Effect on Other Laws

The statutes governing design professionals' liens do not affect the ability of a design professional to obtain a mechanics' lien [Civ. Code § 3081.6]. Further, a design professionals' lien perfected pursuant to the foregoing statutes will not affect the ability of the design professional to pursue other remedies [Civ. Code § 3081.8].

No design professionals' lien will affect or take priority over [Civ. Code § 3081.9]:

- The interest of record of a purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer in the real property that is subject to the lien, if the interest of the purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer was duly recorded before recordation of the design professionals' lien.

- An encumbrance of a construction lender, when the construction loan is used to commence the work of improvement for which the design professional furnished services.

§ 31.261 Notice of Design Professionals' Lien [Civ. Code § 3081.3(c)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form in [2], below, is a notice of lien which, when recorded, will create a design professionals' lien [for coverage of design professionals' liens, see § 31.260[1]]. The notice must be recorded in the recorder's office for the county in which all or some portion of the real property is located [Civ. Code § 3081.3(c)]. Code § 3081.7*].

This chapter covers environmental investigation and cleanup liabilities and their effect on real estate transactions. The focus is on potential liability to private parties and the federal and state governments under federal and state statutes and the common law.

The chapter explains how strict, joint and several liability may be imposed, without regard to fault, causation, or fairness, on real property sellers, purchasers, landlords, tenants, and lenders. The chapter covers environmental assessments by which the parties to a real estate transaction can prudently estimate the level of risk. It also suggests ways that the parties to a real estate sales or lease transaction, including lenders, can contractually allocate environmental liabilities and responsibilities among themselves.

This chapter is designed to be used in concert with, and as a supplement to, other chapters that deal with real estate transactions, especially, Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property and Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements ; Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans and Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing ; Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording ; Ch. 34B, Residential Leases , Ch. 34C, Commercial , Industrial, and Office Leases , Ch. 34D, Ground Leases , and Ch. 34E, Shopping Centers: Leasing and Operation ; and Ch. 36, Oil and Gas Rights and Leases and Ch. 37, Farm Leases .

A. Sources of Environmental Liability

15-33 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33.10

§ 33.10 Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act ("CERCLA") or Superfund

[1] Purpose of CERCLA

The Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act ("CERCLA") [42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.] was enacted by Congress to provide a comprehensive response to the problem of hazardous substance releases into the environment. CERCLA creates broad and very powerful legal remedies designed to ameliorate the environmental crisis created by past practices of improperly handling and disposing of hazardous and toxic wastes [see Wickland Oil Terminals v. Asarco, Inc. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1986) 792 F.2d 887, 890 ; see generally Barr, CERCLA Made Simple: An Analysis of the Cases Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, 45 Bus. Law. 923, 924- 925 (1990)].

Under CERCLA, the Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") can order the responsible persons to clean up a release of a hazardous substance or abate the threat of a release [42 U.S.C. §§ 9604(a), 9606(a)]. In the alternative, the EPA itself can undertake to clean up the site with funding provided by the Hazardous Substance Response Trust Fund, which is commonly known as the "Superfund" [I.R.C. § 9507], and then recover its cleanup costs from any one or more of a host of potentially responsible parties ("PRPs") [42 U.S.C. § 9607; see [5][e], below]. In addition, private persons can sue the PRPs to recover environmental investigation and cleanup costs [42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)(4)(B)].

[2] Strict, Joint and Several Liability

Liability under CERCLA is strict and without regard to causation or fault [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a); Farmland Industries v. Morrison-Quirk Grain (8th Cir. 1993) 987 F.2d 1335, 1339] . In addition, CERCLA imposes joint and several liability [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607; O'Neil v. Picillo (1st Cir. 1989) 883 F.2d 176, 183] . Joint and several liability is imposed on all potentially responsible parties unless the harm involved is divisible. Responsibility is only apportioned among multiple parties if the extent of harm caused by each party can be established [see Matter of Bell Petroleum Services, Inc. (5th Cir. 1993) 3 F.3d 889, 897-904 (former owner showed reasonable basis for apportioning liability among former owners based on proportionate volume of chromium-contaminated water discharged by each into environment)]. If the harm is indivisible, then each responsible party is subject to liability for the entire harm, even though its role in creating the hazardous contamination was small [U.S. v. Monsanto Co. (4th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 160, 171-173] . The responsible party may then seek contribution from other liable parties [see Pinal Creek Group v. Newmont Mining Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 118 F.3d 1298, 1301 (claim by potentially responsible party (PRP) against another PRP under CERCLA is limited to one for contribution under 42 U.S.C. §§ 9607(a) and 9613(f)); Anspec Co., Inc. v. Johnson Controls, Inc. (6th Cir. 1991) 922 F.2d 1240, 1241-1244 (owner and operator subject to EPA cleanup order sued predecessors in interest to recover response costs); but see City of Merced v. R.A. Fields, Inc. (E.D. Cal. 1998) 997 F. Supp. 1326, 1332 (defendants in CERCLA contribution action cannot themselves maintain contribution actions of their own)].

Out of concern that a responsible party may be unfairly required to pay for the share of liability for cleanup costs that is attributable to persons who are "defunct or insolvent" ("orphan shares"), the California Legislature in 1999 enacted the Orphan Share Reimbursement Trust Fund [Health & Safety Code § 25390 et seq.] as part of the Hazardous Substance Account Act [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.; see § 33.12]. When the Fund becomes operative, a responsible party may, under certain circumstances, file a claim for reimbursement of any part of an orphan share that party has paid [see Health & Safety Code §§ 25390.4, 25390.7]. However, the article creating the program does not become operative until the operative date of a statute that either appropriates the necessary money to the Fund or establishes a revenue source for the Fund [Health & Safety Code § 25390.9].

Since CERCLA imposes strict liability for environmental cleanups based on the mere status of the defendant [see [5][e], below] rather than on fault or causation, the Act is of major concern in all types of real estate transactions. Parties who fail to account for environmental liabilities in their real estate transactions and other agreements may find themselves subject to considerable, unanticipated liability. Cleanup cost liabilities may greatly exceed the value of the underlying property [see, e.g., U.S. v. Monsanto Co. (4th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 160, 164-166 (landlord jointly and severally liable for $1.8 million in cleanup costs, though only received maximum of $350 per month rent)].

[3] Retroactive Application of CERCLA

Unlike the Hazardous Substances Account Act in California [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.; see § 33.12[3]], several older cases held that CERCLA may be applied retroactively to establish liability for remedial costs incurred that were caused by releases of hazardous substances that occurred before the statute's enactment [see, e.g., O'Neil v. Picillo (1st Cir. 1989) 883 F.2d 176, 183 n.12 , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1071 (1990) ; United States v. Hooker Chemicals & Plastics Corp. (W.D.N.Y. 1988) 680 F. Supp. 546, 556 (although language of CERCLA does not provide for retroactive application, legislative history suggests that its purpose includes correction of past mistakes and therefore supports retroactive effect); United States v. South Carolina Recycling and Disposal, Inc. (D.S.C. 1984) 653 F. Supp. 984, 996 (statute that attaches liability to present conditions stemming from past acts does not necessarily have retroactive effects that are subject to due process limitations)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Applying CERCLA Retroactively. Look for renewed developments on this question, as lawyers ponder a recent case that held CERCLA not to be retroactive [United States v. Olin Corp. (S.D. Ala. 1996) 927 F. Supp. 1502] and as industry seeks to amend CERCLA to preclude retroactivity when CERCLA is reauthorized. By Joel Moskowitz

[4] Judicial Interpretation of CERCLA

CERCLA is a broad remedial statute designed to enhance the EPA's authority to respond effectively and promptly to toxic pollutant spills that threaten the environment and human health. Because it is a remedial statute, CERCLA must be construed liberally to effectuate its primary goals of (1) enabling the EPA to respond efficiently and expeditiously to toxic spills, and (2) holding those parties responsible for the releases liable for the costs of the cleanup [B.F. Goodrich

Co. v. Murtha (2nd Cir. 1992) 958 F.2d 1192, 1197-1198] .

[5] Elements of CERCLA Liability

[a] Four Elements

To establish a prima facie case of liability in a CERCLA cost recovery action, a plaintiff must prove the following [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a); Amoco Oil Co. v. Borden, Inc. (5th Cir. 1989) 889 F.2d 664, 668-669 ; Dartron Corp. v. Uniroyal Chemical Co., Inc. (N.D. Ohio 1995) 893 F. Supp. 730, 735 ; Anschutz Min. Corp. v. NL Industries, Inc. (E.D. Mo. 1995) 891 F. Supp. 492, 494] :

- The site in question is a "facility" as defined under the Act [see [b], below];
- A "release" or threatened release of a "hazardous substance" "into the environment" has occurred [see [c] and [d], below];
- The release or threatened release has caused the plaintiff to incur response costs; and
- The defendant falls within one of the four classes of "responsible persons" who are liable under the Act [see [e][i], below].

[b] "Facility"

Every location where a hazardous substance has come to be located is a "facility" [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(9); United States v. Conservation Chemical Co. (D.C. Mo. 1985) 619 F. Supp. 162, 185] . Under CERCLA, a facility encompasses far more than traditional dumpsites [U.S. v. Bliss (E.D. Mo. 1987) 667 F. Supp. 1298, 1305 ; see Knox v. AC & S, Inc. (S.D. Ind. 1988) 690 F. Supp. 752, 755-756 (workplace built with asbestos-containing materials is facility within meaning of CERCLA)]. To prove that a site is a "facility," a plaintiff need only show that a hazardous substance, as defined by CERCLA [see [d][i], below], has been placed there or has "otherwise come to be located there" [United States v. Conservation Chemical Co. (D.C. Mo. 1985) 619 F. Supp. 162, 185 (in defining "facility," Congress sought to deal with every conceivable area where hazardous substances may come to be located)].

[c] "Release"

"Release" is likewise broadly defined. Release means "any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, discharging, injecting, escaping, leaching, dumping, or disposing into the environment," including the discarding of closed receptacles containing any hazardous substance [42 U.S.C. § 9601(22)]. For purposes of liability for contamination, no minimum quantity of substance is required to have a "release" under CERCLA [Amoco Oil Co. v. Borden, Inc. (5th Cir. 1989) 889 F.2d 664, 669] .

CERCLA also defines "environment" broadly to include navigable waters, ocean waters, surface water, ground water, the land surface, subsurface strata, and ambient air [42 U.S.C. § 9601(8)].

CERCLA excludes from the definition of "release" several types of discharges including any release that results in exposure to persons solely within a workplace with regard to a claim that may be asserted against the person's employer and emissions from the engine exhaust of a motor vehicle [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(22)(A)-(D)].

[d] "Hazardous Substance"

[i] Broadly Defined

Hazardous substance is broadly defined to include all toxic substances or hazardous materials or wastes regulated under the Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, Toxic Substances Control Act, as well as other materials designated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") [42 U.S.C. §§ 9601(14), 9602; see 40 C.F.R. § 302.4 ("List of Hazardous Substances and Reportable Quantities")].

As under California's Hazardous Substances Account Act (HSAA) [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.; see § 33.12], no threshold level has to be met before the substance can be classified as "hazardous" and give rise to liability [A&W Smelters & Refiners, Inc. v. Clinton (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 1107, 1110] .

[ii] Petroleum Exclusion

CERCLA expressly excludes petroleum and its fractions, unless expressly listed, from its definition of "hazardous substance" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(14)]. This is a very important exclusion, since a frequent cause of pollution is gasoline leaking from corroded tanks or lines.

The petroleum exclusion applies to both unrefined and refined gasoline, even though certain indigenous components as well as chemicals added during the refining process, have themselves been designated as hazardous substances under CERCLA [Wilshire Westwood Assocs. v. Atlantic Richfield Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 801, 804-810 (release of hazardous substances contained in refined, leaded gasoline does not give rise to CERCLA liability)]. If a specifically listed hazardous substance is indigenous to petroleum and is present as the result of a petroleum release, that substance will fall within the petroleum exclusion unless it is present at a concentration level that exceeds the concentration level that naturally occurs in the petroleum product. However, petroleum-related waste products do not fall within the petroleum exclusion [Cose v. Getty Oil Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 700, 703-707 (crude oil tank bottom waste, consisting of sediment and water, not within petroleum exclusion)].

[e] "Potentially Responsible Parties"

[i] Four Classes of Persons

CERCLA imposes liability on four classes of persons, who are commonly referred to as "potentially responsible parties" or "PRPs." These classes of persons are as follows [42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)(1)-(4)]:

- The current owners or operators of a vessel or a facility where an actual or threatened release is present [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(9), (20); see also 42 U.S.C. § 9607(h) (owner or operator of vessel also liable under maritime tort law)].

- The past owners or operators of a facility as of the time of disposal of the hazardous substances [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601(9), (14), (29), 9603].

- Arrangers for disposal of hazardous substances; that is, persons who own or possess hazardous substances for which they contract or arrange transportation, disposal, or treatment at any facility or incineration vessel that is owned or operated by another party [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(9), (21), (29), (35)].

- Transporters of hazardous substances, that is, persons who transport hazardous substances to a facility, incineration vessel, or site at which a release or threatened release occurs [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601(9), (21), (29), (35)(A), 9603].

A party may be burdened with liability in more than one PRP capacity. For example, a party can be liable both as an owner and as an arranger, which can increase that party's share of cleanup liability [see, e.g., FMC Corp. v. United States Dep't of Commerce (3d Cir. 1994) 29 F.3d 833, 839-846 (government's share of cleanup cost consisted of 8 percent as owner, which it did not contest, and 18 percent as operator and arranger, which it contested)].

In addition, a parent corporation may have derivative CERCLA liability arising from a subsidiary's operations when the corporate veil may be pierced, and it may be directly liable as an "operator" if it actively participated in and exercised control over the subsidiary's operations. To be liable as an "operator," a person must manage, direct, or conduct operations specifically related to pollution, that is, operations having to do with the leaking or disposal of hazardous waste, or decisions about compliance with environmental regulations. The test is not whether the parent corporation operated the subsidiary, but rather whether it operated the facility [see United States v. Bestfoods (1998) 524 U.S. 51, 118 S. Ct. 1876, 1887, 141 L. Ed. 2d 43] .

[ii] Liability of Landlords and Tenants

A tenant may be held liable under CERCLA for contamination of the leased property caused by his or her activities. Generally, tenants will be "operators" for purposes of CERCLA [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(20); U.S. v. Northernaire Plating Co. (W.D. Mich. 1987) 670 F. Supp. 742, 748 ; see also [i], above]. If the tenant is the current operator, it will be liable irrespective of whether the contamination of the leased property resulted from its own activities, past or present, or activities of the landlord, prior tenants, or co-tenants [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(20); U.S. v. Northernaire Plating Co. (W.D. Mich. 1987) 670 F. Supp. 742, 748 (corporate officer in his personal capacity, landlord in its capacity as owner, and corporate tenant in its capacity as operator, were jointly and severally liable under CERCLA); see also [2], above]. However, a tenant's liability only extends to those areas or activities where the hazardous substances are located that the tenant has authority to control under the lease agreement [Nurad, Inc. v. William E. Hooper & Sons Co. (4th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 837, 842-844 ; see Kaiser Aluminum v. Catellus Dev. (9th Cir. 1992) 976 F.2d 1338, 1341 (following Nurad and adopting authority to control standard)].

The landlord is also subject to CERCLA liability [see, e.g., U.S. v. Monsanto Co. (4th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 160, 164-166 (landlord liable for tenant's release of hazardous substances on premises in 1970s, which resulted from tenant's unauthorized storage of chemical wastes on premises)]. Moreover, because of the contractual nature of the landlord-tenant relationship, landlords do not enjoy any CERCLA third-party defense against the contaminating activities of their tenants [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3); United States v. South Carolina Recycling and Disposal, Inc. (D.S.C. 1984) 653 F. Supp. 984, 993] . A landlord is precluded from asserting any third-party defenses to avoid liability for releases of hazardous substances that occur while the landlord holds title to the property [see State of Wash. v. Time Oil Co. (W.D. Wash. 1988) 687 F. Supp. 529, 532 ; see also [7][b], [c], below (third party defenses)].

If the tenant subleases the premises, its liability is directly analogous to that of an owner or landlord. A sublessor essentially stands in the shoes of an owner if he or she maintains control over and responsibility for the use of the property [see United States v. South Carolina Recycling and Disposal, Inc. (D.S.C. 1984) 653 F. Supp. 984, 993, 1003] .

[iii] Extent of Liability

Potentially responsible parties under CERCLA are liable for the following [42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)(4)(A)-(D)]:

- All costs of removal or remedial action incurred by the federal government, a state, or an Indian tribe not inconsistent with the National Contingency Plan [see 42 U.S.C. § 9605 (National Contingency Plan)].

- Any other necessary costs of response incurred by any other person that are consistent with the national contingency plan.

- Damages for injury to, destruction of, or loss of natural resources, including the reasonable costs of assessing the injury, destruction, or loss resulting from the release.

- The costs of any health assessment or health effects study carried out under the response provisions of CERCLA [see 42 U.S.C. § 9604(i) (establishes Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry)].

In addition, a successful CERCLA plaintiff can recover interest, which accrues from the later of (1) the date on which payment of a specified sum is demanded in writing or (2) the date on which the expenditure is made [42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)]. Moreover, the government is entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in an action to recover response costs under CERCLA [United States v. Chapman (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 1166, 1176] . However, a private litigant who brings a cost recovery action is not entitled to recover attorney's fees incurred in litigation [Key Tronic Corp. v. U.S. (1994) 511 U.S. 809, 819, 114 S. Ct. 1960, 128 L. Ed. 2d 797] . Neither are punitive damages recoverable by a private litigant under CERCLA [Hatco Corp. v. W.R. Grace & Co. (D.N.J. 1994) 849 F. Supp. 931, 980 ; c.f. 42 U.S.C. § 9607(c)(3) (if PRP in bad faith does not comply with EPA administrative cleanup order, PRP may be liable to federal government for punitive damages equal to three times response costs incurred due to failure to obey order)].

[6] Lender Liability

[a] Statutory Secured Creditor Exemption

Secured creditors enjoy special protection from CERCLA liability. Under the secured creditor exemption, CERCLA's definition of "owner or operator" [see [5][e], above] specifically excludes persons who without participating in the management of a vessel or facility, holds indicia of ownership primarily to protect their security interest [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(A) (emphasis added)]. The purpose of this statutory exemption is to shield from liability those "owners" who are in essence lenders holding title to the property as security for the debt [Waterville Industries v. Finance Authority of Maine (1st Cir. 1993) 984 F.2d 549, 552] . The difficulty arises when the creditor forecloses on its security interest after the debtor's default or controls activities at the facility.

The EPA originally adopted lender liability regulations, which gave foreclosing lenders clear guidelines on the range of activities that they could undertake without "participating in the management" of the facility and losing the protection of the exemption. However, the regulations were vacated as being beyond the EPA's authority [Kelley v. E.P.A. (D.C. Cir. 1994) 15 F.3d 1100, 1103 , cert. denied, -- U.S. --, 115 S. Ct. 900, 130 L. Ed. 2d 784 (Congress did not delegate EPA with authority to issue either legislative or interpretive rules on scope of CERCLA liability)].

[b] Asset Conservation, Lender Liability, and Deposit Insurance Protection Act

The Asset Conservation, Lender Liability, and Deposit Insurance Protection Act [Pub. L. No. 104-208, §§ 2501-2505, codified at 42 U.S.C. §§ 6991(h), 9007(n), 9601(20)(E)-(G)] specifically reinstates the EPA lender liability rule, overturning the Kelley decision [Pub. L. No. 104-208, § 2504; see [a], above]. It provides that to "participate in management" a lender must "actually participate in the management or operational affairs of a vessel or facility" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(F)(i)(I)]. The term does not include "merely having the capacity to influence, or unexercised right to control, vessel or facility operations" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(F)(i)(II)]. Under the Act, a lender participates in the management of a facility or vessel only if it exercises decision-making control over the facility or vessel's environmental compliance and hazardous substance handling and disposal practices, or has assumed day-to-day management of all operational functions at the facility or vessel [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(F)(ii)]. The Act specifies that many activities lenders routinely perform in administering a loan do not constitute "participation in management," and thus do not trigger liability [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(F)(iv) (listing activities that do not constitute "participating in management")].

The Act provides even greater leeway to a lender who forecloses on a facility or vessel. After foreclosure, a lender may wind down operations or maintain business activities at a facility or vessel that it seeks to sell, re-lease (in the case of property subject to a lease financing arrangement), or otherwise divest at the "earliest practicable, commercially reasonable time, on commercially reasonable terms, taking into account market conditions and legal and regulatory requirements" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(E)(ii)]. Thus, a lender intending to divest collateral property may take over a facility and continue its operations in preparation for sale or other divestiture of the property [42 U.S.C. § 9601(20)(E)(ii)(II)]. Although this provision is beneficial, it may be of limited value to the lender who does not have a marketable facility. The lender may not keep the facility itself, and may have difficulty selling a contaminated site because Congress has not, as yet, adopted liability protection for bona fide purchasers who buy contaminated property.

The Asset Conservation Act also amends CERCLA to provide liability protection for fiduciaries, such as trustees, executors, administrators, custodians, receivers, conservators, or guardians ad litem [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(n)(5)(A) (fiduciary defined as someone who is acting for the benefit of another party)]. The Act provides that the liability of a fiduciary under CERCLA is limited to the assets held in the fiduciary capacity [42 U.S.C. § 9607(n)(1)] and specifically identifies certain activities a fiduciary may undertake without incurring Superfund liability [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(n)(4); see also 42 U.S.C. § 9607(n)(7) (circumstances where fiduciary is not protected from liability)].

[7] Statutory Defenses to CERCLA Liability

[a] Limited and Narrow Defenses

Potential affirmative defenses are limited to those listed in 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b) [B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Murtha (2nd Cir. [Conn.] 1992) 958 F.2d 1192, 1198] . A potentially responsible party may avoid liability under CERCLA by establishing that the damaging release of hazardous substance was caused solely by [42 U.S.C. § 9607(b) (emphasis added)]:

- An act of God [see U.S. v. Stringfellow (C.D. Cal. 1987) 661 F. Supp. 1053, 1061 (heavy rainfall is not act of God, since not exceptional natural phenomenon, and storms were not sole cause of harm)];

- An act of war [see U.S. v. Shell Oil Co. (C.D. Cal. 1993) 841 F. Supp. 962, 972 (act of war defined and defense rejected)]; or

- A third party other than (1) an employee or agent of the defendant, or (2) one whose act or omission occurred in connection with a direct or indirect "contractual relationship" with the defendant [see [c], below].

For all of these affirmative defenses, the defendant must show that the claimed excuse was the sole cause [42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)]. For example, in one case, the defendant-tenant had deposited filter cake containing hazardous substances on the property. Even though the landlord had previously caused a hazardous release on the property, the defendant's third party defense was barred because it could not show that the landlord's release had solely caused the contamination [State of Wash. v. Time Oil Co. (W.D. Wash. 1988) 687 F. Supp. 529, 532-533 ; see U.S. v. Stringfellow (C.D. Cal. 1987) 661 F. Supp. 1053, 1061 (because of multiple causes of release, sole cause requirement not met)].

[b] Due Care Requirement for Third-Party Defense

To take advantage of the third-party defense [see [a], third bulleted item, above], the defendant must show that he or she (1) exercised due care with regard to the hazardous substance concerned, taking into consideration the characteristics of the hazardous substance in light of all relevant facts and circumstances, and (2) took precautions against foreseeable acts or omissions of any such third party and the consequences that could foreseeably result from those acts or omissions [42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3)]. Even absentee landlords are held to these due diligence standards [see U.S. v. Monsanto Co. (4th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 160, 169 , cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1106 (1989) (site-owners, who verbally leased land used by tenant for storage of hazardous waste, had no third-party defense as matter of law, since they claimed they neither knew of tenant's activities nor even inspected site)].

[c] Contractual Relationships and Third-Party Defense

A "contractual relationship" with a third party that precludes use of the third-party defense [see [a], third bulleted item, above], includes, but is not limited to, land contracts, deeds, or other instruments transferring title or possession [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(A)]. However, such contracts are excluded from this definition (and, therefore, the third-party defense is still available), if the real property was acquired by the defendant after the hazardous substance was disposed of or placed at the facility, and the defendant establishes any of the following [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(A)(i)-(iii)]:

- It is a government entity that acquired the facility by escheat or through any other involuntary transfer or acquisition or through the exercise of eminent domain authority by purchase or condemnation.

- It acquired the facility by inheritance or bequest.

- It was an "innocent landowner" at the time the party acquired the facility [see [d], below].

Moreover, the third party defense is still available, despite the existence of a contractual relationship between the claimant and the third party, if there is no relationship between the disposal/releasing activity and the contract. In other words, the contract between the claimant and the third party must either relate to the hazardous substances or allow the claimant to exert some element of control over the third party's activities [Westwood Pharmaceuticals v. Nat. Fuel Gas Dist. (2d Cir. 1992) 964 F.2d 85, 88 (though plaintiff had purchased property from defendant, third-party defense still available, since plaintiff's demolition and construction activities, which defendant claimed was sole cause of contamination, were not done in connection with real estate purchase contract)].

Since landlords are in a contractual relationship with their tenants, they do not enjoy any third-party defense to CERCLA cost-recovery actions arising from their tenants' releases of hazardous substances [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3); U.S. v. Northernaire Plating Co. (W.D. Mich. 1987) 670 F. Supp. 742, 748] . Furthermore, persons acquiring an ownership, leasehold, or security interest in a facility would not have a third-party defense against previous acts or omissions of predecessors-in-interest that resulted in a release, because of their "contractual relationship" with them, except for the "innocent landowner" defense [see U.S. v. Pacific Hide & Fur Depot, Inc. (D. Idaho 1989) 716 F. Supp. 1341, 1347-1348 (by adopting rule that any instrument transferring title or possession of facility would be "contractual relationship," Congress barred use of innocent landowner defense unless certain conditions were met); see also [d], below].

[d] Innocent Landowner Defense

[i] Subset of Third-Party Defense

Under the innocent landowner defense, a PRP may avoid liability for preexisting contamination if it can prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that it did not know and had no reason to know that hazardous substances were disposed of on its land at the time it acquired title or possession [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(A)(i)]. This "innocent landowner" or "innocent purchaser" defense is a variation or subset of the third-party defense [see, e.g., State of Wash. v. Time Oil Co. (W.D. Wash. 1988) 687 F. Supp. 529, 532 ; see also [a]-[c], above]. Accordingly, the PRP must also show that due diligence was exercised and that precautions were taken against foreseeable acts of third parties [42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3); see [b], above].

The innocent landowner defense is potentially available to both the current and previous owners [Westwood Pharmaceuticals v. Nat. Fuel Gas Dist. (2d Cir. 1992) 964 F.2d 85, 91-92] . However, previous owners are barred from using the defense if they obtained actual knowledge of a release or threatened release of hazardous substance on the property and then transferred ownership without disclosing their knowledge [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see [e], below; see also § 33.14[6] (common-law fraud liability)].

A tenant may also take advantage of the innocent landowner defense to avoid CERCLA liability by establishing all of the statutory elements [see National R.R. Passenger Corp. v. NYC Housing Auth. (S.D. N.Y. 1993) 819 F. Supp. 1271, 1281] . However, if the tenant creates contamination, the landlord will be precluded from asserting the innocent-purchaser defense, since by definition, the landlord cannot be an innocent purchaser [see State of Wash. v. Time Oil Co. (W.D. Wash. 1988) 687 F. Supp. 529, 532] .

Similarly, a secured lender that forecloses and takes title to contaminated property may find a problem in asserting the innocent purchaser defense with regard to any contamination that occurred after the loan was funded. To maximize protection under the defense, the lender would need to conduct appropriate due diligence before it forecloses and acquires the property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see also § 33.223[2] (form of mortgage provision giving trustee power to conduct environmental audit after grantor's default)]. However, the lender who fails to conduct such an inquiry might still enjoy protection under CERCLA's secured creditor exemption [see [6], above].

De minimis landowner settlements with the EPA may be available for innocent purchasers of contaminated property that bar contribution suits brought by third parties. For further discussion, see § 33.31.

[ii] "All Appropriate Inquiry" Requirement

To establish that the potentially responsible party had no reason to know of the presence of hazardous substances, the party must have undertaken, at the time of the acquisition, "all appropriate inquiry into the previous ownership and uses of the property consistent with good commercial or customary practice in an effort to minimize liability" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B)]. The duty to inquire and the standards of "good commercial and customary practice" are judged as of the time of the transaction [see U.S. v. Serafini (M.D. Pa. 1988) 711 F. Supp. 197, 198] . Whether an "appropriate inquiry" has been made is determined on a case-by-case basis. However, certain statutory factors must be considered when determining whether all appropriate inquiry was made in a given case. These factors are [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B)]:

- Any specialized knowledge or experience that the party may have.
- The relationship of the purchase price to the value of the property if uncontaminated.
- Commonly known or reasonably ascertainable information about the property.
- The obviousness of the presence or likely presence of contamination at the property.
- The ability to detect the contamination by appropriate inspection.

[iii] Judicial Application

Applying the factors in [ii], above, courts have held persons engaged in commercial transactions to the highest and strictest standard of inquiry [see, e.g., In re Hemingway Transport, Inc. (1st Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 915, 932-933 , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 914 (purchaser from bankruptcy proceeding held to specially stringent level of preacquisition inquiry since it acquired property during period when containers were leaking hazardous waste); U.S. v. Pacific Hide & Fur Depot, Inc. (D. Idaho 1989) 716 F. Supp. 1341, 1348] . On the other hand, persons who acquire property through inheritance are held to a much more lenient standard [U.S. v. Pacific Hide & Fur Depot, Inc. (D. Idaho 1989) 716 F. Supp. 1341, 1348-1349 (children, who had made no inquiry whatsoever into hazardous substances on PCB-contaminated property that they received as inheritances, were still innocent landowners, even though presence of hazardous substances was visible on property)]. Obviously, actual knowledge of the presence of hazardous substances bars the innocent landowner defense [see Kerr-McGee Chemical v. Lefton Iron & Metal (7th Cir. 1994) 14 F. 3d 321, 325] .

[e] Environmental Assessment: Practical Due Diligence Challenge

To establish the innocent landowner defense, a real property purchaser, tenant, or lender must show that he or she neither knew nor had any reason to know that the property was contaminated at the time of the acquisition [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3); see also [d][i], above]. This requires that the claimant conduct "all appropriate inquiry into the previous ownership and uses of the property consistent with good commercial or customary practice in an effort to minimize liability" [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see [d][ii], above].

Unfortunately, Congress, the EPA, or the courts have not articulated definitive standards for establishing such due diligence. The statutory factors [see [d][ii], above] fail to specify exactly what constitutes "all appropriate inquiry" or to create a "safe harbor" for prospective purchasers, tenants, or lenders. Therefore, counsel representing a potential purchaser, tenant, or lender is faced with the practical challenge of taking steps that will show that his or her client conducted a sufficient investigation, "consistent with good commercial or customary practice" [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B)] without having clear guidance on what steps constitute such practice.

The American Society of Testing and Material ("ASTM") publishes consensus standards on good commercial practice for initial inquiries into the environmental condition of property. The standards set forth a "transactional screen," consisting of a questionnaire, a site inspection, and a records check, all of which may be performed by a person without environmental training or experience. If the property fails the transactional screen, then a professional performs a more thorough, but still noninvasive, investigation of the property [see American Society of Testing and Materials, ASTM Standards on Environmental Site Assessments for Commercial Real Estate, available from ASTM Customer Service, 100 Barr Harbor Drive, P.O. Box C700, West Conshohocken, Pennsylvania, 19428-2959, (610) 832-9585, fax: (610) 832-9555, website: http://www.astm.org/]. According to at least one source, the ASTM standards have gained widespread acceptance as minimum standards for conducting environmental due diligence [Site Auditing: Environmental Assessment of Property, 3-9 (Specialty Technical Publishers 1991)].

The Small Business Liability Protection and Brownfields Revitalization Act [P.L. 107-118, 115 Stat. 2356; see [f], below], enacted in 2002, deems "all appropriate inquiry" for the "innocent purchaser" defense to include compliance with the ASTM standards for property bought after May 31, 1997 (including for residential property a facility inspection and a title search with clean results) [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B)(iv)(II)]. However, this chapter suggests a more intensive (and more conservative) level of initial inquiry, one requiring that an environmental professional be engaged [see §§ 33.120 (environmental assessment procedures), 33.200[2] (environmental assessment contract)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Due Diligence. The EPA is very reluctant to recognize as a defense the adequacy of any course of investigation that failed to disclose the contamination. Due diligence should be performed to the level adequate to satisfy the party's concern, not in the highly uncertain hope of establishing this defense. In this regard, care should be taken in applying uncritically the preliminary screening scope of work of the ASTM standard, which was designed for economy of time and money by avoiding employment of environmental professionals. By Joel Moskowitz

[f] Small Business Liability Protection and Brownfields Revitalization Act

On January 11, 2002, the President signed into law the Small Business Liability Protection and Brownfields Revitalization Act [P.L. 107-118, 115 Stat. 2356]. Title II of the Act is the Brownfields Revitalization and Environmental Restoration Act (Brownfield Amendments). Although the Amendments do not make any major revisions in the liability scheme of CERCLA, they establish new defenses to CERCLA liability and include incentives to promote brownfields redevelopment. The Amendments exempt some owners and developers of some properties from certain liabilities.

The Brownfields Amendments include provisions covering all of the following:

- Authorizing grants for brownfields inventorying, characterizing, cleaning up, and related planning [see 42 U.S.C. § 9604(k)].

- Defining brownfields to include hazardous wastes sites, mine-scarred land, and petroleum spill sites (if low risk, no PRP, and third party will clean up) [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(39)(D)].

- Codifying the 1995 US EPA Policy exempting owners of property with contaminated aquifers, and exempting contiguous property owners [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(q) (owner of real property contiguous to or otherwise similarly situated with regard to, and that is or may be contaminated by release or threatened release of hazardous substance from, real property that is not owned by that person will not be considered to be owner or operator of vessel or facility for purposes of CERCLA liability solely by reason of contamination, if specified conditions are met)].

- Creating a new bona fide prospective purchaser (BFPP) defense based on ownership or operation of the facility [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(40) (BFPP whose potential liability for release or threatened release is based solely on purchaser's being considered to be owner or operator of facility will not be liable as long as BFPP does not impede performance of response action or natural resource restoration)] and giving a lien to the United States for unrecovered response costs when the BFPP is not liable and the property value has increased since response action was taken [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(r)].

- Deeming "all appropriate inquiry" for the "innocent purchaser" defense to include compliance with standards of the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) for property bought after May 31, 1997 (and including for residential property facility inspection and title search with clean results) [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B)(iv)(II)].

- Authorizing grants to states or indian tribes for response programs and related activities [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601(41), 9628(a)].

- Limiting US EPA "overfiling" when hazardous waste releases are already addressed by a state cleanup plan [see 42 U.S.C. § 9628(b)(1)(A)]. Exceptions include migration onto United States property or imminent and substantial endangerment [see 42 U.S.C. § 9628(b)(1)(B)(ii), (iii)]. There is an additional exception for states that do not keep public records of sites cleaned up according to state law [see 42 U.S.C. § 9628(b)(1)(C)].

- Requiring deferral of NPL listing when the state is conducting a response action or is contracting with a private person to do so, with some exceptions [see 42 U.S.C. § 9605(h)].

For further discussion of the Brownfields Revitalization Act and brownfields redevelopment, see Manaster and Selmi, California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 72, Hazardous Waste Cleanup and Land Use (Matthew Bender).

[g] Owner's Duty to Disclose Contamination

If an owner obtains actual knowledge of the release or threatened release of a hazardous substance at a facility while owning the real property where the facility is located, but subsequently transfers ownership to another person without disclosing that knowledge, the transferor will be precluded from asserting any of these CERCLA defenses, including and most importantly, the innocent landowner defense [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see [d], above]. In addition, the owner likely will be liable for fraud under state law, including exposure to punitive damages [see § 33.14[6]].

Therefore, counsel representing the prospective seller of contaminated property must ensure that the existence of any contamination is disclosed to the prospective buyer to preserve the innocent purchaser and other defenses, if any of them is otherwise applicable. This advice most likely also applies to landlords, who are eligible for the innocent landowner defense, and who seek to lease property. Of course, whatever the form of the transaction, disclosure by the transferor disqualifies the prospective transferee from asserting the innocent landowner defense [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see also [d], above].

For a form setting forth a seller's environmental disclosures to a potential buyer, see § 33.211[2]. For a borrower's environmental disclosure form to a lender, see § 33.220[2]. For a landlord's environmental disclosure form to a potential tenant, see § 33.234[2].

§ 33.11 Resource Conservation and Recovery Act ("RCRA")

The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act ("RCRA") [42 U.S.C. § 6901 et seq.] subjects hazardous wastes to a mandatory regulatory program, which controls how these wastes are managed from when they are generated until their final disposition. In other words, RCRA provides for cradle-to-grave management of hazardous wastes and is intended to mainly apply to the problems of current and future disposal of hazardous wastes [see 42 U.S.C. § 6901 et seq.; 40 C.F.R. pts. 260, 264]. In contrast, CERCLA is concerned primarily with the cleanup of hazardous substances, such as toxic wastes, that have been already released into the environment [see § 33.10[1]].

The liabilities imposed for violating RCRA are of particular concern because (1) they are based on the condition of the affected real property and (2) they can be retrospective. RCRA enforcement actions can be brought against any past or present generator, transporter, owner, or operator who has contributed to the past or present handling, storage, treatment, transportation, or disposal of any solid or hazardous waste, which may present an imminent and substantial danger to health or the environment. The EPA can order abatement of imminent hazards or sue for a court injunction. Private parties also can sue for injunctive relief [42 U.S.C. § 6972(a) (citizen suits); 42 U.S.C. § 6973(a) (EPA enforcement actions)].

RCRA permits injunctive relief for the present and future conditions resulting from past acts [United States v. Northeastern Pharmaceutical (8th Cir. [Mo.] 1986) 810 F.2d 726, 740] . RCRA does not authorize recovery of cleanup costs for past contamination [Meghrig v. KFC Western, Inc. (1996) 516 U.S. 479, 116 S. Ct. 1251, 1253, 134 L. Ed. 2d 121] .

The major difference between CERCLA and RCRA in terms of liability is that RCRA does not recognize liability based on mere status, that is, merely being an owner or operator. Under RCRA, to be liable the defendant must have been "contributing to the past or present handling, storage, treatment, transportation, or disposal of any solid or hazardous waste" [42 U.S.C. § 6972(a)(1)(B); c.f., § 33.10[1] (status liability under CERCLA)]. In addition, RCRA has a more limited range and number of hazardous materials under its jurisdiction than CERCLA [compare 40 C.F.R. pt. 261, app.

VIII (list of RCRA hazardous constituents) with 40 C.F.R. pt. 302 (list of CERCLA hazardous substances)]. Therefore, with regard to real estate transactions, CERCLA is far more significant than RCRA from a liability point of view [see generally Stoll, The New RCRA Cleanup Regime: Comparisons and Contrasts with CERCLA, 44 Sw. L.J. 1299 (1991)].

For a detailed discussion of RCRA and its state law parallel, the California Hazardous Waste Control Law ("HWCL") [Health & Safety Code § 25100 et seq.; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 66260.1 et seq.], see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Chapters 50, Administration of Hazardous Waste Laws: Federal /State Interrelationship, 51, Regulation of Hazardous Waste Generators , 52, Regulation of Transporters of Hazardous Waste and Materials , 53, Regulation of Hazardous Waste Treatment, Storage, and Disposal Facilities , and 54, Enforcement of Hazardous Waste Management Requirements (Matthew Bender). RCRA is also covered in Environmental Law in Real Estate and Business Transactions,Chapters 2, RCRA Section 7003-Imminent Hazards and 7, The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (Matthew Bender).

§ 33.12 Hazardous Substance Account Act ("HSAA")

NOTE:

Reauthorization of Carpenter-Presley-Tanner Hazardous Substance Account Act. Most provisions of the Carpenter-Presley-Tanner Hazardous Substance Account Act (HSAA) [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.] were repealed by operation of law on January 1, 1999, when the Legislature failed to pass reauthorizing legislation in the 1998 legislative session. In May 1999, the Legislature reinstated the former statutory provisions, with some new additions [Stats. 1999, ch. 23]. An uncodified portion of Chapter 23 provides that the January 1, 1999, repeal of portions of the HSAA "shall not terminate, affect, or modify any proceeding, order, or agreement issued or entered into by any" regulatory agency [Stats. 1999, ch. 23, § 3(b)]. This provision also provides that the new law "shall apply retroactively, on and after January 1, 1999, to those proceedings, orders [and] agreements." Therefore, potentially responsible parties should expect prior arbitration proceedings to be reinstated and that the California Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) will treat prior orders and agreements as having been continuously in effect during the Act's hiatus. The reauthorized Act no longer contains a sunset provision.

[1] State Superfund Law Generally Parallels CERCLA

The Carpenter-Presley-Tanner Hazardous Substance Account Act ("HSAA") [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.] is California's own superfund law. With regard to liability issues, the HSAA parallels CERCLA in many respects. The HSAA even incorporates key CERCLA definitions by reference. For example, the HSAA simply adopts CERCLA's definition of the concept of responsible party [see, e.g., Health & Safety Code §§ 25310, 25323.5(a)(1), 25325; see also § 33.10[5][e]]. In other places, the state statute repeats the CERCLA definition verbatim or near verbatim [compare, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 25316 ("hazardous substance" defined) with 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14) (CERCLA's definition of term)].

Unlike some other states' superfund laws, which have eliminated CERCLA's petroleum exclusion, the HSAA basically shares CERCLA's definition of "hazardous substances" including the petroleum exclusion [compare Health & Safety Code § 25317(a) with 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14); see also § 33.10[5][d][ii]]. Similarly, like CERCLA, the HSAA does not set a minimum amount of hazardous substance that must be dumped for a "release" to occur, triggering liability under the Act [compare Health & Safety Code § 25320 ("release" defined) with 42 U.S.C. § 9601(22) (meaning of "release" under CERCLA); see also Analytical Measurements v. Keuffel & Esser Co. (D.N.J. 1993) 843 F. Supp. 920, 931 and § 33.10[5][c]] (comparing CERCLA with New Jersey's superfund law). However, the HSAA does exclude from its definition of "release" not only "the normal application of fertilizer," like CERCLA, but also the normal application of "plant growth regulants, and pesticides" [compare 42 U.S.C. § 9601(22)(D) with Health & Safety Code § 25321(d)].

For a detailed discussion of the HSAA, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, ch. 50, Administration of Hazardous Waste Laws: Federal /State Interrelationship, ch. 55, Cleanup of Hazardous Substance , and ch. 56, Cleanup Liability and Cost Recovery (Matthew Bender).

[2] Strict, but Not Joint and Several, Liability

Like CERCLA, the HSAA imposes strict liability without regard to fault on all parties responsible for discharging hazardous substances [compare Health & Safety Code §§ 25323.5, 25360, 25363 with 42 U.S.C. § 9607; see also § 33.10[2]]. However, in contrast with CERCLA, liability under the HSAA is not joint and several. Liable parties are only liable for that amount that represents their proportional contribution to the hazardous substances present at the site [Health & Safety Code § 25363]. Even the failure of other PRPs to pay their proportional share does not increase liability, at least in governmental enforcement actions regarding sites on the California Superfund List [see Health & Safety Code § 25363(c) (State Superfund must pay amount in excess of that apportioned by equitable principles among PRPs)]. Therefore, as a practical matter, the Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) generally seeks cost-recovery for state-listed sites in federal court under CERCLA, instead of the HSAA, to take advantage of CERCLA's clear joint and several liability standard [see, e.g., BKHN, Inc. v. Department of Health Services (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 301, 306, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 (invoking CERCLA, Department of Health Services sent demand letter to PRP demanding full payment of interim cleanup costs)].

[3] No Retroactive HSAA Liability

Regardless of the doubts about CERCLA's retroactivity [see § 33.10[3]], liability under the HSAA is not retroactive, as long as the acts that resulted in releases of hazardous substances occurred on or before January 1, 1982 and were not in violation of existing state and federal laws at the time they occurred [Health & Safety Code § 25366(a)]. However, the HSAA does not affect or modify a person's liability under other federal, state, or common law for damages resulting from a release of a hazardous substance or the costs of remedial action [Health & Safety Code § 25366(c)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Suing Under HSAA. Both because of its lack of joint and several liability [see [2], above] and its lack of retroactive liability [see above], suits are rarely brought under the HSAA alone. Rather, actions under the HSAA are usually brought in federal court as supplemental to CERCLA actions. By Joel Moskowitz

[4] Defenses to HSAA Liability

The HSAA incorporates by reference CERCLA's limited defenses against liability [Health & Safety Code § 25323.5(b)]. Therefore, under the HSAA, just as under CERCLA, the defendant must prove that the release was caused by an act of God, war, or a third party with whom the defendant had no contractual relationship. Similarly, the HSAA embodies by reference CERCLA's "innocent landowner" defense and exempts the secured creditor, who does not participate in the management of the facility, from liability as an "owner or operator" [see Health & Safety Code § 25323.5(b); see also §§ 33.10[6], [7][d]].

However, the HSAA also recognizes special "innocent landowner" defenses to (1) innocent owners of single-family residences or halves of duplexes constructed on the property and the owners of common areas within residential common interest developments [see Health & Safety Code § 25360.2], and (2) special districts in general and entities holding conservation easements with regard to property acquired on or after January 1, 1995, if an environmental assessment was performed that disclosed no contamination [see Health & Safety Code § 25360.3]. In addition, persons who develop or implement innovative investigative or remedial technology, which is approved by the DTSC to remedy a contaminated facility, are only liable under the HSAA for a release stemming from that technology if they were negligent, misrepresented the technology, or disregarded the DTSC-approved remediation plan [Health & Safety Code § 25323.5(a)(2)].

Indemnity and hold-harmless provisions in contracts may cover any costs or expenditures imposed by the HSAA. However, as under CERCLA, no agreement can transfer ultimate liability under the state statute [Health & Safety Code § 25364; see § 33.30 (effect of contractual provisions on CERCLA liability)].

[5] Remedies Under HSAA

The HSAA gives a cause of action for enforcement, including damages, in favor of the California Department of Toxic Substances Control ("DTSC"), within the California Environmental Protection Agency ("CalEPA") [Health & Safety Code § 25360]. In addition, persons who have incurred remediation costs may seek contribution or indemnity under the HSAA from any person liable under the Act [Health & Safety Code § 25363(e)]. This is similar to CERCLA, which also allows both public and private enforcement [see § 33.10[1]]. Further, a defendant PRP may join other PRPs in a DTSC cost-recovery action [Health & Safety Code § 25362].

Under the HSAA, the DTSC can recover treble damages against any PRP (except an innocent landowner) who fails, without sufficient cause, to remediate the contaminated property after receiving a DTSC or court order to do so [Health & Safety Code § 25359]. In addition, one PRP who is in compliance with a DTSC agreement or order may recover treble damages, in addition to cleanup costs, against another PRP who has failed or refused to comply with that DTSC order or agreement [Health & Safety Code § 25359.4.5]. Under CERCLA, by contrast, a private plaintiff may not recover punitive or enhanced damages [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(c)].

§ 33.13 Porter-Cologne Water Quality Control Act

The Porter-Cologne Water Quality Control Act [Water Code § 13000 et seq.] regulates the discharge, or threatened discharge, of waste into the waters of California. The Act authorizes California's regional water quality control boards to issue cleanup orders to any person who discharges waste into state waters, or discharges waste that probably will find its way into state waters, where it will create, or threatens to create, a condition of pollution or nuisance [Water Code § 13304(a)].

The Porter-Cologne Act's definition of "waste" reaches much farther than the statutory definitions of "hazardous substance" under CERCLA or the HSAA. The Act applies to any waste, whether it is hazardous or not [Water Code § 13050(d); see Lake Madrone Water Dist. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 163, 169, 256 Cal. Rptr. 894 (silt released by dam into downstream creek was "waste")]. Similarly, unlike CERCLA or the HSAA, the Porter-Cologne Act does not exclude petroleum [compare Water Code § 13050(d) with 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14) and Health & Safety Code § 25317(a); see also §§ 33.10[5][d][ii], 33.12[1]].

However, like both CERCLA and the HSAA [see §§ 33.10, 33.12], the Porter-Cologne Act throws a wide net over the potentially responsible parties, and the State Water Resources Control Board has interpreted the scope of liability under the Act quite broadly. Not only is liability imposed on a prior owner who first caused the discharge, but also on any person who owned or owns the property while the pollution persists. In addition, down-gradient owners, lessees, suppliers of leaking equipment, successor and dissolved corporations, secured lenders, and directors and even shareholders may be liable under the Act [see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, ch. 32, Regional Water Board Ground Water Investigations and Cleanups, § 32.30 (Matthew Bender)]. Similarly, the State Water Board interprets the Act to impose strict, joint, and several liability, like CERCLA [see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, ch. 32, Regional Water Board Ground Water Investigations and Cleanups, §§ 32.30[2], 32.34 (Matthew Bender)].

If the condition is not abated, the regional water boards may perform the cleanup and attempt to recover all reasonable costs from the liable parties by means of a civil action [Water Code § 13304(c)].

§ 33.14 Common Law Theories of Liability

[1] Continuing Importance

Despite the broad imposition of environmental liability under CERCLA and the HSAA, the statutory defenses and certain statutory exclusions, such as the petroleum exclusion, make CERCLA and the HSAA unavailable as a theory of liability in some circumstances [see §§ 33.10[5][d][ii] (petroleum exclusion), 33.10[7] (statutory defenses to CERCLA liability), 33.12[1]]. Therefore, plaintiffs may need to rely on common-law tort theories to address oil and gas pollution [see, e.g., Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 347-351, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 (property owner has negligence action against former owner who operated natural gas plant and allegedly contaminated property); Marshall v. El Paso Natural Gas Co. (10th Cir. 1989) 874 F.2d 1373, 1376, 1380 (defendant liable for $350,000 diminished value of property, $50,000 nuisance damages, and $5 million in punitive damages for negligently plugging oil and gas well)].

In addition, common-law tort theories offer the potential of damages, such as consequential damages for diminution in the value of property and personal injury and punitive damages, which are not generally available under CERCLA or the HSAA [compare Civ. Code § 3294 with Hatco Corp. v. W.R. Grace & Co. (D. N.J. 1994) 849 F. Supp. 931, 980 ; see also § 33.12[5] (narrow circumstances for treble damages under HSAA)]. Common-law tort doctrines may also reach environmentally harmful conduct that was not prohibited by statute or regulation at the time of occurrence [see Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 976, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795 (trial court sitting as trier of fact concluded that defendant's waste disposal practices from 1967 to 1974 constituted actionable negligence)].

Consequently, plaintiffs in federal cost-recovery cases commonly combine CERCLA with a variety of common-law (and also state statutory causes of action) [see, e.g., Amoco Oil Co. v. Borden, Inc. (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1989)889 F.2d 664, 666 . Even in state court, which lacks jurisdiction under CERCLA, environmental plaintiffs often combine common law theories of liability with state statutory causes of action [see, e.g., Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal.

App. 3d 1125, 1149-1150, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 (property owner brought many causes of action against former tenant's disposal of hazardous waste on premises)]. Therefore, common-law theories of liability for environmental contamination [see [2]-[7], below] remain important.

For further discussion of common-law theories as applied in the context of environmental law, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Chs. 1, Nuisance, Trespass, and Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activities , 3, Toxic Torts and Environmental Litigation , and 56, Cleanup Liability and Cost Recovery (Matthew Bender).

[2] Nuisance

Nuisance is probably the most important common-law theory of liability for contamination of real property. A nuisance is anything that interferes with the enjoyment or use of land or property [Civ. Code § 3479]. A nuisance may be either a public or private nuisance, and the remedies available include both the recovery of damages and an injunction ordering a cleanup [Civ. Code §§ 3480, 3481, 3491, 3501]. In general, courts have applied a balancing of factors, weighing the benefits of the activity against its severity, to determine whether a nuisance exists [see, e.g., Farmy v. College Housing, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 174-175, 121 Cal. Rptr. 658] . However, if a legislative body has expressly declared an activity to be a nuisance, it is a nuisance per se, and the courts do not engage in any balancing process [City of Bakersfield v. Miller (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 93, 100, 48 Cal. Rptr. 889, 410 P.2d 393 , cert. denied, 384 U.S. 988 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 821-840].

[3] Trespass

Trespass is an invasion of another person's interest in the exclusive possession of land. Therefore, a polluter who allows hazardous waste to seep onto adjacent land may be liable in trespass to the adjacent landowner. Liability is only imposed when the trespass is intentional; however, the general intent to perform the act that causes the invasion is sufficient [see Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 158, 159, 165, 196-199, 201(1)].

Noise or other intangible intrusions such as odor or light that do not cause physical damage do not constitute a trespass and must be dealt with as nuisances [Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 232-234, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 (plaintiffs could not recover based on trespass for damages caused by noise from an adjacent steel fabricating plant that did not cause physical damage to their property); San Diego Gas and Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 893, 936, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724, 920 P.2d 669 (electric and magnetic fields arising from power lines are intangible intrusions that do not constitute actionable trespass absent physical damage to property)].

[4] Strict Liability for Abnormally Dangerous Activity

A landowner is strictly liable in tort to others for harm caused by toxic wastes, if they are abnormally dangerous, that are stored on the landowner's property and flow onto the property of others. Whether an activity is abnormally dangerous is a factual determination based on a case-by-case consideration of the following factors [Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 500, 190 P.2d 1 (leading case adopting doctrine of Restatement); Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 519, 520]:

- The existence of a high degree of risk of harm to the person, land, or chattel of others;
- The likelihood that the harm that results from it will be great;
- The inability to eliminate the risk by the exercise of reasonable care;
- The extent to which the activity is not a matter of common usage;

- The inappropriateness of the activity to the place where it is carried on; and
- The extent to which its value to the community is outweighed by its dangerous attributes.

[5] Negligence

Unlike CERCLA, RCRA, and the HSAA [see §§ 33.10-33.12], the negligence cause of action requires proof that the defendant was at fault and that the defendant's acts or omissions caused the harm. This proof often can be difficult in contamination cases, since it requires an examination of the ordinary standard of care in the management of property and hazardous substances, which was much lower even in the recent past. The further back in time the contamination occurred, the greater the difficulty in finding witnesses and reconstructing events [see, e.g., Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 347-351, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 (property owner had negligence action against former owner who operated natural gas plant and allegedly contaminated property); SKF Farms v. Superior Court (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 902, 905, 200 Cal. Rptr. 497 (lettuce grower pleaded negligence, among other causes of action, against defendants who allegedly caused herbicide designed for wheat crops to drift onto plaintiff's land)].

The doctrine of "negligence per se" has great applicability to contaminated property cases because of the complex web of laws and regulations that regulate hazardous substances, chemicals, and waste. A defendant is negligent per se (or is presumed to have breached the common-law standard of due care) if he or she violated a legislatively-adopted law that resulted in damages of a type that the law was designed to protect the plaintiff's class from [see Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 349-351, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 (property owner sued predecessors-in-interest for negligence per se, based on alleged discharge of hazardous substances in violation of Health & Safety Code § 5410 et seq. and Water Code § 13000 et seq.); Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1132, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 (landlord sued former tenant for negligent per se disposal of waste rocket fuel and other hazardous substances in violation of Health & Safety Code § 25601, Water Code §§ 13304, 13264, 13265, and Regional Water Quality Control Board's administrative order)].

[6] Fraud or Misrepresentation

In the environmental context, the tort of fraud or deceit is most likely to arise with regard to the transfer of contaminated real property [see, e.g., Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 347-351, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 (purchaser alleged cause of action for negligent misrepresentation against former owner who operated natural gas plant, contaminated property, and did not disclose contamination)]. The five essential elements of a cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation are [Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 200, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see Civ. Code § 1709]:

- Misrepresentation, consisting of either a false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure.
- Knowledge of falsity.
- Intent to induce reliance.
- Justifiable reliance.
- Resulting damages.

Thus, a seller would commit fraud by selling property with knowledge that it is contaminated, if the seller either affirmatively claimed that the property is not contaminated or failed to disclose the fact of contamination to the buyer [ see, e.g., Amoco Oil Co. v. Borden, Inc. (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1989) 889 F.2d 664, 666 (fraud claim rejected by jury, but defendant violated warranty by not delivering property in clean condition)].

One California statute goes even further and obligates the owner of nonresidential real property to give written notice to any buyer or tenant of any release of hazardous substance that the owner either knows about, or has reasonable cause to know about, which has come to be located on or beneath the property. Violation of this statutory requirement subjects the owner to actual damages and any other available remedies [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a)]. Nonresidential tenants have a similar obligation to inform their landlords [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(b); see § 33.231[2] (monitoring requirements provision for lease)].

Fraud expands the scope of a seller's liability under CERCLA. A real property owner who obtains actual knowledge of a release or threatened release of a hazardous substance on the property but fails to disclose that knowledge to a transferee loses all statutory defenses to liability under CERCLA [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see § 33.10[7]].

This chapter offers three environmental disclosure forms to vitiate any claims of misrepresentation [see §§ 33.211[2] (seller's disclosures to purchaser), 33.220[2] (borrower's disclosures to lender), 33.234[2] (landlord's disclosure to tenant)].

[7] Contractual Obligations

[a] Indemnity Provisions

Contract rights created by agreement can afford a basis for liability for environmental damages. For example, a person can by contract agree to assume the risk of injuries to real property or personal injury damages caused by exposure to toxic substances [see, e.g., Joslyn Mfg. Co. v. Koppers Co., Inc. (5th Cir. 1994) 40 F.3d 750, 754 (broad language of indemnification agreements evidenced strong intent by tenant to indemnify landlord for all environmental liability arising in connection with occupancy or use of land, even subsequent liability created under CERCLA); Selma Pressure Treating Co. v. Osmose Wood Preserving Co. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1601, 1611, 271 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

Even CERCLA liability may be allocated by agreement among liable parties, although their ultimate liability to the government may not be contracted away [see § 33.30[1]]. This chapter offers several contract forms and provisions allocating environmental duties and liabilities by agreement [see §§ 33.210[2] (real estate sales contract), 33.212[2] (environmental indemnity agreement), 33.230[2] (tenant's warranty concerning use), 33.231[2] (lease's environmental monitoring requirements), 33.232[2] (lease's allocation of cleanup costs)].

[b] Compliance-With-Laws Provisions

Many agreements, particularly leases, require the tenant to comply with all relevant laws. Therefore, any failure of a tenant to comply with environmental laws and regulations constitutes not only a statutory violation and negligence per se, but also a breach of the lease [see Ch. 34B, Residential Leases ; Ch. 34C, Retail, Industrial, and Office Leases ; Ch. 34D, Ground Leases ; Ch. 37, Farm Leases ; see also SDC/Pullman Partners v. Tolo Inc. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 37, 53, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 (mere presence of de minimis amounts of certain substances otherwise toxic in larger quantities did not trigger a toxic substances clause in lease; only real CERCLA liability or at least a "realistic threat" of it could reasonably trigger tenant's cleanup duty)]. A lease's express compliance-with-laws provision, when read in concert with the covenant of good faith and fair dealing that is implied in all contracts, gives the landlord an implied right to inspect the premises for soil and groundwater contamination, especially if the landlord reasonably suspects contamination in breach of the lease provision [Sachs v. Exxon Co., U.S.A. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 1498, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 237 (premises was gas station subject to old, long-term commercial lease)].

[c] Attorneys' Fee Provisions

Many written agreements include attorneys' fee provisions. These express provisions allow a party to recover attorney's fees as damages, and attorneys' fees are a very significant cost associated with remedying an environmental injury that otherwise may not be recoverable in litigation. Under California law and the "American rule," attorneys' fees are not recoverable unless authorized by contract or statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021; Jacobson v. Simmons Real Estate (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1291, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 ; see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions]. Under California's "reciprocity doctrine," any successful litigant, not just the party named in the contract, can recover attorneys' fees [Civ. Code § 1717].

For a detailed discussion of attorneys' fees in an environmental context, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 13, Attorneys' Fees and Other Costs (Matthew Bender).

§ 33.15 Restrictive Covenants

[1] Covenants Running With the Land

Covenants, restrictions, or servitudes contained in recorded instruments may establish a basis for liability for environmental contamination. Restrictive covenants are promises to do or refrain from doing certain things in regard to the use of land [Sackett v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 254, 257, 5 P.2d 23 ; see Ch. 28C, Covenants, Conditions, and Restrictions]. Restrictive covenants assume an importance beyond contractual liability [see § 33.14[7]] when they "run with the land," which means they bind the covenantor's successors and are enforceable by the covenantee and its successors [Civ. Code § 1460].

In general, a covenant that is not just personal, but burdens and benefits the land through subsequent transfers, is a covenant that "runs with the land" if the instrument meets four requirements [Civ. Code § 1468]:

- Both the land of the covenantor that is to be affected by the covenants, and the land of the covenatee to be be benefitted, must be particularly described.

- The successive owners of the land must be expressly bound by the the covenants for the benefit of the land owned by, granted by, or granted to the covenantee.

- Each act required by the covenant must relate to (1) the use, repair, maintenance, or improvement of the land, or (2) the payment of taxes and assessments on the the land.

- The instrument must be recorded in the office of the recorder for each county in which at least part of the land is situated.

[2] Special Rule for Restrictions Addressing Hazardous Materials

Effective January 1, 1996, the requirements for a covenant to run with the land were relaxed with regard to environmental restrictions dealing with hazardous materials [see Civ. Code § 1471]. Essentially, the relaxed requirements allow a private party (such as an environmental advocacy group) to enter into an agreement with a landowner (such as the developer of a proposed industrial park) that runs with the land and binds the owner's successors even though the covenantee (the group) does not own any land that would be benefitted by the environmental restrictions [c.f. McCaffrey v. Preston (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 422, 436, 201 Cal. Rptr. 252 (without description of benefited land, covenant is merely personal between covenantor and covenantee)]. Therefore, in the case of covenants addressing the presence on the land of hazardous materials, the instrument must meet the following four requirements to run with the land [Civ. Code § 1471]:

- The covenantor's land needs to be particularly described.

- The successive owners of the covenantor's land must expressly be bound for the benefit of the covenantee.

- Each act that the owner or grantee will do or refrain from doing must (1) relate to the use of land and (2) be reasonably necessary to protect present or future human health or safety or the environment because of the presence of hazardous materials on the land.

- The instrument must include in its title "Environmental Restrictions" and be recorded in the office of the recorder of each county in which at least part of the land is situated.

[3] Deed Restrictions Imposed by DTSC

The California Department of Toxic Substances Control ("DTSC") is authorized to either (1) enter into an agreement with the owner of a hazardous waste facility, or (2) impose conditions on a hazardous waste facility permit that require the owner to execute and record an instrument imposing easements, covenants, restrictions, or servitudes on the present and future uses of the land [Health & Safety Code § 25202.5(a)]. This instrument may impose use restrictions on not only the land itself but also a 2,000 foot buffer zone necessary to protect the present or future public health. Activities that can be restricted include building, filling, grading, excavating, or mining, unless the DTSC has given its written permission. However, the recorded restrictions must not limit the use, modification, or expansion of an existing industrial facility. The restrictions run with the land and bind all of its owners and their successors. They are also enforceable by the DTSC [Health & Safety Code § 25202.5(b), (c)].

In addition, DTSC is authorized under California's border zone statute to either enter into an agreement with the owner of hazardous waste property or border zone property or simply issue an order requiring that the owner execute and record easements, covenants, or restrictions limiting new uses on the property [Health & Safety Code §§ 25230, 25232; see § 33.16[1] (border zone statute)].

§ 33.16 California's Regulatory Restrictions on Use of Hazardous Waste Property and Border Zone Property

[1] "Border Zone Statute"

California has adopted special state-level land-use requirements for real estate that is designated either "hazardous waste property" or "border zone property" [Health & Safety Code §§ 25220-25241]. "Hazardous waste property" is either (1) a permitted or applied-for hazardous waste facility, or (2) land on or under which has been deposited hazardous waste that creates a significant hazard to public health or safety [Health & Safety Code § 25117.3]. "Border zone property" is land that is located within 2,000 feet of a significant disposal of hazardous waste, if those wastes are located in such a fashion that they pose a significant public health or safety hazard on the border zone property [Health & Safety Code § 25117.4]. The statute is commonly referred to as the "border zone statute," because it extends state land-use regulation from the hazardous waste site itself to land within a 2,000 foot circumference.

For a more detailed discussion, see California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, Ch. 53, Regulation of Hazardous Waste Treatment, Storage, and Disposal Facilities (Matthew Bender).

[2] Application Requirement

No landowner or tenant may construct designated improvements on land known or believed to be hazardous waste property or border zone property without first filing an application with DTSC seeking a formal determination of the property's status [Health & Safety Code § 25221(a)]. In addition, a local government may apply for, or DTSC itself may initiate, the formal determination process [Health & Safety Code §§ 25221(c), 25222(a)]. After the application has been accepted, DTSC follows an information-gathering and public notice and hearing process to determine whether the property in question should be formally designated as hazardous waste property or border zone property [see Health & Safety Code §§ 25221-25229].

[3] Restrictions on Designated Property

If DTSC officially designates the land either "hazardous waste property" or "border zone property," the owner must execute and record easements, servitudes, covenants, or restrictions limiting new uses on the property [Health & Safety Code § 25230]. On hazardous waste property, all new uses are prohibited except for the use, modification, or expansion of land used beneficially for industrial purposes as of January 1, 1981. Uses prohibited on border zone property include residences, hospitals, day care centers, schools, and "permanently occupied human habitations" other than those used for industrial purposes. However, DTSC has discretion to grant a variance to the use prohibitions for either hazardous waste property or border zone property [Health & Safety Code § 25232].

Once recorded, the restrictions on hazardous waste property and border zone property run with the land and bind all successors-in-interest. Written notice of these restrictions must accompany all purchase and lease agreements involving the property [Health & Safety Code § 25230; see § 33.15].

[4] Practical Impact of Statute

In practice, the statutory provisions for establishing "hazardous waste" and "border zone" property have been largely ignored. The DTSC has not tried to enforce the statute and the public has consequently largely ignored it despite significant potential civil and criminal penalties [see Health & Safety Code § 25236]. Administration of the border zone statute has taken a very low priority (and the DTSC has made no formal determinations) since the statute was enacted in 1981. When determination applications have been submitted, they have been resolved by voluntary agreement between the DTSC and the landowner [see Health & Safety Code § 25221.1(e)].

Moreover, the statute does not prohibit construction within the 2,000 foot circle of a known or likely significant deposit of hazardous waste; it merely requires the filing of an application. A developer can proceed with construction while the application is pending, accepting the risk that the DTSC may subsequently make an adverse determination and come back and interfere with the development. Even this risk is averted if the developer avoids construction of the listed prohibited uses. Industrial uses are flatly permitted on designated border zone property, and expansion or modification of industrial uses existing as of January 1, 1991 are permitted on hazardous waste property. In addition, subdivision of hazardous waste property is allowed to separate the contaminated portion from the noncontaminated [see Health & Safety Code § 25232].

§ 33.30 Effect of Contractual Provisions on Liability for Environmental Contamination

[1] Contractual Allocation of Liability

Parties to real estate and business transactions have attempted to rely on contractual provisions, including indemnity clauses, releases, and "as is" provisions, to preclude or limit their liability for hazardous substance cleanup costs [see, e.g., Mardan Corp. v. C.G.C. Music, Ltd. (9th Cir. [Az.] 1986) 804 F.2d 1454, 1459 (broad language of general release and settlement indicated that parties intended to encompass environmental liabilities, especially since parties knew of existence of hazardous waste settling pond); see generally Henderson, Environmental Liability and the Law of Contracts, 50 Bus. Law. 183 (1994)]. The validity and interpretation of these agreements are determined by state law, even when liability under CERCLA is in issue. For maximum enforceability, these agreements must be clear and specific. However, "as is" provisions should not be relied on to allocate liability [see [4], below].

[2] Permitted Under CERCLA

One clause of a CERCLA statutory provision expressly allows parties to agree to insure, hold harmless, indemnify, or otherwise allocate the responsibility for CERCLA costs among themselves. However, another clause of the same statutory provision forbids any indemnification, hold harmless, or similar agreement from being effective to transfer liability under CERCLA from one potentially responsible party to any other person [42 U.S.C. § 9607(e)(1)].

Most courts have resolved this apparent inconsistency by interpreting CERCLA to mean that contractual arrangements are ineffective with regard to cost-recovery suits by the government, even though they can be effective with regard to suits between private parties for contribution. This approach gives literal meaning to the statutory provision, while not frustrating CERCLA's key purpose of allowing the government to recover its response costs in cleaning up environmental contamination. In other words, any private agreements allocating liability are essentially tangential to the enforcement of CERCLA's liability provisions [Mardan Corp. v. C.G.C. Music, Ltd. (9th Cir. [Az.] 1986) 804 F.2d 1454, 1459 (leading case on issue); Southland Corp. v. Ashland Oil, Inc. (D. N.J. 1988) 696 F. Supp. 994, 1000 ; see Kerr-McGee Chemical v. Lefton Iron & Metal (7th Cir. [Ill.] 1994) 14 F.3d 321, 327] .

Other courts have focused on the inconsistent clauses in the statutory provision and held that they negate each other. Under this approach, private parties are also free to allocate environmental liabilities between themselves [Versatile Metals, Inc. v. Union Corp (E.D. Pa. 1988) 693 F. Supp. 1563, 1573 ; Chemical Waste Mgt. v. Armstrong World Industries (E.D. Pa. 1987) 669 F. Supp. 1285, 1289] .

Thus, regardless of which theory of statutory interpretation is applied, CERCLA permits private parties to contractually allocate among themselves any loss they may suffer due to CERCLA liability [Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1994) 33 F.3d 159, 165] . For example, no public policy in CERCLA is violated by allowing an indemnity provision in a corporation's bylaws to cover a director or officer who is personally liable for actual, personal participation in his or her company's release of hazardous substances [U.S. v. Lowe (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1994) 29 F.3d 1005, 1008-1010] .

Furthermore, contracts between the parties allocating liability costs are supposed to be considered by the courts in their equitable determination of contribution shares in cost-recovery cases [Kerr-McGee Chemical v. Lefton Iron & Metal (7th Cir. [Ill.] 1994) 14 F.3d 321, 326 (reversal since district court failed to examine indemnity agreement when allocating)].

[3] Role of State Law

State law, rather than federal law, governs the validity of an indemnity agreement between private, potentially responsible parties. For example, state law determines whether this type of contract violates public policy. Similarly, interpretation of an indemnity agreement, such as whether a particular liability is covered by the agreement, is also determined by state law [Mardan Corp. v. C.G.C. Music, Ltd. (9th Cir. [Az.] 1986) 804 F.2d 1454, 1458 (rejected proposed federal common-law rule that releases must explicitly refer to CERCLA); Hudson Ins. Co. v. American Elec. Corp. (M.D. Fla. 1990) 748 F. Supp. 837, 842 ; see U.S. v. Lowe (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1994) 29 F.3d 1005, 1008-1010 (applying Texas law to interpret whether indemnity provision covered director's personal liability under CERCLA)].

[4] "As Is" Provisions

"As is" provisions generally are ineffective in apportioning liability under CERCLA. The courts have usually treated "as is" clauses as merely warranty disclaimers, which only suffice to preclude claims based on a breach of warranty, and not claims based on other theories, such as CERCLA [see, e.g., Mardan Corp. v. C.G.C. Music, Ltd. (D. Ariz. 1984) 600 F. Supp. 1049, 1055 , aff'd on other grounds, (9th Cir. 1986) 804 F.2d 1454 ("as is" clause of purchase agreement does not defeat recovery under statutory CERCLA action); Wiegmann & Rose Intern. Corp. v. NL Industries (N.D. Cal. 1990) 735 F. Supp. 957, 962 ; Southland Corp. v. Ashland Oil, Inc. (D. N.J. 1988) 696 F. Supp. 994, 1001 (sale of chemical plant "as is" insufficient to insulate seller from liability under CERCLA); Channel Master Satellite Sys. v. JFD Electronics (E.D. N.C. 1988) 702 F. Supp. 1229, 1231-1232] . Other courts have left open the possibility that an "as is" clause may be effective in releasing a seller from liability for hazardous conditions under other, non-CERCLA theories of environmental liability, but only if the "as is" provision expressly mentions the environmental problem [see, e.g., Amland Properties Corp. v. Aluminum Co. of America (D. N.J. 1989) 711 F. Supp. 784, 802 ("as is" clause did not function as assumption of risk when buyer did not know of contamination at time of purchase)]. Moreover, an "as is" clause may be effective as a potential defense against an action by a buyer based on breaches of a seller's alleged environmental warranties [see, e.g., International Clinical Laboratories v. Stevens (E.D. N.Y. 1989) 710 F. Supp. 466, 469-470] .

[5] Clear Expression of Intent to Cover Environmental Liabilities

Courts have refused to enforce implied, narrow, or nonspecific contractual provisions allocating CERCLA response costs between the parties [see, e.g., Channel Master Satellite Sys. v. JFD Electronics (E.D. N.C. 1988) 702 F. Supp.

1229, 1232 (indemnity clause that referred to specific local ordinances but not to CERCLA held, by its language, inapplicable to federal law); Chemical Waste Management, Inc. v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (E.D. Pa. 1987) 669 F. Supp. 1285, 1294 (implied warranty in waste disposal contract barred contract claims but did not bar owner-operator from seeking to recover CERCLA response costs from waste generator)]. The crucial question is whether the contractual language is clear or broad enough to encompass the environmental liability. An indemnity agreement can even cover liability under subsequently enacted laws if the document's language is sufficiently broad [Joslyn Mfg. Co. v. Koppers Co., (5th Cir. [La.] 1994) 40 F.3d 750, 754 (broad language of indemnification agreements evidenced strong intent by tenant to indemnify landlord for all liability arising in connection with occupancy or use of land, even subsequently created liability under CERCLA); Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp. v. Lefton Iron & Metal Co. (7th Cir. [Ill.] 1994) 14 F.3d 321, 327 (pre-CERCLA indemnity provision could be interpreted to cover costs imposed by Act)].

Therefore, for maximum enforceability, parties to a real estate transaction who want to allocate CERCLA and other environmental liabilities among themselves should evince a clear and unmistakable intent to do so in a written agreement. Broad, global expressions of indemnity do show that intent [see Mardan Corp. v. C.G.C. Music, Ltd. (9th Cir. [Az.] 1986) 804 F.2d 1454, 1459 (broad language of general release and settlement indicated that parties intended to encompass environmental liabilities, especially since parties knew of existence of hazardous waste settling pond); FMC Corp. v. Northern Pump Co. (D. Minn. 1987) 668 F. Supp. 1285, 1292 (general release in sales contract barred purchaser from recovering CERCLA response costs from seller and its parent corporation)]. Any conditions or limitations on the indemnity or release should be clearly set forth [see, e.g., Pierson Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. Pierson Twp. (W.D. Mich. 1994) 851 F. Supp. 850, 858 (three-year time limit on indemnity); Versatile Metals, Inc. v. Union Corp. (E.D. Pa. 1988) 693 F. Supp. 1563, 1573 (indemnity clause in asset sales agreement covering liabilities from hazardous waste in inventory was not enforceable, since buyer failed to fulfill condition of keeping purchased inventory separate from other inventory)].

For a separate, stand-alone indemnity agreement especially for purchases and sales of commercial and industrial real estate, see § 33.212[2]. That indemnity form can be readily adapted for use in a lease or loan transaction. For an indemnity provision for integration into a comprehensive commercial lease form, see § 33.230[2], 3. For additional guidance on contractual allocation of environmental liabilities, see Henderson, Environmental Liability and the Law of Contracts, 50 Bus. Law. 183 (1994) and Avery, *Enforcing Environmental Indemnification Against a Settling Party Under CERCLA, 23 Seton Hall L. § 33.31 Use of De Minimis Settlement Agreements With Federal EPA in Proposed Real Estate Transactions

Despite the clear liability that attaches to landowners who purchase contaminated property with knowledge of the contamination [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(A)(i)], parties sometimes still desire to enter into these transactions. Although the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) policy is not to involve itself in purely private real estate transactions, the agency will consider giving a prospective purchaser a covenant not to sue in very limited circumstances, such as sites when (1) enforcement action is ongoing or anticipated and (2) performance of cleanup or payment for cleanup would not otherwise be available [54 Fed. Reg. 34,241, 34,242 (Aug. 18, 1989)] . Depending on the circumstances of the proposed transaction, counsel who is able to obtain a covenant not to sue from the EPA may be able to facilitate the sale and/or financing of contaminated property. Likewise, a de minimis settlement may be viewed as desirable by a potential lender, since it will place a definite limit on the potential purchaser's CERCLA liability [see Corash & Behrendt, Lender Liability Under CERCLA: Search for a Safe Harbor, 43 Sw. L.J. 863, 880 (1990)].

§ 33.32 Settlements With California Agencies

When it reauthorized the California Hazardous Substance Account Act in 1999 [see § 33.12], the Legislature added a de minimis settlement program modeled on the federal program authorized under CERCLA [Health & Safety Code § 25360.6; see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(g)]. Like its federal analog, the program allows a so-called de minimis potentially responsible party (PRP) to enter into a settlement with the Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) that protects the settling PRP against non-settling PRPs' contribution claims. Such a settlement may only involve "a minor portion of the response costs at a facility" and is only available if the settling PRP falls into one of two categories [Health & Safety Code § 25360.6(a)]. The first category covers a PRP whose hazardous substances contributed only a "minimal" portion of the entire environmental problem at the site [Health & Safety Code § 25360.6(a)(1)]. The second category includes the owner of the contaminated facility so long as the owner did not cause or contribute to the environmental problem and did not know or have reason to know of the problem at the time of the facility's acquisition [Health & Safety Code § 25360.6(a)(2)].

In addition, the HSAA has an arbitration mechanism that may provide a means for an innocent seller to limit liability for future successors in interest [see Health & Safety Code §§ 25356-25356.10; see also Hingerty, Property Owner Liability for Environmental Contamination in California, 22 U.S.F. L. Rev. 31, 71-72 (1987)]. The state criteria for apportioning liability strongly favors passive, cooperating landowners over active polluters [see Health & Safety Code § 25356.3(c)]. But this mechanism applies only to property listed by the DTSC on the State Priorities List, and it appears to require state government to initiate enforcement action to trigger the process [see Health & Safety Code § 25356].

§ 33.33 Insurance Coverage for Damages From Environmental Contamination

[1] Insurance Coverage for Potential Future Pollution

Since 1986, most comprehensive general liability insurance policies have included an absolute exclusion of pollution from coverage. These absolute exclusions have been held to be effective [Titan Corp. v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 457, 469-470, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476] . Therefore, if insurance coverage is desired to protect against the risks of liability for damages resulting from possible future releases of hazardous substances, the best practice is to obtain either a pollution endorsement to a general liability policy or a separate pollution liability policy [see, e.g., Masonite Corp. v. Great American Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 912, 917, 274 Cal. Rptr. 206 (interpreting "environmental impairment policy")].

[2] Insurance Coverage for Past Pollution

With regard to existing contamination, California courts have generally construed pre-1986 general liability policies in favor of the insured. For example, an insurer's duty to defend an insured PRP under most pre-1986 liability policies may be triggered by a governmental environmental enforcement action [see Montrose Chemical Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 287, 295-305, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467, 861 P.2d 1153] . Similarly, under most pre-1986 policies, the insurer has an obligation to provide coverage to an insured PRP for cleanup and other response costs incurred in accordance with governmental enforcement actions under CERCLA, even though that statute created a new form of liability not contemplated by the insurance contract [see AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 821-843, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253] . Nevertheless, coverage for pollution claims is barred even under pre-1986 policies if the pollution arose from the insured's deliberate acts, which the insured expected to cause harm [Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 715, 742-743, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815] .

Whether insurance policies will cover all or a portion of the cost of remediating specific property, which was contaminated in the past, depends on the language of the particular policies and the facts surrounding the release of hazardous substance on the property. For a detailed discussion of insurance coverage for environmental liabilities, see

California Environmental Law and Land Use Practice, ch. 59, Insurance Coverage for Environmental Claims, Losses, and Liabilities (Matthew Bender). § 33.110 Real Estate Transactions

NOTE:

The preliminary determinations identified in this section relate to environmental contamination issues found in all types of real property transactions. Therefore, this section is designed to be used in concert with, and as a supplement to, the Transaction Guide/Preliminary Determination components of other chapters that deal with specific types of real estate transactions [see, e.g., Ch. 22, Options to Purchase Real Property ; Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements ; Ch. 24, Exchanges of Real Property ; Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans ; Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing ; Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording ; Ch. 30D, Construction Contracts and Subcontracts ; Ch. 34B, Residential Leases ; Ch. 34C, Commercial, Industrial, and Office Leases , Ch. 34D, Ground Leases , Ch. 34E, Shopping Centers: Leasing and Operation ; and Ch. 37, Farm Leases].

1. Determine risk that property subject to transaction is contaminated with hazardous substance [see § 33.120 (procedure for environmental assessments)], including:

a. Likelihood of contamination.

b. Cost of cleanup.

2. If property has signficant risk of existing environmental contamination, ascertain whether parties want to proceed with transaction.

3. Ascertain risk that property subject to transaction is "border zone property" because it is located within 2,000 feet of another site that is significantly contaminated with hazardous substance [see § 33.16[1]

(California's border zone property statute)].

4. If property has signficant risk of being designated border zone property, ascertain whether parties want to proceed with transaction.

NOTE:

The border zone property statute does not prohibit industrial uses on border zone property. Therefore, there is little risk for a transferee under the border zone statute if the property is to be devoted for industrial uses [see § 33.16[4]].

5. If property is likely hazardous waste property or border zone property and parties want to proceed with transaction, ascertain whether parties want to make application to Department of Toxic Substances Control for a formal determination [see § 33.16[2]].

6. If parties want to proceed with transaction, ascertain how they wish to allocate potential environmental liabilities between themselves [see, e.g., §§ 33.121 (environmental steps in sales transaction), 33.122 (environmental steps in real estate loan transaction), 33.123 (environmental steps in lease transaction)].

§ 33.111 Eligibility for De Minimis Landowner Settlement Agreements

1. If client purchased contaminated property (including lender taking title by foreclosure), determine feasibility of seeking de minimis landowner settlement by ascertaining whether client [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601(35), 9607(b)(3)(A), (B), 9622(g)(1)(B); see also § 33.31]:

a. Is owner of real property on which facility is located.

b. Did not conduct or permit generation, transportation, storage, treatment, or disposal of any hazardous substance at facility.

c. Did not contribute, through act or omission, to release or threat of release of hazardous substance at facility.

d. Did not have actual or constructive knowledge at time of purchase that property was used for hazardous substance [see Paragraph 3, below]:
(1) Generation.

(2) Transportation.

(3) Storage.

(4) Treatment.

(5) Disposal.

e. Exercised due care after acquisition with regard to hazardous substance, in light of all relevant facts and circumstances.

f. Took precautions after acquisition against foreseeable acts or omissions of third parties and their consequences.

2. Determine whether manner in which client obtained property shows threshold eligibility for de minimis landowner settlement [54 Fed. Reg. 34,238, 34,239 (Aug. 18, 1989)] :

a. Ascertain whether client acquired property without actual or constructive knowledge that property was used for generation, transportation, storage, treatment, or disposal of hazardous substance [see Paragraph 3, below].

b. If client is governmental entity, determine whether it acquired property either:

(1) Involuntarily; or

(2) Through eminent domain proceedings.

c. If client is individual, ascertain whether he or she acquired property through inheritance or bequest without knowledge of contamination.

d. Determine whether property was contaminated by third parties who are outside chain of title, such as:

(1) "Midnight dumpers."

(2) Adjacent landowners.

3. If client purchased property (or foreclosed on property and took title) and had no actual knowledge that property was contaminated, determine whether, before acquisition, client conducted all appropriate inquiry into previous ownership and uses consistent with good commercial or customary practice, considering [42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); 54 Fed. Reg. 34,238 (Aug. 18, 1989)] :

a. Client's specialized knowledge or experience.

b. Relationship of purchase price to property's value if uncontaminated.

c. Commonly known or reasonably ascertainable information about property.

d. Obviousness of presence or likely presence of contamination.

e. Ability to detect contamination by appropriate inspection.

f. Commercial business transaction versus personal residential transaction.

g. Standard of reasonable inquiry at time of acquisition.

4. Determine whether client is able to provide adequate consideration for settlement with EPA, such as:

a. Contributing cash to cleanup effort.

b. Permitting access to facility.

c. Cooperating with environmental contractors in conducting remediation activities.

d. Providing adequate assurances that due care will be exercised in future with regard to hazardous substances at site.

e. Releases government from liability.

5. If client is prospective purchaser of contaminated property, determine whether following criteria for entering into settlement agreement with federal government are met [see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(f); see also 54 Fed. Reg. 34,241, 34,242 (Aug. 18, 1989)] :

a. Enforcement action at facility is anticipated by EPA.

b. Substantial benefit not otherwise available (either monetary payment or agreement to conduct cleanup activities), will be received by EPA for cleanup at facility.

c. EPA believes that continued operation of facility or new site development, with exercise of due care, will not aggravate or contribute to existing contamination or interfere with remedy.

d. Due consideration has been given to effect of continued operations or new development on health risks to those persons likely to be present at site.

6. Ascertain whether covenant not to sue would be in public interest by considering [42 U.S.C. § 9622(f)(4)]:

a. Effectiveness and reliability of remedy in light of other alternative remedies considered for facility concerned.

b. Nature of risks remaining at facility.

c. Extent to which performance standards are included in order or decree.

d. Extent to which response action provides complete remedy for facility, including reduction in hazardous nature of substances at facility.

e. Extent to which technology used in response action is demonstrated to be effective.

f. Whether Superfund or other sources of funding would be available for additional remedial actions that might eventually be necessary at facility.

g. Whether remedial action will be carried out in whole or in significant part by responsible parties themselves.

§ 33.112 Exemption from Liability for Contiguous Property Owner

1. If client owns contaminated property that is contiguous to or otherwise similarly situated with regard to, and that is or may be contaminated by release or threatened release of hazardous substance from, real property that is not owned by that person, determine feasibility of raising defense to liability by ascertaining that client [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(q); see also § 33.10[7][f]]:

a. Did not cause, contribute, or consent to release or threatened release.

b. Is not potentially liable, or affiliated with any other person that is potentially liable, for response costs at contaminating facility through any direct or indirect familial relationship or any contractual, corporate, or financial relationship (other than contractual, corporate, or financial relationship that is created by contract for sale of goods or services).

c. Is not result of reorganization of business entity that was potentially liable.

d. Has taken reasonable steps to stop any continuing release, prevent any threatened future release, and prevent or limit human, environmental, or natural resource exposure to any hazardous substance released on or from property.

e. Has provided full cooperation, assistance, and access to persons authorized to conduct response actions or natural resource restoration at vessel or facility from which there has been release or threatened release.

f. Is in compliance with any land use restrictions established or relied on in connection with response action at facility and does not impede effectiveness or integrity of any institutional control employed in connection with response action.

g. Is in compliance with any request for information or administrative subpoena issued under CERCLA.

h. Has provided all legally required notices with regard to discovery or release of any hazardous substances at facility.

i. At time client acquired property, conducted all appropriate inquiry within meaning of "innocent purchaser" defense [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see also § 33.111] with regard to property and did not know or have reason to know that property was or could be contaminated by release or threatened release of one or more hazardous substances from other real property not owned or operated by person.

NOTE:
To qualify for this exemption, the client must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that all of the conditions listed above have been met [42 U.S.C. § 9607(q)(1)(B)]. A client who does not qualify for the exemption because he or she has or had reason to have knowledge of the contamination at the time of purchase may qualify as a bona fide prospective purchaser (BFPP) under 42 U.S.C. § 9601(40) [42 U.S.C. § 9607(q)(1)(B)]. A BFPP whose potential liability for a release or threatened release is based solely on the purchaser's being considered to be an owner or operator of a facility will not be liable as long as the BFPP does not impede the performance of a response action or natural resource restoration [42 U.S.C. § 9607(r)(1)].

§ 33.120 Environmental Assessments

1. Require environmental assessment if property subject to transaction falls within any of following categories:

NOTE:
The following are examples of properties for which environmental assessments should be conducted. Normally, any lender involved will almost certainly require an assessment for any of these types of properties. If, however, a lender is not involved or fails to require the assessment, counsel representing the purchaser should require the assessment.

a. Construction is proposed on property, other than one-to-four unit family residential property.

b. Industrial use or industrial zoning.

c. Location close to industrial areas.

d. Existing or former gas station on property or in close proximity.

e. Former or present automotive repair facility or dry cleaning establishment where work is done on premises.

f. Location adjacent to railroad tracks or underground pipelines.

g. Service as, or close proximity to, refuse or waste disposal site.

h. Past uses or surrounding uses involving storage of or usage of hazardous or toxic substances, such as pesticides.

i. Presence of asbestos material that is or may be easily crumbled or crushed into powder and is capable of being absorbed into environment.

j. Emanation of radon gas from soil.

k. Located within one-mile radius of property that EPA has placed on National Priorities List, that is, designated as "Superfund Site" [see 42 U.S.C. § 9605].

l. Oil and gas production occurs in close proximity.

PRACTICE TIP:

Past uses of a property can rarely be determined by its present appearance. Except in those rare cases when a property and surrounding properties are positively known not to have had an industrial or commercial use, an environmental assessment is called for before purchasing, leasing, or loaning on the property. By Joel Moskowitz

2. If environmental assessment will be required, have client make written request that attorney prepare opinion concerning matters to be addressed in environmental assessment [see §§ 33.200[1][d] (preserving confidentiality), 33.201[2] (form of client's request)].

3. Develop evidentiary record of exact nature of anticipated litigation for which environmental assessment is being prepared [see §§ 33.200[1][c] (scope of environmental assessment), 33.201[2] (optional request by client)].

4. Directly retain environmental consulting firm on behalf of client [see § 33.200[2] (form of agreement)].

5. Make sure that agreement for environmental assessment services has provisions to maintain confidentiality under attorney-client privileged and attorney work product doctrine, including [see § 33.200[1][d]]:

a. Attorney, not client, engages consultant.

b. Purpose of agreement is to enable attorney to render opinion to client.

c. All instructions come from attorney.

d. Reports are property of attorney.

e. Consultant will be paid by attorney.

f. Consultant will maintain confidentiality of all information.

6. Obtain indemnity from client for all liabilities associated with consultant's contract and environmental assessment itself [see § 33.201[2] (letter from client containing indemnity)].

NOTE:
This is necessary because environmental consultants often require that their clients indemnify them against claims relating to the environmental assessment [see § 33.200[1][e]].

7. Specify that environmental consulting firm will do any of following, as appropriate, and issue written findings:

a. Phase I environmental assessment, including:
(1) Historical review of use and improvements made to property.

(2) Review of records of building, zoning, planning, sewer, water, environmental, and other departments concerning property and adjacent parcels.

(3) Review of state or federal agency records and files affecting property or adjacent parcels.

(4) Review of reports filed under CERCLA and other statutes concerning environmental conditions and events, such as releases or threatened releases of hazardous substances, on property and adjacent parcels [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9603(a), (c) (CERCLA's release reporting requirements); Health & Safety Code § 25359.4].

(5) Inspection of property and all improvements.

(6) Verification of whether present or past owners or tenants stored, created, or discharged hazardous materials or wastes.

(7) Review of whether appropriate procedures, safeguards, permits, and notices with regard to hazardous substances are in place on property.

(8) Analysis of old aerial photographs to determine construction or destruction of buildings and existence of ponds and disposal areas on property over time.

(9) Interviews with neighbors to determine prior uses of property.

NOTE:
Counsel probably should not require neighbor interviews if there are any concerns about keeping the proposed transaction confidential.

(10) Review of building records and visual inspection of buildings to determine whether materials containing asbestos are present.

(11) Review of scientific literature to determine potential existence of radon in soil.

b. Phase II environmental risk report, including:

(1) Testing of underground storage tanks for content and integrity.

(2) Soil and gas analysis to identify potential for petroleum hydrocarbons and volatile organic compounds such as industrial solvents and dry cleaning chemicals.

(3) Bulk soil sampling.

(4) Groundwater sampling if groundwater may be affected by activities on property.

(5) Limited surface water sampling if pond, lagoon, or stream exists on property.

(6) Comprehensive review of regional and local geology to determine pathways that hazardous substances would follow in event of spill or leak.

(7) List of individual groundwater wells or subsurface water bodies that may be affected by spill or leak.

(8) Comprehensive inspection of buildings for asbestos-containing materials, including collecting and analyzing building material for friable asbestos.

8. If counsel represents party who does not have ownership or possessory rights in property, arrange for consulting firm to have access to property.

§ 33.121 Sales of Real Property

NOTE:

This section is designed to be used together with, and as a supplement to, Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements, which includes a detailed discussion of the non-environmental steps involved in real estate sales transactions. For preliminary determinations regarding contamination issues, see § 33.110.

1. If representing seller, have client disclose in writing to potential purchaser existence of any release or threatened release of hazardous substance on property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see also § 33.211[2] (disclosure form)].

NOTE:

If the seller fails to disclose any release or threatened release of which he or she had actual knowledge, the seller will be barred from using any statutory defenses in any subsequent CERCLA cost-recovery action concerning the property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C)]. California law also requires a written disclosure for the seller to avoid liability for fraud [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a)].

2. If representing purchaser seeking financing for real estate acquisition:

NOTE:

For a detailed discussion of the steps involved in financing real estate transactions, see Volume 5A, Chapter 25, Real Estate Loans.

a. Contact potential lender and ascertain whether client will be required to conduct environmental assessment as condition to obtaining loan [see §§ 33.10[7][d] (innocent landowner defense), 33.120 (steps in environmental assessment)].

NOTE:
If the client wants to acquire property that has been used for commercial or industrial purposes, most lending institutions will require performance of an environmental assessment that meets their internal guidelines.

b. Take steps necessary to ensure that innocent purchaser defense will be available to client in event contamination is discovered on property following sale by [see § 33.10[7][d]]:

(1) Making all appropriate inquiry by means of environmental assessment into previous ownership and uses of property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see also § 33.120].

(2) Exercising care with regard to any hazardous substance, taking into account characteristics of that substance in light of all relevant facts and circumstances [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3)(A)].

(3) Taking precautions against foreseeable acts or omissions of third party and consequences that can foreseeably result from these acts or omissions [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(b)(3)(B)].

3. Consider formation of corporation, subsidiary corporation, or limited liability company to buy, own, and operate property as shield to help protect parent from environmental liability [see vol. 1A, ch. 2, Formation of Corporations].

4. Advise client to consider purchase of pollution endorsement to a comprehensive general liability policy or a separate pollution liability policy to cover risk of future contamination [see § 33.33[1]].

5. If property is presently contaminated:

a. Evaluate whether de minimis landowner settlement agreement with EPA would be available to limit purchaser's liability [see §§ 33.111 (eligibility analysis), 33.120 (procedure), 33.240[2] (administrative settlement agreement form), 33.241[2] (consent decree settlement agreement form)].

b. Advise client to consider cost of cleanup in determining reasonable purchase price.

c. Evaluate availability of insurance funds under prior or existing policies to pay for cleanup [see § 33.33[2]].

6. If parties want to undertake transaction, draft real property sales agreement with environmental provisions considering inclusion of following [see § 33.210[2] (form)]:

a. Provision requiring either party to arrange for environmental assessment.

b. Provision defining hazardous substances.

c. Provisions allocating cleanup responsibilities between parties and specifying how remediation is to be done.

d. Provision allowing party charged with cleanup of contaminated property that is to be subject of sale to terminate contract if cleanup proves to be too expensive or impractical.

7. Whether or not environmental assessment reveals contamination, consider allocating responsibilities under CERCLA and other environmental laws through indemnity agreement [see §§ 33.30 (legal background), 33.212[2] (form of indemnity agreement)].

8. Draft environmental indemnity agreement [see § 33.212[2] (form)].

9. Have buyer and seller sign real property sales agreement and indemnity agreement.

§ 33.122 Loans Secured by Real Estate

NOTE:

This section is designed to be used in concert with, and as a supplement to, other chapters dealing with secured real estate loans [see, e.g., Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans ; Ch. 25A, Secured Instruments for Real Estate Financing ; and Ch. 30A, Construction Financing]. This section is written from the point of view of the lender, though a prospective borrower will find it useful on what to expect. For preliminary determinations regarding contamination issues, see § 33.110.

1. Advise client to have prospective borrower complete lender's own form disclosing environmental risks on property, which is going to be security for loan [see § 33.220[2] (disclosure form)].

2. Advise client that prospective borrower should be required to submit copies of all environmental liability-related documentation involved in transaction, including:

a. Sales contract with environmental provisions [see § 33.210[2] (form)].

b. Previously prepared environmental assessment reports [see § 33.120 (procedural guide for preparing environmental assessment)].

c. Disclosures made by seller to borrower [see, e.g., § 33.211[2] (seller's disclosure form)].

NOTE:

If either the borrower or the seller fails to disclose any release or threatened release of which he or she had actual knowledge, the borrower or the seller, as the case may be, will be barred from using any statutory defenses in any subsequent CERCLA cost-recovery action concerning the property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see also § 33.10[7][f]]. California law also requires sellers of real property to make this disclosure to buyers to avoid liability for fraud [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a); see § 33.211[1][b]].

3. If property falls into any category listed in 33.120 Paragraph 1, above, have environmental assessment done.

NOTE:

The secured lender should have an environmental assessment done for purposes of both (1) preserving the innocent purchaser defense and (2) establishing an evidentiary record for the baseline conditions on the leased property [see § 33.10[7][d]; see also § 33.120 (steps in environmental assessment)]. If property has been used for commercial or industrial purposes in the past, most lending institutions will require performance of an environmental assessment.

4. To cover risk of future contamination, advise client to consider requiring borrower to name beneficiary as co-insured and purchase either [see § 33.33[1]]:

a. Pollution endorsement to a comprehensive general liability policy; or

b. Separate pollution liability policy.

5. If parties want to undertake transaction, draft deed of trust that includes environmental provisions, such as:

a. Provision that gives beneficiary (lender) all trustor's rights of action relating to hazardous substances on property [see § 33.221].

b. Provisions defining hazardous substances [see § 33.221].

c. Provision requiring trustor to comply with all environmental laws [see § 33.222].

d. Provision giving beneficiary expanded power to conduct future environmental assessment [see § 33.223].

e. Monitoring requirements provision [see § 33.231[2] (form designed for lease easily adaptable for deed of trust)].

6. Whether or not environmental assessment reveals present contamination, consider allocating responsibilities under CERCLA and other environmental laws through indemnity agreement [see §§ 33.30 (legal background), 33.212[2] (indemnity agreement)].

7. Advise client to consider requiring additional collateral to secure loan, such as:

a. Letter of credit [see vol. 10A, ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers].

b. Guaranty of third parties [see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing

].

c. Bond.

d. Additional real property.

8. Draft environmental indemnity agreement [see § 33.212[2] (form)].

9. Have borrower and beneficiary sign environmental indemnity agreement, along with other real estate loan documents.

NOTE:

This section is designed to be used together with, and as a supplement to, other chapters that cover commercial real estate lease transactions [see, e.g., Ch. 34C, Commercial, Industrial, and Office Leases ; Ch. 34D, Ground Leases; Ch. 34E, Shopping Centers: Leasing and Operation ; and Ch. 37, Farm Leases]. For preliminary determinations regarding contamination issues, see § 33.110.

1. If client is landlord, determine purpose for which tenant wants to use property.

2. If representing landlord, have client disclose in writing to potential tenant existence of any release or threatened release of hazardous substance on property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see also § 33.234[2] (disclosure form)].

NOTE:

California law requires this written disclosure for the landlord [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a); see § 33.234[1][b]].

3. If client is tenant, consider formation of corporation, subsidiary corporation, or limited liability company to lease and operate property as shield to help protect parent from environmental liability [see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations].

4. Identify environmental and other permits that may be necessary to legally operate leased premise [see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Permits].

5. If property falls into any category listed in § 33.120, P 1, above (examples of properties for which environmental assessments should be conducted), consider conducting environmental assessment.

NOTE:
Either the landlord or the prospective tenant may want to conduct an environmental assessment for purposes of (1) preserving the innocent purchaser defense [see § 33.10[7][d]*],(2) establishing an evidentiary record of the baseline conditions on the leased property, and (3), in the case of the tenant, avoiding the consummation of a liability-producing transaction.

6. Draft lease agreement that includes environmental provisions, such as:

a. Representations and warranties to be given by landlord regarding present environmental status of property [c.f., §§ 33.210[1][c] (warranties in sales contract), 33.211[2] (seller's disclosure form)].

b. Warranties by tenant concerning use to which property is to be put [see, e.g., § 33.230[2] (form of warranty provision)].

NOTE:
A landlord may not avoid potential CERCLA liability arising from a tenant's release of hazardous substances on the property [see § 33.10[5][e][ii]*]. However, the landlord may be able to minimize exposure to cleanup cost liability by being vigilant in controlling and monitoring the activities on the leased property.

c. Provision requiring tenant to comply with environmental laws as covenant in lease [see § 33.233[2] (form provision)].

d. Provision giving landlord right to monitor activities or conduct environmental audits on property [see, e.g., § 33.231[2] (form)].

e. Provisions specifying safe practices for use or generation of hazardous substances that may be in excess of other legal requirements.

NOTE:
An environmental consultant can help a landlord learn about whether a tenant's particular activities, uses, or processes pose a significant risk. In addition, the consultant can help the landlord determine the safe practices that may be incorporated as requirements under the lease.

f. Provision allocating responsibility under lease to tenant for reporting releases of hazardous materials to government [see, e.g., § 33.231[2] (provision for lease)].

g. Provision requiring tenant to give notice to landlord of spills of hazardous substances, as covenant in lease [see, e.g., § 33.234[2]].

h. Provision allocating cleanup costs between landlord and tenant and whether these obligations survive lease's term [see, e.g., § 33.232[2] (form)], considering:

(1) Scope of environmental indemnity from tenant to landlord.

(2) Scope of any environmental indemnity from landlord to tenant.

i. Provision limiting remedies to those set forth in lease agreement and excluding statutory remedies, such as cost-recovery actions under CERCLA, the HSAA, or other environmental statutes [see § 33.30 (effect of contractual provisions)].

j. Provision requiring tenant to notify landlord when new processes or activities are introduced to site.

k. Provision defining default to include either:

(1) Release or discharge of hazardous substance on property in violation of law; or

(2) Release or discharge in excess of various state or federal standards or permit requirements.

7. If client is landlord who has retained right to monitor activities of tenant, advise client to institute immediate procedures to ensure periodic monitoring.

§ 33.200 Environmental Assessment Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the retention of an environmental consulting firm to conduct an environmental assessment on property that is the subject of a proposed sale, lease, or secured loan. To maximize confidentiality, this form is designed to be entered into between the consultant and counsel representing the prospective purchaser, tenant, or lender [see [d], below].

Counsel representing a prospective purchaser or tenant should consult with all lenders involved in the transaction to ascertain their requirements concerning environmental assessments, so that any particular requirements not reflected in the following form may be incorporated.

For a list of matters that should be considered in an environmental assessment, see § 33.120. For a general discussion of the law relating to contracts for professional services, see Volume 7, Chapter 30C, Agreements with Architects, Engineers, and Other Design Professionals and Volume 15, Chapter 86, Agreements for Professional Services.

[b] Purpose of Environmental Assessment

No counsel representing a potential purchaser, tenant, or lender involved in a significant commercial or industrial real estate acquisition or lease should consummate the proposed deal without first retaining an environmental consultant to conduct an environmental assessment of the property. For several reasons, an environmental assessment is in the best interests of the prospective purchaser, tenant, and lender.

Basically, an assessment will give information on the level of environmental liability risk at stake in the transaction for the potential purchaser, tenant, or lender. If the assessment uncovers contamination on the property, the parties may use its results in further negotiations to allocate cleanup responsibility, otherwise agree with regard to indemnity [see § 33.212[2] (form of indemnity agreement)], or even modify the price or rent. Moreover, the environmental assessment will be crucial in preserving the purchaser's, tenant's, or lender's ability to assert the innocent landowner defense with regard to hazardous substance contamination not discovered in the assessment [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(B); see also § 33.10[7][d]]. Although neither Congress, the EPA, or the courts have established clear standards for environmental assessments, willful or negligent blindness will certainly negate the innocent landowner defense [see U.S. v. Monsanto Co. (4th Cir. [S.C.] 1988) 858 F.2d 160, 169] . The results of the environmental assessment may also be used to support a prospective purchaser's or tenant's exercise of an option to cancel the proposed sale or lease [see, e.g., Greer Properties, Inc. v. LaSalle Nat. Bank (7th Cir. [Ill.] 1989) 874 F.2d 457, 458 ; see § 33.210[1][d] (discussion of cancellation provision in real estate sales contract form)].

In addition, for sellers, landlords, appraisers, and brokers, an environmental assessment helps reduce exposure to liability for breach of a common law duty to either discover or disclose the existence of contamination on the property. This liability exposure includes the possible imposition of punitive damages [see § 33.14[1], [6]]. For landlords and tenants, an environmental assessment can determine the "baseline" condition of the property and, therefore, reduce subsequent controversy about who caused or contributed to onsite contamination.

[c] Scope of Environmental Assessment

Paragraph 2.01 of this form allows the drafter to either specify the types of inquiries that the consultant will be required to conduct or, alternatively, to incorporate assessment guidelines established by the lending institution with which the parties are working. Many financial institutions, including banks, thrift associations, and various federal agencies involved in real estate transactions, such as the Federal Home Loan Association and the Federal National Mortgage Association, have developed due diligence guidelines. Generally, these institutions require that an environmental assessment or audit be conducted before they will consider making loans for the purchase of any real estate used for commercial or industrial purposes.

Environmental assessments are generally divided into two phases performed in a step-by-step fashion. To glean the maximum amount of required information with minimum expenditure in time and money, sampling and testing should only be conducted after background research has been done. It would be a waste of time and money, for example, to take soil samples from all over the property and test for all possible substances if research into past operations and practices makes it unlikely that such testing would be fruitful.

Therefore, Phase I of an environmental assessment involves an onsite inspection and includes a review of relevant documents, such as any prior surveys conducted. If Phase I triggers any findings that require further investigation, Phase II of the assessment is conducted. Phase II consists mainly of sampling and testing appropriate subjects, such as soil, groundwater, surface water, building components, or air quality. In rare cases, when the first two phases of the assessment have rendered inconclusive results, a Phase III assessment may be necessary. Generally, the parties will be unable to specify the inquiries to be conducted in a Phase III assessment until Phase II has been completed. However, these inquiries will usually involve more extensive or focused sampling and testing on the property [Halloran, Environmental Site Assessments, 41 Prac. Law 61 (July 1995); Cogen, et al., What You Need to Know About Environmental Audits, 35 Prac. Law. 17 (Oct. 1989); see Slater and Krentzman, Environmental Self-Auditing: Divided We Stand, Environmental Law in New York Newsletter(December 1995) (Matthew Bender); see also Gerrard, Environmental Law Practice Guide, Ch. 6 (Matthew Bender)]. For a list of procedures that should be conducted in Phases I and II, see § 33.120.

[d] Need for Confidentiality and Preserving Privilege

[i] Environmental Assessment Contract Attorney-Client Privilege and Attorney Work Product Privilege

Under the attorney-client privilege, communications between an expert and the attorney are not subject to discovery if they are made in confidence and for the purpose of assisting the attorney in rendering legal advice [see, e.g., United States v. Kovel (2d Cir. 1961) 296 F.2d 918, 922 ; see also Evid. Code §§ 952, 954]. The attorney-client privilege only applies when the attorney is engaged to give legal advice on the matter being communicated [Diversified Industries, Inc. v. Meredith (8th Cir. 1977) 572 F.2d 596, 602 (en banc); People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1196, 1210, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456, 892 P.2d 1199] .

Similarly, the attorney work product doctrine provides qualified protection for information and documents that are generated at the direction of counsel in anticipation of litigation [see, e.g., Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 2018 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.030, effective July 1, 2005)]. A remote possibility of litigation is insufficient to trigger protection of the doctrine [Diversified Indus. v. Meredith (8th Cir. 1977) 572 F.2d 596, 604 (en banc)]. By contrast, there is no privilege for direct communications between the consultant and the client [see Bank of the Orient v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 598, 136 Cal. Rptr. 741] .

[ii] Application of Privilege With Environmental Consultant

In most cases, an environmental investigation is performed to learn whether the property is contaminated, not counsel's legal opinion concerning the property's condition, so the attorney-client privilege is inapplicable. Still, to maximize protection from discovery in possible future litigation of potentially damaging information and documents developed by the consultant, the environmental consultant should be retained by counsel, and not directly by the client. However, before the consultant is even engaged, the client could consider requesting in writing that the attorney prepare an opinion addressing whether the affected property is in compliance with applicable environmental laws and authorizing the attorney to have an environmental assessment performed [see § 33.201[2] (letter form of request)]. To increase the likelihood that a court would apply the attorney work product privilege to the consultant's work, the attorney should develop an evidentiary record before the assessment that documents the nature of the anticipated litigation for which the work is being done [see § 33.201[2] (letter includes optional provision)].

Therefore, this form not only is an agreement between counsel and the consultant; it also states that information gathered by the consultant will be kept strictly confidential unless legal counsel approves of its disclosure. In addition, it makes clear that the purpose of the agreement is to give the attorney technical information so that he or she can render an opinion to the client. Furthermore, the agreement makes clear that all instructions come from the attorney and that all reports are the attorney's property.

Many consultants are used to liberally communicating with agency staff and do not appreciate the need to maintain secrecy about site conditions. Some consultants feel morally or professionally compelled to share with public agencies all of the information they collect. Therefore, a strong confidentiality provision, such as Paragraph 1.04, is important.

[e] Consultant's Demand for Indemnity

Environmental consulting firms, particularly the larger companies, usually have their own preprinted professional service agreements. The typical focus of these form agreements is on limiting the liabilities of the consulting firms for their errors and omissions in failing to discover or accurately characterize contamination problems on the property. They rarely pay sufficient attention to safeguarding the confidentiality of the information generated by the consultant. Therefore, it is advisable for counsel to prepare and use their own consulting agreements.

§ 33.210 Sales Contract With Environmental Provisions

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a general sales contract for real estate that has been used as an industrial or commercial site on which hazardous substances may have been handled, treated, or stored. It includes provisions that specifically address possible contamination of the property by hazardous substances, including specifying the rights and obligations of the parties if contamination is discovered by an environmental assessment, which is required under Paragraph 3.02. Any of the environmental provisions in the following form may be adapted for use in other real estate sales contracts.

For discussion of the importance of environmental assessments for preserving the "innocent landowner" defense, see § 33.10[7][d]. For discussion of CERCLA and other sources of environmental liability in real property transactions, see §§ 33.10-33.16. For a list of specific types of properties on which assessments should be performed before any sale, see § 33.120, Paragraph 1. For a detailed discussion of the law governing sales of real estate and for additional sales contracts drafted for particular types of sales, such as sales of unimproved property, see Volume 5, Chapter 23, Real Property Sales Agreements.

[b] Definition of Hazardous Substances

Paragraph 5.01 of the following form defines the term "hazardous substances." The definition of this term is crucial, since it will dictate the rights of the purchaser to cancel the contract under certain circumstances [see [d], below]. The definition states that the term includes those substances listed as "hazardous substances" under a number of specified statutes, such as CERCLA [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14)], and thus incorporates the statutory definitions by reference. In subparagraph (a) of Paragraph 5.01, the drafter must specify whether the term will mean all substances listed at the time the contract is entered into or, alternatively, all substances that ever become listed under the laws specified in the subparagraph. Subparagraph (b) of Paragraph 5.01 expands the contract definition of hazardous substances by including all types of substances that give rise to statutory or common law liability even if not listed in the specified statutes. Paragraph 5.01 mentions specific substances, such as petroleum. However, petroleum, for example, may be excluded by some statutory or regulatory scheme [see §§ 33.10[5][d][ii], 33.12[1]].

The services of an environmental consulting firm will be necessary to determine the nature and concentration of any hazardous substances actually on or in the subject property. For an environmental consulting firm service agreement, see § 33.200[2].

[c] Warranty of Compliance With Law

Paragraph 4.02 of the following form contains two alternative provisions under which the seller warrants that he or she has complied with federal, state, and local laws, regulations, and ordinances. Broad compliance-with-laws warranties may be effective with regard to compliance with CERCLA, RCRA, and other environmental laws, even if the warranty does not expressly mention these statutes [see Nunn v. Chemical Waste Management, Inc. (10th Cir. [Kan.] 1988) 856 F.2d 1464, 1469] . The first alternative provision in this form contains a broad, general warranty. The second alternative provision allows the drafter to be more specific by limiting the warranty of compliance to certain laws only, which must be specified by the drafter.

For a general discussion of warranties in real estate sales contracts, see Volume 5, Chapter 23, Real Property Sales Agreements. For a discussion of the limited effectiveness of "as is" clauses to allocate CERCLA liability, see § 33.30[4]. For a general discussion of warranties in real estate transactions, see Volume 6,Chapter 27, Deeds and Recording.

[d] Right to Cancel Based on Projected Cleanup Costs

Optional Paragraph 4.04 of this form allows the purchaser to terminate the contract if (1) the property is determined to be contaminated by a hazardous substance, or (2) the property is known to be contaminated and the costs of cleanup are economically impracticable.

§ 33.211 Seller's Disclosure of Release or Threatened Release on Commercial Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by the seller of commercial real property contaminated by hazardous substances. It is designed to document the fact that the seller disclosed the presence of the contamination to the prospective purchaser of the property. This form may be attached as an exhibit to any commercial real property sales contract entered into between the parties [see § 33.210[2]].

In the first paragraph of this form, the drafter specifies where the release or threatened release occurred. In the second paragraph, the drafter designates the hazardous substance concerning which the disclosure is made. In preparing the disclosure, the drafter should review the seller's reports of any releases of hazardous substances made to the National Response Center, the EPA, or any other federal, state, or local agency [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9606(a), (c) (CERCLA's release reporting requirements; Health & Safety Code § 25359.4 (HSAA's release reporting requirements)].

This form is not sufficient for residential real property. When residential property is involved, the seller must furnish information to the buyer on a "Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement" prescribed by statute. This standard disclosure form covers a host of potentially significant defects in the house and property, including the presence of substances posing environmental hazards [see Civ. Code § 1102.6; Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 976, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453] . For detailed discussion, and a copy of the statutory residential real property transfer disclosure form, see Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements .

[b] Reasons for Seller to Disclose

Under federal law, a prospective seller who has actual knowledge of the release or threatened release of a hazardous substance will be liable for cleanup costs and damages under CERCLA and will be precluded from asserting the innocent landowner defense, or any other statutory defense, if he or she fails to disclose that knowledge before the sale of the property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see also § 33.10[7][g]].

Under the HSAA, owners of nonresidential real property who know, or have reasonable cause to believe, that a release of hazardous substance has come to be located on or beneath the property, have a statutory obligation to give written notice of that condition to any buyer or tenant of the property. Violation of this statutory requirement subjects the owner to the following [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a)]:

- Actual damages;
- Any other available remedy (such as restitution); and
- Civil penalties of up to $5,000, if the owner has actual knowledge of a release and knowingly and willfully fails to give notice.

These disclosures also guard against possible subsequent common law claims brought by the purchaser against the seller for fraudulent concealment or misrepresentations concerning contamination on the property, including exposure to punitive damages [see § 33.14[6]].

§ 33.212 Environmental Indemnity Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is for use as an agreement between the purchaser and seller of industrial or commercial property for indemnity with regard to CERCLA cleanup costs and damages. The form may be adapted for use in a lease transaction or in a real estate loan transaction.

Paragraph 1.04 states that the indemnity agreement is made in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 9607(e), which is the CERCLA provision that expressly allows potentially responsible parties to allocate liability among themselves [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(e)]. The federal courts have recognized the effectiveness of indemnity agreements in allocating liabilities under CERCLA, provided that their terms are clear and unequivocal [see, e.g., Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1994) 33 F.3d 159, 165 ; U.S. v. Lowe (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1994) 29 F.3d 1005, 1008-1010] . Similarly, these agreements are also effective under California's own Superfund law, the HSAA [Health & Safety Code § 25364; see § 33.12], and Paragraph 4.01 also refers to that state statute. For a general discussion of indemnity agreements and other contractual devices for allocating CERCLA liability, see § 33.30.

Paragraph 2.01 contains a provision in which the indemnitor warrants the condition of the property to be sold. This warranty relates to "hazardous substances" as defined in the form and the breach of this warranty is the event that triggers the indemnity obligation. For a discussion of the significance of the provision defining hazardous substances, see § 33.210[1][b].

Drafting provisions concerning the presence of hazardous substances and the allocation of liability regarding those substances may be the subject of intense negotiation between the parties. For example, a purchaser or tenant may want the seller or landlord to include a warranty with regard to the condition of the subject property. On the other hand, most sellers or landlords would be strongly disinclined to provide a warranty and would prefer that the purchaser or tenant conduct his or her own environmental assessment or audit to determine the condition of the property.

§ 33.220 Environmental Disclosures to Lender

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a disclosure concerning environmental matters. It is included to illustrate the type of disclosures that lenders may require from prospective purchasers of property that has been used for industrial or commercial purposes. Lenders generally will have their own preprinted forms that the prospective borrower will be asked to complete. This form may be used as a guideline for counsel representing a lender in preparing documentation regarding loans for the purchase of industrial or commercial property.

This form requires the drafter to specify all current and past uses to which adjoining parcels of property have been put. The property for which the loan is sought may be adjacent to several parcels or, in other cases, may be completely surrounded by a single parcel. The drafter should be careful to identify all adjoining parcels.

For a discussion of lender liability under CERCLA, see § 33.10[6]. For detailed discussions of other considerations applicable to secured real estate transactions, as well as other applicable forms, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

§ 33.221 Deed of Trust Provision Regarding Hazardous Substances

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision that assigns the trustors' environmental claims to the beneficiary, and that may be inserted in a deed of trust securing an interest in real property. This provision is designed to be incorporated into one of the complete deed of trust forms included in Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.

Under this provision, the trustor, who is the purchaser of the real property, gives the beneficiary, who is the lender, all of the trustor's rights of action relating to hazardous substances on the property. The purpose of this provision is to insure that the beneficiary is able to seek damages for the acts or omissions of third parties, such as environmental consultants whose services were relied on in the negotiation of the transaction, or other potentially responsible parties.

Any deed of trust for which the following form is used should also contain a definition of the term "hazardous substance." For a discussion of the importance of defining this key term, see § 33.210[1][d]. For a provision providing a comprehensive definition of "hazardous substance," see § 33.210[2].

See Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing , for both (1) discussion of the law governing deeds of trust and other instruments for securing a loan on real property and (2) complete deed of trust forms into which this provision may be inserted.

(a) Conducted an environmental audit of the Property.

(b) Issued any survey report or other type of study with regard to the condition of the property.

(c) Used, generated, manufactured, handled, stored, treated, discharged, released, or buried any hazardous substance, as defined in _____[specify, e.g., Paragraph _____ of this instrument or specify statutory or regulatory definition, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14)] on or under the Property.

§ 33.222 Representations of Trustor Concerning Compliance With Environmental Laws

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision that may be inserted in a deed of trust securing an interest in real property. This provision is designed to be incorporated into one of the complete deed of trust forms included in Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

Under this provision, the trustor agrees to comply with all applicable environmental laws. More specifically, the trustor, who is the purchaser of the real property, is required to maintain the property in a manner that will, to the extent possible, avoid diminution of value due to the presence or release of hazardous substances. For the legal background on compliance-with-law provisions, see § 33.14[7][b].

Subparagraph (c) of the provision allows the beneficiary to inspect and make and retain copies of all types of documents that are relevant to the trustor's business. Although this subparagraph does not grant the lender any rights with regard to the operation of the trustor's business, counsel should note the potential that any provision in the trust deed that may be interpreted as giving the beneficiary monitoring rights may expose the lender to potential liability under CERCLA as an "operator" [see § 33.10[5][e], [6]].

For a discussion of the general law governing deeds of trust, as well as complete deed of trust forms, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing .

[2] FORM

Representations of Trustor Concerning Compliance With Environmental Laws

(b) Trustor shall preserve and keep the Property in good repair at all times and shall make all repairs, and otherwise take all necessary steps to maintain the Property in a manner that will prevent any impairment in the value of the Property. Trustor will ensure that no waste remains on, in, or in the vicinity of the Property and that all waste is properly transported from the Property and appropriately disposed of.

(c) Trustor shall maintain complete books, records, and accounts for the Property, and shall allow Lender at all reasonable times to inspect the Property and all relevant books, records, notices, contracts, statements, invoices, bills, claims, or other documents relating to the Property and the Trustor's obligations under this Paragraph _____ and shall allow Lender to make and retain copies of these documents.

§ 33.223 Deed of Trust Provision Giving Beneficiary Power to Conduct Environmental Assessment

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision allowing future environmental assessment. It may be inserted in a deed of trust securing an interest in real property. Under this provision, the trustor, who is the purchaser of the real property, gives the beneficiary, who is the lender, the right to conduct an environmental assessment on the property if (1) the trustor defaults on the underlying obligation, (2) foreclosure proceedings are commenced on the property, or (3) the beneficiary has reason to believe that hazardous substances have been released that were not disclosed in conjunction with the loan. This provision is designed to be incorporated into one of the complete deed of trust forms included in Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.

The purpose of this provision is to allow the beneficiary to conduct an environmental assessment before foreclosing on the property. This provision expands on the statutory power that any secured lender has to conduct an inspection of the real property security for contamination by hazardous substances [see Civ. Code § 2929.5]. In particular, this provision goes beyond the statute by (1) allowing a default to trigger the power of inspection and (2) making the trustor liable for the environmental assessment costs.

Performing an environmental assessment before foreclosure gives the lender some information on the likelihood of potential problems and hidden risks inherent in the property. From a purely economic point of view, a contaminated property may have negative value and be unmarketable [see, e.g., SCA Services of Indiana, Inc. v. Thomas (N.D. Ind. 1986) 634 F. Supp. 1355, 1364] . From a legal point of view, an environmental assessment is essential if the lender is to be able to take advantage of the "innocent purchaser" defense to CERCLA liability. For discussion of the innocent-purchaser defense, see § 33.10[7][d]. For discussion of environmental assessments, see §§ 33.10[7][e], 33.200[1]. For a sample form to be used in engaging a consultant to conduct an environmental assessment, see § 33.200[2].

Any deed of trust containing the following provision should also contain a definition of the key term "hazardous substance." For a discussion of the importance of this definition, see § 33.210[1][b]. For a provision providing a comprehensive definition of "hazardous substance", see § 33.210[2].

For a discussion of the law governing deeds of trust, as well as complete forms into which this provision can be inserted, see Volume 5A, Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.

[2] FORM

Deed of Trust Provision Giving Beneficiary Power to Conduct Environmental Assessment

Beneficiary's Power to Conduct Environmental Assessment

_____. Beneficiary shall have the power, in its sole discretion, to have an environmental assessment conducted on the Property, as follows:

(a) Beneficiary's power to enter and inspect the Property shall be for the purpose of determining the existence, location, nature, and magnitude of any past or present release or threatened release of hazardous substance as defined in _____[specify, e.g., Paragraph _____ of this instrument or specify statutory or regulatory definition, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14)].

(b) Beneficiary's power of inspection and environmental assessment shall be triggered by the occurrence of any one of the following:

(1) Beneficiary has a reasonable belief in the existence of a past or present release or threatened release of any hazardous substance into, onto, beneath, or from the Property that was not previously disclosed in writing to Beneficiary in conjunction with the making of the Promissory Note.

(2) Nonjudicial or judicial foreclosure proceeding have been commenced against the Property.

(3) Trustor is in default under this Deed of Trust or the Note.

(d) Beneficiary may have its inspection and environmental assessment conducted by a qualified environmental consultant chosen by Beneficiary.

(e) The scope of the inquiries to be made in the environmental assessment, if any, shall be determined by Beneficiary and the environmental consultant retained to conduct the assessment.

(f) The cost of any environmental assessment required under this Paragraph shall be paid by Trustor within _____[specify, e.g., 30] days after Beneficiary submits the invoice, and any unpaid portion of these cost shall be added to the balance owed on the _____[name of underlying obligation as referred to elsewhere in the deed of trust, e.g., Promissory Note].

(g) Trustor shall cooperate fully with all inquiries made by Beneficiary and its environmental consultant, including, but not limited to _____[specify as appropriate, e.g., (1) giving access to the property within _____ (time period, e.g., 24 hours) following requests for access; (2) giving access to interview persons aware of operations that have been conducted on the Property; (3) giving a description and quantification of all hazardous substances, as defined in _____ (specify, e.g., Paragraph _____ of this instrument or specify statutory or regulatory definition, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9601(14)) generated, manufactured, refined, transported, treated, stored, handled, or disposed on the Property since the date of this instrument; (4) making all environmental permits and approvals, including but not limited to, _____ (specify, e.g., air pollution control permits and pollution discharge elimination system permits), from all governmental or public agencies having jurisdiction of the Property or Trustor's operations on the Property, available _____ (for copying or for inspection at Trustor's offices); (5) making all records kept by Trustor concerning releases of hazardous substances on the Property available _____ (for copying or for inspection at Trustor's offices); and (6) allowing the Beneficiary or its environmental consultant to take physical samples from the air, water, groundwater, soil, or subsoil on the Property for purposes of environmental testing].

(h) Nothing in this Paragraph shall be construed as limiting in any way the acts that may be performed by Beneficiary or its environmental consultant in the conduct of the assessment. This Paragraph only expands, and shall not limit, Beneficiary's statutory power under California Civil Code § 2929.5 to make a hazardous substance inspection.

§ 33.230 Tenant's Warranty Concerning Use

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a lease provision in which the tenant warrants to the landlord that the leased property will be used only for specified purposes. It is designed to be included in a lease for property that will be used for industrial or commercial purposes. The provision specifies the anticipated use of the property and requires an officer of the tenant to provide yearly affidavits concerning operations. It allows the landlord access to the leased premises for purposes of environmental sampling. The landlord may also want to require a higher security deposit or even a performance bond from any tenant whose conduct might involve hazardous releases.

This form is designed to preserve a breach of warranty action for the landlord in the event of the tenant's breach. However, the inclusion of this provision in a lease will not insulate the landlord from environmental liability in the event that the tenant's operations contaminate the property. In that event, the landlord would still be strictly liable for the contamination under CERCLA and the HSAA [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a); see also §§ 33.10[2], 33.12[2]].

Paragraph 3 of the form contains a general provision under which the tenant agrees to indemnify and hold the landlord harmless for damages and claims that result from the breach of the tenant's warranty. Counsel representing a landlord whose tenant will agree to provide indemnity against all environmental liability may adapt the indemnity agreement in § 33.212[2] for use in, or in addition to, a lease agreement [see §§ 33.14[7][a] (indemnity provisions), 33.30 (effect of contractual provisions on environmental liability)].

For various lease forms into which this provision could be inserted, see Volume 8, Chapters 34B, Residential Leases, 34C, Commercial , Industrial, and Office Leases, 34D, Ground Leases, and 34E, Shopping Centers: Leasing and Operation, and Volume 8A, Chapter 37, Farm Leases.

Tenant's Warranty Concerning Use

ARTICLE _____

TENANT'S WARRANTY

Use of Premises

_____.01. Tenant represents and warrants to Landlord that Tenant intends to use the premises for _____[describe purposes] [add if tenant's activities are conducted under any type of permit or authorization:], and that Tenant has the following current _____ (specify, e.g., permits issued under the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System: _____[specify types, numbers, and expiration dates])]. Tenant's use of the property shall be restricted to those purposes specified in this Paragraph unless the Tenant obtains Landlord's prior written consent to any change in use. Before the commencement date of the lease term, Tenant shall supply to Landlord an affidavit of an officer of Tenant, referred to as the "Officer's Affidavit," setting forth a detailed description of the operations that Tenant will conduct on the premises and stating any applicable permit numbers. The Officer's Report shall be organized and prepared in a narrative form, including a description and quantification of all hazardous substances and wastes to be generated, manufactured, refined, transported, treated, stored, handled, or disposed of on the property. Following commencement of the lease term, Tenant shall notify Landlord by way of the Officer's Affidavit as to any changes in Tenant's operation or use or generation of hazardous substances and wastes by way of a supplemental Officer's Affidavit. Tenant shall also supplement and update the Officer's Affidavit on each anniversary of the commencement of the lease term. Tenant shall not commence or alter any operations on the property before (a) obtaining all required operating and discharge permits or approvals, including but not limited to air pollution control permits and pollution discharge elimination system permits, from all governmental or public authorities having jurisdiction over the Tenant's operations or the property, and (b) providing copies of these permits and approvals to the Landlord.

Rights of Inspection

_____.02. Tenant shall permit Landlord and Landlord's agents, servants, and employees, including but not limited to legal counsel and environmental consultants and engineers, access to the property for the purpose of conducting environmental inspections and sampling during regular business hours, and during other hours either by agreement of the parties or in the event of an environmental emergency. Tenant shall not restrict access to any part of the property and Tenant shall not impose any conditions to access. In the event that Landlord's environmental inspection includes sampling and testing of the premises, Landlord shall use its best efforts to avoid interfering with Tenant's use of the premises, and on completion of sampling and testing shall repair and restore the affected areas of the property as made necessary by any sampling and testing.

Indemnity

_____.03. Tenant shall indemnify, defend, and hold harmless Landlord from and against all claims, liabilities, losses, damages, and costs, foreseen or unforeseen, including without limitation counsel, engineering, and other professional or expert fees, that Landlord may incur by reason of Tenant's action or inaction with regard to Tenant's obligations under Paragraph _____ of this lease.

Survival

_____.04. This Article shall survive the expiration or earlier termination of this lease. Tenant's obligations under this Article shall be subject to enforcement in equity.

§ 33.231 Monitoring Requirements Provision

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision allowing a landlord to monitor the environmental conditions on leased property. It also imposes notice requirements on the tenant. This provision would normally be used in association with a provision requiring the tenant to comply with all environmental laws [see § 33.233[2] (form)].

This monitoring provision requires the tenant to notify the landlord of environmental events governed by laws that require notices or submissions of reports to governmental agencies concerning hazardous substance releases, such as CERCLA [see 42 U.S.C. § 9603] and state superfund laws [see Health & Safety Code § 25359.4; see also § 33.12[1]-[3]].

This lease covenant parallels a statutory obligation of the tenant. Under California law, nonresidential tenants who know, or have reasonable cause to believe, that a release of hazardous substance has come to be located on or beneath the leased property, must give written notice of that condition to their landlords. Failure to do so is tortious, and subjects the tenant to risk of civil penalties of up to $5,000 per incident [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a)].

In addition, this provision requires the tenant to provide notice of any environmental liens [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9607(l) (federal lien for CERCLA liability); Health & Safety Code § 25365.6 (state lien for amounts paid from state Superfund)]. It also requires fulfillment of all of the tenant's environmental obligations as a condition to the landlord's consent to a sublease or assignment.

A commercial or industrial landlord must decide how closely it will monitor a tenant's ongoing operations. As the potential liabilities of landowners expand [see § 33.10[5][e]], it is increasingly important for the landlord to protect the environmental integrity of his or her investment. The landlord's retention of a right to periodically monitor the tenant's operations may, depending on the circumstances of the particular transaction, be advisable in addition to requiring an annual officer's affidavit [see § 33.230[2]].

For various lease forms into which this provision could be inserted, see Volume 8, Chapters 34C, Commercial, Industrial, and Office Leases, 34D Ground Leases, and 34E Shopping Centers: Leasing and Operation, and Volume 8A, Chapter 37, Farm Leases.

Monitoring Requirements Provision

ARTICLE _____

LANDLORD'S RIGHT TO MONITOR

Reporting Requirements

_____.01. (a) Tenant shall promptly supply Landlord with copies of all notices, reports, correspondence, and submissions made by Tenant to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the California Environmental Protection Agency, the United States Occupational Safety and Health Administration, or any other local, state, or federal authority that requires submission of any information concerning environmental matters or hazardous wastes or substances in accordance with _____ [specify acts applicable to tenant's industry, e.g., the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, 42 U.S.C. § 6901 et seq.; the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, 42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.; the Hazardous Substance Account Act, California Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.] and all applicable regulations. Tenant shall also supply Landlord with written confirmation of any notices or reports regarding releases of hazardous wastes or substances that Tenant makes orally or by telephone to any such governmental agency.

(b) Tenant shall promptly notify Landlord in advance of any scheduled meeting between Tenant and any of the agencies specified in subparagraph (a).

Environmental Liens

_____.02. Tenant shall promptly notify Landlord as to any liens threatened or attached against the premises under any environmental law. In the event that an environmental lien is filed against the premises, the Tenant shall, within 30 days from the date on which the lien is placed against the property, and at any rate before the date on which any governmental authority commences proceedings to sell the premises in accordance with a lien, either: (a) pay the claim and remove the lien from the premises; or (b) furnish either (1) a bond satisfactory to the Landlord in the amount of the claim on which the lien is based, or (2) other security satisfactory to the Landlord in an amount sufficient to discharge the claim on which the lien is based.

Condition Precedent to Assignment and Sublease

_____.03. As a condition precedent to the Tenant's right to sublease the property or to assign this lease, the Tenant shall, at the Tenant's own expense, fulfill all of Tenant's environmental obligations under Paragraph _____ of this lease. If this condition is not satisfied, the Landlord shall have the right to withhold consent to any proposed sublease or assignment.

§ 33.232 Allocation of Cleanup Costs Between Landlord and Tenant

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision for use in a commercial real property lease agreement under which the landlord and tenant allocate responsibility for any cleanup costs arising from discharges of hazardous substances on the leased property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(e); see also § 33.10[2]]. Counsel representing the tenant should attempt to ensure that his or her client will not be responsible for cleanup costs incurred by reason of any prior operations of the property or for any spills or discharges by others on the property or on adjoining parcels. Consequently, counsel for the tenant should require a provision specifically limiting its costs to those resulting from discharges of hazardous substances or wastes by the tenant during its occupancy of the property.

Agreements allocating liability for costs under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) [42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.] and California's equivalent, the Hazardouse Substances Account Act (HSAA) [Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.] are enforceable between the parties but not with regard to the government [see §§ 33.12[4], 33.30]. In fact, at least one case has enforced an indemnity agreement made between a landlord and tenant [see Caldwell v. Gurley Refining Co. (8th Cir. [Ark.] 1985) 755 F.2d 645, 651-652] .

§ 33.233 Compliance With Environmental Laws Provision

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision that may be inserted in a commercial real estate lease agreement to require the tenant, as a covenant of the lease, to comply with all applicable environmental laws. In addition, the tenant is required to maintain the property in a manner that will, to the extent possible, avoid diminution of value due to the presence or release of hazardous substances. Finally, the provision allows the landlord to inspect and make and retain copies of all types of documents that are relevant to the tenant's business. This subparagraph complements the monitoring requirement provision set forth in*§ 33.231*.

For discussion of compliance-with-law provisions, see § 33.14[7][b]. § 33.234 Landlord's Disclosure of Release or Threatened Release on Commercial Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by the landlord of commercial real property contaminated by hazardous substances. This form documents the fact that the landlord disclosed the presence of the contamination to the prospective tenant of the commercial property.

In preparing the disclosure, the drafter should review the seller's reports of any releases of hazardous substances made to the National Response Center, the U.S. or California Environmental Protection Agencies, or any other federal or state agency [see, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 9606(a), (c) (CERCLA's release reporting requirements); Health & Safety Code § 25359.4 (HSAA's release reporting requirements)].

This form may be attached as an exhibit to any commercial real property lease entered into between the parties. This form could be adapted to be a notice from a commercial tenant to his or her landlord of any such release [see [c], below].

[b] Reasons for Landlord to Disclose

Under federal law, a prospective transferor who has actual knowledge of the release or threatened release of a hazardous substance will be liable for cleanup costs and damages under CERCLA and will be precluded from asserting the innocent landowner defense, or any other statutory defense, if he or she fails to disclose that knowledge before the transfer of the property [see 42 U.S.C. § 9601(35)(C); see also § 33.10[7][g]]. Therefore, the landlord needs to make this disclosure to the prospective tenant to maintain any CERCLA defenses that may be available.

In addition, under California law, owners of nonresidential real property who know, or have reasonable cause to believe, that a release of hazardous substance has come to be located on or beneath the property, have a statutory obligation to give written notice of that condition to any tenant of the property before entering the lease agreement. Violation of this statutory requirement subjects the owner to liability for (1) actual damages and (2) any other available remedies, such as restitution. If the violation was knowing or willful, the owner is also subject to civil liability of $5,000 for each separate violation [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(a)]. These written disclosures also guard against possible subsequent common-law claims brought by the purchaser against the landlord for fraudulent concealment or misrepresentations concerning contamination on the property, including exposure to punitive damages [see § 33.14[6]].

[c] Tenant's Obligations

Both commercial and residential tenants are obligated to give written notice to their landlords within a reasonable time if hazardous substances have been released on the leased property [Health & Safety Code § 25359.7(b); see § 33.231[2] (monitoring requirements provision for lease)]. This form could be easily modified to serve as a tenant's notice to its landlord of a release.

§ 33.240 Model Administrative Order on Consent for Settlement With Landowners

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an example of an administrative consent order between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the owner or prospective owner of contaminated land. It is based on a form promulgated by the EPA to be used as a guide to its staff [see 54 Fed. Reg. 34,243-34,245 (Aug. 18, 1989)] . It is included here to illustrate possible settlement provisions for counsel whose clients may be eligible for de minimis landowner settlements. For a discussion of de minimis landowner settlements, see § 33.31. For a list of the factors that will be taken into account by the EPA in determining whether a landowner will be eligible for a de minimis landowner settlement, see § 33.111.

Paragraph 3.03(c) need not be included in the consent order if the client's evidence in support of de minimis landowner status is strong and the EPA is settling only for access and due care assurances. The dollar figure specified in that paragraph should include the total response costs incurred as of the date of the order as well as the EPA's projection of the total response costs to be incurred during completion of the remedial action at the site [54 Fed. Reg. 34,244 (Aug. 18, 1989)] .

Paragraph 5.05 of this form specifies monetary civil penalties to which the landowner will be subject if he or she fails to comply with the terms and conditions of the consent order. This provision is actually optional. If the landowner is required to perform removal actions, the EPA may consider including other stipulated penalties [54 Fed. Reg. 34,244 (Aug. 18, 1989) ; c.f., 42 U.S.C. § 9621(e)(2) (penalties required for consent decrees under which landowners will perform remedial actions)]. The EPA representative may omit paragraph 5.06 if the EPA determines that the risk of discovering information that would disqualify the landowner from a de minimis settlement is negligible [54 Fed. Reg. 34244 (August 18, 1989)] .

The reservation of rights with regard to natural resource damage under paragraph 5.08(a)(6) must be included in the consent order unless the federal natural resource trustee has agreed to a covenant not to sue under CERCLA [see 42

U.S.C. § 9622(j)(2)].

The first alternative paragraph 5.12 provides that the consent order has been approved by the Attorney General of the United States. Attorney General approval is required for de minimis consent orders if the total past and projected response costs at the site will exceed $500,000, excluding interest [see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(h)(1)]. For those few cases for which Attorney General approval is not required, the second alternative paragraph 5.12 should be used instead [54 Fed. Reg. 34,245 (Aug. 18, 1989)] .

PART IV. FORMS
E. De Minimis Landowner Settlements

15-33 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33.241

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Joel S. Moskowitz

§ 33.241 Model CERCLA Judicial Consent Decree for Settlement With Landowners

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an example of a consent decree between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the owner or prospective owner of contaminated land [see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(g)(1)(B)]. It is a form promulgated by the EPA to be used as a guide to its staff [see 54 Fed. Reg. 34,245 (Aug. 18, 1989)] . It is included here to illustrate possible settlement provisions for counsel whose clients may be eligible for de minimis settlements. For a discussion of de minimis settlements, see § 33.31. For a discussion of the factors that will be taken into account by the EPA in determining whether a landowner will be eligible for a de minimis settlement, see § 33.111.

If the complaint concerns causes of action that are not resolved by the consent decree, or names defendants who are not signatories to the consent decree, the title of the following form should be changed to " Partial Consent Decree" [54 Fed. Reg. 34,245 (Aug. 18, 1989)] .

Paragraph 5.03 of the following form specifies monetary civil penalties to which the landowner will be subject if he or she fails to comply with the terms and conditions of the consent order. This is required for consent decrees under which landowners will perform remedial actions [42 U.S.C. § 9621(e)(2); 54 Fed. Reg. 34,246 (Aug. 18, 1989)]. Paragraph 5.04, concerning the certification of the defendant, may be omitted when the EPA determines that the risk of discovering information that would disqualify the landowner from a de minimis settlement is negligible [54 Fed. Reg. 34,246 (Aug. 18, 1989)] .

The reservation of rights with regard to natural resource damage, under Paragraph 6.02(a)(5), must be included in the consent decree unless the federal natural resource trustee has agreed to a covenant not to sue [see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(j)(2); see also § 33.31]. When the release or threatened release of any hazardous substances at the site may have resulted in damages to natural resources under the trusteeship of the United States, the EPA representative may notify the federal natural resource trustee that negotiations are being conducted and the trustee may become involved in those negotiations [see 42 U.S.C. § 9622(j)(1)].

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers the statutory and regulatory requirements applicable to time-share projects, as defined under and governed by the Vacation Ownership and Time-Share Act of 2004 (VOTSA) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11210 et seq.]. VOTSA went into effect on July 1, 2005 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11288]. This chapter includes a detailed description of, and procedural guide for, the registration process as well as coverage of the requirements of VOTSA related to the management and governance of an approved time-share plan. This chapter also includes the forms required to register a time-share plan and obtain approval of the required public report.

This chapter does not include coverage of the sales and marketing of time-share interests beyond what is required by VOTSA. It also does not discuss local building, zoning, and subdivision ordinances. The attorney should consult these ordinances, as well as the governing instruments for any common-interest subdivisions in which any dwelling units in the proposed project will be located.

This chapter also generally describes the regulation in California of out-of-state time-share projects. However, because these projects are, by definition, located outside of California, detailed coverage is not within the scope of this publication.

Condominiums, planned unit developments, and stock cooperatives are discussed respectively in Chs. 33C, Stock Cooperatives, 33D, Planned Developments, and 34, Condominiums.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.10

§ 33A.10 General Description of Time-Share Projects

The concept of time-sharing basically involves the creation of long-term, exclusive rights to use and occupy real property for short-term, recurrent use periods. Units in time-share projects are almost always used as vacation dwellings. These projects are particularly popular in resort locations where real estate prices are high and visitors stay for brief, recurrent vacation periods, although the same conditions are making urban time-share projects increasingly attractive to rural residents and businesses. The types of facilities housing these projects vary considerably, and include condominiums, hotels, lodges, motels, apartment buildings, single-family residences, campgrounds, boats, and recreational vehicle parks.

Purchasers of time-share interests initially pay a one-time purchase price that is based on the length of their recurrent use periods. Because the terms of time-share projects are often 30 years or more, this purchase price pays for future vacations at today's rates. Thereafter, purchasers only pay a proportionate share of regular and special assessments for maintenance. Purchasers are free to sell or lease their interests, and exchange programs permit purchasers of interests in participating projects to exchange their use periods for the use of comparable projects in other locations.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.11

§ 33A.11 Scope and Application of VOTSA

[1] Projects That Must Be Registered

The Vacation Ownership and Time-Share Act of 2004 (VOTSA) [Bus & Prof. Code § 11210 et seq.] applies to all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.5(a)]:

- Time-share plans with an accommodation or component site in California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(a), (f), (z) (definitions)];
- Time-share plans without an accommodation or component site in California, if those plans are sold or offered for sale to any individual located in California;
- Exchange programs [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(l) ("exchange program" defined)]; and
- Short term products [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(v) ("short term product" defined)].

The application of VOTSA to single site time-share plans and component sites of multisite plans that are located outside California but offered for sale or sold in California is somewhat limited [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.5(d)].

[2] Exempt Projects

VOTSA does not apply to any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.5(b)]:

- Time-share plans, whether or not an accommodation is located in California, consisting of 10 or fewer time-share interests.
- Time-share plans, whether or not an accommodation is located in California, the use of which extends over any period of three years or less.
- Time-share plans, whether or not an accommodation is located in California, under which the prospective purchaser's total financial obligation will be equal to or less than $3,000 during the entire term of the time-share plan.

Use of an exchange program by owners of time-share interests to secure access to other accommodations does not affect the exemption described in the first bulleted item, above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.5(b)(1)].

[3] Effect of VOTSA on Time-Share Plans Registered Before July 1, 2005

All registrations of time-share plans that were in effect on July 1, 2005, remain in full force and effect and will be considered registered pursuant to VOTSA [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11219(b)(1)]. These plans must fully comply with VOTSA when they seek amendment or renewal of their existing registrations. While an amendment or renewal is pending, the existing registration will continue in full force and effect [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11219(b)(2)].

Any existing injunction or temporary restraining order that prohibits unregistered practice of time-share developers, time-share plans, or their agents is not invalidated by the enactment of VOTSA and will continue to have full force and effect on and after July 1, 2005 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11219(c)].

Time-share plans that are registered as Qualified Resort Vacation Club Projects under prior law will continue to operate under that law notwithstanding VOTSA [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11219(a); see former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10260-10265].

[4] Applicability of Other Statutes to Time-Share Plans and Exchange Programs

[a] Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act

With specified exceptions, any time-share plan that is registered under VOTSA to which the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.] might otherwise apply is exempt from the Davis-Stirling Act. The exceptions are related to, among other things, enforcing and amending governing documents, and operating of the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.7(a); see Civ. Code §§ 1354, 1355, 1355.5, 1356, 1357, 1358, 1361, 1361.5, 1362, 1363.05, 1364, 1365.5, 1370, 1371; see also Ch. 33, Contamination Considerations in Real Property Transactions].

To the extent that a single site time-share plan or component site of a multisite time-share plan located in California is structured as a condominium or other common interest development, and there is any inconsistency between the applicable provisions of VOTSA and the Davis-Stirling Act, the applicable provisions of VOTSA will control [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.7(b)(1)].

To the extent that a time-share plan is part of a mixed use project where the time-share plan comprises a portion of a condominium or other common interest development, the applicable provisions of VOTSA will apply to that portion of the project uniquely comprising the time-share plan, and the Davis-Stirling Act will apply to the project as a whole [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.7(b)(2)].

[b] Statutes Governing Sales and Marketing Practices

The offering of any time-share plan, exchange program, incidental benefit, or short term product in California that is subject to VOTSA is exempt from all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.7(c)(1)]:

- Provisions of the Civil Code governing home solicitation sales [see Civ. Code §§ 1689.5-1689.14].
- Seminar sales [see Civ. Code §§ 1689.20-1689.24].

- Contracts for discount buying services [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.100-1812.129].

A developer or exchange company that, in connection with a time-share sales presentation or offer to arrange an exchange, offers a purchaser the opportunity to utilize the services of an affiliate, subsidiary, or third-party entity in connection with wholesale or retail air or sea transportation, must not, in and of itself, cause the developer or exchange company to be considered a seller of travel, so long as the entity that actually provides or arranges the air or sea transportation is registered as a seller of travel with the California Attorney General's office or is otherwise exempt from VOTSA [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11211.7(c)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17550-17550.34 (governing sellers of travel)].

[c] Subdivided Lands Act

Time-share plans, exchange programs, incidental benefits, and short term products that are subject to VOTSA are not "subdivisions" or "subdivided lands" subject to the Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(g)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.13

§ 33A.13 Definitions of Commonly Used VOTSA Terms

[1] "Accommodation"

An "accommodation" is any apartment, condominium or cooperative unit, cabin, lodge, hotel or motel room, or other private or commercial structure containing toilet facilities that is designed and available for residential use and occupancy by one or more individuals, or any unit or berth on a commercial passenger ship, that is included in the offering of a time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(a)].

[2] "Component Site"

A "component site" is a specific geographic location where accommodations that are part of a multisite time-share plan are located. Separate phases of a time-share property in a specific geographic location and under common management are not deemed a component site [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(f)].

[3] "Developer"

"Developer" means and includes any person who creates a time-share plan or who offers time-share interests for disposition in the ordinary course of business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(i)]. It includes any person, who at any point in time, owns or has an option or contract to acquire 11 or more time-share interests for purposes of sale in the ordinary course of business if the time-share interests were acquired or are to be acquired (1) from the original recipient of a public report for the time-share plan, or (2) from a person who succeeded to the interest of the original recipient in 11 or more time-share interests in a time-share plan [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2805]. However, the term does not include either of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(i)]:

- The developer's employees or agents who sell time-share interests on the developer's behalf, or employs agents to do the same; or

- Any person who succeeds to the interest of a developer by sale, lease, assignment, mortgage, or other transfer.

The developer must supervise, manage, and control all aspects of the offering of the time-share plan including, but not limited to, promotion, advertising, contracting, and closing. He or she is responsible for each plan registered with the Real Estate Commissioner and for the actions of any sales or marketing entity the developer utilizes in offering or selling a registered plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11214(a)].

[4] "Exchange Program"

An "exchange program" is any method, arrangement, or procedure for the voluntary exchange of time-share interests or other property interests. It does not include the assignment of the right to use and occupy accommodations to owners of time-share interests within a single site time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(l)]. Any method, arrangement, or procedure that otherwise meets this definition in which the purchaser's total contractual financial obligation exceeds $3,000 per any individual, recurring time-share period, will be regulated as a time-share plan under VOTSA [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(l)]. For purposes of determining the purchaser's total contractual financial obligation, amounts to be paid as a result of renewals and options to renew will be included, except for the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(l)]:

- Amounts to be paid as a result of any optional renewal that a purchaser, in his or her sole discretion, may elect to exercise;

- Amounts to be paid as a result of any automatic renewal in which the purchaser has a right to terminate during the renewal period at any time and receive a pro rata refund for the remaining unexpired renewal term; or

- Amounts to be paid as a result of an automatic renewal in which the purchaser receives a written notice no less than 30 nor more than 90 days before the renewal date informing the purchaser of the right to terminate before the renewal date.

Notwithstanding these exceptions, if the purchaser's contractual financial obligation exceeds $3,000 for any three-year period of any renewal term, amounts to be paid as a result of that renewal will be included in determining the purchaser's total contractual financial obligation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(l)].

An exchange program is not part of a time-share plan offering and, except with limited exceptions, is not subject to VOTSA or its implementing regulations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11216(a); but see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11216(b)-(e), 11238(a) (limited applicability)].

[5] "Incidental Benefit"

An "incidental benefit" is an accommodation, product, service, discount, or other benefit, other than an exchange program, that is offered to a prospective purchaser of a time-share interest before the rescission period ends the continuing availability of which for the use and enjoyment of owners of time-share interests in the time-share plan is limited to a term of not more than three years, subject torenewal or extension. An offer of the use of the accommodation, product, service, discount, or other benefit on a free or discounted one-time basis is not an incidental benefit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(m); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11238 (rescission period)].

[6] "Reservation System"

A "reservation system" is the method, arrangement, or procedure by which a purchaser, to reserve the use or occupancy of any accommodation of a multisite time-share plan for one or more time-share periods, is required to compete with other purchasers in the same multisite time-share plan, regardless of whether the reservation system is operated and maintained by the multisite time-share plan managing entity, an exchange company, or any other person. If a purchaser is required to use an exchange program as the principal means of obtaining the right to use and occupy accommodations in a multisite time-share plan, that arrangement will be deemed a reservation system. When an exchange company utilizes a mechanism for the exchange of use o f time-share periods among members of an exchange program, that utilization is not a reservation system of a multisite time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(u)].

[7] "Time-Share Instrument"

"Time-share instrument" refers to one or more documents, by whatever name denominated, creating or governing the operation of a time-share plan, including the declaration dedicating accommodations to the time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(w)].

The time-share instrument cannot prohibit a person from seeking or obtaining, through any legal procedures, judicial partition of the time-share interest or sale of the time-share interest, in lieu of partition and must subordinate all rights that a time-share interest owner might otherwise have as a tenant-in-common in real property to the terms of the time-share instrument [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11215(a)]. However, this does not prohibit a sale of an accommodation on termination of a time-share plan or removal of an accommodation from the time-share plan in accordance with provisions of the time-share instrument [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11215(b)].

[8] "Time-Share Interest"

"Time-share interest" means and includes both of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(x)]:

- A "time-share estate," which is the right to occupy a time-share property, coupled with a freehold estate or an estate for years with a future interest in a time-share property or a specified portion thereof; and

- A "time-share use," which is the right to occupy a time-share property, which right is neither coupled with a freehold interest, nor coupled with an estate for years with a future interest, in a time-share property.

For title purposes, each time-share estate, as described in the first bulleted item, above, constitutes a separate estate or interest in real property including ownership in real property for tax purposes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11213].

[9] "Time-Share Period"

A "time-share period" is the period or periods of time when the purchaser of a time-share plan is afforded the opportunity to use the accommodations of a time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(y)].

[10] "Time-Share Plan"

A "time-share plan" is any arrangement, plan, scheme, or similar device, other than an exchange program, whether by membership agreement, sale, lease, deed, license, right to use agreement, or by any other means, whereby a purchaser, in exchange for consideration, receives ownership rights in or the right to use accommodations for a period of time less than a full year during any given year, on a recurring basis for more than one year, but not necessarily for consecutive years. A time-share plan may be either of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(z)]:

- A "single site time-share plan," which is the right to use accommodations at a single time-share property; or

- A "multisite time-share plan," which includes either:

(1) A "specific time-share interest," which is the right to use accommodations at a specific time-share property, together with use rights in accommodations at one or more other component sites created by or acquired through the time-share plan's reservation system [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2805.9]; or

(2) A "nonspecific time-share interest," which is the right to use accommodations at more than one component site created by or acquired through the time-share plan's reservation system, but including no specific right to use any particular accommodations.

[11] "Time-Share Property"

A "time-share property" is one or more accommodations subject to the same time-share instrument, together with any other property or rights to property appurtenant to those accommodations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(aa)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.14

§ 33A.14 Registration of Time-Share Plans

[1] Registration Requirements

Any person who, to any individual located in California, sells, offers to sell, or attempts to solicit prospective purchasers to purchase a time-share interest, or any person who creates a time-share plan with an accommodation in California, must register the plan with the Real Estate Commissioner, unless the plan is otherwise exempt [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11225 (exemptions)]. A developer, or any of its agents, may not sell, offer, or dispose of a time-share interest in the state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(b)]:

- Unless all necessary registration requirements are provided and approved by the Real Estate Commissioner;
- Unless the sale, offer, or disposition is otherwise permitted by VOTSA; or
- While an order revoking or suspending a registration is in effect.

"Sells," "offers to sell," and "attempts to solicit prospective purchasers" include any written or oral communication that is disseminated or otherwise used in California for the purpose of inducing a resident to travel outside California for a required presentation with the primary intention of causing the person to purchase time-share interests located outside California [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2805.5].

In registering a time-share plan, the developer must provide all of the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(c)]:

- The developer's legal name, any assumed names, principal office street address, mailing address, primary contact person, and telephone number.
- The name of the developer's authorized or registered agent in California on whom claims can be served or service of process be had, the agent's street address in California, and the agent's telephone number.

- The name, street address, mailing address, primary contact person, and telephone number of any time-share plan being registered.

- The name, street address, mailing address, and telephone number of any managing entity of the time-share plan.

- A public report that complies with the statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234], or, for a time-share plan located outside California, a public report that has been authorized for use by the appropriate regulatory agency in the state in which the plan is located and that contains disclosures (as determined by the Real Estate Commissioner) to be substantially equivalent to or greater than the information required to be disclosed under California law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234].

- A description of the inventory control system that will ensure compliance with statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11250].

- Any other information regarding the developer, time-share plan, or managing entities as established by regulation [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2805 et seq.].

Other information that must be included and filed with the registration materials include (1) an estimated operating budget for the time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11240], and (2) a description of any incidental benefits that may be used by the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11237(b)].

In addition, for each accommodation of the time-share plan, an applicant for a public report must present evidence of both of the following for each accommodation in each time-share property that is, or will be, offered for sale in California pursuant to the registration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(d)]:

- That the accommodation is presently suitable for human occupancy or that financial arrangements have been made to complete construction or renovation of the accommodation to make it suitable for human occupancy on or before the first date for occupancy by a time-share interest owner; and

- That the accommodation is owned or leased by the developer of the time-share plan or is the subject of an enforceable option or contract under which the developer will build, purchase, or lease the accommodation.

The requirement in the second bulleted item notwithstanding, before receipt of the final public report, the developer must present evidence that the accommodation to be sold is owned or leased by the developer and that it is free and clear of encumbrances [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(d)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11244, 11255].

If an accommodation in a time-share plan is located within a local governmental jurisdiction or subdivision of real property in which the dedication of accommodations to time-sharing is expressly prohibited by ordinance or recorded restriction, either absolutely or without a permit or other entitlement from the governing body, the applicant for a public report must present evidence of a permit or other entitlement issued by the appropriate authority [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(e)].

Registration will be effective only when the Real Estate Commissioner issued a public report. The issuance must occur no later than 60 calendar days after the Commissioner has received a properly completed registration application. If the application is deficient, a list of the deficiencies must be provided to the applicant within the same 60-day period [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11231(a); see § 33A.14[2]].

[2] Public Report

[a] Preparation and Submission of Application

As part of the registration process, a developer must prepare a public report that fully and accurately discloses the facts concerning the developer and time-share plan that are required by VOTSA and its implementing regulations. The report must be provided to each purchaser of a time-share interest in any time-share plan at the time of purchase. It must be written and dated, and the purchaser must certify its receipt in writing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234].

There are different content requirements for the report depending on whether it is for (1) a single site time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234(a); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.1; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11226(g), 11274(f), 11275(b)], (2) a specific time-share interest multisite time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234(a), (b); 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2809.1, 2809.2; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11226(g), 11274(f), 11275(b)], or (3) a nonspecific time-share interest multisite time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234(c); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.3; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11226(g), 11274(f), 11275(b)]. An application for a time-share plan in which the use and occupancy of the time-share interest purchased is determined according to a point system must include additional information [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11233].

For time-share plans located outside California, a public report may be used if the report (1) has been authorized for use by the situs state regulatory agency, and (2) contains disclosures as determined by the Real Estate Commissioner on review to be substantially equivalent to or greater than the information required to be disclosed pursuant to California law. When appropriate for the proposed development and with the commissioner's approval, a developer also may submit a public report that combines the information required by California statute with the information required for a public report issued by a regulatory agency in one or more other states [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234]. On finding that the subject matter is otherwise adequately covered or the information is unnecessary or inapplicable, the Commissioner may waive any of the requirements for a public report application [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234(e)].

Once the application for a public report has been completed, it must be signed by or on behalf of the person to whom the permit is to be issued or by an agent with appropriate written authorization on behalf of the person to whom the permit is to be issued. If executed within California, the information in the application and in accompanying documents submitted with it must be certified to be true under penalty of perjury or verified by a notary public. If executed outside California, the information in the application and accompanying documents must be verified before a person qualified to administer oaths in the jurisdiction where it is executed or certified under penalty of perjury in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5(b) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809(b)].

The properly prepared and executed application must be filed with the Department of Real Estate at its principal office in Sacramento along with the applicable fees [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11232; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2810.5 (fees)].

The Real Estate Commissioner must issue a final public report if all registration requirements have been met and if all deficiencies and substantive inadequacies in the application for final public report have been corrected [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(a)]. Under some circumstances, the Commissioner may issue a conditional or preliminary public report before issuing a final report [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(b), (j)].

The term of a final public report is five years, but may be renewed on application and submission of any additional information the Commissioner may require [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11228].

The Commissioner may refuse to issue a public report if the applicant fails to comply with any provisions of VOTSA and its implementing regulations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11229(b)]. The developer may object to a refusal by filing a written request for a hearing within 30 days after receiving the order of denial. The hearing must be held within 20 days after the request is received. If the hearing is not held within that time, or if a proposed decision is not rendered within 45 days after submission and an order adopting or rejecting the proposed decision is not issued within 15 days thereafter, the order of denial must be rescinded and a public report must be issued [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11229(c)].

[b] Conditional Public Report

A conditional public report may be issued before a final public report if (1) all deficiencies and substantive inadequacies in the substantially complete application for a final public report for the time-share plan have been corrected, (2) the material elements of the offering to be made under the authority of the conditional public report have been established, and (3) all requirements for issuing the conditional public report have been met, except for one or more of the following, as applicable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(b)]:

- A final map has not been recorded.
- A condominium plan has not been recorded.
- A declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions has not been recorded.
- A declaration of annexation has not been recorded.
- A recorded subordination of existing liens to the time-share instruments or declaration of annexation or escrow instructions to effect recording before the first sale, are lacking.
- Filed articles of incorporation are lacking.
- A current preliminary report of a licensed title insurance company has not been provided, which reflects the filing of the final map and recording of the time-share instrument covering all time-share interests to be included in the public report.
- Other requirements the Commissioner determines are likely to be timely satisfied by the applicant.

The issuance of a conditional public report will enable the developer to market the time-share interests covered by the report, but no escrow can close until the final report has been issued [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(c), (e)].

A prospective purchaser must be provided with a copy of the conditional public report and a written statement that includes all of the following information [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(f)]:

- Specification of the information required for issuance of a final public report;
- Specification of the information required in the final public report that is not available in the conditional public report, along with a statement of the reasons why that information is not available when the conditional public report is issued;
- A statement that no person acting as a principal or agent will sell or lease, or offer for sale or lease, time-share interests in a time-share plan for which a conditional public report has been issued except as provided in VOTSA; and
- Specification that no escrow can close until a final public report has been issued [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(e)].

[c] Preliminary Public Report

The Real Estate Commissioner may grant a 12-month preliminary public report allowing the developer to begin offering and selling time-share interests, in a time-share plan regardless of whether the accommodations of the time-share plan are located inside or outside California, while the registration is pending. One additional 12-month period may be granted if the developer is actively and diligently pursuing registration. The preliminary public report will automatically terminate with regard to those time-share interests covered by a final public report that is issued before the scheduled termination date of the preliminary report [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(j)].

[d] Abandonment of Application for Public Report

The Real Estate Commissioner may abandon an application for a final, conditional, amended, or renewed public report if [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(a)]:

- The information required for a properly completed application for registration and public report has not been furnished within three years from the date a notice of intention was filed for the public report [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11226, 11234];

- Six months have elapsed, without communication from the developer, since the Commissioner gave notice of deficiencies or substantive inadequacies contained in the documents that are required to make the filing substantially complete and the deficiencies and inadequacies have not been corrected by the applicant; and

- The term of any one-year extension of time to complete the application has elapsed [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(d)].

Ninety days before abandoning an application the Commissioner must mail to the developer and the developer's designated representative, notice of the Commissioner's intent to abandon the application. The notice must include a statement that the developer may file a petition to keep the application open [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(b)]. Sixty days or more after the notice is mailed, the Commissioner may issue a final notice of intention to abandon the application. The application will be deemed abandoned 30 days after the final notice is mailed to the developer and the developer's designated representative unless, before the 30-day period expires, a one-year extension is granted [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(c)].

The Commissioner, on his or her own motion, or after receiving a petition from the developer or the developer's designated representative, may, under the following terms and conditions, grant a one-year extension to allow the developer to complete the application [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(d)]:

- The petition is received before the 30-day notice "deemed abandoned" period expires; and

- The petition sets forth reasons of hardship or justifiable extenuating circumstances explaining why the file has been inactive.

Hardship and justifiable extenuating circumstances include mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or circumstances beyond the developer's control.

Written notice of the decision to grant or deny the petition will be mailed or delivered to the developer and the developer's designated representative, within 30 calendar days after receipt of the petition [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(d)].

The Commissioner may grant one or more one-year extensions, provided that the application has not been abandoned [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2809.5(e)].

§ 33A.16 Sale of Time-Share Interests

VOTSA imposes requirements for contracts pertaining to the sale of time share interests. The requirements relate to obvious information such as price, estimated completion date, and a description of the interest being sold [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11238(d)]. Also required is a statutorily-prescribed notice of the purchaser's seven-day right to cancel the contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11238(d)(7); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 11238(a)], and provisions related to disbursements or charges to be made against purchase money for payments to third parties for such things as credit reports, escrow services, preliminary title reports, appraisals, and loan processing services [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11256(b)].

Any person offering to sell or lease any interest that is subject to registration under VOTSA must make a copy of the following documents available for examination by a prospective purchaser or lessee before an offer to purchase or lease is executed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226.1]:

- The declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions for the time-share plan;
- The owners' association's articles of incorporation or association;
- The association's bylaws; and
- Any other instrument that establishes or defines the common, mutual, and reciprocal rights and responsibilities of the owners or lessees in the time-share plan as members of the owners' association or otherwise.

A copy of these documents must also be given to each purchaser or lessee as soon as practicable before the interest being acquired is transferred [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226.1].

If a purchaser of a time-share interest is offered the opportunity to acquire an incidental benefit, the developer must provide the purchaser with a disclosure statement containing information about that benefit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11237(a)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.17

§ 33A.17 Time-Share Plan Requirements

[1] One-to-One Purchaser to Accommodation Ratio

A time-share plan may be created in any accommodation unless otherwise prohibited. All time-share plans must maintain a one-to-one purchaser to accommodation ratio, which means the ratio of the number of purchasers eligible to use the accommodations of a time-share plan on a given night to the number of accommodations available for use within the plan on that night, such that the total number of purchasers eligible to use the accommodations of the time-share plan during a given calendar year never exceeds the total number of accommodations available for use in the time-share plan during that year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11250]. For purposes of this calculation, each purchaser must be counted at least once, and no individual accommodation may be counted more than 365 times per calendar year or more than 366 times per leap year. A purchaser who is delinquent in paying time-share plan assessments will continue to be considered eligible to use the accommodations for purposes of calculating the ratio [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11250].

[2] Documents Required to Be Recorded Before Closing of First Sale

In the case of a single site time-share plan and component sites of a multisite time-share plan located in California, covenants dedicating the accommodations to the time-share plan and incorporating all covenants of the grantor or lessor of the time-share interests, and including provisions as specified by statute, must be recorded before closure of the first sale of a time-share interest in each accommodation in the plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(a)]. The statutorily-required provisions include the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(a)]:

- The organization of an association of time-share interest owners.

- A description of the real property for the common ownership or use of the time-share interest owners.

- A description of the method for calculating and collecting regular and special assessments from time-share interest owners to defray expenses of the time-share property and for related purposes.

- A description of the method for terminating the membership and selling the interest of a time-share interest owner for failure to pay regular or special assessments.

- A description of the method for disciplining time-share interest owners for late payment of assessments.

- Provisions requiring comprehensive general liability insurance and adequate property and casualty insurance covering the time-share property.

- Restrictions on partitioning an accommodation of the time-share plan.

- A description of the method for amending the covenants affecting the time-share plan.

- When applicable, a description of the method related to annexing or de-annexing additional accommodations, phases, or properties to the time-share plan.

- A description of the procedures to be used in the event of condemnation, destruction, or extensive damage to an accommodation, including provisions for the disposition of insurance proceeds or damages payable on account of damage or condemnation.

- The procedures to be employed on regular termination of the time-share plan.

- When applicable, allocation of the cost of maintenance and operation between different elements or mixed uses within the portions of a project or related to reciprocal rights and obligations between the time-share project and other property.

- A description of the method for entering accommodations of the time-share plan under authority granted by the association to clean, service, maintain, and repair (including emergency repairs) and to abate a nuisance or a known or suspected dangerous or unlawful activity.

- Delineation of all of the developer's reserved rights.

Insofar as reasonably possible, the covenants must be binding on subsequent owners [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(a)(15); see Civ. Code §§ 1468-1470].

[3] Provisions Required in Time-Share Documents

In the case of a single site time-share plan and component sites of a multisite time-share plan located in California, the time-share instruments must describe, among other things, all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(c)]:

- The services to be made available to time-share interest owners under the time-share plan.

- The procedures regarding transfer to the association of control over the time-share property and services comprising the time-share plan.

- The preparation method and the means of making available to interest owners of the budget, financial statements, and other information related to the time-share plan.

- The methods for employing and for terminating the employment of the plan's managing entity.

- The method for adopting standards and rules of conduct for the accommodations by interest owners.

- The method for establishing the rights of time-share interest owners to the use of an accommodation according to schedule or under a first-reserved, first-served priority system.

- The method for compensating use periods or monetary compensation for an owner of a time-share estate if an accommodation cannot be made available for the period of use to which the owner is entitled by schedule or under a reservation system because of an error by the association or managing entity.

- The method for the use of accommodations for transient accommodations or other income-producing purpose during periods of nonuse by interest owners.

- The method for the inspection of the books and records of the association by interest owners.

- The method for collective decisionmaking and the undertaking of action by or in the name of the association including, when applicable, representation of time-share accommodations in an association for the time-share in which the accommodations are located.

The instruments must also require that insurance against property damage and third party liability that meets statutory specifications be maintained and in force to protect the interest owners [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253].

[4] Plans Offering Time-Share Use Interests

Each of the accommodations in a time-share plan offering time-share use interests must be conveyed to a trustee or to an association that is acceptable to the Real Estate Commissioner before escrow for the closing of the first sale of a time-share use interest that entitles the purchaser to occupy the accommodation in question [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11255(a)]. A "time-share use" is the right to occupy a time-share property, which right is neither coupled with a freehold interest, nor coupled with an estate for years with a future interest [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(x)(2)].

If the accommodation offering time-share use interests in a time-share plan that is free and clear of blanket encumbrances, other than a current property tax lien, is conveyed to a trustee or an association, the trust or association instruments must include specified provisions, and the plan must comply with other requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11255(b)-(g)].

[5] Voting Requirements to Amend Time-Share Instruments

The declaration or another document that establishes the time-share plan may not be amended without the vote or written assent of at least 25 percent of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(a)].

Amending the articles of incorporation or association requires the vote or written assent of at least 25 percent of the governing body and 25 percent of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(b)].

Amending the association's bylaws requires the vote or written assent of at least 10 percent of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(c)].

The association's rules and regulations may not be amended without the vote or written assent of at least a majority of the governing body of the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(d)].

The percentage of the voting power necessary to amend a specific clause or provision in the time-share instrument, articles, or bylaws cannot be less than the prescribed percentage of affirmative votes or written assents required for action to be taken under that clause [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(e)].

In addition to the above restrictions on enacting amendments of the governing instruments, the governing instruments may include provisions consistent with Bus. & Prof. Code § 11269(c), whereby the vote of the developer must be given effect [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11266(f)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.18

§ 33A.18 Association of Time-Share Interest Owners

[1] Members and Voting

The time-share interest owners are members of an association. A member of an association, including associations that provide for unequal assessments against members, is entitled to one vote for each time-share interest owned [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11269(a)]. In the initial stages of a time-share plan, there may be two classes of members for voting purposes. Each time-share interest owner other than the developer of the plan is a class "A" member. If a time-share interest is owned by more than one person, each interest owner is a class "A" member, but only one vote may be cast for each interest. The developer is the class "B" member and has one vote for each time-share interest he or she owns that has been authorized to be offered for sale by the public report. Class "B" membership will be automatically converted to class "A" membership, and (and therefore cease to exist) when the total outstanding votes held by the class "B" member falls below 20 percent of the association's total voting power [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11269(b)].

A form of proxy may be distributed to each member to afford him or her the opportunity to vote in absentia at a membership meeting provided that it meets the requirements for a written ballot and includes the name or names of members who expect to be in attendance in person at the meeting to whom the proxy is to be given [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(h); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(f)(4) (written ballot requirements)].

[2] Membership Meetings

[a] Regular Meetings

Time-share instruments must provide for regular membership meetings unless it is impracticable because of the number of association members, their places of residence in relation to each other, the international nature of the offering, or other factors. The first regular meeting must be scheduled not later than one year after the closing of the escrow for the first sale of a time-share interest or completion of construction, whichever occurs first. Thereafter, regular membership meetings should be scheduled at least once a calendar year at a time and place to be fixed by the bylaws or by resolution of the governing body [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(a)].

[b] Special Meetings

The time-share plan instruments must provide for special meetings of the association to be promptly called by the governing body on either [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(b)]:

- The vote of a majority of the governing body; or

- Receipt of a written request signed by members representing at least 5 percent of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer.

[c] Location of Meetings

Meetings must be held in a place that is readily accessible at reasonable cost to the largest possible number of members [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(c)].

[d] Notice of Meetings

Written notice of regular and special meetings must be given by first-class mail not less than 14 and not more than 90 days before the scheduled meeting date. The notice, whether for a regular or special meeting, must specify the meeting time and place and a brief statement of the matters that the governing body intends to present, or believes that others will present, for action by the members [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(d)].

[e] Quorum Requirements

The association bylaws must establish the quorum for a meeting of members at not less than five percent nor more than 33 1/3 percent, of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer, represented in person or by proxy. In the absence of a quorum, no business can be conducted and the presiding officer must adjourn the meeting sine die [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(e)(1), (2)]. If less than one-third of the total voting power of the association is in attendance, in person or by proxy, at a regular or special meeting of the association, only those matters included in the notice of meeting may be voted on [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(e)(3)].

[3] Action Without Meeting

Any action that may be taken at any regular or special meeting of members may be taken without a meeting provided [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(f)]:

- A written ballot is distributed to every member entitled to vote setting forth the proposed action, providing an opportunity to signify approval or disapproval of the proposal, and providing a reasonable time for the members to return the ballot to the association;

- The number of votes cast by ballot within the specified time period equals or exceeds the quorum required to be present at a meeting authorizing the action;

- The number of approvals of the action equals or exceeds the number of votes required to approve the action at a meeting at which the total number of votes cast was the same as the number of votes cast by written ballot; and

- The written ballot distributed to members affords an opportunity to specify a choice between approval and disapproval of each order of business proposed for action, and provides that the vote of the members will be cast in accordance with the choice specified.

CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.19

§ 33A.19 Governing Body

[1] Election of Directors

The governing body of the association must consist of three directors for an association that does not contemplate more than 100 members, and either five or seven directors for an association that contemplates more than 100 members [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11270(a)].

The first governing body must consist of directors appointed by the developer. The developer may change the designated board member without the need of any further consent by the association. However, the term of the applicable director's seat on the governing body will not be affected by that change. These directors will serve until the first association meeting at which time there will be an election of all of the directors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11270(b)(1), (d)]. The bylaws of the association may provide that governing body members may be elected by written ballot [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11268(g)].

The governing instruments must establish a procedure to assure that at the first election of the governing body, and at all times thereafter, at least one of the incumbent directors has been elected solely by the votes of members other than the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11270(b)(2)]. The terms of office of governing body members may be staggered provided that no person may serve a term of more than three years without standing for reelection [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11270(c)].

[2] Meetings

[a] Regular Meetings

Regular meetings of the governing body must be held as prescribed in the bylaws, but not less frequently than annually [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(a)].

[b] Special Meetings

A special meeting of the governing body may be called by written notice signed by any two directors. The notice must specify the time and place of the meeting and the nature of any special business to be considered. The notice must be in writing, which includes facsimile, email, and other forms of written or electronic communication, to directors not less than 14 days before the meeting. However, notice of the meeting is not required to be given to any director who signed a waiver of notice or a written consent to the holding of the meeting [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(c)].

[c] Time, Place, and Conduct of Meetings

Both regular and special meetings must be held in or near the time-share location unless a meeting at another location would significantly reduce the cost to the association or the inconvenience to directors. If the time and place of the regular meeting is not fixed by the governing instruments, notice of the time and place must be communicated in writing, which includes facsimile, email, and other forms of written or electronic communication, to directors not less than 14 days before the meeting. However, notice of a meeting is not required to be given to any director who has signed a waiver of notice or a written consent to the holding of the meeting [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(b)]. A bare majority of the total number of authorized directors will constitute a quorum [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(e)].

Regular and special meetings of the governing body must be open to all association members, but only directors may participate in any deliberations or discussions, unless the directors expressly authorize otherwise. With the approval of a majority of a quorum of its members, the governing body may adjourn a meeting and reconvene in executive session to discuss and vote on personnel matters, litigation in which the association is or may become involved, and orders of business of a similar nature. The nature of any and all business to be considered in executive session must first be announced in open session [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(d)].

The governing instruments must provide for reimbursement by the association for transportation expenses incurred and reasonable per diem payments to directors for attending regular and special meetings of the governing body [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11271(f)].

§ 33A.20 Members' Access to Association Records

[1] Information That Must Be Provided to Members

The following information concerning the time-share plan must be made available to all members [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11272(a)]:

- Proposed budget, or a summary of the proposed budget with a notice that the full budget will be made available on request [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11272(b); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 11240 (required contents of proposed budget)].

- Annual audited financial statement, which must include specified information [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11272(a)(2)(A)-(E)].

- Annual meeting agenda.

[2] Availability of Other Association Records

The books of account, minutes of members and governing body meetings, and all other records of the time-share plan maintained by the association or the managing entity must be made available for inspection and copying by any member, or by his or her duly appointed representative, at any reasonable time for a purpose reasonably related to membership in the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11273(a)]. Every director has an absolute right at any time to inspect all association books, records, and documents, and all real and personal properties owned and controlled by the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11273(d)].

The records must be made available at the office where they are maintained. However, on written request from a member along with the fee prescribed by the governing body to defray the costs of reproduction, the managing entity or other custodian of association records or the time-share plan must transmit to the member a copy of any and all records requested [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11273(b)].

The association is required to maintain a complete list of the names and addresses of all owners of time-share interests.

The list must be updated no less frequently than every six months. Unless otherwise provided in the time-share instruments, the association may not publish the owner's list or provide a copy of it to any time-share interest owner or third party, or use or sell the list for commercial purposes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11273(e)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.21

§ 33A.21 Assessments

[1] Regular Assessments

For single site time-share plans and component sites of a specific time-share interest multisite time-share plan, regular assessments to defray the expenses of maintaining the time-share property and operating the time-share plan will be levied against each time-share interest owner. The assessment's amount is based on the ratio that the number of time-share interests owned by a time-share interest owner assessed bears to the total number of time-share interests subject to assessment. Regular assessments, however, cannot exceed the amount necessary to defray the estimated expenses for which the assessments are levied [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(1)]. Alternatively, the assessment against each owner may be determined according to a formula or schedule under which assessments against each time-share interest owner are equitably apportioned in accordance with operational and maintenance costs attributable to each time-share interest owner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(2)].

All time-share interests in the time-share plan for which a public report has been issued including those time-share interests held by the developer are subject to regular and special assessments [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(4)].

The governing body may be authorized to impose, without the vote or written assent of the association, a regular annual assessment per time-share interest that is as much as 20 percent greater than the regular annual assessment for the preceding fiscal year. An increase of more than 20 percent requires the vote or written assent of a majority of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer. An increase in the annual property tax assessment against accommodations of the time-share property must be excluded in determining the 20 percent threshold [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(5)].

Regular assessments against all of the time-share interests must commence on the same date, which is the first day of the month following the closing of the escrow of the first sale of a time-share interest in the plan. However, commencement may be delayed to the later of (1) the date of commencement of time-share interest owners' occupancy rights in the accommodation, or (2) a date that is not more than six months later than the date of closing of the first sale that involved a right to use the accommodation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(7)].

Regular assessments are exempt from execution by a judgment creditor of the association only to the extent necessary for the association to perform essential services, such as paying for utilities and insurance. In determining the appropriateness of an exemption, a court must ensure that only essential services are protected. The exemption does not apply to any consensual pledges, liens, or encumbrances that have been approved by the owners of the association, constituting a quorum, casting a majority of the votes at an association meeting or election, or to any state tax lien, or any lien for labor or materials supplied to the common area [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265.1(b)].

The association must provide notice, by first class mail, to the time-share interest owners of any increase in regular assessments, not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days before the increased assessment becomes due [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265.1(c)].

[2] Special Assessments

A special assessment is levied on the same basis as that prescribed for a regular assessment, except when the special assessment is levied against a time-share interest owner to reimburse the association for costs incurred in bringing the owner into compliance with the governing instruments [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(3); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(6)(C)].

With limited exceptions, special assessments may not be imposed without the vote or written assent of a majority of the voting power of the association residing in members other than the developer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265(a)(6)].

The association must provide notice, by first class mail, to the time-share interest owners of any increase in special assessments, not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days before the increased assessment becomes due [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265.1(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.22

§ 33A.22 Association's Authority to Enforce Time-Share Instruments, Rules, and Regulations

[1] Discipline Short of Forfeiture

If the owner or the owner's guests or persons under his or her control violate the time-share instrument or operating rules and regulations, the association itself may be authorized to impose a monetary penalty, suspend a time-share interest owner's right to use an accommodation or other facility that is part of the time-share plan, or take other appropriate disciplinary action, short of the forfeiture of the time-share interest owner's right, title, and interest plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(c)]. Violations include, but are not limited to, the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(c)(1)-(4)]:

- Failing to vacate an accommodation at the end of the owner's use period.
- Damaging an accommodation or any other real or personal property that is part of the time-share plan.
- Permitting a time-share interest to be subject to a lien (other than the lien of nondelinquent real property taxes or assessments), claim, or charge that could result in the sale of time-share interests of other owners.
- Creating a disturbance that interferes with other owners' use and enjoyment of the time-share plan's facilities.

Before the association can impose disciplinary action, the owner against whom the action is proposed to be taken must be given 30-days' prior written notice and the opportunity to present a written or oral defense to the charges. The association's governing body will decide whether the owner's defense must be oral or written, and the owner must be notified of the decision of the association's governing body before disciplinary action is taken [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(d)].

The association may delegate to the managing entity the power and authority to carry out disciplinary actions duly imposed by the governing body [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(e)].

[2] Forfeiture of Owner's Right, Title, or Interest in Time-Share Plan

An association is not authorized to cause the absolute forfeiture of a time-share interest owner's right, title, or interest in the time-share plan due to the owner's failure to comply with provisions of the time-share instruments or the rules and regulations for the time-share plan except pursuant to either of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(a)]:

- The judgment of a court or the decision of an arbitrator as provided in the time-share instrument; or
- A foreclosure or sale under a power of sale for the failure of a time-share interest owner to pay assessments duly levied by the association.

The owner must be given written notice of the suspension of his or her rights and privileges immediately after the decision to suspend has been made [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11274(b)].

[2] Collecting Delinquent Assessments

Regular and special assessments are delinquent 30 days after they become due unless the time-share instrument provides a longer time period. If an assessment is delinquent, the association may recover the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11265.1(a)]:

- Reasonable costs incurred in collecting the delinquent assessment, including attorneys' fees;
- A late charge not exceeding 10 percent of the assessment or $10, whichever is greater, unless the time-share instrument specifies a smaller amount; and
- Interest on the delinquent assessment, reasonable fees and costs of collection, and reasonable attorneys' fees.

Any procedure provided for in a sales contract implemented on or after July 1, 2005, or in the time-share instruments implemented on or after July 1, 2005, for resolving a dispute or claim between a time-share interest owner and a developer, or any provision in the time-share instruments implemented on or after July 1, 2005, setting forth terms, conditions, and procedures for resolving a dispute of a claim between an association and the developer, must, at a minimum, provide that the dispute or claim resolution process be conducted in accordance with the following statutorily-prescribed rules [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11275(a)]:

- The developer must advance the fees necessary to initiate the dispute or claim resolution process, with the costs and fees, including ongoing costs and fees, if any, to be paid as agreed by the parties. If they cannot agree, then the costs and fees are to be paid as determined by the person or persons presiding at the dispute or claim resolution proceeding or hearing.

- There must be a neutral or impartial person to administer and preside over the claim or dispute resolution process.

- The selection of the person who will administer and preside over the claim or dispute resolution process must be made within a specified period of time, which in no event must be more than 60 days from initiation of the claim or dispute resolution process. The person selected may be challenged for bias.

- The venue of the claim or dispute resolution process must be in the county where the time-share is located unless the parties agree to some other location.

- The claim or dispute resolution process must be commenced in a prompt and timely manner.

- The claim or dispute resolution process must be conducted in accordance with rules and procedures that are reasonable and fair to the parties.

- The claim or dispute resolution process must conclude in a prompt and timely manner, including the issuance of any decision or ruling.

- The person presiding at the claim or dispute resolution process must be authorized to provide all recognized remedies available in law or equity for any cause of action that is the basis of the proceeding or hearing. The parties may authorize the limitation or prohibition of punitive damages.

If the claim or dispute resolution process provides or allows for a judicial remedy in accordance with California law, it will be presumed that the proceeding or hearing satisfies the provisions listed above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11275(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.28

§ 33A.28 Securities Regulation

[1] Federal Requirements

Although a detailed discussion of federal securities regulation is beyond the scope of this chapter, the attorney should be aware that time-share interests may be considered securities and therefore subject to registration under the Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.]. In general, federal securities registration will be required when the time-share project offers some type of investment contract, which is basically a scheme whereby a purchaser invests money in a common enterprise with the expectation that profits will result solely from the efforts of others [see SEC v. W. J. Howey Co. (1946) 328 U.S. 293, 90 L. Ed. 244, 66 S. Ct. 1100 ; see also United States Housing Foundation v. Forman (1975) 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621] . Investment contracts entered into in connection with the purchase of a time-share interest commonly involve a rental pool or similar arrangement under which a managing agent leases the owners' units to third parties for the benefit of the owners. However, most time-share offerings do not include investment contracts, because the time-share interests are purchased primarily for the personal use and enjoyment of the purchasers, and not for profit or investment; thus, federal securities registration is usually not required.

For a detailed discussion of this subject, see Rohan & Reskin, Condominium Law & Practice, Ch. 18, The Securities Law Implications of Condominium Marketing Programs Which Feature a Rental Agency or Rental Pool (Matthew Bender).

[2] State Requirements

A time-share interest in a time-share plan is an interest in subdivided lands or a subdivision. Therefore, the interest is exempt from registration provisions of the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11218], unless an investment contract is sold or offered for sale with, or as part of, the time-share interest [see Corp. Code § 25100(f)]. An investment contract for purposes of the Securities Law is one that contemplates the entrusting of money or other capital to another, with the expectation that a profit or income will be derived from the capital through the efforts of other persons [see Corp. Code § 25109; Oil Lease Service, Inc. v. Stephenson (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 100, 109, 327 P.2d 628] .

In considering whether state securities registration is required, the attorney should apply the risk capital analysis set forth by the California Supreme Court in Silver Hills Country Club v. SobieskiSilver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski [(1960) 55 Cal. 2d 811, 815, 361 P.2d 906] . In that case, memberships in a proposed country club were considered securities because the purchasers were contributing "risk capital" that would be used to construct the facilities of the project, in the hope that the project would be completed and that a future benefit would arise. Note that the benefit was a mere right to use the facilities, rather than the receipt of profit or income. For further discussion of this case, see Marsh & Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws, Ch. 5, Problems Relating to Special Types of Issuers Securities, § 5.19[1][c], [4] (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 33A TIME-SHARE PROJECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.29

§ 33A.29 Taxation

[1] Owners' Association

An owners' association for a time-share project may qualify for tax-exempt status under either or both I.R.C. § 528 and Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t. For a discussion of these statutes, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.46.

[2] Purchasers

Because a time-share estate consists in part of an actual fee interest in the project, an owner of this type of interest must pay a proportionate share of federal income taxes and state and local property taxes, and is entitled to a proportionate share of all applicable deductions. The amount of these taxes and deductions will depend on the type of real property involved [see, e.g. Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.47]. Obviously, purchasers of time-share uses will not pay these taxes because they do not acquire ownership interests in the units or projects.

The owner of a time-share estate in a room or rooms in a time-share project, and the owner's guests, are exempt from any tax levied by the local legislative body on the privilege of occupying a room or rooms, or other living space, in a hotel, inn, tourist home or house, motel, or other lodging [Rev. & Tax. Code § 7280(b); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 7280(a); see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 7280(b)(1)-(3) (definitions)]. However, a city or county may collect a transient occupancy tax from time-share projects that were in existence as of May 1, 1985, provided the projects were then subject to such a tax imposed by a local ordinance duly enacted prior to that date [Rev. & Tax. Code § 7280(d)].

[3] Developers

A detailed discussion of the federal income tax liabilities of developers of time-share projects is beyond the scope of this chapter. However, the attorney/advisor should be aware that the developer of a time-share use project will probably be required to include the entire purchase price of each interest in the year of receipt or accrual, while most expenses will not be deductible until they are paid or incurred [see Treas. Reg. § 1.61-8(b); see also Schlude v. Comm'r (1963) 372 U.S. 128, 136-137, 83 S. Ct. 601, 9 L. Ed. 2d 633] . For a detailed discussion of the income tax aspects of the development and construction of real property, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 421, Tax Factors in Construction and Development (Matthew Bender).

NOTE:

Any person who, to any individual located in California, sells, offers to sell, or attempts to solicit prospective purchasers to purchase a time-share interest, or any person who creates a time-share plan with an accommodation in California, must register the plan with the California Real Estate Commissioner, unless the plan is otherwise exempt [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(a)]. A developer, or any of its agents, may not sell, offer, or dispose of a time-share interest in California unless all necessary registration requirements are provided and approved by the Commissioner, or the sale, offer, or disposition is otherwise permitted by VOTSA, or while an order revoking or suspending a registration is in effect [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(b)]. "Sells," "offers to sell," and "attempts to solicit prospective purchasers" include any written or oral communication that is disseminated or otherwise used in California for the purpose of inducing a resident to travel outside California for a required presentation with the primary intention of causing the person to purchase time-share interests located outside California [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2805.5].

1. Determine whether client's project is exempt from registration requirements by ascertaining [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11225]:

Notwithstanding the exemption, the association or managing entity must provide each purchaser of a time-share interest transferred under these circumstances with a copy of the time-share instruments, the then-current budget, and a written statement of the then-current assessment amounts. The purchaser may rescind the purchaser within seven days after receiving these documents. In addition, immediately before the purchaser's signature line in the contract, there must be a conspicuous notice of the purchaser's seven-day right to cancel. The wording of this right to cancel is required by statute [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11225(b)].

c. If person conveyed, assigned, or transferred more than seven time-share interests from developer in single voluntary or involuntary transaction and subsequently conveys, assigns, or transfers all interests received from developer to single purchaser in a single transaction.

d. If person is offering or disposing of time-share interest to purchaser who has previously acquired another time-share interest from same developer if time-share plan was properly-approved within preceding seven years, and developer complies in all regards with VOTSA's prohibitions on material misrepresentations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11245].

NOTE:

The developer must provide the purchaser with (1) a cancellation period of at least seven days, (2) all the time-share disclosure documents that are required to be provided to purchasers as if the sale occurred in the state or jurisdiction where the time-share property is located, and (3) a statutory disclaimer informing the purchaser that the Department of Real Estate has not examined the offering for, among other things, compliance with California law, and advising the purchaser to consult an attorney or other knowledgeable professional who is familiar with time-share development in the area in which the development is located [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11225(d)].

e. If time-share plan is located outside United States [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11225(e)].

3. Obtain and complete appropriate application form for type of time-share plan to be registered.

NOTE:

Form RE 668, "Time-Share Plan Instructions" [see § 33A.200[2]], provides guidelines for preparing and submitting an application for registering a time-share.

Form RE 668A, "Notice of Intention (Time-Share)" [see § 33A.201], is the application for registering for (1) a single-site time-share plan and (2) specific time-share interests in a multisite time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(z)(1), (2)(A); see also § 33A.13[10]].

Form RE 668B [see § 33A.202] is the application for registering non-specific time-share interests in a multisite time-share plan [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11212(z)(2)(B); see also § 33A.13[10]]. A separate RE 668B must be completed and fee paid for each location of a multisite plan that includes a non-specific time-share interest and that is not currently covered by a California public report.

4. Prepare public report to include:

NOTE:

All applications for registration must include a public report prepared by the developer for issuance by the Real Estate Commissioner. The developer must provide the public report to each purchaser of a time-share interest at the time of purchase. The report must be in writing and dated and must require the purchaser to certify in writing that he or she has received it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234]. As indicated in PP a.-c., below, the information required in the report will vary depending on the nature of the time-share plan involved. Counsel should refer to Form RE 622H, "Time-Share Public Report Preparation," for general information [see § 33A.203[2]], and Form RE 622I, "Time-Share Plan Disclosures (Part I)," for the standard time-share plan disclosures, which must be included in public reports for all time-share plans [see § 33A.204[2]]. Both forms can be downloaded and printed out from the Department of Real Estate's website at http://www.dre.cahwnet.gov/subsform.htm.

Under specified circumstances, such as when the application for public report has been substantially completed but the CC&Rs have not yet been recorded, the Commissioner may issue a conditional public report, which will enable the developer to market the time-share interests covered by the report, but no escrow can close until the final report has been issued [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227; see also § 33A.14[2][b]].

While the registration is pending, the Real Estate Commissioner may also grant a 12-month preliminary public report allowing the developer to begin offering and selling time-share interests in a time-share plan, regardless of whether the accommodations of the time-share plan are located inside or outside California. One additional 12-month period may be granted if the developer is actively and diligently pursuing registration. The preliminary public report will automatically terminate with regard to those time-share interests covered by a final public report that is issued before the scheduled termination date of the preliminary report [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11227(j)].

The Commissioner may, on finding that the subject matter is otherwise adequately covered or the information is unnecessary or inapplicable, waive any requirement listed in PP a.-c., below [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11234(e)].

C. Procedural Guide to Compliance with Vacation Ownership and Time-Share Act of 2004 (VOTSA)

16-33A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33A.141

§ 33A.141 Complying With Other Requirements of VOTSA

NOTE:
For coverage of the requirements governing the responsibility of a time-share plan's association once control of the plan has been transferred from the developer to the association, see §§ 33A.18-33A.22.

1. For single site time-share plans and component sites of multisite time-share plans, maintain required insurance at all times as follows [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253]:

a. Property damage coverage for all real and personal property in time-share plan covering fire and other hazards commonly insured against in amount not less than 80 percent of full replacement value.

NOTE:
In a time-share use offering, the trustee must be a named coinsured, and if for any reason, title to the accommodation is not held in trust, the association must be named as coinsured as the agent for each interest owner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253(a)(1)]. In a time-share estate offering, the association must be named as a coinsured if it has title to the property or as a coinsured as agent for each interest owner if title is held by the owners as tenants in common [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253(a)(2)]. If, after control of the association's governing body has passed to the owners, and the association amends the time-share instruments to reduce the percentage below 80 percent, the failure of the association to maintain 80 percent coverage will not be grounds for denial of a public report [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253(a)(3)].

b. Liability coverage against death, bodily injury, and property damage resulting from use, ownership, or maintenance of accommodations in amounts determined by association, but not less than [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253(b)(1)]:

(1) $500,000 to $1,000,000 for personal injury; and

(2) $100,000 for property damage.

NOTE:
The liability insurance policy must (1) name the class of all time-share interest owners as additional insureds in a policy issued to the association; (2) provide that the insurer waives its right to subrogation under the policy against any time-share interest owner or member of his or her household; and (3) provide that no act or omission by an interest owner, unless acting within the scope of his or her authority on the association's behalf, will void the policy or operate as a condition to recovery under the policy by any other person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11253(b)(2)].

2. Employ managing entity for time-share plan or component site pursuant to written management agreement that complies with statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11267(a)].

3. Arrange for developer to fulfill obligation for expenses associated with unsold inventory held by developer by securing developer's written agreement to either [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11241(a)]:

a. Pay full maintenance fee for each interest it owns; or

b. Subsidize association's budget by covering any shortfall from expenses incurred and assessments collected from other owners.

NOTE:
To assure the fulfillment of the developer's obligation for expenses associated with unsold inventory, the developer is required to furnish a surety bond, cash deposit, letter of credit, or other alternate assurance enforceable by the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11241(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11241(c) (amount of required assurance)].

The assurance must be delivered to the trustee or an escrow depository acceptable to DRE along with an executed copy of the subsidization contract and instructions to the escrow depository signed by the developer an on behalf of the association [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11242.1(a)].

4. If developer undertakes to pay a portion of assessments otherwise payable by each purchaser ("buy down subsidy"), arrange for developer to do all of following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11242(a), (b)]:

a. Enter into contract with association that specifies in detail developer's obligations and methods to be used in valuing goods and services furnished under time-share plan.

NOTE:
The Department of Real Estate will not approve a subsidization program unless provisions are made for the accumulation of reserves for replacement and major maintenance of the time-share property in accordance with accepted property management practices and the transfer of the reserve fund to the association on the program's termination.

b. Furnish association with executed copy of subsidization contract within 10 days after closing of escrow of first sale or lease of time-share interest.

c. Furnish assurance for buy down subsidy obligation.

NOTE:

The assurance must be in an amount that is acceptable to the commissioner, but not more than the aggregate amount by which annual assessments are to be reduced, e.g., the number of interests to be sold in each unit type multiplied by the amount by which the annual assessment for each unit type is to be reduced, multiplied by the number of years in the term of the subsidy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11242(b)].

The assurance must be delivered to the trustee or an escrow depository acceptable to DRE along with an executed copy of the subsidization contract and instructions to the escrow depository signed by the developer on the association's behalf [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11242.1(a)].

5. Facilitate developer's compliance with regard to escrow requirements for funds received from purchasers under following conditions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11243(a), (b); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2807.2 (acceptable escrow depositories)]:

NOTE:

In lieu of establishing an escrow account, the developer may furnish a surety bond, escrow bond, irrevocable letter of credit, or other acceptable form of financial assurance [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11243(c)].

a. During purchaser's seven-day rescission period [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2807]; and

NOTE:

100 percent of funds received during rescission period must be escrowed. They may be disbursed after that period has expired and in accordance with the purchase contract. If the purchaser cancels the contract pursuant to its terms, the funds must be returned to the purchaser [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11243(a)(1), (2)].

b. When property in which time-share interest is located has not been completed.

NOTE:

Excluding any encumbrance against a purchaser's time-share interest securing the purchaser's payment of purchaser money financing, the developer is not entitled to the release of any of the escrowed funds described in PP a. and b., above, until the developer has provided satisfactory evidence approved by the Real Estate Commissioner that arrangements have been made to protect the purchaser's rights [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11244**].

6. Ensure that covenants dedicating accommodations to time-share plan are recorded before closing of first sale of time-share interest in any accommodation in time-share plan [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(a)].

NOTE:

The covenants must incorporate all covenants of the grantor or lessor of the time-share interests and other provisions required by statute [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(a)]. For more complete coverage of the required covenants and provisions, see § 33A.201.

7. Ensure that time share instruments include provisions describing all of following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11251(c)]:

a. Services to be made available to time-share interest owners under time-share plan.

b. Procedures regarding transfer to association of control over time-share property and services comprising time-share plan.

NOTE:

c. Method for preparation and availability to time-share interest owners of budgets, financial statements, and other information related to time-share plan.

d. Methods for employing and terminating employment of managing entity for time-share plan.

g. Method for compensating use periods or monetary compensation for owner of time-share estate if accommodation cannot be made available for period of use to which owner is entitled by schedule or under reservation system because of error by association or managing entity.

h. Method using accommodations for transient accommodations or other income-producing purpose during periods of nonuse by time-share interest owners.

i. Method for time-share interest owners to inspect association books and records.

j. Method for collective decisionmaking and undertaking of action by or in association's name including, when applicable, representation of time-share accommodations in association for time-share in which accommodations are located.

8. If fee or long-term leasehold interest in all or some of accommodations and in appurtenant real and personal property is to be transferred either to association or to corporate trustee under trust agreement, ensure that conveyance is made before escrow closes for first sale of time-share interest in accommodation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11254(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11255 (rules for conveyance to trustee of association)].

NOTE:
The developer may reserve easements in the real property conveyed for purposes that are reasonably related to conducting commercial activities in the time-share property; provided the developer covenants to use the easements in a manner that will minimize any adverse impact on the use and enjoyment of the accommodation by any time-share interest owner occupying it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11254(b)].

1. Determine whether it is necessary to apply to Real Estate Commissioner for approval to amend or supplement registration file due to any material change, which includes, but is not limited to [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(f)(1); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2806]:

NOTE:
The developer must apply to the Commissioner for approval to amend or supplement its registration file due to any material change before the change is implemented, unless the change is beyond the developer's control, in which case the developer must notify the Commissioner in writing as soon as reasonably practicable after the event necessitating the change has occurred [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(f)(1)].

The developer may continue to sell time-share interests in the plan so long as, before closing, he or she provides to each purchaser the previously approved public report along with a written notice describing the change. However, if the change is material and adverse to a purchaser, all of the purchaser's funds will be held in escrow and no closing can occur until the Real Estate Commissioner has approved the amendment. Once the purchaser has received an amended public report, he or she will have an additional seven-day rescission period. If the Commissioner does not approve the amendment, all sales made using the notice of the amendment will be subject to rescission and all funds returned [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(f)(2)].

a. Deletion of accommodation from time-share plan or addition of accommodation not authorized under existing time-share public report for time-share plan.

b. Change in name or form of developer's organization, such as incorporation, dissolution of corporation, or change in corporate or fictitious business name.

c. Change in methods of conveyancing of time-share interests, such as use of real property sales contracts.

d. Change in purchase money handling procedures previously submitted to Department of Real Estate, including but not limited to, change in escrow depository or creation of encumbrance affecting more than one time-share interest in time-share plan.

e. Resignation of trustee or other change in any terms of trust agreement for time-share plan.

f. Existence of either of following conditions with regard to trust corpus:
(1) Insufficient funds in trust to satisfy trust fund provision for payment of debt service, property taxes, assessments, and/or insurance premiums for trust property.

(2) Insufficient non-delinquent installment sales contracts and/or promissory notes to satisfy provision of trust agreement for payment of aggregate principal balance owing under blanket encumbrance against trust properties.

g. Any legal or physical condition rendering accommodation of time-share plan unusable by time-share owners for one year or more.

h. Litigation undertaken by governmental entity or time-share owners' association seeking to prohibit or restrict dedication of accommodation to time-share plan.

i. Annual budget for time-share project that will necessitate regular annual assessment that is more than 20 percent greater than regular annual assessment in certified budget for immediately preceding year.

j. Amendment to any provision of recorded time-share plan or declaration.

k. Change in any aspect of offering for time-share plan that will cause information in current public report for project to be incorrect or misleading.

2. Update public report to reflect changes that are not material and adverse, including addition of component sites, within reasonable time [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(f)(3)].

NOTE:
The developer may continue to sell and close time-share interest pending approval of the updated public report [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11226(f)(3)].

3. If Real Estate Commissioner's approval is required, obtain and complete Form RE 635C Pt. II, "Public Report Amendment/Renewal Application (Time-Share)."

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter discusses membership camping contracts. A membership camping contract is an agreement that (1) is offered or sold in California by a membership camping operator or membership camping broker, (2) evidences a purchaser's right or license to use, for more than 14 days in a year, the campgrounds of a membership camping operator, and (3) includes a membership that provides for this use [Civ. Code § 1812.300(b)]. Contracts that grant similar rights to use camping facilities but that do not meet the above definition are not regulated by California's membership camping contract legislation [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.300-1812.315] and are not considered in this chapter.

The Legal Background defines important terms, presents an overview of applicable disclosure requirements, and discusses membership camping operators and membership camping brokers. The Transaction Guide lists exemptions to the membership camping contract legislation and contains a step-by-step guide to the drafting of the basic contract and related disclosure forms. The Forms section includes a membership camping contract, disclosure forms, and notices of cancellation.

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.30

§ 33B.30 Applicable Laws

[1] Overview

The membership camping contract legislation [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.300-1812.316] regulates the contents of membership camping contracts and the activities of membership camping operators and brokers. It also provides purchasers with the right to cancel these contracts, and imposes other requirements designed to protect purchasers. A few membership camping contract transactions are exempt from the legislation, including an offer, sale, or transfer by any one person of not more than one membership camping contract for any given membership camping operator in any 12-month period [Civ. Code § 1812.305(a); see Civ. Code § 1812.305(b), (c); see also § 33B.120, P 1(b)].

Membership camping contracts are also subject to the following sets of consumer protection laws:

(1) The Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Civ. Code §§ 1801-1812.20; see also § 33B.30[2]];

(2) Statutes prohibiting unfair competition [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17209; see also § 33B.30[4]];

(3) Statutes relating to false advertising [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509; see also § 33B.30[4]]; and

(4) Regulation Z [12 C.F.R. pt. 226], which is the implementing regulation of the federal Truth in Lending Act [Civ. Code § 1803.3(b); see 15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.; see also § 33B.30[3]].

[2] Unruh Act

Membership camping contracts are subject to the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Civ. Code §§ 1801-1812.20]. The Act applies to retail installment contracts for the sale of consumer goods or services. It protects consumers from abusive credit practices by requiring a variety of detailed disclosures. These disclosures, to the extent applicable, have been incorporated into the membership camping contract included in this chapter [see § 33B.300]. For a detailed discussion of the Unruh Act disclosures, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

[3] Truth in Lending Act

All contracts subject to the Unruh Act, including all membership camping contracts [see § 33B.30[2]], must contain the disclosures required by Regulation Z [12 C.F.R. pt. 226], whether or not Regulation Z is applicable to the transaction [Civ. Code § 1803.3(b)]. Regulation Z is the implementing regulation of the federal Truth in Lending Act (TILA) [15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.]. TILA requires disclosure of credit terms and cost. It applies to consumer credit transactions, which are transactions in which the credit extended, or goods purchased, are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [15 U.S.C. § 1602(h); 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)]. For the TILA disclosures applicable to membership camping contracts, see § 33B.300. Comprehensive coverage of TILA and Regulation Z is set forth in Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

[4] False Advertising and Unfair Competition

Membership camping contracts are subject to statutes governing false advertising in general [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509]. Under these statutes, untrue or misleading statements contained in advertising for the sale of goods, services, or real estate are illegal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500]. For further discussion, see Ch. 50, Advertising and Promotion, § 50.11[1][a].

Membership camping contracts are also subject to the statutes governing actions for unfair competition [Civ. Code § 1812.302; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17209]. For these purposes, "unfair competition" means (1) any act prohibited by the above false advertising statutes, (2) any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice, and (3) unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. Any person who engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage in unfair competition may be enjoined [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]. Further, that person may be liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206, 17206.1, 17207]. For further discussion of these statutes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.31

§ 33B.31 Statutory Definitions

[1] Membership Camping Operator

For purposes of the membership camping contract legislation, "membership camping operator" means any enterprise (1) that has as one of its purposes the ownership or operation of campgrounds that include or may include camping sites, and (2) that solicits memberships from purchasers who will be the primary intended users of the facilities and who must pay a fee or make periodic payments (such as annual dues) for the membership [Civ. Code § 1812.300(a); see § 33B.31[2]]. The following are not considered membership camping operators: nonprofit organizations that are tax exempt under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) [see Ch. 13B, Tax-Exempt Status for Nonprofit Entities, § 13B.20] and mobilehome parks [see Civ. Code § 798.4; Health & Safety Code § 18214 (defined); see also Ch. 39, Mobilehome Parks , and Ch. 40, Mobilehomes] that are open to the general public and that contain camping sites rented for a per use fee [Civ. Code § 1812.300(a)].

Membership camping operators need not obtain any type of license or permit to operate as such. However, the construction and operation of a campground [see discussion in § 33B.31[2]] will ordinarily require other state and/or local permits [see Ch. 30B, Zoning, Building, and Environmental Entitlements and Permits].

[2] Other Important Terms

Under the membership camping contract statutes, a "campground" is real property in California that is owned or operated by a membership camping operator and that is designated in whole or in part by the operator as being available for camping or outdoor recreation by purchasers of membership camping contracts [Civ. Code § 1812.300(h)]. A "camping site" is a space designed and promoted as a location for a trailer, tent, tent trailer, pickup camper, or other similar device used for camping [Civ. Code § 1812.300(c)]. A "purchaser" is any individual, corporation, partnership, limited liability company, trust, association, or nongovernmental entity who enters into a membership camping contract and thereby obtains the right to use the campgrounds of a membership camping operator [Civ. Code § 1812.300(f); see Civ. Code § 1812.300(e)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.32

§ 33B.32 Requirements Governing Contract

[1] In General

A membership camping contract must be written in the same language as that principally used in any oral sales presentation. It must be dated, signed by the purchaser, and contain an official notice of cancellation [Civ. Code § 1812.303(a); see § 33B.34]. On the date of purchase, the operator must provide the purchaser with a copy of the contract [Civ. Code § 1812.303(c)].

[2] Membership Camping Disclosures

An operator must make specified disclosures to purchasers concerning the operator's experience, the provisions of the membership camping contract, the operator's existing and planned campgrounds and facilities, and related matters. These disclosures must be in writing in any format that clearly communicates the required information. The operator must make the disclosures before the purchaser signs the contract or gives any money or thing of value for the purchase, and must include them in or attach them to the contract before it is signed. Further, the disclosures must be updated once a year [Civ. Code § 1812.302; see Civ. Code § 1812.302(a)-(k) (required disclosures); see also § 33B.301].

§ 33B.33 Blanket Encumbrances

If a campground is subject to a blanket encumbrance [see Civ. Code § 1812.300(i) ("blanket encumbrance" defined); see also Civ. Code § 1812.309(a) (requirements apply only if campground is offered or made available by operator for first time after January 1, 1991, or campground becomes subject to new or refinanced blanket encumbrance after that date)], one of four conditions relating to the encumbrance must be satisfied before the operator can offer contracts for sale or represent that the campground is available for use by the purchasers of its camping contracts [see Civ. Code § 1812.309(a); see also Civ. Code § 1812.309(b)]. Basically, the complex alternative conditions require the execution of a nondisturbance agreement [see Civ. Code § 1812.300(j) ("nondisturbance agreement" defined)] or an encumbrance trust agreement, or the posting of a surety bond or irrevocable letter of credit, to protect the purchasers and assure the continuance of payments on the blanket encumbrance [see Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(1)-(4)]. For discussion of the conditions, see § 33B.140, P 1.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.34

§ 33B.34 Purchaser's Right of Cancellation

[1] In General

A purchaser may cancel a membership camping contract, without any penalty or obligation, within three business days from the date the contract is executed [Civ. Code § 1812.303(b); see Civ. Code § 1812.303(f) ("business day" defined)]. This cancellation period will be extended if the operator fails to comply with its statutory obligations relating to a cancellation [see Civ. Code § 1812.303(e); see also § 33B.34[2]], or if the purchaser did not inspect at least one of the operator's campgrounds before purchasing the contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.304(a); see also § 33B.34[3]].

A statutory notice of cancellation describing the purchaser's right to cancel and the required cancellation procedure must be attached to or appear in the membership camping contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.303(b); see also Civ. Code § 1812.303(c); § 33B.302]. Further, the operator must inform the purchaser orally of the right to cancel at the time the contract is executed [Civ. Code § 1812.303(c)].

[2] Method of Cancellation

To cancel the contract, the purchaser must mail or deliver any of the following to the operator: a signed and dated copy of the notice of cancellation; a copy of the contract, if it contains the cancellation instructions; any other written notice; or a telegram. With the notice of cancellation, or separately if a telegram is sent, the purchaser must return the original contract, the membership card, and all other evidence of membership [Civ. Code § 1812.303(b)]. Within 20 days after receiving the foregoing materials, the operator must refund to the purchaser any deposit, downpayment, or other contractual payment [Civ. Code § 1812.303(d)].

Notwithstanding the statutory provision giving the purchaser three business days to cancel the contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.303(b); see also § 33B.34[1]], the purchaser has the right to cancel the contract until the operator complies with the cancellation obligations imposed by Civ. Code § 1812.303 [Civ. Code § 1812.303(e)].

[3] Failure to Inspect

If the purchaser has not inspected at least one of the operator's campgrounds prior to the purchase of the contract, the notice of cancellation must contain additional statutory language (1) extending the right of cancellation to midnight of the tenth business day after the date of purchase, and (2) informing the purchaser of the procedure for cancelling the contract [Civ. Code § 1812.304(a)]. The only difference between this procedure and the standard cancellation procedure [see discussion in § 33B.34[2]] concerns the written notice of cancellation the purchaser must give the operator; in this case, the purchaser must use the notice of cancellation or a copy of the contract (if the copy contains the cancellation instructions), and cannot use any other written notice or a telegram [see Civ. Code § 1812.304(a)]. Within 10 days of the cancellation of the contract and the return of the evidence of membership, the operator must return any payment made by the purchaser under the contract or offer to purchase, and any negotiable instrument executed by the purchaser [Civ. Code § 1812.304(b)].

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.35

§ 33B.35 Violations of Statutory Requirements

[1] Purchaser's Remedies

If, due to an error or omission, a membership camping contract does not comply with any of the requirements of Civ. Code §§ 1812.302-1812.304 (governing the contents of the contract and the notice of cancellation), the purchaser's remedies are limited to a right of rescission and refund [Civ. Code § 1812.306(a); but see Civ. Code § 1812.306(b); § 33B.35[2]]. However, this limitation does not apply to any error in, or omission from, a membership camping contract that violates the foregoing statutes and that is a part of a scheme to willfully misstate or omit (1) the information required by those statutes, or (2) the other requirements imposed by the membership camping contract legislation. In any action under the membership camping contract legislation, reasonable attorneys' fees will be awarded to the prevailing party [Civ. Code § 1812.306(a)].

Remedies for violations of the Unruh Act are not subject to the above limitations. Unruh Act remedies are beyond the scope of this chapter, but are discussed in detail in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales (Matthew Bender).

[2] Correction of Errors

Any failure to comply with the requirements of Civil Code Sections 1812.302-1812.304 (governing the contents of the contract and the notice of cancellation) may be corrected within 30 days after the operator's receipt of a written notice from the purchaser, provided the failure was not willful or material [Civ. Code § 1812.306(b)]. The statute does not set forth any requirements regarding the contents of the purchaser's written notice. If the operator corrects the failure within that 30-day period, the purchaser will not have a right of rescission and the operator will not be subject to any penalty. However, the correction cannot increase any monthly payment, the number of payments, or the total amount due, unless the purchaser agrees in writing [Civ. Code § 1812.306(b)].

§ 33B.36 Membership Camping Contract Broker

[1] In General

A membership camping contract broker is a person who, for compensation, resells or offers to resell a membership camping contract to a new purchaser on behalf of a prior purchaser. This definition does not include a membership camping operator or its employees or agents [Civ. Code § 1812.300(k); see § 33B.31[1]].

A broker must provide a new purchaser of a membership camping contract with (1) a written disclosure statement of certain risks associated with the potential purchase [Civ. Code § 1812.314(b); see § 33B.303], and (2) an official notice of cancellation [Civ. Code § 1812.314(c); see Civ. Code § 1812.314(c)(2); § 33B.304]. The notice explains that the purchaser may cancel the contract within 10 business days from the date of purchase [see Civ. Code § 1812.314(c)].

[2] Purchase Money Handling Requirements

If a broker receives money from the owner of a membership camping contract or the prospective purchaser of such a contract in advance of the completion of the resale of the contract, the broker must deposit the money into an escrow account [Civ. Code § 1812.314(a)]. Amounts subject to this requirement specifically include listing fees and fees for services. The deposited money must not be disbursed until the transaction is complete, or until the escrow agent has received written instructions to disburse the funds signed by the broker and the owner of the contract or the prospective purchaser. For these purposes, a transaction is complete when: ownership of the contract has been transferred from the prior purchaser to the new purchaser in the manner required by the terms of the contract; all documents necessary to complete the transfer have been fully executed; and the 10-day time period for the exercise of the purchaser's right to cancel [see § 33B.36[1]] has expired [Civ. Code § 1812.314(a)].

A membership camping operator cannot "withdraw" a campground from use by purchasers of membership camping contracts unless one of the following conditions is applicable or satisfied, as the case may be [Civ. Code § 1812.307]:

(1) Adequate arrangements are made to provide, within a reasonable time, a substitute campground in the same general area that is as desirable as the withdrawn campground for the purposes of camping and outdoor recreation.

(2) The campground is withdrawn from use because, despite good faith efforts by the operator, a person not affiliated with the operator has exercised a superior right to possession, and the operator disclosed the terms and date of the withdrawal in writing to the purchasers at or prior to the time of sale of the contracts [see Civ. Code § 1812.307(b); see also § 33B.183, P 2(b)].

(3) The rights of all purchasers of membership camping contracts who were entitled to use the campground have expired or have been lawfully terminated.

§ 33B.38 Transfer of Interest in Campground

An operator or owner of the underlying fee in a campground must comply with two requirements when selling, leasing, assigning, or otherwise transferring his or her interest in a campground. First, the transfer must be evidenced by an instrument that (1) contains certain information [see Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)(1)-(5); § 33B.305]; (2) is executed by both the transferor and transferee [see Civ. Code § 1812.308(b) (persons who hold blanket encumbrances on a campground are not considered transferees)]; and (3) is recorded in the office of the recorder for the county in which the campground is located [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)]. Second, the owner or operator must mail notice of the transfer to each purchaser within 30 days of the transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)]. If a transfer does not comply with these requirements, the statutory terms and requirements governing these transfers will be presumed to be a part of the transfer and will be deemed to be included in the instrument of transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)]. These transfer restrictions do not apply to a substitution of one campground for another in accordance with Civ. Code § 1812.307(a) [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a); see § 33B.37].

Prospective purchasers of membership camping contracts may be subjected to high-pressured sales tactics and the prospect of paying several thousand dollars for the contract. Consequently, consumers may consult an attorney before entering into such an agreement, or in an attempt to cancel or rescind a signed contract. Before making any recommendations, the attorney should carefully review the contract, all sales solicitations (including literature and the client's accounts of any oral sales presentations), and any available financial statements for the operator. This review will enable the attorney to check for compliance with applicable laws, to evaluate the financial solvency of the operator, to insist on necessary amendments to the preprinted contracts that operators typically use, and to assist the purchaser in exercising his or her right to rescission and refund under the proper circumstances.

C. Procedural Guide to Sales Transaction

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.140

§ 33B.140 Restrictions on Sales Activities

1. If there is a blanket encumbrance on any of operator's campgrounds, advise operator to refrain from offering contracts for sale or representing that campground is available for use by purchasers of operator's camping contracts until one of following conditions has been satisfied:

NOTE:

The requirements discussed in this paragraph apply to a campground that (1) is offered or made available by an operator for the first time after January 1, 1991, or (2) becomes subject to a new or refinanced blanket encumbrance after that date [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)]. A "blanket encumbrance" is any mortgage, trust deed, option to purchase, vendor's lien or interest under a contract or agreement of sale, or other financing lien or encumbrance granted by the operator or affiliate that (1) secures or evidences the obligation to pay money or to sell or convey any campgrounds (or portion of campgrounds) made available to purchasers by the operator, and (2) authorizes, permits, or requires the foreclosure or other disposition of the campground [Civ. Code § 1812.300(i)].

Any operator that does not comply at all times with the requirements discussed in this paragraph is prohibited from offering any membership camping contracts for sale during the period of noncompliance [Civ. Code § 1812.309(b)].

a. Operator obtains nondisturbance agreement from each holder of blanket encumbrance and records agreement(s) [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 1812.300(i) ("blanket encumbrance" defined); see also Civ. Code §§ 1812.300(j), 1812.309(a)(1)(A)-(D) (required contents of agreement)].

b. Operator posts surety bond or irrevocable letter of credit with a trustee in favor of purchasers, and bond or letter of credit guarantees that payments on blanket encumbrance will be made as they become due [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(2)].

NOTE:
The trustee must be either a corporate trustee or an attorney licensed to practice law in California [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(2)].

c. Operator delivers encumbrance trust agreement to a trustee [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(3); see Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(3)(A)-(D) (required contents)].

d. Any financial institution that has made hypothecation loan to operator ("hypothecation lender") [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(4)]:

(1) Possesses a lien on, or security interest in, operator's interest in campground; and

(2) Executes nondisturbance agreement and records it in recorder's office for county in which campground is located [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(4)].

NOTE:
Each person holding an interest in a blanket encumbrance that is superior to the interest held by the hypothecation lender must execute and record an instrument stating that the person will give the hypothecation lender notice of, and at least 30 days to cure, any default under the blanket encumbrance before the person commences any foreclosure action affecting the campground. For these purposes, a "hypothecation loan to a membership camping operator" means a loan or line of credit secured by membership camping contracts receivable arising from the sale of membership camping contracts by the operator, which exceeds in the aggregate all outstanding indebtedness secured by blanket encumbrances superior to the hypothecation lender's interest [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(4)].

A hypothecation lender who obtains or causes a change in title or possession of a campground, by foreclosure or otherwise, and who does not continue to operate the campground on conditions no less favorable to purchasers than existed prior to the change of title or possession, must either (1) offer the title or possession to an association of members to operate the campground, or (2) obtain a commitment from another entity that has obtained title to, or possession of, the campground to undertake the responsibility of operating the campground [Civ. Code § 1812.309(a)(4)].

2. Review any advertising relating to transaction to confirm that it does not violate statutes prohibiting false advertising in general [Civ. Code § 1812.302; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509; see also Ch. 50, Advertising and Promotion, § 50.120].

3. Confirm that operator and other participants in transaction are not performing or proposing to perform an act of unfair competition [see Civ. Code § 1812.302; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17209].

NOTE:
For these purposes, "unfair competition" means (1) any act prohibited by the above false advertising statutes, (2) any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice, and (3) unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509; see also

P 2, above]. Any person who engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage in unfair competition may be enjoined [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]. Further, that person may be liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206, 17206.1, 17207] and may be subject to any other remedies provided under California law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205]. For further discussion of these statutes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

An example of the exercise of a superior right to possession is a lessor's decision to take possession following the expiration of a lease of a campground [Civ. Code § 1812.307(b)].

(1) Operator represented to purchasers that campground would be available for camping or recreation purposes; and

(2) Operator disclosed terms and date of withdrawal in writing to all purchasers at or prior to time of any sale of contract.

c. Rights of all purchasers of contracts who were entitled to use campground have expired or have been lawfully terminated.

3. If operator or owner of underlying fee in campground wishes to sell, lease, assign, or otherwise transfer his or her interest in campground, instruct him or her to take following steps:

NOTE:

If any transfer of the interest of the operator or fee owner violates the following requirements, the terms set forth in Civ. Code § 1812.308 [see (3)(a), below] will be presumed to be a part of the transfer and will be deemed to be included in the instrument of transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)].

For these purposes, persons who hold blanket encumbrances on a campground will not be considered transferees [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)]. Further, the following procedure does not apply to an operator who is substituting a campground in accordance with Civ. Code § 1812.307 [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a); see (2)(a), above].

a. Prepare instrument evidencing transfer and stating that [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)]:

(1) It is intended to protect rights of all purchasers of membership camping contracts.

(2) Its terms may be enforced by any prior or subsequent purchaser, so long as that purchaser is not in default on his or her obligations under contract.

(3) Transferee must fully honor rights of purchasers to occupy and use campground as provided in purchasers' original contracts.

(4) Transferee must fully honor all rights of purchasers to cancel their contracts and receive appropriate refunds.

(5) Transferee's obligations under instrument will continue to exist despite any cancellation or rejection of contract between operator and purchaser arising out of bankruptcy proceedings.

b. Have transferor and transferee execute instrument [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)].

c. Record instrument in office of recorder for county in which campground is located [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)].

d. Have operator or owner mail notice of transfer to each purchaser within 30 days of transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)].

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART IV. FORMS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.300

§ 33B.300 Membership Camping Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a membership camping contract. A membership camping contract is an agreement offered or sold in California by a membership camping operator or membership camping broker under which a purchaser acquires (1) a right or license to use, for more than 14 days in a year, the campgrounds of a membership camping operator, and (2) a membership that provides for the foregoing use [Civ. Code § 1812.300(b)]. If the operator uses a preprinted contract, as is often the case, counsel should compare it with this form to confirm that the standardized agreement complies with all applicable statutory requirements.

This form may be modified to incorporate the operator disclosures set forth in § 33B.301 [see Civ. Code § 1812.302], and the statutory notice of cancellation set forth as § 33B.302 [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.303, 1812.304; see also § 33B.300[1][b]].

[b] Required Contents and Format--Membership Camping Contract Legislation

The contract must be dated, written in the same language as that principally used in any oral sales presentation, and signed by the purchaser. Further, one of two official notices of cancellation must be placed in immediate proximity to the space reserved for the signature of the purchaser. This notice may consist of the complete notice of cancellation [see § 33B.302]. Alternatively, the attorney may include the two-sentence notice of cancellation that has been incorporated into this form. In that case, the complete notice of cancellation set forth in § 33B.302 must be attached to the contract [Civ. Code § 1812.303(a), (b)].

[c] Unruh Act and Federal Regulation Z

Membership camping contracts are subject to the Unruh Act [Civ. Code § 1812.301; see Civ. Code § 1801 et seq. (Unruh Act)]. The Unruh Act applies to retail installment contracts for the sale of consumer goods or services. It imposes requirements governing, among other things, disclosures, assignments, prepayments, finance charges, and refunds of service charges.

A contract subject to the Unruh Act must be in writing [see Civ. Code § 1803.1]. Printed portions of the contract must be in at least 8-point type [Civ. Code § 1803.1]. However, the heading must be in 12-point boldface type and must read "Retail Installment Contract" unless the contract gives the seller a security interest in any goods or realty, in which case it must read "Security Agreement" [Civ. Code § 1803.2(b)]. Further, the contract must contain the Unruh Act disclosures [see Civ. Code §§ 1803.2, 1803.3]. These disclosures are incorporated into this form. For detailed discussion of the disclosures, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.124.

A contract subject to the Unruh Act must also contain the disclosures required by Regulation Z [12 C.F.R. pt. 226], whether or not Regulation Z is applicable to the transaction [Civ. Code § 1803.3(b)]. Regulation Z is the implementing regulation of the federal Truth in Lending Act (TILA) [15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.]. TILA requires disclosure of credit terms and cost. It applies to consumer credit transactions, which are transactions in which the credit extended, or goods purchased, are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [15 U.S.C. § 1602(h); 12 C.F.R. § 226.2(a)]. Only those Regulation Z disclosures that are applicable to a particular transaction must be included [12 C.F.R. § 226.18]. Consequently, this form does not include the Regulation Z disclosures relating to balloon payments and insurance premiums, since it is highly unlikely that these features would be included in the typical membership camping contact. For a contract containing all Regulation Z disclosures, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.225. Those disclosures are discussed in detail in Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.124.

As a general rule, the Unruh Act disclosures may be set forth in terminology required or permitted by the Federal Reserve Board in the implementation of TILA and Regulation Z [Civ. Code §§ 1801.5, 1802.18]. However, while TILA permits the required disclosures to be made either in a separate document or in a clearly segregated portion of the contract, the Unruh Act disclosures must be made terms of the contract document itself, as mentioned above [see Civ. Code §§ 1803.2, 1803.3, 1803.5]. Therefore, as permitted by TILA, this form groups the TILA disclosures together and sets them apart from the Unruh Act disclosures and other terms and conditions of the contract [see 15 U.S.C. § 1637(b)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 226.17(a)(1)]. For a step-by-step guide to the inclusion in a single form of Unruh Act and Regulation Z disclosures, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, §§ 42.123, 45.124, 45.225.

[d] Interstate Commerce and Consumers' Rights

Unless the seller's business does not "affect interstate commerce," a term that is very broadly defined for purposes of the requirements discussed in this paragraph, an official notice of the consumer's rights against subsequent holders of the contract must be included in the agreement [16 C.F.R. § 433.2]. That notice has been included in this form and is discussed in detail in Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.226.

[e] Term of Agreement

Most membership camping contracts offer lifetime memberships or a four- or five-year membership. This form is a lifetime contract. Because most lifetime membership camping contracts are transferable, they will usually provide that the membership rights will terminate at the death of a transferee (such as the second permanent transferee) or, if the contract is not transferred, upon the death of the purchaser's heir [see P 7 of Form].

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

Adherence to Financing Provisions

1. Buyer shall pay to Seller upon demand all actual costs of collection occasioned by failure of Buyer to notify Seller of any change of residence or to communicate with Seller for a period of 45 days after any default in making payments due under this contract. Time and exactitude of each of the payment terms in this Agreement are of the essence. Seller may accept past due payments without modifying the terms of this Agreement and without waiving any further rights Seller may have. The obligations of Buyer shall be joint and several.

Assignment

2. In the event of any assignment of Seller's interest under this contract, the Assignee shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of Seller.

Defaults

3. If Buyer defaults in the payment of any installment when due, or if Buyer fails to perform or observe any of Buyer's agreements under this contract, Seller may at its option, without demand or notice to Buyer, declare the entire amount unpaid under this contract immediately due and payable.

Credit Warranty

4. BUYER WARRANTS THAT THERE HAS BEEN AND WILL BE NO EXTENSION OF CREDIT IN CONNECTION WITH THIS TRANSACTION OTHER THAN THAT REPRESENTED BY THIS CONTRACT AND THAT THERE EXISTS NO PROMISE TO COMPENSATE BUYER FOR REFERRING CUSTOMERS TO SELLER

OR REFERRING SELLER TO PROSPECTIVE CUSTOMERS.

Membership

5. Seller's membership shall be governed by the terms and conditions set forth in this contract and in the Membership Camping Operator Disclosure Statement that is attached to and hereby made a part of this contract. Further, Seller acknowledges that _____[he or she] has read that disclosure statement, and agrees to be bound by the Rules and Regulations [or Member Handbook or similar document] and any amendments thereto.

Indemnification and Notice of Risk

6. Buyer hereby acknowledges that the proper use of Seller's facilities involves some risk of injury to persons and damage to property. Accordingly, Buyer agrees to hold Seller harmless from all loss, liability, claims, and expense incurred by Buyer or Buyer's family and/or guests, resulting from the use by those persons of Seller's properties or facilities; provided, however, that this indemnity shall not apply to injuries or damages caused by Seller's negligence.

Term of Contract

7. The membership rights under this Agreement shall terminate upon the death of Purchaser's heir, or, if Purchaser transfers his or her rights under this Agreement, at the time set forth in the transferability provision of the attached Disclosure Statement.

Right of Cancellation

8. Purchaser shall have the right to cancel this Agreement at any time after payment of the one-time initiation fee by submitting written notice to Operator. A cancellation notice shall not release Purchaser from the obligation to pay any annual dues that became due prior to the date on which Operator received the notice.

Miscellaneous

9. Buyer represents that Buyer is purchasing this membership for the personal enjoyment of Buyer and his or her household and not for resale or profit. Buyer further represents that the membership has not been represented or sold to him or her as an investment opportunity. This membership is merely a contractual license to use any and all campgrounds owned or operated by Seller [in the region(s) specified above]. However, these facilities are subject to change. Therefore, this membership does not constitute an interest in, nor is it secured by, any of the real property or facilities belonging to Seller. Further, this Agreement does not entitle Buyer to participate in Seller's income, distributions, or facilities, to share in any merger, reorganization, liquidation, or dissolution of Seller, or to vote on any matters relating to Seller's business. Finally, Purchaser acknowledges that Seller will retain a security interest in Purchaser's membership rights until all sums owed under this Agreement have been paid in full.

[Attach statutory notice of cancellation (see § 33B.302) unless it is placed in immediate proximity to signature blocks of membership camping contract (see Civ. Code § 1812.303(a)).]

PART IV. FORMS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.301

§ 33B.301 Membership Camping Operator Disclosure Statement [Civ. Code § 1812.302]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a statement containing the written disclosures a membership camping operator must provide to a potential purchaser of a membership camping contract before the purchaser signs the contract or gives any money or thing of value for the purchase [see Civ. Code § 1812.302]. Because any operator disclosure statement must be highly customized, counsel should use this form as a general guide to the format and organization of these statements. For a checklist of the information that must be included in the statement, see § 33B.160.

The disclosures may be provided in any format that clearly communicates the information. The information must be reasonably current, included in or attached to the contract before it is signed, and updated once a year [Civ. Code § 1812.302].

This form sets forth the disclosures as a separate statement to be attached to the contract, so that the membership camping contract need not be reprinted once a year when the disclosures are updated. However, the provisions of this form can be easily incorporated into the basic membership camping contract [see § 33B.300].

recreational facilities in Operator's campgrounds. There is no limitation placed on the total number of days per year that Purchaser can use the above facilities. However, Purchaser cannot stay at one campground for more than 14 days at any one time. Further, Purchaser shall reserve campsites in accordance with the requirements and procedures for the making of reservations set forth in the then-current Rules and Regulations. Purchaser shall also comply with the use restrictions set forth in the Rules and Regulations. No use by Purchaser will be permitted if Purchaser is delinquent in the payments of any amounts owed pursuant to the attached membership camping contract].

5. Operator's Campgrounds. The following is a list of each of the Operator's campgrounds, including a description of existing and proposed significant facilities:

[State location of each campground and include brief description for each campground of the significant facilities then available for use by purchasers and those that are represented to purchasers as being planned, together with a brief description of any significant facilities that are or will be available to nonpurchasers or nonmembers (see Civ. Code § 1812.302(d)).]

[Print following notice in 10-point boldface type:]

6. Ownership of Campgrounds. _____[Briefly describe (1) operator's ownership of, or other right to use, campgrounds, (2) duration and expiration date of any lease, license, franchise, or reciprocal agreement entitling operator to use campgrounds, and (3) any material provisions of any agreements, land use permits, or operating licenses that could materially restrict purchaser's use of campgrounds under terms of purchaser's contract, e.g., Operator is the owner of the campgrounds described in Paragraph 5 of this Statement].

7. Use Restrictions. A copy of the _____ [specify, e.g., Rules and Regulations or Membership Handbook] regulating Purchaser's use of the Operator's campgrounds is attached to this Statement [or summarize rules, restrictions, or covenants regulating purchaser's use of operator's campgrounds]. _____ [State whether and how the foregoing may be changed, e.g., These use restrictions may be amended at any time by Operator. Any amendment to the restrictions shall be binding upon every Purchaser. No amendment shall require the consent or approval of any Purchaser].

8. Payments. As itemized and explained in the attached membership camping contract, Purchaser shall pay _____[briefly describe payments, e.g., a one-time initiation fee of $2,000. Thereafter, for each year covered by the attached membership camping contract, Purchaser shall pay to the order of Operator dues of $1,000 per year. These dues shall be payable annually on or before June 30 of each year. They may be increased annually by an amount not exceeding 6 percent. These annual dues shall be nonrefundable and their application and use shall be in the sole discretion of Operator. Dues shall be waived for a 60-day period commencing with the date of execution of the attached contract, and new Purchasers will receive a prorated statement covering the balance of the first billable period. Failure to pay dues within 30 days of the due date shall result in the suspension of Purchaser's right to occupy Operator's campgrounds, and continued failure to pay dues beyond 90 days of the due date shall be grounds for termination of this membership].

_____ [Specify any further fees, charges, or assessments, e.g., In addition to the above charges, Purchaser shall be charged a daily fee of $3.50 for each guest].

9. Transfer of Contract. _____ [Describe any restraints on transfer of contract, e.g., Purchaser shall not sell, convey, hypothecate, transfer, or encumber less than all of Purchaser's interest under the membership camping contract. Any transfer by Purchaser of less than all of that interest shall be null, void, and of no effect.

No transfer may be made within two years of the date of execution of the contract, except that temporary transfers may be made to family members within that period in the manner specified in the Rules and Regulations, and permanent transfers may be made to any person with Operator's prior written consent, which shall not be unreasonably withheld; provided, however, that the membership is not permanently transferred on more than two occasions. Thus, except following succession, the membership shall terminate upon the death of a second permanent transferee.

The price for any transfer shall not exceed the sum of all dues, use fees, and reasonable costs of transfer. Permanent transfers shall be on forms provided by Operator, and shall not be effective until the transferee has entered into a new membership camping contract with Operator and agreed to accept all current dues, rules, regulations, and privileges.

A reasonable transfer fee, in an amount determined by Operator, shall be charged for any transfer. Operator does not provide resale services].

10. Reservations. Subject to all the terms and conditions contained in the attached membership camping contract and the Rules and Regulations, and as discussed in more detail in the Rules and Regulations, reservations are subject to the following requirements: _____ [specify, e.g.:

a. Reservations may be made not more than 90 days in advance of the desired commencement date.

b. Except as provided below, reservations shall be confirmed on a first-come, first-served basis.

c. Purchaser may cancel a reservation by giving notice at least 72 hours prior to check-in time. However, if Purchaser cancels a reservation, there is no guarantee that he or she will be able to secure another reservation at a different time during the year. Further, if cancellation occurs less than 72 hours prior to check-in time, or if Purchaser fails to use and occupy the reserved camping site and does not cancel the reservation, then Purchaser's next requested reservation shall be given a low priority by being held without confirmation until 10 days before the requested reservation period. Up until that time, any other reservation requests shall be given priority over Purchaser's request on a first-come, first-served basis. This policy is intended to discourage purchasers from cancelling reservations at such a late time that camping sites go unused].

11. Forfeiture. _____ [Briefly describe any grounds for forfeiture of contract, e.g., If Purchaser fails to comply with any of the provisions of the attached membership camping contract, this Statement, or the Rules and Regulations, then Operator may enforce compliance with those provisions in the manner specified in the above documents. Thereafter, if the violation or violations continue, Operator may terminate the membership camping contract by giving written notice of termination to Purchaser without prejudice to any other remedy to which Operator may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under the membership camping contract].

CHAPTER 33B MEMBERSHIP CAMPING CONTRACTS
PART IV. FORMS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.302

§ 33B.302 Notice of Cancellation of Membership Camping Contract [Civ. Code § 1812.303(b)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the statutory notice of cancellation that must accompany or be a part of any membership camping contract. If it is to be a separate document (as is the case with this form), then it must be prepared in duplicate, attached to the contract, and easily detachable. If the notice is included in the contract, then the purchaser must be provided with a carbon copy that may be retained after cancellation. In either case, the notice must be exactly as set forth below, in at least 10-point type, and in the same language as used in the contract [Civ. Code § 1812.303(b)].

On the date of purchase the membership camping operator must provide the purchaser with a copy of the contract and a duplicate of the notice of cancellation. Further, the operator must inform the purchaser orally of the right to cancel at the time the contract is executed [Civ. Code § 1812.303(c)].

The procedure a purchaser must follow to cancel the membership camping contract is described in this form [see Civ. Code § 1812.303(b)]. For a step-by-step guide to that procedure, see § 33B.180.

[b] Cancellation Period

As indicated in this form, the purchaser may cancel the membership camping contract within three business days from the date the contract is executed [Civ. Code § 1812.303; see Civ. Code § 1812.304 (extending this period if purchaser has not inspected the operator's campgrounds); see also § 33B.302[1][c][i]]. For these purposes, "business day" means any calendar day except Sunday, or the following business holidays: New Year's Day, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veteran's Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day [Civ. Code § 1812.303(f)].

[c] Additional Requirements--Failure to Inspect

If the purchaser has not inspected at least one of the operator's campgrounds prior to the purchase of the contract, the notice of cancellation must contain additional statutory language extending the cancellation period to 10 business days after the date of purchase [Civ. Code § 1812.304(a); see § 33B.302[1][b]]. The exact placement of the additional language is not specified by statute. The language has been added to this form, immediately preceding the space the purchaser may use to cancel the transaction.

[d] Statutory Statement in Contract

When the notice of cancellation is a separate document [see § 33B.302[1][a]], the membership camping contract must include a statutory statement describing the purchaser's right to cancel the agreement [Civ. Code § 1812.303; see § 33B.300[1][b]]. For the statutory statement, see § 33B.300.

PART IV. FORMS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.303

§ 33B.303 Membership Camping Contract Broker Disclosure Statement [Civ. Code § 1812.314(b)]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains disclosures that a membership camping contract broker must make to a new purchaser of a membership camping contract upon the resale of the contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.314]. A membership camping contract broker is a person who, for compensation, resells or offers to resell a membership camping contract to a new purchaser on behalf of a prior purchaser. A membership camping contract operator, its employees, and its agents are not considered membership camping contract brokers [Civ. Code § 1812.300(k)].

In addition to this disclosure requirement, the broker must provide the new purchaser with a statutory notice of cancellation [see Civ. Code § 1812.314(c); § 33B.304], and must comply with requirements governing the handling of money received from the new or prior owner of the contract in advance of the completion of the resale [see Civ. Code § 1812.314(a)]. For further discussion of these additional requirements, see § 33B.182.

[b] Disclosure Requirements

A broker must inform a new purchaser in writing of all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.314(b)]:

(1) The risks of purchasing a contract without visiting at least one of the operator's campgrounds.

(2) That the operator may have a valid reason for not transferring the contract to the new purchaser, for example, a default in the payment of contractual sums or annual dues, or a failure by the new purchaser to meet the same credit standards applied to other new purchasers.

(3) That there may have been changes in the rules or regulations concerning the rights and obligations of the operator or its members, including changes with respect to annual dues, fees, assessments, or use restrictions.

(4) That some campgrounds may have been withdrawn.

(5) Any material changes or risks to the purchaser known to the broker.

2. Operator may have a valid reason for not transferring the above membership camping contract to Purchaser. As a general rule, these reasons could include defaults by the prior purchaser under the contract, or a failure by Purchaser to meet the same credit standards applied to other new purchasers.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the statutory notice of cancellation that a membership camping contract broker must provide to a new purchaser of a membership camping contract when the contract is being resold [Civ. Code § 1812.314(c)(1)]. The new purchaser may use this form (or a suitable alternative) to exercise the right to cancel [see § 33B.304[1][b]].

For discussion of other responsibilities of a membership camping contract broker in connection with the resale of a membership camping contract, see § 33B.303[1].

[b] Exercise of Right to Cancel

This form provides that the purchaser may cancel the purchase transaction within 10 business days from the date of purchase by mailing a notice of cancellation and certain other materials to the broker, the operator, and the escrow company [*Civ. The other materials consist of the membership camping contract (if any), any contract for transfer, and the membership card or other evidence of membership [Civ. Code § 1812.314(c)(1)]. The wording of this official form indicates that the broker, operator, and escrow company must each receive every one of the foregoing documents.

[c] Escrow Company

An escrow company that receives this notice from a purchaser must, within 72 hours of its receipt of the notice, notify the membership camping operator of the cancellation. Further, within 10 days of the receipt of the notice and other documents, the escrow company must refund any sums paid by the purchaser of the contract. The escrow company will incur no liability to the seller, purchaser, or broker as a result of its compliance with these statutory requirements [Civ. Code § 1812.314(c)(2)].

PART IV. FORMS

16-33B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33B.305

§ 33B.305 Provisions Protecting Purchasers on Transfer of Interest in Campground [Civ. Code § 1812.308]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form consists of provisions that may be inserted into an instrument evidencing the transfer of an interest in a campground, when the transferor is a membership camping operator or the owner of the underlying fee in the campground. As a general rule, an operator or the owner of the underlying fee in a campground must not sell, lease, assign, or otherwise transfer his or her interest in the campground except by an instrument evidencing the transfer that (1) contains certain provisions [see § 33B.305[1][d]], (2) is executed by both the transferor and the transferee, and (3) is recorded in the office of the recorder for the county in which the campground is located [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)]. Further, notice of the transfer must be mailed to each purchaser within 30 days of the transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)].

Because any type of transfer of the operator's or owner's interest in the campgrounds is subject to this requirement, the entire transfer agreement is not included here. Instead, counsel should insert this form into the appropriate transfer agreement (for example, a real property sales agreement). The form uses the terms "instrument" and "transferee" because they are the ones used in Civ. Code § 1812.308. The attorney should change these terms if the underlying transfer agreement uses alternative language.

[b] Exceptions

Persons who hold blanket encumbrances on a campground are not considered transferees for the purposes of Civ. Code § 1812.308 [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)]. Further, § 1812.308 does not apply when a membership camping operator withdraws a campground from use by purchasers of membership camping contracts and replaces it, within a reasonable time, with a substitute campground in the same general area that is as desirable for the purpose of camping and outdoor recreation [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a); see Civ. Code § 1812.307(a)].

[c] Violations

If any transfer violates these requirements, the terms set forth in Civ. Code § 1812.308 [see § 33B.305[1][d]] will be presumed to be a part of the transfer and will be deemed to be included in the instrument of transfer [Civ. Code § 1812.308(b)].

[d] Required Contents

The instrument evidencing the transfer must state each of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.308(a)]:

(1) That the instrument is intended to protect the rights of all purchasers of membership camping contracts.

(2) That its terms may be enforced by any prior or subsequent purchaser so long as that purchaser is not in default on his or her obligations under the contract.

(3) That the transferee must fully honor the rights of the purchasers to occupy and use the campground as provided in the purchaser's original membership camping contracts.

(4) That the transferee must fully honor all rights of purchasers to cancel their contracts and receive appropriate refunds.

(5) That the obligations of the transferee under the instrument will continue to exist despite any cancellation or rejection of the contracts between the operator and purchaser arising out of bankruptcy proceedings.

[2] FORM

Provisions Protecting Purchasers Upon Transfer of Interest in Campground [Civ. Code § 1812.308]

Protection of Interests of Purchasers

Section _____. This Instrument is intended to protect the rights of every person who has acquired _____ [the right or a license] to use the campground described in Section _____ of this Instrument by purchasing a membership camping contract from _____[name of membership camping operator] (hereafter referred to as "Operator"). The terms of this Instrument may be enforced by any prior or subsequent purchaser of such a membership camping contract so long as that purchaser is not in default on his or her obligations under the contract. Transferee shall fully honor the rights of the purchasers to occupy and use the campground as provided in the purchasers' original membership camping contracts. Further, Transferee shall fully honor all rights of purchasers to cancel their contracts and receive appropriate refunds. Finally, the obligations of Transferee under this Instrument shall continue to exist de spite any cancellation or rejection of the contracts between Operator and the purchasers arising out of bankruptcy proceedings.

This chapter covers the statutory and regulatory requirements governing the formation and sale of interests in stock cooperatives. These requirements are contained in the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.], the Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2790 et seq. (implementing regulations)], and the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.]. For a general discussion of common interest developments under the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.33. For detailed coverage of other common interest developments and common interest subdivisions, see Ch. 33A, Time-Share Projects , Ch. 33D, Planned Developments , and Ch. 34, Condominiums . For a complete discussion of the regulation of subdivided lands and the Subdivision Map Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

This chapter also analyzes the financing, tax, and securities aspects of stock cooperatives. Although stock cooperatives are corporations, this chapter does not discuss the specific laws and regulations applicable to all California corporations. For a general discussion of the planning considerations involved in corporate formation, see Ch. 2, Preincorporation Planning . Nonprofit corporations are covered in Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations . DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.30

§ 33C.30 Stock Cooperative Form of Ownership

[1] In General

A stock cooperative is a corporation formed to provide rental property to its shareholders, who are generally called "tenant-stockholders" [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 2, Types of Cooperatives; Terminology and Definitions (Matthew Bender)]. Unlike the investors in a condominium project [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.30], the tenant-stockholders do not acquire a fee interest in real property. Instead, they obtain ownership of stock, with appurtenant rights of exclusive occupancy of a specific unit and use of common areas of the corporate property [see § 33C.31[3]]. The corporation retains title to the real property [see § 33C.30[2]]. This ownership structure has various financing and property tax consequences to the investor [see §§ 33C.35[1], 33C.39].

The price of a unit is reflected by the number of shares attributed to it at a fixed value per share. If the values of all the units are approximately equal, each tenant-stockholder usually receives the same number of shares. However, when there are variances in the respective values of the units, the tenant-stockholders receive differing numbers of shares in ratio to the respective values of their units. A larger unit, for example, would have more shares allocated to it, and thus a higher price [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 476, Other Developments (Matthew Bender)].

Stock cooperatives can be formed for a variety of uses, including professional offices, garages, or markets. However, most cooperatives are formed to provide housing for their tenant-stockholders. For purposes of federal financing [see § 33C.35[2]], exemption from federal securities laws [see § 33C.40[2]], and exemption from state taxation [see § 33C.38[1]], the stock cooperative must be formed for residential purposes. The forms in this chapter are designed for residential stock cooperatives.

For further discussion of the general nature of stock cooperatives, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 476, Other Developments (Matthew Bender).

[2] Statutory Definition

A stock cooperative is defined by statute as a development in which (1) a corporation is formed or used primarily for the purpose of holding title to improved real property, either in fee simple or for a term of years; and (2) all or substantially all of the shareholders of the corporation receive a right of exclusive occupancy in a portion of the real property [Civ. Code § 1351(m) (Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.2 (Subdivided Lands Act)].

A "limited-equity housing cooperative" is a related type of stock cooperative that meets the public benefit or charitable requirements of Civ. Code § 817 [Civ. Code § 1351(m); Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.4]. For purposes of the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.; see § 33C.31[1]], "stock cooperative" includes limited equity housing cooperatives [Civ. Code § 1351(m)]. However, for purposes of the Subdivided Lands Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.; see § 33C.32[1]], limited equity housing cooperatives are not included within the definition of "stock cooperative" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.2]. Limited equity housing cooperatives are beyond the scope of this chapter and are not separately discussed [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 424, Regulation of Subdivided Land Sales (Matthew Bender).

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.31

§ 33C.31 Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act

[1] In General

The Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.] ("Act") governs the creation and operation of all common interest developments [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.33[1]]. Under the Act, a stock cooperative is created whenever a separate interest (i.e., the exclusive right to occupy a portion of the real property) [see § 33C.31[3]] coupled with an interest in the common area or membership in the association is conveyed, provided that a "declaration" and a final or parcel map, if required [see § 33C.33[2]], are recorded [Civ. Code § 1352].

[2] Declaration

The "declaration" of a stock cooperative is a governing document [see Civ. Code § 1352(j); see also § 33C.34[1]]. It must contain (1) a legal description of the development, (2) a statement that it is a stock cooperative, (3) the name of the association, and (4) restrictions on the use or enjoyment of any portion of the development that are intended to be enforceable equitable servitudes [see § 33C.201]. It may also contain any other matters that the original signatory of the declaration or the owners consider appropriate [Civ. Code § 1353]. The covenants and restrictions set forth are enforceable equitable servitudes, unless unreasonable, and will inure to the benefit of and bind all tenant-stockholders. Unless the declaration states otherwise, the servitudes may be enforced by any tenant-stockholder, by the association, or by both. In any action to enforce the declaration, the prevailing party will be awarded reasonable attorneys' fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1354].

The declaration may be amended pursuant to the governing documents orstatute [see Civ. Code §§ 1355, 1355.5, 1356]. For a discussion of those procedures, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.33[3].

[3] Common Areas and Separate Interests

By virtue of their ownership in the corporation, the tenant-stockholders have two types of interests in a stock cooperative. First, they each have a "separate interest," which in the case of a stock cooperative consists of the exclusive right to occupy a portion of the real property [Civ. Code § 1351(l)(4)]. Both the separate interest and the correlative interest in the stock cooperative corporation, however designated, are interests in real property [Civ. Code § 783.1].

Unless the declaration provides otherwise, if walls, floors, or ceilings are designated as boundaries of a separate interest, the interior surfaces of the perimeter walls, floors, ceilings, windows, doors, and outlets located within the separate interest are part of that separate interest, and any other portions of the walls, floors, or ceilings are part of the common areas [Civ. Code § 1351(l)]. In addition, unless the declaration provides otherwise, there is an easement for ingress, egress, and support, if necessary, appurtenant to each separate interest. The common areas are subject to those easements [Civ. Code § 1361(b)].

Second, the tenant-stockholders have the right to use the "common area" [see Civ. Code § 1351(c)(2)], which consists of the entire development other than the separate interests [Civ. Code § 1351(b)]. An "exclusive use common area" is a portion of the common area that (1) is designated by the declaration for the exclusive use of one or more, but fewer than all, of the tenant-stockholders, and (2) is or will be appurtenant to the separate interests. Unless the declaration provides otherwise, any shutters, awnings, window boxes, doorsteps, stoops, porches, balconies, patios, exterior doors, door frames, related hardware, screens, windows, or other fixtures designed to serve a single separate interest, but located outside the boundaries of the separate interest, are exclusive use common areas allocated exclusively to that separate interest. Notwithstanding any provision of the declaration, internal and external telephone wiring designed to serve a single separate interest, but located outside the boundaries of that interest, are also exclusive use common areas allocated exclusively to that separate interest [Civ. Code § 1351(i)]. The separate interest owner is entitled to reasonable access to the common areas to maintain this wiring, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in the declaration. This access, however is subject to the association's consent, which may not be unreasonably withheld, and to other reasonable conditions the association might impose, including that the association must approve external wiring in the common areas [Civ. Code § 1364(f)].

Unless the declaration provides otherwise, the association must repair, replace, and maintain the common areas, other than exclusive use common areas, while owners of separate interests must maintain their separate interests and appurtenant exclusive use common areas [Civ. Code § 1364(a)].

Any conveyance, judicial sale, or other voluntary or involuntary transfer of a separate interest includes the ownership interest in the corporation. Any conveyance, judicial sale, or other voluntary transfer of the owner's entire interest also includes the owner's membership interest in the association [Civ. Code § 1358(d)]. Exclusive use areas may be transferred independent of any other interest if the declaration authorizes such a transfer and the transfer is made in accordance with the terms set forth in the declaration [Civ. Code § 1358].

The estate in a separate interest or in the common area of a cooperative may be a fee, a life estate, an estate for years, or any combination of these [Civ. Code § 1351(b) (common area), (l), (m) (separate interest)].

[4] Owners' Association

All common interest developments must be managed by an incorporated or unincorporated association, commonly referred to as an "owners' association" [Civ. Code § 1363(a); see Civ. Code § 1351(a) (definition of "association")]. In a stock cooperative, which is formed as a corporate entity, the corporation itself serves as the owners' association. A nonprofit corporation (organized under the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law) [Corp. Code § 7110 et seq.] is generally the preferred and most prevalent type of corporate entity [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.38[1]]. The forms in this chapter provide for the formation of such a corporation.

The association is responsible for (1) maintaining the common areas [Civ. Code § 1364; see discussion in § 33C.31[3]], (2) preparing and distributing financial statements and insurance summaries [Civ. Code §§ 1365, 1365.2.5], and (3) levying regular and special assessments to pay for operating expenses [see Civ. Code § 1366; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums , 34.39[1]]. It has standing to sue or defend in certain litigation regarding the governing documents or damage to the common or separate interests [see Civ. Code § 1368.3; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.38[3]]. For a complete discussion of owners' associations, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.38.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.32

§ 33C.32 Subdivided Lands Act

[1] Applicability to Stock Cooperatives

The Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.], which applies to "subdivisions" and "subdivided lands" [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000, 11004.5], protects prospective purchasers from fraud and misrepresentation by requiring developers to furnish them with a disclosure document referred to as a public report [see § 33C.32[2]]. The definition of "subdivisions" and "subdivided lands" includes any stock cooperative that has or intends to have five or more shareholders, and any legal or beneficial interests in that cooperative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(d); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.2; Civ. Code § 1351(m)]. Italso includes any accompanying memberships or other rights or privileges created in, or in connection with, a stock cooperative by deed, conveyance, lease, sublease, assignment, declaration of restriction, articles of incorporation, bylaws or contracts applicable thereto, and any interests or memberships in any owners' association created in connection with a stock cooperative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(f)]. Therefore, if a stock cooperative does not meet the minimum size requirements, the Subdivided Lands Act will not apply and the following discussion of that Act should be disregarded.

For the sake of consistency, this chapter refers to the developer of a stock cooperative as a "developer," even though "subdivider" is the term used in the Subdivided Lands Act.

For a detailed discussion of the Subdivided Lands Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

[2] Public Report Requirement

No person may sell or lease, or offer to sell or lease, any lot or parcel in a stock cooperative that has or intends to have five or more shareholders, without first obtaining a final public report from the Real Estate Commissioner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.2; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(d)]. The report discloses consumer information about the particular subdivision [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.37[3]]. To obtain the report, the seller or lessor must submit an application for a public report, consisting of a notice of intention and a completed questionnaire [see § 33C.200[2]], to the Real Estate Commissioner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(a)].

Before issuing the final public report, the Commissioner may issue a preliminary public report on request if the Commissioner considers it reasonable to expect that all of the requirements for issuance of a final public report will be satisfied in due course [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2795(a)]. A preliminary public report permits the developer and the developer's agent to solicit and accept reservations to purchase or lease stock cooperative interests, if certain requirements are met [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2795(b); see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[1][i]].

When the public report has been issued, the owner, developer, or agent must give a copy (together with a statutory statement describing common interest developments generally) to the prospective purchaser or lessee prior to the execution of a binding contract or agreement for sale or lease [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1(a)]. The prospective purchaser or lessee must acknowledge receipt of that document [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1(a); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2795.1 (receipt form)].

Special rules apply to public reports obtained for a housing development designed for senior citizens [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.05; see also Ch. 34, § 34.40[2]]. For a discussion of those rules, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[1][b][v].

[3] Implementing Regulations

The extensive implementing regulations for the Act [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2790 et seq.] refer to stock cooperatives with five or more shareholders (along with certain planned developments, community apartment projects, condominium projects, and limited-equity housing cooperatives) as "common interest" subdivisions [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2705, 2792.8; Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(d)]. That term is distinct from the term "common interest development" used in the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [see Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.].

The common interest subdivision regulations contain requirements for governing instruments, owners' associations, and assessments, among other things. Some of these matters are also governed by the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [see § 33C.31[1]]. Therefore, an attorney must determine whether a proposed stock cooperative will be subject to both Acts.

Only those regulations that apply solely to stock cooperatives are discussed in this chapter [see § 33C.32[4],[5]]. The regulations that govern all common interest subdivisions are discussed in Ch. 34, Condominiums § 34.38[7] [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.15]; § 34.38[8] [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.8]; § 34.38[10] [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.17]; § 34.38[11] [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.18]; and § 34.39 [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.16].

[4] Impound of Funds

Interests in stock cooperatives, as well as community apartment projects, limited equity housing cooperatives, and undivided interest subdivisions, must be presold [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.13]. Although "undivided interest" subdivisions provide purchasers with nonexclusive rights to use property, and are therefore completely distinct from stock cooperatives and other common interest developments/subdivisions [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000.1(a) (undivided interest subdivisions); Civ. Code § 1351(c) (common interest developments)], the Real Estate Commissioner tends to group all four types of subdivisions together for regulatory purposes under that term [see Guide to California Subdivision Sales Law (Cal. CEB 1974), Ch. 4, Additional Requirements for Common Interest and Other Special Subdivisions].

All funds received from prospective investors in any of these subdivisions must be deposited and held intact in an escrow depository acceptable to the Commissioner until bona fide offers have been obtained for the purchase of a prescribed percentage of all of the interests offered for sale. If the prescribed percentage of offers have not been obtained within two years from the date of the issuance of thepublic report, or within another period approved by the Commissioner, all funds collected must be promptly returned by the escrow depository to the owners without deduction [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.13; see Guide to California Subdivision Sales Law (Cal. CEB 1974), Ch. 4, Additional Requirements for Common Interest and Other Special Subdivisions].

The prescribed percentage is determined by the Commissioner based on the facts and circumstances of each offering, and ordinarily must be at least 60 percent of the interests being offered for sale. However, the Commissioner may prescribe a lesser percentage if the plan of the offering includes other financial arrangements to lessen the possibility of foreclosure of a nondelinquent interest because of the delinquencies of other owners [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.13].

[5] Blanket Encumbrances

Since fee title to a stock cooperative is in the name of the cooperative corporation (unless the corporation itself holds title only for a term of years) [see Civ. Code § 1351(m)], work done on the property, mortgages, or deeds of trust generally subject the entire project, and therefore all of the tenant-stockholders, to a "blanket encumbrance" [see § 33C.35[1]]. A blanket encumbrance is (1) a trust deed, mortgage, or any other lien or encumbrance (such as a mechanic's lien) that secures or evidences the payment of money, and affects land to be subdivided or two or more lots or units in a subdivision, or (2) an agreement that affects two or more parcels or units in a subdivision by which the owner or developer holds the subdivision under an option, contract to sell, or trust agreement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013].

If the real property to be owned by the stock cooperative corporation will be subject to a blanket encumbrance, a public report will not be issued unless legal or financial arrangements satisfactory to the Real Estate Commissioner have been made to (1) provide assurance that the blanket encumbrance will be paid, and (2) provide assurance that the ownership and possessory rights of a tenant-stockholder will not be adversely affected by foreclosure or acceleration of the blanket encumbrance by or on behalf of the beneficiary, unless the affected stockholder is delinquent in payments allocated by the stock cooperative to debt service on the blanket encumbrance [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.14(a)]. However, this requirement is inapplicable to qualified federally insured or assisted stock cooperatives [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.14(b); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 1715e, 1715l; see also § 33C.35[2]].

Satisfactory arrangements may take the form of an unconditional release clause that provides for clear title upon compliance with the purchase terms [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.1], or other financial arrangements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11013.2; see also § 33C.200[1][i][ii]]. If a unit of the subdivision is exempt from compliance with those financial arrangements, the developer may not sell, or lease for a term exceeding five years, the unit until the prospective purchaser has received a copy of a statutory warning regarding the blanket encumbrance [see Civ. Code § 1133]. For a complete discussion of the prerequisites for sale or lease of a subdivision interest subject to a blanket encumbrance, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.33

§ 33C.33 Subdivision Map Act

[1] New Projects

The Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.] requires each city and county to enact ordinances regulating and controlling the initial design and improvement of "common interest developments" as defined by Civ. Code § 1351 [Gov. Code § 66411; see discussion of Civ. Code § 1351 in Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.33[1]].

However, the Act is specifically inapplicable to the financing or leasing of apartments, offices, stores, or similar space within apartment buildings, industrial buildings, commercial buildings, mobilehome parks, or trailer parks [Gov. Code § 66412(a)]. Because stock cooperatives lease space to their tenant-stockholders, in the case of new projects they are excluded from regulation under the Act. As discussed below, different rules apply to conversions to or from a stock cooperative. However, local ordinances may regulate subdivisions not covered by the Act, subject to certain limitations [see Gov. Code §§ 66411, 66411.1, 66426, 66428].

For the sake of consistency, this chapter refers to the developer of a stock cooperative as a "developer," even though "subdivider" is the term used in the Subdivision Map Act.

For a complete discussion of the Subdivision Map Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation .

[2] Conversions to Stock Cooperative

The conversion of five or more existing dwelling units to a stock cooperative constitutes a "subdivision" for purposes of the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66424; see Civ. Code § 1351(m)]. A tentative and final or parcel map must therefore be prepared and approved under the Act for these conversions [Gov. Code §§ 66426, 66428]. However, stock cooperative conversions are exempt from some requirements of the Subdivision Map Act [see Gov. Code §§ 66427, 66427.2, 66477].

As a prerequisite for local approval of a final map, the tenants of existing dwelling units that are being converted to a stock cooperative must be given proper notice of the conversion and the exclusive right to purchase their unit fora limited time and on specified conditions [Gov. Code § 66427.1; see Ch. 34, Condominiums, §§ 34.135, P 5, 34.145, P

5]. Subject to certain exceptions, the conversion of an existing building to a stock cooperative must be approved by the city or county within 120 days following receipt of a completed application for approval of that conversion [Gov. Code § 66427.2].

For further discussion of conversions, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.43[1].

[3] Conversions From Stock Cooperative to Condominium

Generally, a condominium project [see Civ. Code § 1351(f)] is a "subdivision" for purposes of the Subdivision Map Act [see Gov. Code § 66424], and requires a tentative and final map if it contains five or more condominiums [Gov. Code § 66426; see Civ. Code §§ 783, 1351(f) (condominium defined)]. However, unless a parcel or final map was approved by the legislative body of a local agency, the conversion of a stock cooperative to a condominium will be exempt from the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act when all of the following requirements are met [Gov. Code § 66412(h)]:

- The property was subdivided before January 1, 1982, as evidenced by a recorded deed creating the community apartment project.

- A person renting a unit in a cooperative is entitled to all tenant rights in state or local law, including but not limited to rights respecting first refusal, and displacement and relocation benefits at the time of the conversion.

- Subject to compliance with Civ. Code § 1351(e), which specifies the requirements for the condominium plan, all conveyances and other documents necessary to effectuate the conversion must be executed by the required number of owners in the project as specified in the bylaws or other organizational documents. If the bylaws or other organizational documents do not expressly specify the number of owners necessary to execute the conveyances and other documents, a majority of owners in the project must execute the conveyances or other documents. The executed conveyances and other documents will be binding on and affect the interests of all parties in the project.

- If the property was subdivided after January 1, 1980, (1) a final or parcel map was approved and recorded with all conditions of that map remaining in effect after the conversion, and (2) no more than 49 percent of the units were owned by any one person, including an incorporator or director of the community apartment project, on January 1, 1982.

- The local agency certifies that the requirements above were satisfied if the local agency, by ordinance, provides for that certification.

A stock cooperative cannot be converted into a condominium project unless the required number of owners and trustees or beneficiaries of each recorded deed of trust and mortgagees of each recorded mortgage, as specified in the bylaws or other organizational documents, have voted in favor of the conversion. If the organizational documents do not expressly specify the number of votes necessary to execute the conveyances or other documents, a majority vote of the owners, trustees or beneficiaries, and mortgagees in favor of the conversion is required [Gov. Code § 66452.10].

Subject to the requirement that only those owners, trustees, beneficiaries, and mortgagees who approved the conversion are required to execute the condominium plan [see Civ. Code § 1351(e)], all conveyances and other documents necessary to effectuate the conversion must be executed by the required number of owners in the cooperative as specified in the bylaws or other organizational documents. If the organizational documents are silent on this matter, a majority of owners in the cooperative must execute the necessary documents. Once executed, the conveyances and other documents are binding on and affect the interests of all parties in the cooperative [Gov. Code § 66452.10].

Although a developer or record owner who violates the Subdivision Map Act is generally subject to imprisonment and/or fine not exceeding $10,000 [see Gov. Code § 66499.31], that general rule does not apply to violations of the above approval requirements [Gov. Code § 66452.10].

For further discussion of a conversion to condominiums, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.43[1].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.34

§ 33C.34 Governing Documents

[1] In General

The governing documents of a stock cooperative include the declaration [see § 33C.201], the articles of incorporation [see § 33C.202], the bylaws [see § 33C.203], and any other documents that govern the operation of the development [see Civ. Code § 1351(j); see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.8]. The declaration sets forth the restrictions on the use of the development that are intended to be equitable servitudes [Civ. Code § 1353; see § 33C.31[2]]. The articles set forth the basic organizational aspects of the corporate structure. The bylaws establish procedural guidelines for the operation of the project. The bylaws usually state the form of proprietary lease to be used by the cooperative, the allocation of decision-making power between management and shareholders, the margin of votes required to approve various changes or decisions, the methods of amending the bylaws and establishing house rules, and policies concerning the transfer of stock and subletting of apartments [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 476, Other Developments (Matthew Bender)].

Larger organizations may also append a separate set of house rules to the bylaws of the corporation. These rules generally pertain to the specific use of the apartment structure and common areas, and govern such matters as noise, children, pets, signs, parking, common tenant facilities, and additions to or modification of the apartment structure. They should be tailored to the needs of the project, and a copy should be attached to or made part of the proprietary lease [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 2, Types of Cooperatives; Terminology and Definitions (Matthew Bender); see also Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.208].

The proprietary lease contains various covenants affecting ownership and occupancy in addition to the usual covenants found in a standard rental lease. For example, the lease is connected by covenant to stock ownership in the cooperative, and refers directly to the specific unit leased as inseparable from the ownership interest. Subletting and resale are subject to prior approval of the corporation [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 476, Other Developments (Matthew Bender)].

[2] Statutory Requirements

If a public report is required for a stock cooperative under the Subdivided Lands Act [see § 33C.32[2]], copies of the governing documents must be submitted as part of the application [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.2(a)]. The Commissioner will not issue the report unless "reasonable arrangements" have been or will be made with respect to the purchasers' interests [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.5(e)]. Provisions in the governing instruments will be considered to be "reasonable arrangements" if they conform to minimum standards described in the regulations [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.8(b); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2792.4, 2792.8, 2792.15-2792.29].

No amendment or modification of any provision in any of the governing documents that would materially change a tenant-stockholder's right to ownership, possession, or use of interests, is valid without the prior written consent of the Real Estate Commissioner during the period that the developer or the developer's successor in interest holds or directly controls as many as one-fourth of the votes necessary to effect that change [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.7(a)]. No official meeting of tenant-stockholders nor any written solicitation of them for the purpose of effecting such a material change may take place unless the proposed change is first submitted to the Commissioner for approval [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.7(b)].

[3] For FHA-Financed Cooperatives

Stock cooperatives that are financed by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) [see § 33C.35[2]] must obtain approval of their organizational documents from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). HUD has issued model forms for all of the required organizational documents; if those forms are used (with any modifications or changes required by state law), they will meet HUD-FHA requirements. The legal adequacy of the organizational documents will be determined by the Area HUD counsel. The Director is responsible for their approval from an administrative standpoint [Basic Cooperative Housing Insurance Handbook (HUD Handbook, May 1973), p. 3-1]. For further discussion of the provisions of HUD model forms, see § 33C.141, PP 2, 3.

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.35

§ 33C.35 Financing

[1] Cooperative Real Property

Like condominium projects, stock cooperatives are initially financed by the developer through a loan secured by a blanket deed of trust on the project [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.45[1]]. However, when individual condominium units are sold, each individual purchaser receives a fee interest, and obtains his or her own financing independent of the financial arrangements of the other condominium unit owners. Since an individual's default on mortgage payments to his or her lender will not affect the other unit owners, the only financial interdependence of condominium owners is the pro rata share each must pay for the maintenance and operation costs of the common areas [Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 5, Financing Cooperative Housing (Matthew Bender); see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.45[2]].

In contrast, ownership of stock cooperative real property remains in the cooperative corporation after tenant-stockholders purchase their interests in the cooperative [see Civ. Code § 1351(m); see § 33C.30[2]]. The entire property continues to be covered by a blanket loan and single mortgage or deed of trust [see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, vol. 4, Ch. 24, "Subdivisions and Condominiums," § 24:90]. Each tenant-stockholder initially pays the purchase price of the shares in the cooperative (equivalent to a certain percentage of the apartment's value), and then subsequently pays his or her pro rata share of the mortgage financing for the entire building, together with other operating costs assessed by the Board of Directors, directly to the cooperative by means of monthly "carrying charges" pursuant to a lease [see § 33C.204[1][b][ii]]. Although a tenant-stockholder may be able to finance the share purchase separately through a lending institution in a manner similar to a condominium purchase [Fin. Code § 1236; see § 33C.35[3]], he or she cannot individually vary the basic mortgage financing of the entire building, of which he or she bears a pro rata share. The blanket encumbrance therefore results in financial interdependence of the tenant-stockholders, since default by any tenant in the payment of his or her share to the cooperative forces the other tenant-stockholders to make up this loss in order to protect their investment [see Kaster,"Residential Co-ops and Condominiums Development Projects and Conversions Promoter's Tax Techniques," 38 N.Y.U. Tax. Inst. 13-1, 13-7 (1980)].

[2] FHA Mortgage Insurance

Although most stock cooperatives are financed through a conventional loan obtained from a bank or insurance company, financing through the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) is also available. Pursuant to authority under the National Housing Act ("Act") [12 U.S.C. § 1701 et seq.], the FHA insures loans on stock cooperatives made by approved private lenders. Section 213 of the Act [12 U.S.C. § 1715e] provides insurance on five types of middle income cooperative corporations: (1) management, (2) sales, (3) investor-sponsor, (4) existing project, and (5) supplementary loans to existing Section 213 projects. The principal obligation for which the FHA loan is sought must not exceed a certain amount per unit [see 12 U.S.C. § 1715e(b)]. Section 221 of the Act [12 U.S.C. § 1715l] authorizes mortgage insurance on projects intended for displaced families.

A stock cooperative financed with an FHA-insured loan is formed in the same general manner as other cooperatives. However, the governing documents of the cooperative must be based on FHA model forms and approved by the FHA [see § 33C.34[3]]. Furthermore, the loans involve control of sales, reserves, and operation of the project as a means of protecting the investor and reducing the insurable liability [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 476, Other Developments (Matthew Bender)]. For a complete discussion of FHA financing for stock cooperatives and examples of FHA forms, see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 5, Financing Cooperative Housing (Matthew Bender).

[3] Individual Interests

Prior to 1978, the blanket encumbrance on the cooperative property caused financing problems when an individual interest was resold. If the blanket loan had been proportionately reduced or paid off with respect to the unit being sold, and/or the value of the unit had increased, the purchase price of the stock for that unit would be increased. No financing was available for the stock purchase because the purchaser was not actually acquiring title to the individual unit, and the purchaser therefore was forced to pay a substantial amount of cash to acquire the unit [see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, vol. 4, Ch. 24, "Subdivisions and Condominiums," § 24:90].

The enactment of Fin. Code § 1236 in 1978 was intended to put the resale of a cooperative interest on an equal marketing footing with condominiums and conventional homes by requiring the purchaser of cooperative stock to put down only the same percentage of cash required to purchase a condominium or a conventional home [see Condominium and Cooperative Conversions, (PLI Real Estate Handbook No. 159, 1979)]. A commercial bank (but not a savings and loan association or other lending entity) may now lend on the security of a first security interest on stock or a membership certificate issued to a tenant-stockholder by a completed fee simple cooperative housing corporation, as defined in I.R.C. § 216 [see § 33C.37[4]], and the assignment by way of security of the borrower's interest in the proprietary lease or right of tenancy in property issued by that cooperative housing corporation, provided that [Fin. Code § 1236]:

(1) All of the real property owned by the corporation is located within California;

(2) The term of the loan does not exceed 30 years and is repayable in substantially equal installments (or any variation authorized under a loan executed pursuant to Civ. Code § 1916.5 [see Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans, § 25.15[7]] or Civ. Code § 1916.8) not less often than monthly, with payments commencing no later than 60 days from the date of the loan;

(3) The amount of the loan does not exceed 80 percent of the sound market value of the stock or membership certificates;

(4) The proprietary lease or right of tenancy in the property provides that neither a sublease in excess of one year, nor an amendment or modification to the proprietary lease or right of tenancy in the property may be permitted or created without the lender's prior written consent; and

(5) The proprietary lease or right of tenancy in the property provides that, in the event of the borrower's default under the loan, the lender will have the right (without the prior consent or approval of the cooperative housing corporation) (a) to sell the shares or membership certificates at a public or private sale after at least 30 days prior written notice to the borrower and the cooperative housing corporation at the address of the premises subject to the proprietary lease or right of tenancy in the property, and (b) to assign the proprietary lease or right of tenancy in the property to the purchaser who must agree to cure any defaults thereunder as a condition of assignment.

However, despite this statutory authorization for loans, investors may still be required to provide a large cash down payment in order to purchase shares in a resale. Because the risk of lending to stockholders in stock cooperatives is considered high, few commercial banks have been willing to finance the purchase of shares [see Condominium and Cooperative Conversions, (PLI Real Estate Handbook No. 159, 1979)], or to finance more than a very low amount of the share purchase price [see Guide to California Subdivision Sales Law (Cal. CEB 1974), Ch. 4, "Additional Requirements for Common Interest and Other Special Subdivisions," § 4.10]. Further, the stockholders are still at a disadvantage when they attempt to obtain financing from other types of lenders, such as savings and loans.

Although Fin. Code § 1236 could also be read to allow a commercial bank to finance a tenant-stockholder's purchase of shares in a newly formed cooperative, the use of this type of financing is unlikely. The initial purchase price of the shares would be relatively low, since the major cost (the amounts due for the pro rata share of the mortgage) would be paid through monthly carrying charges [see Condominium and Cooperative Conversions, (PLI Real Estate Handbook No. 159, 1979); see also § 33C.35[1]].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.36

§ 33C.36 Ownership Liabilities

[1] Contractual

The individual tenant-stockholders of a stock cooperative are insulated from third-party claims on contracts with respect to the cooperative property, due to the fact that those contracts are negotiated by and in the name of the cooperative by its agents. Creditors are not adversely affected by this immunity, however, since the building, which is usually a sufficient asset to cover any debt, is owned by the corporation [see Comment, "Community Apartments: Condominium or Stock Cooperative," 50 Calif. L. Rev. 299, 312 (1962)]. The price that tenant-stockholders pay for this shield from liability is that their equities are put at common risk, through a blanket mortgage [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 7, Cooperative Apartment Transfers: Evaluation of Project Offerings and Purchaser Representation (Matthew Bender); see also § 33C.35[1]].

[2] Tort

Since the property is owned by the cooperative corporation, tenant-stockholders are not responsible for negligent maintenance of the plant or actions of the corporation's employees that result in injury to third parties. The tenant-stockholders' only risk is that the corporate insurance might be insufficient to cover the claim and resort might be had to other corporate assets, such as the property itself, or to special assessments [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 8, Contract and Tort Liability of Participating Cooperators (Matthew Bender)]. The lessees are usually liable for tort liability within the confines of an individual apartment and, unless covered under a group insurance policy of the cooperative, should procure individual insurance [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 8, Contract and Tort Liability of Participating Cooperators (Matthew Bender)].

CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.37

§ 33C.37 Income Taxation of Tenant-Stockholders

[1] In General

In recognition of the essential nature of ownership associated with the stock cooperative housing project, Congress has extended many of the federal income tax advantages enjoyed by individual homeowners to the tenant-stockholders of stock cooperatives. The provisions of the California Revenue and Taxation Code generally mirror those federal provisions.

[2] "Cooperative Housing Corporation" Defined

To receive the available tax benefits [see § 33C.37[4]], the stock cooperative must be classified as a "cooperative housing corporation" for tax purposes. For purposes of the Internal Revenue Code and the Revenue and Taxation Code [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201], a "cooperative housing corporation" is a corporation that meets four statutory criteria. First, it must have only one class of stock outstanding [I.R.C. § 216(b)(1)(A)]. However, a special classification of preferred stock in an amount of $100 or less that is issued to a governmental agency solely for the purpose of creating a security device on the mortgage indebtedness is not considered a "class of stock" [Treas. Reg. § 1.216-1(e)(1)]. Second, each shareholder must be entitled, solely because of his or her ownership of stock in the corporation, to occupy an apartment or other living unit owned or leased by the corporation [I.R.C. § 216(b)(1)(B); but see I.R.C. § 216(b)(5), (6) (right to occupancy requirement does not apply to persons acquiring stock by operation of law, entities, and certain original promoters)]. However, he or she need not actually occupy the premises [Treas. Reg. § 1.216-1(e)(2)]. Third, no shareholder may be entitled, either conditionally or unconditionally, to receive any distributions from the corporation that are not from earnings and profits, except on partial or complete liquidation of the corporation [I.R.C. § 216(b)(1)(C)]. Fourth, 80 percent or more of the gross income of the corporation from the year in which it becomes liable for real estate taxes or mortgage payments must come from the tenant-stockholders [I.R.C. § 216(b)(1)(D)].

[3] "Tenant-Stockholder" Defined

For tax years beginning after 1986, individuals, trusts, estates, partnerships, associations, companies, and corporations are all eligible for treatment as tenant-stockholders [I.R.C. § 216(b)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201; see I.R.C. § 7701(a)(1)]. Prior to 1987, only individuals could be tenant-stockholders [see former I.R.C. § 216(b)(2)].

To qualify for the deductions [see § 33C.37[4]], the tenant-stockholder's stock must be fully paid-up, at a price that bears a reasonable relationship to the portion of the value of the cooperative's equity in the apartment building that is attributable to the apartment that the tenant-stockholder is entitled to occupy[I.R.C. § 216(b)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201].

[4] Interest and Real Estate Tax Deduction

A tenant-stockholder may deduct amounts paid or accrued to the cooperative, to the extent that those amounts represent his or her proportionate share of:

(1) Real estate taxes allowable as a deduction to, and paid or incurred with the tenant-stockholder's taxable year by, the cooperative on the residential buildings or land on which the residential buildings are located [I.R.C. § 216(a)(1); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201; see I.R.C. § 164].

(2) Interest allowable as a deduction to, and paid or incurred within the tenant-stockholder's taxable year by, the cooperative on indebtedness incurred to acquire, construct, alter, or maintain the residential buildings or to acquire the land [I.R.C. § 216(a)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201; see I.R.C. § 163].

(3) Depreciation allowable to the cooperative, if the tenant-stockholder uses the right of tenancy in a trade or business or for the production of income. The amount of this deduction for depreciation must not exceed the adjusted basis of the tenant-stockholder's stock as of the close of the taxable year in which the deduction was incurred. Any excess depreciation deduction may be carried forward indefinitely [I.R.C. § 216(c); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201].

The tenant-stockholder may not deduct any amounts paid or accrued to the cooperative that are allocable to amounts that are chargeable to the cooperative's capital account [I.R.C. § 216(d)].

The tenant-stockholder's "proportionate share" of interest and real estate taxes normally is calculated by multiplying the corporate taxes and interest by the stock owned by the tenant-stockholder and dividing that result by the total outstanding stock of the cooperative [I.R.C. § 216(a), (b)(3); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201]. However, if the cooperative elects to separately charge each dwelling unit with a share of the cooperative's real estate taxes and/or interest, and those allocations reasonably reflect the cost to the cooperative of the taxes or interest attributable to each unit (and the unit's share of the common areas), then "proportionate share" means the shares determined in accordance with those allocations [I.R.C. § 216(b)(3)]. In other words, the tenant-stockholders may deduct the separately-allocated amounts.

The cooperative's accountant usually issues a statement to each tenant-stockholder that indicates the interest and tax deduction amounts for that person, who is then eligible to take the itemized deductions. This "pass-through" of corporate deductions puts tenant-stockholders on a par with other homeowners, who are entitled to deduct their own mortgage interest (for a first or second residence) and real estate taxes from personal income [see I.R.C. §§ 163, 164].

If the cooperative project leases, rather than owns, the land and the existing building, the tenant-stockholders cannot deduct any real estate taxes [Rev. Rul. 62-177, 1962-2 C.B. 89]. However, if the cooperative constructs the buildings on leased lands, the tenant-stockholders may deduct the taxes attributable to the building, even if the improvements are to become the property of the fee owners at the end of the lease term [Rev. Rul. 62-178, 1962-2 C.B. 91].

[5] Depreciation Deduction

A tenant-stockholder who uses his or her cooperative unit in trade or business or for the production of income may take a depreciation deduction for the stock allocated to that unit pursuant to I.R.C. § 167(a) [I.R.C. § 216(c); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201]. The amount of the depreciation deduction must not exceed the adjusted basis of the stock as of the close of the taxable year of the tenant-stockholder in which the deduction was incurred [I.R.C. § 216(c)(2)(A)]. However, disallowed amounts may be carried forward to the succeeding taxable year [I.R.C. § 216(c)(2)(B)]. For further discussion of a tenant-stockholder's computation of depreciation, see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 14, The Tax Consequences of Tenant-Stockholder Status (Matthew Bender).

[6] Nonrecognition of Gain on Sale of Cooperative Stock

A tenant-stockholder who sells his or her cooperative stock qualifies for the tax exemption on gain realized on the sale of a principal residence, which generally applies to sales and exchanges occurring after May 6, 1997, provided that, during the five-year period ending on the date the stock is sold, the house or apartment the tenant-stockholder was entitled to occupy as a stockholder was used as his or her principal residence for periods aggregating two years or more [I.R.C. § 121(d)(4); see generally I.R.C. § 121]. For more further discussion of this exemption as applied to stock cooperatives, see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 14, Tax Consequences of Tenant-Stockholder Status (Matthew Bender).

[7] Losses

Despite the similar tax treatment generally accorded tenant-stockholders and homeowners, as discussed above, a tenant-stockholder is not entitled to the tax benefits that other homeowners enjoy with respect to losses. If the housing project is destroyed and not subject to insurance compensation, the taxpayer would not be entitled to deduct the value of the securities as a "casualty loss," even if the property leased were used in the trade or business [see I.R.C. § 165(c)(3); Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201; see also Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, Ch. 4, Deductions: Taxes & Losses (Matthew Bender)]. The tenant's investment is in the stock, rather than the rental property [see Peake v. Commissioner (1951) 10 T.C.M. 577] . However, some deduction would probably be allowed under the "worthless securities" rule [see I.R.C. § 165(g); Rev. & Tax.Code § 17201; see also Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, Ch. 34, Capital Transactions (Matthew Bender)].

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.38

§ 33C.38 Income Taxation of Cooperative Corporation

[1] State Law

For purposes of state taxation, a "homeowners' association" will be treated as a tax-exempt organization if it meets certain criteria [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t]. A cooperative housing corporation is one of the entities included within the term "homeowners' association" [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(d); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(e) ("cooperative housing corporation" includes certain limited-equity housing cooperatives)]. To receive tax-exempt status, the cooperative must satisfy the following requirements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(a)]:

- It must be organized and operated to provide for the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care of residential association property;

- Sixty percent or more of its gross income for the taxable year must consist solely of amounts received as membership dues, fees, and assessments from tenant-stockholders or owners of residential units, residences, or lots;

- Ninety percent or more of the expenditures of the organization for the taxable year must be for the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care of association property;

- No part of the net earnings may inure (other than by providing management, maintenance, and care of association property or by a rebate of excess membership dues, fees, or assessments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; and

- Amounts received as membership dues, fees, and assessments not expended for association purposes during the taxable year must be transferred to and held in trust to provide for the management, maintenance, and care of association property and common areas.

"Association property" is property held by the organization, property held in common by members of the organization, and property within the organization privately held by the members of the organization [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(b)].

Only the "exempt function income" of a qualifying homeowners' association is exempt from tax. That term is defined as amounts received as membership fees, dues, and assessments from tenant-stockholders or owners of residential units, residences, or lots [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(c)(2)]. All "homeowners' association taxable income" is subject to tax at the corporate rate [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(c); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23501, 23151]. That term is defined as the association's gross income, excluding its "exempt function income," less all allowable deductions that are directly connected with the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(c)(1)]. A $100 exclusion is allowed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23701t(c)(1); see California Taxation, Ch. 53, Exempt Organizations (Matthew Bender)].

[2] Federal Law

Under federal law, stock cooperatives are not considered to be tax-exempt organizations [see California Taxation, Ch. 53, Exempt Organizations (Matthew Bender)]. In contrast, the owners' association of a condominium project is specifically exempt [see I.R.C. § 528; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.46[1]]. Exempt status is not generally important, however, due to the fact that few stock cooperatives consisting entirely of units leased by tenant-stockholders have taxable income. Tenant-stockholders generally are not assessed for more than projected operating costs. However, taxable income may result if assessments exceed actual expenses, or if cash reserves exceed deductible expenses. For example, cooperatives whose mortgages are insured by the FHA must set up reserves for contingent expenses [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 15, Taxing the Cooperative Housing Corporation (Matthew Bender)].

If a stock cooperative has any taxable income, it will be taxed at the usual corporate rates [see I.R.C. §§ 11(b), 1381; Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23151, 23501]. For a discussion of the federal taxation of stock cooperatives, see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 15, Taxing the Cooperative Housing Corporation (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the state taxation of corporations generally, see California Taxation, Ch. 50, Structure and Imposition of Bank and Corporate Tax (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.39

§ 33C.39 Property Taxation

While real property taxes on a condominium are separately assessed and constitute a lien only on each individual condominium unit [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.3; see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.47], cooperatives are operated and taxed as a single parcel of property. A default by any tenant in payment of his or her proportionate share of the real property taxes, like a default in the payment of his or her proportionate share of the blanket mortgage [see § 33C.35[1]], requires the other tenants to make up the deficiency in order to protect their investment [see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, Ch. 24, "Subdivisions and Condominiums," § 24:90].

However, the assessor will be required to assess separately the individualinterests in a stock cooperative on receiving a written request that includes (1) a certification that the shareholders have been notified of the separate assessment and that it was approved by the corporation in the manner provided in the articles and bylaws, and (2) a copy of a recorded floor plan of the improvements and a survey plot map showing the location of the improvements [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.7(a), (b), (c)(1), (2)]. In addition, a separate valuation to divide an existing residential structure cannot be made until a subdivision final map or parcel map has been recorded [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.7(c)(3); see Gov. Code §§ 66434, 66445]. If the parcel map requirement is waived, the assessor will not assign any parcel numbers or prepare a separate assessment unless the applicant provides a copy of the local government finding on the waiver [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.7(c)(3)]. The interest assessed is the value of the right of exclusive occupancy that is transferable only concurrently with the transfer of the shares of stock in the corporation held by the person having the right of occupancy, together with an interest in appurtenant common areas [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.7(b)]. The separate assessments become effective on the next lien date that is at least 60 days after the receipt of the request, and continues for all fiscal years thereafter [Rev. & Tax. Code § 2188.7(a)].

For further discussion of separate assessments, see Miller & Starr, Current Law of California Real Estate, Ch. 24, "Subdivisions and Condominiums," § 24:90 (1985 Supp).

DIVISION II: REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS
CHAPTER 33C STOCK COOPERATIVES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.40

§ 33C.40 Securities Regulation of Stock Cooperatives

[1] In General

Generally, the offer and sale of stock in a corporation is subject to federal and state securities laws designed to protect potential investors. The federal securities laws [15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq. (Securities Act of 1933); 15 U.S.C. § 78a et seq. (Securities Act of 1934)] are designed to insure that prospective investors receive complete disclosure of material facts; the California Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.] is designed to ensure that the offering and sale to prospective purchasers is fair, just, and equitable. The sale of shares in a stock cooperative would seem to merit regulation under those laws, as promoters of the project may perpetrate fraud on the prospective purchasers by presubscription self-dealing, understating the amount of monthly charges to be paid by tenants, or coercing tenants to purchase during a conversion of an apartment to a cooperative, among other things [see Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 3A, Cooperative Housing Corporations and the Federal Securities Laws (Matthew Bender)]. Nonetheless, the offer and sale of shares in stock cooperatives are exempt from regulation under both federal and state securities laws.

[2] Federal Securities Law

The United States Supreme Court has held that shares of stock sold by a nonprofit housing cooperative do not constitute "securities" under the federal securities laws [United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman (1975) 421 U.S. 837, 851, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621] . The shares considered by the Court had none of the characteristics that in the commercial world fall within the ordinary concept of a security, such as the right to receive dividends contingent on an apportionment of profits. Further, the shares did not fall under the definition of "investment contracts" defined by the Securities Acts as a scheme involving an investment of money in a common enterprise with the expectation that profits will result solely from the efforts of others [see SEC v. W.J. Howey Co. (1946) 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244] . As is generally the case, the sole purpose of investing in the stock cooperative under consideration was to obtain a place to live, and investors did not anticipate the financial returns traditionally associated with securities. Finally, none of the following activities and characteristics were found to constitute sources of income or profit that would bring a housing cooperative within the scope of the federal securities laws: (1) tax deductions of rental money that was applied to interest on the mortgage; (2) rent that was substantially below the going rental charges for comparable housing; and (3) the possibility of using net rental income from on-site commercial facilities, professional offices, parking spaces, and community washing machines to reduce tenants' rents [United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman (1975) 421 U.S. 837, 851, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621] .

Similarly, shares in privately-owned and operated cooperative corporations do not constitute securities or investment contracts within the federal securities laws if (1) the shares are tied to lease of an apartment, cannot be transferred to a nontenant, are limited in number to each tenant by the offering plan, and are allocated in proportion to the size and location of the apartment leased; and (2) the tenant-stockholder's profit motive in purchasing the shares, if any, was purely incidental [Grenader v. Spitz (2d Cir. 1976) 537 F.2d 612, 617-619] .

In addition, real estate brokers licensed under California law need not be registered pursuant to Section 15a of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. § 78o] in order to sell shares in cooperative housing corporations [17 C.F.R. § 240.15a-2].

[3] State Securities Law

Any security offered or sold in California must be qualified unless it is exempt from qualification [Corp. Code § 25110]. A security consisting of an interest in either (1) real property that is "subdivided lands" or a "subdivision" [see Corp. Code § 25021; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000, 11004.5 (defined)] or (2) a "real estate development" [see Corp. Code § 25015 (defined)] is exempt fromqualification [Corp. Code § 25100(f)]. A tenant-stockholder's interest in a stock cooperative, whether evidenced by a share of stock, a membership certificate, or otherwise, is deemed to be an interest in a common interest development and a real estate development for purposes of that exemption [Civ. Code § 1351(m); see Corp. Code § 25100(f)].

Brokers who engage in transactions involving shares in stock cooperatives do not need to be certified as "broker-dealers" pursuant to Corp. Code § 25210. "Broker-dealer" does not include a broker licensed by the Real Estate Commissioner when engaged in transactions in securities that are exempt from the California Corporate Securities Law by Corp. Code § 25100(f) [Corp. Code § 25004(a)(6)].

1. Should project be developed in phases?

NOTE:
For a discussion of the various reasons for phased development, and the specific formation requirements that apply to phased developments, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.44.

2. Is stock cooperative eligible for Federal Housing Administration (FHA) mortgage insurance?

NOTE:
Application for FHA financing is made through a lending institution approved by the Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD) as a mortgagee. A cooperative project financed with an FHA-insured loan is subject to certain FHA control over the project [see § 33C.35[2]], and must base its governing documents on FHA model forms [see § 33C.34[3]; see also § 33C.142, P 2].

a. Is project designed as middle-income housing cooperative, with its principal obligation below statutory ceiling [see 12 U.S.C. § 1715e]?

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.121

§ 33C.121 Applicability of State and Federal Law

1. For purposes of Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1351 et seq.], will proposed project:

a. Be considered a "common interest development" and "stock cooperative" subject to the Act [see Civ. Code § 1351(m); see also § 33C.30[2]]?
(1) Will corporation be formed or used primarily for purpose of holding title to improved real property, either in fee simple or for term of years?

(2) Will all or substantially all shareholders of corporation receive right of exclusive occupancy in portion of real property?

b. Be exempt from certain requirements of Act because [Civ. Code § 1373; see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.33[2]]:

NOTE:
The inapplicable requirements pertain to [Civ. Code § 1373]: the amendment of the declaration [see Civ. Code § 1356]; financial statements prepared by the owners' association [see Civ. Code §§ 1365, 1365.2.5]; the duties of the board of directors [see Civ. Code § 1365.5]; the imposition or collection of assessments, penalties, or fees [see Civ. Code §§ 1366(b), 1366.1]; the sale or transfer of title to a separate interest in the development [see Civ.Code § 1368]; the distribution of certain project documents to prospective purchasers [see Civ. Code §§ 1363(b), 1368]; and the procedure for obtaining association approval of physical changes to an owner's separate interest or the common area [see Civ. Code § 1378].

(1) Property is expressly zoned as an industrial or commercial development; and

(2) Project will be limited in use to industrial or commercial purposes?

NOTE:
Although stock cooperatives can be formed for nonresidential uses, including professional offices, garages, or markets, most are formed to provide housing for their tenant-stockholders. The forms in this chapter are designed for residential stock cooperatives.

2. Will cooperative have five or more shareholders and therefore be subject to Subdivided Lands Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(d); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.]?

NOTE:
A cooperative that is subject to the Subdivided Lands Act must comply with public report and various other disclosure requirements [see § 33C.142*].

3. Is cooperative required to file any subdivision maps pursuant to Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.] and applicable local subdivision ordinances?

a. Is stock cooperative new project?

NOTE:
New stock cooperatives are generally exempt from the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66412(a); see § 33C.33[1]*].

b. Is stock cooperative being converted from five or more existing dwelling units?

NOTE:
The conversion of five or more existing dwelling units to a stock cooperative is subject to the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66424; see § 33C.33[2]*].

c. Is stock cooperative being converted to condominiums?

NOTE:
Although condominiums projects are generally subject to the Subdivision Map Act [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.36[1]], certain conversions from stock cooperatives are exempt from the requirements of the Act [see § 33C.33[3]].

4. Is project subject to additional regulation under any of following?

NOTE:
For a discussion of these laws, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.121, PP 4-9.

a. Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act [15 U.S.C. § 1701 et seq.].

b. National Environmental Protection Act of 1969 (NEPA) [42 U.S.C. § 4321 et seq.].

c. California Environmental Quality Act of 1970 (CEQA) [Pub. Res. Code § 21000 et seq.].

d. California Coastal Act of 1976 [Pub. Res. Code § 30000 et seq.].

NOTE:

A stock cooperative conversion subject to the provisions of the Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.; see § 33C.121, P 3], requires preparation and approval of a tentative and final map [Gov. Code § 66426]. In addition, local ordinances may regulate subdivisions not covered by the Act [see Gov. Code §§ 66411, 66411.1, 66426, 66428].

For general coverage of the requirements for preparing, processing, and recording subdivision maps under the Act, see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation . For a discussion of the special requirements applicable to condominium projects under the Act (which are for the most part equally applicable to stock cooperative conversions), see Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.141*. A discussion of conversion requirements is set forth in Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.145*.

Finally, for coverage of requirements that apply when a final map has been approved for a stock cooperative project and the subdivider or subsequent owner of the project wishes to lease a unit in the project [see Gov. Code § 66459], see Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.166*.

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.141

§ 33C.141 Drafting Governing Documents

NOTE:

The following guide assumes that the cooperative is subject to the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act and the Subdivided Lands Act [see § 33C.121, PP 1, 2].

The "governing documents" are the declaration and any other documents that govern the operation of a common interest development, such as articles of incorporation, bylaws, and operating rules of the association [Civ. Code § 1351(j); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.8]. The governing documents of every common interest subdivision must contain specified provisions [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.8; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2792.15-2792.29]. For a discussion of those provisions, see Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.202[1][d][ii]*.

The Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act [Civ. Code § 1350 et seq.] requires the articles of incorporation of any common interest development association filed with the Secretary of State on or after January 1, 1995, to include an additional statement that (1) identifies the corporation as an association formed to manage a common interest development under the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act; (2) gives the business or corporate office of the association, if any; and, if the office is not on the development site, states the nine-digit ZIP Code, front street, and nearest cross street for the physical location of the development; and (3) gives the name and address of the association's managing agent [Civ. Code § 1363.5(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11502].

1. If conventional financing is used, draft all of following:

NOTE:

Although most stock cooperatives are financed through a conventional loan obtained from a bank or insurance company, financing through the Federal Housing Administration

(FHA) is also available [see § 33C.35[1] et seq.]. For the procedures applicable to projects using FHA financing, see § 33C.141, P 2.

a. Articles of incorporation [see § 33C.202[1]].

NOTE:

Stock cooperatives are generally formed pursuant to the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 7110 et seq.]. For a general discussion of articles drafted pursuant to that law, see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations*, § 13.20*.

Corporate existence begins on the filing of the articles with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 7120(c)].

b. Bylaws [see § 33C.203[1]].

NOTE:

For a general discussion of bylaws drafted pursuant to the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 7110 et seq.], see Ch. 13, Nonprofit Corporations*, § 13.212*.

c. Proprietary lease [see § 33C.204[1]].

(1) Include standard provisions for residential lease.

NOTE:

For an example of a standard residential lease for an apartment in a multi-unit complex, see Ch. 34B, Residential Leases*, § 34B.200*.

(2) Include following provisions peculiar to lease for apartment in stock cooperative:

(a) Provision regarding carrying charges [see § 33C.204, P 2].

NOTE:

These periodic charges, used in lieu of a standard fixed-rent provision, cover a tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of the cooperative's mortgage, tax, maintenance, and operating expenses that are assessed by the Board of Directors each year [see § 33C.204[1][b][ii]].

(b) Provision regarding late charges and liens [see § 33C.204, P 3].

NOTE:

The lessor may recover late charges, interest, and costs of collection for delinquent assessments [Civ. Code § 1366]. The delinquent amount, plus those additional charges, will constitute a lien on the tenant-stockholder's interest in the cooperative when a notice of delinquent assessment is filed [Civ. Code §§ 1367, 1367.1; see § 33C.204[1][b][ii]].

(c) Provision regarding repairs [see § 33C.204, P 8].

NOTE:

The lessor is responsible for maintaining the common areas, and the lessee is responsible for maintaining separate interests and exclusive use common areas [Civ. Code § 1364; see § 33C.204[1][b][iv]]. For discussion ofthe responsibility of the association to repair and maintain the common areas [see Civ. Code § 1364], see Ch. 34, Condominiums § 34.202[1][e][ii].

(d) Provisions regarding subletting and assignment [see § 33C.204, PP 16, 17].

NOTE:

The lessee's right to sublet or assign a unit in a stock cooperative is generally made subject to approval by the Board of Directors, in order to ensure that new tenants are financially able to assume cooperative obligations. However, in order for a commercial bank to finance a lessee's purchase of stock in the cooperative, the lease must provide (1) that any sublease exceeding one year will be subject to the prior written consent of the lender, and (2) that if the lessee defaults on such a loan, the lender may sell the shares and assign the lease without the prior consent of the cooperative [Fin. Code § 1236; see § 33C.204[1][b][vii]].

(e) Notice of termination of tenancy or disciplinary action [see § 33C.204, P 19].

NOTE:

In a stock cooperative organized as a nonprofit mutual benefit corporation, a tenant-stockholder's right of tenancy, and related rights as a member of the stock cooperative, may be terminated only in good faith and in a fair and reasonable manner [Corp. Code § 7341(a); see § 33C.203[1][d]]. Further, disciplinary actions imposed for a member's failure to comply with the governing instruments require the same notice provisions [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2792.26].

(f) Provisions regarding tenant-stockholder's rights and duties on termination for breach [see § 33C.204, P 20].

NOTE:

The tenant-stockholder should receive the value of his or her interest in the cooperative, less liabilities owed to the cooperative as a result of the breach.

d. Subscription agreement, if one will be used.

NOTE:

Subscription agreements are often used in the formation of stock cooperatives, particularly when the stock and appurtenant right of tenancy are offered to individuals with no prior ties to the developer. They are mandatory for cooperatives formed with FHA financing [see § 33C.141, P 2(e)]. For a general discussion of subscription agreements, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations*, § 2.32*. For examples of subscription agreements, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations*, §§ 2.210-2.212*.

e. Management agreement, if project will be professionally managed.

NOTE:

For an example of a management agreement designed for a condominium project, which is substantially similar to that used for a stock cooperative, see Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.207*.

f. If desired, rules and regulations for project.

NOTE:

For an example of rules and regulations designed for a condominium association, which are substantially similar to those used for a stock cooperative, see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.208.

2. If FHA financing is used [see § 33C.35[2]], draft all of following:

NOTE:

All cooperative corporations using FHA financing, prior to solicitation of tenant-stockholders, must obtain HUD/FHA approval of the following organizational documents: articles, bylaws, regulatory agreements, information bulletins, subscription agreements, and occupancy agreements. Approval may be obtained by using FHA model forms that have been modified only as necessary to conform to state or local law or conditions peculiar to a specific project. The Area HUD Counsel determines the legal adequacy of the organizational documents, and the HUD/FHA Director is responsible for their approval from the administrative standpoint [HUD Handbook No. 4550.1, Basic Cooperative Housing Insurance Handbook 3-1 (May 1973)].

A complete list and examples of FHA model forms are set forth in Rohan & Reskin, Cooperative Housing Law and Practice, Ch. 5, Financing Cooperative Housing, § 5.02[1] (Matthew Bender).

a. Information bulletin [FHA Form No. 3241].

NOTE:

The information bulletin is not a formal legal document, but must be furnished to all prospective tenant-stockholders of the cooperative. It must accurately describe the proposed cooperative and the method in which it is being organized [HUD Handbook No. 4550.1, Basic Cooperative Housing Insurance Handbook 3-2 (May 1973)].

b. Articles of incorporation.

NOTE:

If a regulatory agreement is used [see § 33C.141*, P 2(f)], FHA Form No. 3234-B is applicable. Otherwise, FHA Form No. 3235 should be used.

c. Bylaws [FHA Form No. 3245].

d. Occupancy agreement.

NOTE:

If the cooperative is composed of one mortgage parcel, FHA Form No. 3237 should be used. Otherwise, FHA Form No. 3237-B is applicable.

e. Subscription agreement [FHA Form No. 3232; see § 33C.141, P 1(d)].

f. Regulatory agreement, if used [FHA Form No. 3225].

NOTE:

The FHA Commissioner may control the project by means of a regulatory agreement or preferred stock. However, the FHA prefers control to be based on a contract (i.e., regulatory agreement), unless some valid reason exists for the use of preferred stock [HUD Handbook No. 4550.1, Basic Cooperative Housing Insurance Handbook 3-6 (May 1973)].

g. Management agreement, if project will be professionally managed [FHA Form No. 3238].

3. If FHA financing is used, submit following to local HUD office for approval:

a. Typed copies of model forms [see § 33C.141, P 2].

b. Marked-up drafts of model forms, including:

NOTE:
These drafts are used to expedite HUD/FHA examination of the organizational documents. Any change in the model forms that would have an adverse effect on HUD/FHA policies requires the prior approval of the Office of Underwriting Standards. This approval will be given only after submission of the proposed documents with the HUD/FHA Director's recommendations [HUD Handbook No. 4550.1, Basic Cooperative Housing Insurance Handbook 3-1 (May 1973)].

(1) Changes indicated by deletions and interlineations.

(2) Brief statement of the reason for each change and citation of state law, if relevant.

4. Prior to conveyance of separate interest coupled with interest in common area or membership in association, draft and record [Civ. Code § 1352]:

NOTE:
In a stock cooperative, a "separate interest" is the exclusive right to occupy a portion of the real property, conveyed pursuant to a proprietary lease [see Civ. Code § 1352(l)(4); see also § 33C.31[3]].

a. Declaration [see § 33C.201[1]].

NOTE:
The declaration must contain certain provisions [Civ. Code § 1353(a)], and may contain any other matters that the signatories consider appropriate [Civ. Code § 1353(b)].

b. Final or parcel map, if required by Subdivision Map Act [Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.; see § 33C.121, P 3].

c. Condominium plan, if any.

NOTE:
A condominium plan is required only if a stock cooperative is being converted to a condominium project [see Civ. Code § 1351(e); see also Ch. 34, Condominiums*, § 34.33[4]*].

PART IV. FORMS

16-33C California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 33C.200

§ 33C.200 Combined Notice of Intention Questionnaire and Application for Public Report for Stock Cooperative Project [DRE Form 658; Rev. 9/99]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the official Department of Real Estate (DRE) application for a public report for a stock cooperative project. It may also be used for a limited-equity housing cooperative [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11003.4, 11004.5(e)]. It consists of the following three parts: (1) Part I--Applicant Instructions, (2) Part II--Index/Quantitative Deficiency Notice, and (3) Part III--Questionnaire. These individual parts are discussed in § 33C.200[1][c][i]-[iii].

This form should be used only for stock cooperatives. The Real Estate Commissioner requires a different application form for "standard" subdivisions [see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation]; out-of-state subdivisions [see Ch. 30, Subdivision Regulation]; time-share projects [see Ch. 33A, Time-Share Projects, § 33A.200]; and condominium projects, planned developments, and community apartment projects [see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[2]].

[b] Public Report Requirement

A person may not sell, lease, or offer any lots or parcels in a "subdivision" for sale or lease in California without first obtaining a public report from the Real Estate Commissioner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.2; see § 33C.32[2]]. A "subdivision" includes a stock cooperative, and any legal or beneficial interests therein, that has or intends to have five or more shareholders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5(d)]. This public report requirement does not apply to nonbinding expressions of intent to purchase or lease that a developer or agent, either by ordinance or as a condition to the approval of a tentative or parcel map, is required to obtain from the tenants of units that are proposed to be converted to a stock cooperative project [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.7; see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[1][b][iii]].

Special public report requirements apply to projects that will be developed in phases [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2798; see Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[1][b][iv]], or that will be senior citizen housing developments [see Civ. Code § 51.3(b)(4); Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.05; see also Ch. 34, Condominiums, § 34.200[1][b][v]].
