- The person that procured issuance of the tangible document warrants to all subsequent persons entitled under the tangible document that the warrantor was a person entitled under the electronic document when the warrantor surrendered control of the electronic document to the issuer.

[c] Control of Electronic Document

A person has control of an electronic warehouse receipt if a system employed for evidencing the transfer of interests in the electronic document reliably establishes that person as the person to whom the electronic document was issued or transferred [Com. Code § 7106(a)]. A system meets that requirement, and a person is deemed to have control of an electronic warehouse receipt, if the document is created, stored, and assigned in such a manner that all of the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 7106(b)]:

- A single authoritative copy of the document exists which is unique and identifiable.
- The authoritative copy identifies the person asserting control as either the person to whom the document was issued or, if the authoritative copy indicates that the document has been transferred, the person to whom the document was most recently transferred.

- The authoritative copy is communicated to and maintained by the person asserting control or that person's designated custodian.
- The authoritative copy is unalterable, except as otherwise allowed by the conditions stated below.
- Copies or amendments that add or change an identified assignee of the authoritative copy can be made only with the consent of the person asserting control.
- Each copy of the authoritative copy and any copy of a copy is readily identifiable as a copy that is not the authoritative copy.
- Any amendment of the authoritative copy is readily identifiable as authorized or unauthorized.

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Warehouse Storage

§ 54A.22 Warehouse's Obligations

[1] Duties Imposed Regardless of Improper Receipt or Conduct of Warehouse

The obligations imposed by Division 7 on the issuer of a warehouse receipt apply even if one (or more) of the following conditions apply [Com. Code § 7401]:

- The document does not comply with the requirements of Division 7 or of any other statute, rule, or regulation regarding its issuance, form, or content.
- The issuer violated laws regulating the conduct of its business.
- The goods covered by the document were owned by the bailee when the document was issued.
- The person issuing the document was not a warehouse but the document purports to be a warehouse receipt.

[2] Duty of Care in Storage of Goods

[a] Reasonable Care

The general duty of a depositary is to use at least ordinary care for the preservation of the goods deposited [Civ. Code § 1852]. However, a warehouse is liable for damages for loss of or injury to the goods caused by the warehouse's failure to exercise care with regard to the goods that a reasonably careful person would exercise under similar circumstances. Unless otherwise agreed, the warehouse is not liable for damages that could not have been avoided by the exercise of that care [Com. Code § 7204(a); see Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. NNRAir cargo Serv. (USA), Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1111, 1115 (carrier that did not store goods for profit was not warehouse and therefore was not liable under Com. Code § 7204(a) for theft from storage facility)].

[b] Limitation of Damages

Damages may be limited by a term in the warehouse receipt or storage agreement limiting the amount of liability in case of loss or damage beyond which the warehouse is not liable. Such a limitation is not effective with respect to the warehouse's liability for conversion to its own use. On request of the bailor in a record [Com. Code § 7102(a)(10) (definition of "record")] at the time of signing the storage agreement or within a reasonable time after receipt of the warehouse receipt, the warehouse's liability may be increased on part or all of the goods covered by the storage agreement or the warehouse receipt. In this event, increased rates may be charged based on an increased valuation of the goods [Com. Code § 7204(b)].

[3] Obligation to Segregate Stored Goods

Unless the warehouse receipt provides otherwise, a warehouse must keep separate the goods covered by each receipt, so as to permit at all times identification and delivery of those goods. However, different lots of fungible goods may be commingled [Com. Code § 7207(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(18) (definition of "fungible goods")]. If different lots of fungible goods are commingled, the goods are owned in common by the persons entitled to them, and the warehouse is severally liable to each owner for that owner's share. If, because of overissued receipts, a mass of fungible goods is insufficient to meet all receipts that the warehouse has issued against it, the persons entitled include all holders to which overissued receipts have been duly negotiated [Com. Code § 7207(b)].

[4] Obligation of Delivery

[a] Demand Required

Unless the warehouse can establish a ground to excuse delivery [see [b], below], the warehouse is bound to deliver the goods to a person entitled under a warehouse receipt, on that person's demand [see Civ. Code § 1823 (depository is not bound to deliver without demand)], if two conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 7403(a)]. First, the person claiming goods covered by the warehouse receipt must discharge the warehouse's lien if the warehouse so requests or if the warehouse is prohibited by law from delivering the goods until the charges are paid [Com. Code § 7403(b)]. Second, unless the person claiming the goods is a person against whom the warehouse receipt does not confer a right under Com. Code § 7503(a) [see § 54A.24[3]], the person claiming under the warehouse receipt must surrender possession or control of any outstanding negotiable document covering the goods, for cancellation or indication of partial deliveries. In addition, the warehouse must cancel the document or conspicuously indicate in the document the partial delivery, otherwise the warehouse is liable to any person to whom the document is duly negotiated [Com. Code § 7403(c)].

[b] Delivery Obligation Excused

The warehouse is not required to deliver the goods to a person entitled under a warehouse receipt to the extent that the warehouse establishes any of the following [Com. Code § 7403(a)(1)-(3),(6),(7)]:

- Delivery of the goods to a person whose receipt was rightful as against the claimant.
- Damage to, or delay, loss, or destruction of, the goods for which the warehouse is not liable.
- Previous sale or other disposition of the goods in lawful enforcement of a lien or on the warehouse's lawful termination of storage.
- Release, satisfaction, or any other personal defense against the claimant.
- Any other lawful excuse.

If the warehouse in good faith has received goods and delivered or otherwise disposed of the goods according to the terms of a warehouse receipt (or other document of title) or pursuant to Division 7, then the warehouse is not liable for the goods even if the person from whom the warehouse received the goods did not have authority to procure the document or to dispose of the goods; nor is the warehouse liable if the person to whom the warehouse delivered the goods did not have authority to receive the goods [Com. Code § 7404].

If more than one person claims title to or possession of the goods, the warehouse is excused from delivery until the warehouse has a reasonable time to ascertain the validity of the adverse claims or to commence an action for interpleader. The warehouse may assert an interpleader either in defending an action for nondelivery of the goods or by original action [Com. Code § 7603].

[c] Delivery When Receipt Is Lost, Stolen, or Destroyed

If a warehouse receipt is lost, stolen, or destroyed, a court may order delivery of the goods or issuance of a substitute document, and the warehouse may, without liability to any person, comply with the order. If the warehouse receipt was negotiable, a court may not order delivery of the goods or issuance of a substitute document without the claimant's posting security, unless the court finds that any person who may suffer loss as a result of nonsurrender of possession or control of the document is adequately protected against the loss. If the warehouse receipt was nonnegotiable, the court may require security. The court may also order payment of the warehouse's reasonable costs and attorney's fees in any action [Com. Code § 7601(a)].

A warehouse that, without a court order, delivers goods to a person claiming under a missing negotiable warehouse receipt is liable to any person injured by that wrongful delivery. If the delivery is not in good faith, the warehouse is liable for conversion. Delivery in good faith is not conversion if the claimant posts security with the warehouse in an amount at least double the value of the goods at the time of posting, to indemnify any person injured by the delivery who files a notice of claim within one year after the delivery [Com. Code § 7601(b)].

[d] Delivery After Termination Notice

A warehouse, by giving due notice, may require removal of the goods from the warehouse at the termination of the period of storage [see § 54A.23]. If the goods are not removed before the date specified in the notice, the warehouse may sell them or otherwise dispose of them [Com. Code § 7206(a)-(c)]. However, the warehouse must deliver the goods to any person entitled to them under Division 7 on due demand made at any time before the sale or other disposition of the goods [Com. Code § 7206(d)].

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Warehouse Storage

§ 54A.23 Termination of Storage

[1] At End of Storage Period

A warehouse, by giving notice to the person on whose account the goods are held and to any other person known to claim an interest in the goods, may require payment of any charges and removal of the goods from the warehouse at the termination of the period of storage fixed by the warehouse receipt [but see [2], below]. If the goods are not removed before the date specified in the notice, the warehouse may sell them pursuant to Com. Code § 7210 (procedure for sale to discharge warehouse's lien, discussed in § 54A.24) [Com. Code § 7206(a)].

[2] When No Specified Termination Date

If a period of storage is not fixed in the warehouse receipt, then the warehouse's notice [see [1], above] may require payment of any charges and removal of the goods from the warehouse within a stated period not less than 30 days after the warehouse gives notice [Com. Code § 7206(a); see Civ. Code § 1854 (reasonable notice is required)], unless the goods are about to deteriorate or decline significantly in value [see [3], below]. Obviously, then, a storage agreement should specify the storage period, the period required for notice of termination of the agreement by either party, and suitable provisions for automatic renewal if appropriate. Even when the agreement specifies the duration of the storage period, the agreement may be terminated by the bailor on payment of all sums that would become due to the warehouse if the agreement were to continue to the end of the stated period [see Civ. Code § 1855].

If the goods are not removed before the date specified in the notice, the warehouse may sell them pursuant to Com. Code § 7210 (procedure for sale to discharge warehouse's lien, discussed in § 54A.24) [Com. Code § 7206(a)].

[3] Deteriorating Goods

If a warehouse believes in good faith that goods are about to deteriorate or decline in value to less than the amount of the warehouse's lien within the time normally required for due notice before a sale or other disposition of the goods [see Com. Code §§ 7206(a), 7210; [1], [2], above], the warehouse may specify in the notice of termination any reasonable shorter time for removal of the goods and, if the goods are not removed, may sell them at public sale held not less than one week after a single advertisement or posting [Com. Code § 7206(b)].

[4] Hazardous Goods

If, as a result of a quality or condition of the goods of which the warehouse did not have notice at the time of deposit, the goods are a hazard to other property, the warehouse facilities, or other persons, then the warehouse may sell the goods at public or private sale without advertisement or posting, on reasonable notification to all persons known to claim an interest in the goods. If the warehouse, after a reasonable effort, is unable to sell the goods, it may dispose of them in any lawful manner and does not incur liability by reason of that disposition [Com. Code § 7206(c)].

[5] Delivery After Demand

The warehouse must deliver the goods to any person entitled to them under Division 7 on due demand made at any time before a sale or other disposition under Com. Code § 7206 [Com. Code § 7206(d)]. The warehouse may satisfy its lien [see § 54A.24[1]] from the proceeds of the sale or disposition, and must hold any balance for delivery on the demand of any person to whom the warehouse would have been bound to deliver the goods [Com. Code § 7206(e)].

DIVISION III: COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Warehouse Storage

§ 54A.24 Warehouse's Lien for Storage Charges

[1] Scope of Lien

A warehouse has a lien against the bailor on the goods covered by a warehouse receipt or storage agreement, or on the proceeds of the goods in the warehouse's possession, for charges for storage or transportation, including demurrage and terminal charges, insurance, labor, or other charges, present or future, in relation to the goods, and for expenses necessary for preservation of the goods or reasonably incurred in their sale pursuant to law [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

If the person on whose account the goods are held is liable for similar charges or expenses in relation to other goods (whenever deposited), and if it is stated in the warehouse receipt or storage agreement that a lien is claimed for charges and expenses in relation to other goods, then the warehouse also has a lien against the goods covered by the warehouse receipt or storage agreement, or on the proceeds of the goods in the warehouse's possession, for those charges and expenses, whether or not the other goods have been delivered by the warehouse [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

However, as against a person to whom a negotiable warehouse receipt is duly negotiated, a warehouse's lien is limited to charges in an amount or at a rate specified in the warehouse receipt or, if no charges are so specified, the lien is limited to a reasonable charge for storage of the specific goods covered by the receipt after the date of the receipt [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

If the proceeds of a lien sale [see [5], below] exceed the amount necessary to discharge the lien, then the warehouse must hold the excess amount for delivery on demand to any person to whom the warehouse would have been bound to deliver the goods [Com. Code § 7210(f)].

[2] Reservation of Security Interest

A warehouse may reserve a security interest against the bailor for the maximum amount specified on the receipt for charges other than those specified in Com. Code § 7209(a), such as for money advanced and interest [Com. Code § 7209(a); but see Civ. Code § 1856 (lien of depositary for hire covers advances made at bailor's request)]. The security interest is governed by Division 9 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 7209(a); see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.; see also Ch. 42, Secured Transactions].

[3] Persons Affected by Lien

A warehouse's lien for charges and expenses under Com. Code § 7209(a) [see [1], above] or a security interest under Com. Code § 7209(b) [see [2], above] is also effective against any person who entrusted the bailor with possession of the goods so that a pledge of the goods by the bailor to a good faith purchaser for value would have been valid. However, the lien or security interest is not effective against a person who, before issuance of a document of title, had a legal interest or a perfected security interest in the goods and did not do either of the following [Com. Code § 7209(c); see Com. Code § 7503(a)] (warehouse receipt confers no right in goods against person who, before issuance of receipt, had legal interest or perfected security interest in goods and did not do either of the acts listed below):

- Acquiesce in the procurement of any document by the bailor or the bailor's nominee; or
- Deliver or entrust the goods or any document of title covering the goods to the bailor or the bailor's nominee with either:
 - Actual or apparent authority to ship, store, or sell;
 - Power to obtain delivery under Com. Code § 7403 [see § 54A.22[4]]; or
 - Power of disposition under any statute or rule of law [see, e.g., Com. Code §§ 2403, 9320, 9321(c), 10304(b), 10305(b)].

A warehouse's lien on household goods for charges and expenses in relation to the goods under Com. Code § 7209(a) [see [1], above] is also effective against all persons if the depositor was the legal possessor of the goods at the time of deposit. "Household goods" means furniture, furnishings, or personal effects used by the depositor in a dwelling [Com. Code § 7209(d)].

[4] Loss of Lien

A warehouse loses its lien on any goods that it voluntarily delivers or unjustifiably refuses to deliver [Com. Code § 7209(e)].

[5] Enforcement of Lien

[a] Commercial Goods

A warehouse's lien on goods stored by a merchant in the course of business may be enforced by public or private sale of the goods, in bulk or in packages, at any time or place and on any terms that are commercially reasonable, after notification to all persons known to claim an interest in the goods. Notification may be made by mail, personal service, or verifiable electronic mail. The notification must include a statement of the amount due, the nature of the proposed sale, and the time and place of any public sale [Com. Code § 7210(a); see Com. Code § 1202(d),(f) (what is "notification")].

The fact that a better price could have been obtained by a sale at a different time or in a method different from that selected by the warehouse is not of itself sufficient to establish that the sale was not made in a commercially reasonable manner. The warehouse sells in a commercially reasonable manner if the warehouse sells the goods in the usual manner in any recognized market for the goods, sells at the price current in that market at the time of the sale, or otherwise sells in conformity with commercially reasonable practices among dealers in the type of goods sold. A sale of more goods than apparently necessary to be offered to ensure satisfaction of the obligation is not commercially reasonable, except in cases covered by the preceding sentence [Com. Code § 7210(a)].

In lieu of the foregoing procedure, the warehouse may follow the procedure, described in [b], below, for enforcing a lien against noncommercial goods [Com. Code § 7210(h)].

For a procedural guide to enforcement of a warehouse's lien, see § 54A.130.

[b] Noncommercial Goods

A warehouse may enforce its lien by selling noncommercial goods (that is, goods other than goods stored by a merchant in the course of business) only if specific requirements are met regarding notice to interested persons and advertisement of the sale [see Com. Code § 7210(b)]. For a procedural guide setting out those requirements, see § 54A.130.

A warehouse is liable for damages caused by failure to comply with the requirements for sale under Com. Code § 7210 and, in case of willful violation, is liable for conversion [Com. Code § 7210(i)]. However, a good faith purchaser of goods sold to enforce a warehouse's lien takes the goods free of any rights of persons against whom the lien was valid, whether or not the warehouse complied with Com. Code § 7210 [Com. Code § 7210(e)].

[c] Effect of Payment Before Sale

Before any sale pursuant to Com. Code § 7210, any person claiming a right in the goods may pay the amount necessary to discharge the lien plus the reasonable expenses incurred in complying with Com. Code § 7210. In that event, the goods may not be sold but must be retained by the warehouse subject to the terms of the warehouse receipt and Division 7 [Com. Code § 7210(c)].

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

C. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.30

§ 54A.30 California Self-Service Storage Facility Act

[1] Application of Act

Self-service storage facilities in California are subject to the California Self-Service Storage Facility Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21700 et seq. (effective January 1, 1982)]. The Act generally applies to all self-service storage facilities [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see also [2], below], and to any kind of personal property stored in a self-service storage facility; that is, movable property not affixed to land, including goods, merchandise, furniture, and household items [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(e)]. The Act applies broadly to any written agreement concerning the use or occupancy of space in a self-service storage facility including agreements or leases that establish or modify the terms, conditions, rules, or other provisions concerning that use or occupancy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(d)]. The Act also applies to the storage of individual storage containers provided to occupants who have exclusive use of the container for the purpose of storing and removing personal property, whether or not the individual storage containers are transported in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1 (transportation for fee by self-service storage facility's owner or operator of individual storage containers to and from facility without household goods carrier permit); see also § 54A.114]. The Act even contemplates the storage of vehicles and vessels subject to registration or identification under the Vehicle Code, by prescribing rules for determining the priorities of multiple liens on these vehicles and vessels [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(a) (priority of liens on vehicles and vessels subject registration or identification under Vehicle Code)].

The Act does not apply to any property for which a warehouse receipt, bill of lading, or other document of title has been issued; a self-storage facility is not a warehouse or a public utility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see Pub. Util. Code § 216 ("public utility" defined)]. If a warehouseman or storage company issues a document of title for any stored property, the rights and obligations of the warehouseman or storage company and the owner of the property are governed by provisions of the Commercial Code relating to warehouse receipts, bills of lading, and other documents of title [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see Com. Code § 7101 et. seq.; see also § 54A.20 et seq.].

The Act does not apply to garages or other storage areas in private residences [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a)]. The Act also does not apply to rental agreements entered into, extended, or renewed before January 1, 1982 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21714]. Any rental agreement entered into before that date (and not extended or renewed after that date) is valid and may be enforced or terminated in accordance with its terms and the then-applicable law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21715].

[2] Definitions

[a] Self-Service Storage Facility

A "self-service storage facility" means real property designed and used for the purpose of renting or leasing individual storage space to occupants who are to have access to the space for the purpose of storing and removing personal property or for storing individual storage containers provided to occupants who have exclusive use of the container for the purpose of storing and removing personal property, whether or not the individual storage containers are transported in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1 (transportation for fee by self-service storage facility's owner or operator of individual storage containers to and from facility without household goods carrier permit); see also § 54A.114]. The term does not include a garage or other storage area in a private residence, and does not include a warehouse or public utility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a); see [1], above; see also § 54A.20 et seq.].

[b] Owner

The term "owner" refers to the owner, operator, lessor, or sublessor of a self-service storage facility, his or her agent, or any other person authorized by the owner to manage the facility, or to receive rent from an occupant under a rental agreement. No real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(b)].

[c] Occupant

The term "occupant" refers to a person, or his or her sublessee, successor, or assign, who is entitled to the use of the storage space at a self-service storage facility under a rental agreement to the exclusion of others [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(c)].

[d] Rental Agreement

A "rental agreement" is any written agreement or lease that establishes or modifies the terms, conditions, rules, or other provision concerning the use and occupancy of a self-service storage facility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(d); see In re Safeguard Self-Storage Trust (9th Cir. 1993) 2 F.3d 967, 970-973 (bankruptcy court holds that self-storage agreement is lease)].

[e] Personal Property

The term "personal property" is defined to mean movable property not affixed to land, and includes goods, merchandise, furniture, and household items [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(e)]. Thus, the Act applies broadly to any kind of movable property not affixed to land that is stored in a self-service storage facility, including vehicles and vessels [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(a)]; the Act is not limited to household goods, and commercial property is not excluded from coverage [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a)].

Property for which a warehouse receipt, bill of lading, or other document of title is given is not covered by the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a)]. If the owner of a storage facility issues a warehouse receipt, bill of lading, or other document of title for the property stored, Division 7 of the Commercial Code governs [see Com. Code § 7101 et seq.; see also § 54A.20 et seq.]. If no such document is issued, the Act governs provided that the facility is not a garage or other storage area in a private residence [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(a)].

[f] Individual Storage Container

"Individual storage container" means a container that is fully enclosed and locked, contains not less than 100 cubic feet and not more than 1,100 cubic feet, and is constructed out of durable material appropriate for repeated use [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(d)]. A box constructed out of cardboard or a similar material does not constitute an individual storage container for purposes of the law governing transportation of individual storage containers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(d)(3)].

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

C. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.31

§ 54A.31 Rental Agreements

[1] Requirements Under Act

Rental agreements for storage in self-service storage facilities must meet certain requirements set forth in the Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21712, 21714, 21715]. These requirements apply to any written agreement that establishes or modifies the terms, conditions, rules, or other provisions concerning the use and occupancy of a self-service storage facility, regardless of whether the agreement is denominated a "rental agreement," a "lease," a "contract," or otherwise [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(d); see In re Safeguard Self-Storage Trust (9th Cir. 1993) 2 F.3d 967, 970-973 (bankruptcy court holds that self-storage agreement is lease)].

Specifically, every contract for the rental or lease of storage space in a self-service storage facility must satisfy the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a)]:

- Be in writing.
- Include a statement that the occupant's property will be subject to a claim of lien and may even be sold to satisfy the lien if the rent or other charges due under the agreement remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, and that these actions are authorized by the Act.
- Request and provide space for the occupant to give the name and address of another person to whom the preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21704; see also § 54A.221] and the subsequent notice required by the Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705 (notice of lien sale); see also § 54A.222] may be sent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b) (owner has no lien unless agreement requests and provides space for alternative name and address)].

Technically, the third requirement is not mandated by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a)]; however, the failure to satisfy this requirement effectively eliminates the owner's right to a lien under the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b); see § 54A.32]. The failure of the occupant to provide an alternative address does not affect an owner's remedies under the Act, or under any other provision of law, as long as the agreement requests this information and provides space for the occupant to include it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)].

These contract requirements are in addition to any other provisions otherwise required or permitted by law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21713; see also [2], below].

[2] Parties May Create Additional Rights and Duties

The right of the parties to a self-service storage facility rental agreement to create additional rights, duties, and obligations in their agreement is specifically recognized in the Act, which states that it may not be construed to impair or affect that right [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21713]. The rights provided by the Act are in addition to all other rights provided by law to a creditor against a debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21713].

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

C. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.32

§ 54A.32 Owner's Liens

[1] Imposition of Lien

The Act authorizes the imposition of liens on property stored in self-service storage facilities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702]. A lien imposed under the Act is in favor of the owner of the facility and the owner's heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702]. It is imposed against all personal property located at a self-service storage facility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702; see U.S. v. Poulsen (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 1330, 1334-1337 (imposition of lien destroys depositor's legitimate expectation of privacy in contents)].

[2] Charges Covered by Lien

The lien is for rent, labor, late payment fees, or other charges, present or future, incurred pursuant to a rental agreement, and for expenses necessary for the preservation, sale, or disposition of personal property subject to the provisions of the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702]. The lien may be enforced only in accordance with the provisions of the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702] and only if the requirements of the Act have been satisfied [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703-21707, 21712; see also [3], below].

[3] Procedure

If any part of the rent or other charges due from an occupant remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, the owner may begin the process of enforcing an owner's lien against the occupant of a self-service storage space [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]. The Act requires that an owner give the occupant a preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21704; see also § 54A.221]. The notice must be sent either by certified mail, postage prepaid, or by regular first-class mail if the owner obtains a certificate of mailing indicating the date the notice was mailed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703].

If the total sum due has not been paid as of the date specified in the preliminary lien notice as the termination date, a lien attaches as of that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a), (b)]. The owner may then enter the space and deny the occupant access to it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(1), (2), (b)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by certified mail and the total sum due was not paid as of the termination date, the owner may also remove any property found in the space to a place of safe keeping [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(3)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular first class mail with a certificate of mailing, the owner still may enter the space and deny the owner access to it if the total sum due has not been paid as of the termination date, but may not remove the occupant's property until at least 14 days after the termination date, during which time the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(b)]. In either case, the owner must then send a notice of lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a); see § 54A.222]. These notices must be sent to the occupant's last known address, as well as to any alternative address provided by the occupant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b) (alternate address)]. The occupant's last known address is the address provided by the occupant in the most recent rental agreement, or any address provided by the occupant in a subsequent written notice of a change of address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(f)].

The occupant or any other person claiming a right to the goods may redeem the goods at any time before the lien sale by paying the amount necessary to satisfy the lien and the reasonable expenses incurred in the lien procedure [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21709]. Partial payment is insufficient to prevent a lien, and the owner's acceptance of partial payment does not alter the agreement [see U.S. v. Poulsen (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 1330, 1334-1337 (imposition of lien destroys depositor's legitimate expectation of privacy in contents)]. Further, the occupant has the right to file a declaration in opposition to the lien sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2); see also § 54A.223], in which case the owner's lien can be enforced only through a judicial proceeding [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710].

The lien sale itself must be advertised in accordance with statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(a)] and conducted in a commercially reasonable manner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)]. The owner must retain any excess proceeds of the sale on the occupant's behalf [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)].

For detailed discussion of the owner's lien, and coverage of the enforcement procedures, see §§ 54A.132, 54A.221.

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations

§ 54A.100 Receipt of Goods for Storage

1. Determine storage period to be specified in warehouse receipt.

NOTE:

The specification of the storage period in the warehouse receipt effectively identifies the date on which a notice of termination and demand of payment for charges due may be made [see Com. Code § 7206(a); see also § 54A.23].

If the goods are to be stored in transit; that is, stored only as an incident to their transportation entirely within California for a period of 90 days or less or interstate for a period of 180 days or less, state or federal regulations governing the transportation of household goods apply exclusively [*see § 54A.11; see also Ch. 54, Shipment of Property], and the goods are covered only by a bill of lading. No warehouse receipt is issued for goods stored in transit.

- a. Minimum period.
- b. Maximum period.
- c. Month to month.
- d. At will of depositor.
- e. For goods picked up and stored entirely within California, storage period in excess of 90 days.

f. For goods picked up in one state and stored in another, storage period in excess of 180 days.

2. Determine whether warehouse should issue negotiable or nonnegotiable warehouse receipts.

NOTE:

A warehouse receipt is negotiable if (1) by its terms, the goods covered by it are to be delivered to the bearer or to the order of a named person [Com. Code § 7104(a)] and (2) when it was issued, it did not have a conspicuous legend, however expressed, that it is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(c)]. Any other warehouse receipt is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(b)]. Warehouse receipts usually are nonnegotiable.

3. Determine whether warehouse receipt should provide for warehouse's liability for damages that could not have been avoided by exercise of reasonable care, or whether insurance coverage for such damage should be offered to depositor.

NOTE:

Unless otherwise agreed, the warehouse is not liable for damages that could not have been avoided by the exercise of care with regard to the goods that a reasonably careful person would exercise under similar circumstances [Com. Code § 7204(a); see Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. NNRAircargo Serv. (USA), Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1111, 1115 (carrier that did not store goods for profit was not warehouse and therefore was not liable under Com. Code § 7204(a) for theft from storage facility)].

a. Indemnity provisions in warehouse receipt.

b. Requirement that warehouse or depositor purchase insurance to cover liability.

4. Determine whether or to what extent warehouse receipt should limit amount of liability for loss or damage and, if so, whether limitation should be stated in terms of [see Com. Code § 7204(b)]:

a. Specific liability per article or item.

b. Value per unit of weight or other measure.

5. Determine what time periods and methods should be specified in warehouse receipt for following [see Com. Code § 7204(c)]:

a. Presentation of claims.

(1) Written claims only.

(2) Stated number of days after discovery of damage or loss.

(3) Delivery at warehouse or principal place of business.

b. Institution of any suit.

6. Determine loading/unloading and any transportation charges.

- a. Hourly rate.
- b. Flat rate.
- c. Per mile rate.
- d. Additional surcharge for especially valuable or fragile items.

7. Determine charges to be imposed for preparation of goods being stored.

- a. Types of preparation work to be offered, such as wrapping, moth protection, padding, dunnage.
- b. Basis for preparation charges:
 - (1) Flat rate per item, type of item, or weight unit.
 - (2) On time and materials basis.
 - (3) Combined unit and time and materials basis.

8. Determine basis for storage charges:

- a. Period of time.

NOTE:

The basic storage period is usually one month and the warehouse receipt generally provides for storage on a month-to-month basis.

- b. Periodic charge based on:

- (1) Number of items, boxes, or crates.
- (2) Size of stored goods as packed.
- (3) Volume, i.e., number of cubic feet occupied by stored goods as packed.
- (4) Weight of stored goods as packed.
- (5) Flat rate, or flat rate only for storage boxes provided by warehouse.
- (6) Extra charges over basic rate for specially large or valuable items.

9. Determine rates to be charged for access services:

- a. Handling or access charge to be levied each time depositor obtains access to goods.
 - (1) Flat rate.
 - (2) Hourly rate, with or without a minimum period specified.

(3) Limited access included in basic rate, access over specified number subject to surcharge based on either (1) or (2), above.

b. Handling charge to be levied each time goods are added to or withdrawn from storage.

NOTE:

Storage facilities often levy an "in" charge equivalent to the monthly storage charge and an "out" charge that varies from one-half that amount up to a full monthly storage charge.

10. Determine whether warehouse will offer insurance and, if so, applicable rates to be charged for insurance offered through warehouse.

A. Preliminary Determinations

§ 54A.101 Transportation of Individual Storage Containers

1. Determine whether owner or operator of self service storage facility will transport individual storage containers to and from facility.
2. If owner or operator will perform transportation activities for fee, determine whether proposed activities may be provided without household goods carrier permit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1; see also § 54A.114].

NOTE:

The owner or operator of a self service storage facility, or a household goods carrier, may, for a fee, transport individual storage containers to and from the facility that he or she operates. This transportation activity will not be deemed transportation for compensation or hire as a business of used household goods and will not require a household goods carrier permit if specified requirements are met [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1; see § 54A.114].

B. Procedural Guide

§ 54A.110 Delivery of Goods Into Storage

1. Issue and/or execute all necessary documents preliminary to receipt of goods in warehouse:

a. Written estimate of cost of services is given by carrier or warehouse acting in its capacity as carrier [see Ch. 54, Shipment of Property].

b. Execute agreement for services between:

(1) Depositor and carrier.

(2) Depositor and warehouse acting in its capacity as carrier [see Ch. 54, Shipment of Property].

c. After execution of agreement for services, party acting as carrier for transportation of goods will issue a bill of lading [see Ch. 54, Shipment of Property].

2. On receipt of goods at warehouse for "permanent" storage, warehouse must issue warehouse receipt [Com. Code § 7201(a); Penal Code § 578].

NOTE:

A warehouse is a person engaged in the business of storing goods for hire [Com. Code § 7102(a)(13)], and a warehouse receipt is a receipt issued by such a person [Com. Code § 1201(b)(42)]. For a guide to drafting a warehouse receipt, see § 54A.120. It is an offense to issue a warehouse receipt for goods that are not actually on the warehouse premises and under the warehouse's control at the time of issuing the receipt [Penal Code § 578].

3. Contemporaneously with execution of warehouse receipt, warehouse should have depositor execute signature card that [see § 54A.202]:

a. Enables warehouse personnel to identify depositor or any other person depositor desires to have access to stored goods when access is sought.

b. Should be canceled if card authorizes access by person other than depositor and that person:

(1) No longer has faith and confidence of depositor.

(2) Dies.

(3) Moves to another area.

(4) Becomes seriously ill.

(5) Is depositor's spouse who is seeking dissolution of marriage.

4. Depositor should be advised or encouraged to obtain insurance covering loss of or damage to stored household goods, as follows:

NOTE:

For a certificate issued to evidence insurance coverage under a blanket policy issued to the warehouse, see § 54A.201.

a. Coverage should extend to loss or damage that results from causes other than warehouse's negligence, since warehouse receipt provides for liability on part of warehouse for loss or damage caused by warehouse's negligence.

b. Coverage should not duplicate insurance depositor has in force.

NOTE:

The insurance certificate issued by the warehouse usually provides that payment will not be made if there is other coverage and that, if made, the insurer has a right of subrogation against the depositor's insurer [see § 54A.201[2], Part III(7), (8)].

c. Coverage should equal to actual value of stored goods.

NOTE:

Under an insurance certificate issued by the warehouse, the depositor is considered a co-insurer to the extent of the difference between the value declared in the warehouse receipt and the actual value [see § 54A.201[2], Part III(2)].

d. Depositor should have warehouse pack and unpack all fragile items since insurance usually covers breakage of these items only if [see § 54A.201[2], Part II(2)]:

(1) Items are packed and unpacked by warehouse's employees.

(2) There is physical external damage to container in which they are packed.

e. All articles of "extraordinary value" (e.g., jewelry, watches, gems, art, money, and critical documents) must be declared if they are to be covered [see § 54A.201[2], Part II(4)].

NOTE:

If there is any doubt as to whether a particular item is in this category, it should be declared. The warehouse should have special safety vaults for valuable items, and the vaults should be made available to the depositor and used.

f. Depositor must avoid concealment or misrepresentation of any material fact to avoid having insurance coverage of this type considered void ab initio [see § 54A.201[2], Part II(4)].

g. Insurance premiums are generally based on valuation of goods stored and paid simultaneously with periodic storage charge.

§ 54A.111 Caring for Stored Goods

1. Instruct warehouse to establish procedures designed to ensure standard of care for stored goods that reasonably careful person would exercise under circumstances [Com. Code § 7204(a)], such as:
 - a. Smoke and fire alarms and fire prevention programs, including periodic fire drills for warehouse personnel, fire extinguishers, and sprinkler systems.
 - b. Vermin control and packaging or chemical or other protection of goods and premises sufficient to guard against rats, mice, insects, and moths.
 - c. Training program for warehouse personnel in warehouse safety and care of household goods in storage.
2. Instruct warehouse to establish procedures limiting access to stored goods by warehouse personnel or depositor and persons designated by depositor as having access:
 - a. Master key under management supervision.
 - b. Records showing date and time access and name of person, with signature, who had access:
 - (1) Depositor's signature card [see § 54A.202].
 - (2) Ledger or other record book.
3. Instruct warehouse to prohibit all warehouse employees from using stored goods [see Civ. Code § 1835].

4. If any stored box or package was purposely fastened by depositor, instruct warehouse not to open it without consent of depositor, except in case of necessity; and instruct depositor to establish regulations defining "necessity."
5. Instruct warehouse to take steps, following receipt of goods into storage, to ensure that they are kept separate so as to permit identification and delivery at all times [Com. Code § 7207(a)].
6. Instruct warehouse to institute and carry out schedule for periodic inspection or inventory of stored goods.
7. Instruct warehouse, on detection of any loss of or injury to any stored goods, to inform depositor of circumstances [see Civ. Code § 1838].

NOTE:

If loss or injury occurs during the deposit, and the depositary refuses to inform the depositor of the circumstances under which it occurred, so far as it has the necessary information, or willfully misrepresents the circumstances, the depositary is presumed to have willfully or by gross negligence permitted the loss or injury to occur [see Civ. Code § 1838].

§ 54A.112 Termination of Storage

1. Advise that warehouse may terminate storage at its option as follows [Com. Code § 7206(a)]:

a. Notice must be given to:

NOTE:

Notification requires taking such steps as may be reasonably required to inform a person in ordinary course, whether or not the person actually comes to know of it [Com. Code § 1202(d)].

(1) Person on whose account goods are held.

(2) Any other person known to claim interest in goods.

b. Notice must:

(1) Require payment of any charges due.

(2) Require removal of goods from warehouse either at termination of period of storage fixed by warehouse receipt or, if no period is stated, within stated period not less than 30 days after notice.

2. If goods are not removed before date specified in notice of termination, advise that warehouse may sell them in accordance with statutory provisions governing enforcement of warehouse's lien [see Com. Code § 7206(a)].

NOTE:

For the procedures involved in enforcement of a warehouse's lien [Com. Code § 7210], see § 54A.130.

3. If warehouse in good faith determines that goods are about to deteriorate or decline in value to less than lien amount within period prescribed for termination notice [see P (1)(b), above], advertisement, and sale [see Com. Code § 7210; see also § 54A.130], advise that warehouse [Com. Code § 7206(b)]:

- a. Must give notice of termination [see P (1)(a), above].
- b. May specify in termination notice any reasonably shorter time for removal of goods.
- c. May sell goods that are not removed in compliance with termination notice at public sale to be held not less than one week after single advertisement or posting.

4. If goods present hazard to other property, warehouse, or persons employed by or visiting warehouse because of quality or condition of goods of which warehouse had no notice at time of their deposit, advise that warehouse [Com. Code § 7206(c)]:

- a. Must provide reasonable notification [see P (1)(a), above] to all persons known to claim an interest in stored goods.
- b. May then sell goods at public or private sale without advertisement.
- c. If unable to sell goods, may dispose of them in any lawful manner without incurring liability based on that disposition.

5. Advise that, following any such sale or disposition, warehouse [Com. Code § 7206(e)]:

- a. May satisfy any lien from proceeds.
- b. Must hold any balance for delivery on demand of any person to whom it would have been bound to deliver goods.

6. Advise that depositor may:

- a. Terminate deposit at any time, in absence of any agreement as to duration of deposit [Civ. Code § 1854].
- b. Notwithstanding any agreement respecting duration of deposit period, terminate deposit on payment of all that would become due if deposit continued [Civ. Code § 1855].
- c. After notice of any sale or other disposition of goods on termination of deposit by warehouse, obtain delivery of goods by [Com. Code § 7206(a), (d)]:

(1) Making due demand for delivery at any time before sale or disposition.

(2) Making payment of any amount necessary to satisfy warehouse's lien and reasonable expenses incurred by warehouse pursuant to its termination of storage.

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Procedural Guide

§ 54A.113 Delivery of Goods From Storage

[1] Single Claim

NOTE:

For discussion of the warehouse's obligation to deliver household goods from storage, see § 54A.22[4].

1. Advise that warehouse need not deliver goods deposited for storage before depositor [Civ. Code § 1823]:

- a. Makes demand, even though deposit is made for specified time
- b. Satisfies any warehouse's lien on demand by warehouse [see Com. Code § 7403(b)].
- c. Surrenders for cancellation or notation of partial deliveries any outstanding negotiable document covering goods [see Com. Code § 7403(c)].

NOTE:

Ordinarily, the document covering the goods is a nonnegotiable warehouse receipt. Although surrender of a nonnegotiable document is not mandated by law, as a practical matter, the warehouse should require the depositor to submit the receipt. The warehouse should cancel the receipt or make any necessary notations of partial deliveries.

2. Advise that warehouse must deliver goods to person entitled under warehouse receipt who has complied with above requirements [see P 1, above] unless and to the extent that it can establish any of following [Com. Code § 7403(1)]:

NOTE:

The "person entitled" under a nonnegotiable warehouse receipt is the person to whom delivery of the goods is to be made by the terms of the receipt, or pursuant to instructions in a record under the receipt [Com. Code § 7102(a)(9); see Com. Code § 7102(a)(10) (definition of "record")].

The disposition or hypothecation of goods without the written consent of the holder of the warehouse receipt is illegal [see Penal Code § 581] unless the property was sold or demanded by virtue of process of law [Penal Code § 583].

- a. Delivery of goods to person whose receipt was rightful as against claimant.
- b. Damage to or delay, loss, or destruction of goods for which warehouse is not liable.

NOTE:

The burden of establishing negligence in the event of damage or destruction by fire is on the person entitled under the document [Com. Code § 7403(a)(2)].

- c. Previous sale or other disposition of the goods:

(1) in lawful enforcement of lien [see § 54A.130].

(2) on warehouse's lawful termination of storage [see § 54A.112].

- d. Release, satisfaction, or any other fact affording personal defense against claimant.

NOTE:

The warehouse's failure to deliver may be excused to the extent that the warehouse establishes any lawful excuse, such as the bailor's exercise of a seller's or lessor's right to stop delivery because of the buyer's or lessee's nonpayment or insolvency [see Com. Code §§ 2705, 10526] or a lawful diversion, reconsignment, or other disposition by a carrier [Com. Code § 7403(a)(4),(5),(7); see Com. Code § 7303 (disposition by carrier)].

- 3. Advise that, pending resolution of conflicting claims for title to or possession of stored goods, warehouse is excused from making delivery [see Com. Code § 7603].

NOTE:

Conflicting claims may be asserted by two or more of the following classes of persons: the depositor, the true owner or joint owners of the goods, the survivor or survivors of the depositor or joint depositors, the holder of legal title to goods subject to a conditional sales contract, the spouse of a depositor when the spouses are involved in separation or dissolution of the marriage and community property is an issue, or when a business partner of the depositor asserts an interest in the goods. For further discussion, see [2], below.

- 4. Advise that, when making delivery, warehouse must act in good faith and observe reasonable commercial standards [see Com. Code § 7404].

- 5. Advise that delivery should not be made to person claiming under missing document; if warehouse receipt or other document of title is lost, stolen, or destroyed, warehouse should require claimant to obtain court order for issuance of substitute document [see Com. Code § 7601].

6. Advise that delivery must be made at depositary's place of business [see Civ. Code § 1824] or to place agreed on in warehouse receipt and any bill of lading for transportation.

[2] Conflicting Claims for Stored Goods

1. If more than one person asserts title to or right to possession of stored goods, advise warehouse to exercise its statutory excuse from duty to make delivery until it has had reasonable time to either [Com. Code § 7603]:

- a. Ascertain validity of adverse claims;
- b. Bring action to compel all claimants to interplead; or
- c. Defend action for nondelivery and compel all claimants to interplead.

NOTE:

For a complaint in interpleader by a warehouse to determine the conflicting claims of a bailor and a claimant, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 213, Documents of Title (Matthew Bender).

2. Instruct warehouse that warehouse receipt should include language providing warehouse lien for court costs and reasonable attorneys' fees in [see § 54A.200[2], Part II, art. XV]:

- a. Defending itself if it is made party to any litigation concerning stored goods.
- b. Filing any action in interpleader.

3. Instruct warehouse to give prompt notice to depositor of any proceedings taken adversely to depositor's interest in stored goods that may tend to excuse depositary from making delivery [Civ. Code § 1825].

4. Advise that if warehouse believes that stored goods are wrongfully detained from their true owner, it may give that person notice of deposit [see Civ. Code § 1826].

NOTE:

If, within a reasonable time, the person notified does not claim the goods, establish a right to the goods, and indemnify the depositary against any claim by the depositor, the depositary will be exonerated from liability to the person notified [see Civ. Code § 1826].

5. If stored item is owned jointly or in common by persons who cannot agree on manner of its delivery, warehouse may deliver proper share to each owner, if it can be done without injury to item [Civ. Code § 1827].

6. If deposit is made in name of two or more persons, deliverable to either or to their survivor or survivors, deposit may be delivered to either depositor or to survivor or survivors in due course of business [Civ. Code § 1828].

§ 54A.114 Transportation of Individual Storage Container

1. If owner or operator of self service storage facility will transport individual storage containers to and from facility for a fee, advise owner or operator that it must comply with all of following conditions to avoid regulation under Pub. Util. Code § 5101 et seq.:

NOTE:

The owner or operator of a self service storage facility, or a household goods carrier, may, for a fee, transport individual storage containers to and from the facility that he or she operates. This transportation activity will not be deemed transportation for compensation or hire as a business of used household goods and will not require a household goods carrier permit if all the requirements enumerated below are met.

a. Charged fee to deliver empty individual storage container, transport loaded container to facility, or return loaded container to customer may not exceed $100 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(1)].

b. Owner, operator, or carrier, or affiliate may not load, pack, or otherwise handle container's contents [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(2)].

c. Owner, operator, or carrier must be properly registered or hold required permit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(3)].

d. Owner, operator, or carrier must have cargo insurance of at least $20,000 per shipment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(4)].

e. Owner, operator, or carrier must disclose to customer, in advance, in written document separate from others furnished at time of disclosure, terms and conditions of transfer service [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5); see also § 54A.122].

NOTE:

The disclosure of terms and conditions, and the rental agreement, must be received by the customer a minimum of 72 hours before delivery of the empty individual storage container [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)]. However, the customer may, in writing, knowingly and voluntarily waive that receipt [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)]. The company must record in writing and retain for at least six months after the end of the rental the time and method of delivery of the information, any waiver made by the customer, and the times and dates of initial pickup and redelivery of the containerized goods [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)].

2. Advise owner or operator that company must provide customer, no later than time empty storage container is delivered, informational brochure containing following information about loading container [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(6)]:

- a. Packing and loading tips to minimize damage.
- b. Suggestion that customer make inventory of items as they are loaded.
- c. Suggestion that customer keep any other record (e.g., photographs, video recording) that may assist in subsequent claims processing.
- d. List of items that are impermissible to pack in container (e.g., flammable items).
- e. List of items that are not recommended to be packed in light of foreseeable hazards inherent in company's handling of containers and in light of any limitation of liability contained in agreement.

NOTE:

The brochure must be provided to the customer no later than the time the empty storage container is delivered [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(6)].

3. Advise owner or operator that pickup and delivery of individual storage container must be on date agreed between customer and company [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(b)].

NOTE:

If the company requires the customer to be physically present at the time of pickup, the company must be at the customer's premises prepared to perform the service not more than four hours later than the agreed scheduled time [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(b)]. In the event of a preventable breach of this obligation by the company, the customer is entitled to receive a penalty of $50 from the company and to elect rescission of the rental agreement without liability.

4. Advise owner or operator that no charge may be assessed for [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(c)]:

- a. Moving container at company's discretion.
- b. Delivery of container to customer's premises if customer has advised company, orally or in writing, at least 24 hours before agreed time for container drop off, that customer is rescinding request for services.

C. Drafting Guide

§ 54A.120 Warehouse Receipts

NOTE:

The warehouse receipt need not be in any particular form [Com. Code § 7202(a)]. For a warehouse receipt for storage of household goods, see § 54A.200[2].

A warehouse is subject to the obligations of Division 7 regardless of the fact that the receipt does not satisfy all statutory requirements or that the person purporting to be a warehouse is not in fact a warehouse [Com. Code § 7401; see § 54A.22[1]].

1. Designate document as "warehouse receipt."

2. If receipt is to be negotiable:

a. State that goods are to be delivered to bearer or to order of named person.

b. Do not show in any way that it is nonnegotiable.

NOTE:

A warehouse receipt is negotiable if (1) by its terms, the goods covered by it are to be delivered to the bearer or to the order of a named person [Com. Code § 7104(a)] and (2) when it was issued, it did not have a conspicuous legend, however expressed, that it is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(c)]. Any other warehouse receipt is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(b)]. Usually warehouse receipts are nonnegotiable.

3. If receipt is to be nonnegotiable, mark it conspicuously as "nonnegotiable."

4. Include all of following in warehouse receipt:

NOTE:

Unless a warehouse receipt provides for each of the following, the warehouse is liable for damages caused to any person injured by the omission [Com. Code § 7202(b)(1)-(9)].

- a. Statement of location of warehouse facility where goods are stored.
- b. Date of issue of receipt.
- c. Unique identification code of receipt.
- d. Statement whether goods received will be delivered to bearer, to named person, or to named person or its order.
- e. Rate of storage and handling charges or, when goods are stored under field warehousing arrangement, statement of that fact on nonnegotiable receipt.
- f. Description of goods or packages containing them.

NOTE:

A party to a warehouse receipt, or a good faith purchaser of a warehouse receipt for value, who relies on the description of the goods in the receipt may recover from the warehouse any damages caused by the nonreceipt or misdescription of the goods, except to the extent that the receipt conspicuously indicates that the warehouse does not know whether all or part of the goods in fact were received or conform to the description, such as a case in which the description is in terms of marks or labels or kind, quantity, or condition, or the receipt or description is qualified by "contents, condition, and quality unknown," "said to contain," or words of similar import, if the indication is true [Com. Code § 7203].

- g. Signature of warehouse or its agent.
- h. If receipt is issued for goods that warehouse owns, either solely, jointly, or in common with others, statement of fact of that ownership.
- i. One of following statements, either:
 - (1) Statement of amount of advances made and of liabilities incurred for which warehouse claims lien or security interest; or
 - (2) If precise amount of advances made or liabilities incurred is unknown, at time of issue of receipt, to warehouse or to its agent that issued receipt, statement of fact that advances have been made or liabilities incurred and purpose of advances or liabilities.

5. Add any other terms desired [see PP 6-12, below] except terms that [Com. Code § 7202(c)]:

NOTE:

Any terms inserted in the warehouse receipt that are contrary to the prohibitions set forth below are ineffective [Com. Code § 7202(c)].

a. Are contrary to provisions of Commercial Code.

b. Impair obligation of delivery [see § 54A.22[4]].

c. Impair duty of care [see § 54A.22[2]].

6. Include declarations of value for use by depositor; either "released value" per pound per article stored or lump sum value for entire lot stored.

NOTE:

The warehouse receipt in § 54A.200 contains two types of declaration of value, one of which must be used by the depositor. The first is a declaration of released value and specifies a small amount of value per pound per article. The second is a declaration of lump sum value. If the latter is chosen, the monthly storage charge is substantially higher than for storage under a declaration of released value in order to cover the cost of insurance.

The depositor usually finds it less costly to declare a released value and purchase insurance, typically through the warehouse. In this situation, the warehouse usually will give the depositor a certificate of interest under warehouse insurance [see § 54A.201].

As a practical matter, most goods placed in storage arrive on a bill of lading, either intrastate or interstate. Interstate and intrastate bills of lading may specify either a released value per article or a lump sum value. As a practical matter, if a released rate valuation is specified, it should be the same as that stated in the bill of lading covering shipment to the warehouse because, in the event of any damage, it is usually impossible to ascertain whether during shipment or storage.

7. Include terms limiting warehouse's liability, if desired.

NOTE:

Limitations of liability may not impair the warehouse's statutory obligation of delivery under Com. Code § 7403 [Com. Code § 7202(c); see § 54A.22[4]], or avoid the warehouse's duty to exercise care with regard to goods that reasonably careful person would exercise under similar circumstances [Com. Code § 7204(a); see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. III].

a. If desired, exclude liability for damages that could not have been avoided by exercise of care with regard to goods that reasonably careful person would exercise under similar circumstances [Com. Code § 7204(a); see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. II(2)], such as following:

NOTE:

Ordinarily, a warehouse receipt for household goods is very detailed in excluding liability for every conceivable incident of damage, except for the failure to exercise reasonable care.

(1) Acts, omissions, or orders of depositor or agents of depositor.

(2) Damage from insects, moths, and vermin.

- (3) Depreciation, deterioration, and ordinary wear and tear.
- (4) Obsolescence.
- (5) Nature of items, including defects, characteristics, or inherent vice.
- (6) Warlike actions or nuclear damage.
- (7) Acts of God, including specifically, earthquake, liquefaction, flood, water damage, other types of weather.
- (8) Fire, explosion, and specified damage to warehouse.
- (9) Strikes, lockouts, or labor disturbances.
- (10) Riots or civil unrest.
- (11) Breakage of brittle or fragile items unless appropriately packaged or resulting from negligence of the warehouse or its agents as shown by specified evidence.

b. Exclude liability for loss or damage [Com. Code § 7204(a); see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. II(3)]:

- (1) Before delivery to warehouse or custody and control of warehouse and after packing, if any packing is involved.
- (2) After delivery to or receipt for by depositor or owner or agent.

8. Limit amount for which warehouse will be liable in event of loss of or damage to stored property [Com. Code § 7204(b)]:

a. Warehouse's liability may be expressed as not to exceed least of following [see § 54A.200, pt. II, art. III(1)]:

- (1) Cost of repairs.
- (2) Cost of replacement with material of similar kind and quality.
- (3) Actual cash value at time of receipt by warehouse and delivery to depositor.
- (4) Difference between actual cash value at time of receipt by warehouse and delivery to depositor.
- (5) Either released value per pound per article stored or lump sum value declared on entire lot.

b. Include provisions limiting liability, as follows:

- (1) Deductions for depreciation, deterioration, and ordinary wear and tear [see § 54A.200[2], part II, art. III(2)].

(2) Exclusion of sentimental value, if any [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. III(2)].

(3) Limitation of liability for loss or damage of one article of matched set to that item and not to repairing or replacing complete set [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. III(3)].

(4) Limitation of liability for consequential damages solely to those described in writing by depositor at time of deposit [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. III(4)].

c. Do not limit amount of liability for conversion of property to warehouse's own use, as this limitation is ineffective.

d. Limited liability, as specified in warehouse receipt, may, on depositor's written request, be increased to value not to exceed actual value of goods, either:

(1) When storage agreement portion of warehouse receipt is signed; or

NOTE:

This increase, as a practical matter, would be made by the depositor on a pre-printed warehouse receipt form when the depositor signs the receipt.

(2) Within reasonable time after receiving warehouse receipt [see § 54A.200[2], pt II, art. VII].

NOTE:

If the depositor increases the stated value of the goods, the warehouse may charge increased rates based on any increased valuation [Com. Code § 7204(b)].

9. Set forth reasonable provisions as to time and manner of presenting claims and instituting actions [Com. Code § 7204(c)]:

a. Time limit for filing claims and suits [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XVI].

b. Arbitration provisions [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XVII].

10. Provide for warehouse's lien [Com. Code § 7209; see § 54A.200[2], pt.. II, art. XV]:

a. Against depositor [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

b. Against all persons when goods are household goods and depositor was legal possessor of goods at time of deposit [Com. Code § 7209(d)].

c. For following types of charges or expenses [Com. Code § 7209(a)]:

(1) Storage and processing incidental to storage.

(2) Transportation, including demurrage and terminal charges.

(3) Insurance.

- (4) Labor.
- (5) Charges, present or future, in relation to goods.
- (6) Expenses necessary for preservation of goods.
- (7) Expenses reasonably incurred in lawful sale of goods.

d. Similar charges and expenses for which person on whose account goods are held is liable in relation to other goods whenever deposited [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

e. On goods deposited or proceeds of goods in warehouse's possession [Com. Code § 7209(a)].

11. Consider reserving security interest against depositor for charges other than those outlined in P 10, above, such as for money advanced and interest [see Com. Code § 7209(b); see also § 54A.24[2]].

NOTE:

If a receipt is issued for the goods, the security interest is not valid as against third persons without notice unless the maximum amount of the security interest is conspicuously specified on the receipt [Com. Code § 7209(b); see § 54A.24[2]].

12. Include additional contract terms and conditions:

a. Warranties by depositor as to ownership of goods [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. IV]:

- (1) Lawful possession.
- (2) Legal right to store.
- (3) Agreement to pay storage and other costs incurred by warehouse in defending against adverse claims.
- (4) Agreement to interpleader of depositor by warehouse in event of adverse claims.

b. Provisions under which additional goods may be delivered to warehouse for storage under terms and conditions of warehouse receipt [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. V].

c. Provisions governing services to be performed regarding stored goods by warehouse and charges for those services [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. VI].

d. Provision permitting written notice correcting errors in warehouse receipt only within specified period, after which document is deemed correct [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. VII].

e. Provision permitting transfer of stored goods by warehouse to another warehouse or location within original warehouse, with or without notice to depositor [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. VIII].

f. Provision governing access by or delivery of goods to depositor, including following [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. IX]:

- (1) Restriction to regular working days, as defined.

(2) Prior notice required.

(3) Exclusion of responsibility for delays caused by specified incidents.

(4) Access or partial delivery charges.

g. Provision specifying circumstances under which transfer of warehouse receipt by depositor will be recognized by warehouse [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. X].

h. Provision authorizing warehouse to act for depositor in arranging for delivery or shipment of goods from storage at specified valuation [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XI].

i. Provision expressly denying any warranty or representation that warehouse is fireproof or that stored goods cannot be destroyed by fire [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XII].

NOTE:

When a depositor proves that the stored goods were destroyed by fire, the burden is then on the warehouse to prove that the fire occurred without negligence on the part of the warehouse or its employees [Hanson v. Wells Van & Storage Co. (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 332, 334, 223 P.2d 509].

j. Provision specifying whether stored goods are insured by warehouse and whether warehouse is insured to cover its legal liability [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XIII].

k. Terms of payment, including [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XIV]:

(1) Dates on which due and payable, e.g., monthly based on execution date of warehouse receipt.

(2) Terms relating to payment for fractional periods.

(3) Provision for interest on advances and unpaid balances.

l. Requirements for notice of change of address [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XVIII].

m. Miscellaneous provisions:

(1) Severability [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XIX].

(2) Binding effect on heirs and assigns [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XX].

(3) Time is of essence [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XXI].

(4) Entire contract [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XXII].

(5) California law controlling [see § 54A.200[2], pt. II, art. XXIII].

13. On issuance, fill in all blanks in warehouse receipt form [see Com. Code § 7208].

NOTE:

When a blank in a negotiable warehouse receipt is filled in without authority, a purchaser for value and without notice of the lack of authority may treat the insertion as authorized. Any other unauthorized alteration leaves any warehouse receipt enforceable against the issuer according to its original terms [Com. Code § 7208]. Although warehouse receipts are usually nonnegotiable, all blanks should be filled in so that any alteration would be demonstrably unauthorized.

§ 54A.121 Self-Service Storage Rental Agreement

1. Include following in all self-service storage rental agreements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a)]:

NOTE:

The following provisions are required by statute. The parties may include any other provision required or permitted by law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a)].

a. Statement that occupant's property will be subject to a claim of lien and may even be sold to satisfy lien if rent or other charges due under agreement remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, and that these actions are authorized by Self-Service Storage Facility Act [see § 54A.220[2], P 16].

b. Request and provide space for occupant to include name and address of another person to whom any preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21704; see also § 54A.221] and any subsequent notice required by Self-Service Storage Facility Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705 (notice of lien sale); see also § 54A.222] may be sent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b); see § 54A.220[2], P 17].

The failure of the occupant to provide an alternative address does not affect an owner's remedies under the Act, or under any other provision of law, as long as the agreement requests this information and provides space for the occupant to include it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)].

6. Specify owner's rights and obligations:

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

D. Related and Subsequent Procedures

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.130

§ 54A.130 Enforcement of Warehouse's Lien

NOTE:

This guide is drafted for use when the stored goods that are the subject of the proposed lien are goods other than those stored by a merchant in the course of his or her business [see Com. Code § 7210(b); see also § 54A.24[5][b]]. Merchants may also use this enforcement procedure [Com. Code § 7210(h)] or may use a more streamlined procedure that requires commercial reasonableness but no publication [see Com. Code § 7210(a); see also § 54A.24[5][a]].

These procedures must be followed carefully. A warehouse is liable for damages caused by the failure to comply with statutory sale requirements and, in the case of a willful violation, for conversion [Com. Code § 7210(i)].

1. Send all persons known to claim interest in goods notice of claim of lien [Com. Code § 7210(b)(1)] setting forth following information [Com. Code § 7210(b)(2)]:

NOTE:

For a notice of claim of lien, see § 54A.203.

- a. Itemized statement of claim.
- b. Description of goods subject to lien.
- c. Demand for payment within specified time not less than 10 days after receipt of notice.
- d. Conspicuous statement that unless claim is paid by specified date, goods will be advertised for sale and sold by auction at specified time and place.

NOTE:

A term or clause is conspicuous if written, displayed, or presented so that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term is "conspicuous" or not is a decision for the court [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

2. Deliver notice in form reasonable under circumstances at recipient's place of business through which contract was made or at other location held out by recipient as place for receipt of such communications [see Com. Code § 1202(e)(2)].

3. Draft advertisement of sale containing description of goods, name of person on whose account they are being held, and time and place of sale.

NOTE:

The sale must take place at least 15 days after the first publication of the advertisement [Com. Code § 7210(b)(5)]. For a form for an advertisement of the lien sale, see § 54A.204.

4. Publish advertisement of sale after expiration of time given in notice, as follows [Com. Code § 7210(b)(5)]:

- a. Once each week for two consecutive weeks.
- b. In newspaper of general circulation where sale is to be held.

NOTE:

If no newspaper of general circulation is published where the sale is to be held, the advertisement must be posted at least 10 days before the sale in at least six conspicuous places in the neighborhood of the proposed sale [Com. Code § 7210(b)(5)].

5. Afford any person claiming right in goods opportunity to pay amount necessary to satisfy lien and reasonable expenses incurred in enforcement of lien [see Com. Code § 7210(c)].

NOTE:

Strictly speaking, these persons have already been notified of sale and no additional steps need be taken. However, if these amounts are paid, the goods may not be sold and they must be retained by the warehouse subject to the terms of the warehouse receipt and Division 7 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 7210(c)]. It may be prudent to provide a last opportunity to pay the amounts due; clearly trying to evade proper payment is imprudent.

6. At least 15 days after first publication of advertisement, conduct sale [Com. Code § 7210(b)(5)]:

- a. In conformity with terms of notice [Com. Code § 7210(b)(3)].
- b. At suitable place nearest to location where goods are held or stored [Com. Code § 7210(b)(4)].

NOTE:

If the warehouse receipt permits the warehouse to change the place of storage, it may benefit the warehouse to move the goods to a storage site near a sale site more accessible to the public.

- 7. Warehouse may buy goods at sale if sale is public [Com. Code § 7210(d)].
- 8. If goods are put up in lots, each lot is subject of separate sale [Com. Code § 2328(1)].
- 9. Sale by auction:
 - a. Is complete when auctioneer announces sale [see Com. Code § 2328(2)].
 - b. May be "with reserve," i.e., goods may be withdrawn before completion of sale, or "without reserve," i.e., goods cannot be withdrawn unless no bid is made within reasonable time [see Com. Code § 2328(3)].
- 10. Satisfy lien from sale proceeds and hold any balance for delivery on demand to person to whom delivery of goods would have to have been made [Com. Code § 7210(f)].
- 11. If lien is not satisfied, warehouse may assert any other rights allowed by law to creditor against debtor [Com. Code § 7210(g)].

NOTE:

For coverage of the warehouse's rights, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 213, Documents of Title (Matthew Bender).

§ 54A.131 Handling Depositor's Claim of Loss or Damage

1. Obtain and examine following documents from depositor:

- a. Bill of lading covering transportation of goods, if any.
- b. Warehouse receipt for goods.
- c. Any notice of loss or injury received by depositor from warehouse [see Civ. Code § 1838].
- d. Any insurance certificate provided by warehouse under its blanket liability policy.
- e. Homeowner's insurance policy issued to depositor and in force when loss or damage occurred.

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.132

§ 54A.132 Enforcement of Owner's Lien for Self-Service Storage Facility

1. When rent or other charges due from occupant of self-service storage space are at least 14 days overdue, send occupant preliminary lien notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703; see § 54A.221].

a. Include all of following in preliminary lien notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]:

NOTE:

A preliminary lien notice substantially in the form set forth by statute will be deemed to satisfy the applicable statutory requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21704; see § 54A.221]. The notice must be sent to the occupant's last known address or to the alternate address specified in the rental agreement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)]. The occupant's last known address is the address provided by the occupant in the latest rental agreement or in a subsequent written notice of a change of address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(f)]. If the occupant set forth in the contract provides the name and address of another person to whom the notice may be sent, notice must also be sent to the alternative address [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21712(b)]. The occupant's failure to list an alternative address in the contract does not affect any remedies available to the owner as long as the contract requests and provides space for the occupant to provide an alternative address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)].

(1) Itemized statement of owner's claim showing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703(a)]:

(a) Sums due at time of notice.

(b) Date when sums became due.

(2) Statement that occupant's right to use storage space terminates on specified date (which must be not less than 14 days after date notice is mailed) unless all sums due are paid before that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703(b)].

(3) Notice that [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703(c)]:

(a) Occupant may be denied access to storage space after termination date if sums are not paid.

(b) Owner's lien, as provided for in Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702, may then be imposed.

(4) Name, street address, and telephone number of owner or owner's designated agent whom occupant may contact to respond to notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703(d)].

b. Send notice by one of following methods [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]:

NOTE:

Although certified mail is the more expensive of these two methods, it may be more advantageous to the owner to use that method because the owner's right to remove the occupant's property from the space accrues more quickly when certified mail is used [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a), (b), discussed in P 2, below].

(1) Certified mail, postage prepaid; or

(2) Regular first-class mail, if owner obtains certificate of mailing indicating date notice was mailed.

2. If total sum claimed in preliminary lien notice is not paid as of date specified in preliminary lien notice as termination date, advise owner that owner may take the following steps to enforce the lien on stored property:

a. If preliminary lien notice was sent by certified mail, all of the following steps [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)]:

(1) Deny occupant access to space.

(2) Enter space.

(3) Remove occupant's property to place of safe keeping.

b. If preliminary lien notice was sent by regular first-class mail with certificate of mailing, all of the following steps [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(b)]:

(1) Deny occupant access to space.

(2) Enter space.

(3) Wait until at least 14 days after the termination date, and then remove occupant's property to a place of safe keeping.

NOTE:

The occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount during the 14-day period [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(b)].

3. After lien has attached, send occupant notice of lien sale stating all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1); see § 54A.222]:

NOTE:

The notice of lien sale must be sent to the occupant at the occupant's last known address and to any alternative address given by the occupant in the rental agreement [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21705, 21712(b); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(f) ("last known address" defined)].

- a. Occupant's right to use space has terminated and occupant no longer has access to stored property;
- b. Stored property is subject to lien;
- c. Amount of lien; and
- d. Property will be sold to satisfy lien after specified date (which must not be less than 14 days from date of mailing notice) unless:

(1) Amount of lien is paid; or

(2) Occupant executes and returns by certified mail declaration under penalty of perjury in opposition to lien sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2)].

NOTE:

If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular mail with a certificate of mailing, the notice of lien sale must include a statement that the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount prior to the date specified as the termination date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1)(C)].

e. Any excess proceeds of sale over lien amount and costs of sale will be retained by owner and may be reclaimed by occupant or another person at any time for period of one year from sale, and that thereafter proceeds will escheat to county.

4. With notice of lien sale, send occupant blank declaration in opposition to lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2)].

NOTE:

The declaration must be substantially in the form set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2) [see § 54A.223].

5. If any person who has perfected security interest under Division 9 of Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.; see also Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] pays total amount due (as specified in preliminary lien notice) for storage of property, and if no declaration of opposition to lien sale is executed and returned by occupant [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710], then [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21708]:

- a. Do not sell property.
- b. Deliver property to person who paid total amount due.

NOTE:

An owner who delivers property pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 21708 to any person who has a perfected security interest under Division 9 of the Commercial Code is not liable to any person for delivering the property if he or she has complied with all the statutory requirements for a preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21704; see also P 1, above] and a notice of lien sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705; see also P 3, above].

6. If any person who claims right to property subject to lien pays amount necessary to satisfy lien plus reasonable expenses incurred for preparing for lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21709; see § 54A.221]:

- a. Do not sell property.
- b. Retain property pending court order directing its disposition.

7. If owner does not receive completed declaration in opposition to lien sale (executed under penalty of perjury) from occupant before sale date set forth in notice of lien sale, sell property as follows [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21706]:

- a. If stored property is vehicle subject to registration or identification under Vehicle Code, enforce lien in accordance with provisions of Civ. Code § 3071 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(b)].

NOTE:

Civ. Code § 3071 prescribes procedures for the enforcement of liens on automobiles when the automobiles have a value over $300. For a procedural guide to lien sales of vehicles in California, see Ch. 102D, Registration and Transfer of Vehicles, Vessels, and Aircraft. A lien under the self-service storage facility act on a vehicle or vessel should be enforced promptly, as the lien cannot include any charges for rent, labor, or other services if application for authorization to conduct lien sale is not made within 60 days [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(c)].

- b. If stored property is vessel subject to registration or identification under Vehicle Code, enforce lien in accordance with provisions of Harb. & Nav. Code § 503 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(b)].

- c. If stored property is other than vehicle or vessel subject to registration or identification under Vehicle Code, enforce lien as follows:

(1) After date specified in notice of lien sale, advertise sale in following manner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(a); see § 54A.224]:

(a) If newspaper of general circulation is published in judicial district where sale is to be held, publish advertisement once per week for two consecutive weeks.

(b) If there is no newspaper of general circulation, post advertisement at least 10 days before sale in at least six conspicuous places in neighborhood of proposed sale.

(c) Include all of following in advertisement:

(i) General description of goods to be sold;

(ii) Name of person on whose account goods are being stored;

(iii) Space number of occupant; and

(iv) Name and location of storage facility.

(2) Conduct sale in commercially reasonable manner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)];

(3) After deducting amount of lien and costs of sale from proceeds of sale, retain balance of proceeds on occupant's behalf [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b); see P 8, below].

8. If declaration in opposition to lien sale (executed under penalty of perjury) is received before date of sale set forth in notice of lien sale, enforce lien only by judicial action, as follows [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710]:

NOTE:

For discussion and forms for litigation under the California Self- Service Storage Facility Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 517, Self-Service Storage Facilities (Matthew Bender).

a. Commence action by filing verified complaint setting forth facts on which claim of lien is based [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(a)].

b. Serve summons and complaint.

NOTE:

The summons and complaint may be served by certified mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the occupant at his or her last-known address, in which case service is deemed complete on the fifth day after mailing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(a)]. Alternatively, the summons and complaint may be served in any other manner authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10 et seq. For rules governing the service of summons and other papers in California, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers (Matthew Bender).

c. Secure judgment, as follows:

(1) If, after expiration of 10 days from date of service, occupant has not responded to complaint by answer or demurrer, apply to clerk for entry of default and to court for judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(b), (c)]; or

(2) If occupant responds to summons and complaint within time allowed, proceed through appropriate civil procedure to request trial on complaint.

NOTE:

For a general outline of the procedures an attorney should follow in a civil action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 431, Procedural Guide for Civil Actions (General) (Matthew Bender). For a general discussion of the rules applicable to civil trials and related proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 551, Trial (Matthew Bender).

d. After entry of judgment, enforce judgment by sale of property, as follows [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(d)]:

NOTE:

The occupant may avoid the sale of the lien property by paying the full amount of the judgment to the owner at any time before the sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(d)].

(1) Wait at least 10 days after entry of judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(d)].

(2) If lien is not paid, and if enforcement of judgment has not been stayed pending appeal [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(e)], sell lien property in commercially reasonable manner.

9. After sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)]:

a. Retain any excess proceeds of sale for one year; and

b. If occupant or other person having court order or judicial process makes just claim for all or part of excess proceeds, pay claim.

10. After one year from date of lien sale, pay any excess proceeds remaining to treasury of county in which sale was held [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)].

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Warehouse Storage

1. Warehouse Receipts and Lien Enforcement

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.200

§ 54A.200 Nonnegotiable Warehouse Receipt and Storage Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a nonnegotiable warehouse receipt and storage contract for use by a warehouse in accepting and storing goods. It is divided into two parts: Part I is a warehouse receipt that includes all matters required by law [see [c], below]; Part II is a storage contract that specifies the obligations of the parties.

A "warehouse receipt" is a receipt issued by a person engaged in the business of storing goods for hire [Com. Code § 1201(b)(42); see Com. Code § 7102(a)(9) ("warehouse" defined)]. The receipt need not be in any particular form [Com. Code § 7202(a); see Com. Code § 7201 (issuance)]. The warehouse receipt is the most important document involved in a storage transaction.

Many storage companies give the depositor of household goods two separate receipts:

- A preliminary receipt, and
- A subsequent receipt in final form.

The primary purpose of a preliminary receipt is to act as an inventory and checklist to show what items were received and the condition of each item at each stage in the transaction. A copy of the preliminary receipt is then attached to the final receipt so that each article in the lot need not be listed again. Some storage companies that use both a preliminary and a final receipt do not have the depositor sign the final receipt; only the storage company signs it. The depositor receives a copy of the final receipt in the mail, signed by the company, together with a signature card [see § 54A.202]. The signature card is to be signed by the depositor and mailed back to the company; the card includes statements to the effect that the depositor acknowledges receiving a copy of the final receipt, has read it, and accepts its terms and conditions.

[b] Negotiable and Nonnegotiable Warehouse Receipts

A warehouse receipt may be either negotiable or nonnegotiable. A warehouse receipt is negotiable if, by its terms, the goods are to be delivered to the bearer or to the order of a named person [Com. Code § 7104(a)], and when it was issued, it did not have a conspicuous legend, however expressed, that it is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(c)]. Any other warehouse receipt is nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 7104(b)]. Warehouse receipts usually are nonnegotiable. A term is conspicuous when it is so written that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10); see [2], below]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

If the storage company fails to conspicuously mark the receipt, a subsequent holder who purchases it for value supposing it to be negotiable may at his or her option treat the document as imposing on the storage company the same liabilities it would have incurred had the document been negotiable [Com. Code § 7104(3)]. Most commonly, storage companies issue nonnegotiable warehouse receipts. Therefore, this form includes the word "nonnegotiable" in capital letters as part of its title [see [2], below].

[c] Contents of Warehouse Receipt

A warehouse receipt need not be in any particular form [Com. Code § 7202(a)]. For this reason, and also because the storage of goods, other than storage-in-transit for which a warehouse receipt is not issued, is not regulated by any governmental authority, the types of forms used by storage companies for the warehouse receipt vary significantly.

Although the receipt need not be in any particular format, it must contain certain terms or information for the warehouse to avoid liability for damages caused by the omission of those terms [Com. Code § 7202(b)]. These terms include matters such as [Com. Code § 7202(b)]:

- The location of the warehouse where the goods are stored;
- The date of issue of the receipt and a unique identification code;
- A statement as to whether the goods will be delivered to the specified person (in the case of a nonnegotiable document) or the bearer of the warehouse receipt; and
- A description of the goods or the packages containing them.

The warehouse receipt must also include the rates of storage and handling charges and a statement of the amount of advances made and liabilities incurred for which the warehouse claims a lien or security interest [Com. Code § 7202(b)(5), (9); see Com. Code § 7209; see also § 54A.24]. In addition, the warehouse may insert in the warehouse receipt any other terms that are not contrary to the provisions of the Commercial Code and that do not impair its obligation of delivery [see § 54A.22[4]] or its duty of care [see § 54A.22[2]]. Any contrary provisions are ineffective [Com. Code § 7202(c)].

For a more detailed guide to the drafting of a warehouse receipt, see § 54A.120. For alternative provisions for use in warehouse receipts, see Hart & Willier, Forms & Procedures Under the Uniform Commercial Code (Matthew Bender).

PART II.

CONTRACT TERMS AND CONDITIONS

ARTICLE I. RATES AND CHARGES

1. The rates and charges to be paid by the Depositor to the Company are specified in the contract and the rate schedule on file in the office of the Company and as changed from time to time by the Company.
2. The basic minimum rate applies when the Depositor limits and releases the liability of the Company for loss and damages to _____ [e.g., $.60 or $.30 or $.10] per pound per article.
3. An additional valuation charge is made when the Depositor declares a lump sum value on the entire lot.

ARTICLE II. LIABILITY OF COMPANY

IT IS AGREED THAT THE COMPANY WILL:

1. BE LIABLE for damages for loss of or injury to the stored goods caused by the failure of the Company to exercise the level of care regarding the goods as a reasonably careful person would exercise under similar circumstances.
2. NOT BE LIABLE for loss, injury, damage, or delay caused by or resulting from:
 - (a) An act, omission, or order of the Depositor or the owner of the stored goods or the servant, agent, or employee of either the Depositor or the owner of the goods;
 - (b) Insects, moths, vermin, depreciation, deterioration, obsolescence, and ordinary wear and tear;
 - (c) The nature of the article, or any defect, characteristic, or inherent vice of the article, including susceptibility to damage because of atmospheric conditions such as temperature and humidity, or changes in those conditions;
 - (d) Hostile, or warlike action in time of peace or war by an authority maintaining or using military forces; nuclear reaction or nuclear radiation or radioactive contamination; insurrection, rebellion, revolution, civil war, usurped power or any action taken by government authority against such an occurrence;
 - (e) Earthquake, liquefaction, flood, and rising waters, or other act of God;
 - (f) Fire, explosion, lightning, windstorm, tornado, cyclone, hurricane, collapse of building or sprinkler tanks, fall of elevators, leakage or failure of sprinkler systems;
 - (g) Strikes, lockouts, labor disturbances, riots, civil unrest, or the act of any person or persons taking part in any such occurrence or each; or
 - (h) Breakage of glass, chinaware, bric-a-brac, or similar articles of brittle or fragile nature, UNLESS packed and unpacked by the Company (or a household goods carrier or warehouse) or the breakage results from the negligence of the Company as shown by evidence of physical external damage to the packing container.
3. NOT BE LIABLE for loss or damage occurring:
 - (a) After packing when done by the Company but before delivery to the Company while the property is in the custody or control of the Depositor or his or her agent;
 - (b) Before delivery to the Company;

(c) After delivery to the Company when the Company is directed to deliver the property at a place or places at which the Depositor or his or her agent is not present; or

(d) After the property has been delivered to or receipted for by the Depositor or the owner of the property or the authorized agent of either.

ARTICLE III. LIMITATION OF AMOUNT OF LIABILITY

1. The total liability of the Company for physical loss or damage may not exceed the least of the following items:

(a) The cost of repairing damaged property.

(b) The cost of replacing lost or destroyed property with material of like kind and quality.

(c) The difference between the actual cash value of damaged property at the time of receipt by the Company, and at the time of delivery.

(d) The actual cash value of such property at the time and place of the loss.

(e) Either the released value of _____ [e.g., $.60 or $.30 or $.10] per pound per article (if so declared) or the lump sum value declared on the entire lot.

2. In determining the actual cash value of property, depreciation will be deducted, and sentimental value will be excluded. The deduction for depreciation means the Depositor is charged for the betterment or increase in value of the property from the worn or deteriorated or depreciated property being restored to a better condition or being replaced by an item of like kind and quality of greater value.

3. The total liability of the Company with regard to the sets of matched pieces may not exceed the cost of repairing or replacing the physically lost or damaged piece or pieces only, or the value of the lost or damaged piece or pieces only, and does not extend to repairing, replacing, or recovering the entire set or any diminution in value of the set as a whole, and may not exceed the released value of the lost or damaged piece or pieces.

4. The Company is not liable for consequential damages from negligent delay or proximately caused by the physical loss or damage to any property, unless at the time of deposit, the Depositor delivers a notice in writing to the Company stating the nature and extent of the consequential damages that may be incurred by the Depositor in the event of either negligent delay or physical loss or damage to any stored property.

ARTICLE IV. OWNERSHIP OF GOODS

The Depositor represents and warrants to the Company that the Depositor has the lawful possession of and legal right and authority to store all of the property described in this Receipt. If any claims, demands, or rights adverse to the right of the Depositor arise, the Depositor agrees to pay all storage and other charges together with any costs and expenses incurred by the Company in defending against any litigation or adverse claims, including attorneys' fees, that the Company may reasonably incur or becomes liable to pay. The Company is specifically authorized, at its option, in the event of any adverse claim or demand concerning the ownership or right of possession of the property, to interplead the Depositor and all other claimants.

ARTICLE V. ADDITIONS TO STORAGE

Any additional goods delivered after the date of this Receipt by the Depositor to the Company for storage as a part of this lot while this Receipt is outstanding are subject to the terms and conditions of this Receipt. If a lump sum value is declared on the entire lot, the Depositor may increase that lump sum value by the value of the additional goods stored, and the monthly storage and valuation charges will be proportionately increased.

ARTICLE VI. SERVICES TO STORED GOODS

A warehouse labor charge will be made for placing the goods in storage and for removing them to the platform for delivery. The other services undertaken to be performed by this Company pursuant to this Receipt are storage, packing, moving, and shipping, and the Company does not accept responsibility or undertake to provide additional attention or services, unless specifically agreed pursuant to written "Orders for Service" given to the Company by the Depositor, and accepted by the Company. However, if the Company in its sole discretion should determine that moth treating, fumigating, or otherwise treating or handling all or a portion of the stored goods is necessary for the protection of the goods, or for the protection of other goods stored in the depository, it may render that service and add its regular charges for those services to the amount payable by the Depositor.

ARTICLE VII. CORRECTING ERRORS

Unless written notice is given by the Depositor to the Company within _____ [e.g., 15 or 30] days after this Receipt was signed on behalf of the Company, this Receipt will be deemed to be correct with respect to both the listing of the property received by the Company and the declarations made by the Depositor.

ARTICLE VIII. TRANSFER OF STORED GOODS

The Company may, _____ [with or without] notice to the Depositor, transfer the goods from the address set forth in this receipt, and store them in any other warehouse or building of the Company, whether owned or leased, and may move them, or any part them, from one location within a building to another.

ARTICLE IX. ACCESS AND DELIVERY

The goods deposited under this receipt will be ready for access or delivery during regular working hours or regular working days on _____ [e.g., 24 hours] notice, provided that all storage and other charges are paid in full. [Optional: Saturday is not a working day.] The Company is not responsible for delays in access or delivery caused by strikes, or other conditions beyond its control. An additional charge will be made for all access to or part delivery of the goods.

ARTICLE X. TRANSFER OF RECEIPT

No transfer of this receipt will be recognized unless all charges are paid and the transfer is entered on the books of the Company.

ARTICLE XI. SHIPPING OR FORWARDING

The Company is authorized to act for the Depositor in arranging for delivery or shipment of goods from storage at the declared value of not exceeding _____ [e.g., $.60 or $.30 or $.10] per pound per article, unless the Depositor has declared a lump sum value on the entire lot, in which case the Company will forward or ship the declared goods of higher value. The carrier's or forwarder's liability for loss or damage during delivery or shipment is limited to the declared value.

ARTICLE XII. CONDITION OF DEPOSITORIES

No warranty or representation is made that any of the warehouse buildings of the Company are fireproof or that the goods stored in the buildings cannot be destroyed by fire. The Company _____ [does or does not] undertake to maintain a watchman or other burglar alarm systems.

ARTICLE XIII. INSURANCE

The stored goods are not insured by the Company. The Company, however, does insure its legal liability.

ARTICLE XIV. TERMS OF PAYMENT

The payments for storage and other charges are due and payable on the date of this Receipt and on the same date of each succeeding month thereafter. When goods are allowed to remain in storage for a fraction of a month, a full month's storage will be charged. Interest at the rate of _____ [specify percent] per month, charged monthly, will be made on freight or other charges advanced by the Company. The same interest charge will be assessed on the entire unpaid balance of the account if three months storage charge remains unpaid.

ARTICLE XV. COMPANY'S LIEN

It is agreed that the Company has a general lien against the Depositor and all other persons on any and all property deposited with it, and on the proceeds from the sale for all charges provided in this contract, including storage charges, claims for money advanced, interest, insurance, transportation, labor, wrapping, weighing, and all other charges and expenses in relation to the property or any part, for all expenses necessary for preservation of the property, all reasonable charges and expenses for notice and advertisement of sale and sale of the property when Depositor defaults, and for all costs including court costs and reasonable attorneys' fees in collecting charges or enforcing this lien, or defending itself if the Company is made a party to any litigation concerning the goods stored under this Receipt, or in filing any action in interpleader for the determination of ownership of the property deposited with the Company. The Depositor promises to pay all charges when due and the Company may, at its option, bring suit for delinquent charges without first foreclosing its lien.

ARTICLE XVI. TIME FOR FILING CLAIMS AND SUITS

The Company is not liable for the loss of, destruction of, or damage to the goods or any part of the goods unless, after the date on which the goods are delivered, or demand for the goods is refused:

1. Within _____ [e.g., 60 days] after that date, the Depositor presents a claim in writing to the Company;

2. Within _____ [e.g., one year] after that date, suit is filed by the Depositor or other person entitled to sue.

ARTICLE XVII. ARBITRATION

The Company may require that any disputes or claim arising out of or for the breach of this agreement or in connection with property stored under this agreement, whether founded in tort or contract, be settled by arbitration under the arbitration laws of the state in which the depositary is located and the rules of the American Arbitration Association.

ARTICLE XVIII. CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Notice of any change of address must be given by the Depositor in writing and acknowledged in writing by the Company, and no notice of any change of address is valid or binding against the Company if given in any other manner. It is expressly understood and agreed that all notices of any nature to be given to the Depositor must be sent to the address shown on the face of this Receipt until a written notice of change is received by the Company and acknowledged by it in writing.

ARTICLE XIX. SEVERABILITY

If any term of this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be void or unenforceable, the remainder of this agreement remains in full force and effect.

ARTICLE XX. EFFECT ON HEIRS AND ASSIGNS

This agreement is binding on and inures to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns of the Company and the Depositor.

ARTICLE XXI. TIME OF THE ESSENCE

Time is of the essence of this agreement.

ARTICLE XXII. ENTIRE AGREEMENT

This warehouse receipt and storage contract constitutes the entire agreement between the parties. Any prior agreements, promises, or negotiations, whether oral or written, that are not expressly set forth in this contract are of no force or effect. There are no other terms, warranties, representations, or agreements of either the depositor or the company not contained in this receipt and contract.

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Warehouse Storage

1. Warehouse Receipts and Lien Enforcement

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.201

§ 54A.201 Certificate of Interest Under Warehouse Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a storage company to evidence the extension of a blanket policy of insurance issued to the storage company by an insurance company to cover the storage company's liability for physical loss or damage to goods stored by a depositor who has elected to purchase coverage under the blanket policy. This form illustrates the type of certificate that a depositor who has arranged this coverage or "admitted liability" [see [b], below] receives from the storage company. The insurance company usually supplies printed certificate forms to the storage company. After all required data is inserted in the appropriate blanks on the certificate, it is signed and dated by the storage company's representative and given to the depositor. The monthly premium for this insurance coverage is paid by the depositor to the storage company simultaneously with the monthly payment for storage.

[b] Admitted Liability

Because the liability of the storage company for loss or damage to stored goods is ordinarily limited by the terms of the warehouse receipt [see § 54A.200[2]], liability is usually limited to loss or damage resulting from negligence of the storage company and the amount of liability is usually limited to a specified amount in cents per pound per article. Therefore, it is advisable for the depositor to procure insurance covering the stored goods. This insurance can generally be purchased through the storage company.

Most storage companies, as a part of the insurance policies they obtain to cover their legal liability regarding all stored goods, are given the right by their insurance company to admit liability with regard to any particular storage lot for all physical loss or damage, with certain specified exceptions. The depositor receiving the benefit of this admitted liability pays to the storage company a monthly premium. If any loss or damage comes within the terms of the admitted liability, the depositor is compensated by the insurance company that insures both the legal liability and the admitted liability of the storage company.

I. ADMITTED LIABILITY

1. In consideration of the monthly premium specified above, which is to be paid by the Depositor to the Storage Company, the Storage Company admits liability (subject to the exclusions, terms, and conditions provided for in this Certificate) for all physical loss or damage from any external cause to all the goods of the Depositor included in the aforementioned Receipt and Lot Number. For this limited purpose the Storage Company waives all limitations and exclusions from liability and other defenses that it may have at law or under contract.

2. This admitted liability applies only during the period that the goods of the Depositor are in the custody of the Storage Company and are either in storage in the warehouse or in transit within _____ [e.g., 50] miles to or from the warehouse. The monthly premium to be paid by the Depositor applies to each month (or fraction of month) of the period for which liability is admitted.

3. _____ [name of insurance company] under this policy will, on behalf of the Storage Company, indemnify the Depositor for liability admitted by the Storage Company, subject to the exclusions, terms, and conditions provided for in this Certificate.

II. EXCEPTIONS TO ADMITTED LIABILITY

Notwithstanding anything declared in this Certificate to the contrary, the Storage Company does not admit liability for physical loss or damage:

1. From insects, moths, vermin, dampness of atmosphere, extremes or changes of temperature, ordinary wear and tear, gradual deterioration, inherent vice, depreciation or delay.
2. Caused by breakage of fragile articles such as china, glassware, statuary, marble, bric-a-brac, and other articles of similar nature and character unless:
 - Packed and unpacked by the employees or agents of the Storage Company; or
 - Directly caused by fire, lightning, earthquake, liquefaction, tornado, cyclone, windstorm, flood, collapse of building or sprinkler tanks, or fall of elevator or escalator.
3. Sustained during any cleaning, repairing, restoration, or retouching process, unless caused by fire.
4. To documents, money, currency, securities, jewelry, watches, precious stones, or other articles of extraordinary value whether such extraordinary value arises from the articles' age, being irreplaceable, unique, or some other cause unless these articles are declared in the space provided above.
5. Caused by or resulting from:
 - Hostile or warlike action in time of peace or war, including action in hindering and combating or defending against an actual, impending, or expected attack:

 - By military, naval, or air forces;
 - By any agent of any such government, power, authority, or forces;
 - Any weapon of war employing atomic energy or radioactive force whether in time of peace or war;

or

 - Insurrection, rebellion, revolution, civil war, usurped power or action taken by governmental authority; hindering, combating or defending against such an occurrence; seizure or destruction under quarantine or customs regulations; confiscation by order of any government or public authority; or risks of contraband or illegal transportation or trade.

6. Caused by or resulting from nuclear reaction or nuclear radiation, or radioactive contamination, all whether controlled or uncontrolled, and whether that loss is direct or indirect, or proximate or remote.

7. Caused by or resulting from strikes, lockouts labor disturbances, riots, civil unrest, or the act of any person or persons taking part in such occurrence or disorder.

III. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

Limitation of Liability to Actual Cash Value

1. The liability of the Storage Company as admitted in this Certificate may not exceed the lesser of:

- a. The difference between the actual cash value of the goods at the time of pickup by the Storage Company and the actual cash value at the time of delivery to the Depositor resulting from physical loss or damage, to be ascertained with proper deductions for depreciation howsoever caused; or
- b. What it would cost to repair or replace the damaged goods with material of like kind and quality, but in no event is the Storage Company liable beyond the amount declared by the Depositor.

The phrase "to be ascertained with proper deductions for depreciation howsoever caused" means that the Depositor shall be charged for the betterment or increase in value of the goods resulting from the worn or deteriorated being restored to a better condition or being replaced by an item of like kind and quality of greater value.

Effect of Insuring for Less Than Declared Value

2. In the event that the actual cash value (after applying proper deductions for depreciation) of the goods at time of pickup exceeds the amount declared, it is agreed that the Depositor will be regarded as his or her own insurer for the difference, and the Depositor must bear that proportion of any loss that the undeclared amount bears to the actual cash value of the goods.

Pair or Set

3. If physical loss or damage occurs to any article that is part of a pair or set, the liability of the Storage Company as admitted in this Certificate may not exceed the cost of repairing or replacing the lost or damaged article only. This liability does not extend to repairing or replacing the entire pair or set, or any diminution in value of the pair or set as a whole.

Parts

4. If physical loss or damage occurs to any part of the goods consisting of several parts when complete for sale or use, the Storage Company by virtue of its admitted liability is liable only for the value of the part lost or damaged.

Misrepresentation and Fraud

5. The admitted liability of the Storage Company is void ab initio if the Depositor has concealed or misrepresented any material fact or circumstance concerning the goods to the Storage Company or in any case of fraud, attempted fraud, or false swearing by the Depositor in regard to any matter relating to the admitted liability of the Storage Company, whether before or after any physical loss or damage.

Time for Filing Claim and Suit

6. The Depositor must as soon as practicable report to the Storage Company every alleged physical loss or damage. The Storage Company is not liable as admitted in this Certificate unless:

- a. The Depositor files with the Storage Company a written claim on the form that on request will be made available by the Storage Company within _____ [e.g., 90] days after the date of delivery of the goods; and
- b. If the claim is not settled amicably, suit is filed within _____ [e.g., one year] after the date of delivery of the goods.

Other Insurance or Indemnification

7. The admitted liability of the Storage Company does not extend to any loss or damage for which the Depositor is or will be reimbursed or otherwise made whole by recovery from any other insurance company or other person.

Subrogation

8. In the event of any payment to the Depositor by the Storage Company or by _____ [name of insurance company] by reason of the admitted liability of the Storage Company, the Depositor will subrogate to the Storage Company his or her rights of recovery against any person or organization for that loss or damage. The Depositor will execute instruments and papers and do whatever else is necessary to secure these rights of subrogation to the Storage Company. The Depositor will do nothing to prejudice the rights of the Storage Company to recover for any loss or damage.

The notice of claim of lien must be sent to all persons known to claim an interest in the goods [Com. Code § 7210(b)(1)]. - A demand for payment within specified time not less than 10 days after receipt of notice.
- A conspicuous statement that unless the claim is paid by the specified date, the goods will be advertised for sale and sold by auction at the stated time and place.

A term or clause is conspicuous if it is written, displayed, or presented so that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term is "conspicuous" or not is a decision for the court [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and

- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

This form is a notice of satisfaction of a warehouse's lien. It may be used by a depositor, or any other person claiming a right or interest in the stored goods, to notify the warehouse that the person is paying the lien amount and redeeming the goods. If the goods subject to a lien are redeemed, the warehouse may not sell the goods. Instead, the warehouse must continue to store the goods under the terms of the warehouse receipt and Division 7 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 7210(c)].

Whenever stored goods become a hazard to other property, to the warehouse, or to persons as a result of a quality or condition of the goods of which the warehouse had no notice at the time of deposit, the warehouse may sell the goods without advertisement on reasonable notice to all persons known to claim an interest in the goods. PART IV. FORMS

B. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.220

§ 54A.220 Self-Service Storage Rental Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a rental agreement for a self-service storage facility. On execution by the owner of the storage facility and the occupant of the self-service storage area, the agreement governs the rights and obligations of the parties.

This agreement satisfies the basic requirements applicable to contracts for the rental or lease of storage space [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(a)]:

- The agreement is in writing.
- The agreement includes a statement that the occupant's property will be subject to a claim or lien and may even be sold to satisfy the lien if the rent or other charges due under the agreement remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, and that these actions are authorized by the California Self-Service Storage Facility Act.
- The agreement requests and provides space for the occupant to give the name and address of another person to whom the preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21704] and the subsequent notices required by the Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705 (notice of lien sale); see also § 54A.222] may be sent.

This third requirement is particularly important because the owner has no lien against the stored property unless the agreement requests and provides space for an alternative name and address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)].

[2] FORM

Self-Service Storage Rental Agreement

SELF-SERVICE STORAGE RENTAL AGREEMENT

This Agreement is made on _____ [date], at _____ [city and state], between _____ [name of owner] ("Owner") and _____ [name of occupant] ("Occupant").

Lease Term

[If tenancy is to be month-to-month, use:]

1. Owner rents to Occupant and Occupant hires from Owner the self-service rental storage space described as [description or designation of space, e.g., Unit No. G-15] in _____ [name of self-service storage facility, e.g., ABC Self Storage], located at _____ [address of facility, e.g., 123 Center Street, Townville, CA]. The lease term begins on _____ [date], and continues from month to month thereafter. Either party may terminate this Agreement at any time by giving the other party written notice of intention to terminate at least 30 days in advance of the termination.

[If agreement involves lease for specified term certain, use:]

1. Owner leases to Occupant the following self-service rental storage space ("space"): [description or designation of space] in _____ [name of self-service storage facility, e.g., ABC Self Storage], located at _____ [address of facility, e.g., 123 Center Street, Townville, CA], for a term of [e.g., one year], commencing on _____ [date], and terminating on _____ [date], unless sooner terminated as provided in this Agreement.

Rent

2. Occupant agrees to pay $_____ rent per month, payable in advance on the _____ day of each month [add, if desired:, plus the further sum of $_____, representing prorated rent for the first month from the date of possession]. Rent is payable to Owner at the address set forth in Paragraph 30 of this Agreement, or at any other address designated by Owner in writing [add, if desired: at least _____ days before the payment due date].

Security Deposit

3. Occupant has deposited $_____ as security. Owner may use any amounts from that deposit that are reasonably necessary to remedy Occupant's defaults in the payment of rent or to repair damages caused by Occupant. If applied toward rent or damages during the term of this Agreement, Occupant agrees to reinstate the total security deposit on five days written notice to Occupant. On termination of this Agreement, the balance, if any, of the security deposit will be mailed to Occupant at Occupant's last known address within 14 days after Occupant surrenders the premises.

Use and Maintenance of Space

4. Occupant must use the space solely for the purpose of storing personal property. Occupant may not use the space for residential purposes; as an office, workshop, or studio; for the storage of flammable materials or explosives; for the keeping of live animals; or for any unlawful purpose.

Occupant may not permit the accumulation of refuse, or dispose of liquid or other waste, in or about the space, nor cause or permit any nuisance or other condition or act that may interfere with the use of the surrounding premises by other occupants or Owner.

Not a Bailment

5. This Agreement is for the [rental or lease] of storage space only. OCCUPANT UNDERSTANDS AND AGREES THAT THIS AGREEMENT IS NOT INTENDED TO, NOR ACTUALLY DOES, CREATE A BAILMENT.

No Water, Heat, or Electricity

6. Occupant acknowledges that the space has no water, heat, electricity, air conditioning, or other utility service, and that Owner is under no obligation to provide any such services at any time during the term of this Agreement.

Access

7. Owner has the right to restrict access to the space at any time, providing the space is available for access by Occupant at least [e.g., 12] hours per day for at least [e.g., six] days per week.

Sublease or Assignment

8. Occupant may not assign this Agreement, sublease all or any part of the space, or permit any other person to occupy or use all or any part of the space without the prior written consent of Owner. Any attempted assignment or sublease in violation of this Paragraph, at the option of Owner, terminates this Agreement and the right of Occupant to use and occupy the space.

Risk of Loss

9. Occupant bears all risk of loss or damage to any property stored in the space. Owner will not provide insurance for any property stored in the space and is not responsible for any damage to or loss of the stored property, whether caused by fire, water, earthquake, liquefaction, theft, or any other risk.

Lock and Key

10. Owner will supply a lock and [specify, e.g., one key or one master and one duplicate key] for the space. This lock is the only lock that may be used to lock the space. Occupant agrees not to use any other lock to lock the space, or to use any other method or device to restrict access to the space without the prior written consent of Owner. Owner will retain keys to the space.

Occupant has paid to Owner the sum of $_____ as a refundable key deposit, which shall be returned to Occupant within 10 days after the lock and key and any duplicate keys are returned undamaged to Owner on termination of this Agreement.

Entry for Maintenance and Inspection

11. Owner is entitled to enter into the space at any reasonable time and for any reasonable purpose, including but not limited to maintenance of the space and the surrounding premises, inspection by governmental agencies, and determining whether Occupant is conforming to the terms of this Agreement and all applicable laws. Owner has the right to retain a key to the space and to unlock the space at all times during the lease for the purpose of exercising this right of maintenance and inspection.

Termination After Destruction or Damage to Space

12. If the space is destroyed or damaged to the extent that it is no longer usable during the term of this Agreement, from any cause other than the conduct or negligence of Occupant, either Owner or Occupant may cancel this Agreement immediately, effective on delivery of written notice to the other party. In the event of cancellation, Occupant's obligation to pay rent terminates immediately; however, Occupant remains liable for any unpaid rent due for occupancy of the space before the date of the destruction or damage.

Termination for Breach of Agreement

13. The failure of Occupant to comply with any term or condition contained in this Agreement constitutes a breach of this Agreement. In the event that Occupant breaches this Agreement by failing to comply with any term or condition, other than by nonpayment of rent, Owner may, at Owner's sole option, immediately terminate this Agreement. The waiver by Owner of Occupant's breach of any term or condition of this Agreement does not constitute a waiver of any subsequent breach.

Termination On Abandonment

14. On Occupant's apparent abandonment of the space, Owner may, at owner's option, forthwith enter into and take possession of the space, change the lock or locks to the space, and deny Occupant further access to or use of the space, all without notice to Occupant. Owner's entry after apparent abandonment immediately terminates Occupant's right to use and occupy the space.

Termination for Nonpayment of Rent

15. If any part of the rent due from Occupant under this Agreement remains unpaid for 14 consecutive days, Owner may at Owner's sole option, terminate this Agreement and the right of Occupant to use and occupy the space by sending a preliminary lien notice, in the form provided by law, to Occupant at Occupant's last-known address and to any alternative address specified in Paragraph 17, specifying a date on which Occupant's right to use the space terminates unless all sums due are paid by Occupant before the date specified in the preliminary lien notice. If Occupant fails to pay the full amount due by the date specified in the preliminary lien notice, Owner is entitled to deny Occupant further access to the space, and Owner may enter the space, remove any property to a place of safe keeping, and enforce Owner's lien against that property by sale of the property in the manner provided by law.

Lien Against Occupant's Property

16. As authorized by the California Self-Service Storage Facility Act, if any part of the rent due from Occupant under this Agreement remains unpaid for 14 consecutive days, Occupant's stored property will be subject to a claim of lien for unpaid rent and other charges. The stored property may be sold to satisfy the lien if the rent or other charges due remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days.

[Include following paragraph in order for the Self-Service Storage Facility Act to apply and for the owner's lien to attach to the stored property (Bus. & Prof. Code § 21712(b)):]

Alternative Address

17. TO OCCUPANT: PURSUANT TO THE CALIFORNIA SELF-SERVICE STORAGE FACILITY ACT [BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTIONS 21700-21716], YOU ARE REQUESTED TO GIVE THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF ANOTHER PERSON TO WHOM THE PRELIMINARY LIEN NOTICE AND THE SUBSEQUENT NOTICES REQUIRED TO BE GIVEN UNDER THE ACT MAY BE SENT. IF YOU GIVE THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF ANOTHER PERSON AS REQUESTED, NOTICES WILL BE SENT TO YOU AT YOUR LAST KNOWN ADDRESS AND TO THE PERSON DESIGNATED BY YOU AT THE ADDRESS DESIGNATED BY YOU. IF YOU DO NOT GIVE THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF ANOTHER PERSON, NOTICES WILL BE SENT ONLY TO YOU AT YOUR LAST KNOWN ADDRESS. YOUR FAILURE TO PROVIDE AN ALTERNATIVE ADDRESS DOES NOT AFFECT THE OWNER'S REMEDIES UNDER THIS AGREEMENT OR UNDER ANY OTHER PROVISION OF LAW.

INITIAL ONE OF THE FOLLOWING:

_____ I do not wish to give an alternative address.

_____ I wish to give an alternative address. The alternative address is as follows:

Name of person to whom notices may be sent: _____.

Street address: _____.

City, state, and zip Code: _____.

Rights of Owner on Termination

18. On termination of this Agreement, Owner may, at Owner's option, enter the space and remove all personal property; clean and repair the space; replace the lock and keys; and exercise any and all rights otherwise available to an owner of a self-service storage facility pursuant to law. Further, Owner may impose a lien on all personal property located in the space for rent, labor, or other charges, present or future, and for all expenses incurred for the storage, preservation, sale, or disposition of any and all property stored in the space. Owner's remedies as specified in this Agreement are in addition to, and not in lieu of, any other legal or equitable relief to which Owner would otherwise be entitled.

Accrual of Rent After Default

19. If Owner elects not to terminate this Agreement on any breach or default by Occupant, all rent and other sums due under this Agreement continue to accrue.

Service Charges

20. Occupant agrees to pay Owner a monthly service charge equal to [specify amount, e.g., 6 percent of the amount due or the sum of $15.00, whichever is greater,] on all accounts that are delinquent for 10 days or more, for the purpose of deferring expenses and costs of Owner related to additional record keeping, accounting, billing, and other additional measures necessary or appropriate to control and collect payment.

In addition, for each check that is returned to Owner unpaid, Occupant agrees to pay Owner a service charge equal to [specify amount, e.g., 6 percent of the amount of the check or the sum of $15.00, whichever is greater].

Notices

21. All notices required or permitted to be given under this Agreement must be personally served or mailed by certified United States mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, to the parties at their addresses stated in Paragraph 30, below, or any other address subsequently furnished in writing to the other party. All notices must be similarly sent to any other person whose name and address are set forth in Paragraph 17.

Both parties are entitled to rely on the currency of the addresses set forth in Paragraph 30, below, unless notified otherwise in writing. Any notice mailed in accordance with this paragraph will conclusively be presumed to have been received within two business days after mailing.

Attorneys' Fees

22. If any action is instituted in a court to enforce this Agreement or any provision of this Agreement, the prevailing party is entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees and all costs of suit from the other party, in addition to any other relief to which the prevailing party may be entitled.

Nonwaiver

23. Failure of either party to enforce any provision of this Agreement is not construed as a waiver of that provision or of either party's right to enforce that provision or any other provision of this Agreement.

Severability

24. If any term of this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be void or unenforceable, the remainder of this Agreement remains in full force and effect.

Effect on Heirs and Assigns

25. This Agreement is binding on and inures to the benefit of the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns of Owner and Occupant.

Time of the Essence

26. Time is of the essence of this Agreement.

Entire Agreement

27. This Agreement contains the entire agreement between Owner and Occupant with respect to the subject matter of this Agreement. Any prior agreements, promises, or negotiations, whether oral or written, that are not expressly set forth in this Agreement are of no force or effect.

Modification

28. This Agreement can be modified only by a writing signed by both Owner and Occupant. Any purported oral modification of the terms of this Agreement is of no force or effect.

This form is a disclosure document for the transportation of individual storage containers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(6); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(d) (individual storage container means container that is fully enclosed and locked, contains not less than 100 and not more than 1,100 cubic feet, and is constructed out of durable material appropriate for repeated use)]. It is one of the requirements with which an owner or operator of a self service storage facility must comply if he or she wants to transport, for a fee, individual storage containers to and from the facility, without a household goods carrier permit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(6); see also [3], below (other requirements)].

Disclosure must be in a written document separate from others furnished at the time of disclosure [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(6)]. The customer must receive the disclosure statement and the rental agreement a minimum of 72 hours before delivery of the empty individual storage container [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)]. However, the customer may, in writing, knowingly and voluntarily waive that receipt [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)]. The company must record in writing and retain for at least six months after the end of the rental the time and method of delivery of the information, any waiver made by the customer, and the times and dates of initial pickup and redelivery of the containerized goods [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)].

A disclosure statement must contain all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(5)]:

- A detailed description of the transfer service, including company's commitment to use its best efforts to place the container in an appropriate location designated by the customer.
- The dimensions and construction of the individual storage container.

- The unit charge, if any, for the container transfer, that is, in addition to the storage charge or other fees under the rental agreement.
- The availability of delivery or pickup by the customer of his or her goods at the self storage facility.
- The maximum allowable distance, measured from the self service storage facility, for the initial pickup and final delivery of the loaded container.
- The precise terms of company's right, at its discretion, to move the container from its initial location; and a statement that customer will not be required to pay additional charges with regard to this transfer.
- The conspicuous disclosure in bold text of the allocation of responsibility for risk of loss or damage to the customer's goods, including any disclaimer of the company's liability, and the procedure for presenting any claim regarding loss or damage to the company.

[c] Additional Requirements

In addition to the written disclosure document, the owner or operator of a self service storage facility, or a household goods carrier, must comply with all of following conditions to avoid regulation under Pub. Util. Code § 5101 et seq.:

- The fee charged to deliver empty individual storage container, transport loaded container to facility, or return loaded container to customer may not exceed $100 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(1)].
- The owner, operator, or carrier, or their affiliates may not load, pack, or otherwise handle the container's contents [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(2)].
- The owner, operator, or carrier must be properly registered or hold the required permit [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(3)].
- The owner, operator, or carrier must have cargo insurance of at least $20,000 per shipment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701.1(a)(4)].

Container Pick Up and Delivery. Company will deliver an individual storage container to Lessee, pick up that container at the location designated by Lessee, and transport that container to Company's self storage facility located at the address described above. However, due to space limitations and the need to accommodate other lessees, Company cannot absolutely guarantee that Lessee's container will be placed in the exact location requested by Lessee. Company requires at least [specify, e.g., 5 business days] advance notice by Lessee to schedule pick up or delivery of a container. Company will make a reasonable effort to accommodate Lessee, but cannot guarantee pickup at a specific time of day and will not guarantee pick up on the scheduled date. If for any reason Company cannot pick up or deliver a container on a scheduled date, Company will give Lessee priority on the next available pick up or delivery date or will reschedule on the next available pickup or delivery date that is convenient for Lessee. Company [requires or does not require] that Lessee be physically present at Lessee's premises at the time of pickup or delivery.

Dimensions of Individual Storage Container: [specify].

Construction: [specify]

Unit Charge per Container Transfer: [specify charge not to exceed $100]. This charge is in addition to the storage charge or any other fees due under the rental agreement.

Company agrees to notify Lessee [e.g., 48 hours] prior to moving Lessee's container, except when the container is moved as a result of an emergency, in which case Company agrees to notify Lessee within 24 hours thereafter. In the event that Company exercises its right to move Lessee's container from its initial location, Lessee will not be required to pay additional charges with regard to the transfer.

Risk of Loss

IT IS AGREED THAT THE COMPANY WILL

(A) BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF OR INJURY TO THE STORED GOODS DURING TRANSPORTATION IN THE INDIVIDUAL STORAGE CONTAINER TO AND FROM THE STORAGE FACILITY CAUSED BY THE FAILURE OF THE COMPANY TO EXERCISE THE LEVEL OF CARE REGARDING THE GOODS AS A REASONABLY CAREFUL PERSON WOULD EXERCISE UNDER SIMILAR CIRCUMSTANCES.

(B) NOT BE LIABLE FOR LOSS, INJURY, DAMAGE, OR DELAY (EXCEPT AS PROVIDED BY BUSINESS & PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 21701.1(b)) CAUSED BY OR RESULTING FROM

(1) AN ACT OR OMISSION, OR ORDER OF THE CUSTOMER, OR ITS SERVANT, AGENT, OR EMPLOYEE.

(2) THE PACKING, LOADING, OR UNLOADING THE CONTENTS OF THE INDIVIDUAL STORAGE CONTAINER, INCLUDING THE BREAKAGE OF GLASS, BRIC-A-BRAC, OR SIMILAR ARTICLES OF BRITTLE OR FRAGILE NATURE, UNLESS THE BREAKAGE RESULTS FROM THE NEGLIGENCE OF THE COMPANY AS SHOWN BY EVIDENCE OF PHYSICAL EXTERNAL DAMAGE TO THE INDIVIDUAL STORAGE CONTAINER.

CHAPTER 54A STORAGE OF GOODS

PART IV. FORMS

B. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.221

§ 54A.221 Preliminary Lien Notice

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a preliminary lien notice in substantially the form prescribed by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21704; see [b], below]. When an occupant owes any part of the rent or other charges due for 14 consecutive days, an owner may terminate storage and begin the lien enforcement process by giving the occupant both a preliminary lien notice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21704] and a notice of lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a); see § 54A.222]. This preliminary lien notice is the first prerequisite to terminating the occupant's right to occupy a self-service storage space and imposing an owner's lien on the occupant's stored property [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703; see [c], below].

This notice must be sent to the occupant's address, as well as to any alternative address provided by the occupant [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21703, 21712(b)]. The occupant's last known address is the address provided by the occupant in the most recent rental agreement, or any address provided by the occupant in a subsequent written notice of a change of address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(f)]. The notice must be sent by certified mail, postage prepaid, or by regular first-class mail if the owner obtains a certificate of mailing indicating the date the notice was mailed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]. Although certified mail is the more expensive of these two methods, it may be more advantageous to the owner to use that method because the owner's right to remove the occupant's property from the space accrues more quickly when certified mail is used [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a), (b), discussed in [c], below].

A preliminary lien notice must contain all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]:

- An itemized statement of the owner's claim, showing the sums due at the time of the notice and the date when the sums became due.
- A statement that the occupant's right to use the storage space will terminate on a specified date (not less than 14 days after the mailing of the notice) unless all sums due are paid by the occupant before the specified date.

- A notice that the occupant may be denied access to the storage space after the termination date if the sums are not paid and that an owner's lien, as provided for in Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702, may be imposed after the termination date.
- The name, street address, and telephone number of the owner, or his or her designated agent, whom the occupant may contact to respond to the notice.

[c] Overview of Lien Enforcement Procedure

If any part of the rent or other charges due from an occupant remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, the owner may begin the process of enforcing an owner's lien against the occupant of a self-service storage space [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703]. To enforce the lien, the owner must first send the occupant this preliminary lien notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21704].

If the total sum due has not been paid as of the date specified in the preliminary lien notice as the termination date, a lien attaches as of that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a),(b)]. The owner may then enter the space and deny the occupant access to it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(1), (2), (b)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by certified mail and the total sum due was not paid as of the termination date, the owner may also remove any property found in the space to a place of safe keeping [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(3)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular first class mail with a certificate of mailing, the owner still may enter the space and deny the owner access to it if the total sum due has not been paid as of the termination date, but may not remove the occupant's property until at least 14 days after the termination date, during which time the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(b)].

In either case, the owner must then send the occupant a notice of lien sale [see § 54A.222] stating, among other things, that the occupant's right to use the space has terminated, that the stored property is subject to a lien, the amount of the lien, and that the property will be sold to satisfy the lien after a specified date (not less than 14 days from the date of mailing the notice) unless the occupant pays the full amount of the lien, or executes and returns a declaration in opposition to the lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1)(A)-(D)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular mail with a certificate of mailing, the notice of lien sale must include a statement that the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount prior to the date specified as the termination date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1)(C)]. When mailing the notice of lien sale, the owner must include a blank declaration in opposition to lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2); see § 54A.223].

The next step in the lien enforcement procedure depends on whether the occupant completes and returns a declaration; thereafter, the owner may advertise and conduct the sale of the goods in a commercially reasonable manner [see [d], [e], below].

The failure of an owner to comply with the provisions of the Self-Service Storage Facility Act does not impair the rights of a good-faith purchaser at a lien sale. A purchaser in good faith of goods sold to enforce a lien, or a judgment entered on a lien, takes the goods free of any rights of persons against whom the lien was claimed, despite the noncompliance by the owner of the storage facility with the requirements of the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21711].

[d] When Judicial Action Required

If the occupant executes a completed declaration in opposition to lien sale [see § 54A.223] and returns it to the owner before the date of sale set forth in the notice of lien sale, the lien may be enforced further only by judicial action [Bus. &

Prof. Code § 21710]. An action to enforce the owner's lien must be commenced by filing a verified complaint and serving the complaint and summons by certified mail addressed to the occupant at his or her last-known address [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21701(f) ("last known address" defined)]. The occupant has 10 days after service in which to respond to the complaint [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(b) (time may be extended for good cause)]. If the occupant does not respond within the time allowed, the clerk of the court, after application by the owner, may enter a default. Thereafter, the owner may apply to the court for judgment in the amount of the lien plus costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(c)].

A judgment in favor of the owner may be enforced by sale of the property by the owner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(d)]. The sale must be conducted in a commercially reasonable manner and must take place at least 10 days after the entry of judgment, unless the occupant pays the owner the full amount of the judgment before the sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(d)]. Enforcement of the judgment may be stayed pending appeal (and the property may be released to the occupant) if the occupant posts a bond in an amount equal to one and one-half times the amount of the judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710(e)].

[e] When Judicial Action Not Required

If the occupant does not return a completed declaration in opposition to lien sale before the date of sale specified in the notice of lien sale, the owner may proceed to sell the property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21706; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21707-21709]. Advertisement of the sale [see § 54A.224] must be published once a week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published in the judicial district where the sale is to be held. If there is no newspaper of general circulation, the advertisement must be posted for at least 10 days before the sale in at least six conspicuous places in the neighborhood of the proposed sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(a)]. The advertisement must include a general description of the goods to be sold, the name of the person on whose account the goods are being stored, the space number of the occupant, and the name and location of the storage facility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(a); see § 54A.224].

The sale must be conducted in a commercially reasonable manner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)]. After deducting the amount of the lien and the costs of sale, the owner must retain any excess proceeds of the sale on the occupant's behalf. The occupant, or any other person having a court order or other judicial process against the property, may claim the excess proceeds (or a portion of the proceeds sufficient to satisfy the particular claim) at any time within one year of the date of sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)]. After the expiration of one year, the owner must pay any remaining excess proceeds to the treasury of the county in which the sale was held [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21707(b)].

[f] Priorities of Multiple Liens

Property stored in a self-service storage facility may be subject to liens other than the lien granted the owner under the Self-Service Storage Facility Act. A vehicle or vessel stored in a self-service storage facility may, for example, be subject to a lien imposed under the Vehicle Code. Similarly, personal property stored in a self-service storage facility may be subject to a perfected security interest under the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9303 (when security interest is perfected)]. The Act contains two provisions dealing with the priorities of multiple liens on stored property:

- Any lien on a vehicle or vessel subject to registration or identification under the Vehicle Code that has attached and is set forth in the documents of title to the vehicle or vessel has priority over any lien created under the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5; see [g], below].
- Any person who has perfected a security interest under Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9101 et. seq.; see also Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] may claim any personal property subject to the security interest and also subject to a lien under the Act by paying the total amount due to the owner of the self-service storage facility as specified in the preliminary lien notice for the storage of the property, provided that no declaration of opposition to the lien sale is executed and returned by the occupant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21708].

Thus, in the second situation, the interest of a person who has perfected a security interest under the Commercial Code is junior to an owner's lien under the Act. The holder of a perfected security interest under the Commercial Code may enforce that interest in the property only by paying the owner of the self-service storage facility. This result is consistent with the Commercial Code rule that a lien given by statute to a person who in the ordinary course of business furnishes services with respect to the goods subject to a perfected security interest has priority over the security interest unless the statute providing for the lien expressly provides to the contrary [Com. Code § 9333].

[g] Liens on Stored Vehicles and Vessels

Liens created under the Act on vehicles or vessels subject to registration or identification under the Vehicle Code are not enforced under the Act but under separate lien-enforcement provisions of the Civil Code and the Harbors and Navigation Code. In the case of a vehicle, the lien must be enforced under Civ. Code § 3071. In the case of a vessel, the lien must be enforced under Harb. & Nav. Code § 503. However, if judicial action is required [see [d], above], the action may be conducted as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 21710 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(b); see [c], [d], above].

Liens on vehicles and vessels subject to registration or identification under the Vehicle Code are subject to a special rule designed to promote prompt enforcement. Under this rule, charges for rent, labor, or other services incurred pursuant to the rental agreement that accrue more than 60 days after the date that the lien is imposed under the Act are not included in the lien, unless the charges are incurred after application is made for authorization to conduct the lien sale pursuant to Civ. Code § 3071 or Harb. & Nav. Code § 503 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(c)]. The effect of this rule is to deprive a lienholder who fails to apply for authorization to conduct a sale within 60 days after the lien is imposed of his or her lien for rent, labor, or other services accruing after the expiration of 60 days.

Proceeds from a lien sale of a vehicle must be disposed of as provided in Civ. Code § 3073 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(d)]. Proceeds from the sale of a vessel must be disposed of as provided in Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21702.5(d)]. These sections provide that the amount necessary to discharge the lien and the actual cost of selling the vehicle or vessel (but not over $100 for a vehicle, $100 for a vessel without a trailer, and $125 for a vessel with a trailer) must be paid to the lienholder [Civ. Code § 3073(a); Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5(a)]. The balance, if any, must be forwarded to the Department of Motor Vehicles and deposited in the Motor Vehicle Account in the State Transportation Fund [Civ. Code § 3073(b); Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5(b)]. Any person claiming an interest in a vehicle or vessel sold at a lien sale may file a claim for a portion of the balance [Civ. Code § 3073(c); Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5(c)]. If the Department determines that the claimant is entitled to an amount from the deposited balance, the Department will pay that amount to the claimant [Civ. Code § 3073(c); Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5(c)]. Claims must be filed within three years of the date that the funds were deposited in the Motor Vehicle Account [Civ. Code § 3073(c); Harb. & Nav. Code § 507.5(c)].

B. Self-Service Storage

22-54A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 54A.222

§ 54A.222 Notice of Lien Sale

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice of lien sale in substantially the form prescribed by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1); see also [b], below]. It must be accompanied by a blank declaration in opposition to the lien sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2); see § 54A.223 for form]. The notice must be sent to the occupant at the occupant's last known address, as well as to any specified alternative address [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21705(c), 21712(b); see also § 54A.220[2], P 17], by certified mail, postage prepaid [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705].

After rent or other charges remain unpaid for 14 consecutive days, the owner may terminate the occupant's storage rights by sending a preliminary lien notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21703; see § 54A.221]. If the total sum due has not been paid as of the date specified in the preliminary lien notice as the termination date, a lien attaches as of that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a), (b)]. The owner may then enter the space and deny the occupant access to it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(1), (2), (b)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by certified mail and the total sum due was not paid as of the termination date, the owner may also remove any property found in the space to a place of safe keeping [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(a)(3)]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular first class mail with a certificate of mailing, the owner still may enter the space and deny the owner access to it if the total sum due has not been paid as of the termination date, but may not remove the occupant's property until at least 14 days after the termination date, during which time the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(b)].

In either case, the owner then must send this notice of lien sale in order to commence the lien enforcement process [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705].

For additional discussions of the procedures for enforcing an owner's lien, see § 54A.132 and § 54A.221[1][c]. For discussion and forms for litigation under the California Self-Service Storage Facility Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 517, Self-Service Storage Facilities (Matthew Bender).

A notice of lien sale must state all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(1)]:

- That the occupant's right to use space has terminated and the occupant no longer has access to the stored property.
- That the stored property is subject to a lien;
- The amount of the lien;
- That the property will be sold to satisfy the lien after the specified date, which may not be less than 14 days from date of mailing the notice, unless the amount of the lien is paid or the occupant executes and returns by certified mail a declaration under penalty of perjury in opposition to the lien sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21705(c)(2); see also § 54A.223]. If the preliminary lien notice was sent by regular mail with a certificate of mailing, the notice of lien sale must include a statement that the occupant may regain full use of the space by paying the full lien amount prior to the date specified as the termination date.
- That any excess proceeds of the sale over the lien amount and the costs of the sale will be retained by owner and may be reclaimed by occupant or another person at any time for period of one year from sale, and that thereafter proceeds will escheat to county.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter discusses negotiable instruments and their use in business transactions. The Legal Background covers terms and principles relating to negotiable instruments. The Transaction Guide includes guides to the use and negotiation of negotiable instruments, as well as guides for solving problems that arise after the negotiation of commercial paper.

The forms section includes promissory notes and individual promissory note provisions. Forms related to the liability of parties to a note or other negotiable instrument, including ratification of an unauthorized signature, discharge from liability, accommodation or guarantee of collection, and a waiver relating to statutes of limitations, are also included. This chapter also includes forms for use in the assignment and collection of notes and other negotiable instruments. The forms are drafted for use in promissory notes; however, they may be used by an endorser to any other negotiable instrument, as applicable.

This chapter does not cover financing, although negotiable instruments are commonly used in connection with financing. Real estate financing and related security interests are covered in Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans , and Ch. 25A, Security Interests for Real Estate Financing . Business finance is covered in Ch. 43, Commercial Loans .

Other commercial lending practices and procedures involving the generation and use of negotiable instruments are covered in Ch. 42, Secured Transactions , Ch. 44, Accounts Receivable Financing and Factoring , Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales , and in Ch. 47, Automotive Financing and Vehicle Leasing, Ch. 48, Agricultural Financing . For discussion of the law of negotiable bills of lading and warehouse receipts, see Ch. 54, Shipment of Property , and Ch. 54A Storage of Goods . Letters of credit and electronic fund transfers are covered in Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers .

Negotiable securities are covered extensively in Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities , and Ch. 6K Non Issuer Transactions In Investment Securities . Loans secured by stock ("margin stock accounts") and the Federal Reserve Bank requirements for these loans are discussed Ch. 43, Commercial Loans.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

A. Nature of Negotiable Instruments

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.10

§ 55.10 Governing Law

[1] Overview

Negotiable instruments are governed by Division 3 of the California version of the Uniform Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 3101 et seq.]. The Commercial Code is annotated with Uniform Commercial Code and California Code comments. Uniform Commercial Code comments are cited in this chapter as "Official Comment." Revised Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code do not yet contain new California comments. Accordingly, no California comments are cited.

Negotiable instruments are subject to Division 4 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 4101 et seq.] governing bank deposits and collections; for relevant checklists based on Division 4, see Sections 55.130through 55.132. They are also subject to Division 9 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.; see also Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] governing secured transactions [Com. Code § 3102(b)].

Division 3 does not apply to money, payment orders, or securities [Com. Code § 3102(a)].

The 1993 repeal and addition of Division 3 of the Commercial Code (relating to negotiable instruments) and the 1993 repeal, addition, and amendment of Division 4 of the Commercial Code (relating to banking) were intended by the Legislature to be construed as amendments to the existing Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code before revision [Com. Code § 16101]. Unless a provision of the Commercial Code has clearly been changed, rather than merely clarified, it is declaratory of the Commercial Code as it existed before the 1993 revision [Com. Code § 16104].

[2] Special Rules Governing Consumer Credit Transactions

Promissory notes used in consumer credit transactions are subject to numerous federal and California requirements, including the Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 1801 et seq. (retail installment sales)] and the federal Truth in Lending Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq. (consumer credit cost disclosure)]. For further discussion of promissory notes, see § 55.200[1]. For detailed discussion of consumer credit requirements, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

A. Nature of Negotiable Instruments

§ 55.11 Function of Negotiable Instruments

Negotiable instruments function as a substitute for money in the payment of obligations or as evidence of an obligation, an extension of credit, or both [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(24) ("money" defined); see also Com. Code § 3110]. The term "negotiable instruments" applies to notes, drafts, checks (including cashier's checks, teller's checks, and traveler's checks), certificates of deposit, and demand drafts [Com. Code § 3104(e)-(k)] and to orders that fall within the definition of check and are otherwise negotiable but not payable to bearer or to order at the time the instrument is issued or comes into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3104(c); see Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6) ("order" defined), 3104(f) ("check" defined)].

Negotiable instruments function as money in commercial affairs because they are freely transferrable and, if properly negotiated [see §§ 55.20-55.24], give a transferee or "holder" all the rights that were possessed by the transferor. Moreover, if the transferee is a "holder in due course" [see § 55.33], he or she takes the instrument free of claims [Com. Code § 3306] and free of defenses, with limited exceptions [Com. Code §§ 3302(a), 3305(b); see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1) (exceptions)].

Payment orders that are part of electronic fund transfers under Division 11 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 11101 et seq.] are not negotiable instruments under Division 3 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 3102(a)].

Securities, even though they can be drafted in negotiable form under Division 8 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 8101 et seq.], are not negotiable instruments [Com. Code § 3102(a)] and are not covered in this chapter [see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues]. Letters of credit are governed by Division 5 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 5101 et seq.] and are not negotiable instruments [see Com. Code § 3104(c), (e)-(k) (types of negotiable instruments)]. CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

A. Nature of Negotiable Instruments

§ 55.13 Types of Negotiable Instruments

[1] Overview

A "negotiable instrument" is an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money if it meets the following conditions [Com. Code § 3104(a)]:

- It is payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of the holder;
- It is payable on demand or at a definite time; and
- It does not state any other undertaking or instruction by the drawer or maker other than to pay money, with limited exceptions [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(3) (exceptions)].

Notes, drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, and demand drafts are negotiable instruments [Com. Code § 3104(e)-(k)], as are orders that fall within the definition of "check" and are otherwise negotiable but not payable to bearer or to order at the time they are issued or at the time they first come into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3104(c); see Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6) ("order" defined), 3104(f) ("check" defined)]. The term "check" includes cashier's checks, teller's checks, traveler's checks, and demand drafts [see Com. Code § 3104(f)-(k)]. An instrument may be a check even though it is described on its face by another term, such as "money order" [Com. Code § 3104(f)].

[2] Note

A "note" (also known as a promissory note) is a promise to pay [Com. Code § 3104(e)]. The "promise" is a written undertaking to pay money signed by the payor, rather than a mere acknowledgment of an obligation [Com. Code § 3103(a)(9)]. In a typical note transaction, the debtor or borrower (maker) expressly promises to pay the named creditor (payee) a particular amount of money at a specified future time [see F. Hart & W. Willier, Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, Ch. 1A, Types of Money Paper Currently in Use (Matthew Bender)].

Short-term promissory notes are used extensively by money market mutual funds, lending institutions, and business firms with temporary surplus cash to invest on a short-term basis [see § 55.200[1][g]].

[3] Draft

[a] Overview

A "draft" is a negotiable instrument if it is an order [Com. Code § 3104(e)]. An "order" is a written instruction to pay money signed by the person giving the instruction. It may be addressed to one or more persons jointly or alternatively, but not in succession. An authorization to pay is not an order unless the person authorized to pay is also instructed to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6)].

A draft may be payable on demand (sight draft) or payable at a definite time (time draft). A draft is "payable on demand" if it (1) states that it is payable on demand or at sight or otherwise indicates that it is payable at the holder's will, or (2) does not state any time for payment [Com. Code § 3108(a)]. A draft is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable (1) on elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance, (2) at a fixed date, (3) automatically on or after a specified date or event, or (4) at a time readily ascertainable at the time of issue, subject to the rights of prepayment, acceleration, or extension at the option of the holder, maker, or acceptor [Com. Code § 3108(b)].

Time drafts are frequently used as a means of obtaining short-term credit. For further discussion of drafts and a form of bill of exchange, see Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers .

[b] Documentary Draft

A "documentary draft" is a draft that requires accompanying documents, securities, or other papers be received by the payor before acceptance or payment [Com. Code § 4104(a)(6)]. Documentary drafts are commonly used in the consummation of a sale on temporary credit. Instead of the usual practice with checks, in which the buyer draws the instrument and sends it directly to the seller, the seller draws a draft on the buyer (that is, ordering the buyer to pay a stated sum) naming the seller or the seller's bank as the payee. The seller then sends the draft to the buyer, care of the buyer's bank, together with an invoice listing the goods involved and a warehouse receipt or bill of lading. An independent certification of the quantity or quality of the goods may either be included or obtained by the buyer's bank. The buyer's bank then notifies the buyer that it has received the draft and calls on the buyer to honor it. After the buyer honors it by making the necessary amount of cash available, the bank delivers the documents that accompanied the draft to the buyer so that the buyer can claim the goods from the carrier or warehouse and disburses payment to the seller. Another method of negotiation is for the seller to draw the draft and sell it to the seller's bank; the latter, as a holder in due course, then sends the draft and documents to the buyer's bank [see Banking Law, Ch. 112, Characteristics of Checks and Other Negotiable Instruments (Matthew Bender)].

Documentary drafts are frequently used in letter of credit transactions [see Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers].

[c] Trade Acceptance

A "trade acceptance" is a draft that is used to extend credit to a drawee when the drawee is not a bank, but generally a buyer of goods in commercial quantities. A time draft is drawn by the seller and issued to the buyer with documents of title to the goods. Instead of paying for the goods, the buyer accepts the draft by signing it to receive the documents of title. This converts the draft from a simple order to pay to a promise by the buyer to pay on the date specified [see F. Hart & W. Willier, Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, Ch. 1A, Types of Money Paper Currently in Use (Matthew Bender)].

[4] Check

A "check" is a draft (other than a documentary draft) [see [3], above] drawn on a bank and payable on demand. The term "check" also includes cashier's checks, teller's checks, and demand drafts [Com. Code § 3104(f)]. However, a check is only an order. It does not of itself operate as an assignment of any funds in the hands of the drawee available for its payment, and the drawee is not liable on the check until it accepts it [Com. Code § 3408]. Rather, a check serves only to direct the drawee bank to pay the face amount to the bearer, while committing the drawer to make good the obligation if the bank dishonors the check [see Com. Code § 3414(b)]. When the payee of a negotiable instrument properly endorses and deposits it in his or her bank account, the bank becomes a holder in due course of the instrument to the extent that credit given for the instrument by the bank is withdrawn or applied [Com. Code §§ 4210, 4211; see § 55.33 (holder in due course)].

A civil penalty may be levied against any person who produces, advertises, offers for sale, distributes, or otherwise transfers any simulated check [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22433(b)]. A "simulated check" is any document that is not currency or a check, draft, note, bond, or other negotiable instrument, but that because of its appearance, tends to mislead or deceive a person viewing into believing that it, in fact, represents any of the following: (1) currency or a negotiable instrument that can be deposited in a bank or used for third party payments; (2) a prize, gift, or monetary benefit that the recipient has won or is entitled or guaranteed to receive; or (3) an actual check or other item of value that can be claimed or redeemed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22433(a)].

"Simulated check" does not include a nonnegotiable check, draft, note, or other instrument that is used for soliciting orders for the purchase of checks, drafts, notes, bonds, or other instruments, and this is clearly marked as a sample, specimen, or nonnegotiable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22433(a)]. "Simulated check" also does not include any document indicating in a truthful and nonmisleading manner that a person, in fact, unconditionally has won or is entitled or guaranteed to receive a specific prize, gift, or amount of money or credit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22433(a)].

[5] Certificate of Deposit

A "certificate of deposit" is a note of the bank; it is an acknowledgment by a bank of receipt of money and a promise to repay it [Com. Code § 3104(j); see Com. Code § 3104(e) ("note" defined); see also [2], above]. A certificate of deposit may be issued in either negotiable or nonnegotiable form. Certificates of deposit do not operate in the same way as other types of negotiable instruments. They are primarily used as deposit instruments, representing time deposits.

Simple time deposit certificates of deposit are usually nonnegotiable, while certificates of deposit for sums exceeding $100,000 are usually negotiable and are commonly known as money market certificates [see Banking Law, Ch. 112, Characteristics of Checks and Other Negotiable Instruments (Matthew Bender)].

[6] Demand Draft

A "demand draft" is a written demand to a bank, for the purpose of charging a customer's account, that is created by a third person under the purported authority of the bank customer and is not signed by the customer [Com. Code § 3104(k)]. A demand draft must include the customer's account number and may contain any or all of the following: (1) the customer's printed or typewritten name, (2) a notation that the customer authorized the draft, and (3) a statement that no signature is required [Com. Code § 3104(k)]. A demand draft does not include a check purportedly drawn by and bearing the signature of a fiduciary [Com. Code § 3104(k); see Com. Code § 3307(a)(1) (fiduciary defined)], nor does it include an instrument bearing a forged or unauthorized customer signature [Stats. 1996, ch. 316, § 7 (uncodified expression of legislative intent in enacting Com. Code § 3104(k))].

Typical users of demand drafts would include telemarketers (in order to obtain payment from a bank customer's account as a means to pay a third party) and home banking service providers (as a means to pay themselves or others) [see Stats. 1996, ch. 316, § 7 (uncodified expression of legislative intent in enacting Com. Code § 3104(k))].

An important function of a demand draft is to shift the risk of loss for processing the instrument from the payor bank to the depository collecting bank, which is in the best position to prevent the unauthorized introduction of a demand draft into the check collection system by scrutinizing the customers allowed to deposit those drafts [see Stats. 1996, ch. 316, § 7 (uncodified expression of legislative intent in enacting Com. Code § 3104(k))]. Further, the demand draft creates an additional warranty to each transferee that the draft was authorized by the bank customer on whose account the draft is drawn [Com. Code § 3416(a)(6)].

For further discussion of demand drafts, see Banking Law, Ch. 112, Characteristics of Checks and Other Negotiable Instruments (Matthew Bender).

[7] Negotiated Order of Withdrawal

A "negotiable order of withdrawal" is an unconditional order by a savings account depositor to transfer money from the savings account to a third party on demand. These instruments, if drafted in negotiable form, are treated as negotiable instruments [see Com. Code § 3104(a)]. For discussion of the factors that make an instrument negotiable, see § 55.21.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Negotiability

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.20

§ 55.20 Negotiation

[1] Definition

"Negotiation" is the transfer of possession of a negotiable instrument by a nonissuer to a person who thereby becomes its holder [Com. Code § 3201(a)]. A "holder" is the person in possession of a negotiable instrument that is payable either to bearer or, to an identified person that is the person in possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(21)]. The term also includes the person in possession of a document of title if the goods are deliverable either to bearer or to the order of the person in possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(21); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(5) ("bearer" defined)]. Thus, a "holder" can become a "holder in due course" only by negotiation [see Com. Code § 3201(a); see also Com. Code § 3302(a) ("holder in due course" defined)]. For discussion of a holder's rights and the meaning of "holder in due course," see §§ 55.31-55.33. Although a negotiable instrument may be assigned by a simple transfer [see Com. Code § 3203] (such as when the instrument itself is used as collateral), it is usually transferred by negotiation. For detailed discussion of the requirements that an instrument must meet in order to be negotiable, see § 55.21.

[2] Rights Conferred by Negotiation

In general, negotiation gives the transferee all of the rights that were held by the transferor [Com. Code § 3203(b)]; a transfer of less than an entire instrument is not a negotiation and the transferee only has the rights of a partial assignee [Com. Code § 3203(d)]. For example, a person who signs a check as a drawer indicates by his or her signature an intent to be liable on the order stated in the check. When the payee or bearer transfers it by endorsing it, the drawer is then liable on the order to the transferee [see Com. Code § 3401(a)]. This feature renders negotiable instruments readily transferrable and, therefore, readily acceptable in commercial transactions.

There is an exception to the general rule that the transferee of a negotiable instrument acquires all of the rights that were held by the transferor. A transferee who has engaged in fraud or illegality affecting the instrument cannot acquire the rights of a holder in due course by transfer [Com. Code § 3203(b)].

[3] Effect of Negotiation Under Certain Circumstances

The act of negotiation effectively transfers the instrument even if obtained (1) from an infant, a corporation exceeding its powers, or a person without capacity; (2) by fraud, duress, or mistake; or (3) in breach of duty or as part of an illegal transaction [Com. Code § 3202(a)]. However, except as against a subsequent holder in due course, this type of negotiation may be rescinded or subject to other remedies as permitted by law [Com. Code § 3202(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Negotiability

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.21

§ 55.21 Requirements for Negotiability

[1] Overview

An instrument must be in writing [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(6), (9)]. If the instrument is a note, it must be signed by its maker; if it is a draft or check, it must be signed by its drawer [Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(3), (5), (6), 3104(a)]. To be negotiable, an instrument must contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money [Com. Code § 3104(a)]; must be payable to order or to bearer [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)]; and must be payable on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)]. In addition, a negotiable instrument must not contain any undertaking by the payor other than to pay money, except that it may contain the following [Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)]:

- A power to give, maintain, or protect collateral to secure payment;
 - An authorization or power to the holder to confess judgment or to realize on or dispose of collateral;
- or
- A waiver of any law intended to protect the obligor.

[2] Signature

[a] Overview

No one is liable on an instrument unless his or her signature appears on it [Com. Code § 3401(a)]. A "signature" may be made manually or by means of a device or machine and may be made by the use of any name, including a trade or assumed name, or by a word, mark or symbol [Com. Code § 3401(b); see Com. Code § 3308 (determining validity of signature)]. A person paying an instrument or taking it for value must exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument insofar as the validity of a signature is concerned [see Com. Code §§ 3404 (impostors), 3405 (fraudulent endorsement by employee), 3406 (forgery)]; see also Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b))

[b] By Agent or Representative

A signature may be made by an agent or representative [Com. Code § 3401(a)(2)]. If a representative signs the name of the represented person or the name of the signer, the represented person is bound by the signature to the same extent as if the signature were on a simple contract; if the represented person is bound, the signature of the representative is the "authorized signature of the represented person" [Com. Code § 3402(a); see Com. Code § 3402(b), (c) (liability of representative)]. If the signature of more than one person is required to constitute the authorized signature of an organization, the signature of the organization is unauthorized if one of the requisite signatures is lacking [Com. Code § 3403(b); see Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1124-1125, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (amendment to Com. Code § 3403 providing that signature of organization is unauthorized if multiple signatures are required and one of required signatures is lacking was clarification of existing law and therefore operated retroactively)]. Unless ratified (or as otherwise permitted by Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code), an unauthorized signature is ineffective except in favor of a person who in good faith pays for the instrument or takes it for value [Com. Code § 3403(a); see Com. Code § 3403(c) (civil or criminal liability for unauthorized signature unaffected by ratification)]. For a form for ratification of an unauthorized signature, see § 55.320.

[3] Promise or Order

A "promise" is a written undertaking to pay money signed by the person undertaking to pay. The mere acknowledgment of an obligation to pay is not a promise unless the obligor also undertakes to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(9)]. Similarly, an "order" is a written instruction to pay money signed by the person giving the instruction. An authorization to pay is not an order unless the person so authorized is also instructed to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6)]. An order may be addressed to one or more persons jointly or alternatively, but not in succession [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6)].

A promise or order is unconditional (and thus negotiable [see Com. Code § 3104(a)]) unless it states (1) an express condition to payment; (2) that the promise or order is governed by another writing; or (3) that related rights or obligations are stated in another writing [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. However, a reference to another writing, including a reference to another writing for rights relating to collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [Com. Code § 3106(b)], does not of itself make the promise or order conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. A promise or order is not made conditional because (1) payment is limited to a particular source [Com. Code § 3106(b)]; (2) it requires a countersignature by a person whose signature appears on the promise or order as a condition to payment [Com. Code § 3106(c)]; or at the time it is issued or comes into possession by the holder, the promise or order contains a statement required by applicable law that the rights of the holder or transferee are subject to the claims and defenses of the issuer against the original payee [Com. Code § 3106(d)]. Furthermore, an instrument that is conditionally issued or is issued for a special purpose is binding on its maker or drawer, although failure of the condition or special purpose is a defense [Com. Code § 3105(b)].

[4] Money

A negotiable instrument must be payable in a fixed amount of money [Com. Code § 3104(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(24) ("money" defined); see also Com. Code § 3110]. If an instrument states the amount payable in foreign money, the instrument is payable in that currency or in an equivalent amount in dollars calculated by using the current bank-offered spot rate on the day and at the place of payment, unless the instrument provides otherwise [Com. Code § 3107].

[5] When Payment Is to Be Made

A negotiable instrument must be payable either on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)]. When an instrument is made payable on demand, it need not specify a time for payment and is payable at sight or at the will of the holder [Com. Code § 3108(a)].

A negotiable instrument is payable at a definite time if it is payable on elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance, at a fixed date or dates, or at a time or times readily ascertainable at issue, subject to certain rights [Com. Code § 3108(b)]; see Com. Code § 3108(b) (rights); see also § 55.13[3][a]. Furthermore, if an instrument is payable at a fixed date, and is also payable on demand before that date, it is payable on demand until the fixed date and becomes payable at a definite time on the fixed date [Com. Code § 3108(c)].

[6] To Whom Payment Is to Be Made

[a] Overview

The person to whom an instrument is initially payable is determined by the intent of the person signing as or on behalf of the issuer, whether authorized or not [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. If the issuer's signature is made by an automated device, the payee is determined by the intent of the person who identified the payee [Com. Code § 3110(b)]. The instrument is payable to the person intended by the signer even if that person is identified incorrectly in the instrument [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. Furthermore, a person to whom an instrument is payable may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number [Com. Code § 3110(c)]; see Com. Code § 3110(c)(1) (instruments payable to account numbers); see also Com. Code § 3110(c)(2) (instruments payable to entities other than natural persons)]. If an instrument is payable to two or more persons alternatively, it is payable to any of them and may be enforced by any or all of them in possession of the instrument. If an instrument is payable to two or more persons not alternatively, it is payable to all of them and may be enforced only by all of them. If an instrument payable to two or more persons is ambiguous on this issue, it is payable to the persons alternatively [Com. Code § 3110(d)].

A negotiable instrument must be payable either to bearer or to order [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)]; see [b], [c], below].

[b] To Bearer

An instrument is payable "to bearer" if (1) it states that it is payable to bearer, to the order of bearer, or otherwise indicates that the person in possession is entitled to payment; (2) it does not state a payee; or (3) it states that it is payable to cash, to the order of cash, or otherwise indicates that it is not payable to an identified person [Com. Code § 3109(a)].

An instrument payable to an identified person may become payable to bearer if it is endorsed in blank [Com. Code § 3109(c)]; see Com. Code § 3205(b) (blank endorsement); see also § 55.24[2][b]].

[c] To Order

An instrument that is not payable to bearer is payable "to order" if it is payable to the order of an identified person or to an identified person or order. This type of instrument is payable to the identified person [Com. Code § 3109(b)].

An instrument payable to bearer may become payable to an identified person if it is specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3109(c)]; see Com. Code § 3205(a) (special endorsement); see also § 55.24[2][b]].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Negotiability

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.22

§ 55.22 Conditions and Omissions That Do Not Affect Negotiability

[1] Place of Payment

The negotiability of an instrument is unaffected by whether it specifies a place of payment. Except as otherwise permitted by Division 4 of the Commercial Code, an instrument is payable at the place of payment stated in the instrument. If no place is stated, the place of payment is the address of the drawer or maker. If no address is stated, the place of payment is the place of business of the drawer or maker, or if there is no place of business, at his or her residence [Com. Code § 3111].

[2] Interest

Unless the instrument provides otherwise, it is not payable with interest [Com. Code § 3112(a)]. If interest is payable, it is payable from the date of the instrument [Com. Code § 3112(a)] and may be expressed as a fixed or variable rate or rates or amount of money [Com. Code § 3112(b)]. If the amount of interest payable cannot be ascertained from its description, it is payable at the judgment rate in effect at the place of payment and at the time interest first accrues [Com. Code § 3112(b)].

[3] Dates

The negotiability of an instrument is unaffected by the fact that it is undated, antedated, or postdated. If an instrument is undated, its date is the date of issue or, if unissued, the date the instrument comes into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3113(b)]. If an instrument is antedated or postdated, the stated date determines the time of payment if the instrument is payable at a fixed period after the date [Com. Code § 3113(a)]. With one exception, an instrument payable on demand is not payable before the date of the instrument [Com. Code § 3113(a)]. The exception is that a bank may charge a check against an account before the date of the check unless the customer has given notice to the bank, describing the check with reasonable certainty [Com. Code § 4401(c)].

It is an unlawful business practice to require or request that a consumer issue a postdated check unless (1) the person accepting the check advises the consumer in writing that the check may be cashed immediately, regardless of the postdating (unless the consumer files a postdating order with his or her bank [see Com. Code § 4401], and (2) the consumer acknowledges in writing receipt of the advice or the advice is printed on the invoice provided to the consumer at the time the check is solicited [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538.6(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538.6(c) (definitions)]. This provision does not apply to a check recipient who will not cause a check to be submitted for collection until on or after its date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538.6(b)].

[4] Contradictory Terms

Contradictory terms do not render an instrument nonnegotiable. If an instrument contains contradictory terms, typewritten terms prevail over printed terms, handwritten terms prevail over both typewritten and printed terms, and words prevail over numbers [Com. Code § 3114].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Negotiability

§ 55.23 Incomplete and Altered Instruments

An "incomplete instrument" is a signed writing, whose contents show, at the time of signing, that although incomplete, the signer intended it to be completed by the addition of words or numbers [Com. Code § 3115(a)]. An instrument that is an incomplete instrument under Com. Code § 3104 may be enforced according to its terms if it is not completed, or may be enforced according to its terms as augmented by completion [Com. Code § 3115(b)]. If an incomplete instrument is not an instrument under Com. Code § 3104, but on completion meets the requirements of Com. Code § 3104, the instrument may be enforced according to terms as augmented by completion [Com. Code § 3115(b)]. However, if completion is unauthorized, such completion constitutes an alteration [Com. Code § 3115(c); see Com. Code § 3407 ("alteration" defined)]. The burden of establishing that any completion is unauthorized is on the party asserting the lack of authority [Com. Code § 3115(d)].

"Alteration" is an unauthorized change in an instrument purporting to modify a party's obligations, or an unauthorized addition of words or numbers or other change to an incomplete instrument relating to a party's obligations [Com. Code §§ 3407(a), 3115(c)]. A fraudulent alteration discharges the party whose obligation is so affected, unless the party assents or is precluded from asserting the alteration [Com. Code § 3407(b)]. However, a payor bank or drawee paying a fraudulently altered instrument or a person taking it for value, in good faith and without notice of the alteration, may enforce rights according to the instrument's original terms or according to the instrument's terms as completed if an incomplete instrument was altered by an unauthorized completion [Com. Code § 3407(c)]. No other alteration discharges a party; and the instrument may be enforced according to its original terms [Com. Code § 3407(b)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

B. Negotiability

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.24

§ 55.24 Process of Negotiation

[1] Overview

If an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation (except by a remitter) requires transfer of possession of the instrument and its endorsement by the holder [Com. Code § 3201(b); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(11)]. If an instrument is payable to bearer, it may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone [Com. Code § 3201(b)]. "Transfer" of an instrument occurs when it is delivered by a person other than its issuer for the purpose of giving rights of enforcement to the receiver [Com. Code § 3203(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(15) ("delivery" defined)]. Regardless of whether a negotiable instrument originates in order or bearer form, it may be changed from one form to the other by use of the appropriate words as part of the endorsement when the instrument is transferred [see [2][b], below].

[2] Endorsement

[a] Overview

The endorsement required to negotiate, restrict payment, or incur liability on an instrument is a signature (other than that of a signer as maker, drawer, or acceptor) made on the instrument, either alone or accompanied by other words [Com. Code § 3204(a); see Com. Code § 3401(a) (person not liable on instrument unless person or person's agent signed instrument)]. An endorsement made by a person who is not the holder of an instrument is an "anomalous endorsement," which does not affect the negotiation of the instrument [Com. Code § 3205(d)]. A signature and its accompanying words is an endorsement regardless of the intent of the signer, unless the accompanying words, terms of the instrument, place of signature, or other circumstances unambiguously indicate that the signature was made for a purpose other than endorsement [Com. Code § 3204(a)]. A transferee of an instrument transferred for value has a specifically enforceable right to the unqualified endorsement of the transferor, unless otherwise agreed [Com. Code § 3203(c)].

An endorsement may be placed anywhere on an instrument. The UCC contains no rules on the subject, except by implication from the provision that unless there is an unambiguous indication that the signature is made in some other capacity, it is an endorsement [see Com. Code § 3204(a)]. For the purpose of determining whether a signature is made on an instrument, a paper affixed to the instrument is a part of the instrument [Com. Code § 3204(a)].

If an instrument is payable to a holder under an incorrect name, the holder may endorse the instrument in the name stated, in the holder's name, or in both names. However, signature in both names may be required by a person paying the instrument or taking it for value or collection [Com. Code § 3204(d)].

For discussion of the obligations of an endorser, see § 55.30[3]. For a guide to the procedures for making a proper endorsement and the use of special, blank, or restrictive endorsements, see § 55.120.

[b] Subsequent Negotiation by Special or Blank Endorsement

The subsequent negotiation of an instrument may be affected by the character of an endorsement. Endorsements may be "special" or "blank." A special endorsement specifies the person to whom or to whose order it makes the instrument payable. If there is a special endorsement, the instrument becomes payable to the identified person, and may be further negotiated only by his or her endorsement [Com. Code § 3205(a)]. A blank endorsement does not specify any particular person and may consist solely of the endorser's signature. An instrument payable to order and endorsed in blank becomes payable to bearer and may be negotiated by delivery alone until specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3205(b)]. A holder may convert a blank endorsement into a special endorsement by writing above the signature of the endorser words identifying the person to whom the instrument is made payable [see Com. Code § 3205(c)].

[c] Effect of Restrictive Endorsements

Generally, conditional endorsements that limit payment to a particular person or otherwise prohibit further transfer or negotiation, and endorsements that identify the endorsee as a fiduciary, do not effect transfer or negotiation of the instrument.

An endorsement that limits payment to a particular person or otherwise prohibits further transfer or negotiation does not prevent further transfer or negotiation of the instrument [Com. Code § 3206(a)]. An endorsement stating a condition on the right of the endorsee to receive payment does not affect the enforceability of the instrument by the endorsee, and the condition may be disregarded by a person paying the instrument or taking it for value or collection [Com. Code § 3206(b)]. If an endorsement is endorsed to the endorsee as an agent, trustee, or other fiduciary, that restriction does not affect a subsequent transferee or payor of the instrument unless the transferee or payor knows that the fiduciary dealt with the instrument or its proceeds in breach of the fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3206(d); see Com. Code § 3307 (notice of breach of fiduciary duty)].

However, if an endorsement includes the words "pay any bank" or is in blank or to a particular bank "for deposit" or "for collection" or otherwise indicates the purpose of having the instrument collected by a bank for the endorser or for a particular account, transferees (other than intermediary banks) must pay or apply proceeds in accordance with the endorsement or the instrument will be considered converted [Com. Code § 3206(c); see Com. Code § 4201(b)]. An endorsement "for deposit only," while restrictive, is also a blank endorsement because it does not specify where or for whose benefit the check is to be deposited [Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (bank's acceptance for collection of cashiers' checks endorsed "for deposit only," for deposit to third party's trust account, was not violation of restrictive endorsement)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Parties

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.30

§ 55.30 Obligations of Parties

[1] Overview

Unless the instrument provides otherwise, two or more persons having the same liability on an instrument are jointly and severally liable in the capacity in which they sign [Com. Code § 3116(a)]. Except by agreement or in cases involving an accommodation party [see Com. Code § 3419(e); see also [4], below], a party having joint and several liability who pays the instrument is entitled to receive contribution from any party sharing that joint and several liability [Com. Code § 3116(b)]. The obligation of a party to an instrument to pay that instrument may be modified, supplemented, or nullified by a separate agreement made between the obligor and a person entitled to enforce the instrument if the instrument was issued or the obligation incurred in reliance on the agreement or as part of the same transaction giving rise to the agreement [Com. Code § 3117].

[2] Issuer, Acceptor, or Drawer

An "issuer" is the maker or drawer of an instrument, whether issued or unissued [Com. Code § 3105(c)]. An instrument is issued when it is first delivered to a holder or nonholder for the purpose of giving rights on it to any person [Com. Code § 3105(a)]. The issuer of an instrument is obliged to pay the instrument according to its terms at the time it was issued, or at the time it first came into a holder's possession, if not issued. If the issuer signed an incomplete instrument, he or she is obliged to pay the instrument according to its terms when completed [Com. Code § 3412; see Com. Code §§ 3105(b) (nonissuance as defense), 3115, 3407 (incomplete instruments)].

An "acceptor" of a draft is obliged to pay the draft according to its terms at the time of acceptance, or at the time of completion if the draft was initially incomplete [Com. Code § 3413(a); see Com. Code § 3115 (incomplete instruments)].

A "drawer" of a draft, other than a cashier's check or other draft drawn on the drawer [see Com. Code § 3414(a)], is obliged on dishonor of an unaccepted draft to pay the amount of the check or draft according to its terms at the time it was issued, at the time it came into possession of a holder if unissued, or at the time it was completed, if initially incomplete [Com. Code § 3414(b)]. However, a drawer may avoid the liability to pay an unaccepted dishonored draft

(other than a check), if the draft states it is drawn "without recourse" or otherwise disclaims liability [Com. Code § 3414(e)]. The drawer is discharged of all liability if the draft is accepted by a bank [Com. Code § 3414(c)]. If a draft accepted by an acceptor that is not a bank is dishonored, the drawer has the same obligation to pay as an endorser [Com. Code § 3414(d); see Com. Code § 3415 (liability of endorser); see also [3], below].

The above-described obligations of an issuer, acceptor, or drawer are owed to any person entitled to enforce the draft and to any endorser who fulfilled an obligation to pay a dishonored draft [see Com. Code §§ 3412-3415].

[3] Endorser

On dishonor, an "endorser" is obliged to pay the amount due on an instrument according to its terms at the time of endorsement. For an incomplete instrument, the endorser is obliged to pay the amount due at the time of completion [see Com. Code §§ 3115, 3407]. The endorser's obligation is owed to a holder or any subsequent endorser who fulfilled an obligation to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3415(a)]. If an endorsement states that it is made "without recourse" or otherwise disclaims liability of the endorser, the endorser is not liable to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3415(b)].

An endorser's liability is discharged in the following circumstances:

- If the required notice of dishonor of an instrument is not given to the endorser [Com. Code § 3415(c); see Com. Code § 3503].
- If a draft is accepted by a bank after an endorsement is made [Com. Code § 3415(d)].
- If a check is not presented for payment, or is not given to a depository bank for collection, within 30 days after the day the endorsement was made [Com. Code § 3415(e)].

For further discussion of endorsement, see § 55.24[2].

[4] Accommodation Party

[a] Guarantor of Payment

An "accommodation party" is one who signs an instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument; the party receiving the benefit of the value given is the accommodated party [Com. Code § 3419(a); see [b], below]. The accommodation party is obliged to pay in the capacity, such as maker, drawer, acceptor, or endorser, in which he or she has signed, even though the taker knows of the accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(b), (c)]. A person signing an instrument is presumed to be an accommodation party if the signature is an anomalous endorsement or is accompanied by words indicating that the signer is acting as a surety or guarantor with respect to the obligation of another party to the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(c)]. An accommodation party who pays the instrument is entitled to reimbursement from, and can enforce the instrument against, the accommodated party [Com. Code § 3419(e); see Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 (after paying note at issue, accommodated party had no right of recourse against, and was not entitled to contribution from, accommodation parties pursuant to Com. Code § 3419(e))]. In an action to enforce the obligation of an accommodation party to pay an instrument, the defenses of discharge in insolvency proceedings, infancy, and lack of legal capacity are not available to the accommodation party; otherwise, the accommodation party may assert any defense or claim in recoupment that the accommodated party could assert [Com. Code § 3305(d)].

[b] Guarantor of Collection

If the signature of a party to an instrument is accompanied by words unambiguously indicating that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the obligation of another party, the signer is not an accommodation party [see [a], above]. The signer will be obliged to pay a person entitled to enforce the instrument only if (1) execution of judgment against the other party is returned unsatisfied, (2) the other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding, (3) the other party cannot be served with process, or (4) it is otherwise apparent that payment cannot be obtained from the other party [Com. Code § 3419(d)].

[5] Warranties

[a] Overview

The warranties enumerated in regard to the presentment and transfer of instruments [see [b]-[d], below] cannot be disclaimed with respect to checks [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 3417(e)]. Notice of a claim for breach must be given to the warrantor within 30 days after the claimant has reason to know of the breach and the identity of the warrantor, or the liability of the warrantor will be discharged to the extent of any loss caused by the delay in giving notice [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 3417(e)]. The cause of action for breach of warranty accrues when the claimant has reason to know of the breach [Com. Code §§ 3416(d), 3417(f); see Com. Code §§ 3416(b), 3417(b), (d)(2) (damages)].

[b] Warranties on Presentment of Unaccepted Draft

If an unaccepted draft is presented to the drawee for payment or acceptance and the drawee pays or accepts the draft, the person obtaining payment or acceptance and any previous transferor of the draft warrant to the drawee paying or accepting the instrument in good faith that the warrantor is entitled to enforce the draft or is authorized to obtain payment or acceptance on behalf of a person so entitled [Com. Code § 3417(a)(1)]. The warrantor also warrants that the draft has not been altered and that he or she has no knowledge that the signature of the drawer is unauthorized [Com. Code § 3417(a)(2), (3)]. If the draft is a demand draft, the warrantor also warrants that creation of the draft according to the terms on its face was authorized by the person identified as the drawer [Com. Code § 3417(a)(4); see Com. Code § 3417(h) (exception for transferor as transferee when transferor does not give warranty under applicable conflict of law rules)].

[c] Warranties on Presentment of Dishonored Draft or Other Obligation

If a dishonored draft is presented for payment to the drawer or an endorser, or any other instrument is presented for payment to a party obliged to pay, and payment is made in good faith, the person obtaining payment and a prior transferor warrant that the warrantor is (or was at the time of transfer) a person entitled to enforce the instrument or authorized to obtain payment on behalf of a person entitled to enforcement [Com. Code § 3417(d)(1)].

[d] Warranties of Transferor for Consideration

A person who transfers an instrument for consideration warrants to the transferee (and, if the transfer is by endorsement, to any subsequent transferee) that he or she is entitled to enforce the instrument, that all signatures are authentic and authorized, and that the instrument has not been altered [Com. Code § 3416(a)(1)-(3)]. In addition, the transferor warrants that the instrument is not subject to a defense or claim in recoupment of any party that can be asserted against the warrantor, and that the warrantor has no knowledge of any insolvency proceedings against the maker or acceptor, or against the drawer of an unaccepted instrument [Com. Code § 3416(a)(4), (5)]. An additional warranty to each transferee of a demand draft [see Com. Code § 3104(k) ("demand draft" defined); see also § 55.13[6]] is that the draft was authorized by the bank customer on whose account the draft is drawn [Com. Code § 3416(a)(6); see Com. Code § 3416(e) (exception for transferor as transferee when transferor does not give warranty under applicable conflict of law rules)].

§ 55.31 Persons Entitled to Enforce Instruments

[1] Holders and Nonholders in Possession

A "holder" is the person in possession of a negotiable instrument that is payable either to bearer or, to an identified person that is the person in possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(21)]. The term also includes the person in possession of a document of title if the goods are deliverable either to bearer or to the order of the person in possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(21); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(5) ("bearer" defined)]. As a transferee, a holder has all of the rights that were held by the transferor [Com. Code § 3203(b)]. A holder of an instrument is a person entitled to enforce it. A nonholder in possession of an instrument who has the rights of a holder is also a person entitled to enforcement [Com. Code § 3301].

[2] Persons Not in Possession Entitled to Enforcement

A person not in possession of an instrument is entitled to enforce it if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code §§ 3301, 3309(a)]:

- The person had possession of the instrument and was entitled to enforce it when possession was lost;
- Loss of possession did not result from a transfer by the person or a lawful seizure; and
- The person cannot reasonably obtain possession.

Possession cannot reasonably be obtained if the instrument was destroyed, if its whereabouts cannot be determined, or if it is in the wrongful possession of an unknown person or a person that cannot be found or is not amenable to service of process [Com. Code § 3309(a)].

A joint payee was held to have sufficiently alleged a cause of action for recovery of the amount of a check from the drawer under Com. Code § 3309 when, with respect to the requirement that "the person had possession" before possession was lost, it alleged that it was a joint payee of a check which was delivered to a copayee who deposited the check without obtaining plaintiff's endorsement or consent [Crystaplex Plastics, Ltd. v. Redevelopment Agency of the City of Barstow (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 990, 999-1000, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (failure to allege plaintiff's actual possession of check was not fatal to cause of action because delivery of check to joint payee was sufficient to satisfy possession requirement)]. A person not in possession can also have the right to enforce a dishonored instrument. If the instrument was paid by mistake and the payor then recovered payment, the person from whom payment was recovered will be entitled to enforce the instrument [Com. Code §§ 3301, 3418(d)].

§ 55.32 Restriction on Enforcement Rights of Persons Other Than Holders in Due Course

A person entitled to enforcement who is not a holder in due course [see § 55.33] takes the instrument subject to the following:

- A claim of a property right or possessory right in the instrument or its proceeds, including a claim to rescind a negotiation and to recover the instrument or its proceeds [Com. Code § 3306];
- Any defense available if the person were enforcing a right to payment under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3305(a)(2)]; and
- A claim in recoupment of the obligor against the original payee of the instrument if the claim arose from the transaction that gave rise to the instrument [Com. Code § 3305(a)(3)].

Additionally, the obligor will not be obliged to pay if the obligor proves that the instrument is a lost or stolen instrument [Com. Code § 3305(c)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Parties

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.33

§ 55.33 Holder in Due Course

[1] Overview

A "holder in due course" is a holder who takes an instrument for value, in good faith [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(20) ("good faith" defined)], and without notice that it is overdue [see Com. Code § 3304 (when instrument is overdue)], that it has been dishonored, that there is an uncured default with respect to payment of another instrument issued as part of the same series, that the instrument contains an unauthorized signature, or that the instrument has been altered [Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)]. Furthermore, a holder in due course must take the instrument without notice of any claim of a property right or possessory right in the instrument or its proceeds and without notice that any party has a defense or claim of recoupment [Com. Code § 3302(a)(2); see Com. Code §§ 3306 (property claim), 3305(a)(3) (claim in recoupment); see also Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank(1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1170, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 (finding payee of check to be holder in due course under Com. Code § 3302)]. The holder in due course also must not have any reason, such as an irregularity in or incompleteness of the document, to call into question the authenticity of the instrument when it is issued or negotiated to the holder. Specifically, the instrument must not bear apparent evidence of forgery or alteration [Com. Code § 3302(a)(1)].

However, a holder who acquires an instrument in any of the following ways does not become a holder in due course, except to the extent a transferor or predecessor in interest has rights as a holder in due course, as follows [Com. Code § 3302(c)]:

- By legal process or by purchase in an execution, bankruptcy, creditor's sale, or similar proceeding;
- By purchase as a part of a bulk transaction not in transferor's ordinary course of business; or
- As the successor in interest to an estate or other organization.

In certain circumstances, a person entitled to enforcement may have rights as a holder in due course to less than the entire amount payable under the instrument [see Com. Code § 3302(d) (partial performance), (e) (security interest)].

For discussion of the rights of a holder in due course with respect to a negotiable instrument, see [4], below.

[2] For Value

A holder takes an instrument "for value" under the following conditions:

- If the instrument is issued or transferred for a promise of performance, to the extent that the promise has been performed [Com. Code § 3303(a)(1)];
- When the holder acquires a security interest or other lien in the instrument other than a lien obtained by a judicial proceeding [Com. Code § 3303(a)(2)];
- When the instrument is issued or transferred as payment of, or as security for, a prior claim against any person, whether or not the claim is due [Com. Code § 3303(a)(3)];
- When the holder gives a negotiable instrument for it [Com. Code § 3303(a)(4)]; or
- When the holder makes an irrevocable obligation to a third party in exchange for the instrument [Com. Code § 3303(a)(5)].

[3] Notice

[a] Overview

A person has "notice" of a fact when that person has actual knowledge of it, has received notice or notification of it, or has reason to know that it exists based on all the facts and circumstances known at the time in question [Com. Code § 1202(a)]. The filing or recording of a document does not of itself constitute notice of a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument to one who would otherwise be a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3302(b)]. To be effective, notice must be received at a time and in a manner that will afford a reasonable opportunity to act on it [Com. Code § 3302(f)]. Notice of discharge of a party, other than discharge in an insolvency proceeding, is not notice of a defense, but the discharge will be effective against a person who became a holder in due course with notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3302(b)].

[b] Notice of Claim or Defense When Instrument Taken From Fiduciary

Notice of a breach of fiduciary duty by the fiduciary is notice of the claim of the represented person [Com. Code § 3307(b)(1)]. A holder has notice of a breach of fiduciary duty when he or she knows that a fiduciary has negotiated the instrument in payment of or as security for the fiduciary's own debt, when the instrument has been taken in any transaction for the fiduciary's own benefit, or when the instrument has been deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary as such, or an account of the represented person [Com. Code § 3307(b)(2), (4)]; but see Com. Code § 3304(b)(3) (fact that person negotiating instrument is fiduciary not sufficient by itself to give notice)].

[4] Rights of Holder in Due Course

A holder in due course takes a negotiable instrument free of a claim of a property right or possessory right to the instrument on the part of any person [Com. Code § 3306]. In general, a holder in due course takes the instrument free from all defenses of all parties to the instrument with whom he or she has not dealt [see Com. Code § 3305(b)]; see also Sharpe v. F.D.I.C. (9th Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 1147, 1153 (transferees to whom bank tendered cashier's checks in lieu of wire fund transfer required by agreement were holders in due course)]. However, parties to the instrument may assert the following defenses [Com. Code § 3305(b)]: (1) infancy, to the extent that it is a defense to a simple contract; (2) duress, lack of legal capacity, or illegality in the transaction that would render the obligation a nullity [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions (defenses to formation of contract)]; (3) fraud that induced the obligor to sign the instrument with neither knowledge nor reasonable opportunity to learn of its character or essential terms; and (4) discharge of the obligor in insolvency proceedings [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)]. The defenses that continue to be available against a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1), (b)] are sometimes referred to as "real defenses," that is, defenses that go to the validity of the instrument itself.

§ 55.40 Need for Presentment and Acceptance

A check or draft does not of itself operate as an assignment of funds from a drawee. A drawee is not liable on a check or draft until he or she accepts it [Com. Code § 3408; see Com. Code § 3409(a) ("acceptance" defined); see also § 55.42]. Presentment is a demand for acceptance [Com. Code § 3501(a)]. Therefore, unless excused or waived [see Com. Code § 3504; see also § 55.130], presentment is a prerequisite to acceptance of a check or draft.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

D. Post-Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.41

§ 55.41 Presentment

[1] Overview

"Presentment" is a demand for acceptance of a draft made to the drawee, a demand for payment of an instrument made to the drawee or other party obliged to pay, or a demand for payment of a note or accepted draft payable at a bank made to the bank [Com. Code § 3501(a)]. Unless excused or waived [see Com. Code §§ 3502(e), 3504(a); see also § 55.130], presentment for acceptance is necessary to enforce the obligations of the drawer and endorsers of an instrument in that the instrument must be duly presented before it can be dishonored and the drawer and endorsers must have notice of the dishonor, unless the notice is excused, before their obligations are enforceable [see Com. Code §§ 3502 (dishonor), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3504(b) (excuse of notice of dishonor)]. If an instrument states that it is "payable through" or "payable at" a bank identified in the instrument, the instrument may be presented for payment only by or through the bank. That bank is designated as a collecting bank and the statement does not by itself authorize the bank to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 4106].

[2] Manner of Presentment

Presentment may be made at the place of payment of the instrument and must be made there if the instrument is payable at a bank in the United States. Presentment may be made by any commercially reasonable means, including an oral, written, or electronic communication, and is effective when the demand for payment or acceptance is received by the person to whom it is made. Presentment may be made to any one of two or more makers, acceptors, drawees, or other payors [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)].

The person to whom presentment is made may demand that the person making presentment exhibit the instrument and give reasonable identification; evidence of authority may also be demanded if the presentment is made on behalf of another person. The person making presentment can also be required to sign a receipt on the instrument for any payment made or surrender the instrument if paid in full [Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)]. Presentment may be treated as occurring on the next business day after the day of presentment if it is made after an established cutoff hour not earlier than 2 p.m. [Com. Code § 3501(b)(4)].

For an outline of the procedure for presentment and acceptance, see § 55.131.

§ 55.42 Acceptance

"Acceptance" is the drawee's signed agreement to pay a draft as presented. The acceptance must be written on the draft, and may consist of the drawee's signature alone [Com. Code § 3409(a)]. A signature may be made manually or by means of a device or machine and may be made by the use of any name, including a trade or assumed name, or by a word, mark, or symbol [Com. Code § 3401(b)]. Acceptance may be made at any time and becomes effective on delivery of the accepted draft for that purpose or when notification pursuant to instructions is given [Com. Code § 3409(a)].

A drawee may (but is not required to) accept a draft even though it has not been signed by the drawer, is otherwise incomplete, is overdue, or has been previously dishonored [Com. Code § 3409(b); see § 55.43]. If a draft is payable at a fixed period after sight and the acceptance is not dated, the holder may complete the acceptance by supplying a date in good faith [Com. Code § 3409(c)]. A person entitled to demand acceptance may consent to a late acceptance [see Com. Code § 3502(f)].

Certification (that is, certification by the bank that funds have been reserved to make payment) of a check is acceptance. A bank has no obligation to certify a check, and refusal to certify is not dishonor of a check [Com. Code § 3409(d); see § 55.43].

If the terms of the drawee's acceptance vary from the terms of the draft in any way, the holder may refuse the acceptance and treat the draft as dishonored. In that case, the drawee is entitled to cancel the acceptance [Com. Code § 3410(a)]. However, the terms of a draft are not varied by an acceptance to pay at a particular bank or place in the United States unless the acceptance makes payment there mandatory [Com. Code § 3410(b)]. If a holder agrees to an acceptance that varies the terms of the draft, each drawer and endorser who does not expressly assent to the acceptance is discharged [Com. Code § 3410(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

D. Post-Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.43

§ 55.43 Dishonor

[1] Overview

An instrument is "dishonored" when presentment is duly made but acceptance or payment is refused or cannot be obtained within the time allowed [see Com. Code § 3502; see also §§ 55.131, 55.132]. Dishonor also occurs when presentment is excused and the instrument is not duly accepted or paid [Com. Code § 3502(e); see Com. Code § 3504 (waiver or excuse of presentment)]. The return of an instrument for lack of proper endorsement is not dishonor; nor is refusal of payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule [Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)].

Subject to any necessary notice of dishonor [see § 55.44], the holder has a right to enforce the obligations of the drawers and endorsers after an instrument is dishonored [see Com. Code § 3503(a)]. The rules governing dishonor of various instruments are enumerated below.

[2] Dishonor of Note

If a note is payable on demand, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made to the maker and the note is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(a)(1)]. If a note is not payable on demand and it is payable at or through a bank, or the terms of the note require presentment, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made and the note is not paid on the day it becomes payable or on the day of presentment, whichever is later [Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)]; otherwise, the note is dishonored if it is not paid on the day it becomes payable [Com. Code § 3502(a)(3)].

[3] Dishonor of Unaccepted Check

If a check is duly presented to the payor bank otherwise than for immediate payment over the counter, the check is dishonored if the payor bank makes timely return of the check, sends timely notice of dishonor or nonpayment, or becomes accountable for the amount of the check [Com. Code § 3502(b)(1); see Com. Code § 4302 (payor bank's responsibility for late return of item)].

[4] Dishonor of Unaccepted Draft Other Than Check

An unaccepted draft payable on demand is dishonored if presentment is duly made to the drawee and the draft is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(b)(2)]. If a draft is payable on a date stated in the draft and it is presented to the drawee for payment, the draft is dishonored if payment is not made on the date stated or the day of presentment, whichever is later. If the draft is presented for acceptance before the day it becomes payable, it is dishonored if it is not accepted on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(b)(3)]. If a draft is payable on elapse of a period of time after sight or acceptance, the draft is dishonored if it is presented for acceptance and it is not accepted on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(b)(4)]. In the case of an unaccepted documentary draft, payment or acceptance may be delayed without dishonor until no later than the close of the third business day of the drawee following the day on which payment or acceptance is required [Com. Code § 3502(c)].

[5] Dishonor of Accepted Draft

If a draft is payable on demand, it is dishonored if presented to the acceptor for payment and it is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(d)(1)]. If the draft is not payable on demand, it is dishonored if it is presented to the acceptor for payment and it is not paid on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later [Com. Code § 3502(d)(2)].

Notice of dishonor is also necessary to enforce the obligation of a drawer to pay a dishonored draft that was accepted by an acceptor other than a bank; failure to give this notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the drawer [*Com. CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

D. Post-Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.45

§ 55.45 Discharge From Liability

[1] Overview

The obligation of a party to pay an instrument can be discharged by an act or agreement with the party that would discharge an obligation to pay money under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3601(a)], by payment [Com. Code § 3602(a); see [2], below], or by tender of payment [Com. Code § 3603; see [3], below]. A party's obligation to pay an instrument is not discharged by payment or otherwise against a person who acquired the rights of a holder in due course without notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b)].

[2] Discharge by Payment

The obligation to pay is discharged to the extent payment is made by or on behalf of the party obliged to pay and to a person entitled to enforcement of the instrument, even if the payment is made with knowledge of a claim of another person to the instrument [Com. Code § 3602(a); see Com. Code § 3306 (claims); see also Com. Code § 3310 (payment by check or note)]. However, if a claim to the instrument is enforceable against the person receiving payment, payment will not discharge the obligation of the payor if the payor either (1) had knowledge that the payment was prohibited by injunction or similar process, or (2) in the case of an instrument other than a cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check, accepted from the claimant indemnity against loss resulting from the refusal to pay the person entitled to enforcement [Com. Code § 3602(b)(1)]. Payment does not discharge the liability of a payor who knows that the instrument is stolen and pays a person the payor knows is in wrongful possession of the instrument [Com. Code § 3602(b)(2)].

[3] Discharge Through Tender of Payment

The effect of tender made to a person entitled to enforcement is governed by the principles of law applicable to tender of payment under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3603(a)]. For discussion of tender of payment under a contract, see the Legal Background to Ch. 77, Discharge of Obligations. If tender of payment is made to a person entitled to enforcement and the tender is refused, the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse is discharged to the extent of the amount of the tender [Com. Code § 3603(b)]. The tender of payment of the amount due on an instrument to a person entitled to enforcement discharges the party tendering payment from all subsequent liability for interest [Com. Code § 3603(c)]. Tender is deemed to have been made if presentment is required and the obligor is able and ready to pay on the due date at every place of payment stated in the instrument [Com. Code § 3603(c)].

[4] Discharge Resulting From Act of Party Entitled to Enforcement

The agreement of a person entitled to enforcement not to sue or other renunciation of rights by a signed writing discharges the obligation of a party to pay. The obligation is also discharged by other intentional voluntary acts, including surrender of the instrument to the party obliged to pay, destruction, mutilation, or cancellation of the instrument, cancellation or striking out of the party's signature, or the addition of words to the instrument indicating discharge [Com. Code § 3604(a)]. The discharge of an obligation to pay, which discharge results from the agreement, renunciation, or other voluntary act of a person entitled to enforcement, does not discharge the obligation of an endorser (or drawer having the obligations of an endorser) or accommodation party having a right of recourse against the discharged party [see Com. Code § 3605(a), (b)]. However, under certain circumstances, the obligation of an endorser (or drawer having the obligations of an endorser) or accommodation party will be discharged if the actions of a person entitled to enforcement affect any right of recourse. If a person entitled to enforcement extends the payment due date or otherwise agrees to a material modification of a party's obligation, this discharges an endorser (or drawer having the obligations of an endorser) or accommodation party to the extent that the modification caused loss with respect to any right of recourse against the party whose obligation was modified [Com. Code § 3605(c), (d)]. If a person entitled to enforcement impairs the value of an interest in collateral securing the obligation of a party to pay, the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse against the obligor is discharged to the extent of the impairment [Com. Code § 3605(e)] and the obligation of a party jointly and severally liable is discharged to the extent liability is increased by the impairment [Com. Code § 3605(f)].

[5] Effect of Fraudulent Alteration

The fraudulent alteration [see Com. Code § 3407(a) ("alteration" defined)] of an instrument discharges any party whose obligation is affected by the alteration unless that party assents or is precluded from asserting the alteration [Com. Code § 3407(b)]. However, a payor bank or drawee paying a fraudulently altered instrument or a person taking it for value, in good faith and without notice of the alteration, may enforce rights according to the instrument's original terms or according to the instrument's terms as completed if an incomplete instrument was altered by an unauthorized completion [Com. Code § 3407(c)]. No other alteration discharges a party [Com. Code § 3407(b)]. For discussion of what constitutes an alteration, see Section 55.23.

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.50

§ 55.50 Limitations on Requesting Credit Card Information in Negotiable Instrument Transactions

In general, a person accepting a negotiable instrument as payment for retail goods or services may not do any of the following [Civ. Code § 1725(a)]:

- Require the person paying with a negotiable instrument to provide a credit card as a condition of acceptance of the negotiable instrument, or record the number of the credit card [Civ. Code § 1725(a)(1)].
- Require, as a condition of acceptance of the negotiable instrument, or cause the person paying with a negotiable instrument, to sign a statement agreeing to allow his or her credit card to be charged to cover the negotiable instrument if returned as no good [Civ. Code § 1725(a)(2)].
- Record a credit card number in connection with any part of the transaction [Civ. Code § 1725(a)(3)].
- Contact a credit card issuer to determine if the amount of credit available to the person paying with a negotiable instrument will cover the amount of the negotiable instrument [Civ. Code § 1725(a)(4)].

This prohibition does not prevent a retailer from requiring the production of reasonable forms of positive identification, other than a credit card, as a condition of accepting the negotiable instrument [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(1)], or from requesting, but not requiring, a purchaser to voluntarily display a credit card as an indication of creditworthiness or as additional identification [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)]. The retailer can record only the type of credit card, issuer of the card, and expiration date of the card [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)]. All retailers who request the display of credit cards from customers must post signs to explain, or train employees to inform customers, that displaying credit cards is not required [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)(A), (B)].

It is permissible to request a credit card number as a condition of cashing a negotiable instrument that is being used solely to receive cash back from the person; to request a credit card number in lieu of requiring a deposit; to verify the purchaser's name, address, and telephone number; and to request the credit card number if the negotiable instrument is being used to make a payment on that credit card account [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(3)-(6)].

Anyone intentionally violating these prohibitions is subject to civil penalties and injunctions [Civ. Code § 1725(e)-(g)]. For a discussion of similar limitations in credit card transactions, see Ch. 46, Credit Card and Other Open-End Credit Transactions .

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Limitations on Retailers

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.51

§ 55.51 Check Cashing Businesses

[1] Definition

For purposes of Civ. Code § 1789.30 et seq., a "check casher" is a person or entity that for compensation engages, in whole or in part, in the business of cashing checks, warrants, drafts, money orders, or other commercial paper serving the same purpose [Civ. Code § 1789.31(a)]. "Check casher" does not include the following [Civ. Code § 1789.31(a)]:

- A state or federally chartered bank, savings association, credit union, or industrial loan company; or
- A retail seller engaged primarily in the business of selling consumer goods, including consumables, to retail buyers that cashes checks or issues money orders for a minimum flat fee not exceeding $2 as a service to its customers that is incidental to its main purpose or business.

[2] Permit Requirements

The owner of a check casher's business must obtain a permit from the Department of Justice to conduct a check casher's business [Civ. Code § 1789.37(a)]. Applications must be in writing, be signed by the applicant; if an individual or by a member or officer authorized to sign if the applicant is a corporation or other entity, and state the business name, business address, type of business, and whether the applicant intends to enter into deferred deposit agreements [Civ. Code § 1789.37(b); see Civ. Code § 1789.37(c), (d), (f) (fees; permit renewal; uniform forms for applications and permits)]. Each applicant must be fingerprinted [Civ. Code § 1789.37(b)]. An application for a permit to conduct a check cashier's business will be denied if the applicant has a felony conviction involving dishonesty, fraud, or deceit, if the crime is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a person engaged in the business of check cashing [Civ. Code § 1789.37(e)].

[3] Posting of Fee Schedule and Other Information

Every check casher must post a complete, detailed, and unambiguous schedule of all fees for the following, as applicable to the services provided [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(2), (b)(2) (cashier's reporting requirements for check, or checks, exceeding $10,000, cashed on or after January 1, 2006]):

- Cashing checks, drafts, money orders, or other commercial paper serving the same purpose.
- The sale or issuance of money orders.
- The initial issuance of any identification card.

Each check casher must also post a list of valid identification that is acceptable in lieu of identification provided by the check casher [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1)].

The above information must be clear, legible, and in letters not less than a half inch in height. The information must be posted in a conspicuous location in the unobstructed view of the public within the check casher's premises [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1)].

Failure to post information as required, or the imposition of fees or identification requirements contrary to the information posted, constitutes an unfair business practice within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 [Civ. Code § 1789.32].

[4] Transaction Requirements; Limitations on Fees

A check casher must not charge a fee for cashing a payroll check or government check in excess of the greatest of the following [Civ. Code § 1789.35(a)]:

- 3 percent of the face amount of the check, if identification is provided by the customer;
- 3.5 percent of the face amount of the check, without the provision of identification; or
- $3.

Identification is limited to a California driver's license, a California identification card, or a valid U.S. military identification card [Civ. Code § 1789.35(a)].

A check casher may charge a fee for cashing a personal check, as posted pursuant to Civ. Code § 1789.30 [see [3], above], for immediate deposit in an amount not to exceed 12 percent of the face value of the check [Civ. Code § 1789.35(d)].

A check casher may charge a fee of no more than $10 to set up an initial account and issue an optional identification card for providing check cashing services. A replacement optional identification card may be issued at a cost not to exceed $5 [Civ. Code § 1789.35(b)(1)]. After March 15, 2004, no fee may be charged for deferred deposit transactions [Civ. Code § 1789.35(b)(2); for discussion of deferred deposits, see [6], below].

A check casher must provide a receipt to the customer for each transaction [Civ. Code § 1789.35(c)].

[5] Penalties for Violation; Civil Remedies

Any person who is injured by any violation of Civ. Code § 1789.35 [see [4], above] may bring an action for the recovery of damages, an equity proceeding to restrain and enjoin those violations, or both. The amount awarded may be up to three times the damages actually incurred, but in no event less than the amount paid by the aggrieved consumer to a person subject to Civ. Code § 1789.35. If the plaintiff prevails, the plaintiff must be awarded reasonable attorney's fees and costs. If a court determines by clear and convincing evidence that a breach or violation was willful, the court, in its discretion, may award punitive damages in addition to the amounts set forth above [Civ. Code § 1789.35(g)]. In addition, a willful violation of Civ. Code § 1789.35 is a misdemeanor [Civ. Code § 1789.35(f)].

[6] Deferred Deposit Transactions (Payday Loans)

[a] Governing Law

Effective December 31, 2004, payday loans (whether made by check-cashing businesses or by others) are governed by the California Deferred Deposit Transaction Law, a specialized statute dealing with these types of transactions [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.].

Payday lenders make small, short-term loans to individuals who receive regular paychecks. Instead of signing a promissory note, on receiving the loan amount, the borrower hands the lender a personal check covering the loan amount plus the lender's transaction fee--which together may not exceed $300, under California law--and the lender holds that check until an agreed due date, which may not be more than 31 days away, under California law [Fin. Code § 23035(a)]. The due date usually is the borrower's next payday, or the payday after next. On the due date, the lender may deposit the borrower's check, or present it to the borrower's bank for payment. When the lender operates a check cashing business (which often is the case), if the borrower brings a paycheck to be cashed on the due date, the lender could retain the loan amount (plus a check cashing fee) and hand over the remainder along with the borrower's personal check that covered the loan.

A deferred deposit transaction is defined as one in which the lender refrains from depositing a personal check written by a customer until a specific date, pursuant to a written agreement for a fee or other charge, as provided in Fin. Code 23035 [Fin. Code § 23001(a)].

[b] Transaction Requirements

A lender licensed under the Deferred Deposit Transaction law [see Fin. Code § 23005] may defer the deposit of a personal check written by a customer for up to 31 days, subject to the statutory requirements. The face amount of the check must not exceed $300 [Fin. Code § 23035(a)].

Before entering into a deferred deposit transaction, the lender must distribute to customers a notice that includes, but need not be limited to, all of the following [Fin. Code § 23035(c)]:

- Information about charges for deferred deposit transactions.
- That if the customer's check is returned unpaid, the customer may be charged an additional fee of up to $15.
- That the customer cannot be prosecuted in a criminal action in conjunction with a deferred deposit transaction for a returned check or be threatened with prosecution.
- The Department of Corporation's toll-free telephone number for receiving calls regarding customer complaints and concerns.
- That the licensee may not accept any collateral in conjunction with a deferred deposit transaction.
- That the check is being negotiated as part of a deferred deposit transaction made in accordance with Fin. Code § 23035 and is not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1719 (imposing liability, including treble damages, for passing a check on insufficient funds).

- That no customer may be required to pay treble damages if this check does not clear.

This notice must be in at least 10-point type and be written and available in the same language as principally used in any oral discussions or negotiations leading to execution of the deferred deposit agreement [Fin. Code § 23035(f)].

In addition, the lender must post, clearly and conspicuously, in the public's unobstructed view, in letters not less than half an inch high, a notice, stating [Fin. Code § 23035(d)]:

- That the lender cannot use the criminal process against a consumer to collect any deferred deposit transaction.
- The schedule of all charges and fees, with an example of all charges and fees that would be charged on at least a $100 and a $200 deferred deposit transaction, payable in 14 days and 30 days, respectively, giving the corresponding annual percentage rate.

Each deferred deposit must be made pursuant to a written agreement that has been signed by the customer and by the lender or its authorized representative [Fin. Code § 23035(a)].

The written agreement must contain all of the following [Fin. Code § 23035(e); see Fin. Code § 23035(h) (prohibited provisions); see also Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, for discussion of Truth in Lending Act disclosures]:

- A full disclosure of the total amount of any fees charged for the deferred deposit transaction, expressed both in dollars and as an annual percentage rate (APR), as required under the Truth in Lending Act [15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.] and regulations [12 C.F.R. § 226.1 et seq.].
- A clear description of the customer's payment obligations as required under the Truth in Lending Act and regulations.
- An itemization of the amount financed, as required under the Truth in Lending Act and regulations.
- The lender's name, address, and telephone number.
- The customer's name and address.
- The date to which deposit of the check has been deferred (due date).
- The payment plan, or extension, if applicable [see Fin. Code § 23036(c)].
- Any returned-check charges that could be applied.
- A statement that the customer cannot be prosecuted or threatened with prosecution to collect.
- A statement that the lender cannot accept collateral in connection with the transaction.
- A statement that the lender cannot make a deferred deposit transaction contingent on the purchase of another product or service.

- Signature spaces for the signatures of the customer and the lender.

If the lender sells or otherwise transfers the debt at a later date, the agreement must also contain a disclosure that any debt or checks held or transferred in a deferred deposit transaction made in accordance with Fin. Code § 23035 are not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1719 (imposing liability, including treble damages, for passing a check on insufficient funds) and that no customer may be required to pay treble damages if a check is dishonored [Fin. Code § 23035(e)].

The agreement must be in at least 10-point type and be written and available in the same language as principally used in any oral discussions or negotiations leading to execution of the deferred deposit agreement [Fin. Code § 23035(g)].

A lender may not charge a fee for a deferred deposit transaction that exceeds 15 percent of the face amount of the check [Fin. Code § 23036(a)].

A fee not to exceed $15 may be charged for the return of a dishonored check by a depository institution. This single fee charged is the exclusive charge for a dishonored check. No fee may be added for late payment [Fin. Code § 23036(e)]. No amount in excess of the amounts authorized by Fin. Code § 23036 may be directly or indirectly charged by a lender pursuant to a deferred deposit agreement [Fin. Code § 23036(f)]. A lender may allow an extension of time, or a payment plan, for repayment of an existing deferred deposit transaction but may not charge any additional fee or charge of any kind in conjunction with the extension or payment plan [Fin. Code § 23036(b)].

A lender must not enter into an agreement for a deferred deposit with a customer during the period of time that an earlier written agreement for a deferred deposit for the same customer is in effect [Fin. Code § 23036(c)].

[c] Customer's Immunities

A customer cannot be prosecuted in a criminal action in conjunction with a deferred deposit transaction for a returned check or be threatened with prosecution [see Fin. Code § 23035(c)(3)].

A customer is not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1719 (imposing liability, including treble damages, for passing a check on insufficient funds) and may not be required to pay treble damages if a check is dishonored [see Fin. Code § 23035(c)(6)].

[d] Penalties for Misconduct; Civil Remedies

If the lender willfully charges, contracts for, or receives any amount other than, or in excess of, the charges or fees permitted by the Deferred Deposit Transaction Law [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.], the deferred deposit transaction contract is void, and the lender has no right to collect or receive the principal amount provided in the transaction, or any charges, or fees, in connection with the transaction [Fin. Code § 23060(a)].

If the lender willfully violates any provision of the Deferred Deposit Transaction Law [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.], the deferred deposit transaction contract is void, and no one has the right to collect or receive any amount provided in the transaction, or any charges, or fees in connection with the transaction [Fin. Code § 23060(b)].

Any person who is injured by any violation of the Deferred Deposit Transaction Law [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.; see [a]-[c] above] may bring an action for the recovery of damages, an equity proceeding to restrain and enjoin those violations, or both. The amount awarded may be up to three times the damages actually incurred, but in no event less than the amount paid by the aggrieved consumer to a person subject to Fin. Code § 23064. If the plaintiff prevails, the plaintiff must be awarded reasonable attorney's fees and costs. If a court determines by clear and convincing evidence that a breach or violation was willful, the court, in its discretion, may award punitive damages in addition to the amounts set forth above. On application, the court may also grant equitable relief, including, but not limited to, a claim for restitution and disgorgement [Fin. Code § 23064].

The rights, remedies, and penalties established by the Deferred Deposit Transaction Law [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.] are cumulative to the rights, remedies, or penalties established under other laws. It is not necessary to exhaust administrative remedies in order to pursue the civil remedies provided for in this law [Fin. Code § 23064.5].

Deferred deposits made pursuant to a permit issued under former Civ. Code § 1789.37 before December 31, 2004, are subject to and enforceable under Civ. Code §§ 1789.30-1789.37, which governed deferred deposits prior to 2005 [Fin. Code § 23102].

NOTE:

For promissory notes containing examples of the following types of payment arrangements, see Sections 55.200-55.206.

a. Lump sum amount and due date.

b. Fully amortized installment amounts and dates.

c. Partially amortized installment amounts, installment dates, and date and amount of final "balloon" payment.

- a. In event of default.
- b. On occurrence of other event.

6. Location where note will be:

- a. Executed.
- b. Payable.

NOTE:

There is no requirement that a negotiable instrument state the place of payment [see Com. Code § 3111]. However, the parties may wish to agree on a place of payment that is mutually convenient. Moreover, since presentment may be made at the place of payment (and must be made there if the instrument is payable at a bank in the United States) a place of payment should be stated in order to specify the place of presentment [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)].

7. Whether note is to be secured by:

- a. Personal obligation of borrower.
- b. Collateral security under either:

10. Whether late charge provisions are desired.

NOTE:

For late charge provisions, see Sections 55.202 and 55.240.

13. Whether payment is to be limited to particular fund or source.

NOTE:

For discussion of such a limitation as a condition and its effect on negotiability, and a provision limiting payment to the assets of some of the more common forms of businesses (partnership, unincorporated association, trust, or estate), see Section 55.270.

14. Whether payment is to be in United States or foreign currency.

NOTE:

A provision for payment in a foreign currency is illustrated in Section 55.271.

15. Name or names of payees, and, if more than one payee, whether payment will be to:

18. Whether presentment, notice of dishonor, and protest are to be waived.

19. Place where loan proceeds are to be paid or deposited, either:

a. Address of payee.

20. Whether statute of limitations is to be waived.

Ordinarily, drafts are used as the medium of payment for goods or services under a contract between a buyer and a seller or for goods in export-import transactions. Drafts used in export-import transactions are set forth in Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers .

1. Date on which draft is to be issued.

2. Name and address of drawer.

NOTE:

The drawer is the party who signs the draft as a person ordering payment, generally the seller.

3. Name and address of payee.

NOTE:

The payee is the party to whom payment is to be made, generally the seller.

4. Name and address of drawee or payor.

NOTE:

The drawee is the party ordered in the draft to make payment, generally the buyer.

5. Amount of draft.

6. Place where draft is to be issued.

7. Time when draft is to be paid, either:

a. At sight or at will of holder.

b. On specific date.

c. At specific time after sight.

8. Terms for acceptance:

a. Receipt by drawee of documents of title.

b. Receipt by drawee of documents of title and certification of quantity or quality of goods.

9. If draft is issued in connection with letter of credit:

NOTE:

A letter of credit (whether domestic or international) is issued by a bank or other issuer that agrees to honor drafts or other payment demands on compliance with the conditions stated in the credit. Ordinarily, a seller will require a letter of credit as an assurance that any drafts drawn to facilitate the transaction will be accepted. For coverage of letters of credit as they are used in international transactions, see Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers .

a. Amount of credit.

b. Date of issuance.

c. Date of expiration.

d. Name and address of party who will receive payment of drafts drawn against credit.

e. Name and address of bank issuing credit.

f. Name and address of advising or confirming bank.

NOTE:

An advising bank is a bank that gives notification of the issuance of a letter of credit by another bank [Com. Code § 5102(a)(1)].

A confirming bank is a bank that promises either to honor a credit issued by another bank, or that the credit will be honored by the issuer or a third bank [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4)]. By confirming a credit, a confirming bank becomes directly obligated on the credit to the extent of its confirmation [Com. Code § 5107(a)].

g. Name and address of party requesting issue of letter of credit, if other than party receiving payment of drafts drawn against letter.

h. Whether letter is revocable or irrevocable.

§ 55.103 Facts Related to Accommodation and Guarantee of Collection Agreements

NOTE:

For general coverage of suretyship law [see Civ. Code §§ 2787-2855] and procedure, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity. For a guide to the procedures applicable to accommodation and guarantees of negotiable instruments, see Section 55.121. Accommodation and guarantee of collection agreements are set forth in Section 55.321.

1. Whether individual will be asked to sign either as:

a. Accommodation party.

NOTE:

An accommodation party is one who signs an instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(a)]. For discussion of the liability of an accommodation party, see Section 55.30[4].

b. Guarantor of collection.

NOTE:

A guarantor is one whose signature and accompanying words to an instrument unambiguously indicate that he or she guarantees collection rather than payment of the obligation [Com. Code § 3419(d)]. For discussion of the liability of a guarantor, see Section 55.30[4][b].

2. Name, address, and telephone number of accommodation party or guarantor of collection.

3. Whether accommodation party or guarantor is:

- a. Party to instrument (for example, maker or drawer, endorser, or acceptor).
- b. Third party.

4. Whether accommodation or guaranty is to be absolute or conditional.

NOTE:

For alternative provisions and related discussion, see Section 55.321.

5. Date on which accommodation or guaranty is to be executed.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Preliminary Determinations

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.110

§ 55.110 Determinations for Use of Negotiable Instruments in General

NOTE:

Notes, drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, and demand drafts are negotiable instruments [Com. Code § 3104(e)-(k)], as are orders that fall within the definition of check and are otherwise negotiable but not payable to bearer or to order at the time they are issued or first come into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3104(c); see Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6) ("order" defined), 3104(f) ("check" defined)].

1. Should instrument be drafted in negotiable or nonnegotiable form?

NOTE:

All instruments, whether negotiable or nonnegotiable, may be transferred [see Com. Code § 3203(b)]. However, negotiation is a special form of transfer, the importance of which lies in the fact that it makes the transferee a holder [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(21)]. Only a holder of a negotiable instrument may become a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a); see also § 55.33]. A holder in due course takes an instrument free of claims of a property right or possessory right to the instrument by any person [Com. Code § 3306], free of all defenses of parties to the instrument with whom the holder has not dealt [Com. Code § 3305(b)], and free of most defenses of parties to the instrument [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1), (b)]. This feature renders negotiable instruments readily transferrable and, therefore, more readily acceptable in commercial transactions than nonnegotiable instruments, for which there can be no holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a); see also Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1170, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 (finding payee of check to be holder in due course under § 3302)]. For discussion of the rights of holders and holders in due course, see §§ 55.31 through 55.33.

2. What type of instrument is required to accomplish payment?

a. Draft:

NOTE:

A draft is a written instruction to pay money signed by the person instructing payment [Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6), 3104(e)]. A draft is not necessarily drawn on a bank or payable on demand [see Com. Code § 3104(e)]. For further discussion, see § 55.13[3], and Hart & Willier, Forms and Procedures Under the Uniform Commercial Code, P 31.08[3] (Matthew Bender).

(1) Bill of exchange (draft to be used in international transactions).

(2) Documentary draft.

NOTE:

A documentary draft is a draft that requires accompanying documents, securities, or other papers be received by the payor before acceptance or payment [Com. Code § 4104(a)(6)]. For further discussion, see Section 55.13[3][b].

(3) Trade acceptance.

NOTE:

A trade acceptance is a draft drawn by a seller of goods against the purchaser (the drawee) rather than a bank. The payee may be the drawer or a third party. Acceptance is made by the purchaser. However, the seller generally does not present the trade acceptance to the purchaser for acceptance and payment. Rather, the seller usually raises cash from it by endorsing and transferring it. For further discussion, see Section 55.13[3][c].

b. Check.

NOTE:

A check is a draft (other than a documentary draft) drawn on a bank and payable on demand [Com. Code § 3104(f); see § 55.13[4]].

3. If extension of credit is involved, what type of note should be used to evidence the promise to make payment and the terms of the promise?

NOTE:

A note (also known as a promissory note) is a promise to make payment [Com. Code § 3104(e)]. For further discussion of promissory notes and examples of basic note terms, see Section 55.200.

a. Time note.

NOTE:

A time note is an express promise to pay the amount of money stated at a specified future date [see F. Hart & W. Willier, Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, ch. 1A, Types of Money Paper Currently in Use (Matthew Bender)]. For an example of a time note, see Section 55.200 [2], first alternative.

b. Short-term promissory note.

NOTE:

A short-term promissory note is a simple unsecured time note that has a maturity not exceeding nine months. A short-term promissory note is drafted with that time limit because a note with a maturity not exceeding nine months is exempt from the registration and prospectus requirements of the federal Securities Act of 1933 [see 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(3)]. For coverage of debt securities, see Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities .

c. Demand note.

NOTE:

A demand note is payable on demand, that is, immediately after its issuance. It is used to extend credit as long as the maker performs the obligation involved, such as making installment payments. A demand note may be used in conjunction with a formal or informal performance agreement between the maker and the payee. For an example of a demand note, see Section 55.200[2], second alternative.

A demand note is to the payee's advantage if the maker's credit is likely to become unreliable, because default by the maker need not occur before the payee may demand payment [see F. Hart & W. Willier, Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, ch. 1A, Types of Money Paper Currently in Use (Matthew Bender)].

d. Bearer note.

NOTE:

An instrument is payable to bearer if it (1) states it is payable to bearer, to the order of bearer, or to the person in possession; (2) does not state a payee; or (3) states that it is payable to cash, to the order of cash, or otherwise indicates that it is not payable to an identified person [Com. Code § 3109(a)]. A single note could qualify as both a "demand" and a "bearer" note.

e. Interest-included installment note with interest payable with each installment on remaining balance.

NOTE:

For an example of such a note, see Section 55.200 [2], third alternative.

f. Installment note providing for payment of principal and interest:

(1) In installments until stated date.

(2) For specified number of installments with balance remaining unpaid at that time due in lump sum ("balloon payment").

NOTE:

For a balloon payment note, see Section 55.204.

g. Straight or interest-only note with principal payable in lump sum ("balloon payment") on maturity of note.

h. Discounted note payable in:

NOTE:

A discounted note is one in which interest is predetermined and deducted from the principal before disbursement of the principal to the borrower. For an example of a discounted note, see Section 55.200 [2], fourth alternative.

(1) Lump sum.

(2) Installments.

i. Interest-extra note with provision for payment of principal and interest in separate installments.

j. Variable-rate note.

NOTE:

A variable-rate note provides for changes in interest rates based on extraneous factors such as the cost of funds or the consumer price indices. Such notes may be used only in connection with real estate loans [see Civ. Code §§ 1916.5(b)(1), 1916.7(b), 1916.8]. These loans are covered in Volume 5A, Ch. 25, Real Estate Loans.

4. Should money be invested through use of certificate of deposit?

NOTE:

A certificate of deposit is an instrument containing acknowledgment by a bank of receipt of the depositor's money and a promise to repay it [Com. Code § 3104(j)]. For further discussion of certificates of deposit, see Section 55.13[5].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Preliminary Determinations

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.111

§ 55.111 Determinations for Use of Promissory Notes

1. What interest rate is legally applicable?

NOTE:

For discussion of the interest rates that are legal in California, see Section 55.200[1][f][x].

2. Should note contain acceleration provisions?

NOTE:

For discussion of the legal consequences of acceleration provisions, see Section 55.231[1].

3. Should note specify place of payment?

NOTE:

If the instrument does not state a place for payment, it is payable at the maker's business or residence, if there is no place of business [Com. Code § 3111]. If an instrument states that it is "payable through" or "payable at" a bank identified in the instrument, the instrument may be presented for payment only by or through the bank; that bank is designated as a collecting bank and the statement does not by itself authorize the bank to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 4106].

4. Should note be secured by either:

a. Security agreement.

NOTE:

A security agreement is used to secure the payment of a note with personal property or fixtures as collateral. For coverage of secured transactions, see Volume 9, Ch. 42, Secured Transactions.

b. Deed of trust or mortgage on real property used as security.

NOTE:

Real estate financing is covered in Volume 5A, Chapters 25, Real Estate Loans, and 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.

5. Should note contain late charge provisions?

NOTE:

For discussion of the law applicable to late charges, see Section 55.202[1][b].

6. Should note contain provisions permitting or penalizing prepayment?

NOTE:

For discussion of prepayment, see Sections 55.250 and 55.251, and Volume 5A, Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.

7. Should note include time extension provisions?

NOTE:

For discussion of time extensions, see Section 55.260[1][b].

8. Should note limit payment to a particular fund or source?

NOTE:

A negotiable instrument may be limited to a particular fund or source without making it conditional and, thus, nonnegotiable [Com. Code § 3106(b)]. For discussion of such a limitation as a condition and a provision limiting payment to the assets of some of the more common types of business organizations, see Section 55.270.

9. What statute of limitations period applies and can it be waived?

NOTE:

For discussion of the statutes of limitations applicable to notes, and a waiver of the statute, see Section 55.323.

10. Will instrument be secured by obligations of accommodating party or guarantor of collection?

NOTE:

For discussion of the obligation of an accommodation party or guarantor, see Section 55.30[4][a], [b] and 55.32[1]. For a procedural guide to accommodation or guaranty, see Section 55.121.

11. Must note contain consumer protection notices or legends?

NOTE:

For discussion of consumer protection notices, see Section 55.200[1][h]. For further discussion, see Volume 9, Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales.

12. Should note contain confession of judgment provision?

NOTE:

For discussion of the legal restrictions on confession of judgment provisions and the consequences of their use, see Section 55.200[1][f][vi].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

C. Procedural Guide

1. Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.120

§ 55.120 Procedural Guide to Endorsement and Delivery of Negotiable Instruments

NOTE:

The requirements for negotiability [see Com. Code § 3104(a)] are discussed in Section 55.21. The following checklist covers the procedures for negotiation of an instrument. In general, an instrument payable to order is negotiated by delivery with any necessary endorsement, while an instrument payable to bearer may be negotiated by delivery alone [Com. Code § 3201(b)].

The procedures for endorsement and delivery of negotiable instruments are covered in Section 55.120. The procedures for endorsement by an accommodation party or guarantor of collection are set forth in Section 55.121. Post-negotiation procedures are outlined in Sections 55.130-55.132.

NOTE:

In the absence of restrictive language [see P 6, below], an endorser is obliged on dishonor, and any necessary notice of dishonor, to pay the unaccepted instrument according to its terms as of the time of the endorsement, or as of the time of completion if the endorser endorsed an incomplete instrument, to the holder or any subsequent endorser who fulfilled an obligation to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3415(a)]. The liability of an endorser of a check is discharged if the check is not presented for payment or given to a depository bank for collection within 30 days after the day the endorsement was made [Com. Code § 3415(e)]. For further discussion of endorsement, see Section 55.24[2].

1. Have payee or holder sign as endorser [Com. Code § 3204(a); see Com. Code § 3204(b)]:

- a. By or on behalf of holder.
- b. On instrument or on paper affixed to instrument.

NOTE:

An endorsement may be placed anywhere on an instrument or on an attachment to the instrument. The UCC contains no rules on the subject, except by implication that unless there is an unambiguous indication that the signature is made in some other capacity, it is an endorsement [see Com. Code § 3204(a)].

In practice, endorsements appear on the reverse of checks and other negotiable instruments partly to avoid any implication that the signature is made in any other capacity and partly to provide room for signatures to appear in order from the first endorser to the last.

c. Using individual, trade, or assumed name, by either [see Com. Code § 3401(b)]:

(1) Handwritten signature.

(2) Any word, mark, or symbol (made manually or by means of a device or machine) in lieu of written signature.

d. If signature is by mark, have mark witnessed by another person who signs instrument as witness and is clearly identified as such.

NOTE:

A mark is a "signature" if the signer's name is written near it by a person who writes his or her own name as a witness [see Civ. Code § 14].

A writing may be authenticated by anyone who saw the writing executed, including a subscribing witness [Evid. Code § 1413]. Although authentication is not required by the UCC [see Com. Code § 3401(b)], a person paying an instrument or taking it for value must exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument insofar as the validity of a signature is concerned [see Com. Code §§ 3404 (impostors), 3405 (fraudulent endorsement by employee), 3406 (forgery); see also Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b))].

e. If signature is made by an authorized representative [see Com. Code § 3401(a)(2)], either:

NOTE:

For discussion of the liability of an authorized representative and a power of attorney authorizing a representative to sign an instrument, see Ch. 98, Powers of Attorney .

(1) By signature of representative, followed by "Agent," "Representative," or the like, followed by name of principal.

(2) By signature of representative without more.

NOTE:

Although the signature of the representative alone is a valid endorsement [see Com. Code § 3402(a)], ordinarily it is not recommended. A representative or agent should not endorse an instrument in his or her own name without indication of representative status because he or she may become personally obligated unless (1) the form of the signature shows unambiguously that it is made in a represented capacity, or (2) the represented person is identified in the instrument [see Com. Code § 3402(b)(2)]. However, a signor is not liable on a check if his or her signature is made without indication of representative capacity as long as the signature is an authorized signature of the represented person [Com. Code § 3402(c)].

(3) By signature of principal's name.

2. Do not include as part of endorsement any words conveying less than entire instrument.

NOTE:

The transfer of less than the entire instrument is not a negotiation and operates only as a partial assignment [see Com. Code § 3203(d)].

3. If desired, use words of accommodation or guarantee:

NOTE:

The liability of an endorser who uses such words [see Com. Code § 3419] is discussed in Section 55.321[1].

4. If payee's name is misspelled on the instrument, or is otherwise incorrect, have payee either [see Com. Code § 3204(d)]:

- a. Sign name as it appears in instrument.
- b. Sign name as it appears as well as his or her correct name.

NOTE:

A payor may require that both names be signed [Com. Code § 3204(d)].

5. If negotiation of instrument by particular person is desired, use special endorsement (that is, specify by name person to whom or to whose order endorsement makes instrument payable) [see Com. Code § 3205(a)].

NOTE:

Regardless of whether a negotiable instrument originates in order or bearer form, it may be changed from one form to the other by use of the appropriate words as part of a special endorsement when the instrument is transferred [see Com. Code § 3205].

Examples of special endorsements include "Pay" a named party, "Pay to the order of" a named party, or "Pay to" a named party "or order," each signed by the endorser.

When specially endorsed, an instrument becomes payable to the identified person and may be negotiated only by the endorsement of that person [Com. Code § 3205(b)]. A special endorsement is particularly useful in guarding against loss or theft of an instrument because only the person named may endorse and cash the instrument.

An endorsement that specifies no particular person (for example, the endorser's signature, without more) is an endorsement in blank. An instrument payable to order and endorsed in blank becomes payable to the bearer and may be negotiated by delivery alone until specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3205(b)]. A holder may convert a blank endorsement into a special endorsement by writing above the signature of the endorser words identifying the person to whom the instrument is made payable [Com. Code § 3205(c)].

6. Use restrictive endorsement to [Com. Code § 3206]:

NOTE:

An endorsement that limits payment to a particular person or otherwise prohibits further transfer or negotiation does not prevent further transfer or negotiation of the instrument [Com. Code § 3206(a)]. An endorsement stating a condition on the right of the endorsee to receive payment does not affect the enforceability of the instrument by the endorsee, and the condition may be disregarded by a person paying the instrument or taking it for value or collection [Com. Code § 3206(b)]. If an instrument is endorsed to the endorsee as an agent, trustee, or other fiduciary, that restriction does not affect a subsequent transferee or payor of the instrument unless the transferee or payor knows that the fiduciary dealt with the instrument or its proceeds in breach of the fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3206(d); see Com. Code § 3307 (notice of breach of fiduciary duty)].

However, if an endorsement includes the words "pay any bank" or is in blank or to a particular bank "for deposit" or "for collection" or otherwise indicates the purpose of having the instrument collected by a bank for the endorser or for a particular account, transferees (other than intermediary banks) must pay or apply proceeds in accordance with the endorsement or the instrument will be considered converted [Com. Code § 3206(c); see Com. Code § 4201(b)]. An endorsement "for deposit only," although restrictive, is also a blank endorsement because it does not specify where or for whose benefit the checks are to be deposited [Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (bank's acceptance for collection of cashiers' checks endorsed "for deposit only," for deposit to third party's trust account, was not violation of restrictive indorsement)].

a. Impose conditions.

NOTE:

Examples include: "Transfer of this instrument is conditioned on receipt of Bill of Sale in due form of certain goods by _____ Co." or "Pay to the order of" a named party "for the benefit of" another named party.

b. Specify method or purpose of deposit or collection:

(1) "For collection" or "For collection only."

NOTE:

This type of instruction is ordinarily used when there is reason to suspect that the account on which the instrument is drawn does not have sufficient funds to pay its face amount in order to ensure eventual payment and to avoid return of the item with the notation "insufficient funds" and subsequent renegotiation. Although "collection" is not defined in the UCC, in banking practice it is an instruction by the endorser (usually the payee of a check) not to credit the endorser's account with the proceeds until the endorser's bank receives credit for the amount of the instrument from the party upon whom it is drawn through the latter's bank. The duties of a collecting bank are set forth in Com. Code §§ 4201-4216.

(2) "For deposit" or "For deposit only."

NOTE:

Under the statutory scheme, an endorsement "for deposit only," although restrictive, is also a blank endorsement because it does not specify where or for whose benefit the checks are to be deposited [Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (bank's acceptance for collection of cashiers' checks endorsed "for deposit only," for deposit to third party's trust account, was not violation of restrictive indorsement); cf. Nordin v. Eagle Rock State Bank (1934) 139 Cal. App. 584, 594, 34 P.2d 490 (endorsement constituted instruction that instrument was payable to depositor for credit to his account only)].

(3) "Pay any bank."

NOTE:

This type of endorsement is generally used by intermediary banks rather than by individuals. If an instrument is endorsed in this fashion, only a bank can acquire the rights of a holder unless the instrument (1) has been returned to the customer initiating collection, or (2) has been specially endorsed by the bank to other than a bank [Com. Code § 4201(b)].

7. Have maker, drawer, or endorser deliver instrument to holder.

NOTE:

A negotiable instrument payable to order is negotiated by delivery with any necessary endorsement. If it is payable to bearer, it is negotiated by delivery alone [Com. Code § 3201(b)]. "Delivery" means voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(15)]. For further discussion, see § 55.24[1].

8. If payee is supplier of retail goods or services, do not [Civ. Code § 1725(a)]:

a. Require person paying with negotiable instrument to provide credit card as condition of acceptance of negotiable instrument, or record credit card number.

b. Require, as condition of acceptance of negotiable instrument, person paying with negotiable instrument to allow credit card to be charged to cover negotiable instrument if returned as no good.

c. Record credit card number in connection with any part of transaction.

d. Contact credit card issuer to determine if amount of credit available will cover amount of negotiable instrument.

NOTE:

A retailer may require the production of reasonable forms of positive identification, other than a credit card, as a condition of accepting a negotiable instrument [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(1)], and may request, but not require, a purchaser to voluntarily display a credit card as an indication of creditworthiness or as additional identification [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)]. If so used, the only information that can be recorded is the type of credit card, issuer of the card, and expiration date [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)]. All retailers who request the display of credit cards from customers must post signs stating, or train employees to inform customers, that displaying credit cards is not required [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(2)].

It is permissible to request a credit card (1) as a condition of cashing a negotiable instrument that is being used solely to receive cash back; (2) in lieu of requiring a deposit; or (3) if the negotiable instrument is being used to make a payment on that credit card account [Civ. Code § 1725(c)(3)-(6)].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

C. Procedural Guide

1. Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.121

§ 55.121 Procedural Guide to Signature by Accommodation Party

NOTE:

An accommodation party is one who signs an instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument; the party receiving the benefit of the value given is the accommodated party [Com. Code § 3419(a); see Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 (determination of status as accommodation party or accommodated party)]. For discussion of the liability of an accommodation party, see § 55.30[4][a]. A guarantor is one whose signature to an instrument and its accompanying words unambiguously indicate that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the obligation of another party [Com. Code § 3419(d)]. For discussion of the liability of a guarantor, see § 55.30[4][b].

Surety obligations are governed by Civ. Code § 2787 et seq. For discussion of surety obligations, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity. For discussion of the use and effect of guarantor and accommodation party endorsements, see Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, Ch. 13, Suretyship and Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender).

1. Advise payee or endorsee that if there are questions concerning creditworthiness of maker, drawer, prior endorser of an instrument, payment may be further assured by:

- a. Obtaining specific words of guarantee of collection [see P 2, below].
- b. Asking accommodation party to sign instrument [see P 3, below].

2. To condition guarantor's liability, have guarantor write "I guarantee collection" or its equivalent with his or her signature.

NOTE:

When unambiguous words of guarantee accompany the signature of a party to an instrument, the signer will be obliged to pay a person entitled to enforce the instrument only if (1) execution of judgment against the other party is returned unsatisfied, (2) the other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding, (3) the other party cannot be served with process, or (4) it is otherwise apparent payment cannot be obtained from the other party [Com. Code § 3419(d)].

3. To condition accommodation party's liability, have party seeking accommodation ask third party (whose credit rating is superior to that of existing or proposed party to instrument) to sign instrument as accommodation party [see Com. Code § 3419(a)-(c)]:

NOTE:

The accommodation party is obliged to pay in the capacity in which he or she signs [Com. Code § 3419(b)]. A person signing an instrument is presumed to be an accommodation party if the signature is an anomalous endorsement or is accompanied by words indicating that the signer is acting as a surety or guarantor with respect to the obligation of another party to the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(c); see Com. Code § 3205(d)].

In an action to enforce the obligation of an accommodation party to pay an instrument, the accommodation party may assert any defense or claim in recoupment that the accommodated party could assert against the person entitled to enforce the instrument. However, the defenses of discharge in insolvency proceedings, infancy, and lack of legal capacity are not available to the accommodation party [Com. Code § 3305(d); see Bender'S U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, Ch. 13, Suretyship and Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender)].

a. Advise accommodation party that he or she may sign as:

(1) Maker or drawer.

(2) Endorser.

(3) Acceptor.

b. Advise accommodation party that he or she is liable in capacity in which he or she signed, even if taker knows of accommodation [see Com. Code § 3419(b), (c)].

NOTE:

For discussion of discharge from liability, see § 55.45.

c. Advise accommodation party that he or she is entitled to reimbursement from accommodated party, if he or she pays instrument [Com. Code § 3419(e)].

a. It cannot be accomplished by use of reasonable diligence?

b. Maker or acceptor has repudiated obligation to pay?

c. Maker or acceptor is:

(1) Dead?

(2) In insolvency proceedings?

d. Presentment is unnecessary to enforce obligations of endorsers or drawers?

e. Presentment has been waived by drawer or endorser?

NOTE:

Presentment is excused if the drawer or endorser has waived it or otherwise has no reason or right to require that the instrument be paid or accepted [Com. Code § 3504(a)].

f. Drawer instructed drawee not to pay or accept draft?

g. Drawee is not obliged to drawer to pay draft?

2. Is notice of dishonor excused because [Com. Code § 3504(b)]:

- a. Instrument's terms make notice unnecessary?
 - b. Notice has been waived by party whose obligation is being enforced?
3. Is delay in giving notice of dishonor excused because [Com. Code § 3504(c)]:

 - b. Person giving notice exercised reasonable diligence after cause of delay ceased?

C. Procedural Guide

2. Post-Negotiation Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.131

§ 55.131 Procedural Guide to Presentment and Acceptance

NOTE:

"Presentment" is a demand for acceptance or payment of an instrument [see Com. Code § 3501(a)].

"Acceptance" is the drawee's signed agreement to pay a draft or check as presented [Com. Code § 3409(a); see Com. Code § 3408]. Unless excused or waived [see Com. Code § 3504; see also § 55.130], presentment for acceptance is necessary to enforce the obligations of the drawer and endorsers of an instrument in that the instrument must be duly presented before it can be dishonored, and the drawer and endorsers must have notice of the dishonor, unless the notice is excused, before their obligations are enforceable [see Com. Code §§ 3502 (dishonor), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3504(b) (excuse of notice of dishonor)]. For further discussion of presentment and acceptance, see § 55.40-55.42.

1. If presentment has not been excused, make presentment to enforce obligations of drawer and endorsers [see Com. Code § 3408].

NOTE:

For a checklist to use in determining whether presentment has been excused, see § 55.130.

2. Make presentment to any of parties listed below or to any one of two or more of these parties, as appropriate [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]:

a. Maker.

b. Acceptor.

c. Drawee.

d. Any other payor.

3. Make presentment at [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]:

a. Place of payment specified in instrument.

b. If no place is stated, at address of drawee or maker. If no address is stated, at place of business of drawee or maker, or if there is no place of business, at residence of drawee or maker [see Com. Code § 3111].

c. If instrument is payable at bank in United States, at that bank.

4. Make presentment by any commercially reasonable means, including [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]:

a. Oral communication.

b. Written communication.

c. Electronic communication.

NOTE:

Presentment is effective when the demand for payment is received by the person to whom it is made [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)].

5. Make presentment within applicable time period [see Com. Code § 3502]:

a. Time required by or specified in instrument.

b. On or after date payment is due, if no time is specified in instrument.

NOTE:

A bank is under no obligation to its checking account customer to pay a check drawn on the customer's account (other than a certified check) if it is presented more than six months after its date. However, the bank may charge the customer's account for a payment made thereafter in good faith [Com. Code § 4404]. Furthermore, a bank may charge a check against an account if it is presented for acceptance before the date of the check unless the customer has given notice to the bank, describing the check with reasonable certainty [Com. Code § 4401(c)].

6. Advise holder that presentment may be treated as occurring on business day immediately following day of presentment [Com. Code § 3501(b)(4)].

NOTE:

This rule applies if presentment is made after an established cutoff hour not earlier than 2 P.M. [Com. Code § 3501(b)(4)].

7. Have presentment made by or on behalf of holder [see Com. Code § 3501(a)].

8. Present following, if required by party to whom presentment is made [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)]:

- a. Instrument.
- b. Reasonable identification of person making presentment.
- c. Evidence of authority to make presentment, if made for another.

9. Advise holder that person making presentment may be required to [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)]:

- a. Sign receipt on instrument for any partial payment made.
- b. Surrender instrument if paid in full.

10. If draft is involved, obtain drawee's acceptance in form of drawee's signed agreement to pay draft as presented, written on draft [see Com. Code § 3409(a)].

NOTE:

For discussion of acceptance, see § 55.42. Certification (that is, certification by a bank that funds have been reserved to make payment) of a check is acceptance [see Com. Code § 3409(d)]. The drawee's acceptance may consist of his or her signature alone [Com. Code § 3409(a) see Com. Code § 3401(b)].

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.132

§ 55.132 Procedural Guide to Dishonor and Notice of Dishonor

NOTE:

An instrument is dishonored when presentment is duly made but acceptance or payment is refused or cannot be obtained within the time allowed [see Com. Code § 3502; see also § 55.131]. Dishonor also occurs when presentment is excused and the instrument is not duly accepted or paid [Com. Code § 3502(e); see Com. Code § 3504 (waiver or excuse of presentment)]. The return of an instrument for lack of proper endorsement is not dishonor; nor is refusal of payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule [Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)].

The rules governing dishonor of various instruments are covered in § 55.43[2] through [5]. A procedural guide for presentment is outlined in § 55.131. Acceptance is discussed in § 55.42.

1. Advise holder that dishonor occurs if [see Com. Code § 3502(a)-(e)]:

- a. Note payable on demand is not paid on day of presentment.
- b. Note not payable on demand but payable at or through bank, or whose terms require presentment, is not paid on day it becomes payable or day of presentment, whichever is later.
- c. Note is not paid on day it becomes payable, if Paragraphs a and b, above, do not apply.
- d. Payor bank:
 - (1) Makes timely return of check.

(2) Sends timely notice of dishonor.

(3) Becomes accountable for amount of check.

NOTE:

These rules apply if a check is duly presented to the payor bank otherwise than for immediate payment over the counter [see Com. Code § 3502(b)(1)].

e. Draft (other than check) is duly presented to drawee or acceptor and is not paid on day of presentment.

f. Instrument is not duly accepted or paid, if presentment is excused.

2. Advise holder that presumption of dishonor and of any notice of dishonor is created by:

a. Document purporting to be protest [Com. Code § 3505(a)(1)].

b. Stamp or writing of drawer, payor bank, or presenting bank stating that acceptance has been refused [Com. Code § 3505(a)(2)].

c. Book or record of drawee, payor bank, or collecting bank, kept in usual course of business, showing dishonor [Com. Code § 3505(a)(3)].

3. If dishonor has occurred and notice of dishonor has not been excused [see § 55.130], have any person give notice [Com. Code § 3503(b)].

NOTE:

Notice of dishonor is necessary to enforce the obligation of an endorser after dishonor has occurred [Com. Code § 3503(a)]. Failure to give notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the endorser [Com. Code § 3415(c); see Com. Code § 3503]. Notice of dishonor is also necessary to enforce the obligation of a drawer to pay a dishonored draft that was accepted by an acceptor other than a bank; failure to give this notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the drawer [Com. Code §§ 3414(d), 3415(c), 3503(a)].

For further discussion of dishonor and notice of dishonor, see §§ 55.43 and 55.44. For a notice of dishonor, see § 55.340.

4. Give notice to following, as appropriate:

a. Any maker [see Com. Code § 3502(a)(1), (2)].

b. Any drawer [see Com. Code § 3502(b)(2), (3)].

c. Any acceptor of draft payable at bank [see Com. Code § 3502(d)(1), (2)].

d. Any other payor [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)].

5. Give notice of dishonor within following time limits [see Com. Code § 3503(c)]:

a. For instrument taken for collection by collecting bank:

(1) If notice is given by bank, before midnight of banking day following banking day on which bank received notice.

(2) If notice is given by any other person, within 30 days following day on which person receives notice.

b. For any other instrument, within 30 days following day on which dishonor occurs.

6. Give notice of dishonor by any commercially reasonable means, including [Com. Code § 3503(b)]:

a. Oral communication.

b. Written communication.

c. Electronic communication.

7. If draft or check has been dishonored, advise drawer that he or she may (but is not required to):

a. Waive dishonor and re-present draft [see Com. Code § 3504(b)].

b. Demand payment in cash [see Civ. Code § 1719]:

NOTE:

The act of making, drawing, or delivering a check, draft, or order with intent to defraud, together with the knowledge that the maker or drawer has insufficient funds to pay it, is a criminal act, punishable by imprisonment [Penal Code § 476a(a)] or participation in a bad check diversion program, if a program has been established in the county involved [see Penal Code § 1001.60 et seq.].

(1) If draft or check has been dishonored because maker instructed drawee to stop payment, use form in § 55.342.

NOTE:

A demand for payment of an instrument that was dishonored because of a stop payment order must be in substantially the form specified by statute [Civ. Code § 1719(c)]. Section 55.342 illustrates the statutory form.

(2) If draft or check has been dishonored for reason other than stop payment order, use form in § 55.341.

8. Advise payee that following statutes of limitation apply to commencement of action to enforce payment [see Com. Code §§ 3118, 3119]:

a. For note payable at definite time, within six years after due date or accelerated due date.

b. For note payable on demand:

(1) Within six years, if demand for payment is made to maker.

(2) Within 10 years, if:

(a) No demand for payment is made to maker; and

(b) Neither principal nor interest has been paid for continuous 10-year period.

NOTE:

The above rules are subject to the following exceptions. An action to enforce payment of a certified check, teller's check, cashier's check, or traveler's check must be commenced within three years after demand for payment is made to the acceptor or issuer [Com. Code § 3118(d)]. An action to enforce payment of a certificate of deposit must be commenced within six years after demand for payment is made to the maker, but if the instrument states a due date and the maker is not required to pay before that date, the six-year period begins when a demand for payment is in effect and the due date has passed [Com. Code § 3118(e)]; see Com. Code § 3304(a), (c) (when instrument payable on demand is overdue); see also Com. Code § 3304(b), (c) (when instrument payable at definite time is overdue)].

c. For accepted draft (other than certified check), within six years after [see Com. Code § 3118(f)]:

(1) Due date, if draft is payable at a definite time.

(2) Date of acceptance, if draft is payable on demand.

9. Advise payee of three-year statute of limitations for commencement of action for indemnity or contribution (unless governed by other law) for:

a. Conversion [see Com. Code § 3118(g)].

b. Breach of warranty [see Com. Code § 3118(g)].

c. Enforcement of obligation, duty, or right arising under Division 3 of the Commercial Code and not governed by Com. Code § 3118 [see Com. Code § 3118(g)].

d. Enforcement of obligation, duty, or right arising under Division 4 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 4111; see also Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1125-1126, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (three-year statute of limitations set forth in Com. Code § 4111 applied retroactively to unauthorized checks drawn on company's payroll checking account during two-year period in question and barred recovery for those checks)].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

D. Related and Subsequent Procedures

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.140

§ 55.140 Responsibility of Payor Bank for Handling of Checks or Drafts

1. Advise drawer with respect to establishment and conduct of checking account:

a. Advise drawer that checking account is established through use of signature card.

NOTE:

A bank signature card is a contract that authorizes the bank to impose charges for its services and to determine those charges unilaterally. However, that right is subject to the bank's duty of good faith and fair dealing in setting and varying the charges [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 924, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] .

b. Advise drawer to obtain information concerning bank charges [see 12 C.F.R. pt. 230 (Regulation DD); see also Stats. 1993, ch. 107, § 3].

c. Advise drawer that unconscionable bank charges might not be upheld, and that charges will be judged on basis of:

- (1) Justification for charge.
- (2) Commercial setting of signature card and charge.
- (3) Purpose of signature card and charge.
- (4) Effect of signature card and charge.

NOTE:

A court can refuse to enforce an unconscionable provision in a contract. However, an allegation that the fee set by the bank exceeds its cost or a fair value does not state a cause of action for unconscionability; it does require an inquiry into the commercial setting, purpose, and effect of such a provision [Civ. Code § 1670.5; Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 925-926, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503]. Thus, a court will give the parties a reasonable opportunity to show the circumstances of the transaction and look to the basis and justification for the price in order to determine unconscionability [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 926-929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503].

d. Advise drawer that fees for processing checks returned for insufficient funds are not penalties.

NOTE:

Although penalties (that is, charges that are disproportionate to the anticipated damages for breach of contract) are invalid [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 1671(b) (unreasonable liquidated damages invalid)], writing a check on insufficient funds is not a breach of contract and thus the fee charged for processing the check is not a penalty [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 931-932, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503].

2. Advise payor institution not to transfer funds from depositor's account without authorization from depositor (except setoff for debt it claims from depositor) [see Fin. Code §§ 40500, 40501].

NOTE:

Banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, or other financial institutions that maintain demand deposit accounts (including NOW accounts) may not release funds from those accounts without the depositor's authorization or unless authorized to do so by law. This prohibition does not apply to any setoff for a debt the institution claims is owed to it by the customer [Fin. Code § 40501].

3. If check (other than certified check) is presented to payor bank more than six months after its date, advise drawer that [see Com. Code § 4404]:

- a. Bank is not obligated to pay; but that
- b. Bank may pay in good faith and charge drawer's account.

4. Advise drawer that bank may charge item that is properly payable against customer's account even though charge creates overdraft [see Com. Code § 4401(a)].

NOTE:

An item is properly payable if it is authorized by the customer and is in accordance with any agreement between the customer and the bank [Com. Code § 4401(a)]. However, a customer is not liable for an overdraft if the customer neither signed the item nor benefited from its proceeds [Com. Code § 4401(b)].

5. If check or draft is wrongfully dishonored by payor bank, advise drawer that he or she may recover from bank damages proximately caused by wrongful dishonor [see Com. Code § 4402].

6. If check or draft has been fraudulently altered, and honored in good faith by payor bank in favor of holder, advise drawer that bank had right to charge drawer's account according to either [Com. Code § 3407(c); see Com. Code §§ 3115, 4401(d)]:

- a. Original terms of altered item.

b. Terms of item as completed, unless bank had notice that completion was improper.

7. If check is paid on forged endorsement, advise drawer or bank that check has been converted [see Com. Code § 3420].

NOTE:

When a bank makes payment on a check drawn on another bank to a person who forges the payee's name and then collects the amount involved from the drawee bank, the drawer has a cause of action against the paying/collecting bank for conversion [Tedesco v. Crocker National Bank (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1211, 1216, 196 Cal. Rptr. 534 ; see Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609] . Note, however, that, if the payee has not endorsed the check, conversion liability does not arise when the person who deposited the check had authority to do so [see, e.g., In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 863 (when sole director and sole shareholder approved sale of all corporate assets to corporation formed to purchase assets and authorized agents to deposit checks payable to selling corporation into bank account of purchasing corporation, depository bank was not liable for conversion because payee no longer owned checks and agents had implied actual authority to make deposits)].

Absent extraordinary circumstances, a collecting bank does not owe a duty of care to a non-customer, particularly when the bank has met its statutory duties as set forth in Com. Code § 4202(a) [Karen Kane Inc. v. Bank of America NT&SA (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1192, 1202-1203, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712] . In a case in which a clothing manufacturer wrote numerous checks over several years to fictitious vendors for merchandise it never received, based on an employee's submission of fraudulent invoices, the manufacturer brought a negligence action against the check cashing service that cashed those checks and the bank that deposited the checks into the service's account. The court of appeal found that because the checks were not forged or improperly endorsed, and did not indicate that maker was being defrauded, neither the check cashing service nor the bank had a duty to inquire of the maker if a valid transaction supported the checks before accepting them. The circumstances were not extraordinary enough to give rise to a duty of inquiry by a bank complying with its statutory duties, when in fact they were not even sufficient to constitute notice of fraud to the maker of the checks [Karen Kane Inc. v. Bank of America NT&SA (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1192, 1202-1203, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712] .

§ 55.141 Prevention of Payment on Death or Incompetence of Drawer of Check or Draft

1. If drawer dies or becomes incompetent, advise drawer's personal representative (such as executor, administrator, or guardian) to notify drawer's bank immediately [see Com. Code § 4405].

NOTE:

Neither death nor incompetence revokes the payor or collecting bank's authority to accept, pay, or collect an item until the bank knows of the death or an adjudication of incompetence and has reasonable opportunity to act on it [Com. Code § 4405(a)].

2. If drawer dies, immediately order bank to stop payment, even if bank has been notified of death [see Com. Code § 4405(b)], using following procedures:

NOTE:

Even with knowledge of death, a bank may pay or certify checks drawn on or before that date for 10 days after death unless the bank receives a stop payment order by a person claiming an interest in the account [Com. Code § 4405(b); see Fin. Code §§ 852, 952; see also Chazen v. Centennial Bank (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 532, 541, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462 (Fin. Code §§ 952, 953 codify well-established principle that bank has no duty to monitor trust accounts for breaches of fiduciary duty)].

a. Have drawer's estate obtain and serve on office of bank at which deposit is carried either [see Fin. Code § 952]:

(1) Court order restraining payment; or

(2) Surety bond required by bank.

b. If account is joint account payable to survivor or survivors [see Prob. Code § 5130 ("joint account" defined)], and if more than one survivor remains, prevent further withdrawals by other survivors by having at least one of them give notice to bank prohibiting further withdrawals [see Prob. Code § 5405(c); Fin. Code § 852].

3. If drawer is incompetent, immediately inform bank of incompetence, using following procedures:

a. Have drawer's guardian or other personal representative obtain and serve on office of bank at which deposit is carried either [see Fin. Code § 952]:

(1) Court order restraining payment; or

(2) Surety bond required by bank.

b. If account has other drawers, prevent further withdrawals by those drawers by having at least one of them give notice to bank prohibiting further withdrawals [see Fin. Code § 852].

§ 55.142 Stopping Payment of Checks and Closing Account

NOTE:

A customer or any person authorized to draw on an account may stop payment on any item drawn on the customer's account or close the account. If the signature of more than one person is required to draw on an account, any of these persons may stop payment or close the account [Com. Code § 4403(a)].

The customer has the burden of establishing the fact and amount of loss resulting from the payment of an item contrary to a stop-payment order or order to close an account. The loss from payment of an item contrary to a stop-payment order may include damages for dishonor of subsequent items [Com. Code § 4403(c); see Com. Code § 4402(b) (damages)].

1. Advise party ordering payment stopped that bank must receive stop order in time and manner that affords bank reasonable opportunity to act on order before any action is taken by bank with respect to item [see Com. Code § 4403(a)].

2. Advise party ordering payment stopped that stop-order [see Com. Code § 4403(b)]:

a. Is effective for six months; but

b. Lapses after 14 calendar days if original order was oral and was not confirmed in writing within that period.

NOTE:

A stop-payment order may be renewed for additional six-month periods by giving a writing to the bank within the period in which the stop-payment order is effective [Com. Code § 4403(b)]. Even though a bank ordinarily will not honor a check that is over six months old, it may do so in good faith [Com. Code § 4404]. Therefore, it is prudent to renew a stop order if the stopped check has not yet been returned to the customer on the checking account.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.200

§ 55.200 Simple Negotiable Promissory Notes

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form illustrates a number of simple negotiable promissory notes. These notes may be used in lending transactions ranging from simple intra-family loans to short-term negotiable instruments [but see [g], below]. The notes illustrated here are the following:

- A time note, payable to order or to bearer, stating a promise to pay at some future date [see [2], First Alternative, below].
- A demand note, payable to order or to bearer, stating a promise to pay on demand [see [2], Second Alternative, below].
- An installment note, payable to order or to bearer, with interest payable with each installment on the remaining balance [see [2], Third Alternative, below].
- A discounted note, payable to order or to bearer, payable in installments, that is, a note under which interest is paid in a lump sum in advance with installment payment of the original balance [see [2], Fourth Alternative, below].

All of the promissory notes illustrated in this form are payable to a single payee. A provision for payment to alternative payees is set forth in § 55.280. A provision for payment to joint payees is set forth in § 55.281.

[b] Obligation of Parties

A promissory note is used to document a loan; it sets forth an unconditional promise by the debtor or maker to pay the creditor or payee the stated amount [see Com. Code § 3104(a); see also [e], below]. When the debtor "issues" the note, he or she is obliged to pay the creditor or payee or any subsequent holder according to the terms of the note at the time of issue if complete or, if the debtor signed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed [see Com. Code § 3412]. The payee is not obligated on the note unless he or she endorses it to a subsequent holder. In that case, the payee's obligation becomes that of an endorser, and the payee must pay the note if it is not paid by the debtor when due [see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(21), 3204, 3301, 3415].

[c] Types of Payment Terms

Promissory notes can be categorized by the type of payment terms they use. There are three generally used types of terms. One type provides for the payment of interest during the term of the note and the lump sum payment of the face amount or principal on a specified date (a "straight" or "interest-only" note) [see [2], First Alternative, below].

A second type of promissory note provides for payment of principal and interest together in installments (an "interest-included installment note") [see [2], Third Alternative, below; see also § 55.202]. A variation of this type of note is the "interest-extra" note, that is, a note that provides for the payment of principal and interest in separate installments.

A third type of note provides for payment of the principal and interest in installments until a stated date or for a specified number of installments with the balance remaining unpaid at that time due in a lump sum (a "balloon payment"). For a form of balloon payment note, see § 55.204.

[d] Provisions Relating to Prepayment

If the maker of a note is to be permitted to prepay the note, that is, to pay the balance due at any time before maturity or a specified time, the note should include the term "on or before" immediately before the payment date. A note can be drafted to include a provision for prepayment with a prepayment penalty; for an example of a prepayment penalty provision, see § 55.250 [see also Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing].

[e] Requirements for Negotiability

[i] Overview

To be negotiable, a note must be in writing and signed by its maker [Com. Code §§ 3104(a), (e), 3101(a)(9); see §§ 55.21[1], [2]]. It must be payable either on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2); see [iii]-[v], below]. In addition, it must be payable either to order or to bearer [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1); see [vi]-[viii], below].

Furthermore, a note must contain an unconditional promise to pay a fixed amount of money [see § 55.21 [3], [4]] and (except as otherwise permitted by Division 3 of the Commercial Code) may not contain any other undertaking by the maker [Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)].

The notes illustrated in this form are unconditional. The addition of certain conditions or other permitted language will not render these notes nonnegotiable [see Com. Code § 3106; see also [f], below; §§ 55.21[3], 55.201[1][b], [c]].

[ii] Signature

No one is liable on an instrument unless his or her signature appears on it [Com. Code § 3401(a)]. A "signature" may be made manually or by means of a device or machine and may be made by the use of any name, including a trade or assumed name, or by a word, mark or symbol [Com. Code § 3401(b); see Com. Code § 3308 (determining validity of signature)]. A person paying an instrument or taking it for value must exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument insofar as the validity of a signature is concerned [see Com. Code §§ 3404 (impostors), 3405 (fraudulent endorsement by employee), 3406 (forgery); see also Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b)).

A signature may be made by an agent or representative [Com. Code § 3401(a)(2)]. If a representative signs the name of the represented person or the name of the signer, the represented person is bound by the signature to the same extent as if the signature were on a simple contract. If the represented person is bound, the signature of the representative is the "authorized signature of the represented person" [Com. Code § 3402(a); see Com. Code § 3402(b), (c) (liability of representative)]. If the signature of more than one person is required to constitute the authorized signature of an organization, the signature of the organization is unauthorized if one of the requisite signatures is lacking [Com. Code § 3403(b); see Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1124-1125, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (amendment to Com. Code § 3403 providing that signature of organization is unauthorized if multiple signatures are required and one of required signatures is lacking was clarification of existing law and therefore operated retroactively)]. Unless ratified (or as otherwise permitted by Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code), an unauthorized signature is ineffective except in favor of a person who in good faith pays for the instrument or takes it for value [Com. Code § 3403(a); see Com. Code § 3403(c) (civil or criminal liability for unauthorized signature unaffected by ratification)]. For a form for ratification of an unauthorized signature, see § 55.320.

[iii] When Payment Is to Be Made

A note must be payable either on demand or at some specified definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2); see [iv], [v], below]. However, presentment, that is, a demand for payment of a note made to the party obliged to pay or to a bank, if the note is payable at a bank [Com. Code § 3501(a)], may be treated as occurring on the next business day after the day of presentment if it is made after an established cutoff hour not earlier than 2 P.M. [Com. Code § 3501(b)(4)]. In addition, Federal Reserve regulations, operating circulars, and clearinghouse rules govern all agreements made under Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code whether or not specifically assented to by all interested parties [Com. Code § 3102(c); see Com. Code § 4103(b); see also 12 C.F.R. §§ 210.1-210.15 (collection of checks and other items by Federal Reserve Banks), 229.1-229.42 (availability of funds and collection of checks)].

[iv] Notes Payable on Demand

When a note is made payable on demand, it is payable at sight or at the will of the holder, and need not specify a time for payment [see Com. Code § 3108(a)].

If the note states simply that it is payable on demand, it is payable within a reasonable time after demand [Lepori v. Hilson (1930) 109 Cal. App. 295, 297, 293 P. 86] . If it is made payable on demand "after date, without grace," it is due in accordance with its terms (that is, on demand at any time after its date) [see Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 474, 478, 202 P. 329] .

The parties may make a demand note subject to parol terms that affect the maturity date. For example, a note payable on demand that was executed with contemporaneous correspondence between the parties indicating that demand would not be made if monthly installments were made became due and payable only after the maker failed to make the payments and the holder demanded payment [see Bank of America Etc. Ass'n v. Schumacher (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 651, 653, 45 P.2d 239] . Evidence of collateral oral agreements bearing on the maturity date of a demand note is excluded only when the fact finder is likely to be misled [Birsner v. Bolles (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 635, 637, 97 Cal. Rptr. 846 ; see Com. Code § 2202].

[v] Notes Payable at Definite Time

A note payable at a definite time is payable (1) on elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance; (2) at a fixed date or dates; or (3) at a time or times readily ascertainable at issue, subject to certain rights of prepayment, acceleration, and extension [Com. Code § 3108(b); see § 55.13 [3][a]]. Furthermore, if a note payable at a fixed date is also payable on demand before that date, it is payable on demand until the fixed date and becomes payable at a definite time on the fixed date [Com. Code § 3108(c)].

[vi] To Whom Payment Is to Be Made

The person to whom a note is initially payable is determined by the intent of the person signing as or on behalf of the issuer, whether authorized or not [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. If the issuer's signature is made by an automated device, the payee is determined by the intent of the person who identified the payee [Com. Code § 3110(b)]. The note is payable to the person intended by the signer even if that person is identified incorrectly in the instrument [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. Furthermore, a person to whom a note is payable may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number [Com. Code § 3110(c); see Com. Code § 3110(c)(1) (instruments payable to accounts identified only by numbers); see also Com. Code § 3110(c)(2) (instruments payable to entities other than natural persons)]. If a note is payable to two or more persons alternatively, it is payable to any of them and may be enforced by any or all of them in possession of the instrument. If a note is payable to two or more persons not alternatively, it is payable to all of them and may be enforced only by all of them. If a note payable to two or more persons is ambiguous on this issue, it is payable to the persons alternatively [Com. Code § 3110(d)].

A note must be payable either to bearer or to order [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)].

[vii] Notes Payable to Bearer

A note is payable to bearer if (1) it states that it is payable to bearer, to the order of bearer, or to the person in possession; (2) does not state a payee; or (3) states that it is payable to cash, to the order of cash, or otherwise indicates that it is not payable to an identified person [Com. Code § 3109(a)].

A note payable to an identified person may become payable to bearer if it is endorsed in blank [Com. Code § 3109(c); see Com. Code § 3205(b) (blank endorsement); see also § 55.24[2][b]].

A note payable to bearer is negotiated by delivery [Com. Code § 3201(b)]. "Delivery" is the voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(15)].

[viii] Notes Payable to Order

A note that is not payable to bearer is payable to order if it is payable (1) to the order of an identified person or (2) to an identified person or order. This type of note is payable to the identified person [Com. Code § 3109(b)].

A note payable to bearer may become payable to order if it is specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3109(c); see Com. Code § 3205(a) (special endorsement); see also § 55.24[2][b]].

A note payable to order is negotiated by endorsement and delivery [Com. Code § 3201(b)]. "Delivery" is the voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(15)]. For discussion of endorsement, see § 55.24[2].

[f] Conditions and Omissions That Do Not Affect Negotiability

[i] Overview

A promise is unconditional and, thus, a note is negotiable [see Com. Code § 3104(a)] unless it (1) states an express condition to payment; (2) states that the promise is governed by another writing; or (3) states that related rights or obligations are stated in another writing [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. However, reference to another writing does not of itself make the promise conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. Furthermore, a note that is conditionally issued or that is issued for a special purpose is binding on its maker or drawer, although failure of the condition or special purpose is a defense [Com. Code § 3105(b)].

[ii] Collateral, Prepayment, and Acceleration

Negotiability is unaffected by a statement of rights or reference to another writing, with respect to collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [see Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)]. For discussion of collateral and a sample collateral note with alternative statements describing collateral, see § 55.205. For detailed discussion of the legal requirements relating to collateralized borrowing, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing, and Ch. 42, Secured Transactions. For further discussion of the effects of acceleration on negotiability, see § 55.201[1][c]. For an acceleration provision if collateral is promised but not given, see § 55.231[2], fourth alternative. For discussion of prepayment and an example of a provision for a prepayment penalty, see § 55.250.

[iii] Payment Limited to Particular Source

Negotiability is unaffected by the condition that payment be limited to a particular source or fund [see Com. Code § 3106(b)].

[iv] Countersignature

Negotiability is unaffected by requiring a countersignature by a person whose specimen signature appears on the note [see Com. Code § 3106(c)]. However, if that person fails to countersign the note, that failure is a defense to the obligation of the issuer, although it does not prevent a transferee of the note from becoming its holder [Com. Code § 3106(c)].

[v] Statement Required by Law Relating to Holder's Rights

Negotiability is unaffected by a note's containing a statement required by applicable statutory or administrative law that the rights of the holder or transferee are subject to the claims and defenses of the original payee [see Com. Code § 3106(d)].

[vi] Confession of Judgment

Confession of judgment is expressly permitted by California law [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1132-1134] except in automobile conditional sales contracts [Civ. Code § 2983.7(b)]. However, a note that authorizes confession of judgment before maturity is not negotiable [see Com. Code § 3106]. For discussion of confession of judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 318, Judgments (Matthew Bender).

[vii] Restrictive Endorsements

An endorsement that limits payment to a particular person or otherwise prohibits further transfer or negotiation does not prevent negotiation of the note [Com. Code § 3206(a)]. An endorsement stating a condition to the right of the endorsee to receive payment does not affect the enforceability of the note by the endorsee and the condition may be disregarded by a person paying the note or taking it for value or collection [Com. Code § 3206(b)]. If an endorsement is endorsed to the endorsee as an agent, trustee, or other fiduciary, that restriction does not affect a subsequent transferee or payor of the note unless the transferee or payor knows that the fiduciary dealt with the note or its proceeds in breach of the fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3206(d); see Com. Code § 3307 (notice of breach of fiduciary duty)].

However, if an endorsement includes the words "pay any bank," is in blank or to a particular bank "for deposit" or "for collection," or otherwise indicates a purpose of having the note collected by a bank for the endorser or for a particular account, transferees (other than intermediary banks) must pay or apply proceeds in accordance with the endorsement or the note will be considered converted [Com. Code § 3206(c); see Com. Code § 4201]. Under the statutory scheme, an endorsement "for deposit only," although restrictive, is also a blank endorsement because it does not specify where or for whose benefit the checks are to be deposited [Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (bank's acceptance for collection of cashiers' checks endorsed "for deposit only," for deposit to third party's trust account, was not violation of restrictive indorsement)].

[viii] Place of Payment

Negotiability is unaffected by whether or not a note specifies a place of payment [see Com. Code § 3111]. Except as otherwise permitted by Division 4 of the Commercial Code, a note is payable at the place of payment stated in the note. If no place is stated, the place of payment is the place of business of the drawer or maker, or if there is no place of business, at the residence of the drawer or maker [Com. Code § 3111].

[ix] Interest

Unless otherwise provided, a note is not payable with interest [Com. Code § 3112(a)]. If interest is payable, it is payable from the date of the note [see Com. Code § 3112(a)] and may be expressed as a fixed or variable rate or amount of money [Com. Code § 3112(b)]. If the amount of interest payable cannot be ascertained from its description, it is payable at the judgment rate in effect at the place of payment and at the time interest first accrues [Com. Code § 3112(b); see Civ. Code § 3287; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010-685.030]. The rate of interest specified in the contract, if any, remains chargeable after a breach until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [Civ. Code § 3289(a)]. For contracts entered into after January 1, 1986 that do not specify a legal rate of interest chargeable after breach, the obligation bears interest at the rate of 10 percent per year [Civ. Code § 3289(b); see Civ. Code §§ 1805.1, 3289.5 (Unruh Act restrictions on retail installment sales)]. Interest accrues at the rate of 10 percent per year on the principal amount of a money judgment remaining unsatisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a); but see Civ. Code § 3287(b) (interest on awarded damages at discretion of court)].

The maximum interest rate that may be charged by a lender in California depends on the type of lender. The California Constitution limits the rate to 10 percent per year but permits the California Legislature to pass statutory exemptions [see Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1]. Exemptions enacted by the Legislature include the following:

- Automobile installment loans [see Civ. Code § 2982(j)].
- Retail installment sales and accounts [see Civ. Code §§ 1805.1, 1803.3, 1810.2].
- Real estate brokers [see Civ. Code § 1916.1; see, e.g., Park Terrace Ltd. v. Teasdale (2002) (100 Cal. App. 4th 802, 805-806, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 (finding exemption for loans arranged by licensed real estate broker applicable))].
- Qualified securities [see Corp. Code § 25116].
- Securities broker-dealers [see Corp. Code § 25211.5].
- Lending institutions acting as fiduciaries [see Fin. Code §§ 1504, 6515(c); see, e.g., Jones v. Wells Fargo Bank (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534-1535, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 835 (loan and forbearance agreement made by national bank fell within Fin. Code § 1504 exemption)]].
- Foreign banks [see Fin. Code § 1716].

- Lending institution holding companies [see Fin. Code §§ 3707, 7675].
- Credit unions [see Fin. Code § 14901].
- Industrial loan companies [see Fin. Code §§ 18191, 18212].
- Pawnbrokers [see Fin. Code §§ 21200, 21200.5, 21201.4].
- Personal property brokers [see Fin. Code §§ 22451, 22451.1].
- Consumer finance licensees [see Fin. Code § 24451].
- Insurers [see Ins. Code § 1100.1].

For additional discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 568, Usury (Matthew Bender).

[x] Dates

The negotiability of a note is unaffected by the fact that it is undated, antedated, or postdated. If a note is undated, the date is the date of issue or, if unissued, the date the note comes into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3113(b)]. If a note is antedated or postdated, the date determines the time of payment if the note is payable at a fixed period after the date [Com. Code § 3113(a)]. A note payable on demand is not payable before the date of the note [Com. Code § 3113(a)].

[xi] Contradictory Terms

Contradictory terms do not render a note nonnegotiable. If a note contains contradictory terms, typewritten terms prevail over printed ones, handwritten terms prevail over both typewritten and printed terms, and words prevail over numbers [see Com. Code § 3114].

[g] Securities Aspects of Negotiable Instruments

The simple notes provided by this form can be used by business clients for short-term lending or borrowing. Although notes that are used in this way are commonly referred to as negotiable instruments, they are financial assets [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(9) ("financial asset" defined)] if they are held in a securities account [see Com. Code § 8103(d)]. Writings that are securities certificates [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(16) ("security certificates" defined)] are governed by Commercial Code Division 8 rather than Division 3, even if they meet the requirements of Division 3 [Com. Code § 8103(d)]. Negotiable investment securities and the application of securities laws to debt securities are covered in Ch. 6J, Issuance of Debt Securities, and Ch. 6K, Nonissuer Transactions in Investment Securities.

[h] Consumer Protection Notices

The notes in this chapter are not intended to be used in consumer transactions, and must be substantially modified to be suitable for such use. This is because of numerous federal and California requirements that govern the contents and format of documents used in consumer transactions. For example, a note given in connection with the purchase of a consumer product [see Civ. Code § 1802.6] must either include or be accompanied by a notice concerning the liability of any cosigner or guarantor [see Civ. Code § 1799.91; see also Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales]. As an additional example, a note executed in connection with a debt arising from a purchase money loan or financed sale in an interstate consumer credit transaction must contain a notice stating that the holder is subject to the claims and defenses that the debtor could have asserted against the seller [see 16 C.F.R. § 433.2; see also Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales].

The Unruh Act, governing retail installment sales [see Civ. Code §§ 1801-1812.20], imposes a number of requirements, including the requirement that a promissory note must be included within the body of the underlying retail installment contract [Civ. Code § 1803.2(a)]. In addition, the federal Truth in Lending Act, governing consumer credit cost disclosure [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601-1667e], requires numerous disclosures in connection with consumer credit transactions. Both of these statutes are covered in Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.201

§ 55.201 Simple Unsecured Promissory Note With Acceleration on Default

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a simple unsecured time note subject to acceleration. It is drafted as an interest-only note; that is, it provides for payment of interest in installments and for payment of principal at maturity. For a note providing for payment of both interest and principal in installments, see § 55.202.

This note may be used when the parties wish to specify a simple obligation to pay a stated sum at a stated time with interest at a stated rate, subject to acceleration under specified conditions.

For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200[1].

For an example of a secured installment note with interest, see § 55.202. The form in § 55.203 is a secured discount note subject to acceleration.

This note should not be used in consumer transactions without substantial modification [see § 55.200[1][h]]. For discussion of requirements applicable to consumer transactions, including retail installment sales (the Unruh Act) [see Civ. Code §§ 1801-1812.20] and consumer credit cost disclosure (the federal Truth in Lending Act) [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601-1667e], see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

[b] Effect of Conditions on Negotiability

For a note to be negotiable, the promise to pay must be unconditional [Com. Code § 3104(a)]. A promise is unconditional unless it (1) states an express condition to payment; (2) states that the promise or order is governed by another writing; or (3) states that related rights or obligations are stated in another writing [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. However, a reference to another writing, including a reference to another writing for rights relating to collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [Com. Code § 3106(b)], does not of itself make the promise conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. In addition, a promise or order is not made conditional because payment is limited to a particular source [Com. Code § 3106(b)]; because the promise or order requires a countersignature by a person whose signature appears on the promise or order as a condition to payment [Com. Code § 3106(c)]; or at the time it is issued or comes into possession by the holder, the promise or order contains a statement required by applicable law that the rights of the holder or transferee are subject to the claims and defenses of the issuer against the original payee [Com. Code § 3106(d)].

[c] Effect of Acceleration Terms on Negotiability

To be negotiable, a note must be payable either on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)]. A note is payable at a definite time even if it is subject to rights of acceleration [Com. Code § 3108(b)(2)]; therefore, the negotiability of the note is unaffected [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(2); see also Com. Code § 1309 (Official Comment)]. However, if a note provides that the payee may accelerate payment "at will," or when the party "deems itself insecure," or words of similar import, the party has power to do so only if that party in good faith believes that the prospect of payment or performance is impaired. The burden of establishing lack of good faith is on the party against which the power has been exercised [Com. Code § 1309].

In addition, to be negotiable, a note may not state that it is subject to or governed by any other agreement [see Com. Code § 3106(a)(2)]. However, if an otherwise unconditional promise simply refers to a separate agreement or specifically refers to a separate agreement for acceleration rights, it is not thereby made conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)].

This form contains an acceleration clause reciting incidents generally viewed as incidents of default as well as grounds for acceleration [see [2], P 2, below]. Default is not defined under the Uniform Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 9601 et seq.], although the ordinary meaning of the word "default," when used with respect to a contractual obligation, is failure of performance, specifically the failure to observe a promise or discharge an obligation (for example, the failure to pay interest and principal on a debt when due) [Bradbury v. Thomas (1933) 135 Cal. App. 435, 443, 27 P.2d 402] .

Note provisions referring to the terms of a separate written agreement that bear on the maturity (acceleration) of the note are illustrated in § 55.230[2]. Other examples of acceleration clauses are set forth in § 55.231[2]. Section 55.202[2] illustrates an acceleration provision for a secured installment note. Section 55.207[2] illustrates an acceleration provision for use if the maker defaults on any of the notes in a series. For a due-on-sale acceleration clause used in real estate transactions and related discussion, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Transactions .

[d] Attorneys' Fees

In any contract action, if the contract provides for attorneys' fees to be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, the party determined to be the party prevailing on the contract [see Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1) ("party prevailing on the contract" defined)], whether or not he or she is the party specified in the contract, will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees. In certain situations, there may be no "party prevailing on the contract" [see Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1), (2); see also Jackson v. Homeowners Association Monte Vista Estates-East (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 773, 779-780, 782, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 363 (parties who agreed on record and in written settlement agreement that trial court would determine prevailing party in action and amount of attorney fee award before dismissal of action could and did waive provisions of Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), which provides there will be no prevailing party when an action is dismissed pursuant to settlement); Sears v. Baccaglio (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1154-1155, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 (reviewing legislative history of Civ. Code § 1717 and finding that party can fail to recover net monetary judgment and still prevail for purposes of collecting fees in action founded on contract)]. A court may deny a contractual claim for attorneys' fees by a defendant who has been voluntarily dismissed from a suit prior to trial [see Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 602, 608, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (examining recovery of attorney fees incurred defending action when plaintiff has voluntarily dismissed action before trial); see also Topanga and Victory Partners, LLP v. Toghia (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 775, 778, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 104 (defendant who was not party to contract but was sued for breach of contract and other causes of action may not recover attorney fees incurred in defending noncontract causes of action when plaintiff has filed voluntary dismissal with prejudice); Silver v. Boatwright Home Inspection, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 443, 446, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475 (holding that defendant was not prevailing party when plaintiffs obtained their litigation objective through settlement with other defendants)].

A provision for attorneys' fees will be construed to apply to the entire contract, unless each party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the contract, and the fact of representation is stated in the contract [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. The attorneys' fees provision in this form [see [2], P 3, below] is specifically applicable to the entire contract.

The attorneys' fees clause in this form provides for an award of attorneys' fees only in a contract action, not in a tort action [see Civ. Code § 1717]. Because the right of the parties to provide for attorneys' fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 is not limited to contract actions [Xuereb v. Marcus & Millichap, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1341, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 154], inadvertently broad wording in an attorneys' fees clause may result in an undesirable award of attorneys' fees in any action "arising under" a contract, whether a tort action or contract action [see Xuereb v. Marcus & Millichap, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1341-1344, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 154]. This form is drafted so as to prevent an award of attorneys' fees in a tort action.

For further discussion and other attorneys' fees provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions.

[e] Waiver of Defense or Counterclaim

Paragraph 4 of this form includes a waiver of any defense or counterclaim in any litigation, which rights are expressly waived except as provided by law. This provision may not be used if the note is drafted in connection with a debt arising from a purchase money loan or financed sale in an interstate consumer credit transaction. That type of note must contain a notice stating that the holder is subject to the claims and defenses that the debtor could have asserted against the seller [see 16 C.F.R. § 433.2; see also Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales].

[f] Notice of Cosigner or Guarantor Liability

A note given in connection with a retail installment contract (commonly, the purchase of a consumer product) [see Civ. Code § 1802.6] must either include or be accompanied by a notice concerning the liability of any cosigner or guarantor [see Civ. Code § 1799.91]. For a form for the required notice, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales.

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.202

§ 55.202 Secured Installment Note With Interest

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a secured installment note with provisions for payment in equal installments of principal and interest. The form provides two alternatives for providing for the payment of interest. The first alternative provides for interest on the unpaid balance, while the second provides for interest to be aggregated and amortized over all installments.

For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200[1]. For discussion of how a separate agreement or acceleration terms can affect negotiability, see § 55.201[1][b], [c].

[b] When Installment Note Is Overdue

If a note's principal is payable in installments and a due date has not been accelerated, the note becomes overdue on default [Com. Code § 3304(b)(1)]. For a discussion of default, see § 55.201[1][c].

[c] Late Charges

This form provides for a late charge [see [2], P 2, below]. Late charge provisions compensate the payee or holder for its administrative expenses and the cost of money wrongfully withheld, and encourage the maker to make timely future payments [Garrett v. Coast & Southern Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 731, 739-740, 108 Cal. Rptr. 845, 511 P.2d 1197]. Because a late charge provision imposes an additional charge on the maker upon default, it is subject to the requirements of Civ. Code § 1671, which prescribes the requirements for a valid liquidated damages provision [see Garrett v. Coast & Southern Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 731, 738, 108 Cal. Rptr. 845, 511 P.2d 1197 ; see Weber, Lipshie & Co. v. Christian (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 645, 656-657, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (partners' liquidated damages provision, that damages to accounting firm for loss of fees from breach of covenant would be measured by doubling firm's time charges for clients lost due to breach for 12 months immediately preceding their loss, was enforceable)].

In general, a liquidated damages clause is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate it can establish that it was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(b); see, e.g., Ridgley v. Topa Thrift and Loan Assn. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 970, 979-981, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378, 953 P.2d 484 (promissory note clause that imposed charge of six months' interest if borrowers prepaid loan principal, and provided that charge would not be imposed six months after execution of note unless borrowers had made late interest payment or otherwise defaulted, held to be unenforceable penalty for late payment)]. However, this rule does not apply if the liquidated damages are sought from either (1) a party to a contract for the retail purchase or rental of personal property or services primarily for that party's personal, family, or household use; or (2) a party to a lease of real property to be used as a dwelling by that party or that party's dependents [Civ. Code § 1671(c)]. In these situations, a liquidated damages provision is void, although the parties may agree in the contract on an amount that will be presumed to be the amount of damages for breach if, from the nature of the case, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damage [Civ. Code § 1671(d)]. In addition, Civ. Code § 1671 is inapplicable if any other statute prescribes a rule or standard for determining the validity of a provision for liquidated damages [Civ. Code § 1671(a)]. Special statutes govern loans on single family owner-occupied dwellings [see Civ. Code § 2954.4], automobile sales finance [see Civ. Code § 2982], credit unions [see Fin. Code § 15001], industrial loan companies [see Fin. Code § 18631], and personal property brokers [see Fin. Code § 22400(a)(5)]. These statutes should be consulted for variations of the late charge provision set forth in this form [see [2], P 2, below].

Late charges on real property loans secured by deeds of trust are limited to either (1) 6 percent of the installment due that is applicable to payment of interest and principal or (2) $5, whichever is greater [see Civ. Code § 2954.4(a)]. A late charge may not be imposed in this type of loan unless the installment is more than 10 days overdue [Civ. Code § 2954.4(b)]. For a late charge provision to use in a note underlying a real estate loan transaction, see Ch. 25A, Security Interests for Real Estate Financing. For a generally applicable liquidated damages provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions.

A late charge expressed simply as a percentage of the overdue amount would entail some risk of being found unreasonable [see, e.g., Poseidon Dev., Inc. v. Woodland Lane Estates, LLC (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1115, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59]. It would be safer to adapt the formula in Civ. Code § 2954.4(a) by specifying a maximum charge or simply to set the charge as a specified amount (which can be reasonably projected from the actual anticipated administrative costs that the charge is intended to cover).

[2] FORM

Secured Installment Note With Interest

_____ [city, state]

$ _____ [amount borrowed] [date]

Installment Note

[First alternative; interest on unpaid balance--short form:]

1. I promise to pay to the order of _____ [name of payee] the sum of $ _____, in the following manner: the first installment of $_____ on _____[date], and installments of $_____ on the _____ day of each successive month until the entire amount is paid, with interest on the unpaid balance at a rate of _____ percent per year, payable with each installment of principal.

[OR]

[Second alternative; interest aggregated and amortized over all installments--long form:]

1. (a) For value received, [I or we], the undersigned [Maker or Makers jointly and severally], promise to pay to the order of _____[name of payee] ("Payee"), at its office at _____[address], at the times specified below, the sum of $_____ (the "Principal"), together with interest at the rate of _____ percent per year (computed on the basis of a 360-day year).

(b) The Principal and the aggregate of the interest on the Principal will be payable in [number] equal successive monthly installments in the aggregate amount of $_____ each. The first installment will be paid on the _____ day of [month, year], and subsequent installments will be paid on the same day of each successive month until all the payments have been made.

[Continue with the following:]

Late Charge

2. Maker agrees that if any installment payment provided for in this Note is [late or in default or unpaid] for at least [e.g., 10] days, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damages resulting to the Payee. Therefore, Maker agrees to pay to the Payee the sum of $_____ on default, as liquidated damages and not as a penalty, to compensate the Payee for the expenses of administering the default. Only one late charge will be collected on any installment, regardless of the period during which it remains in default. [Add if applicable: The aggregate of the late charges collected in connection with this loan, including renewal, will not exceed _____ percent of the loan.]

Acceleration

3. (a) At its option, the Payee of this Note may determine that Maker is in default and may, consequently, accelerate the maturity of all installments, making the unpaid balance of the Note (the total of the unpaid monthly installments and any unpaid fines that have been charged) due immediately without presentment for payment or any notice, if:

(1) Maker fails to pay an installment when due.

(2) Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor of this Note:

(i) Fails, after demand, to furnish financial information or to permit inspection of any books or records.

(ii) Suspends business.

- (iii) Becomes insolvent or offers settlement to any creditors.
- (iv) Files a petition in bankruptcy, either voluntary or involuntary.
- (v) Institutes any proceeding under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws relating to the relief of debtors.
- (vi) Gives notice of any intended bulk sale.
- (vii) Makes an assignment for the benefit of creditors.
- (viii) Mortgages, pledges, assigns, or transfers any accounts receivable or other property, in trust or otherwise, without the written consent of the Payee.
- (ix) Makes any false statement or representation orally or in writing, fails to furnish information, or fails to permit inspection of any books or records on demand of the Payee.
- (x) Fails to pay any obligation when due.
- (xi) _____ [If maker, endorser, surety, or guarantor is an individual:
Dies or if maker, endorser, surety, or guarantor is a corporation: Is dissolved or its capital becomes impaired].

(3) Payee discovers that any misrepresentation was made to Payee on behalf of Maker to obtain credit or an extension of credit.

(4) Any legal action is commenced against Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor, including:

- (i) Entry of judgment.
- (ii) Issuance of a writ of attachment, order of garnishment, order or subpoena in supplementary proceedings, execution, or similar process.

(5) A receiver is appointed for Maker or any endorser, surety or guarantor.

(b) The Payee of this Note, at its option, may accelerate the maturity of all installments to become due immediately if it considers the security underlying this Note to be unsatisfactory or insufficient and the Maker does not, on demand, furnish additional collateral or make payment on account satisfactory to the Payee.

(c) The Payee of this Note, at its option, may accelerate the maturity of all installments to become due immediately if, in the sole opinion of the Payee, the financial responsibility of Maker becomes unsatisfactory.

Disposition of Collateral on Default

4. Any collateral given to the Payee at any time will be deemed security for the payment of this Note [add if applicable: and any other liabilities of the undersigned to the Payee]. In case of default in payment of this Note [add if applicable:; or any other notes of the undersigned, whether as maker, co-maker, or endorser, held by the Payee], or in case the collateral declines in value or otherwise becomes unsatisfactory to the Payee, the Payee is authorized to dispose of all or any part of the collateral security property at public or private sale, without advertisement, or notice to the Maker, which rights are expressly waived. At such a sale, the Payee may purchase any or all of the property free of any claim or right of redemption of the Maker, which rights are expressly waived except as provided by law. Neither the sale of the collateral nor the application of its proceeds will prejudice any other rights of Payee against Maker.

Collection Costs

5. Maker agrees to pay the expenses incurred in any lawful attempt to enforce this Note, including the cost of retaking and keeping any collateral or other security property for this Note specified in any agreements.

Attorneys' Fees

6. Maker agrees that if any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce this Note for nonpayment at maturity, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief that party may be entitled to. This provision is applicable to the entire Note.

Extension of Time for Payment

7. No extension of time for payment of all or any part of the amount owing on this Note will affect the liability of the Maker or any surety, guarantor, or endorser of this Note. The Maker and all sureties, guarantors, endorsers, severally waive presentment for payment, notice of nonpayment, and notice of dishonor of this Note.

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.203

§ 55.203 Secured Discount Note Subject to Acceleration

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a secured discount note with provision for acceleration on specified events of default. A discount note is one in which the amount of interest has been precomputed and deducted from the amount borrowed, and which provides for repayment of the full amount borrowed.

For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200 [1]. For discussion of how a separate agreement or acceleration terms can affect negotiability, see § 55.201[1][b], [c]. Paragraph 2 of this form includes a late charge provision. For discussion of late charges, see § 55.202[1][b].

[b] Notes Made Payable at Bank

If a note is made payable at a bank in the United States, it must be presented at an office or branch of the bank designated in the note [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]. For coverage of the procedures involved in presentment, see § 55.131.

[c] Payees' Right of Setoff

This form includes an optional provision permitting a bank or savings and loan association to exercise a right of setoff against the maker's bank account [see [2], P 6(c), below]. However, any setoffs for a debt must not result in an aggregate balance of less than $1,000 in a customer's account [see Fin. Code §§ 864(b), 6660(b); see also Martin v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 489, 499-500, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 (under Fin. Code § 864, "debt" is interest-bearing obligation or obligation which by its terms is payable in installments, which has not been reduced to judgment, arising from extension of credit to natural person primarily for personal, family, or household purposes; "extension of credit" within meaning of statute occurs when bank grants right to incur debt by issuing credit card, and bank may setoff debts incurred in use of business credit card without compliance with that section)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.345].

SECURED DISCOUNT NOTE SUBJECT TO ACCELERATION

_____ [city, state]

$_____ [amount borrowed] [date]

Installment Note

1. (a) [Add if applicable: For value received,] [I or we], the undersigned [("Maker") or ("Makers")] jointly and severally, promise to pay to the order of _____ [name of payee] ("Payee"), at _____ [address of payee], _____ [city, state], the sum of $ _____ (the "Principal"). The proceeds of this Note will be the Principal less a charge computed on that amount for the period from this date to and including the last of the installment payments at a rate of _____ percent per year (computed on the basis of a 360-day year). [Add if applicable: If this Note is signed by more than one maker, the makers will be jointly and severally liable.]

(b) The Principal will be payable in [number] equal successive monthly installments in the aggregate amount of $ _____ each. The first installment will be paid on the _____ day of [month, year], and subsequent installments will be paid on the same day of each successive month until all the payments have been made.

Late Charge

2. The undersigned agrees that if any installment payment provided for in this Note is [late or in default or unpaid] for at least [e.g., 10] days, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damages resulting to the Payee. Therefore, Maker agrees to pay to Payee the sum of $ _____ on any default, as liquidated damages and not as a penalty, to compensate the Payee for the expenses of administering the default. Only one late charge will be collected on any installment, regardless of the period during which it remains in default. [Add if applicable: The aggregate of the late charges collected in connection with this loan, including renewal, will not exceed _____ percent of the loan.]

Time Extensions

3. Acceptance by Payee of any installment after any default will not operate to extend the time of payment of any amount remaining unpaid, or constitute a waiver of any of the other rights of the Payee under this Note.

Collateral

4. As collateral security for the payment of this Note, Payee will at all times have a lien on and right of offset against [ describe collateral].

Acceleration

5. (a) At its option, Payee may declare a default on this Note and all liabilities of Maker to Payee under this Note will become due immediately without presentment for payment, notice of nonpayment, or notice of dishonor, which rights are expressly waived, if:

(1) Maker fails to make a payment when due.

(2) Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor of this Note:

(i) Fails, after demand, to furnish financial information or to permit inspection of any books or records.

(ii) Suspends business.

(iii) Becomes insolvent or offers settlement to any creditors.

(iv) Files a petition in bankruptcy, either voluntary or involuntary.

(v) Institutes any proceeding under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws relating to the relief of debtors.

(vi) Gives notice of any intended bulk sale.

(vii) Makes an assignment for the benefit of creditors.

(viii) Mortgages, pledges, assigns, or transfers any accounts receivable or other property, in trust or otherwise, without the written consent of the Payee.

(ix) Makes any false statement or representation orally or in writing, fails to furnish information, or fails to permit inspection of any books or records on demand of the Payee.

(x) Fails to pay any obligation when due.

(xi) _____ [*If maker, endorser, surety, or guarantor is an individual:
Dies or if maker, endorser, surety, or guarantor is a corporation: Is dissolved or its capital becomes impaired*].

(3) Payee or holder discovers that any misrepresentation was made to Payee on behalf of Maker to obtain credit or an extension of credit.

(4) Any legal action is commenced against Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor, including:

(i) Entry of judgment.

(ii) Issuance of a writ of attachment, order of garnishment, order or subpoena in supplementary proceedings, execution, or similar process.

(5) A receiver is appointed for Maker, endorser, surety or guarantor.

(b) At its option, Payee may accelerate the maturity of this Note to become due immediately if it considers the security underlying the Note to be unsatisfactory or insufficient and the Maker does not, on demand, furnish additional collateral or make payment on account that is satisfactory to the Payee.

(c) At its option, Payee may accelerate the maturity of the Note to become due immediately if, in the sole opinion of the Payee, the financial responsibility of the Maker becomes unsatisfactory or the obligation evidenced by this Note [add if applicable: or any other obligation of any maker, endorser, or guarantor] is in jeopardy.

Disposition of Collateral

6. (a) On the occurrence of any of the events that give rise to default under Paragraph 5 of this Note [add if applicable:, or that give rise to a claim asserted by Payee against Maker, for any reason whatsoever], Payee will have the right to sell all or part of the collateral described in Paragraph 4 at public or private sale, without advertisement or notice to the Maker, which rights are expressly waived, and Payee retains the right to purchase at the sale any collateral security free from any right of redemption on the part of any of Maker.

(b) In the event of a sale of collateral security, Payee may apply the proceeds, after deduction of all expenses, to the payment of the Principal, whether or not due, in proportion and sequence as Payee may determine in its sole discretion, returning any remaining balance to Maker. Neither the sale of that collateral nor the application of its proceeds will prejudice the rights of Payee against Maker with respect to any amounts that remain unpaid on this Note.

[Optional:]

(c) At its option at any time and without notice, Payee may appropriate and apply to the payment of the amount owing on this Note, in proportion and sequence as Payee in its sole discretion may determine, any deposit balances or sums credited by or due from Payee to the Maker. Maker agrees that Payee may take any of these actions without formal assertion or enforcement of any rights or liens.

[Continue with the following:]

Waiver of Rights by Maker

7. Maker and all sureties, guarantors, and endorsers of this Note severally waive presentment for payment, notice of nonpayment, notice of dishonor, and any notices in connection with the delivery, presentment, acceptance, performance, default, or enforcement of this Note, and consent to any extensions of time, renewals, releases of liens, waivers, or modifications that may be made by Payee to any party to this Note.

Waivers or Modifications by Payee

8. No extension of time for payment of any amount owing on this Note will affect the liability of Maker or any surety, guarantor, or endorser of this Note. No delay by the Payee or holder in exercising any right under this Note will operate as a waiver of that right; nor will any single or partial exercise of any right preclude other or further exercise of the right, or the exercise of any other right under this Note or otherwise as permitted by law. No waiver or modification of the terms of this Note will be valid unless in writing, signed by the Payee of this Note. Any waiver or modification will be valid only to the extent set forth in the writing.

Collection Costs

9. Maker agrees to pay the expenses incurred in any lawful attempt to enforce this Note, including the cost of retaking and keeping any collateral or other security property for this Note specified in any agreements.

Attorneys' Fees

10. Maker agrees that if any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce this Note for nonpayment at maturity, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision is applicable to the entire Note.

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.204

§ 55.204 Corporate Note Providing for Payment of Principal and Interest in Installments With Final Balloon Payment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a short-form note that provides for repayment in installments of both principal and interest on the unpaid balance and a final payment of the remaining balance (a "balloon payment"). It includes a provision for acceleration on default. This form is drafted to be used between a payee and a corporate maker and includes language indicating the authority of corporate officers to execute the note. However, it may also be used by individuals in transactions other than consumer credit sale transactions.

For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200[1]. For discussion of how a separate agreement or acceleration terms can affect negotiability, see § 55.201[1][b], [c]. For a sample secured installment note with interest, see § 55.202[2].

[b] Notice Requirements for Balloon Payment Notes Secured by Certain Real Property Security Instruments

Special notice requirements apply to balloon payment notes secured by real property security instruments that cover one to four residential units if (1) at least one of them is or is to be occupied by the maker when the loan is made, and (2) the loan period exceeds one year [Civ. Code § 2924i(a)]. Before the final payment is due, the payee or holder must send the maker a notice containing the name and address of the person to whom payment is to be made, the date and amount (or a good faith estimate of the amount) of the payment and, if applicable, the maker's right to refinance the final payment [Civ. Code § 2924i(c)]. This notice requirement does not apply to open-end credit transactions as defined by Regulation Z [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 226.1-226.30], transactions by arrangers of credit [see Civ. Code § 2956 (requirement for disclosures by arrangers of credit)], or residential construction loans [Civ. Code § 2924i(b)]. For a form of balloon payment notice, see Ch. 25A, Security Interests for Real Estate Financing .

Other notice requirements apply to balloon payments in retail installment contracts [see Civ. Code § 1807.3(a)]. Because this form is not intended for use in consumer transactions [see § 55.200[1][h]], it does not contain those disclosures. For discussion of the disclosures required in consumer credit transactions, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales .

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.205

§ 55.205 Collateral Note With Alternative Statements Describing Collateral

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a secured note with alternative descriptions of the collateral used to secure the note. This note should be used when the parties wish to include a provision regarding collateral in the note [see [b], below]. For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200[1]. For discussion of how a separate agreement or acceleration terms can affect negotiability, see § 55.201[1][b], [c].

[b] Collateral

Negotiability is unaffected by a statement of rights, or reference to another writing, with respect to collateral. Thus, a negotiable note may provide for collateral to secure the obligation of the note or any other obligation of the maker [see Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)]. Furthermore, a note may permit the holder to sell or otherwise dispose of collateral in the event of a default [see Com. Code § 9610]. Thus, a note may permit the holder to take such action prior to maturity; for example, a note may provide for sale of collateral if the maker defaults by failing to make an installment payment [see Com. Code § 9607(a)].

A note may also include a promise or power to use reasonable care to maintain or protect the collateral [see Com. Code § 9207(a); see also Com. Code § 9610(b)]. Further, a note may include a promise to supply additional collateral on demand when the holder deems itself insecure or after the occurrence of a stated condition [see Com. Code § 9204(a) (after-acquired collateral)]. However, the holder may exercise that power only on the good faith belief that the prospect of payment or performance is impaired [see Com. Code § 1309]. Such terms frequently are accompanied by a provision for acceleration if the collateral is not given [see Com. Code § 1309 (option to accelerate at will)].

Provisions for collateral are advisable if the holder needs to be protected from default by the maker. For discussion of this type of transaction and the legal requirements for dealing with collateralized borrowing, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing, and Ch. 42, Secured Transactions. For further discussion of the effects of acceleration on negotiability, see § 55.201[1][c]. For an acceleration provision if collateral is promised but not given, see § 55.231[2], fourth alternative.

Initial Collateral

2. To secure payment of this Note [add if applicable:; and of any past, present, or future liabilities of Maker to the Payee, regardless of how acquired by the Payee], Maker has _____ [given a secured interest in or given a secured interest in and delivered to Payee] the following property: _____ [describe collateral] ("collateral"), the market value of which is agreed to be $_____ on the date this Note is executed.

Additional Collateral

3. (a) In case of a decline in the market value of all or any part of the collateral, the holder may demand that additional collateral of quality and value satisfactory to the holder be provided and delivered to the holder to secure payment of this Note. Failure on the part of Maker to deliver that additional collateral on demand will cause this Note to become due and payable on demand.

(b) Any deposit or other sums at any time credited by or due from the holder to Maker, and any securities or other property of Maker in the possession of the holder, may at all times be treated as additional collateral for the payment of this Note and any other liabilities of Maker referred to in this Note, and may at any time be applied against the amount due or to become due.

Collection or Protection of Collateral

4. The Payee has no duty with respect to the collection or protection of the collateral held under this Note or of any income from the collateral, or with respect to the preservation of any rights pertaining to that collateral beyond the safe custody of it.

Rights of Payee on Default

5. In case of default in payment of this Note, Payee will have all rights in the collateral given by the California Commercial Code. The waiver of any default, or the remedying of any default in a reasonable manner, will not operate as a waiver of any other default or of the default remedies available to the Payee.

Execution of Documents

6. If any collateral delivered by Maker to Payee is released to Maker before full payment of the Note, Maker agrees to execute any documents required to continue the Payee's security interest in the collateral.

Acceleration

7. Payee may accelerate the due date of this Note and demand immediate payment at any time Payee, in good faith, believes that the prospect of payment is impaired.

Waiver of Certain Rights by Maker

8. Maker and all sureties, guarantors, and endorser of this Note severally waive presentment for payment, notice of nonpayment, notice of dishonor, and any notices in connection with the delivery, presentment, acceptance, performance, default, or enforcement of this Note, and consent to any extensions of time, renewals, releases of liens, waivers, or modifications that may be made by Payee to any party to this Note.

Assent to Extensions, Substitutions, and Releases

9. Each party to this Note, whether as Maker, endorser, surety, or otherwise, assents to any extension or postponement of the time of payment or other indulgence and to any substitution, exchange, or release of collateral permitted by the Payee. In addition, each party agrees that any collateral deposited with Payee in connection with this Note may be held as collateral security for any other direct or indirect liability of Maker to Payee, due or to become due or that may later be contracted.

Collection Costs

10. If this Note is not paid in full when it becomes due, Maker agrees to pay all lawful collection costs.

Attorneys' Fees

11. Maker agrees that if any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce this Note, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Promissory Notes

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.206

§ 55.206 Promissory Note Referring to Agreement Securing Note

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a note to be used when the parties wish to refer to a separate written agreement affecting the note. A separate written agreement referred to in a promissory note is commonly executed at the same time as the note itself, as part of the same transaction.

The separate writing is most often an agreement creating or providing for a security interest such as a mortgage [see Ch. 25A, Security Interests for Real Estate Financing] or security agreement [see Ch. 42, Secured Transactions]. However, it may be any type of contract except one that states the rights and obligations with respect to the note, states that it governs the note, or states that the note is subject to its terms [see Com. Code § 3106(a)]. For a sample note in a series of notes that refers to the other notes in that series, see § 55.207.

For discussion of the requirements for negotiability, conditions and omissions that do not affect negotiability, when and to whom payment is to be made, interest, and required consumer protection notices, see § 55.200[1]. For discussion of how a separate agreement or acceleration terms can affect negotiability, see § 55.201[1][b], [c]. For discussion of the effect of a late charge provision, either in the note or in the separate agreement, see § 55.202[1][c].

[b] Effect on Negotiability of Reference to Separate Agreement

A simple reference to another writing does not make a promise conditional and, therefore, does not affect the negotiability of a note [Com. Code § 3106(a)]. In addition, a note may refer to a separate agreement for rights regarding collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [Com. Code § 3106(b)]. However, as discussed in [a], above, a note is rendered nonnegotiable if (1) it states that it is subject to or governed by a separate written agreement or (2) its rights and obligations are stated in a separate writing [Com. Code § 3106(a)].

[a] Use of Form

This form contains various provisions that set forth ways in which interest or discount provisions can be stated without affecting the negotiability of the note [see Com. Code § 3104(a); see also [b], below]. For discussion of how interest is payable, see [c], below. For a discussion of default, see Section 55.201[1][c]. For a list of acts resulting in default, see Section 55.202[2], Paragraph 3.

[b] Effect of Interest and Discount Provisions on Negotiability

Negotiability is unaffected by whether or not a note calls for the payment of interest or other charges [see Com. Code § 3104(a)], provided that all other requirements for negotiability are met [see Com. Code § 3104(a); see also § 55.200[1][e] (requirements for negotiability)]. Thus, for example, a stated discount of the principal for early payment or an additional interest charge for late payment does not render a note nonnegotiable [see Com. Code § 3104(a)].

[c] How Interest Is Payable

Unless a note provides otherwise, it is not payable with interest [Com. Code § 3112(a)]. However, if a note provides that interest is payable, it is payable from the date of the note [Com. Code § 3112(a)] and may be expressed as a fixed or variable rate or rates or amount of money [Com. Code § 3112(b)]. If the amount of interest payable cannot be ascertained from its description, it is payable at the judgment rate in effect at the place of payment and at the time interest first accrues [Com. Code § 3112(b); see Civ. Code § 3287; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010-685.030]. The rate of interest specified in the contract, if any, remains chargeable after a breach until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [Civ. Code § 3289(a)]. For contracts entered into after January 1, 1986 that do not specify a legal rate of interest chargeable after breach, the obligation bears interest at the rate of 10 percent per year [Civ. Code § 3289(b); see Civ. Code §§ 1805.1, 3289.5(Unruh Act restrictions on retail installment contracts)]. Interest accrues at the rate of 10 percent per year on the principal amount of a money judgment remaining unsatisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a); but see Civ. Code § 3287(b) (interest on awarded damages at discretion of court)]. For further discussion of interest rates, see Section 55.200 [1][f][x].

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.230

§ 55.230 Reference to Separate Written Agreement Bearing on Maturity

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains various provisions that refer to a separate written agreement affecting the note and provide the terms of that separate agreement that, in this sample, relate to acceleration of the maturity of the note. A separate agreement referred to in a promissory note is commonly executed at the same time as the note itself, as part of the same transaction.

The separate writing is most often an agreement creating or providing for a security interest such as a mortgage [see vol. 5A, ch. 25A, Security Interests for Real Estate Financing] or security agreement [see vol. 9, ch. 42, Secured Transactions]. However, it may be any type of contract except one that states the rights and obligations with respect to the note, that states that it governs the note, or that the note is subject to its terms [see Com. Code § 3106(a)].

For additional acceleration provisions for use in notes, see Section 55.231[2].

[b] Effect on Negotiability of Reference to Separate Agreement

A simple reference to another writing does not make a promise conditional and, therefore, does not affect the negotiability of a note [Com. Code § 3106(a)(3)]. In addition, a note may refer to a separate agreement for rights regarding collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [Com. Code § 3106(b)]. However, as discussed in [a], above, a note is rendered nonnegotiable if (1) it states that it is subject to or governed by a separate written agreement or (2) its rights and obligations are stated in a separate writing [Com. Code § 3106(a)].

[2] FORM

Reference to Separate Agreement

[First alternative; reference to security agreement with statement that maturity may be accelerated as provided in the security agreement:]

This Note is given in connection with a security agreement between Maker and Payee, and the maturity of this Note may be accelerated as provided in that security agreement.

[OR]

[Second alternative; reference to security agreement and description of effect of its terms:]

This Note is secured by a security agreement between Maker and Payee dated _____, and the Payee is entitled to the benefits of the collateral security described in that security agreement. Under the conditions stated in the security agreement, the entire principal of this Note will become payable before the maturity date stated in this Note at the option of the Payee.

[OR]

[Third alternative; reference to other terms, statement of their effect, quotation of other terms:]

On Maker's failure to pay any payment when due or to perform any obligation contained in this Note or in the _____ [specify separate agreement, e.g., security agreement that secures this Note], or if any statement made by Maker in any document related to this transaction is false or misleading, then Maker will be in default under this Note and all principal and accrued interest will, at Payee's option and without notice, become due and payable immediately. Reference is made to the [specify separate agreement] for rights relating to acceleration of the indebtedness evidenced by this Note, including [specify pertinent clause], which provides as follows: "[quote clause verbatim]." [Add if applicable: Notwithstanding any provision in this Note or the _____ (specify separate agreement) relating to Payee's right to accelerate payment, Payee will not exercise its right to declare all sums due, if _____ (specify terms).]

PART IV. FORMS

B. Individual Provisions for Promissory Notes

2. Provisions for Acceleration by Payee or Holder

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.231

§ 55.231 Acceleration Clause in Note Payable at Definite Time

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains a number of alternative acceleration clauses for use in promissory notes payable at a definite time. The appropriate clause may be substituted for any existing acceleration clause in a promissory note or added to a note that does not contain an acceleration clause.

[b] Effect of Acceleration Terms on Negotiability

To be negotiable, a note must be payable either on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)]. A note is payable at a definite time even if it is subject to rights of acceleration [Com. Code § 3108(b)(2)]; therefore, the negotiability of the note is unaffected by inclusion of an acceleration clause [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(2); see also Com. Code § 1309 (Official Comment)]. However, if a note provides that the payee or holder may accelerate payment "at will," or when the party "deems itself insecure," or words of similar import, the party has power to do so only if that party in good faith believes that the prospect of payment or performance is impaired. The burden of establishing lack of good faith is on the party against which the power has been exercised [Com. Code § 1309].

In addition, to be negotiable, a note may not state that it is subject to or governed by any other agreement [see Com. Code § 3106(a)]. However, if an otherwise unconditional promise simply refers to a separate agreement or specifically refers to a separate agreement for acceleration rights, it is not conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)]. For detailed discussion of the requirements for negotiability, see § 55.200[1][e].

[c] Effect of Acceleration on Purchaser's Status as Holder in Due Course

A holder in due course is a holder who, among other things, takes an instrument without notice that there is any defense or claim against it [see Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2), 3306; see also Com. Code § 3305 (defenses)]. Thus, notice that an instrument (in this case, a note) is overdue prevents a purchaser from taking it as a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)].

A person has "notice" of a fact when that person has actual knowledge of it, has received notice or notification of it, or has reason to know that it exists based on all the facts and circumstances known at the time in question [Com. Code § 1202(a)]. The filing or recording of a document does not of itself constitute notice of a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument to one who would otherwise be a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3302(b)]. To be effective, notice must be received at a time and in a manner that will afford a reasonable opportunity to act on it [Com. Code § 3302(f)].

A note becomes overdue on the day after the accelerated due date, if a due date with respect to principal has been accelerated [see Com. Code § 3304(b)(3)]. Thus, there is notice that an instrument is overdue if the purchaser has received notification, knows, or has reason to know that acceleration has been made and the note remains unpaid [see Com. Code § 3304(b); see also Com. Code § 1202(a) (notice)].

[d] Payment Due on Acceleration

Unless a note provides a different time for payment on acceleration, payment is overdue on the day after the accelerated due date [Com. Code § 3304(b)(3)].

[2] FORM

Acceleration Clause in Note Payable at Definite Time

Acceleration

[First alternative; unqualified option on part of payee to accelerate at will:]

Payee has the unqualified option to accelerate the due date of this Note at will.

[OR]

[Second alternative; payee's right to accelerate when it deems itself insecure:]

Whenever Payee deems its position as the obligee under this Note to be insecure, it may immediately demand payment of the Note.

[OR]

[Third alternative; acceleration when payee deems prospect of payment to be impaired:]

Payee may accelerate the due date of this Note and demand immediate payment whenever Payee believes in good faith that the prospect of payment is impaired.

[OR]

[Fourth alternative; acceleration on default if elected by payee:]

Payee may accelerate the maturity of this Note to become due immediately, at its option, if it considers the security underlying the Note to be unsatisfactory or insufficient and the Maker does not, on demand, furnish additional collateral or make payment on account that is satisfactory to the Payee.

[OR]

[Fifth alternative; acceleration of all installments on failure to pay single installment:]

On default, Maker must immediately pay the entire amount remaining unpaid under this Note to Payee, if payee so elects.

[OR]

[Sixth alternative; acceleration of all installments on failure to pay single installment:]

All installments will become due and payable, at the option of the payee, if any installment of principal or interest is not paid when due.

[OR]

[Seventh alternative; acceleration of all notes in series of notes on default in payment of any note in series, with waiver of notice:]

On default in the payment of any note in this series, the remaining notes, at the option of the Payee, will become due and payable immediately without notice.

[OR]

[Eighth alternative; acceleration on occurrence of specified events:]

This Note and all other obligations, direct or contingent, of any Maker or endorser of this Note to Payee will become due and payable immediately, without presentment or notice, if:

(1) Maker fails to make the required payment when due.

(2) Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor of this Note:

(a) Fails, after demand, to furnish financial information or to permit inspection of any books or records.

 - (i) Makes any false statement or representation orally or in writing, fails to furnish information, or fails to permit inspection of any books or records on demand of the Payee.
 - (j) Fails to pay any obligation when due.
 - (k) _____ [If maker, endorser, surety or guarantor is an individual: Dies or if Maker, endorser, surety or guarantor is a corporation: Is dissolved or its capital becomes impaired].
- (3) Payee discovers that any misrepresentation was made to Payee on behalf of Maker to obtain credit or an extension of credit.
- (4) Any legal action is commenced against Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor, including:
- (a) Entry of judgment.
 - (b) Issuance of a writ of attachment, order of garnishment, order or subpoena in supplementary proceedings, execution, or similar process.
- (5) A receiver is appointed for Maker or any endorser, surety, or guarantor.

3. Late Charge Provisions

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.240

§ 55.240 Late Charge Provision

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a note provision that imposes a charge on the maker if payment is made after the due date specified elsewhere in the note. Late charge provisions compensate the payee for its administrative expenses and the cost of money wrongfully withheld, and encourage the maker to make timely future payments [Garrett v. Coast & Southern Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 731, 739-740, 108 Cal. Rptr. 845, 511 P.2d 1197] . The provision in this form is designed to accomplish those purposes.

A late charge expressed simply as a percentage of the overdue amount would entail some risk of being found unreasonable [see, e.g., Poseidon Dev., Inc. v. Woodland Lane Estates, LLC (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1115, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59] . It would be safer to adapt the formula in Civ. Code § 2954.4(a) [see [b][ii], below] by specifying a maximum charge or simply to set the charge as a specified amount (which can be reasonably projected from the actual anticipated administrative costs that the charge is intended to cover).

[b] Validity of Late Charges

[i] Requirement of Reasonableness

Liquidated damages provisions in contracts other than certain purchase and lease agreements [see Civ. Code § 1671(c), (d)] and contracts subject to other statutes that prescribe the rules for liquidated damages [see Civ. Code § 1671(a); see also § 55.202[1][c]] are valid unless the party seeking to invalidate the provision establishes that it was unreasonable under the circumstances existing when the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(b)]; see Ridgley v. Topa Thrift and Loan Assn. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 970, 979-981, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378, 953 P.2d 484 (promissory note clause that imposed charge of six months' interest if borrowers prepaid loan principal, and provided that charge would not be imposed six months after execution of note unless borrowers had made late interest payment or otherwise defaulted, held to be unenforceable penalty for late payment); Weber, Lipshie & Co. v. Christian (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 645, 656-657, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (partners' liquidated damages provision, that damages to accounting firm for loss of fees from breach of covenant would be measured by doubling firm's time charges for clients lost due to breach for 12 months immediately preceding their loss, was enforceable)].

[ii] Real Property Secured Transactions

Late charges on real property loans secured by deeds of trust on single-family owner-occupied dwellings are limited to either (1) 6 percent of the installment due that is applicable to payment of interest and principal, or (2) $5, whichever is greater [see Civ. Code § 2954.4(a)]. A late charge may not be imposed on a loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust unless the installment is more than 10 days overdue [see Civ. Code § 2954.4(b)]. For a late charge provision to use in a note underlying a real estate loan transaction, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing. For a generally applicable liquidated damages provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions.

[2] FORM

Late Charge Provision

Late Charge

If any monthly installment or any part of any monthly installment is not paid when due, [the undersigned or Maker] will pay a sum equal to _____ percent of the monthly installment, or the sum of $_____ [specify reasonable amount], whichever is greater, as damages for the time the money is withheld, plus administrative costs reasonably related to collecting and accounting for that installment. [The undersigned or Maker] understands that actual damages will be extremely difficult and impracticable to ascertain if any monthly installment or any part of any monthly installment is not paid when due. [Add if applicable: The aggregate of the late charges collected in connection with this loan, including renewal, may not exceed _____ percent of the loan.]

4. Provisions for Prepayment by Maker

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.250

§ 55.250 Provision for Prepayment Penalty

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for a prepayment penalty. If the provision is used, the payee will be entitled to additional compensation if the maker pays the loan in advance.

This form should be used in a note only when the note limits payments to a specified amount. It should not be used if the note permits the maker to pay the specified installment amount "or more." In the absence of an "or more" provision, the payee or holder is not required to accept early payment [see Record Etc. Co. v. Pageman Hold. Corp. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 227, 232, 266 P.2d 1 (when money is to be paid at specified time, creditor is not required to accept it before that time)].

[b] Right to Prepay

In general, unless the parties agree to permit prepayment [see § 55.251 (form)] or prepayment is provided for by statute [see Civ. Code § 1490], there is no right to prepay a loan [Williams v. Fassler (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 7, 10, 167 Cal. Rptr. 545]. In the absence of any applicable statutory provisions, the parties to a note are free to impose prepayment penalties that are reasonable at the time the instrument is executed [Williams v. Fassler (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 7, 13, 167 Cal. Rptr. 545; see Civ. Code § 1671(b); see also Ridgley v. Topa Thrift and Loan Assn. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 970, 979-981, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378, 953 P.2d 484 (promissory note clause that imposed charge of six months' interest if borrowers prepaid loan principal, and provided that charge would not be imposed six months after execution of note unless borrowers had made late interest payment or otherwise defaulted, held to be unenforceable penalty for late payment)].

Statutes allow for prepayment penalties on real estate loans [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10242.6; Civ. Code §§ 1916.5(a)(5), 2954.9; 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3]. For more detailed discussion of prepayment rights and penalties, see Ch.

§ 55.251 Provision Permitting Prepayment by Maker

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision permitting the maker to prepay the loan underlying the maker's note. The effect of this provision is to modify any due date specified in the note and, thus, to define the time when the maker can be discharged from liability on the note. For discussion of the right to prepay a note, see Section 55.250[1][b]. For a provision permitting a time extension, see Section 55.260. For a provision for a prepayment penalty, see Section 55.250.

[b] Discharge From Liability

The obligation of a party to a note is discharged to the extent of that party's payment to the payee or holder [see Com. Code § 3602(a)]. If tender of payment is made to a person entitled to enforcement and the tender is refused, the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse is discharged to the extent of the amount of the tender [Com. Code § 3603(b)]. The tender of payment of the amount due on an instrument to a person entitled to enforcement discharges the party tendering payment from all subsequent liability for interest [Com. Code § 3603(c)]. For further discussion of payment and tender of payment, see Section 55.45[1]through [3].

Maker has the right at any time to pay all installments due on this Note. If all installments are prepaid, Maker will be entitled to a refund of the proportionate amount of interest deducted in discounting this Note.

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.260

§ 55.260 Provision for Extension of Note Payable at Definite Time

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for payment of a note at a definite time subject to extension of the time for payment. A note is payable at a definite time and is, therefore, negotiable [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)] even if it is subject to extension [Com. Code § 3108(b); see [b], below].

[b] Time Extension

A note is payable at a definite time if it is payable at a definite time subject to extension (1) at the option of the payee or holder; (2) to a further definite time at the option of the maker; or (3) automatically on or after a specified act or event [Com. Code § 3108(b)(4)].

A payee may not extend an instrument over the objection of a maker or acceptor or other party who tenders payment when due [see Com. Code § 3603(b) (tender of payment)].

[2] FORM

Provision for Extension of Note Payable at Definite Time

Time Extension

[First alternative; indefinite extension at payee's option:]

The due date of this note may be extended for any period of time at the option of the Payee. If an extension is granted, it must be noted on the reverse side of this Note with the new due date clearly indicated.

[OR]

[Second alternative; extension to specified date at maker's option:]

The date on which this Note is payable may be extended until _____, at the option of the Maker [add if applicable: by giving written notice to the Payee at least _____ (e.g., five) days before the current due date].

[Third alternative; automatic time extension to specified date on occurrence of specified act or event:]

The date on which this Note is payable will be extended until _____, automatically if [specify act or event].

6. Provisions for Limiting Source or Type of Payment

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.270

§ 55.270 Provision Limiting Source of Payment to Particular Fund or Source

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for use in a note when payment is to be limited to a particular fund or source. This situation commonly arises when the maker is a partnership, unincorporated association, trust, or estate, and payment is to be limited to the maker's assets. However, the fifth and sixth alternatives in the form [see [2], below] are payment-limiting provisions for use if the maker is an entity other than one of those mentioned above or a natural person.

[b] Effect of Statement on Negotiability

To be negotiable, a note must be unconditional [see Com. Code § 3104(a)]. A promise contained in a note that is otherwise unconditional is not made conditional because payment is limited to a particular fund or source [Com. Code § 3106(b)].

6. Provisions for Limiting Source or Type of Payment

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.271

§ 55.271 Provision for Payment in Foreign Currency

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for payment in a foreign currency. It includes an optional provision specifying that the medium of payment is the foreign currency specified. Both of these provisions should be used if the maker intends the payee to receive the foreign currency specified. If the optional provision specifying that the foreign currency is the medium of payment is not included, the order may be satisfied by payment of the equivalent amount in dollars [see Com. Code § 3107].

[b] Effect of Provision on Negotiability

To be negotiable, a note or other negotiable instrument must be payable in a fixed amount of money [Com. Code § 3104(a)]. "Money" is a medium of exchange currently authorized by a government. The term includes a monetary unit of account established by an intergovernmental organization or by agreement between countries [Com. Code § 1201(b)(24)]. Thus, an instrument expressing the amount to be paid in pounds sterling, francs, lire, or other recognized currency of a foreign government is negotiable even though payable in the United States [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(24); see also Com. Code § 3107]. However, unless the instrument provides otherwise, an instrument that states the amount payable in foreign money may be paid in the foreign money or in the equivalent amount in dollars calculated by using the current bank-offered spot rate for the purchase of dollars at the place of payment on the day on which the instrument is paid [Com. Code § 3107].

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.280

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for use in a promissory note or other negotiable instrument payable to order rather than to bearer when payment is to be made to alternative payees [see Com. Code § 3110(d); see also Com. Code § 1201(b)(5) ("bearer" defined)]. For a provision for payment to joint payees, see § 55.281.

[b] Negotiability of Instrument Payable to Two or More Persons

To be negotiable, an instrument must be payable either to order or to bearer [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)]. An instrument not payable to bearer is payable to order if it is payable to the order of an identified person or to an identified person or order [Com. Code § 3109(b); see Com. Code § 3109(a) (payable to bearer)]. An instrument payable to bearer may become payable to order if it is specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3109(c); see Com. Code § 3205(a) (special endorsement)]. A negotiable instrument may be made payable to one or more persons jointly or in the alternative, but not in succession [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6)].

[c] Rights of Alternative Payees

If an instrument is payable to two or more persons in the alternative, it is payable to any of them and may be negotiated, discharged, or enforced by any or all payees in possession of the instrument. If an instrument is payable to two or more persons other than in the alternative, it is payable to all of them, and may be negotiated, discharged, or enforced only by all of them. If an instrument payable to two or more persons is ambiguous as to whether it is payable to the persons alternatively, the instrument is payable to the persons alternatively [Com. Code § 3110(d)]. An instrument payable to order is negotiated by transfer of possession of the instrument and its endorsement by the holder [see Com. Code § 3201(b)].

[b] Rights of Joint Payees

If an instrument is payable to two or more persons but is not made payable in the alternative, it is payable to all of them and may be negotiated, discharged, or enforced only by all of them [Com. Code § 3110(d)]. However, if an instrument that is payable to several persons is negotiated by one of them, the obligation is extinguished [see Civ. Code 1475]. Furthermore, if an instrument payable to two or more persons is ambiguous as to whether it is payable to the persons alternatively, the instrument is payable to the persons alternatively [*Com. § 55.282 Provision for Payment to Representative

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains a number of alternative provisions for use if a note or other negotiable instrument is to be payable to (1) a trust, an estate, or a representative of either; (2) an agent or representative of a named or identified person; (3) a fund or organization that is not a legal entity; or (4) an office or officer [see [b], below]. Although a negotiable instrument may be made payable to an entity itself, the following provisions designate (by name and description) the individual payee to whom an instrument made payable to an entity is actually paid.

[b] Negotiable Instruments Payable to Entity or Representative

[i] Trust, Estate, or Representative of Trust or Estate

An instrument made payable to a trust, an estate, or a person described as the representative of a trust or an estate is payable to the trustee, the representative, or a successor of either, whether or not the beneficiary or estate is also named [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(A)].

[ii] Agent or Representative

An instrument made payable to a person described as the agent or representative of a named or identified person is payable to the represented person, the representative, or a successor of the representative [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(B)].

[iii] Fund or Organization That Is Not Legal Entity

An instrument made payable to a fund or organization that is not a legal entity is payable to the representative of the members of that fund or organization [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(C)].

[iv] Office or Person Holding Office

An instrument made payable to an office or to a person described as holding an office is payable to the named person, the incumbent of the office, or a successor of the incumbent [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(D)].

[c] Negotiable Instrument Payable to Party Intended by Signer

The person to whom an instrument is initially payable is determined by the intent of the person signing as or on behalf of the issuer, whether authorized or not [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. The instrument is payable to the person intended by the signer even if that person is identified incorrectly in the instrument [Com. Code § 3110(a)]. Furthermore, a person to whom an instrument is payable may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number [Com. Code § 3110(c); see Com. Code § 3110(c)(1), (2) (instruments payable to account numbers and various entities); see also [b], above].

8. Provisions Governing Liability for Payment

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.290

§ 55.290 Provision for Liability of Multiple Makers

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains alternative provisions for specifying the liability of multiple makers. An obligation imposed on several persons, or a right created in favor of several persons, is presumed to be joint, not several [Civ. Code § 1431]. However, if the parties receive some benefit from the consideration, the promise is presumed to be joint and several [see Civ. Code §§ 1659, 1660; see also [b], below]. The three alternatives in this form provide for joint and several liability, joint liability, or several liability.

[b] Liability of Multiple Makers

An obligation imposed on several persons may be joint, several, or joint and several [Civ. Code § 1430]. In the context of a note or other negotiable instrument, unless an instrument specifies otherwise, two or more persons who have the same liability on an instrument as makers, drawers, acceptors, endorsers, or anomalous endorsers are jointly and severally liable in the capacity in which they sign [Com. Code § 3116(e)], even if the body of the instrument contains such words as "I promise to pay" [see Civ. Code § 1660 (promise made in singular but executed by several persons presumed joint and several)].

[c] "Joint," "Several," and "Joint and Several" Defined

If an obligation is "joint," each of the joint obligors is bound to render the same performance to the obligee [Chun v. Chun (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 235 Cal. Rptr. 553 ; see Restatement of Contracts, § 17]. If the obligation is "several," each obligor is responsible only for his or her own individual promise, and not for the promises of others [Douglas v. Bergere (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 267, 271, 210 P.2d 727] . A "joint and several" obligation can be treated as either joint or several [see Aitken v. Stewart (1933) 129 Cal. App. 38, 48, 18 P.2d 988] .

[d] Right of Contribution

Since a "joint and several" obligation can be treated as either joint or several [see [c], above], if a note fails to specify that the parties are only severally liable, a party who satisfies more than his or her share of a claim against two or more obligated parties may require a proportionate contribution from all other obligated parties [Civ. Code § 1432]. On the other hand, if a note specifies several liability only, each comaker is liable only to the extent of his or her portion of the debt [see Civ. Code § 1432].

Furthermore, unless the parties agree otherwise, or unless one is an accommodation party, a party having joint and several liability who pays the instrument is entitled to receive contribution from any party having the same joint and several liability, in accordance with applicable law. Discharge of one party having joint and several liability by a person entitled to enforce the instrument does not affect the right of a party with joint and several liability to receive contribution from the discharged party [Com. Code § 3116(b)].

[2] FORMProvision for Liability of Multiple Makers

Liability of Makers

[First alternative; joint and several liability:]

The undersigned shall all be deemed makers, and shall be jointly and severally liable as makers.

[OR]

[Second alternative; joint liability only:]

[If more than one person executes this instrument as maker, those persons or The undersigned makers] shall be jointly liable on this instrument and not severally liable.

[OR]

[Third alternative; several liability only:]

The undersigned shall all be deemed makers; however, each shall only be severally liable, and not jointly liable, as makers.

9. Provisions Related to Collateral

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.300

§ 55.300 Description or Designation of Collateral

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains alternate provisions that may be used to describe or designate collateral. Provisions for collateral are advisable if the payee needs to be protected from default by the maker. For discussion of this type of transaction and the legal requirements for dealing with collateralized borrowing, see Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing, and Ch. 42, Secured Transactions.

[b] Effect of Collateral Provisions on Negotiability

The negotiability of an instrument is not affected by a statement that collateral has been given to secure the borrower's obligation on the instrument or any other obligation of the borrower [see Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)]. Negotiability is also unaffected by a further statement that in the event of default on any obligation, the holder may sell or otherwise dispose of the collateral [see Com. Code § 3106(a), (b)].

[c] Effect of Provisions Requiring Additional Collateral

The third and fourth alternatives in this form require the maker to provide additional collateral when demanded by the holder of the note if the original collateral declines in value or becomes unsatisfactory to the holder. A note may include a promise to supply additional collateral on demand when the holder deems itself insecure or after the occurrence of a stated condition [see Com. Code § 9204(a) (after-acquired collateral)]. However, the holder may exercise that power only on the good faith belief that the prospect of payment or performance is impaired [see Com. Code § 1309]. Such terms are frequently accompanied by a provision for acceleration if the collateral is not given [Com. Code § 1309 (option to accelerate at will)]. For a form for this type of acceleration provision, see § 55.231[2], fourth alternative. For further discussion of collateral and for a sample collateral note with alternative statements describing collateral, see § 55.205.

[2] FORMDescription or Designation of Collateral*Collateral

[First alternative; description of collateral given as a security interest to payee to secure current and future obligations:]

To secure payment of this Note, and of any other current or future liabilities of Maker to the Payee of this Note, regardless of how acquired by the Payee, Maker has given a security interest in [add if applicable: and delivered to Payee] the following property: _____ [describe property].

[OR]

[Second alternative; general designation of collateral, valued in excess of amount of note, given to secure current obligation:]

To secure payment of this Note, Maker has given a security interest in [add if applicable: and delivered to Payee] certain property currently of a value in excess of the amount of this Note.

[OR]

[Third alternative; securities given as collateral, with agreement to provide additional securities if those given as collateral decline in value:]

To secure payment of this Note, Maker has given a security interest in [add if applicable: and delivered to Payee] certain securities. Maker agrees to provide to the Payee, on demand, additional securities that meet the Payee's satisfaction, if the market value of any of the securities given as collateral declines, if any change occurs in the marketability of those securities, or if the securities are deemed unsatisfactory to the Payee.

[OR]

[Fourth alternative; designation of collateral given to secure note, with right of maker to demand additional collateral if designated collateral declines in value:]

To secure payment of this Note, Maker has given a security interest in [add if applicable: and delivered to Payee] certain property. If the market value of any of this property declines in value, the Payee may demand that Maker provide to the Payee a security interest in [add if applicable: and deliver to Payee] additional property of quality and value satisfactory to the Payee. The failure of Maker to provide additional property to the Payee will cause this Note to become due and payable on demand.

10. Waiver of Presentment and Notice of Dishonor

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.310

§ 55.310 Provision for Waiver of Presentment and Notice of Dishonor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a waiver of presentment and notice of dishonor. Because both presentment and notice of dishonor are necessary to enforce the obligations of the maker or endorser [see Com. Code §§ 3502 (dishonor), 3503 (notice of dishonor)], this type of waiver is commonly used in notes or other negotiable instruments. This form is drafted to use in a promissory note; however, it may be used by an endorser to a note, draft, or check.

[b] Presentment

[i] Overview

"Presentment" is a demand for acceptance of a draft made to the drawee, a demand for payment of an instrument made to the drawee or other party obliged to pay, or a demand for payment of a note or accepted draft payable at a bank made to the bank [Com. Code § 3501(a)]. "Acceptance" is the drawee's signed promise to honor a draft or check as presented [Com. Code § 3409(a)]. For further discussion of acceptance, see § 55.42.

Unless excused or waived [see Com. Code §§ 3502(e), 3504(a); see also [ii], below], presentment for acceptance is necessary to enforce the obligations of the drawer and endorsers of an instrument, because the instrument must be duly presented before it can be dishonored and the drawer and endorsers must have notice of the dishonor, unless the notice is excused, before their obligations are enforceable [see Com. Code §§ 3502 (dishonor), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3504(b) (excuse of notice of dishonor); see also [c], below]. If an instrument states that it is "payable through" or "payable at" a bank identified in the instrument, the instrument may be presented for payment only by or through the bank; that bank is designated as a collecting bank and the statement does not by itself authorize the bank to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 4106].

[ii] Waiver or Excuse

Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused when the drawer or endorser whose obligation is being enforced has waived presentment or otherwise has neither reason nor right to require that the instrument be paid or accepted [Com. Code § 3504(a)]. Waiver of presentment is also a waiver of notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3504(b)].

Presentment is also excused if any of the following conditions exist [Com. Code § 3504(a)]:

- The person entitled to present the instrument cannot with reasonable diligence make presentment;
- The maker has repudiated an obligation to pay the instrument, or is dead or in insolvency proceedings;
- The terms of the instrument provide that presentation is not necessary to enforce the obligation of the maker or endorser;
- The drawer instructed the drawee not to pay or accept the instrument; or
- The drawee was not obliged to the drawer to pay the instrument.

[c] Dishonor

"Dishonor" occurs when presentment is duly made but acceptance or payment is refused or cannot be obtained within the time allowed [see Com. Code § 3502; see also §§ 55.131, 55.132]. Dishonor also occurs when presentment is excused and the instrument is not duly accepted or paid [Com. Code § 3502(e); see Com. Code § 3504 (waiver or excuse of presentment); see also [b][ii], above]. The return of an instrument for lack of proper endorsement is not dishonor; nor is refusal of payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule [Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)].

Subject to any necessary notice of dishonor [see [d], below], the holder has a right to enforce the obligations of the drawers and endorsers after an instrument is dishonored [see Com. Code § 3503(a)]. The rules governing dishonor of instruments are discussed in § 55.43[2]-[5].

[d] Notice of Dishonor[i] Overview

Notice of dishonor is necessary to enforce the obligation of an endorser [Com. Code § 3503(a)]. Failure to give notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the endorser [Com. Code § 3415(c); see Com. Code § 3503]. Notice of dishonor is also necessary to enforce the obligation of a drawer to pay a dishonored draft that was accepted by an acceptor other than a bank; failure to give this notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the drawer [Com. Code §§ 3414(d), 3415(c), 3503(a)]. Notice of dishonor may be excused under certain circumstances, as may delay in giving the notice [see Com. Code § 3504(b), (c); see also [ii], below]. For a form for a notice of dishonor, see § 55.340.

[ii] Waiver or Excuse of Notice or Delay in Giving Notice

Notice of dishonor is excused if the party whose obligation is being enforced waives notice [Com. Code § 3504(b)(2)]. A waiver of presentment is also a waiver of notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3504(b)(2)]. Notice of dishonor is also excused if, by the terms of the instrument, notice is not necessary to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3504(b)(1)].

Delay in giving notice of dishonor is excused if the delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the person giving notice and that person exercised reasonable diligence after the cause of delay ceased to operate [Com. Code § 3504(c)].

[b] Effect of Ratification

Unless ratified (or as otherwise permitted by Divisions 3 and 4 of the Commercial Code), an unauthorized signature is ineffective except as the signature of the unauthorized signer in favor of a person who in good faith pays for the instrument or takes it for value [Com. Code § 3403(a)].

Although an unauthorized signature may be ratified for all purposes related to a note or other negotiable instrument, ratification does not affect the civil or criminal liability of the person who made the unauthorized signature [Com. Code § 3403(c)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

C. Liability of Parties

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.321

§ 55.321 Guarantee of Payment and Guarantee of Collection

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains provisions for the guarantee of payment and guarantee of collection of a note. The first and second alternatives are formal guarantees of payment made by an accommodation party; the third and fourth alternatives are guarantees of collection [see Com. Code § 3419(a)-(c), (e) (guarantee of payment), (d) (guarantee of collection)]. For discussion of the differences between an accommodation party and a guarantor of collection, see [b], below.

For general coverage of suretyship law [see Civ. Code § 2787 et seq.] and procedure, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity. For a guide to the procedures applicable to accommodation and guarantees of collection of negotiable instruments, see § 55.121.

[b] Accommodation Party or Guarantor

An "accommodation party" is one who signs a note or other negotiable instrument, incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(a); see Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 (determination of status as accommodation party or accommodated party); see also § 55.30[4]]. The accommodation party is obliged to pay in the capacity, such as maker, drawer, acceptor, or endorser, in which he or she has signed, even though the taker knows of the accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(b), (c)]. A person signing an instrument is presumed to be an accommodation party if the signature is an anomalous endorsement or is accompanied by words indicating that the signer is acting as a surety or guarantor with respect to the obligation of another party to the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(c); see § 55.30[4][a]].

If the signature of a party to an instrument is accompanied by words unambiguously indicating that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the obligation of another party, the signer is a "guarantor of collection," not an accommodation party. The signer will be obliged to pay a person entitled to enforce the instrument only if execution of judgment against the other party is returned unsatisfied, the other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding, the other party cannot be served with process, or it is otherwise apparent payment cannot be obtained from the other party [Com. Code § 3419(d); see § 55.30[4][b]].

[c] Enforcement of Accommodation

The obligation of an accommodation party may be enforced notwithstanding any statute of frauds, and whether or not the accommodation party receives consideration for the accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(b)]. In addition, except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 3605, the obligation of an accommodation party to pay the note is not affected by the fact that the person enforcing the obligation had notice when the note was taken that the accommodation party signed the note for accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(c)].

Special rules govern whether surety obligations must be in writing [see Civ. Code §§ 2793, 2794].

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.322

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a discharge from liability by the payee or holder of a note or other negotiable instrument of a party who is obliged to pay. The form includes an optional reservation of rights against other parties that should be used by a payee or holder if there are other parties who may be held liable [see Com. Code § 3605(b), (i)]. The language contained in this form should be placed directly on the instrument itself, because no discharge of any party is effective against a subsequent holder in due course without notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b); see Com. Code § 1202(a) ("notice" defined)].

[b] Discharge From Liability

A payee or holder may release one party while expressly reserving his or her rights against other parties [see Com. Code § 3605(b), (i)]. Furthermore, no discharge is effective against a subsequent holder in due course unless he or she had notice of the discharge when he or she took the instrument [Com. Code § 3601(b); see Com. Code § 1202(a) ("notice" defined)]. For further discussion of discharge from liability, see § 55.45.

§ 55.323 Provision Waiving Statute of Limitations for Additional Four-Year Period

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision that may be included in any note or other negotiable instrument when the payee or holder wishes to extend the statute of limitations on written agreements for an additional period [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 336a, 337(1); see also [b], below].

[b] Statutes of Limitations

Actions on most written contracts must be brought within four years [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1); but see Filet Menu, Inc. v. Cheng (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1282-1284, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384 (statute may be tolled by plaintiff's out-of-state travel unrelated to interstate commerce pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 351)]. The statute of limitations on corporate bonds, notes, and debentures is six years [see Code Civ. Proc. § 336a]. In addition, the Commercial Code enumerates the statutes of limitation that apply to particular negotiable instruments. For coverage of the statutes of limitations that apply to the commencement of an action to enforce payment of notes, checks, certificates of deposit, drafts and to the commencement of an action for indemnity or contribution, see § 55.132, Paragraphs 8 and 9 [see Com. Code § 3118]. These statutory periods may be waived, but no single waiver is effective for more than an additional four-year period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5]. However, four-year waivers may be made successively [see Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

D. Transfer and Assignment of Negotiable Instruments

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.330

§ 55.330 Assignment of Negotiable Instruments

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a simple assignment of a note or other negotiable instrument. It is designed for use when the instrument is negotiable but negotiation is not intended or desired. Transfer without negotiation is used when the instrument itself is sold (for example, to a factor who lends money to producers and dealers, often on the security of accounts receivable) or is used as collateral, and the parties intend the transaction to be governed by the terms of the assignment agreement.

Although a negotiable instrument is usually transferred by negotiation, it may be assigned by a simple transfer [see Com. Code § 3203; see also § 55.20]. Transfer of less than the entire instrument operates as a partial assignment, rather than a negotiation [Com. Code § 3203(c); see F. Hart & W. Willier, Bender's U.C.C. Service, Commercial Paper, Ch. 3, Transfer of Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender)].

For discussion of the requirements an instrument must meet to be negotiable, see § 55.21. For coverage of the process of negotiation and the forms for endorsement used in that process, see § 55.120.

[b] Transfer of Instruments

[i] Rights Transferred

The transfer of an instrument, whether or not the transfer is a negotiation, gives the transferee any right of the transferor to enforce the instrument, including any rights as a holder in due course, with one exception: A transferee who has engaged in fraud or illegality affecting the instrument cannot acquire the rights of a holder in due course by transfer [Com. Code § 3203(b)]. However, the transfer of less than an entire instrument is not a negotiation and the transferee only has the rights of a partial assignee [Com. Code § 3203(d)].

[ii] When Transfer Occurs

Transfer of a note or other negotiable instrument occurs when the instrument is delivered by a person, not its issuer, in order to give the person receiving delivery the right to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3203(a)]. "Delivery" is the voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(15)].

[c] Warranties of Transferor

[i] Overview

The warranties enumerated in regard to the presentment and transfer of instruments [see [ii]-[iv], below] cannot be disclaimed with respect to checks [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 3417(e)]. Notice of a claim for breach must be given to the warrantor within 30 days after the claimant has reason to know of the breach and the identity of the warrantor, or the liability of the warrantor will be discharged to the extent of any loss caused by the delay in giving notice [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 3417(e)]. The cause of action for breach of warranty accrues when the claimant has reason to know of the breach [Com. Code §§ 3416(d), 3417(f); see Com. Code §§ 3416(b), 3417(b), (d)(2) (damages)].

[ii] Warranties on Presentment of Unaccepted Draft

Any person who presents an unaccepted draft to the drawee for payment or acceptance and any prior transferor warrant to the drawee who pays or accepts the instrument in good faith that he or she is entitled to enforce the draft or is authorized to obtain payment or acceptance on behalf of a person so entitled [Com. Code § 3417(a)(1)]. The warrantor also warrants that the draft has not been altered and that he or she has no knowledge that the signature of the drawer is unauthorized [Com. Code § 3417(a)(2), (3)]. If the draft is a demand draft, the warrantor also warrants that creation of the draft according to the terms on its face was authorized by the person identified as the drawer [Com. Code § 3417(a)(4); see Com. Code § 3417(h) (exception for transferor as transferee when transferor does not give warranty under applicable conflict of law rules)].

[iii] Warranties on Presentment of Dishonored Draft or Other Obligation

If a dishonored draft is presented for payment to the drawer or an endorser, or any other instrument is presented for payment to a party obliged to pay, and payment is made in good faith, the person obtaining payment and a prior transferor warrant that the warrantor is, or was at the time of transfer, a person entitled to enforce the instrument or authorized to obtain payment on behalf of a person entitled to enforcement [Com. Code § 3417(d)(1)].

[iv] Warranties of Transferor for Consideration

A person who transfers an instrument for consideration warrants to the transferee (and, if the transfer is by endorsement, to any subsequent transferee) that he or she is entitled to enforce the instrument, that all signatures are authentic and authorized, and that the instrument has not been altered [Com. Code § 3416(a)(1)-(3)]. In addition, the transferor warrants that the instrument is not subject to a defense or claim in recoupment of any party that can be asserted against the warrantor, and that he or she has no knowledge of any insolvency proceedings against the maker or acceptor, or against the drawer of an unaccepted instrument [Com. Code § 3416(a)(4), (5)]. An additional warranty to each transferee of a demand draft [see Com. Code § 3104(k) ("demand draft" defined); see also § 55.13[6]] is that the draft was authorized by the bank customer on whose account the draft is drawn [Com. Code § 3416(a)(6); see Com. Code § 3416(e) (exception for transferor as transferee when transferor does not give warranty under applicable conflict of law rules)].

PART IV. FORMS

E. Collection of Negotiable Instruments

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.340

§ 55.340 Written Notice of Dishonor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a notice of dishonor, that is, a notice that presentment of a note or other negotiable instrument has been duly made but acceptance or payment has been refused or has not been obtained within the time allowed [see Com. Code § 3502]. The form is also a notice that, if presentment has been waived or excused, the instrument has not been duly accepted or paid [see Com. Code § 3502(e); see also Com. Code § 3504 (waiver or excuse of presentment)].

Notice of dishonor is sufficient if it reasonably identifies the instrument and indicates that the instrument has been dishonored or has not been paid or accepted. Return of an instrument by a bank for collection is sufficient notice of dishonor [see Com. Code § 3503(b)]. For a list of writings that create a presumption of dishonor and of notice of dishonor (and are admissible as evidence of such), see Section 55.132, Paragraph 2.

If the instrument that has been dishonored is a check, draft, or order, this form may be used together with the demand for payment in cash set forth in Section 55.341 [see Civ. Code § 1719]. If the check has been dishonored because the maker instructed the drawee to stop payment, use the demand for payment in Section 55.342.

[b] Presentment

"Presentment" is a demand for acceptance of a draft made to the drawee, a demand for payment of an instrument made to the drawee or other party obliged to pay, or a demand for payment of a note or accepted draft payable at a bank made to the bank [Com. Code § 3501(a)]. "Acceptance" is the drawee's signed promise to honor a draft or check as presented [Com. Code § 3409(a)]. For discussion of acceptance, see Section 55.42.

Unless excused or waived [see Com. Code §§ 3502(e), 3504(a)], presentment for acceptance is necessary to enforce the obligations of the drawer and endorsers of an instrument, because the instrument must be duly presented before it can be dishonored and the drawer and endorsers must have notice of the dishonor, unless the notice is excused, before their obligations are enforceable [see Com. Code §§ 3502 (dishonor), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3504(b) (excuse of notice of dishonor)]. If an instrument states that it is "payable through" or "payable at" a bank identified in the instrument, the instrument may be presented for payment only by or through the bank; that bank is designated as a collecting bank and the statement does not by itself authorize the bank to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 4106]. For discussion of waiver or excuse of presentment, see Section 55.310[1][b][ii].

[c] Dishonor

Dishonor occurs when presentment is duly made but acceptance or payment is refused or cannot be obtained within the time allowed [see Com. Code § 3502; see also §§ 55.131, 55.132]. Dishonor also occurs when presentment is excused and the instrument is not duly accepted or paid [Com. Code § 3502(e); see Com. Code § 3504 (waiver or excuse of presentment); see also § 55.310[1][b][ii]]. The return of an instrument for lack of proper endorsement is not dishonor; nor is refusal of payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule [Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)].

Subject to any necessary notice of dishonor [see [d], below], the holder has a right to enforce the obligations of the drawers and endorsers after an instrument is dishonored [see Com. Code § 3503(a)]. The rules governing dishonor of various instruments are covered in Section 55.43[2]through [5].

[d] Notice of Dishonor

[i] Overview

Notice of dishonor is necessary to enforce the obligation of an endorser [Com. Code § 3503(a)]. Failure to give notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the endorser [Com. Code § 3415(c); see Com. Code § 3503]. Notice of dishonor is also necessary to enforce the obligation of a drawer to pay a dishonored draft that was accepted by an acceptor other than a bank; failure to give this notice of dishonor discharges the liability of the drawer [Com. Code §§ 3414(d), 3415(c), 3503(a)]. Notice of dishonor may be excused under certain circumstances, as may delay in giving the notice [see Com. Code § 3504(b), (c); see also [iv], below].

[ii] How Notice Is Given

Notice of dishonor may be given by any person. It may be given by any commercially reasonable means, including oral, written, or electronic communication [Com. Code § 3503(b)].

[iii] When Notice Is Given

With respect to an instrument taken for collection by a collecting bank, a notice of dishonor must be given by the bank before midnight of the next business day following the banking day on which the bank receives notice of dishonor of the instrument. With respect to an instrument taken for collection by any other person, a notice of dishonor must be given within 30 days following the day on which the person receives notice of dishonor. With respect to any other instrument, notice of dishonor must be given within 30 days following the day on which dishonor occurs [Com. Code § 3503(c)].

[iv] Waiver or Excuse of Notice or Delay in Giving Notice

Notice of dishonor is excused if the party whose obligation is being enforced waives notice. A waiver of presentment is also a waiver of notice of dishonor. Notice of dishonor is also excused if, by the terms of the instrument, notice is not necessary to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3504(b)].

Delay in giving notice of dishonor is excused if the delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the person giving notice and that person exercised reasonable diligence after the cause of delay ceased to operate [Com. Code § 3504(c)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Collection of Negotiable Instruments

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.341

§ 55.341 Demand for Cash Payment of Dishonored Instrument

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a demand for cash payment of the amount of a dishonored check, draft, or order. The demand is made by the payee on the maker, drawer, or the person who delivered the instrument. If the payee wishes to take advantage of certain civil remedies [see § 55.341[1][b], below], the demand must be delivered to the maker by certified mail [see Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2); see also Civ. Code § 1719(i) (assignee of payee or holder of check also may take advantage of available civil remedies)].

This form should not be used to demand payment of a check that has been dishonored because the maker instructed the drawee to stop payment. A statutory form must be used for that type of demand [see Civ. Code § 1719(c), (d)]. A demand notice that satisfies the statutory requirements is found in § 55.342.

[b] Right to Recovery for Dishonored Instrument

Any person who passes a check on insufficient funds (see below) is liable to the payee for the amount of the check plus a service charge not to exceed $25 for the first check passed to that payee on insufficient funds and not to exceed $35 for each subsequent check passed to that payee on insufficient funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1)]. In addition, penal sanctions may be applied [see § 55.341[1][d], below].

Moreover, any person who passes a check on insufficient funds may be liable to the payee for damages equal to three times the amount of the check if a written demand for payment containing specified information [see § 55.341[1][c], below] is mailed by certified mail to the person who passed the check [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. In addition, penal sanctions may be applied [see § 55.341[1][d], below]. The person who passed the check must, within 30 days from the date the written demand was mailed, pay the amount of the check plus the amount of any service charge and the cost of mailing the written demand for payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. Otherwise, the person is liable for the amount of the check plus treble damages (that is, three times the amount of the check, up to a maximum of $1,500 damages, or at least $100), less any partial payments toward the amount of the check or the service charge that the person made within the 30-day period [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)].

When a person becomes liable for treble damages for a check that is the subject of a written demand, however, that person is no longer liable for any service charge for that check or any costs to mail the written demand [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2); Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736] .

In any event, a person is not liable for the service charge under Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1) if either (1) at any time, the person presents the payee with written confirmation by that person's financial institution that the check was returned to the payee by the financial institution because of an error on the part of that institution [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(4)] or (2) the person presents the payee with written confirmation that his or her account had insufficient funds as a result of a delay in the regularly scheduled transfer or posting of a direct deposit of a social security or government benefit assistance payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(5)]. Furthermore, a person is not liable for the service charge, costs to mail the written demand, or treble damages under Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1), (2), if he or she stops payment in order to resolve a good faith dispute with the payee [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)]. For discussion of what constitutes a "good faith dispute," see § 55.342[1][b][iii].

A drawer also is liable for damages and costs only if all of the requirements of Civ. Code § 1719 are met [Civ. Code § 1719(j)(1)]. In any case, the drawer is not liable more than once on each check [Civ. Code § 1719(j)(2)].

To "pass a check on insufficient funds" means to make, utter, draw, or deliver any check, draft, or order for the payment of money on any bank, depository, person, firm, or corporation that refuses to honor the instrument because (1) of lack of funds or credit in the account to pay the check, (2) the person who wrote the check does not have an account with the drawee, or (3) the person who wrote the check instructed the drawee to stop payment on the check [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(6)].

The statutory damages prescribed in Civ. Code § 1719 are exclusive in the sense that the payee or an assignee, on recovering a service charge pursuant to that code section, may not also recover prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. If, after a proper demand, the service charge is not paid (together with the amount of the check and the cost of mailing the demand), and the payee or assignee sues for treble damages instead, then in that case as well, prejudgment interest may not be recovered [Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736] .

In lieu of pursuing the statutory relief authorized in Civ. Code § 1719, if the check was taken as payment of an obligation, the payee or an assignee may seek damages for breach of the underlying obligation [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(3)], and in that case, prejudgment interest may be claimed [Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736 ; see Com. Code § 3302 (interest is recoverable)].

[c] Required Information and Form of Demand

To receive recovery for a dishonored instrument [see § 55.341[1][b], above], the payee must make a written demand for payment by certified mail. The demand must inform the recipient of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1719, the amount of the check, and the amount of the service charge payable to the payee [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. The relevant statutory provisions of Civ. Code § 1719 are included in the language of this form [see § 55.341[2], below].

[d] Criminal Penalty for Worthless Check

Making, drawing, or delivering a check, draft, or order with intent to defraud and knowledge that the maker or drawer has insufficient funds to pay it is a crime [see Penal Code § 476a(a)]. If the check has been protested (that is, dishonored) on the ground of insufficient funds, the notice of protest (that is, dishonor) is admissible as proof of presentation, nonpayment, and dishonor, and is presumptive evidence of knowledge of the insufficiency [Penal Code § 476a(c)].

CHAPTER 55 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Collection of Negotiable Instruments

22-55 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 55.342

§ 55.342 Demand for Cash Payment of Check Subject to Stop Payment Order

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a demand for payment of a check that has been dishonored because the drawer has instructed the drawee to stop payment. It is the statutory form set forth in Civil Code Section 1719(c). A demand for payment of an instrument that has been dishonored because of a stop payment order must be in substantially the form specified by statute [Civ. Code § 1719(c)]. This form should be used instead of the form in Section 55.341 when an instrument has been dishonored because of a stop payment order. Special demand provisions apply when the payee of the dishonored check is a municipal court [see Civ. Code § 1719(g)].

For discussion of the provisions of Civil Code Section 1719 relating to instruments dishonored for reasons other than a stop payment order, see Section 55.341[1].

[b] Action for Damages

[i] Written Demand Required

The payee of a dishonored check, including one dishonored because the drawer ordered the drawee to stop payment, is entitled to the amount of the check and a service charge not to exceed $25 for the first check passed to that payee on insufficient funds and not to exceed $35 for each subsequent check passed to that payee on insufficient funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1)]. Moreover, the payee of a dishonored check may be entitled to damages equal to three times the amount of the check if a written demand for payment containing specified information [see [2], below] is mailed by certified mail to the person who passed the check [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. The person who passed the check must, within 30 days from the date the written demand was mailed, pay the amount of the check plus the amount of any service charge and the costs to mail the written demand for payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. Otherwise, the person is liable for the amount of the check plus treble damages (that is, three times the amount of the check, up to a maximum of $1,500 damages, or at least $100), less any partial payments toward the amount of the check or the service charge that the person made within the 30-day period [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. However, there is no such cause of action if the drawer stops payment in order to resolve a good faith dispute with the payee [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)].

[ii] Existence of Good Faith Dispute; Burden of Proof

The payee of a check on which payment has been stopped by order of the maker is entitled to the a service charge, costs to mail the written demand, or treble damages provided by Civil Code Section 1719(a) only if the payee proves by clear and convincing evidence that there was no good faith dispute [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)]. A "good faith dispute" exists if the court finds that the drawer had a reasonable belief that he or she was legally entitled to withhold payment. Grounds for entitlement to withhold payment include, but are not limited to, the following: services were not rendered; goods were not delivered; goods or services were faulty, not as promised, or otherwise unsatisfactory; or there was an overcharge. Whether a good faith dispute exists is determined by the trier of fact [Civ. Code § 1719(b)].

[iii] Evidence of Written Demand

A court may not award damages or costs under Civil Code Section 1719 for a stop payment unless the court receives into evidence a copy of the written demand that has been sent to the drawer and a signed certified mail receipt showing delivery, or attempted delivery if refused, of the written demand to the drawer's last known address [Civ. Code § 1719(d)].

[iv] Reasonable Effort to Reconcile Dispute

To recover damages because the drawer instructed the drawee to stop payment, the payee must show to the satisfaction of the trier of fact that he or she made a reasonable effort to reconcile and resolve the dispute before going to court [Civ. Code § 1719(e)].

_____ [Name of payee] is the payee of a check you wrote for $_____. The check was not paid because you stopped payment, and the payee demands payment. You may have a good faith dispute as to whether you owe the full amount. If you do not have a good faith dispute with the payee and fail to pay the payee the full amount of the check in cash plus a service charge not to exceed $25 for the first check passed on insufficient funds and not to exceed $35 for each subsequent check passed on insufficient funds, and the costs to mail this notice, within 30 days after this notice was mailed, you could be sued and held responsible to pay at least both of the following:

(1) The amount of the check.

(2) Damages of at least $100 or, if higher, three times the amount of the check, up to $1,500.

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers letters of credit and electronic fund transfers. The Legal Background discusses the purposes and uses of letters of credit, particularly as they relate to international sales transactions. Included are discussions of Division 5 of the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) (generally referred to in this chapter as the Uniform Commercial Code Letters of Credit, or UCC--Letters of Credit) and the International Chamber of Commerce Publication entitled "Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits" (generally referred to in this chapter as the UCP) [see § 56.15]. The Legal Background also discusses methods of accomplishing and evidencing electronic transfers of funds under the Uniform Commercial Code and the federal Electronic Fund Transfer Act.

The Transaction Guide contains lists of facts and documents to be gathered in letter of credit and electronic fund transfer transactions, as well as determinations to be made by the parties. Procedural guides giving step-by-step guides to letter of credit and fund transfer procedures are also included.

The Forms section illustrates various letter of credit forms, along with credit applications and a bill of exchange used in letter of credit transactions. Error resolution forms are provided for use in electronic fund transfers. The forms also include the disclosures that banks must provide to consumers under the federal Electronic Fund Transfer Act.

Drafts and other negotiable instruments are covered in Chapter 55, Negotiable Instruments. For discussion of other forms of business financing, see Chapters 42, Secured Transactions, and 43, Business Loans. Sales of goods under the Uniform Commercial Code are discussed in Chapter 52, Sales of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code.

CHAPTER 56 LETTERS OF CREDIT AND ELECTRONIC FUND TRANSFERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Letters of Credit
1. Nature, Characteristics, and Governing Law

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.10

§ 56.10 Letter of Credit

[1] Definition

A "letter of credit" is a definite undertaking that satisfies the form requirements of Com. Code § 5104 by an issuer (usually a financial institution), made at the request or for the account of an applicant (usually a buyer of goods or, in some cases, a financial institution), to honor a documentary presentation by payment or delivery of an item of value [Com. Code § 5102(a)(10); see Com. Code § 5104 (form requirements); § 56.30[1]; see also Com. Code § 5102(b) ("value" defined)]. A "document" includes a "draft" or other demand for payment (including documents of title, investment securities, certificates, or invoices) (1) that is presented in either a written or nonpaper medium permitted by the letter of credit or, unless prohibited by the letter of credit, by the standard practice observed by financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(e)], and (2) that is capable of being examined for compliance with the terms and conditions of letters of credit [Com. Code § 5102(a)(6); see Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 11) (document may be "draft" under Com. Code § 5102(a)(6), even though it is not "draft" or negotiable instrument under Com. Code § 3104(e)); see also § 56.14]. A document may not be oral [Com. Code § 5102(a)(6)]. This definition of "document" contemplates the use of electronic media [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 2)].

The issuer agrees to make payments under the letter of credit to a beneficiary (usually a seller of goods) only if the beneficiary complies with the terms and conditions specified in the letter of credit, usually by presenting documents [see Com. Code §§ 5102(a)(10), 5104]. A letter of credit transaction involves at least three parties and three separate and independent relationships between (1) the issuer and the beneficiary, created by the letter of credit, (2) the customer and the beneficiary, created by a contract or promissory note, with the letter of credit securing the customer's obligations to the beneficiary under the contract or note, and (3) the customer and the issuer, created by a separate contract under which the issuer agrees to issue the letter of credit for a fee and the customer agrees to reimburse the issuer for any amounts paid out under the letter of credit [DBJJJ, Inc. v. National City Bank (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 530, 534, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 ; Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 232, 239 n.3, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 933 P. 2d 507] . For definitions and roles of the parties in a letter of credit transaction, see § 56.11.

A letter of credit may be revocable or irrevocable [see Com. Code § 5106(a)].

[2] Use

A commercial letter of credit is used to facilitate commercial transactions between reluctant parties, both of whom are hesitant to rely solely on the promises of the other. The primary purpose of a letter of credit is to provide an assurance to the beneficiary of prompt payment against documents, that is, to provide a method of payment, through banking channels, that defines the terms and conditions on which payment will be made, and that, within the strict limits of those terms and conditions, engages the full primary responsibility of a bank to make the payment [Paramount Export Co. v. Asia Trust Bank, Ltd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1476 n.1, 238 Cal. Rptr. 920] . In a typical letter of credit transaction, the issuing bank issues the letter of credit after the customer (or "applicant" [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(2); § 56.11[1]]) has completed the letter of credit application, signed the security agreement that is attached to the application, and made provisions to pay the issuer for amounts paid under the credit. The issuer then forwards the credit to an advising or confirming bank, which sends the beneficiary an advice or confirmation of the credit. After obtaining the necessary documents to fulfill the credit, the beneficiary presents the documents, draft, and letter of credit for payment at the confirming bank. For definitions and roles of the parties in a letter of credit transaction, see § 56.11.

[3] Governing Provisions of Uniform Commercial Code

The Letters of Credit Division of the UCC (generally referred to in this chapter as the UCC Letters of Credit) [see Com. Code § 5101 et seq.] applies to letters of credit and to certain rights and obligations arising out of transactions involving letters of credit [Com. Code § 5103(a)].

The UCC deals with some, but not all, of the rules and concepts of letters of credit. The UCC is not intended to codify all of the law on letters of credit, but to reiterate some fundamental theories underlying letters of credit and to present a framework for future development [Com. Code § 5101 (UCC Comment); see Wichita Eagle & B. Pub. Co., Inc. v. Pacific Nat. Bank, San Francisco (9th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 1285, 1286] . The fact that a rule is stated in the UCC does not by itself require, imply, or negate application of the same or a different rule to a situation not provided for, or to a person not specified [Com. Code § 5103(b); see [4], below]. With limited exceptions [see § 56.30[4]], the effect of this division may be varied by agreement or by a provision stated or incorporated by reference in an undertaking [see Com. Code § 5103(c)]. Otherwise, if there is a conflict between the UCC--Letters of Credit and Division 3 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code 3102 et seq. , (negotiable instruments), Division 4 [Com. Code § 4101 et seq. (bank deposits and collections)], or Division 9 [Com. Code § 9101 et seq. (secured transactions)], the UCC Letters of Credit will govern [Com. Code § 5116(d)].

The current version of the UCC--Letters of Credit, effective January 1, 1997, governs letters of credit (and transactions associated with those letters of credit) issued on or after that date [stats. 1996, ch. 176 § 14]. Any transaction, right, obligation, or interest associated with a letter of credit that was issued before January 1, 1997 is governed by prior law [Stats. 1996, ch. 176 § 15].

The UCC--Letters of Credit was revised to conform to the existing version of the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (UCP), a private international agreement of banking practices that is followed by banks in most countries that engage in international commerce [see Com. Code § 5101, (UCC Comment); see also § 56.15]. The changes generally make letters of credit less costly and more reliable [see, e.g., Com. Code § 5104 (form requirements); § 56.30] and tend to favor the issuing bank [see, e.g., Com. Code § 5111(b), (c) (precluding punitive and consequential damages if issuer wrongfully dishonors draft or demand presented under letter of credit); Com. Code § 5115 (setting one year statute of limitations after expiration date of letter of credit, or date cause of action accrues, for actions under Division 5)].

[4] Governing Provisions of Other Bodies of Law

In addition to the UCP [see [3], above], the UCC--Letters of Credit is supplemented by many rules of statutory and common law [see Com. Code §§ 1103(b), 5102(c); Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2)]. For example, federal bankruptcy law applies to letters of credit with respect to applicants and beneficiaries that are in bankruptcy [Com. Code § 5101 (UCC Comment); see, e.g., Hamada v. Far East National Bank (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 645, 650-651 (bank that issued letter of credit unsuccessfully claimed right of statutory subrogation under Bankruptcy Code); see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 307, Insolvency (Matthew Bender)], and regulations of the Federal Reserve Board and the Comptroller of the Currency govern requirements for banks that issue letters of credit and describe how letters of credit are to be treated for purposes of calculating asset risk and for loan limitations [Com. Code § 5101 (UCC Comment)]. In addition, anti-boycott and similar laws may affect the issuance and performance of letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5101 (UCC Comment) ("All these laws are beyond the scope of Article 5, but in certain circumstances they will override Article 5.")]. Letters of credit may also be governed by the draft Convention on Independent Guarantees and Standby Letters of Credit [see Com. Code § 5101 (UCC Comment)].

CHAPTER 56 LETTERS OF CREDIT AND ELECTRONIC FUND TRANSFERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Letters of Credit
1. Nature, Characteristics, and Governing Law

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.11

§ 56.11 Parties

[1] Applicant

The person at whose request or for whose account a letter of credit is issued is generally referred to as the "applicant." A person who requests a letter of credit for another also qualifies as an "applicant" if the person making the request agrees to reimburse the issuer [Com. Code § 5102(a)(1); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(9) (issuer defined as bank or other person that issues letter of credit, excluding individuals making agreements for personal, family, or household purposes); [3], below]. "Applicants" are sometimes called "customers" or "account parties." As a condition of the bank's acceptance of an application for a letter of credit, the applicant agrees to pay the bank the amount honored under the letter of credit, plus interest and any transaction fees.

In general, the applicant gives the bank a security interest in the documents and goods involved in the transaction as security for the credit [see Com. Code § 8102(a)(15) ("security" defined); see also § 56.200[2] (security agreement)].

[2] Beneficiary

The person who, by terms of the letter of credit, is entitled to have its complying presentation honored is referred to as the "beneficiary" [Com. Code § 5102(a)(3); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(8) (honor defined as performance of issuer's undertaking to pay or deliver item of value); Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) (presentation defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor); see also Com. Code §§ 3303, 4211, 5102(b) ("value" defined)]. A person to whom drawing rights (that is, the right to demand payment under the credit) have been transferred under a transferable letter of credit also qualifies as a beneficiary [Com. Code § 5102(a)(3); see § 56.40]. Generally, the beneficiary is the person who is selling goods to the applicant and in whose favor the credit is issued. To obtain payment, the beneficiary must present the documents specified in the credit to the issuer or confirmer [see [3], [5], below]. However, the beneficiary must comply with the terms of the credit only if he or she seeks payment; there is no separate obligation requiring the beneficiary to comply [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)].

In the absence of a provision in a letter of credit requiring separate presentment to the confirming bank, the beneficiary need apply only to the issuing bank to obtain payment, and not the confirming bank [Northern Trust Co. v. Community Bank (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 227, 229 (construing former Com. Code § 5107(2), substantively similar to Com. Code § 5107(a))].

In a "standby" letter of credit, the buyer, rather than the seller, is usually the beneficiary. For further discussion of standby letters of credit, see § 56.13[12].

A beneficiary's contingent interest in a nontransferable executory letter of credit is not property of the beneficiary subject to attachment by a party in other litigation. Because executory letters of credit are not "instruments" as defined by Com. Code § 9102(a)(47), they are not tangible personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 481.225], and no method of levy exists to attach them [Studwell, Inc. v. Korean Exchange Bank (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191-1193, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538] .

[3] Issuer

"Issuer" means a bank or other person who issues a letter of credit, but does not include an individual who makes an agreement for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 5102(a)(9); see Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 5) (rationale for excluding consumers from definition of issuer)]. When the letter of credit is issued by a bank, the bank is referred to as the "issuing bank." The applicant applies to the "issuer" for issuance of the letter of credit. On approval of the application, the issuer will issue the credit. On proper presentation of documents by the "beneficiary," the issuer (or the "confirmer" [see [5], below], if there is one) will honor the credit and pay drafts or demands.

The primary obligation of the issuer is to pay drafts or demands under the credit. Thus, an issuer must honor a presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) ("presentation" defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor)] that, according to the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit, appears on its face strictly to comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud); see also Com. Code 5108(e) (standard practice)].

The issuer's obligation, however, does not include responsibility for:

- The performance or nonperformance of the underlying contract or other transaction [Com. Code § 5108(f)(1)];
- Any act or omission of others [Com. Code § 5108(f)(2); see, e.g., San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bank Leumi, 42 Cal. App. 4th 928, 938, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (1996) (standby letter of credit issuer may not dishonor letter based on beneficiary's failure to mitigate damages in dispute arising from underlying contract)]; or
- Observance or knowledge of any usage of any particular trade, other than the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5108(f)(2); see Com. Code § 5108(e) (explicit deference to standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit)].

Even if an advisor gives incorrect advice as to the terms of a credit it has been authorized to advise, the credit is enforceable as issued [Com. Code § 5107(c); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(1), 5107(c) (advisor undertakes to advise issuer and beneficiary accurately of terms of letter of credit); [4], below].

For discussion of an issuer's duty to honor drafts or payments presented under a letter of credit, see § 56.50[2]. For discussion of an issuer's duties and rights regarding a revocable letter of credit, see § 56.13[3].

[4] Advisor

A person who, at the request of an issuer, confirmer, or other advisor, notifies the beneficiary that a letter of credit has been issued, confirmed, or amended, is an "advisor" [Com. Code § 5102(a)(1)]. A person who notifies a transferee beneficiary of the terms of a letter of credit, confirmation, amendment, or advice also has the rights and duties of an advisor [see Com. Code § 5107(d)]. The terms in any notice to a transferee beneficiary may differ from the terms in any notice to a transferor beneficiary to the extent permitted by the letter of credit, confirmation, amendment, or advice received by the person who so notifies [Com. Code § 5107(d)].

An advisor that is not a "confirmer" [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(4)] ("confirmer" defined as nominated person who undertakes to honor presentation under letter of credit issued by another); [5], below] is not obligated to honor or give value for a presentation [Com. Code § 5107(c); H. Ray Baker, Inc. v. Associated Banking Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 592 F.2d 550, 553 (advising bank assumes no duty of payment unless it confirms credit at request of the issuing bank, thereby becoming independently liable to beneficiary)]. By advising a letter of credit, the advisor assumes a duty to the issuer and to the beneficiary to accurately advise the issuer and the beneficiary of terms of letter of credit [Com. Code § 5107(c)]. However, beyond determining the apparent authenticity of the letter of credit (for example, by "testing" the telex that comes from the purported issuer), the advisor has no duty to investigate the accuracy of the message it has received from the issuer [Com. Code § 5107 (UCC Comment 2)]. Further, by proper agreement, the advisor may disclaim this obligation [Com. Code § 5107 (UCC Comment 2)].

Although an advisor ordinarily has no duty to investigate the factual basis for statements presented by the beneficiary, if the advisor is also an assignee of the proceeds, it has a direct interest in the payment on the letter of credit. By countersigning the statements presented by the beneficiary, the advisor acts in its own interest rather than the interest of the beneficiary. If the statements are false, the advisor shares liability with the beneficiary [Pubali Bank v. City Nat. Bank (9th Cir. 1982) 676 F.2d 1326, 1329 1330 , aff'd, 777 F.2d 1340 (1985) ; see Com. Code § 5107 (UCC Comment 3)].

[5] Confirmer

A nominated person who undertakes to honor a presentation under a letter of credit issued by another, at the issuer's request or with its consent, is referred to as a "confirmer" [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(11)] (nominated person is one whom issuer designates to pay or otherwise to give value under letter of credit and undertakes by agreement or custom and practice to reimburse); see also Com. Code § 5107(b) (nominated person who is not confirmer is not obliged to honor or otherwise give value for a presentation)]. When a person assumes the status of a confirmer, the beneficiary may apply for payment to either the issuer or the confirmer, at its option.

A confirmer is directly obligated on the letter of credit, and has the obligations of an issuer, to the extent of its confirmation. The confirmer also acquires the rights of an issuer [Com. Code § 5107(a); see [3], above]. In addition, the confirmer has rights against and obligations to the issuer, as if the issuer were an applicant and the confirmer had issued the letter of credit at the request and for the account of the issuer [Com. Code § 5107(a)]. Unless otherwise indicated in the letter of credit, the confirmer should be viewed as an issuer of a parallel letter of credit for the account of the original issuer [Com. Code § 5107(a) (UCC Comment 1)].

CHAPTER 56 LETTERS OF CREDIT AND ELECTRONIC FUND TRANSFERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Letters of Credit
1. Nature, Characteristics, and Governing Law

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.12

§ 56.12 Letter of Credit Distinguished From Other Instruments and Transactions

[1] Label on Document Not Conclusive

Whether or not a document is a letter of credit is not determined by its label [see Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 6)]. Courts may look beyond the title or description of a letter of credit to the intent of the parties to determine the nature of the instrument [Wichita Eagle & B. Pub. Co., Inc. v. Pacific Nat. Bank, San Francisco (9th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 1285, 1286 (instrument labeled "letter of credit" held to be ordinary guarantee contract); see Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 6) (approving conclusion in Wichita Eagle)].

When a document labeled "letter of credit" requires the issuer to pay not on presentation of documents, but rather on the determination of an extrinsic fact (such as an applicant's failure to perform a construction contract), and when that condition appears to be fundamental and would, if ignored, leave no obligation to the issuer under the document, the issuer's undertaking is not a letter of credit [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 6)]. Rather, it is likely some form of suretyship [see [4], below] or other contractual obligation [see [2], [5], below].

Although the UCC recognizes that certain nondocumentary conditions may be included in a letter of credit without destroying its status as a letter of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(g) (if document meeting statutory definition of letter of credit contains nondocumentary conditions, issuer must disregard those conditions and treat them as if they were not stated)], the undertaking is not a letter of credit when the nondocumentary condition is fundamental to the issuer's obligation [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 6)].

[2] Contract

While a letter of credit has some of the characteristics of a contract between the issuer and the beneficiary, it is not properly classified as a contract [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender); see also § 56.11 [2], [3] ("beneficiary" and "issuer" defined)]. A bilateral contract requires several elements, including consideration, a bargained-for exchange of promises, and a meeting of minds, while a unilateral contract consists of a promise by one party that becomes binding only if the other party performs [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)]. A letter of credit, in contrast, does not require consideration [Com. Code § 5105]. The issuer and the beneficiary rarely, if ever, negotiate the terms of the credit; and the issuer and the beneficiary are generally unknown to each other before the applicant [see § 56.11[1] ("applicant" defined)] applies for the credit. Further, the promise of the issuer is binding whether or not there is actual performance by any other party.

Notwithstanding this, a letter of credit transaction will often include (or be based on) several contracts. First, the applicant and the beneficiary will have a contract for the underlying sale or other transaction that is the subject matter of the letter of credit [see [3], below]. In addition, the applicant and the issuer will have a contract for the issuance of the credit [see § 56.200[2] (security agreement in application for letter of credit)]. However, the credit itself is distinct from either of these contracts.

[3] Underlying Obligation

The UCC recognizes the letter of credit as independent of the underlying contract of sale or other transaction between the applicant and the beneficiary [see Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 1)]. This "first rule" of letter of credit law is referred to as the "independence principle" [see Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 1)].

Accordingly, the issuer's rights and obligations to a beneficiary or a nominated person are independent of the existence, performance, on nonperformance of the contract or other arrangement underlying the letter of credit, including contracts between the issuer and the applicant and between the applicant and the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5103(d); see Com. Code § 5108(f)(1), (2) (issuer's obligation to applicant does not include responsibility for performance or nonperformance of underlying contract or for act or omission of others); see, e.g., San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bank Leumi (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 928, 938, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (standby letter of credit issuer may not dishonor letter based on beneficiary's failure to mitigate damages in dispute arising from underlying contract); see also Studwell, Inc. v. Korean Exchange Bank (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1195-1196, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538]. Consequently, an issuer must honor a presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) (presentation defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor)] that, according to the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit, appears on its face strictly to comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud); see also Com. Code 5108(e) (standard practice)].

A letter of credit creates an absolute, independent obligation, and payment must be made on presentation of proper documents, regardless of any dispute between the buyer and seller in the underlying transaction of sale [First Empire Bank v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. (9th Cir. 1978) 572 F.2d 1361, 1366, cert. denied, 452 U.S. 906 (1981)] .

[4] Suretyship Obligation

A suretyship obligation is one in which the surety or guarantor promises to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another. A letter of credit is not a form of suretyship obligation [Civ. Code § 2787]. A letter of credit is distinguishable from a suretyship because it is a primary obligation between the issuer and the beneficiary [see § 56.11[2], [3] ("issuer" and "beneficiary" defined)], not a promise to pay the debt of another [see Lumbermans Acceptance Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 175, 178, 150 Cal. Rptr. 69]. Generally, a surety's liability for an obligation is secondary to, and derivative of, the liability of the principal for that obligation. By contrast, the liability of the issuer of a letter of credit to the beneficiary is direct and independent of the underlying transaction between the beneficiary and the issuer's customer [Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 232, 246-247, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 933 P.2d 507] .

[5] Negotiable Instrument

A letter of credit is not a negotiable instrument. Under the UCC, a negotiable instrument must:

- Be a written order or promise to pay money signed by the person giving the order or promising to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6), (9)];
- Contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money [Com. Code § 3104(a)];
- Be payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of the holder [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)];
- Be payable on demand or at a definite time [Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)]; and
- Not state any other undertaking or instruction by the drawer or maker other than to pay money, with limited exceptions [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)].

A letter of credit is not payable to order or to bearer, and is not an unconditional promise to pay. Further, it generally contains conditions that must be fulfilled before payment, such as the presentation of documents.

[6] Agency Agreement

A letter of credit is not an agency agreement. A bank or other person that issues a letter of credit acts as a principal, and not as agent for its customer (the "applicant"). The credit that the issuer agrees to issue is its own, even though the issuer expects to be paid by its customer before or immediately after it makes the disbursement.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Letters of Credit
1. Nature, Characteristics, and Governing Law

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.13

§ 56.13 Types of Letters of Credit

[1] Clean

The conditions that the beneficiary must fulfill to obtain payment under a letter of credit can vary greatly, depending on the nature of the underlying transaction. If the letter of credit requires only presentation of a draft or demand for payment and no other documents, it is known as a "clean" or "traveler's" letter of credit. A traveler's letter of credit, designed to allow the holder to obtain funds anywhere in the world merely by the presentation of a draft or demand, is the only true form of clean letter of credit. However, with general use of credit cards and automated teller machines, the traveler's letter of credit has been rendered largely obsolete. In practice, virtually all commercial letters of credit require documents other than a draft or demand for payment, and are therefore "documentary" letters of credit [see [2], below; see also Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Ch. 5C, Letters of Credit and Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender)].

The 1963 version of the UCC Letters of Credit, repealed effective January 1, 1997, applied to a clean letter of credit only if the credit conspicuously stated that it is a letter of credit or is entitled as a letter of credit [former Com. Code § 5102(1)(c); see Stats. 1963, ch. 819 § 5101]. The form requirements for a letter of credit under the current law specify only that a letter of credit may be issued in any form that is a record [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(14) (record defined as information inscribed on a tangible medium, or stored in an electronic or other medium, and retrievable in perceivable form)] and is authenticated [see Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 2) (authentication in this section is authentication only of identity of issuer, confirmer, or advisor)] (1) by a signature or (2) in accordance with the agreement of the parties or with the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5104; see Com. Code § 5108(e) (standard practice); see also § 56.30[1]]. Note, however, that courts may look beyond the title or description of a letter of credit to the intent of the parties to determine the nature of the instrument [Wichita Eagle & B. Pub. Co., Inc. v. Pacific Nat. Bank, San Francisco (9th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 1285, 1286 (instrument labeled "letter of credit" held to be ordinary guarantee contract)].

The Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (UCP) [see § 56.15] does not apply to "clean" letters of credit.

For a "clean" or "traveler's" letter of credit, see § 56.202.

[2] Documentary

If a letter of credit requires the presentation of documents in addition to a draft or demand for payment, it is a "documentary" or "commercial" letter of credit. For most letters of credit, the additional documents are documents of title and shipping documents. For "standby" letters of credit [see § 56.13[12] ("standby letter of credit" defined)], the additional documents may be certificates of default. The UCC--Letters of Credit applies to documentary letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(6)]. The Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (UCP) [see § 56.15], incorporated into most letters of credit, also applies to documentary credits.

[3] Revocable

A letter of credit may be either revocable or irrevocable. A revocable credit is one that can be revoked without incurring liability. A letter of credit is revocable only if it so provides [Com. Code § 5106(a)]. Unless otherwise agreed, after a revocable credit is established, it may be canceled or amended by the issuer at any time without consent from the applicant, confirmer, or beneficiary [see Com. Code § 5106(b); see § 56.32[2]]. Despite this power to revoke, however, the issuer may still be liable to a nominated person [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (nominated person is one whom issuer designates to pay or otherwise to give value under letter of credit and undertakes by agreement or custom and practice to reimburse)] who has relied on the credit in negotiating or honoring drafts drawn on the credit [Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 3)]. Revocable credits are the exception rather than the norm [UCP, art. 6 (Comment)].

[4] Irrevocable

An irrevocable credit is one that cannot be revoked without incurring liability. Except to the extent that a letter of credit provides that it is revocable [see [3], above], or that the issuer may amend or cancel the letter without the consent of the beneficiary, applicant, or confirmer, the rights and obligations of a beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, or issuer are not affected by any amendment or cancellation to which that person has not consented [Com. Code § 5106(b)]. A letter of credit is issued and becomes enforceable against the issuer when the issuer sends (or otherwise transmits) the letter of credit to the prospective advisor or the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5106(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(36) ("send" defined)].

After an irrevocable credit is issued, the rights and obligations of the beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, or issuer are not affected by an amendment or cancellation to which that person has not consented [see Com. Code § 5106(b); see § 56.32[1]].

The duration of an irrevocable letter of credit is discussed in § 56.31[2].

[5] Confirmed

A letter of credit is confirmed when the "advisor" [see § 56.11[4] (definition)] makes itself liable to the "beneficiary" [see § 56.11[2] (definition)], thereby becoming the "confirmer" [see § 56.11[5] (definition)]. When a letter of credit has been confirmed, the beneficiary can seek payment from either the confirmer or the issuer [see § 56.11[3] (definition)]. The confirmer becomes directly obligated on the letter of credit and acquires the rights of an issuer, to the extent of its confirmation [Com. Code § 5107(a); see H. Ray Baker, Inc. v. Associated Banking Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 592 F.2d 550, 553]. The confirmer also has rights against and obligations to the issuer as if the issuer were an applicant [see § 56.11[1] (definition)] and the confirmer had issued the letter of credit at the request of the issuer [Com. Code § 5107(a)].

A confirmed credit is always irrevocable [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, Ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

[6] Unconfirmed

A letter of credit is unconfirmed if the advisor [see § 56.11[4] (definition)] informs the beneficiary of the letter of credit by sending the beneficiary an advice of credit but does not make itself liable to the beneficiary. When a letter of credit is unconfirmed, the beneficiary can seek payment only from the issuer. An advisor that is not a confirmer [see § 56.11[5] (definition)] is not obligated to honor or give value for a presentation [Com. Code § 5107(c); H. Ray Baker, Inc. v. Associated Banking Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 592 F.2d 550, 553 (advising bank assumes no duty of payment unless it confirms credit at request of the issuing bank, thereby becoming independently liable to beneficiary); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) (presentation defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor); see also Com. Code §§ 3303, 4211, 5102(b) ("value" defined)]. For discussion of the duties of advisors, refer to § 56.11[4].

An unconfirmed credit can be revocable or irrevocable [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, Ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

[7] General and Special

Historically, a "general" letter of credit allowed the beneficiary to seek payment from any bank that wished to accept the risk. A "special" letter of credit was specifically addressed to the particular bank from which the beneficiary had to seek payment. The distinction between general and special letters of credit has been abolished in California [see Com. Code § 5103; see also former Com. Code § 5103 (California Comment 1)].

[8] Straight and Negotiation

A "straight" letter of credit restricts payment to a specified bank, called the "paying bank," generally in the beneficiary's locale. A straight letter of credit requires presentation of the drafts and documents on or before the expiration date at the office of the paying bank.

A "negotiation" letter of credit does not restrict payment to any particular bank. The beneficiary under a negotiation credit may present the draft and documents for payment to any bank for payment. An bank that is the advisor [see § 56.11[4]] may also be the negotiating bank. For a form of negotiation letter of credit, see § 56.201.

[9] Simple and Revolving

A "simple" credit is one that applies to an isolated transaction and is exhausted after one payment under that transaction. A "revolving" credit is used when the buyer is a regular customer of the seller and the credit is maintained at a certain level even though payments are made periodically for various transactions [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, Ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

[10] Divisible

A "divisible" letter of credit permits partial shipments and partial transfer of the benefits of the credit. Unless otherwise specified, every credit is divisible and may be used in portions, at the discretion of the beneficiary [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, Ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)]. For a request for partial transfer of credit, see § 56.211.

[11] Notation

A "notation" credit is a credit that specifies that any person purchasing or paying drafts drawn or demands for payment made under the credit must note the amount of the draft or demand on the letter of credit or advise of credit [see Datapoint Corp v. M & I Bank (W.D. Wis. 1987) 665 F. Supp. 722, 726-727]. A notation credit is generally employed when the letter of credit is intended for roving use. The notation is required by each person who draws against the credit so that the current status of the credit appears on its face. For further discussion of notation credits, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender).

[12] Standby

A "standby" letter of credit, also known as a "bank guarantee," is used to secure the obligation of a party in any type of transaction. It is the obligation of the issuer to pay the beneficiary on the failure of the applicant to perform under a contract, functioning in the same way as a guarantee or surety bond. A standby letter of credit is generally made effective by the beneficiary's presenting documents evidencing a failure to perform.

In addition, standby letters of credit can serve as alternative forms of security to assure performance in a variety of fields [see, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 19835(b) (letter of credit as security for issuance of building permit)].

Several important differences distinguish standby letters of credit from other letters of credit. First, the purpose of a standby credit is as a form of guarantee or security, and not as a payment mechanism. Second, in a standby credit, the buyer is the beneficiary, while in most other letters of credit, the seller is the beneficiary. Third, the triggering of payment is simpler than in other letters of credit. In standard letters of credit, payment is made on presentation of documents specified in the credit that relate to an underlying transaction. To obtain payment under a standby credit, the beneficiary generally need only certify in writing that the seller has defaulted [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, Ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

For an irrevocable standby letter of credit, see § 56.204.

[13] Subdivision Improvement Guarantee

A "subdivision improvement guarantee" is a type of "standby" letter of credit [see [12], above] that is given to a local government to ensure that necessary subdivision improvements such as streets, gutters, and sidewalks are completed by a developer. This type of letter of credit can be used in place of other forms of guarantee, such as performance bonds, escrow accounts, and special assessments [see, e.g., Gov. Code § 66499(a)(3) (letter of credit as security for construction improvements)]. The letter of credit, in favor of the government entity, is obtained by the developer from a bank in an amount sufficient to cover the cost of the improvements. For further discussion and a form for a subdivision improvement guarantee letter of credit, see Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Ch. 5C, Letters of Credit and Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender).

[14] Back-to-Back

A "back-to-back" letter of credit differs from a standard letter of credit in that at least two separate letters of credit are issued. In the first credit, the applicant (buyer) is the beneficiary. The applicant gives this letter of credit to the issuer in exchange for a substantially identical letter of credit for a lesser amount in favor of the seller. The credit pledged by the applicant is the "backing" or "master" credit. The corresponding credit issued in favor of the seller is the "subsidiary" or "secondary" credit.

All of the credits in a chain of back-to-back credits should be checked carefully to ensure that they are identical in all respects, except for price and parties. An inconsistency arising in the middle of the chain may result in an issuer's refusal to pay on that credit. Because back-to-back credits rest on a common base of security (an assignment of the right to proceeds is an essential part of a back-to-back credit), failure of one link will jeopardize the entire transaction.

The use of back-to-back credits allows each party in the transaction to conceal from its buyer the identity of its seller. For further discussion of back-to-back credits, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender).

[15] Purchase

A "purchase" letter of credit is used in local purchase transactions when the buyer wishes to purchase goods from an undetermined seller. This credit allows the buyer to shop for favorable terms and prices. The buyer signs an application for the credit and, after approval, the bank issues a credit to the buyer. For further discussion and a form of purchase letter of credit, see Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Ch. 5C, Letters of Credit and Commercial Paper (Matthew Bender).

§ 56.14 Drafts (Bills of Exchange) in Letter of Credit Transactions

[1] In General

A "draft" (also known as a "bill of exchange") is a direction or order from one person to pay a specified sum of money to another person [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979) at 443; People v. Norwood (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 148, 154, 103 Cal. Rptr. 7]. Drafts are commonly used as a means of seeking payment under a letter of credit. To obtain payment, the beneficiary [see § 56.11[2] (definition)] presents the draft, the documents complying with the letter of credit, and the beneficiary's copy of the letter of credit, to the confirming bank. If the documents and draft comply with the terms of the credit, the bank will pay the draft.

"Draft" as used in the UCC--Letters of Credit does not have the same meaning that it has in Division 3 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 11); see Com. Code § 3101 et seq. (negotiable instruments)]. For example, a document may be a draft under the UCC--Letters of Credit, even though it does not meet the more restrictive language of Division 3 [see Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6), 3104(a) (excluding from definition of negotiable instrument drafts or orders and notes or promises that are not payable to bearer to order)] and, therefore, does not qualify as a draft under Com. Code § 3104(e) [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 11)].

For a bill of exchange that can be drafted as a sight or time bill, see § 56.220.

[2] Sight Draft

A sight draft is a draft that is payable on demand, at sight, or on presentation [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), at 443]. The sight draft and accompanying documents are usually presented for payment before the buyer has received the goods. This works to the seller's advantage, since payment can be had under the credit as soon as the seller presents documents evidencing shipment to the confirming bank, and the seller does not have to wait until the buyer has had time to accept the goods.

Sight drafts generally must be paid by the close of business on the day of presentment [see Com. Code § 3502(a); see also Com. Code § 5108(e) (explicit deference to standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit); Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)]. However, an issuer to which a document (a draft or other demand for payment) [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(6) (definition)] is presented under a letter of credit may, without dishonor [Com. Code § 5102(a)(5) (dishonor defined as failure timely to honor or take interim action, such as to accept draft, that may be required by letter of credit)] of the draft, demand, or letter of credit, defer honor [Com. Code § 5102(a)(8) (definition); § 56.50[2]] for a "reasonable time," not exceeding seven business days after the issuer's receipt of documents [Com. Code § 5108(b)(1); see § 56.50[3]]. The issuer may further defer honor if the letter of credit so provides [Com. Code § 5108(b)(2); see Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)].

[3] Time Draft

A time draft is a draft that is payable a specified number of days after presentation [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), at 443; see also Com. Code § 3108(b)]. Under a letter of credit, a time draft is a draft that the buyer (or issuer) accepts by signing and thereby promising to pay on maturity at some future date.

The purpose of a time draft is to delay payment to the seller until the goods have arrived. This gives the buyer time to determine that the goods conform to the contract and to resell the goods, providing funds to reimburse the issuing bank. A time draft must first be presented to the drawee to set the maturity date, unless the date is otherwise stated in the draft. The draft is presented for payment when the time specified in the draft has expired [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 1, Introduction to Commercial and Standby Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

For letters of credit relating to import or domestic goods transactions, commercial banks are restricted to accepting drafts or bills of exchange having not more than six months' sight to run [Fin. Code § 1224].

[4] Documentary Draft

A "documentary draft" is a draft [see [1], above ("draft" defined)] to be presented for acceptance or payment if specified documents, certain securities [see Com. Code § 8102], or other certificates or statements are to be received by the drawee or other payor before acceptance or payment of the draft [Com. Code § 4104(a)(6)]. Any draft under a letter of credit presented with accompanying documents is a documentary draft.

CHAPTER 56 LETTERS OF CREDIT AND ELECTRONIC FUND TRANSFERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Letters of Credit
1. Nature, Characteristics, and Governing Law

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.15

§ 56.15 Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (UCP)

[1] Nature

The Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (UCP) is a private international agreement of banking practices that is followed by banks in most countries that engage in international commerce. The UCP is not a codification of law, but rather a compilation of current commercial customs and practices. Most letters of credit incorporate the UCP by reference, and most applications for letters of credit state that the parties agree to be bound by the terms of the UCP.

The UCP is published by the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) and is revised periodically. The current version of the UCP became effective on January 1, 1994. Copies of the UCP are available from the ICC. For the full text of the most recent revision of the UCP, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Appendix C (Matthew Bender).

[2] Scope

The application of the UCP is not as broad as that of the UCC Letters of Credit [see § 56.10[3]]. First, the UCP applies only to documentary letters of credit [UCP art. 1; see § 56.13[2]]. It does not apply to "clean" letters of credit [see § 56.13[1]]. Second, the UCP relates only to banking practice and customs, and therefore does not apply to credits issued by persons other than banks. The UCC Letters of Credit applies to a wider variety of letters of credit, including clean letters of credit, regardless of the nature of the issuer [see § 56.10[3]].

In addition, because the UCP is not the binding law of any jurisdiction, it applies only by agreement. In practice, virtually all commercial letters of credit explicitly state that they incorporate and are governed by the UCP.

[3] Incorporation in Letter of Credit

An application for a commercial letter of credit, and the letter of credit itself, usually state that the letter of credit will be subject to, and the parties to the credit will be governed by, the UCP. When a letter of credit contains this provision, the parties should look to the UCP for guidance, and a court will interpret the letter of credit under the provisions of the UCP if a dispute arises between them.

[4] Relationship Between UCC and UCP

[a] In California

Because the UCC--Letters of Credit is quite short and has no rules on many issues affecting liability in letters of credit transactions, law beyond the UCC--Letters of Credit will often determine rights and liabilities in letter of credit transactions [Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2); see § 56.10 [4]]. Even within letter of credit law, the UCC--Letters of Credit is far from comprehensive, dealing only with "certain" rights of the parties [Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2)]. Particularly with respect to the issuer's standards of performance [see Com. Code § 5108(e) (explicit deference to standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit)], parties and courts routinely turn to customs and practice such as the UCP [see Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2)]. When the UCP is adopted [see [1], above], but its provisions conflict with the UCC--Letters of Credit, the UCP terms are permissible contractual modifications, except where variation is expressly prohibited [Com. Code § 5103(c); Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 1302(a) (variation of California Commercial Code by agreement); see § 56.30[4]].

Normally, the UCC "should not be considered to conflict with practice except when a rule stated in the UCP... is different from a rule explicitly stated in Article 5" [Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2)]. Thus, if California law applies to a transaction, a provision in a letter of credit stating that the UCP governs the transaction does not prevent application of the California Commercial Code [TMTI v. Empresa Nacional de Comercializacion (9th Cir. 1987) 829 F.2d 949, 954 ; Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 3) ("Where there is no conflict between Article 5 and the relevant provision of the UCP or other practice, both apply.")]. Therefore, parties to a letter of credit should expect that the courts will enforce consistent provisions of the UCP and the California Commercial Code. Parties who do not want to be governed by the nonconflicting provisions of the UCC normally must adopt either the law of a jurisdiction other than a state of the United States or explicitly state the rule that is to govern [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)].

[b] In Other States

In states other than California, a letter of credit is generally governed by the local UCC even though the parties make it subject to the UCP [Wyle v. Bank Melli of Tehran, Iran (N.D. Cal. 1983) 577 F. Supp. 1148, 1164 ; see Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)]. However, other states may treat this situation differently. For example, in New York, the state version of the UCC provides that an agreement in a letter of credit to be governed by the UCP means the UCC does not apply [Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 3); Pubali Bank v. City Nat. Bank (9th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 1340, 1343] .

[5] Governing Law

[a] By Agreement

Letters of credit frequently state which jurisdiction's law will govern the letter of credit. The liability of an issuer, nominated person, or advisor is governed by the law of the jurisdiction chosen either by an agreement in the form of a record signed or otherwise authenticated by the affected parties as provided by statute [see Com. Code § 5104; § 56.30[1]] or by a provision in the letter of credit, confirmation, or other undertaking [Com. Code § 5116(a)]. Although it is possible for the parties to agree otherwise, the law normally chosen by agreement (and that provided in the absence of agreement [see [b], below]) is the substantive law of a particular jurisdiction, not including the choice of law principles of that jurisdiction [Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 1)]. The jurisdiction whose law is chosen need not bear any relation to the transaction [Com. Code § 5116(a)].

[b] By Statute Absent Agreement

In the absence of an agreement [see [a], above], the liability of an issuer, nominated person, or advisor is governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the person is located [Com. Code § 5116(b)]. "The law of the jurisdiction where the person is located" means the substantive law of a particular jurisdiction, not including the choice of law principles of that jurisdiction [Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 1)]. Although the statute does not state a choice of law rule for all of the issuer's possible liability (for its liability as an applicant in a suit by a confirmer, for example [see Com. Code § 5107(a); Com. Code § 5107 (UCC Comment 1); Com. Code § 5108(i)]), disputes arising from different legal obligations to honor have not been frequent because the UCP is routinely incorporated in international letters of credit. Moreover, since the UCC--Letters of Credit provides that the issuer must observe the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(e)], these problems should be further minimized, at least to the extent that the same practice continues to be widely followed [see Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 2)].

The person is considered to "located" at the address indicated in the person's undertaking. If more than one address is indicated, the person is located at the address from which the person's undertaking is issued. For purposes of jurisdiction and choice of law (but not enforcement of judgments), all branches of a bank are considered separate jurisdictional entities, and a bank is located where its relevant branch is located [Com. Code § 5116].

[c] When UCC--Letters of Credit Conflicts With UCP

When the letter of credit, confirmation or other undertaking [see Com. Code § 5104] expressly makes the liability of an issuer, nominated person, or advisor subject to any rules of custom and practice, such as the UCP, and those rules conflict with the UCC--Letters of Credit [see Com. Code § 5116(a), (b); [a], [b], above], the rules of custom and practice will govern, except to the extent that they conflict with the non-variable provisions contained in Com. Code § 5104(c) [Com. Code § 5116(c); see § 56.30[4]].

[6] Forum

Subject to existing law governing subject matter jurisdiction, the forum for settling disputes arising out of a letter of credit transaction may be chosen in the manner and with the binding effect that governing law may be chosen [Com. Code § 5116(e); Com. Code § 5116 (UCC Comment 5); see [5][a], above].

[7] Contents

The UCP is divided into seven major lettered parts by general topic, which are further divided into 49 articles.

Part A sets forth general rules governing letter of credit transactions and specifies which letters of credit are governed by the UCP. It also includes definitions of types of letters of credit and the important parties and documents.

Part B covers revocable and irrevocable credits and the rights and obligations of the parties to these transactions. In addition, this part discusses the notification process, including methods of issuing, advising, confirming, and amending credits. It also covers the methods of payment under a letter of credit.

Part C relates to liabilities and responsibilities of the parties, including duties in payment and in the acceptance, handling, and inspection of documents. This part also sets out limitations of liability concerning genuineness of documents, delays in transit, interruptions of business, and the actions of other banks. Part C also includes provisions pertaining to indemnity and reimbursement.

Part D sets forth guidelines for documents. This part contains provisions relating to language that should be used in credits, requirements regarding originals and copies, and dates of issuance. Specific provisions cover transport documents, insurance documents, commercial invoices, and other documents.

Part E contains miscellaneous provisions, including definitions relating to dates, amounts, and shipment. It also includes provisions concerning partial drawings and shipments, expirations dates, issuance dates, and presentation.

Part F deals with transferable credits. It defines a transferable credit and sets forth the conditions under which a credit can be transferred. This part also covers the rights and obligations of the banks and beneficiaries involved in a transfer.

Part G covers assignment of proceeds. It explains a beneficiary's right to assignment of proceeds and distinguishes this type of assignment from an assignment of the beneficiary's right to perform under the credit.

For the full text of the most recent revision of the UCP, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Appendix C (Matthew Bender).

§ 56.16 Unlawful Restraints of Trade

[1] Prohibitions Against Discrimination

In California, letters of credit are subject to special rules designed to prevent discrimination on the basis of any characteristic listed in Civ. Code § 51(b) or defined in Civ. Code § 51(e) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721(a); see Civ. Code § 51(b) ("All persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal, and no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation..."). For example, it is an unlawful restraint of trade to grant or accept a letter of credit or other document that evidences the transfer of funds or credit, if the letter of credit or other document requires a person to discriminate (or to certify that he or she has discriminated) on that basis [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(a)(1)]. It also is an unlawful restraint of trade to refuse to grant or accept a letter of credit or other document evidencing the transfer of funds or credit on the ground that the letter or document does not contain a provision requiring such discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(a)(2)].

The California rules prohibiting discrimination in letter of credit transactions apply to partnerships, associations, corporations, and governmental agencies as well as to individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(d)]. However, they do not apply to a letter of credit that contains a provision pertaining to a labor dispute or an unfair labor practice if the letter of credit does not otherwise discriminate (or require discrimination) on a prohibited basis [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.5(b)]. Further, the California rules generally do not generally when any federal law concerning transactions in interstate and foreign commerce is applicable [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.6; 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 2401-2420; see also [2], below].

[2] Prohibitions Against Participating in Unsanctioned Boycott

Under the federal Export Administration Act regulations [see 15 C.F.R. §§ 769.1-769.8; see also 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 2401-2420 (Export Administration Act)], it is unlawful to engage in certain discriminatory trade practices. These include [15 C.F.R. § 769.2(a)-(e)]:

- Refusing to do business with a country by participating in an unsanctioned international trade boycott;

- Discriminating against a person on an improper basis;
- Giving out certain private information about a person;
- Giving out information about business relationships with boycotted countries or blacklisted people;
and
- Giving out private information about a person's associations with certain groups.

A letter of credit that contains any of these prohibited provisions may not be paid, honored, confirmed, or otherwise implemented by a United States person [15 C.F.R. § 769.2(f)(1)]. The term "United States person" means any person who is a United States resident or national, and includes individuals, corporations, partnerships, local, state, and federal agencies, and certain other entities [see 15 C.F.R. § 769.1(b)]. These prohibitions apply only when the beneficiary is a United States person [15 C.F.R. § 769.2(f)(6)].

§ 56.30 Requirements for Valid Letter of Credit

[1] Form

A letter of credit or a confirmation, advice, transfer, amendment, or cancellation of a letter of credit may be issued in any form that [Com. Code § 5104]:

- Is a record [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(14) (record defined as information inscribed on tangible medium, or stored in electronic or other medium, and retrievable in perceivable form)], and
- Is authenticated either by a signature or in accordance with the parties' agreement or the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit. Authentication is authentication only of the identity of the issuer, confirmer, or advisor [Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 1)].

Many letters of credit are issued by electronic means. For example, SWIFT (Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunications) is currently used to transit letters of credit from issuing to advising banks [see Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 1); UCP art. 1 (Comments)]. By declining to establish any particular medium in which the letter of credit must be established or communicated, the UCC--Letters of Credit recognizes the use (and development) of different forms of electronic media [see Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 3)].

Neither the form requirements [see Com. Code § 5104] nor the definition of a letter of credit [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(10); § 56.10[1]] requires the inclusion of all the terms that are normally contained in a letter of credit. A letter of credit typically specifies the amount available, the expiration date [see § 56.31[2]], the place where presentation should be made, and the documents that must be presented to entitle a person to honor [see § 56.50]. However, undertakings that have the formalities required by Com. Code § 5104 and meet the conditions specified in the statutory definition of letter of credit [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(10) (definition); § 56.10[1]] will be recognized as letters of credit even though they omit one or more of the items usually contained in a letter of credit [Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 1)].

[2] Completeness

A letter of credit should be complete and self-contained. Because of the independent nature of the credit engagement [see Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 1)], an issuer must honor a presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) (presentation defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor)] that, according to the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit, appears on its face strictly to comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud); see also Com. Code 5108(e) (standard practice)]. Therefore, the parties should be able to determine from the letter of credit itself, without reference to the underlying contract, what documents and actions are necessary to satisfy the credit.

[3] Statement as to Revocability

While a letter of credit may be either revocable or irrevocable [see Com. Code § 5106(a); see also § 56.13[3],[4]], a credit is revocable only if it so provides [Com. Code § 5016(a); see Com. Code § 2325(3) (unless otherwise agreed, "letter of credit" in contract for sale means irrevocable credit)]. This presumption of irrevocability of unlabeled letters of credit adopts the position taken by several courts [see Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 1, citing cases)], and is the position of the current UCP [see UCP art. 6].

[4] Non-variable Provisions

With limited exceptions, the effect of the UCC--Letters of Credit may be varied by agreement or by a provision stated or incorporated by reference in an undertaking [Com. Code § 5103(c); see Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)]. However, although the applicant and the issuer may agree to almost any provisions establishing the obligations of the issuer to the applicant [see Com. Code § 5103(c), Com. Code § 5103 (UCC Comment 2); Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)], the issuer may not achieve this result by a nonnegotiated disclaimer or limitation of remedy in the letter of credit or other agreement [Com. Code § 5103(c)].

The nonvariable terms of the UCC include [Com. Code § 5103(c); see former Com. Code § 5114(d), repealed by Stats. 1996, ch. 497 § 7]:

- Com. Code § 5102(a)(9), (10) ("issuer" and "letter of credit" defined [see §§ 56.10[1], 56.11[3]]).
- Com. Code § 5103 (scope and changes to effect of division; rights and obligations of issuer [see §§ 56.10 [3], 56.50 [1]-[6]]).
- Com. Code § 5106(d) (duration of letter of credit) [see § 56.31 [2]].
- Com. Code § 1302(b) (limitations of obligations of good faith, diligence, reasonableness, and care prescribed by California Commercial Code) [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(7) (good faith defined as honesty in fact in conduct or transaction concerned)].
- Com. Code § 5117(d) (limitations on rights of subrogation) [see § 56.45].

[5] Consideration Not Required

Consideration is not required to issue, amend, transfer, or cancel a letter of credit, advice, or confirmation [Com. Code § 5105].

§ 56.31 Time of Issuance and Duration

[1] Time of Issuance

A letter of credit is issued and becomes enforceable against the issuer when the issuer sends or otherwise transmits it to the prospective advisor or to the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5106(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(36) ("send" defined)]. After a letter of credit is issued, the rights and obligations of the beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, and issuer are not affected by any amendment or cancellation to which that person has not consented, except to the extent that the credit provides that it is revocable or that the issuer may cancel or amend the credit without that consent [Com. Code § 5106(b)].

[2] Date of Expiration

If there is no stated expiration date or other provision determining its duration, a letter of credit expires one year after its stated date of issuance or, if none is stated, one year after the date on which it is issued [Com. Code § 5106(c)]. A letter of credit that states that it is perpetual expires five years after its stated date of issuance, or if none is stated, after the date on which it is issued [Com. Code § 5106(d); see Golden W. Ref. Co. v. Suntrust Bank (9th Cir. 2008) 538 F.3d 1233, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 17573, at *11-*17 (letter of credit is perpetual, in statutory sense, only if it expresses in words that it is perpetual, but it need not use "perpetual" as long as some words in it definitively provide that it will continue in perpetuity; and this requirement is not nullified by automatic-renewal provision in letter of credit); see also Com. Code § 5103(c) (effect of Com. Code § 5106(d) cannot be varied by any agreement or undertaking); Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 4) (revocable letter of credit is not "perpetual")]. Although letters of credit should, and customarily do, specify the date on which the issuer's engagement expires [see § 56.200[2]], failure to specify an expiration date neither invalidates the letter of credit nor diminishes any party's obligation with respect to the credit [see Com. Code § 5104; Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 4)]. After the expiration date, the issuer normally has no obligation to pay [see Com. Code § 5108(a) (issuer's obligations and rights)].

The duration of drafts that are negotiable instruments drawn under the credit may be limited [see Com. Code § 3108; see also Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments]. For letters of credit relating to import or domestic goods transactions, commercial banks are restricted to accepting drafts or bills of exchange having not more than six months' sight to run [Fin. Code § 1224].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.32

§ 56.32 Amendment, Cancellation or Revocation

[1] Irrevocable Letter of Credit

After a letter of credit is issued, the rights and obligations of the beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, and issuer are not affected by any amendment or cancellation to which that person has not consented, except to the extent that the credit provides that it is revocable or that the issuer may cancel or amend the credit without that consent [Com. Code § 5106(b); see Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 2) (recognized transferee beneficiary, but not assignee of proceeds, is protected by Com. Code § 5106(b))]. A letter of credit is issued and becomes enforceable against the issuer when the issuer sends or otherwise transmits it to the prospective advisor or to the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5106(a); see Com. Code § 1201(b)(36) ("send" defined)]. For an application to amend a letter of credit, see § 56.210.

[2] Revocable Letter of Credit

A revocable credit may be canceled or amended by the issuer at any time without prior notice to or consent from the applicant or beneficiary [see § 56.32[2]]. However, this right to cancel or amend does not free the issuer from a duty to reimburse a nominated person [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (definition)] who has honored [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(8) (definition)] or undertaken a deferred obligation before receiving notice of the cancellation or amendment [Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 3); § 56.50[2]]. For an application to amend a letter of credit, see § 56.210.

[3] Requirements for Amendment or Cancellation

An amendment or cancellation of the terms of a credit, confirmation, or advice may be issued in any form that is a record and is authenticated either by a signature or in accordance with the agreement of the parties or the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5104]. Authentication in this case is authentication only of the identity of the issuer, confirmer, or advisor [Com. Code § 5104 (UCC Comment 1)]. No consideration is necessary to amend the terms of or cancel a letter of credit [Com. Code § 5105]. An amendment is sought by completing an application to amend [see § 56.210]. Consent to an amendment may be either express or implied. For example, a beneficiary that tenders documents for honor that conform to an amended letter of credit, but not to the original letter, has probably consented to the amendment. Similarly, an applicant who has procured the issuance of a transferable letter of credit has consented to its transfer and to performance under the letter of credit by a person to whom the beneficiary's rights have been duly transferred [Com. Code § 5106 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 2)].

§ 56.40 Transferable Letters of Credit

A transferable letter of credit allows the beneficiary to ask a bank paying under the credit to make payment to a party other than the beneficiary [see Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1); UCP art. 48]. This right to demand payment under a transferable letter of credit belongs to the beneficiary or a transferee designated by the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5112; see UCP art. 48 (generally prohibiting more than one transfer unless credit provides otherwise)]. For a transfer to be effective, the beneficiary must obtain the consent of the applicant [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)]. The issuance of a transferable letter of credit with the concurrence of the applicant is considered to be an agreement by the issuer and the applicant to permit a beneficiary to transfer its right to demand payment under the letter of credit and to permit a nominated person [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (definition)] carry out that transfer without further notice to either of them [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1)]. The right to demand payment is distinct from the right to the proceeds of the credit, which may be assigned by the beneficiary without the consent of the applicant [see Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 2); McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender); see also § 56.42].

In a transfer, the beneficiary transfers the rights and duties under the credit to someone else. The transferee is usually the beneficiary's supplier, who steps into the shoes of the beneficiary. The transferee ships the goods and presents the documents to the bank for payment, essentially replacing the beneficiary. For partial transfer of credit, see § 56.211.

§ 56.41 "Transfers" and "Assignments"

Although the words "transfer" and "assignment" are synonymous for most legal purposes [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979) at 109], they have acquired different connotations in letter of credit transactions. Both the Uniform Commercial Code and the UCP use the term "transfer" to refer to the act by which the right to demand payment under a letter of credit is conveyed from one party (generally the beneficiary) to another (typically a supplier of the beneficiary) [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1); UCP art. 48]. In contrast, the Commercial Code and the UCP use the term "assignment" to refer to the act by which the right to receive the proceeds of a letter of credit is conveyed from the beneficiary to another party [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1); UCP art. 49]. Accordingly, this chapter uses the word "transfer" to refer to the conveyance of the right to draw [see § 56.42] and the word "assignment" to refer to the conveyance of the right to receive the proceeds [see § 56.43].

§ 56.42 Transfer of Right to Demand Payment

Except as otherwise provided by statute [see Com. Code § 5113 (rights and obligations of successor of beneficiary); § 56.44], unless a letter of credit states that it is transferable, the right of a beneficiary to draw or otherwise demand performance under a letter of credit may not be transferred [Com. Code § 5112(a)]. Moreover, even if a letter of credit provides that it is transferable, the issuer may refuse to recognize or carry out a transfer if [Com. Code § 5112(b)]:

- The transfer would violate applicable law; or
- The transferor or transferee has failed to comply with any requirement stated in the letter of credit or any other requirement relating to transfer imposed by the issuer which is within the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(e)] or is otherwise reasonable under the circumstances.

The power of the issuer to establish "requirements" under the UCC--Letters of Credit does not include the right absolutely to refuse to recognize transfers under a transferable letter of credit [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1)]. By contrast, the UCP provides the beneficiary with a "right of request," rather than a "right to transfer," giving the transferring bank the right to accept or decline the beneficiary's request [see UCP, art. 49(c)]. An issuer who wishes to retain the right to deny all transfers should not issue transferable letters of credit or should incorporate the UCP [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1)].

The right to demand payment under a letter of credit is commonly referred to as the "right to draw" [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)]. The right to demand payment under a letter of credit is distinct from the right to receive the proceeds of the credit after all of the conditions for payment have been satisfied [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender); see also § 56.43].

The right to demand payment under a letter of credit is often transferred to the beneficiary's suppliers. Assume, for example, that the beneficiary is an exporter of manufactured goods and that the applicant is a foreign buyer. Assume further that the goods have not yet been manufactured. In this situation, the beneficiary needs to finance the purchase of materials with which to complete manufacture and thus wishes to transfer the right to demand payment under the credit to a supplier or suppliers.

There are various reasons why an applicant might not want the right to demand payment under the credit to be transferable. For example, the applicant may repose special confidence in the beneficiary and not want other parties who are totally unknown to the applicant to exercise the beneficiary's rights. In some cases, the applicant may have a set-off against the beneficiary that would be rendered valueless if the beneficiary permitted some other person to demand payment under the credit. Or the applicant may simply wish to avoid unnecessarily complicating the letter of credit transaction [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender); see also Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 2)].

When the right to demand payment has been validly transferred, the person to whom the right has been transferred is referred to as the "transferee" [Com. Code § 5112(b)] or the "second beneficiary" [UCP art. 48(a)].

§ 56.43 Assignment of Right to Receive Proceeds

The beneficiary may assign any proceeds to which it may be, or may become, entitled under the letter of credit, in accordance with the provisions of the applicable law, even if the letter of credit is not stated to be transferable [UCP, art. 49]. However, the beneficiary's right to perform under the credit (in contrast to its rights to the proceeds due under the credit) [see § 56.42] may not be assigned to a third party unless the letter of credit is issued in a transferable form [UCP, art. 49].

Rules relating to assignment of proceeds in the UCC--Letters of Credit were enacted by Stats. 1996, ch. 176, § 7, as Com. Code § 5114. However, the rules related to assignment ultimately were not included in Article 5.

§ 56.44 Transfers by Operation of Law

[1] Successor of Beneficiary Defined

A "successor of beneficiary" is a person who succeeds to substantially all of the rights of a beneficiary by operation of law [Com. Code § 5102(a)(15)]. It includes a corporation with or into which the beneficiary has merged or consolidated (even though the merger occurs partly by operation of law and partly by the voluntary action of the parties [see Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 10)]), an administrator, executor, personal representative, trustee in bankruptcy, debtor in possession, liquidator, and receiver [Com. Code § 5102(a)(15)]. The definition excludes certain transfers in which no part of the transfer is by operation of law, such as the sale of assets by one company to another [Com. Code § 5102 (UCC Comment 10)].

[2] Rights of Successor Beneficiary

A successor of a beneficiary may consent to amendments, sign and present documents, and receive payment or other items of value either in the name of the beneficiary, without disclosing its status as successor [Com. Code § 5113(a)], or in its own name as the disclosed successor of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5113(b)]. Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 5113(e), an issuer must recognize a disclosed successor of a beneficiary as beneficiary in full substitution for its predecessor on compliance with the requirements for recognition by an issuer of a transfer of drawing rights (that is, the right to demand payment under the credit) by operation of law under the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(e); § 56.50[5]], or in the absence of any standard practice, by compliance with other reasonable procedures sufficient to protect the issuer [Com. Code § 5113(b)].

An issuer is not obliged to determine whether a purported successor is a successor of the beneficiary or whether the signature of a purported successor is genuine or authorized [Com. Code § 5113(c)]. Further, an issuer that has honored a purported successor's apparently complying presentation, under which the purported successor does not disclose its status as successor [see Com. Code § 5113(a)], has the same rights and obligations specified in Com. Code § 5108(i) [see § 56.50[4]], even if the purported successor is not the successor of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5113(d)].

Documents signed in the name of a beneficiary or of a disclosed successor of a beneficiary by a person who is neither the beneficiary nor the successor of the beneficiary are forged documents for the purposes of Com. Code § 5109 (forgery and material fraud) [Com. Code § 5113(d); see § 56.50[2][c]].

A beneficiary whose name is changed after the issuance of a letter of credit has the same rights and obligations as a successor of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5113(f)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

A. Letters of Credit

3. Third Parties: Transfer, Assignment, and Subrogation

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.45

§ 56.45 Subrogation

By itself, the UCC--Letters of Credit does not grant any right of subrogation. It grants only the right that would exist if the person seeking subrogation were a "secondary obligor." The term "secondary obligor" refers to a surety, guarantor, or other person against whom or whose property an obligee has recourse with respect to the obligations of a third party [Com. Code § 5117 (UCC Comment 1); see Restatement (Third) of Surety and Guaranty § 1 (1996)]. Accordingly, an issuer that honors a beneficiary's presentation is subrogated to the rights of (1) the beneficiary to the same extent as if the issuer were a secondary obligor of the underlying transaction owed to the beneficiary, and (2) the applicant to the same extent as if the issuer were a secondary obligor of the underlying transaction owed to the applicant [Com. Code § 5117(a)].

An applicant that reimburses an issuer is subrogated to the rights of the issuer against any beneficiary, presenter, or nominated person to the same extent as if the applicant were the secondary obligor of the obligations owed to the issuer and has the issuer's rights of subrogation, as described above [Com. Code § 5117(b); see Com. Code § 5117(a) (issuer's right of subrogation)].

A nominated person who pays or gives value against a draft or demand presented under a letter of credit is subrogated to the rights of [Com. Code § 5117(b)]:

- The issuer against the applicant to the same extent as if the nominated person were a secondary obligor of the obligation owed to the issuer by the applicant;
- The beneficiary to the same extent as if the nominated person were a secondary obligor of the underlying obligation owed to the beneficiary; and
- The applicant to the same extent as if the nominated person were secondary obligor of the underlying obligation owed to the applicant.

Notwithstanding any agreement or term to the contrary, only a person who has completed its performance in a letter of credit transaction can have a right of subrogation [Com. Code § 5117 (UCC Comment 2)]. Thus, the rights of subrogation of an issuer that honors a beneficiary's presentation and or of an applicant that reimburses an issuer [see Com. Code § 5117(a), (b)] do not arise until the issuer honors the letter of credit or otherwise pays. Similarly, the rights of a nominated person who pays or gives value against a draft or demand do not arise until that person pays or gives value [Com. Code § 5117(d); see Com. Code § 5117(c)]. Until these requirements are met, the issuer, nominated person, and the applicant do not derive, under the UCC--Letters of Credit, present or prospective rights forming the basis for a claim, defense, or excuse [Com. Code § 5117(d)]. This restriction is designed to preserve the independence of the letter of credit obligation [see § 56.12 [3]] and to insure that subrogation is not used as an offensive weapon [Com. Code § 5117 (UCC Comment 2); see Hamada v. Far East National Bank (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 645, 651-653 (discussing criteria for application of equitable subrogation doctrine to issuer of letter of credit)].

The right of subrogation merely empowers the person who paid on a letter of credit to force reimbursement from a person, necessarily a party to the underlying transaction, who was primarily liable for the debt that the letter of credit secured. There is no derivative right to force contribution from another person, such as a guarantor, who was secondarily liable for that debt but never was a primary debtor [Morgan Creek Residential v. Kemp (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 675, 695, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 232] .

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.50

§ 56.50 Presentation

[1] Compliance With Terms of Credit

To obtain payment under a letter of credit, the beneficiary or other presenter must satisfy the conditions specified in the credit, usually by presenting complying documents to the issuing or confirming bank [see Com. Code § 5108(a), (b)]. If the presentation appears on its face strictly to comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit, the presenter is entitled to have the documents honored [Com. Code § 5108(a); see [2][a], below].

If the parties do not specifically agree in the letter of credit to require separate presentment to the confirming bank, the beneficiary need only make timely presentment to the issuing bank to be entitled to payment [Northern Trust Co. v. Community Bank (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 227, 229] .

[2] Duty to Honor

[a] In General

With specified exceptions [see Com. Code § 5019 (forgery or material fraud); [c], below], an issuer must honor a presentation that appears on its face to strictly comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit, as determined by the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5108(e) (standard practice); see also [5], [6][b], below]. Except as otherwise provided by the rules for successor beneficiaries [see Com. Code § 5113; § 56.44], or unless otherwise agreed with the applicant, the issuer must dishonor a presentation that does not appear to so comply [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(5) (dishonor defined as failure timely to honor or take interim action, such as to accept draft, that may be required by letter of credit)]. A confirmer that confirms a credit takes on the same obligations as the issuer [see Com. Code § 5107(a)].

The issuer of a letter of credit that is subject to conditions is required to act only when the conditions have been complied with [Banco Nacional de Credito Ejidal S.A. v. Bank of America (N.D. Cal. 1954) 118 F. Supp. 308, 309] .

[b] Presentation by Successor Beneficiary

Honor of a purported successor beneficiary's [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(15) "successor of a beneficiary" defined; § 56.44[1]] apparently complying presentation, under which the purported successor does not disclose its status as successor [see Com. Code § 5113(a)], has the consequences specified in Com. Code § 5108(i) [see § 56.50[4]], even if the purported successor is not the successor of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5113(d)]. However, an issuer whose rights of reimbursement are not covered by Com. Code § 5113(d), or substantially similar law, and any confirmer or nominated person may decline to recognize a presentation by a disclosed successor of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5113(e)].

[c] Forged or Materially Fraudulent Presentation

If a presentation is made that appears strictly on its face to comply with the terms of the letter of credit, but a required document is forged or materially fraudulent, or honor of the presentation would facilitate a material fraud by the beneficiary on the issuer or the applicant, the issuer must honor the presentation if honor is demanded by [Com. Code § 5109(a)(1)]:

- A nominated person [Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (definition)] who has given value [Com. Code § 3409 (definition)] in good faith [Com. Code § 5102(a)(7) (definition)] and without notice of forgery or material fraud;
- A confirmer [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4) (definition); § 56.11[5]] who has honored its confirmation in good faith;
- A holder in due course [Com. Code § 3302 (definition)] of a draft drawn under a letter of credit which was taken after acceptance by the issuer or nominated person; or
- An assignee of the issuer or nominated person's deferred obligation that was taken for value and without notice of forgery or material fraud after the obligation was incurred by the issuer or nominated person.

The issuer, acting in good faith, may honor or dishonor the presentation in any other case [Com. Code § 5109(a)(2)]. Thus, except when the issuer must honor a presentation as specified above [see Com. Code § 5109(a)(1)], the issuer has two choices: it may honor in the face of the applicant's claim of fraud or it may dishonor by showing material fraud or forgery [see Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 2)]. The fraud must be "material" [Com. Code § 5109(a); see Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 1)] and must be found either in the documents or must have been committed by the beneficiary on the issuer or applicant [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 1), citing with approval Cromwell v. Commerce & Energy Bank (La. 1985) 464 So.2d 721, 731-733]. Generally, fraud in a document must be material to its purchaser or must be significant to the participants of the underlying transaction [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 1) (listing examples)]. Material fraud by a beneficiary occurs only when the beneficiary has no colorable right to expect honor and when there is no basis in fact to support its right to honor [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 1), citing with approval Ground Air Transfer, Inc. v. Westates Airlines, Inc. (1st Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 1269, 1272-1273 (listing cases)].

In practice, because issuers may be liable for wrongful dishonor [see § 56.52] if they are unable to prove forgery or material fraud, presumably most issuers will chose to honor despite the applicant's claims of fraud or forgery unless the applicant procures an injunction [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 2); see § 56.52[6]].

[3] Time Allowed for Honor or Rejection

An issuer has a reasonable time after presentation, but not beyond the end of the seventh business day of the issuer after receipt of the documents [Com. Code § 5018(b)]:

- To honor [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(8) ("honor" of letter of credit defined)];
- To accept a draft or incur an obligation, if the letter of credit provides for honor to be completed more than seven business days after presentation;
- To give notice to a presenter of discrepancies in the presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(13) (presenter defined as person making presentation as or on behalf of beneficiary or nominated person); Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) ("presentation" defined)].

The seven day period is not a safe harbor. The time within which the issuer must give notice is the lesser of a reasonable time, or seven business days [DBJJJ, Inc. v. National City Bank (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 530, 535, 542, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904] . What constitutes a "reasonable time" for examination of documents is determined by reference to the behavior of those in the business of examining documents, mostly banks [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)]. However (absent agreement to the contrary), neither local customs nor industry norms trump governing laws or applicable commercial requirements [DBJJJ, Inc. v. National City Bank (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 530, 541-542, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 (bank could not argue that industry norms governed its conduct when those practices were inconsistent with terms of the UCP to which letters of credit were expressly subject)]. To give notice within a reasonable time, the issuer normally must give notice without delay after the examining party makes its decision [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 4); see Esso Petroleum Canada, Div. of Imperial Oil, Ltd. v. Security Pacific Bank (D. Or. 1989) 710 F. Supp. 275, 280-281 ; Datapoint Corp v. M & I Bank (W.D. Wis. 1987) 665 F. Supp. 722, 726-727] . Failure of the issuer to act within the prescribed time period constitutes dishonor [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2)]. The issuer's time for honor or giving notice of dishonor, however, may be extended or shortened by a term in the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 5106 (time for issuer's performance may be otherwise modified or waived); § 56.50[3]].

An issuer generally is precluded from asserting any discrepancy as a basis for dishonor if timely notice is not given or if the discrepancy is not stated in a notice that is timely given [Com. Code § 5108(c); DBJJJ, Inc. v. National City Bank (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 530, 546, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 ; see Golden W. Ref. Co. v. Suntrust Bank (9th Cir. 2008) 538 F.3d 1233, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 17573, at *20-*22 ("discrepancy" in Com. Code § 5108(c) refers to "discrepancies in the presentation," mentioned in Com. Code § 5108(b)(3), which issuer is obliged to state in notice of dishonor; only those discrepancies are waived under subsection (c) if not included in notice of dishonor)]. However, failure to give the required notice, or to mention fraud, forgery, or expiration in the notice, does not preclude the issuer from asserting those elements as a basis for dishonor [Com. Code § 5108(d); see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud)]. For discussion of the remedy for improper dishonor, see § 56.52[1].

[4] Issuer's Obligations and Rights on Honor or Rejection

An issuer that has dishonored a presentation must return the documents or hold them at the disposal of, and send advice to that effect to, the presenter [Com. Code § 5018(h)].

An issuer that has honored a presentation [Com. Code § 5108(i)]:

- Is entitled to be reimbursed by the applicant in immediately available funds not later than the day of its payment of funds;
- Takes the documents free of claims of the beneficiary or presenter;
- Is precluded from asserting a right of recourse under Com. Code §§ 3414 (drawer's obligation) and 3415 (indorser's obligation);

- Is precluded from restitution of money paid or other value given by mistake to the extent the mistake concerns discrepancies in the documents or tender which are apparent on the face of the presentation, except as otherwise provided by Com. Code §§ 5110 (warranties) and 5117 (subrogation) [see §§ 56.50[7], 56.45]; and
- Is discharged to the extent of its performance under the letter of credit, unless the issuer honored a presentation in which a required signature of a beneficiary is forged.

[5] "Standard Practice"

An issuer must observe the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5108(e)]. This standard practice includes [Com. Code § 5108(e) (UCC Comment 8)]:

- International practice set forth in or referenced by the UCP;
- Other practice rules published by associations of financial institutions; and
- Local and regional practice. When there are conflicting practices, the parties should indicate which practice governs their rights [Com. Code § 5108(e) (UCC Comment 8); see § 56.15[5], [6]]. A practice may be overridden by agreement or course of dealing [see Com. Code § 5108(e) (UCC Comment 8); Com. Code § 1303(d), (e)].

Determination of the issuer's observance of the standard practice is a matter of interpretation for the court [Com. Code § 5108(e); see Com. Code § 5108(e) (UCC Comment 1), citing, with approval, American Coleman Co. v. Intrawest Bank of Southglenn (10th Cir. 1989) 887 F.2d 1382, 1387 (grant of summary judgment)]. The court must offer the parties a reasonable opportunity to present evidence of the standard practice [Com. Code § 5108(e)]. However, a bank may not alter the terms of a letter of credit with evidence of a practice contrary to standards specified in the letter of credit [DBJJJ, Inc. v. National City Bank (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 530, 541-542, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 (bank could not prove compliance with industry norms with evidence regarding standards of the U.S. Council on International Banking when those standards were inconsistent with the terms of the UCP, to which the letter of credit was expressly subject)].

[6] Standards for Compliance

[a] In General

There are two standards for determining whether documents comply with the requirements of a letter of credit. The usual standard, and that adopted by the UCC--Letters of Credit, is the strict compliance standard, which requires absolute compliance with the terms of the credit [see [b], below]. However, some jurisdictions apply the substantial compliance standard [see [c], below]. For further discussion of these standards, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender).

[b] Strict Compliance

The standard of strict compliance governs the issuer's obligation to the beneficiary and to the applicant [Com. Code § 5108(a); Com. Code § 5108(a) (UCC Comment 1)]. With specified exceptions [see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud); § 56.50[2][c]], an issuer must honor a presentation that appears on its face to strictly comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit, as determined by the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5108(e) (standard practice); see also §§ 56.50[2], [5]]. Except as otherwise provided by the rules for successor beneficiaries [see Com. Code § 5113; § 56.44], or unless otherwise agreed with the applicant, the issue must dishonor a presentation that does not appear to so comply [Com. Code § 5108(a)].

This standard is intended to free the paying bank from the burden of determining whether the documents that are submitted to it show compliance with the underlying transaction. Under the strict compliance standard, the bank need only compare the documents to the requirements specified in the letter of credit. If the documents and requirements match exactly, the beneficiary has complied with the credit. Strict compliance requires not only that the documents themselves appear on their face to strictly comply, but also that the other terms of the letter of credit (those dealing with the time and place of presentation, for example) are strictly complied with [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)].

The 1997 California enactment of the UCC--Letters of Credit adopted the more widely applied strict compliance standard, rather than the standard that commentators have called "substantial compliance" [see Com. Code § 5108(a); Stats. 1996 ch. 497 § 7; see also [c], below]. Although prior versions of the UCC--Letters of Credit did not specify a standard, it appears from case law that California also applied the strict standard before 1997.

Paramount Export Co. v. Asia Trust Bank, Ltd. [Paramount Export Co. v. Asia Trust Bank, Ltd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 238 Cal. Rptr. 920] is the leading modern case on the prevailing standard in California. In that case, the court said that the doctrine of strict compliance functions to protect the bank that carries the absolute obligation to pay the beneficiary. Adherence to this rule ensures that banks, dealing only in documents, will be able to act quickly, enhancing the letter of credit's fluidity. Literal compliance with the credit therefore is essential so as not to impose an obligation on the bank that it did not undertake, and so as not to jeopardize the bank's right to indemnity from its customer. Documents nearly the same as those required are not good enough [Paramount Export Co. v. Asia Trust Bank, Ltd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1480, 238 Cal. Rptr. 920] . In dictum, the court in Paramount Export also said that if literal compliance is the watchword for letter of credit transactions, then all parties involved must bear the risk that the literal and exacting nature of the transactions may at times operate to their disadvantage [Paramount Export Co. v. Asia Trust Bank, Ltd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1484, 238 Cal. Rptr. 920] .

As used in the UCC--Letters of Credit, strict compliance is not intended to mean "slavish conformity" to a letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)]. By adopting standard practice (that is, "what issuers do") as a way of measuring strict compliance [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5108(e); § 56.50[5]], the statute is intended to require that certain presentations be recognized as compliant, which a layman might regard as discrepant: for example, a draft requests payment on "Letter of Credit No. 86-122-5," and the letter of credit is actually "Letter of Credit No. 86-122-S"; or a letter of credit calls for "drafts Drawn under Bank of Clarksville Letter of Credit Number 105," and a presented draft states that it is "drawn under Bank of Clarksville, Clarksville, Tennessee letter of Credit No. 105" [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)].

Nevertheless, under the strict compliance standard, seemingly trivial variations in descriptions sometimes have resulted in noncompliance and justified refusal to pay drafts or demands. For example, invoices for "white Java granulated sugar No. 24" and "white Java fine sugar No. 24" failed to comply with a credit calling for "white Java refined granulated sugar" and "white Java refined fine granulated sugar" [see Crocker First Nat. Bank v. De Sousa (9th Cir. 1928) 27 F.2d 462, 463] .

An issuer must examine documents with care so as to ascertain that on their face they appear to comply with the terms of the credit [see Com. Code § 5108(b) (issuer's duties to examine documents for discrepancies); § 56.50[1], [2]]. However, in some circumstances, standards may be established between the issuer and the applicant, either by agreement or by custom, that would free the issuer from liability that it might otherwise have [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)]. For example, an applicant might agree that an issuer would have no duty whatsoever to examine documents on presentations below a certain dollar amount. Or, when a transaction depended on the issuer's payment in a very short period of time, the issuer and the applicant might agree to reduce the issuer's responsibility for failure to discover discrepancies [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)].

[c] Substantial Compliance

The doctrine of substantial performance is based in contract law and requires only that a party substantially perform to be entitled to recovery under a contract. This standard may be satisfied by a generally acceptable performance in which the promisee gets practically what the contract called for with minor, easily-remedied, or compensable defects [see Posner v. Grunwald-Marx, Inc. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 169, 186 187, 14 Cal. Rptr. 297, 363 P.2d 313] .

However, Com. Code § 5108 is intended to mandate a strict-compliance approach [see [b], above] rather than a substantial-compliance standard, although strict compliance does not mean slavish conformity to the terms of the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 1)]. For further discussion of a substantial-compliance standard and its application, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 2, Judicial Proceedings and the Law Applicable to Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender).

[7] Warranties of Beneficiary on Transfer and Presentation

If its presentation is honored, the beneficiary warrants to the issuer, to any other person to whom presentation is made, and to the applicant that there is no fraud or forgery, as described in Com. Code § 5109(a) [Com. Code § 5110(a)(1); see Com. Code § 5109(a); [2][c], above]. The beneficiary further warrants to the applicant that the drawing does not violate any agreement between the applicant and the beneficiary or any other agreement intended by them to be augmented by the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5110(a)(2)]. These warranties are in addition to the warranties arising under Com. Code § 3101 (negotiable instruments) [see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments], Com. Code § 4101 (bank deposits and collections) [see California Points & Authorities, Checks and Banks], Com. Code § 7101 (documents of title, including warehouse receipts and bills of lading), and Com. Code § 8101 (investment securities) [see Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] because of the presentation or transfer of documents covered by any of those sections [Com. Code § 5110(b)].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.51

§ 56.51 Excuses for Nonperformance by Beneficiary

[1] In General

The general rule is that to obtain payment under a letter of credit, the beneficiary must strictly comply with all requirements of the credit [see § 56.50[6][b]]. However, there are several instances in which payment may be obtained with less than strict compliance.

[2] Waiver

Generally, a beneficiary will strive for strict compliance with the terms of the letter of credit [see § 56.50[6][b]]. Notwithstanding this, harmless defects that are difficult to remedy and that would prevent strict compliance may arise at the last minute. If the parties choose, they can avoid this obstacle by waiving the defective performance [see, e.g., Lectrodryer v. SeoulBank (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 723, 727-728, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 881 (bank sought and obtained from customer a waiver of "any discrepancies" in documentation relative to letter of credit)]. Waiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right [Wienke v. Smith (1918) 179 Cal. 220, 226, 176 P. 42] .

The waiver may be oral or written, but in either case, documents should be drafted to make clear what performance was waived, that the waiver was made before accepting defective performance, and that the current waiver does not waive the right to demand strict compliance in the future. For a general discussion of waiver, see Ch. 77, Discharge of Obligations .

[3] Estoppel

A person may be estopped to assert a fact or condition if, by reason of the person's own conduct, it would be unjust or injurious to the person's adversary to permit the person to assert the fact or condition [Allen v. Hance (1911) 161 Cal. 189, 196, 118 P. 527 ; see Evid. Code § 623]. Estoppel by conduct is composed of five elements [Wood v. Blaney (1895) 107 Cal. 291, 295, 40 P. 428] :

- There must have been a false representation or a concealment of material fact;
- The representation or concealment must have been made with knowledge of the facts;
- The party to whom it was made must have been ignorant of the truth of the matter;
- The representation or concealment must have been made with the intention that the other party would act on it; and
- The other party must have been induced to act on it.

If the beneficiary of a letter of credit can show that the beneficiary would suffer injustice or injury because of the issuer's representations that no defects existed in the tendered documents, the doctrine of estoppel may apply. Thus, the issuer may be estopped to assert that a defective presentation fails to comply with the credit if the issuer previously represented to the beneficiary that the documents complied with the credit and it has become too late to correct the defects without prejudice to the beneficiary. However, as a general rule, courts should not allow "the sacred cow of equity to trample the tender vines of letter of credit law" [see Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 5); Ground Air Transfer, Inc. v. Westates Airlines, Inc. (1st Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 1269, 1272-1273 (cautioning against expanded that use of injunctions against honor or similar devices as threat to fundamental principle of independence in letter of credit law); see also § 56.52[6]].

§ 56.52 Remedies

[1] Beneficiary's Remedy for Improper Dishonor and Anticipatory Repudiation

If an issuer wrongfully dishonors or repudiates its obligation to pay money under a letter of credit before presentation, the beneficiary [Com. Code § 5102(a)(3) (definition)], successor [Com. Code § 5102(a)(15) (definition)], or nominated person [Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (definition)] presenting on its own behalf may recover from the issuer the amount that is subject to the dishonor or repudiation [Com. Code § 5111(a)]. If the issuer's obligation under the letter of credit is not for the payment of money, the claimant (ordinarily the beneficiary) may obtain specific performance or, at the claimant's election, recover an amount equal to the value of performance from the issuer [Com. Code § 5111(a)]. In either case, the claimant may also recover incidental, but not consequential, damages [Com. Code § 5111(a)].

The claimant is not obliged to take action to avoid damages that might be due from the issuer for improper dishonor [Com. Code § 5111(a)]. This express limitation on the duty of the claimant to limit damages avoids the likelihood that the issuer would dishonor if it could rely on the burden of mitigation falling on the claimant to sell the goods and sue only for the difference between the price of the goods sold and the amount due under the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 1)]. Thus, if the issuer dishonors, it takes the risk that the claimant will let the goods rot or be destroyed. Of course, the claimant may have a duty of mitigation to the applicant arising from the underlying agreement, but the issuer would not have a right to assert that duty by way of defense or setoff [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 1); see Com. Code § 5117(d); see also § 56.45]. If, although not obliged to, the claimant avoids damages, the claimant's recovery from the issuer must be reduced by the amount of damages avoided [Com. Code § 5111(a)]. The issuer has the burden of proving the amount of damages avoided.

Although in the case of repudiation, the claimant is not required to present any document as a condition of suit [see Com. Code § 5111(a)], if the claimant has never obtained documents necessary for a presentation conforming to the letter of credit, the claimant cannot recover for anticipatory repudiation [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 1), citing Decor By Nikkei Int'l, Inc. v. Federal Republic of Nigeria (S.D. N.Y. 1980) 497 F. Supp. 893, 907-908, aff'd, 647 F.2d 300 (2d Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1148 (1982)] .

To the extent of its confirmation, a confirmer [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4) (definition); § 56.11[5]] has the liability of an issuer to a beneficiary [Com. Code § 5102(a)(3) (definition); see § 56.11[2]], successor [Com. Code § 5102(a)(15) (definition)], or nominated person [Com. Code § 5102(a)(11) (definition)] presenting on its own behalf, as discussed above [Com. Code § 5111(c)].

One court affirmed a judgment for unjust enrichment against a bank that refused to honor a prepaid letter of credit but instead allowed it to expire, claiming that the plaintiff did not comply with its terms. Although the bank's customer sent it a discrepancy waiver, the bank still refused to pay the plaintiff under the letter of credit, did not return the funds to the customer, and applied the funds to reduce its exposure on the customer's credit line with the bank. The court found that the bank was unjustly enriched when it retained for itself funds its customer used to purchase the letter of credit for the purpose of paying plaintiff, and the bank should have made those funds available to the customer for payment to the plaintiff when the letter of credit expired [Lectrodryer v. SeoulBank (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 723, 726-728, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 881] .

[2] Applicant's Remedies for Improper Dishonor

If an issuer wrongfully dishonors a draft or demand presented under a letter of credit, or honors a draft or demand in breach of its obligations to the applicant [Com. Code § 5102(a)(2) (definition); see § 56.11[1]], the applicant may recover damages resulting from the breach, including incidental, but not consequential, damages, less any amount saved as a result of the breach [Com. Code § 5111(b)]. What damages "result" from the improper dishonor is a matter for the courts to decide [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 2)]. Note that an issuer found liable to its applicant may have recourse under Com. Code § 5117 by subrogation to the applicant's claim against the beneficiary or other person [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 5117 (subrogation); see also § 56.45].

To the extent of its confirmation, a confirmer [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4) (definition); see § 56.11[5]] has the liability of an issuer to an applicant, as discussed above [Com. Code § 5111(c)].

[3] Remedies for Breach by Advisor or Nominated Person and for Breach by Issuer Other Than By Dishonor or Repudiation

If an advisor [Com. Code § 5102(a)(1); see § 56.11[4]] or nominated person [Com. Code § 5102(a)(11)], other than a confirmer [Com. Code § 5102(a)(4); see § 56.11[5]], breaches an obligation under the UCC--Letters of Credit, the person to whom the obligation is owed may recover damages resulting from the breach, including incidental, but not consequential, damages, less any amount saved as a result of the breach [Com. Code § 5111(c)]. This rule also applies to an issuer who breaches an obligation other than by wrongfully dishonoring or repudiating a draft or demand presented under a letter of credit (for example, by breaking its obligation as an advisor to advise the credit) or by honoring a draft or demand in breach of its obligation to the applicant [Com. Code § 5111(c); see Com. Code § 5111(a), (b); see also [1], [2], above]. To the extent of the confirmation, a confirmer has the liability of an issuer, as specified in Com. Code § 5111(c) [Com. Code § 5111(c)].

What damages "result" from the improper dishonor is a matter for the courts to decide [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 2)].

[4] Issuer Entitled to Repayment

An issuer is entitled to recover from the applicant payments made under an irrevocable letter of credit when the letter is presented and paid in literal compliance with its terms, despite the fact that conditions in the underlying transaction may not have been fulfilled [Lumbermans Acceptance Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 175, 177 178, 150 Cal. Rptr. 69 ; see Com. Code § 5103(d); see also § 56.12[3]]. This remedy is also available to a confirming bank to the extent of its confirmation [see Com. Code § 5107(a)].

[5] Interest; Expenses of Litigation; Liquidated Damages

An issuer, nominated person, or advisor who is found liable under Com. Code § 5111(a)-(c) [see [2], [3], above] must pay interest on the amount owed from the date of wrongful dishonor or other appropriate date [Com. Code § 5111(d)]. The statute does not specify a rate of interest; it leaves that determination to the court, which normally will use the rate which typically applies in that court when interest is imposed by law [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 5)].

The court must award attorneys' fees and other expenses of litigation to the prevailing party in an action brought under this article [Com. Code § 5111(e)]. The court has discretion to determine which is the prevailing party. However, neither an issuer nor a confirmer should be treated as the "losing party," for purposes of awarding fees and expenses when an injunction is granted to the applicant over the objections of an issuer or confirmer [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 6)]. "Expenses of litigation" is intended to be broader than costs. For example, expenses of litigation would include travel expenses of witnesses, fees for expert witnesses, and expenses associated with taking depositions [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 6)].

Damages that would otherwise be payable by a party for breach of an obligation under this article may be liquidated by agreement or undertaking, but only in an amount or by a formula that is reasonable in light of the harm anticipated [Com. Code § 5111(f)]. The "harm anticipated" must be anticipated at the time of execution of the agreement or the issuance of the undertaking that includes the liquidated damage clause [Com. Code § 5111 (UCC Comment 7)].

[6] Suit for Breach of Warranties

The damages for breach of warranty under letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5110; see also § 56.50[7]] are not specified in Com. Code § 5111. Because the aggrieved party is suing on the warranties made by the beneficiaries, the suit is on the credit itself, and not on the underlying transaction [Pubali Bank v. City Nat. Bank (9th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 1340, 1343] . However, courts may find damage analogies in Com. Code § 2714 (buyer's damage for reach with regard to accepted goods) [see Com. Code § 5110 (UCC Comment 3); see also Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under the Commercial Code].

[7] Injunctive Relief

[a] Against Issuer In Case of Forgery or Material Fraud

A court may enjoin the issuer from honoring a presentation (or grant similar relief against an issuer) when an applicant claims forgery or material fraud only if the court finds that [Com. Code § 5109(b); e.g., Hendricks v. Bank of Am. (9th Cir. 2005) 408 F.3d 1127, 1139-1142 (court properly issued injunction to prevent issuer from honoring beneficiary's request to draw on letter of credit, in order to prevent material fraud against plaintiff, who was liable on letter of credit)]:

- The relief is not prohibited under the law applicable to an accepted draft or deferred obligation incurred by the issuer;
- A beneficiary, issuer, or nominated person who may be adversely affected is adequately protected against loss that it may suffer because relief is granted;
- All of the conditions that entitle a person to relief under the law of California are met; and
- On the basis of the information submitted to the court, the applicant is more likely than not to succeed under its claim of forgery or material fraud and the person demanding honor does not qualify for protection under Com. Code § 5109(a)(1) [see § 56.50[2][c]].

The standard for injunctive relief against an issuer is high, and the burden remains on the applicant to show, by evidence, and not by mere allegation, that this type of relief is warranted [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 4)].

Although the statute deals primarily with injunctions, against honor, it also cautions against granting "similar relief" [see Com. Code § 5019(b)]; and the same principles apply when the applicant (or issuer) attempts to achieve the same legal outcome by injunction against presentation [see Ground Air Transfer, Inc. v. Westates Airlines, Inc. (1st Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 1269, 1272 ; see also [b], below], interpleader, declaratory judgment, or attachment [Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 5) (cautioning that expanded use of any of these devices could threaten independence principle)].

[b] Against Beneficiary

A court may also issue an injunction against a beneficiary to enjoin the presentation of documents in proper circumstances, such as when a beneficiary fails to comply with conditions or warranties [see Ground Air Transfer, Inc. v. Westates Airlines, Inc. (1st Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 1269, 1272 ; Mitsui Manufacturers Bank v. Texas Commerce Bank-Fort Worth (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1058-1059, 206 Cal. Rptr. 218 ; Steinmeyer v. Warner Cons. Corp. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 515, 518, 116 Cal. Rptr. 57] .

[8] Real Estate Transactions

A letter of credit is not enforceable by any party to the credit in a loan transaction in which all of the following circumstances exist [Code Civ. Proc. § 580.7(b)]:

- The customer is a natural person;
- The letter of credit is issued to the beneficiary to avoid a default of the existing loan; and
- The existing loan is secured by a purchase money deed of trust or purchase money mortgage on specified types of real property.

With respect to an obligation that is secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real property or an estate for years in real property, and that is also supported by a letter of credit, neither the presentment, receipt of payment, or enforcement of a draft or demand for payment under the letter of credit by the beneficiary, nor the honor or payment of, or the demand for reimbursement or enforcement of any reimbursement obligation relating to, the letter of credit by the issuer constitutes any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 580.5(b)]:

- An action within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a);
- A money judgment for a deficiency or a deficiency judgment within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, or 726(b) or its functional equivalent; or
- A violation of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, or 726.

This is the case whether any of these actions was done either before or after the judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure of the mortgage or deed of trust or conveyance in lieu of foreclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 580.5(b)].

The 1994 legislative changes to Code Civ. Proc. § 580.5 [Stats. 1994, ch. 611, § 5] were made to confirm the independent nature of the letter of credit and to abrogate the holding in Western Security Bank v. Superior Court [

Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1993) 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 908]. In that case, the court held that presentment of a draft under a standby letter of credit issued in connection with a real property secured loan following foreclosure violated Code Civ. Proc. § 580d and constituted a "fraud or other defect not apparent on the face of the documents" under former Com. Code § 5114(2)(b).

The Legislature also intended to confirm the expectation of the parties to a contract that underlies a letter of credit, that the beneficiary will have available the value of the real estate collateral and the benefit of the letter of credit without regard to the order in which the beneficiary may resort to either [Stats. 1994 ch. 611, § 5].

The California Supreme Court held that the Legislature plainly intended that the 1994 legislation did not effect a change in the law but simply clarified and confirmed the law prior to the Court of Appeal's opinion in Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 232, 252-253, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 933 P.2d 507].

[9] Statute of Limitation

An action to enforce a right or obligation arising under the UCC--Letters of Credit must be commenced within one year after the expiration date of the relevant letter of credit or one year after the cause of action accrues, whichever occurs later [Com. Code § 5115]. This limitation on actions applies not only to wrongful dishonor claims against the issuer, but also to claims against the issuer and applicant arising from the reimbursement agreement [Com. Code § 5115 (UCC Comment 2)].

This statute of limitation governs letters of credit (and transactions associated with those letters of credit) issued on or after January 1, 1997 [Stats. 1996, ch. 176 § 14; see Com. Code § 5115 (UCC Comment 3)]. If a letter of credit was issued before that date and an obligation on that letter was breached after that date, the statute of limitation is governed by prior law [Stats. 1996, ch. 176 § 15; see Com. Code § 5115 (UCC Comment 3)].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.60

§ 56.60 Scope and Application of Division

Under Division 11 of the Commercial Code, a "funds transfer" is a series of transactions initiated for the purpose of making payment to an identified party, called a "beneficiary" [Com. Code § 11104(a)]. A funds transfer is begun when an individual or bank, referred to as the "originator," sends a "payment order" instructing another bank to pay (or to cause another bank to pay) a fixed or determinable amount of money to the beneficiary [Com. Code §§ 11103(a)(1), 11104(c)]. A payment order may be sent directly to the "beneficiary's bank," or to an "intermediary bank" that issues a corresponding payment order to another "receiving bank" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(2)-(4) (definitions)]. The funds transfer is completed when the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary of the originator's payment order [Com. Code § 11104(a)].

A payment order may be transmitted to a receiving bank orally, electronically, or in writing, either directly or by means of an agent, a "funds-transfer system" [see Com. Code § 11105(a)(5) (definition)], or by a communications system [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)]. The payment order must not state any condition to payment other than time of payment, and the receiving bank must be reimbursed by debiting an account of, or otherwise receiving payment from, the "sender" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1); see Com. Code § 11103(a)(5) (definition)]. Each sender and receiving bank involved in the funds transfer must follow specific statutory requirements in accepting or rejecting payment orders [see §§ 56.63, 56.67], issuing payment orders pursuant to the original order, verifying orders, receiving orders, and disbursing proper payment or credit [see § 56.65].

Division 11 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code §§ 11101-11507] contains specific creditor process rules [see Com. Code § 11502], and contains its own choice of law rules [Com. Code § 11507]. The requirements of Division 11 of the Commercial Code do not apply to a funds transfer any part of which is governed by the federal Electronic Fund Transfer Act of 1978 [Com. Code § 11108; see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693-1693r; see also §§ 56.80-56.92].

§ 56.61 Security Procedure

A payment order received by the receiving bank constitutes the "authorized" order of the person identified as the sender if that person authorized the order, or is otherwise bound by it under the law of agency [Com. Code § 11202(a)]. However, if the bank and the customer (the sender) have agreed that the authenticity of payment orders issued to the bank will be verified pursuant to a security procedure, a payment order is "effective" as the customer's order (regardless of whether or not the payment order is "authorized") if the order is verified pursuant to a security procedure [see Com. Code § 11202(b)].

A "security procedure" is a procedure established by agreement between a customer and a receiving bank for the purpose of one or both of the following [Com. Code § 11201]:

- Verifying that a payment order or communication amending or canceling a payment order is that of the customer; or
- Detecting error in the transmission or the content of the payment order or communication.

A security procedure may require the use of algorithms or other codes, identifying words or numbers, encryption, callback procedures, or similar security devices; however, a comparison of a signature on a payment order or communication with an authorized specimen signature of the customer is not by itself a security procedure [Com. Code § 11201].

Once a bank and customer have agreed that the authenticity of payment orders issued to the bank in the name of the customer as sender will be verified pursuant to a security procedure, any payment order received by the receiving bank is considered an effective payment order of the customer, whether or not authorized, provided that the security procedure satisfies two requirements. First, the security procedure must be a commercially reasonable method of providing protection against unauthorized payment orders. Second, the bank must prove that it accepted the payment order in good faith and in compliance with the security procedure and any written agreement or instruction of the customer restricting acceptance of payment orders issued in the name of the customer [Com. Code § 11202(b)].

The "commercial reasonableness" of a security procedure constitutes a question of law, to be resolved by considering the following factors [Com. Code § 11202(c)]:

- The wishes of the customer expressed to the bank;
- The size, type, and frequency of payment orders normally issued by the customer to the bank;
- Any alternative security procedures offered to the customer; and
- Security procedures in general usage by other similarly situated receiving banks and customers.

A security procedure is deemed commercially reasonable if the customer chooses that particular procedure after the bank offers, and the customer refuses, another security procedure that is commercially reasonable for that customer, and the customer expressly agrees in writing to be bound by any payment order, whether or not authorized, issued in the customer's name and accepted by the bank in compliance with the security procedure selected [Com. Code § 11202(c)].

§ 56.62 Identification of Beneficiary

A payment order must identify the beneficiary in order for the beneficiary's bank to make proper payment. If a payment order received by the beneficiary's bank refers to a name, bank account number, or other identification of a nonexistent or unidentifiable person or account, no person has rights as a beneficiary of the order and acceptance cannot occur. If only an identifying number is supplied, or a conflict between a name and identifying number arises, the Commercial Code provides a series of rules to determine the rights and obligations of the parties involved [Com. Code § 11207(a); see Com. Code §§ 11207(b)-(d), 11208].

§ 56.63 Acceptance of Payment Orders

In general, a receiving bank, other than a beneficiary's bank, "accepts" a payment order when it executes a payment order [Com. Code § 11209(a); but see Com. Code § 11209(d)]. A payment order is "executed" by the receiving bank when it issues a payment order intended to carry out the payment order received by that bank [Com. Code § 11301(a); see § 56.68]. However, a payment order issued to an originator's bank (that is, not the beneficiary's bank) cannot be accepted until the execution date [Com. Code § 11209(d); see Com. Code § 11301(b) ("execution date" defined); see also § 56.68]. If the originator's bank executes the originator's payment order before the execution date and the order is subsequently canceled [see Com. Code § 11211(b); see also § 56.66], the bank may recover from the beneficiary any payment received to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11209(d)].

In general, a payment order is accepted by a beneficiary's bank at the earliest of the following times [Com. Code § 11209(b); but see Com. Code § 11209(c), (d) (limitations on acceptance)]:

- When the bank pays the beneficiary [see Com. Code § 11405(a), (b)] or notifies the beneficiary of the receipt of the order or that the beneficiary's account has been credited with respect to the order, unless the notice indicates that (a) the bank is rejecting the order, or (b) funds with respect to the order may not be withdrawn or used until receipt of payment from the sender of the order;
- When the bank receives payment of the entire amount of the sender's order [see Com. Code § 11403(a)(1), (2) (payment of the sender's obligation)]; or
- The opening of the bank's next funds-transfer business day following the payment date of the order if, at that time, the amount of the order is fully covered by a withdrawable credit balance in an authorized account of the sender, or the bank has otherwise received full payment from the sender, unless the order was rejected within specified times [see Com. Code § 11209(b)(3)].

Nevertheless, acceptance by a beneficiary's bank cannot occur before the order is received by the receiving bank [Com.

Code § 11209(c)]. Acceptance pursuant to payment of the entire amount of the order [see Com. Code §§ 11209(b)(2), (3), 11403(a)(1), (2)] does not occur if the beneficiary of the payment order does not have an account with the receiving bank, the account is closed, or the receiving bank is not permitted by law to receive credits for the beneficiary's account [Com. Code § 11209(c)]. Finally, a payment order issued to a beneficiary's bank cannot be accepted until the payment date [Com. Code § 11209(d); see Com. Code § 11401(b) ("payment date" defined); see also § 56.68]. If the originator's bank pays the beneficiary of the originator's payment order before the payment date and the order is subsequently canceled [see Com. Code § 11211(b); see also § 56.66], the bank may recover from the beneficiary any payment received to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11209(d)].

If an accepted payment order is an effective order of a customer identified as sender [see Com. Code § 11202(b); see also § 56.61], but is not an authorized order [see Com. Code § 11202(a); see also § 56.61], the receiving bank may limit the extent to which it is entitled to enforce or retain payment of the payment order by express written agreement [Com. Code § 11203(a)(1)]. The receiving bank is not entitled to enforce or retain payment of the payment order if the customer proves that the order was not caused, directly or indirectly, by a person (1) entrusted at any time with duties to act for the customer with respect to payment orders or the security procedure, or (2) who obtained access to the transmitting facilities of the customer or who obtained, from a source controlled by the customer and without authority of the receiving bank, information facilitating a breach of the security procedure, regardless of how the information was obtained or whether the customer was at fault. "Information" includes any access device, computer software, and the like [Com. Code § 11203(a)(2)]. These rules are equally applicable to amendments of payment orders [Com. Code § 11203(b)].

§ 56.64 Liability of Receiving Bank for Erroneous Acceptance

If a receiving bank accepts a payment order issued in the name of its customer as sender and the order is (1) not authorized and not effective [see Com. Code § 11202; see also § 56.61], or (2) effective, but not enforceable, in whole or in part, against the customer [see Com. Code § 11203; see also § 56.63], the bank must refund any payment received from the customer for the order to the extent that the bank is not entitled to enforce payment [Com. Code § 11204(a)]. Ordinarily, the bank must pay interest on the refundable amount, calculated from the date that the bank received payment until the date of the refund. However, the bank need not pay interest if the customer fails to (1) exercise ordinary care to determine that the order was not authorized by the customer and (2) notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time (not exceeding 90 days) after the customer received notification from the bank that the order was accepted, or that the customer's account was debited with respect to the order [Com. Code § 11204(a)]. Although the definition of the term "reasonable time" may be varied by agreement [see Com. Code § 1302(b)], the receiving bank's obligation to refund payment under Com. Code § 11204(a) may not otherwise be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11204(b)]. The bank is not entitled to any recovery from the customer based on the customer's failure to notify the bank under these circumstances [Com. Code § 11204(a)].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.65

§ 56.65 Liability for Erroneous Payment Orders

An accepted payment order transmitted pursuant to a security procedure for the detection of error may nevertheless contain errors in the payment order. If an accepted payment order erroneously instructed payment to a beneficiary not intended by the sender, erroneously instructed payment in an amount greater than the amount intended by the sender, or was an erroneously transmitted duplicate of a payment order previously sent by the sender, the following rules apply [Com. Code § 11205(a); see Com. Code § 11205(c) (rules applicable to amendments of payment orders)]:

- If the sender proves that he or she or a person acting on his or her behalf [see Com. Code § 11206(a)] complied with the security procedure and that the error would have been detected if the receiving bank had also complied, the sender is not obliged to pay the order to the extent stated in the next two paragraphs.
- If the funds transfer is completed on the basis of a payment order that erroneously instructed payment to an unintended beneficiary or was an erroneously transmitted duplicate, the sender is not obliged to pay the order and the receiving bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary any amount paid, to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution.
- If the funds transfer is completed on the basis of a payment order that erroneously instructed payment in an amount greater than that intended by the sender, the sender is not obliged to pay the order to the extent of the excess, and the receiving bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary the excess amount.

If the sender is not obliged to pay all or part of an order under these rules, and the sender receives notification from the receiving bank that the order was accepted by the bank (or that the sender's account was debited with respect to the order), the sender has a duty to exercise ordinary care, on the basis of information available to the sender, to discover the error and to advise the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time, not exceeding 90 days, after the bank's notification was received by the sender. If the bank proves that the sender failed to perform that duty, the sender is liable to the bank for any loss that the bank proves it incurred as a result of that failure, up to and including the amount of the sender's order [Com. Code § 11205(b)].

§ 56.66 Cancellation and Amendment of Payment Orders

[1] Procedure

A sender may decide to cancel or amend a payment order. The communication of that decision to the receiving bank, like a notice of rejection [see Com. Code § 11210(a); see also § 56.67], may be transmitted electronically, orally, or in writing [Com. Code § 11211(a)]. However, if a security procedure is in effect between the sender and the receiving bank, the communication is not effective to cancel or amend the order unless the communication is verified pursuant to the security procedure, or the bank agrees to the cancellation or amendment [Com. Code § 11211(a)].

[2] Effect

A communication, properly transmitted by the sender to the receiving bank, canceling or amending a payment order [see Com. Code § 11211(a)], is effective to cancel or amend the order if notice of the communication is received at a time and in a manner that affords the receiving bank a reasonable opportunity to act on the communication before the bank accepts the payment order [Com. Code § 11211(b)]. After a payment order has been accepted, cancellation or amendment of the order is not effective unless the receiving bank agrees to allow it, or a funds-transfer system rule [see Com. Code § 11501(b) (definition)] allows cancellation or amendment without agreement of the bank [Com. Code § 11211(c); see Com. Code § 11211(h)]. Keeping in mind that several banks may be involved in the funds-transfer process, with respect to a payment order accepted by a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank, cancellation or amendment is not effective unless a conforming cancellation or amendment of the payment order issued by the receiving bank is also made [Com. Code § 11211(c)(1)].

With respect to a payment order accepted by the beneficiary's bank, cancellation or amendment is not effective unless the order was issued in execution of an unauthorized payment order, or because of a mistake by a sender in the funds transfer that resulted in the issuance of a payment order that does any of the following [Com. Code § 11211(c)(2)]:

- Duplicates a payment order previously issued by the sender;

- Orders payment to a beneficiary not entitled to receive payment from the originator; or
- Orders payment in an amount greater than the amount the beneficiary was entitled to receive from the originator.

If the payment order is canceled or amended, the beneficiary's bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary any amount paid to the beneficiary to the extent allowed by the law of restitution and mistake [Com. Code § 11211(c)(2)].

[3] Cancellation Unaccepted Payment Order

An unaccepted payment order is canceled by operation of law at the close of the fifth funds-transfer business day of the receiving bank after the execution date or payment date of the order [Com. Code § 11211(d)]. A "funds-transfer business day" of a receiving bank means the part of a day during which the receiving bank is open for the receipt, processing, and transmittal of payment orders and cancellations and amendments of payment orders [Com. Code § 11105(a)(4)].

In the case of death or incapacity of the sender, the payment order is not revoked unless the receiving bank knows of the death or of an adjudication of legal incapacity and has a reasonable opportunity to act before acceptance of the order [Com. Code § 11211(g)].

Once a payment order has been canceled, the order cannot subsequently be accepted [Com. Code § 11211(e)].

[4] Cancellation Following Acceptance

If a payment order is first accepted and then canceled, the acceptance is nullified and the rights and obligations based on that order are extinguished. The amendment of a payment order is deemed to be both a cancellation of the original order at the time of the amendment and an issuance of a new payment order in the amended form [Com. Code § 11211(e)].

In general, if the receiving bank accepts a payment order and then agrees to the cancellation or amendment of that order by the sender, or if the receiving bank is bound by a funds-transfer system rule allowing cancellation or amendment without the bank's agreement, the sender is liable to the bank for any loss and expenses, including reasonable attorneys' fees, incurred by the bank as a result of the cancellation or amendment, or the attempted cancellation or amendment. The sender remains liable whether or not the cancellation or amendment is effective [Com. Code § 11211(f)]. However, the sender is not liable under these circumstances if an agreement of the parties or an applicable funds-transfer system rule provides to the contrary [Com. Code § 11211(f)], with the exception that a funds-transfer system rule is ineffective if it conflicts with the cancellation and amendment rules respecting the beneficiary's bank [Com. Code § 11211(h); see Com. Code § 11211(c)(2)].

§ 56.67 Rejection of Payment Orders

To reject a payment order, a receiving bank must transmit a notice of rejection to the sender. The notice may be transmitted orally, electronically, or in writing and use any words sufficient to convey the rejection or refusal to pay the order [Com. Code § 11210(a)]. A notice sent by reasonable means, under the prevailing circumstances, is effective upon transmission. If notice of rejection is given by a means that is not reasonable, rejection is effective when the notice is received. If an agreement of the sender and receiving bank establishes the means to be used to reject a payment order, any means complying with the agreement is reasonable and any means not complying with the agreement is not reasonable unless no significant delay in receipt of the notice results from using the noncomplying means [Com. Code § 11210(a)].

A receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank that fails to execute a payment order despite the existence on the execution date of a withdrawable credit balance in an authorized account of the sender sufficient to cover the order may be required to pay interest to the sender on the amount of the payment order. The bank is obliged to pay interest to the sender only if the sender's authorized account does not bear interest and the sender did not receive a notice of rejection on the execution date [Com. Code § 11210(b) (calculation of interest due sender)].

Generally, when a receiving bank suspends payments, all unaccepted payment orders issued to it are deemed rejected at the time that the bank suspends payments [Com. Code § 11210(c)]. The acceptance of a payment order precludes a later rejection of the order. Similarly, the rejection of a payment order precludes a later acceptance of the order [Com. Code § 11210(d)].

§ 56.68 Execution of Sender's Payment Order by Receiving Bank

[1] When Executed

A payment order is executed by the receiving bank when it issues a payment order intended to carry out the payment order received by the bank. Thus, a payment order received by the beneficiary's bank may be accepted but not executed [Com. Code § 11301(a)]. The day on which the receiving bank may properly issue a payment order in execution of the sender's order is the "execution date." The execution date may be determined by instruction from the sender, but cannot be earlier than the day the order is received. Absent instruction from the sender, the execution date is the day that the payment order is received. If the sender's instruction states a payment date, the execution date is the payment date, or any earlier date reasonably necessary to allow payment to the beneficiary on the payment date [Com. Code § 11301(b)].

[2] Effect of Acceptance

In general, once a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order [see Com. Code § 11209(a)], the bank assumes specific obligations in executing the order pursuant to the sender's instructions [Com. Code § 11302(a); but see Com. Code § 11302(b)-(d)]. The receiving bank must issue, on the execution date, a payment order complying with the sender's order. The receiving bank must follow the sender's instructions concerning (1) the use in carrying out the funds transfer of any intermediary bank or funds-transfer system, or (2) the means by which payment orders are to be transmitted in the funds transfer. If the originator's bank issues a payment order to an intermediary bank, the originator's bank is obliged to instruct the intermediary bank according to the originator's instruction. An intermediary bank in the funds transfer is similarly bound by an instruction given to it by the sender of the payment order it accepts [Com. Code § 11302(a)(1)].

In addition, if the sender's instruction states that the funds transfer is to be carried out by wire transfer or telephonically, or otherwise indicates that the funds transfer is to be carried out by the most expeditious means, then the receiving bank must transmit its payment order by the most expeditious available means, and instruct any intermediary bank accordingly. If a sender's instruction states a payment date, the receiving bank must transmit its payment order at a time and by means reasonably necessary to allow payment to the beneficiary on the payment date or as soon thereafter as is feasible [Com. Code § 11302(a)(2)].

[3] Discretion of Receiving Bank

The general rule regarding the receiving bank's obligations in executing the payment order pursuant to the sender's instructions [see Com. Code § 11302(a)] is tempered by other considerations. For example, unless otherwise instructed, a receiving bank executing a payment order may use any funds-transfer system if use of that system is reasonable in the circumstances. Further, the receiving bank may issue a payment order to the beneficiary's bank or to an intermediary bank through which a payment order conforming to the sender's order can expeditiously be issued to the beneficiary's bank, if the receiving bank exercises ordinary care in the selection of the intermediary bank.

In addition, a receiving bank is not required to follow a sender's instruction designating a funds-transfer if the receiving bank determines, in good faith, that it is not feasible to follow the instruction or that following the instruction would unduly delay completion of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11302(b)].

Unless the receiving bank is instructed to use the most expeditious means [see Com. Code § 11302(a)(2)], or is otherwise instructed, the receiving bank may execute a payment order by transmitting the order by first-class mail or by any reasonable means under the circumstances. Even if the sender instructs the receiving bank to execute the order by a particular means, the bank may either follow the instruction or use a means as expeditious as the means stated [Com. Code § 11302(c)].

[4] Deduction of Service Charges

Without instructions from the sender, the receiving bank may not deduct its charges for services and expenses in connection with the execution of the sender's order from the payment sent to the beneficiary. Further, a receiving bank may not instruct a subsequent receiving bank to obtain payment of its charges in the same manner [Com. Code § 11302(d)].

§ 56.69 Errors in Execution of Payment Orders

[1] Amount Greater Than Order

A receiving bank that executes a sender's payment order by issuing a payment order in an amount greater than the amount of the sender's order, or that issues a payment order in execution of the sender's order and then issues a duplicate order, is entitled to payment of the amount of the sender's order if the order is properly accepted by another receiving bank [Com. Code § 11303(a); see Com. Code § 11402(c) (payment of orders); see also § 56.73]. The bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary of the erroneous order the excess payment received, to the extent of the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11303(a)].

[2] Amount Less Than Order

A receiving bank that executes the payment order of the sender by issuing a payment order in an amount less than the amount of the sender's order is entitled to payment of the amount of the sender's order if the order is properly accepted by another receiving bank [Com. Code § 11303(b); see Com. Code § 11402(c) (payment of orders); see also § 56.73] and the bank corrects its mistake by issuing another payment order to make up the difference to the beneficiary of the sender's order. If the error is not corrected, the bank is permitted to receive or retain only the amount of the sender's order equal to the amount of the erroneous payment order [Com. Code § 11303(b)]. However, Com. Code § 11303(b) does not apply if a receiving bank executes the sender's payment order by issuing a payment order in an amount less than the amount of the sender's order for the purpose of obtaining payment of its charges for services and expenses pursuant to instruction of the sender [Com. Code § 11303(b)].

[3] Wrong Beneficiary

If a receiving bank executes the sender's payment order by issuing a payment order to a beneficiary who is different from the beneficiary of the sender's order and the funds transfer is completed on the basis of that error, the sender of the erroneously executed payment order and all previous senders in the funds transfer are relieved from paying the payment orders they issued. The bank issuing the payment order to the wrong beneficiary is entitled to recover from that beneficiary to the extent permitted by the law of mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11303(c)].

[4] Duty of Sender

If the sender of a payment order that is erroneously executed [see Com. Code § 11303] receives notification from the receiving bank that the order was executed (or that the sender's account was debited with respect to the order), the sender has a duty to exercise ordinary care to determine, on the basis of information available to him or her, that the order was erroneously executed. The sender must then notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time, not exceeding 90 days, after receiving the bank's notification [Com. Code § 11304]. A bank cannot recover from the sender based on the sender's failure to perform his or her statutory duties to determine whether or not the order was erroneously executed and, if so, to notify the bank. However, this failure releases the bank from any obligation to pay interest on any refundable amounts [see Com. Code § 11402(d)] for the period before the bank learns of the execution error [Com. Code § 11304].

§ 56.70 Liability of Receiving Bank for Erroneous Executions

A receiving bank has a duty to execute the payment order without delay pursuant to the sender's instruction [see Com. Code §§ 11301(b) ("execution date" defined), 11302]. If the funds transfer is completed, but the receiving bank's erroneous execution of the payment order [see Com. Code § 11302 (execution obligations); see also § 56.69] results in a delay in payment to the beneficiary, the receiving bank must pay interest for the period of the delay caused by the improper execution to either the originator or the beneficiary of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11305(a)]. In addition to interest, the receiving bank is liable for damages, including consequential damages, to the extent provided in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11305(a), (c); see Com. Code § 11305(f) (receiving bank cannot otherwise vary liability by agreement)].

If the receiving bank breaches its execution obligations [see Com. Code § 11302; see also § 56.69], the bank is liable to the originator of the order if the breach results in any of the following [Com. Code § 11305(b)]:

- The noncompletion of the funds transfer;
- The failure to use an intermediary bank designated by the originator; or
- The issuance of a payment order that does not comply with the terms of the payment order of the originator.

In these situations, the receiving bank will be liable for its expenses in the funds transfer, incidental expenses, and interest losses to the extent not covered by Com. Code § 11305(a) [Com. Code § 11305(b)]. In addition, the receiving bank is liable for damages, including consequential damages, to the extent provided in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11305(b), (c); see Com. Code § 11305(f) (receiving bank cannot otherwise vary liability by agreement)].

Finally, reasonable attorneys' fees are recoverable if demand for compensation for these breaches of the receiving bank's execution obligations [see Com. Code § 11305(a), (b)] is made and refused before an action is brought on the claim [Com. Code § 11305(e)].

When a receiving bank fails to execute a payment order that it was obliged by express agreement to execute, the receiving bank is liable to the sender for its expenses in the transaction, incidental expenses, and interest losses resulting from the failure to execute. Additional damages, including consequential damages, are recoverable, but only to the extent provided in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11305(d)]. § 56.72 Sender's Obligation to Pay for Accepted Payment Orders

With respect to a payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank, the acceptance of the order by the bank obliges the sender to pay the bank the amount of the order [Com. Code § 11402(a), (b); but see Com. Code §§ 11205 (effect of erroneous execution on sender's duty to pay), 11207 (inaccurate identification of beneficiary precludes acceptance of order)]. However, payment is not due until the payment date [Com. Code § 11402(b)]. The "payment date" of a payment order is the day on which the amount of the order is payable to the beneficiary's bank. The payment date may be determined by the sender's instruction, but it cannot be earlier than the day that the order is received by the beneficiary's bank. Unless otherwise determined, the payment date is the day that the order is received by the beneficiary's bank [Com. Code § 11401].

With respect to a payment order issued to a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank, the acceptance of the order by the receiving bank obliges the sender to pay the bank the amount of the sender's order. However, payment is not due until the execution date of the sender's order [Com. Code § 11402(c)]. The "execution date" is the day on which the receiving bank may properly issue a payment order in execution of the sender's order. The date may be determined by the instruction of the sender, but it cannot be earlier than the day that the order is received. Unless otherwise determined, the execution date is the day on which the order is received [Com. Code § 11301(b)]. The sender is excused from paying the order if the funds transfer is not completed by the acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order instructing payment to the beneficiary of that sender's order [Com. Code § 11402(c); see Com. Code § 11402(e)]. The right of the sender to be excused from paying the order may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11402(f)].

If the sender of a payment order pays the order but was not obliged to pay all or part of the amount paid, the bank receiving payment is obliged to refund the amount that the sender was not obliged to pay [Com. Code § 11402(d); see Com. Code § 11402(e); but see Com. Code §§ 11204, 11304 (interest nonpayable)]. The right of the sender of a payment order to receive a refund for the amount that the sender was not obliged to pay may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11402(f); see Com. Code § 11402(d)].

The sender's obligation to pay the receiving bank [see Com. Code § 11402] is satisfied as follows [Com. Code §

11403(a); see Com. Code § 11403(d)]:

- If the sender is a bank, payment occurs when the receiving bank receives final settlement of the obligation through a Federal Reserve Bank or through a funds-transfer system.
- If the sender is a bank and the sender credited an account of the receiving bank with the sender, or caused an account of the receiving bank in another bank to be credited, payment occurs when the credit is withdrawn or, if not withdrawn, at midnight of the day on which the credit is withdrawable and the receiving bank learns of that fact.
- If the receiving bank debits an account of the sender with the receiving bank, payment occurs when the debit is made to the extent that the debit is covered by a withdrawable credit balance in the account.

If the sender and receiving bank are members of a funds-transfer system that nets obligations multilaterally among participants, the receiving bank receives final settlement when settlement is complete in accordance with the rules of the system. To the extent permitted by the rules of the system, the sender's obligation to pay the amount of the payment order may be satisfied by setting off and applying against the sender's obligation the right of the sender to receive payment from the receiving bank of the amount of any other payment order transmitted to the sender by the receiving bank through the system [Com. Code § 11403(b)]. If two banks transmit payment orders to each other under an agreement that the settlement of the obligations of each bank to the other [see Com. Code § 11402] will be made at the end of the day or other period, the total amount owed with respect to all orders transmitted by one bank will be set off against the total amount owed with respect to all orders transmitted by the other bank [Com. Code § 11403(c)].

B. Electronic Fund Transfers
1. Funds Transfers Under Commercial Code

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.73

§ 56.73 Payment of Orders by Banks

[1] General Obligation to Pay Order; Exceptions

In general, when a beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order, that bank is obliged to pay the amount of the order to the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11404(a)]. This rule does not apply if (1) the payment order is canceled [see Com. Code § 11211(e)]; (2) a funds-transfer system rule provides that payment is provisional until the beneficiary's bank receives payment for the accepted order [see Com. Code § 11405(d)]; or (3) the acceptance is nullified because of the funds-transfer system's failure to complete settlement pursuant to its rules with respect to any payment order in the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11404(a); see Com. Code § 11405(e)].

[2] Time When Payment Is Due

Payment is ordinarily due on the payment date of the order [Com. Code § 11404(a); see Com. Code § 11401 ("payment date" defined); see also § 56.72]. However, if acceptance occurs on the payment date after the close of the funds-transfer business day of the bank, payment is due on the next funds-transfer business day. If the bank refuses to pay after demand by the beneficiary and receipt of notice of particular circumstances that will give rise to consequential damages as a result of nonpayment, the beneficiary may recover damages resulting from the bank's refusal to pay to the extent the bank had notice of the damages. The bank may avoid liability for damages if the bank proves that it did not pay because of a reasonable doubt concerning the right of the beneficiary to payment [Com. Code § 11404(a)].

The right of a beneficiary to receive payment and damages [see Com. Code § 11404(a)] may not be varied by agreement or a funds-transfer system rule [Com. Code § 11404(c)].

[3] Notification of Beneficiary; When Required

If the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order that instructs payment to an account of the beneficiary, the bank must notify the beneficiary of the receipt of the order before midnight of the next funds-transfer business day following the payment date [Com. Code § 11404(b)]. If the payment order does not instruct payment to an account of the beneficiary, the bank need only notify the beneficiary if notice is required by the order. Notice may be given by first-class mail or any other means that are reasonable under the circumstances. If the bank fails to give the required notice, the bank must pay interest to the beneficiary on the amount of the payment order from the day notice should have been given until the day that the beneficiary learned of the receipt of the payment order by the bank. No other damages are recoverable, but reasonable attorneys' fees are recoverable if a demand for interest is made and refused before an action is brought on the claim [Com. Code § 11404(b)].

The right of a beneficiary to be notified may be varied by agreement of the beneficiary, or by a funds-transfer system rule if the beneficiary is notified of the rule before the initiation of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11404(c); see Com. Code § 11404(b)].

[4] When Payment Occurs

If the beneficiary's bank credits an account of the beneficiary of a payment order, payment of the bank's obligation [see Com. Code § 11404(a)] occurs when and to the extent that (1) the beneficiary is notified of the right to withdraw the credit, (2) the bank lawfully applies the credit to a debt of the beneficiary, or (3) the bank otherwise makes the funds (with respect to the order) available to the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11405(a)]. If the beneficiary's bank does not credit an account of the beneficiary, the time when payment of the bank's payment obligation [see Com. Code § 11404(a)] occurs is governed by principles of law that determine when an obligation is satisfied [Com. Code § 11405(b)].

[5] Effect of Condition to Payment

In general, if the beneficiary's bank pays the beneficiary of a payment order under a condition to payment or the agreement of the beneficiary giving the bank the right to recover payment from the beneficiary if the bank does not receive payment of the order, the condition or agreement is not enforceable [Com. Code § 11405(c)]. However, a beneficiary's bank making a provisional payment may be entitled to a refund from the beneficiary under certain circumstances if permitted by an applicable funds-transfer system rule [see Com. Code § 11405(d)]. Similarly, the bank may be entitled to recover payment from the beneficiary if the bank's acceptance of the order is subsequently nullified because of the funds-transfer system's failure to complete settlement pursuant to its rules [see Com. Code § 11405(e)].

1. Funds Transfers Under Commercial Code

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.74

§ 56.74 Payment in Discharge of Existing Obligation

Ordinarily, the originator of a funds transfer is deemed to pay the beneficiary of the originator's payment order (1) at the time a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary is accepted by the beneficiary's bank in the funds transfer and (2) in an amount equal to the amount of the order accepted by the beneficiary's bank, but not more than the amount of the originator's order [Com. Code § 11406(a)]. This rule does not apply if (1) the payment order is canceled [see Com. Code § 11211(e)]; (2) a funds-transfer system rule provides that payment is provisional until the beneficiary's bank receives payment for the accepted order [see Com. Code § 11405(d)]; or (3) the acceptance is nullified because of the funds-transfer system's failure to complete settlement pursuant to its rules with respect to any payment order in the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11406(a); see Com. Code § 11405(e)].

In general, if the originator's payment [see Com. Code § 11406(a)] is made to satisfy an obligation, the obligation is discharged to the same extent that discharge would result from payment to the beneficiary of the same amount in money [Com. Code § 11406(b); see Com. Code § 11406(c) (determining whether discharge occurs)]. However, the obligation is not discharged if all of the following are true [Com. Code § 11406(b)]:

- The originator's payment was made by a means prohibited by the contract of the beneficiary with respect to the obligation;
- The beneficiary, within a reasonable time after receiving notice of receipt of the order by the beneficiary's bank, notified the originator of the beneficiary's refusal of the payment;
- Funds with respect to the order were not withdrawn by the beneficiary or applied to a debt of the beneficiary; and
- The beneficiary would suffer a loss that could reasonably have been avoided if payment had been made by a means complying with the contract.

If payment by the originator does not discharge the debt, the originator is subrogated to the rights of the beneficiary to receive payment from the beneficiary's bank [Com. Code § 11406(b); see Com. Code § 11404(a)]. The originator's and beneficiary's rights concerning discharge noted above may be varied only by agreement of the originator and the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11406(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 77, Discharge of Obligations .

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.80

§ 56.80 Scope and Function of Electronic Fund Transfer Act

An "electronic fund transfer" is a transfer of funds initiated through a point-of-sale electronic terminal, automated teller machine, or other telephonic, electronic, or magnetic device. The term does not include a transaction originated by check, draft, or other paper instrument [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(6), (7)]. An electronic fund transfer is made through the use of what is commonly known as a debit card or PIN code [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(1) (definition of "accepted card or other means of access")] rather than through the use of commercial paper [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(6)].

The federal Electronic Fund Transfer Act [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693-1693r] provides consumer rights and safeguards, including limited liability, error resolution procedures, and disclosure requirements when funds are transferred electronically [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693, 1693a(6), (7)]. None of the rights prescribed by the Act can be waived by a consumer or any other person [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(6)].

With one important exception, the Act is limited in its application to the relationship between financial institutions and individual "consumers" (that is, natural persons) [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693(b), 1693a(5)]. The exception is that, if an electronic fund transfer system malfunction prevents a transfer initiated by a consumer to a third party who has agreed to accept payment by electronic fund transfer, the consumer's obligation is suspended until the malfunction is corrected and the transfer completed, or until the third party sends the consumer a written demand for paper payment [15 U.S.C. § 1693j].

§ 56.81 Initiation of Electronic Fund Transfer Account

In general, a financial institution may not issue a debit card or other means of access to a consumer's account for the purpose of initiating an electronic fund transfer unless it is in response to an application from the consumer, or a renewal [15 U.S.C. § 1693i(a); 12 C.F.R. § 205.5(a)]. However, a nonvalidated access device may be distributed without prior solicitation if [15 U.S.C. § 1693i(b); 12 C.F.R. § 205.5(b)]:

- The device is not validated;
- The distribution is accompanied by complete disclosure of the consumer's rights and liabilities that will apply if the device is validated;
- The distribution is accompanied by an explanation that the device is not validated and an explanation of how to dispose of the device if validation is not desired; and
- The device is validated only in response to a request or application from the consumer and after verification of the consumer's identity.

For further discussion and a form for making the required disclosure, see § 56.240.

An institution may not condition employment, the extension of credit, or receipt of government benefits on the use an electronic fund transfer system [15 U.S.C. § 1693k].

§ 56.82 Disclosure of Terms and Conditions

The Act requires that the terms and conditions under which a financial institution operates its electronic fund transfer system be disclosed to each consumer when the consumer contracts for that service. These disclosures must be clear and readily understandable, in writing, and in a form the consumer may keep [12 C.F.R. § 205.4(a)(1)]. The disclosures must include the matters required by the Act and the governing regulations, to the extent applicable [15 U.S.C. § 1693(c)(a)]. The disclosures may be provided to the consumer in electronic form, subject to compliance with the consumer consent and other applicable provisions of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-Sign Act) (15 U.S.C. 7001 et seq.) [12 C.F.R. § 205.4(a)(1)]. For further discussion of the E-Sign Act, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions. The most important of these matters is notice of the consumer's liability for unauthorized electronic fund transfers and notice of the error resolution procedures [15 U.S.C. § 1693c(a)(1), (7); see 12 C.F.R. § 205.7]. Model disclosure clauses have been promulgated by the Federal Reserve Bank [see 12 C.F.R. pt. 205, app. A] and are available from all financial institutions offering electronic fund transfer services. For a form based on the model disclosures, see § 56.240.

A change may be implemented without prior notice if it is immediately necessary to maintain or restore the security of the system or a customer's account. The institution must give subsequent notice if the change is made permanent [15 U.S.C. § 1693c(b)].

The location or identification of the terminal involved must also be shown [15 U.S.C. § 1693d(a)]. It may elect to give positive notice when the credit is made as scheduled or negative notice when the credit is not made as scheduled. § 56.86 Periodic Statements

Except for accounts to which electronic access may be had only to make prearranged automatic deposits, the institution must also give each consumer a monthly statement for each period in which an electronic fund transfer affecting the account has occurred, or every three months, whichever is more frequent. This statement must repeat the information shown on the transaction documentation [see § 56.84]. It must also show the amount of any fee or charge assessed, the opening and closing balances, and the address and telephone number to be used for inquiries or notices of error [15 U.S.C. § 1693d(c)].

A periodic statement need not be given in two situations [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693d(c)-(e)]. First, if the consumer has a passbook account to which electronic access may be had only to make a preauthorized automatic deposit, the institution need only note the transfer in the passbook when it is presented [15 U.S.C. § 1693d(d)]. Second, if the account is not a passbook account but the only electronic access to it is by a preauthorized automatic deposit, the institution may give its customer a quarterly statement [15 U.S.C. § 1693d(e)].

However, the institution may require written confirmation of any oral instruction [15 U.S.C. § 1693e(a)]. If a preauthorized payment from a consumer's account to the same person will vary in amount, the institution or the payee must give the consumer reasonable advance notice of the amount and scheduled date of the payment [15 U.S.C. § 1693e(b)].

§ 56.88 Limited Consumer Liability for Unauthorized Transfers

A consumer's liability for an unauthorized electronic fund transfer is limited [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11) ("unauthorized electronic fund transfer" defined); see also § 56.89]. A consumer is liable for an unauthorized electronic fund transfer involving his or her account only if (1) the means of access used was an accepted access device (that is, a debit card or other means of access) and (2) the issuer of the card or other means of access provided a mechanism for identifying the user, such as a signature, photograph, fingerprint, or electronic or mechanical confirmation [15 U.S.C. § 1693g(a)]. An accepted access device is one that the consumer has requested and received or one that the consumer has signed, used, or authorized another to use [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(1); see 12 C.F.R. § 205.2(a)(2)].

Consumer liability is limited to the lesser of $50 or the amount obtained in an unauthorized transfer prior to the time notice of the facts is given to the financial institution [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693g(a)(2) ("notice" defined)]. However, the consumer need not be reimbursed for losses the institution proves would not have occurred but for the consumer's failure to report unauthorized use within 60 days after transmittal of a statement [15 U.S.C. § 1693g(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11) ("unauthorized electronic fund transfer" defined)].

A consumer need not be reimbursed for losses arising from the illicit use of a lost or stolen debit card that would not have occurred but for the consumer's failure to report the loss or theft within two business days after learning of it. However, the consumer's liability is limited to $500 or the amount of unauthorized transfers that occur following the close of the two-day period, whichever is less [15 U.S.C. § 1693g(a)].

§ 56.89 Unauthorized Electronic Fund Transfer

An "unauthorized electronic fund transfer" is an electronic fund transfer from a consumer's account initiated by a person other than the consumer without actual authority to do so and from which the consumer receives no benefit [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11)]. The term does not include any electronic fund transfer initiated by a person who was furnished the consumer's debit card or code before notice to the institution that person is no longer authorized to have such access [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11)(A)]. A transfer initiated with fraudulent intent by the consumer or any person acting in concert with the consumer is not an unauthorized transfer [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11)(B)].

An electronic fund transfer erroneously committed by a financial institution is not an unauthorized electronic fund transfer [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(11)(C)]. However, an institution may be liable to the consumer [see § 56.90] and the consumer may be able to obtain resolution of such an error [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693f; see also § 56.92].

2. Fund Transfers Under Electronic Fund Transfer Act

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.90

§ 56.90 Institution's Liability for Faulty Transfers

A financial institution is liable to a consumer for all damages caused by its failure to make a correct or timely electronic fund transfer in accordance with the consumer's instructions and the terms and conditions applicable to the account. However, there is no liability if the consumer's account has insufficient funds, if the funds are subject to a restriction on transfer, if the transfer would exceed an established credit limit, or if an electronic terminal has insufficient cash to complete the transaction [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(a)(1)]. An institution is liable for all damages caused by its failure to make an electronic fund transfer on the ground of insufficient funds if it failed to credit a deposit that would have provided sufficient funds to make the transfer [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(a)(2)].

The institution can avoid these liabilities if it shows by a preponderance of evidence that its action or failure to act resulted from an act of God or other circumstance beyond its control, that it exercised reasonable care to prevent the occurrence, and that it exercised such diligence as the circumstances required [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(b)(1)]. It can also avoid liability by a similar showing that the act or failure to act resulted from a technical malfunction that was known to the consumer when he or she tried to initiate a transfer or, in the case of a prearranged transfer, when the transfer should have occurred [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(b)(2)].

If the financial institution can show that the failure to make an electronic fund transfer was not intentional, but resulted from a bona fide error, it is liable only for actual damages. To take advantage of this limitation of liability, the institution must have maintained procedures reasonably adapted to avoid such errors [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(c)].

However, if the failure was not intentional, but resulted from a bona fide error, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures designed to avoid any such error, the institution is liable only for actual damages [15 U.S.C. § 1693h(c)].

§ 56.92 Error Resolution

[1] "Error" Defined

For the purpose of the error resolution provisions of the Act, an "error" is any of the following [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(f); 12 C.F.R. § 205.11(a)]:

- An unauthorized electronic fund transfer.
- An incorrect electronic fund transfer from or to the consumer's account.
- The omission from a periodic statement of an electronic fund transfer.
- A computational or bookkeeping error made by the institution relating to an electronic fund transfer.
- Receipt by the consumer of an incorrect amount of money from an electronic terminal.
- An electronic fund transfer not properly documented [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.9 (documentation of transfers), 205.10(a) (preauthorized transfers to a consumer's account)], including a request the consumer makes to determine whether an error exists under 12 C.F.R. § 205.11(a)(1)(i)-(vi) [see Paragraphs 1-6, above].
- A consumer's request for additional information or clarification concerning an electronic fund transfer or any documentation required by the Act [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.9 (documentation of transfers), 205.10(a) (preauthorized transfers to a consumer's account)].

[2] Procedure for Error Resolution

If the consumer detects an error [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693f(f) ("error" defined); see also [1], above] in the electronic funds transfer documentation furnished by the financial institution, the consumer may be able to obtain resolution of the problem. The institution must receive oral or written notice of the claimed error within 60 days after having transmitted the documentation of a transfer. The notice must indicate the consumer's name and account number, the consumer's belief that the documentation or account contains an error and the amount of the error, and the reasons for the consumer's belief that an error has occurred. If the notice is oral, the institution may require written confirmation to be furnished within 10 days [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(a)]. For a notice of error, see § 56.241.

The institution must then investigate the alleged error, determine whether an error has occurred, and report or mail the results and its determination to the consumer within 10 business days [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(a)]. If the institution finds that an error did occur, it must correct the error within one business day after making that finding [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(b)].

Rather than investigating, reporting, and, if necessary, correcting a claimed error within the 10-day period discussed above, the institution may elect to give the consumer a provisional credit for the amount in dispute plus any applicable interest within 10 business days after receipt of the consumer's notice (less any amount for which the consumer is liable on an unauthorized transfer [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693g; see also § 56.88]) pending its investigation and determination. This investigation, however, must be completed within 45 days after receipt of the error notice; and, during the investigation period, the consumer must be allowed full use of the amount provisionally credited [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(c)].

[3] Liability for Treble Damages

An institution that does not give a provisional credit [see [2], above] is liable for treble damages if it fails to make a good-faith investigation of the claimed error or does not have a reasonable basis for believing that the consumer's account is not in error [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(e)(1)]. The institution is also liable for treble damages if it knowingly and willfully concludes that the consumer's account is not in error when that conclusion cannot reasonably be drawn from the evidence available to it at the time of the investigation [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(e)(2)].

[4] Denial of Claimed Error

If the institution determines after an investigation of a claimed error that an error did not occur, it must send the consumer an explanation of its findings within three business days after the end of its investigation. The explanation letter must include notice of the consumer's right to request reproductions of the documents upon which the institution relied in denying the consumer's claim that an error had occurred. When requested by the consumer, it must promptly send the consumer those reproductions [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(d)].

A consumer can sue for damages [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693m(a)] in federal court or in any other court of competent jurisdiction [15 U.S.C. § 1693m(g)] if the institution fails to comply with these requirements [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693m(a)]. In certain situations, the consumer is entitled to treble damages [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(e); see [3], above].

The following documents are those required to comply with a typical import letter of credit. Banks may have differing policies on which documents are required for any particular letter of credit transaction. The presentation of these documents is necessary to obtain payment under the credit. Most of these documents are generated immediately before or during the shipping transaction. Therefore, some will not be available at the time of the initial client contact.

Documents listed in items 1 through 5 are generally the minimum required in an import transaction letter of credit. The other documents are supplementary, but often required.

- 1. Commercial invoice prepared by seller.
- 2. Sole original clean on board vessel marine bill of lading.

NOTE:

The term "sole original" specifies that only one original bill of lading is to be used. The term "clean" refers to a bill of lading that is free of any notation showing a defect in the goods or their packaging. An "on board vessel marine" bill of lading is used when goods are shipped by sea [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, ch. 3, The Relationship Between the Account Party and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)].

3. Marine and war risk insurance policy or certificate for 110 percent of invoice value.

NOTE:

It is generally the applicant's obligation to provide for adequate insurance. For a discussion of the obligation to insure and the type of insurance necessary, see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Chapter 3, The Relationship Between the Account Party and the Issuer (Matthew Bender).

4. Certificate of origin, for assessing customs duty on import.
5. If shipment is by container, packing list showing contents of containers.

Certificates of quality are issued by the United States Department of Agriculture or the respective foreign government inspecting agency.

8. Certificate of net shipped weight at port of loading.

NOTE:

Weight determinations in the United States are frequently performed by General Superintendence Company.

9. Draft, bill or exchange, or other demand for payment, if required.

B. Preliminary Determinations

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.110

§ 56.110 Determinations for Applicant of Letter of Credit

NOTE:

The "applicant" in a letter of credit transaction is generally an importer who intends to import goods from an exporter. In the typical transaction, the applicant will approach the issuer, generally an issuing bank, and apply for issuance of a letter of credit in favor of the exporter. In the statutes, the applicant is variously referred to as the "applicant," the "account party," the "customer," or the "buyer," and the exporter is referred to as the "beneficiary" or "seller."

1. Which bank does applicant wish to issue letter of credit?

NOTE:

In determining which bank to choose to issue a letter of credit, the applicant should consider the reputation of the bank, the size of the bank and number of branches for ease of negotiation and payment, whether the bank has an experienced trade finance department, the ability of the bank to tailor the letter of credit to the parties' needs, and the cost of obtaining the credit from the bank.

2. Which type of letter of credit is appropriate:

a. Irrevocable or revocable?

NOTE:

In practice, most letters of credit are irrevocable [see § 56.13[4]].

b. Confirmed or unconfirmed?

NOTE:

A confirmed credit occurs when the advisor makes itself liable to the beneficiary, thereby becoming the confirmer. Under a confirmed credit, the beneficiary can seek payment from either the confirmer or the issuer [see § 56.13[5]].

An unconfirmed credit occurs when the advisor informs the beneficiary of the existence of the credit, but does not make itself liable to the beneficiary. In that case, the beneficiary can collect only from the issuer [see § 56.13[6]].

c. Simple or revolving?

NOTE:

A simple credit is one that applies to an isolated transaction and is exhausted after one payment under that transaction. A revolving credit is a credit where the buyer is a regular customer of the seller, and the credit is maintained at a certain level even though payments are made periodically for various transactions [see § 56.13[9]].

d. Divisible?

NOTE:

A divisible credit permits partial shipments and partial transfer of the benefits of the credit [see § 56.13[10]].

e. Notation?

NOTE:

A notation credit is a credit that specifies that any person purchasing or paying drafts drawn or demands for payment made under it must note the amount of the draft or demand on the letter of credit or advise of credit [see Datapoint Corp v. M & I Bank, 665 F. Supp. 722, 726-727 (W.D. Wis. 1987)]. A notation credit is generally employed when the letter of credit is intended for roving use [see § 56.13[11]].

f. Standby?

NOTE:

A standby letter of credit is used to secure the obligation of a party in a transaction. It is an obligation of the issuing bank to pay the beneficiary only on the failure of the bank's customer to perform under a contract. A standby credit functions as a substitute for a guarantee or surety bond, rather than as a payment mechanism [see § 56.13[12]].

3. Will letter of credit be assignable or transferable [see §§ 56.40-56.43].

4. Which standard terms does applicant wish to include in letter of credit [see § 56.111]?

5. Which documents does applicant wish to require beneficiary to provide to comply with letter of credit [see § 56.100[2]]?

6. Does applicant wish to include, or does beneficiary demand, any unusual terms?

NOTE:

In practice, most letters of credit are drafted from information gathered on standard preprinted applications provided by banks, and there is little opportunity for flexibility, other than in specifying the documents required to satisfy the credit.

7. Will payment be by sight draft or time draft?

NOTE:

A sight draft is payable immediately on presentation, and is to the beneficiary's advantage. A time draft is payable a specified number of days after presentation, and is to the applicant's advantage. For further discussion, see § 56.14.

8. Is there sufficient tolerance in description of goods and shipping dates to allow for unforeseen delays and discrepancies [see UCP arts. 39, 46, 47]?

9. What form of currency will be required for payment?

10. Are goods to be shipped subject to any import or export restrictions?

NOTE:

Import and export restrictions apply to certain goods, natural resources, products of certain countries, and goods produced by certain types of labor [see 19 C.F.R. pts. 10, 12, 133, 145, 161, 162].

11. May shipment arrive at any port, or must it arrive at particular port?

12. May ship or aircraft call en route to arrival port, or must shipment be direct?

13. Is partial shipment allowed?

14. Is transshipment (that is, reshipment of goods from another port to best reach goods' destination) allowed?

15. Is shipment to be on particular type of vessel or aircraft?

16. Does applicant need special import license or permit before transaction can occur?

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.111

§ 56.111 Determinations for Beneficiary of Letter of Credit

NOTE:

The beneficiary is the person entitled to have its complying presentation honored under the terms of the letter of credit, including a person to whom drawing rights have been transferred under a transferable letter of credit [Com. Code § 5102(a)(3); see § 56.11[2]]. Generally, the beneficiary is the seller of goods in the transaction in whose favor the credit is issued.

The beneficiary is not a party to the agreement between the issuer and the applicant pursuant to which the letter of credit is issued, and thus plays no part in setting its terms. However, the terms of the credit are so important that the parties should determine them by agreement before the credit is issued. The beneficiary should include in the underlying agreement the terms and provisions that the beneficiary requires in the letter of credit.

1. Is letter of credit irrevocable or revocable?
2. Is reputable bank committed to paying drafts or demands under letter of credit?
 - a. Issuing bank in applicant's country.
 - b. Confirming bank, if any, in beneficiary's country.
3. Are names and addresses of all parties, including persons to be notified, correct and complete?
4. Are standard terms of credit correct and satisfactory, such as:
 - a. Whether payment is at sight or on deferred basis.

- b. Shipping dates.
- c. Expiration date of credit, if any.
- d. Price, and whether price is FOB (Free On Board), CIF (Cost, Insurance, Freight), etc.
- e. Amount of credit sufficient to cover shipment.
- f. Currency of credit.
- g. Description of goods and markings.
- h. Whether delivery is partial or whole.
- i. Shipment route.

5. Are unusual terms in letter of credit acceptable and defined with sufficient clarity?

6. Is merchandise to be shipped subject to any import or export restrictions [see 19 C.F.R. pts. 10, 12, 133, 145, 161, 162]?

7. Is partial shipment permitted?

8. Is transshipment permitted?

9. Is shipment to be on particular type of vessel or aircraft?

NOTE:

Import letters of credit frequently require shipment to be made by a vessel classified A-1 in Lloyd's Register of Shipping or an equivalent register. A letter stating that the ship meets this standard is often required.

10. Is letter of credit assignable or transferable?

11. Will foreign exchange restrictions prevent payment?

12. Does beneficiary need export license or permits before transaction can occur?

13. Can all documents and conditions necessary to comply with letter of credit be obtained and fulfilled?

NOTE:

If the letter of credit contains ambiguous terms, the beneficiary should seek clarification from the advising bank. However, if the letter of credit contains incorrect terms or terms that cannot be met, the beneficiary should seek amendment by contacting the applicant [see § 56.32].

14. Can shipping requirements, such as "on deck" or "vent-stowed," be complied with by carrier?

15. If required, can seller and carrier obtain and comply with necessary insurance coverage?

B. Preliminary Determinations

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.112

§ 56.112 Determinations for Issuer of Letter of Credit

NOTE:

The issuer is the bank or other person that issues a letter of credit, excluding an individual who makes an engagement for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 5102(a)(9)].

1. Determine creditworthiness of applicant by making thorough credit check.

a. If applicant has sufficient creditworthiness, determine corresponding method of financing letter of credit.

b. If applicant has poor credit and cannot provide adequate security, refuse to issue letter of credit.

NOTE:

The creditworthiness of the applicant will determine the method of payment that assures the most security to the issuer. The worse the applicant's credit rating, the more security the issuer should require.

2. Determine method of financing letter of credit:

a. Obtain security interest in goods that are subject of transaction [see § 56.200[2] (application and security agreement)].

NOTE:

Prices in the import contract and the applicant's resale contract for the goods are useful indicators of the actual value of the goods.

- b. Have applicant execute collateral loan.
 - c. Have applicant deposit maximum amount of credit before payment.
 - d. Obtain other guarantee of payment by applicant.
3. Make sure applicant has filled out application for letter of credit completely and signed it.
4. Draft text of letter of credit carefully to ensure all contingencies are provided for.
5. Obtain copy of contract for underlying transaction to ensure terms of contract and terms of letter of credit are entirely consistent, so that strict standard of compliance will be met [see § 56.50[6][b]].
6. Keep in mind following risks:
- a. Applicant may become unable to pay agreed reimbursement after issuer has committed to making payment to beneficiary.
 - b. Goods that are subject matter of transaction may prove to be inadequate security.
 - c. Issuer itself may make error that excuses applicant from obligation to reimburse issuer.
 - d. Political and economic risks in exporting country may jeopardize transaction [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, ch. 22, The Management of Country Risk (Matthew Bender)].

§ 56.120 Procedural Guide to Import Letter of Credit Transaction

NOTE:

A letter of credit transaction is designed to assure the exporter (the beneficiary) that he or she will be paid before the goods are shipped, and to assure the importer (the applicant) that all of the terms of the contract will be complied with before payment is made, including delivery to the importer of the documents of title to the goods.

[1] Procedural Guide for Applicant

1. Ensure that applicant enters into valid sales contract with beneficiary that is underlying basis of transaction; contract should include:

- a. Details of sales transaction.
- b. Agreement for conditions in letter of credit that applicant wishes to impose on beneficiary.

2. At same time as entering into sales contract, have applicant apply for letter of credit by obtaining and completing bank's application for letter of credit [see § 56.200 (illustrative application form)], including following information:

- a. Details of transaction.
- b. Clear description of goods and quantities.
- c. Name and address of beneficiary and beneficiary's bank, if known.

- d. Which documents [see § 56.100[2]] and number of copies of each that must be presented for beneficiary to obtain payment under credit.
- e. Amount of credit and type of currency.
- f. Type of insurance required and which party will provide insurance.
- g. What type of transportation is permissible.
- h. Whether partial shipments are involved, and any minimum permissible quantities.
- i. When credit will expire.
- j. Any other conditions that must be met before beneficiary's draft or demand will be honored.

3. After bank drafts letter of credit, review credit to make sure it contains no errors and conforms to wishes of applicant.

4. Arrange for applicant to pay issuer for issuing letter of credit:

- a. Arrange for security interest in goods that are subject of transaction.
- b. Execute collateral loan.
- c. Deposit with bank maximum amount of credit in cash.

NOTE:

A letter of credit may be unsecured, or secured against goods in transaction, receivables, real estate, cash, or other property.

5. Determine how letter of credit is to be sent to beneficiary, and advise issuer of method.

- a. Direct to beneficiary.
- b. To correspondent bank that will send beneficiary advice of credit, or advice and confirmation of credit.
- c. To beneficiary's bank.

6. Ensure that issuing bank transmits letter of credit to proper bank.

7. If amendment to credit is later required because documents specified in letter of credit and documents specified in underlying sales contract conflict, or because beneficiary cannot produce required documents, have applicant advise issuer of proposed amendment by completing application to amend [see § 56.210 (application to amend)].

8. Advise applicant to obtain documents of title to goods from issuing bank to secure delivery of goods on arrival.

[2] Procedural Guide for Beneficiary

1. When parties enter into underlying sales contract, ensure beneficiary provides for conditions to be included in letter of credit beneficiary wishes to impose on applicant.
2. On notification from issuing bank that letter of credit is opened in beneficiary's favor, advise beneficiary to ship goods by delivering them to carrier in accordance with letter of credit.
3. Have beneficiary prepare commercial invoice and obtain necessary shipping, insurance, and other documents to satisfy terms of letter of credit.
4. If amendment to credit is required because documents specified in letter of credit and documents specified in underlying sales contract conflict, or because beneficiary cannot provide required documents, have beneficiary contact applicant to apply to issuer for amendment [see § 56.210 (application to amend)].
5. Once amendment has been made, direct beneficiary to send applicant written executed acceptance of amendment.
6. Direct beneficiary to present required documents and draft or demand to obtain payment from confirming or issuing bank [see § 56.220 (bill of exchange)].
7. Direct beneficiary to mail one set of nonnegotiable shipping documents to applicant as soon as shipment is made.

NOTE:

If the client's account is an electronic funds transfer account, that includes arrangements for preauthorized electronic transfers from customer's account, the client may order payment stopped if and when desired [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.10(c)].

An institution that offers electronic fund transfer accounts is liable to a customer for damages proximately caused by its failure to stop payment of a preauthorized transfer when instructed to do so in accordance with the terms and conditions of the account [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693h(a)(3)], subject to excuse for acts of God, technical malfunctions, and bona fide errors [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693h(b), (c)].

1. Order institution, orally or in writing, to discontinue previously arranged electronic transfers from customer's account [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.10(c)].

NOTE:

The institution may require written confirmation of any oral order to be made within 14 days thereafter if, when the oral communication is made, the requirement is disclosed to the consumer with the address to which that writing should be sent. If written communication is required, the oral stop payment order will cease to be binding 14 days after it was made [12 C.F.R. § 205.10].

2. Give notice any time up to three business days before scheduled date of transfer [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.10(c)].

§ 56.200 Application and Agreement for Commercial Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an application for a commercial letter of credit. The application must be completed by the applicant (or "customer") and turned in to the issuing bank to obtain issuance of the letter of credit. Although the UCC--Letters of Credit uses the broader term "issuer," rather than "issuing bank" [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(9) (issuer means a bank or other person who issues a letter of credit) cf. UCP, art. 2 (UCP applies only to issuing banks)], in practice, most issuers are issuing banks.

The application contains two parts. The first part gathers the information needed to draft the letter of credit and, when completed, lists the documents and conditions the beneficiary must present and fulfill before payment will be made under the credit. The second part is a security agreement between the issuer and the customer. The security agreement contains the terms and conditions under which the credit is established, sets forth the responsibilities of the customer and the bank concerning reimbursement, and provides that the bank will have a security interest in the goods that are the subject matter of the underlying transaction [see ch. 42, Secured Transactions]. For discussion of the obligations of the customer ("applicant") and the issuing bank in a letter of credit transaction, see § 56.11[1], [3]. For a commercial letter of credit, see § 56.201.

This application and agreement of a letter of credit is reprinted with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] Interpretation and Governing Law

This agreement provides that, subject to the laws, customs, and practices of the trade where the beneficiary is located, the letter of credit and performance of the parties under it will be governed by the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits [see § 56.15]. The agreement also states that if the customer defaults under any provision of this application and agreement, the bank may enforce its security interest granted pursuant to the Uniform Commercial Code or any other applicable law. The agreement further states that it will be governed by the laws of the state where the office of the bank that issued the letter of credit is located. In addition, the agreement specifies that any controversies will be resolved by arbitration if any party requests it, unless the controversy arises from or relates to an obligation to the bank that is secured by real property collateral, in which case the consent of all parties is required to submit the controversy to arbitration.

A. Letters of Credit
1. Applications and Other General Forms

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.201

§ 56.201 Commercial Documentary Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a commercial documentary letter of credit. The form is a typical letter of credit for an import-export transaction involving the sale of goods. The issuing bank issues the letter of credit after the applicant (or "customer") has completed the letter of credit application, signed the security agreement that is attached to the application, and made provisions to pay the issuer for amounts paid under the credit. The issuer then forwards the credit to an advising or confirming bank, which sends the beneficiary an advice or confirmation of the credit. After obtaining the necessary documents to fulfill the credit, the beneficiary presents the documents, draft, and credit for payment at the confirming bank. For an application and agreement for a commercial letter of credit, see § 56.200.

This form may be drafted as an irrevocable or revocable credit. Most commercial letters of credit are irrevocable [see [b], below].

This form is based on a letter of credit provided with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] Revocability

A letter of credit may be either revocable or irrevocable [Com. Code § 5106(a)]. Once an irrevocable credit is issued, it cannot be amended or cancelled without the consent of the beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, and issuer, except to the extent that is provides that the issuer may amend or cancel the letter of credit without that consent [see Com. Code § 5106(b)].

Unless otherwise agreed, a revocable credit may be cancelled or amended by the issuer without notice to or consent from the beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, or issuer [see Com. Code § 5106(b)].

Since irrevocable credits cannot be amended or cancelled without consent, they provide more security than revocable credits and are generally preferred by beneficiaries. Revocable credits, on the other hand, are less expensive than irrevocable credits and require that less security be given to the issuer. For this reason, revocable credits are usually preferred by applicants. In actual practice, however, revocable credits are not commonly used in important sales transactions.

Because the Commercial Code does not contain criteria for determining whether a credit is revocable or irrevocable, every letter of credit should clearly state whether it is revocable or irrevocable.

For further discussion of revocable letters of credit, see § 56.13[3]. For further discussion of irrevocable letters of credit, see § 56.13[4].

[c] Liability Despite Revocation

Despite cancellation of a revocable credit, an issuer that has honored a presentation, as permitted or required by statute [see Com. Code § 5108; § 56.50] is entitled to reimbursement by the applicant in immediately available funds not later than the date of its payment of funds [Com. Code § 5108(i)(1)].

[d] Negotiation

This form may be used as a "negotiation" letter of credit [see § 56.13[8]]. The beneficiary under a negotiation credit may present the draft and documents for payment to either a nominated bank or, if the letter of credit is freely negotiable, to any bank. The advising bank may also be the negotiating bank. When the negotiating bank has examined the documents and the draft and determined that they comply with the letter of credit, it will pay the beneficiary and take up the documents. The negotiating bank will then note the presentation on the reverse of the credit, forward the documents, and seek reimbursement from the issuing bank.

[e] Drafts and Bills of Exchange (Deferred Payment)

This form may also be used to provide for payment on demand ("sight payment" or "sight draft") or deferred payment ("time draft"). A sight draft allows the beneficiary to seek payment immediately on presenting the draft and the documentation required in the letter of credit [see Com. Code § 3108(a)]. This is to the beneficiary's advantage, because payment can be obtained as soon as the beneficiary has the required shipping documents in hand and presents them to the paying bank.

Under a time draft, payments are deferred as specified in the letter of credit. Time drafts may be paid on a fixed date or a specified number of days after sight or presentation [see Com. Code § 3108(b)]. The main reason for using a time draft is to delay payment until the applicant has received the goods. At that time, the applicant will be in a position to sell the goods immediately, providing funds to pay the issuing bank. For further discussion of sight drafts and time drafts, see § 56.14[2], [3]. A frequently used form of draft in letter of credit transactions is the bill of exchange. For further discussion and a form of bill of exchange, see § 56.220.

[f] Acceptance

This form may also be used to provide for payment on acceptance [see Com. Code §§ 5102(b), 3409(a) ("acceptance" defined)]. Acceptance may be made at any time and becomes effective when notification pursuant to instructions is given or the accepted draft is delivered in order to give rights on the acceptance of any person [Com. Code § 3409(b)].

[g] Partial Shipments and Transshipments

This form may be used to provide for partial shipments of the goods that are the subject of the letter of credit and for transshipment. Transshipment is a term used when shipment to a destination is best reached by reshipping the goods from another port.

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.202

§ 56.202 Traveler's Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a "clean" or traveler's letter of credit [see § 56.13[1]]. It allows a traveler to obtain funds anywhere in the world by presenting the letter of credit alone, without other documents [see Com. Code § 5109 (UCC Comment 3) (referring to clean credit as "suicide" credit because it grants beneficiary right to draw by mere presentation of draft)]. In practice, traveler's letters of credit have largely been rendered obsolete by more convenient methods of obtaining cash, such as credit cards and automatic teller machines.

[b] Payment Under Traveler's Letter of Credit

A traveler's letter of credit can be funded by the beneficiary or another person. If funded by the beneficiary, the beneficiary and applicant are then the same person. The credit is established in the amount deposited with the issuing bank, and the beneficiary makes periodic demands against the credit by presenting the credit at paying banks. The paying banks make notations on the credit of the details of the payment. The issuing bank agrees on the face of the credit to honor drafts negotiated by a specified date.

[c] Application of UCC to Clean Credits

In practice, the UCC Letters of Credit generally applies to documentary credits. However, it also applies to a credit issued by a bank or other person if the credit is not a documentary credit, but meets the statutory definition of letter of credit [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(10); § 56.10[1]] and satisfies the form requirements of Com. Code § 5104 [see § 56.30[1]]. Because this form is entitled a letter of credit, the UCC Letters of Credit applies to it. Note, however, that courts may look beyond the title or description of a letter of credit to the intent of the parties to determine the nature of the instrument [Wichita Eagle & B. Pub. Co., Inc. v. Pacific Nat. Bank, San Francisco (9th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 1285, 1286 (instrument labeled "letter of credit" held to be ordinary guarantee contract)].

The UCP does not apply to a traveler's credit, because the UCP covers only documentary credits [see UCP art. 1].

[a] Use of Form

This form is an application for a "standby" letter of credit [see § 56.13[12]]. The application must be completed by the applicant and turned in to the issuer (in this example, the issuing bank) to obtain issuance of the credit.

The application contains two parts. The first part gathers the information needed to draft the standby credit and, when completed, specifies the documents that must be presented and conditions that must occur before payment will be made under the credit. The second part is a security agreement between the issuer and the applicant. The security agreement contains the terms and conditions under which the credit is established and sets forth the responsibilities of the applicant and the issuer concerning advances and default. For discussion of the obligations of the applicant and the issuer in a letter of credit transaction, see § 56.11[1], [3]. For an irrevocable standby letter of credit, see § 56.204.

This form of application and agreement of a standby letter of credit is reprinted with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] Interpretation and Governing Law

This agreement provides that the letter of credit and the performance of the parties under it will be governed by the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits [see § 56.15]. The agreement also states that the application and agreement will be governed by California law, and that any controversies will be resolved by arbitration if any party requests it, unless the controversy arises from or relates to an obligation to the bank that is secured by real property collateral, in which case the consent of all parties is required to submit the controversy to arbitration.

§ 56.204 Irrevocable Standby Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an irrevocable standby letter of credit [see § 56.13[12]]. A "standby" letter of credit, also known as a "bank guarantee," is used to secure the obligation of a party in a transaction. It is an obligation of the issuing bank to pay the beneficiary only on the failure of the bank's customer to perform under a contract. It functions as a substitute for a guarantee or surety bond. Generally, the standby credit is put into effect when the beneficiary presents documents evidencing the failure to perform. This form is drafted as a guarantee for an import sales transaction. It can be modified for use as a guarantee on the default of a payment of a note, or to cover the money to be contributed by the developer of a construction project [see § 56.13[13]]. For an application and agreement for an irrevocable standby letter of credit, see § 56.203.

This form is based on an irrevocable standby letter of credit provided with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] Standby Letter of Credit Distinguished From Other Letters of Credit

Several important differences distinguish standby letters of credit from other letters of credit. First, a standby credit functions principally as a guarantee or collateral security and not as a payment mechanism. Second, in a standby credit, the buyer is generally the beneficiary, whereas in most other letters of credit, the seller is the beneficiary. Third, the triggering of payment is simpler than in other letters of credit. In standard letters of credit, payment is made on presentation of the documents specified in the credit. In a standby credit, the beneficiary need only certify in writing that the seller has defaulted to obtain payment [see Ezer, International Exporting Agreements, ch. 10, Securing the Price: Letters of Credit (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Payment at Sight

This form provides for payment on demand ("sight payment" or "sight draft"). A sight draft allows the beneficiary to seek payment immediately on presenting the draft and the documentation required in the letter of credit [see Com. Code § 3108(a)]. This is to the beneficiary's advantage, because payment can be obtained as soon as the beneficiary has the required shipping documents in hand and presents them to the paying bank. If a deferred payment is preferred, this form may be modified accordingly. Deferred payments (or "time drafts") are discussed in § 56.201[1][e].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.210

§ 56.210 Application for Amendment to Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an application for an amendment of a letter of credit. It may be used to amend an error in the original letter of credit. An amendment is generally made after the beneficiary has received the letter of credit and determined that it does not conform to the underlying contract between the beneficiary and the applicant. The presence of a nonconformity prevents the beneficiary from complying with the credit's terms; therefore, the beneficiary cannot demand payment. The beneficiary must then communicate with the applicant directly to ask for an amendment of the credit to correct the error. The applicant then applies to the issuer for an amendment.

A letter of credit can be amended only by mutual agreement of the applicant, the beneficiary, the issuer, and the confirmer, if any [see [b], below]; and this form states that the amendment is subject to acceptance by the beneficiary. Optional text has been provided so that the form can be used to amend either a commercial letter of credit [see § 56.201] or a standby letter of credit [see § 56.204].

This form is based on an application for amendment to letter of credit provided with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] Amendment

After a letter of credit is issued, the rights and obligations of a beneficiary, applicant, confirmer, or issuer are not affected by an amendment to which that person has not consented, except to the extent the letter of credit provides that it is revocable or that the issuer may amend or cancel the letter of credit without that consent [Com. Code § 5106(b); see § 56.32]. Revocable credits are rarely used because of this inherent uncertainty.

Instructions for any amendment must be complete and precise [see UCP art. 5(a)]. The amendment must also state precisely the document(s) against which payment, acceptance, or negotiation is to be made [UCP art. 5(b)].

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.211

§ 56.211 Request for Partial Transfer of Letter of Credit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a request for a partial transfer of a letter of credit. It can be used only when the letter itself is transferrable. Partial transfers are usually sought by beneficiaries who wish to pay other parties, generally suppliers. To make a partial transfer of a letter of credit, the beneficiary delivers the letter of credit to the confirming, negotiating, or issuing bank along with a request to transfer a part of the letter of credit to a second beneficiary. A transfer will not be effective unless the issuer approves it.

This form is based on a request for transfer provided with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A. The text of the form generally follows the provisions of Article 48 of the 1993 revision of the UCP [see § 56.15].

[b] Right to Transfer

Except as otherwise provided by statute [see Com. Code § 5113 (rights and obligations of successor of beneficiary); § 56.44], unless a letter of credit states that it is transferable, the right of a beneficiary to draw or otherwise demand performance under a letter of credit may not be transferred [Com. Code § 5112(a)]. Moreover, even if a letter of credit provides that it is transferable, the issuer may refuse to recognize or carry out a transfer if [Com. Code § 5112(b)]:

- The transfer would violate applicable law; or
- The transferor or transferee has failed to comply with any requirement stated in the letter of credit or any other requirement relating to transfer imposed by the issuer which is within the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit [see Com. Code § 5108(e)] or is otherwise reasonable under the circumstances.

The power of the issuer to establish "requirements" under the UCC--Letters of Credit does not include the right absolutely to refuse to recognize transfers under a transferable letter of credit [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1)]. By contrast, the UCP provides the beneficiary with a "right of request," rather than a "right to transfer," giving the transferring bank the right to accept or decline the beneficiary's request [see UCP art. 49(c)]. An issuer who wishes to retain the right to deny all transfers should not issue transferable letters of credit or should incorporate the UCP [Com. Code § 5112 (UCC Comment 1)].

The right to demand payment under a letter of credit is commonly referred to as the "right to draw" [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)]. The right to demand payment under a letter of credit is distinct from the right to receive the proceeds of the credit after all of the conditions for payment have been satisfied [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender); see also § 56.43].

When the right to demand payment has been validly transferred, the person to whom the right has been transferred is referred to as the "transferee" [Com. Code § 5112(b)] or the "second beneficiary" [UCP art. 48(a)].

For further discussion of transfer of letters of credits, see § 56.42.

[c] Warranties of Beneficiary on Transfer

If its presentation is honored, the beneficiary warrants to the issuer, to any other person to whom presentation is made, and to the applicant that there is no fraud or forgery, as described in Com. Code § 5109(a) [Com. Code § 5110(a)(1); see Com. Code § 5109(a); 56.50[2][c]]. The beneficiary further warrants to the applicant that the drawing does not violate any agreement between the applicant and the beneficiary or any other agreement intended by them to be augmented by the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5110(a)(2)]. These warranties are in addition to the warranties arising under Com. Code § 3101 (negotiable instruments) [see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments], Com. Code § 4101 (bank deposits and collections) [see California Points & Authorities, Ch. 34, Checks and Banks], Com. Code § 7101 (documents of title, including warehouse receipts and bills of lading), and Com. Code § 8101 (investment securities) [see Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] because of the presentation or transfer of documents covered by any of those sections [Com. Code § 5110(b)].

[d] Substitution of Invoices

This form includes optional text to provide that the transfer will be either with or without substitution of invoices. If there is to be a substitution of invoices, the original beneficiary transfers a portion of the credit for a lesser amount. If there is no substitution of invoices, the original beneficiary transfers all rights in the original credit up to the amount transferred and retains no interest in the amount transferred. The main reason for the substitution of invoices is to prevent the customer from learning the identity of the second beneficiary, often the original beneficiary's supplier [see McCullough, Letters of Credit, Ch. 4, The Relationship Between the Beneficiary and the Issuer (Matthew Bender)].

[e] Need to Name Transferring Bank

Under the UCP, only a designated transferring bank can transfer the letter of credit. The most logical candidate for that role is the bank authorized to pay, incur a deferred payment undertaking, accept or negotiate, or in the case of a freely negotiated letter of credit, the bank specifically authorized in the letter of credit as the transferring bank [see UCP art. 48(a)].

[f] Consent Required to Amend Transferred Credit

Under the UCP, the first beneficiary irrevocably must declare, at the time the transfer is made, whether the first beneficiary retains the right to accept or refuse subsequent amendments to the transferred letter of credit [UCP, art. 48(d)]. Further, the transferring bank has a duty to convey to the second beneficiary the first beneficiary's irrevocable instructions [UCP, art. 48(d)]. On receipt of the transferred letter of credit and the first beneficiary's instructions relating to amendments, the second beneficiary is aware of any special conditions placed on the transferred credit by the first beneficiary and is then in a better position to decide whether to avail itself of the transferred letter of credit.

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.220

§ 56.220 Bill of Exchange (Draft)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a bill of exchange (or draft) that may be used to demand payment of money in a letter of credit transaction. A bill of exchange is a formal instrument, much like a check in appearance, by terms of which the maker (or "drawer") requests that another person (the "drawee") pay a specified sum of money to the maker or a third person (called the "payee"). In a typical letter of credit transaction, the person who is selling goods in an international transaction is both the "drawer" and the "payee." Thus, the seller will typically request that payment be made to himself or herself. The person who is purchasing the goods (or the purchaser's bank) is typically the "drawee." This form contains optional text so that it may be used as a sight draft or time draft [see [c], [d], below].

This form for a bill of exchange is reprinted with the permission of the copyright owner, Bank of America N.T. & S.A.

[b] As Negotiable Instrument

A bill of exchange will be classified as a negotiable instrument if it is an order to pay a fixed amount of money that [Com. Code § 3104(a), (e)]:

- Is payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of the holder;
- Is payable on demand or at a definite time; and
- Does not state any other undertaking or instruction by the drawer or maker other than to pay money, with limited exceptions [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)].

For further discussion of negotiable instruments, see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments .

[c] Sight Draft

This form can be prepared so that it is payable on demand (a "sight draft"). A sight draft is a draft that is payable on demand, at sight, otherwise indicates that it is payable at the will of the holder, or does not state a time of payment [see Com. Code § 3108(a)]. The seller usually presents the sight draft and accompanying documents for payment before the buyer has received the goods. For this reason, sellers generally prefer sight drafts. For further discussion of sight drafts, see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments.

[d] Time Draft

This form can also be drafted so that it is payable at a definite time (a "time draft"). A draft is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable on the elapse of a definite period after sight or acceptance, at a fixed date, or at a time readily ascertainable when the draft is issued, subject to certain rights [see Com. Code § 3108(b)]. Regarding a letter of credit, a time draft is a draft that the buyer (or issuing bank) accepts by signing and thereby promising to pay on maturity at some future date. An accepted time draft is also known as a "usance bill of exchange" or "banker's acceptance."

The purpose of a time draft is to delay payment to the seller until the goods have arrived. This allows the buyer to check that the goods conform to the contract and to sell the goods, providing funds to reimburse the issuing bank. For this reason, time drafts are preferred by buyers. A time draft must first be presented to the drawee to set the maturity date, unless the date is otherwise stated in the draft. The draft is presented for payment when the time specified in the draft has expired. For further discussion of time drafts, see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments.

[e] Warranties

If its presentation is honored, the beneficiary warrants to the issuer, to any other person to whom presentation is made, and to the applicant that there is no fraud or forgery, as described in Com. Code § 5109(a) [Com. Code § 5110(a)(1); see Com. Code § 5109(a); § 56.50[2][c]]. The beneficiary further warrants to the applicant that the drawing does not violate any agreement between the applicant and the beneficiary or any other agreement intended by them to be augmented by the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5110(a)(2)]. These warranties are in addition to the warranties arising under Com. Code § 3101 (negotiable instruments) [see Ch. 55, Negotiable Instruments], Com. Code § 4101 (bank deposits and collections) [see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 34, Checks and Banks (Matthew Bender)], Com. Code § 7101 (documents of title, including warehouse receipts and bills of lading), and Com. Code § 8101 (investment securities) [see Ch. 42, Secured Transactions] because of the presentation or transfer of documents covered by any of those sections [Com. Code § 5110(b)].

[f] Time Allowed for Honor or Rejection

An issuer must honor a presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) (presentation defined as delivery of document to issuer for honor)] that, according to the standard practice of financial institutions that regularly issue letters of credit, appears on its face strictly to comply with the terms and conditions of the letter of credit [Com. Code § 5108(a); see Com. Code § 5109 (forgery or material fraud); see also Com. Code 5108(e) (standard practice)]. Unless otherwise agreed [see Com. Code § 5106 (time for issuer's performance may be otherwise modified or waived); Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2); § 56.50[3]], an issuer has a reasonable time after presentation, but not beyond the end of the seventh business day of the issuer after receipt of the documents [Com. Code § 5018(b)]:

- To honor [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(8) ("honor" of letter of credit defined)];
- To accept a draft or incur an obligation, if the letter of credit provides for honor to be completed more than seven business days after presentation;

- To give notice to a presenter of discrepancies in the presentation [see Com. Code § 5102(a)(13) (presenter defined as person making presentation as or on behalf of beneficiary or nominated person); Com. Code § 5102(a)(12) ("presentation" defined)].

Failure of the issuer to act within the prescribed time period constitutes dishonor [Com. Code § 5108 (UCC Comment 2); see Com. Code § 5102(a)(5) ("dishonor" defined)].

[g] Acceptance

"Acceptance" is the drawee's signed agreement to pay a draft as presented. The acceptance must be written on the draft, and may consist of the drawee's signature alone. Acceptance may be made at any time, and becomes effective when completed by notification or delivery [Com. Code § 3409(a)]. A draft may be accepted even though it has not been signed by the drawer, is otherwise incomplete or overdue, or has been dishonored [Com. Code § 3409(b)].

If a draft is payable at a fixed period after sight, and the acceptor fails to date its acceptance, the holder may complete the draft by supplying a date in good faith [Com. Code § 3409(c)].

§ 56.230 Notice of Funds-Transfer Error and Claim for Refund

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used by the sender of a payment to notify a bank of an acceptance or execution error and to inform the bank of the relevant facts surrounding that error. This form is drafted for use in situations in which the sender receives notice from the receiving bank and discovers an error in the bank's acceptance or execution of the payment order [see Com. Code §§ 11204, 11304], but can be adapted for use when a customer does not receive notification from the bank.

[b] "Acceptance" and "Execution" Defined

In general, "acceptance" of a payment order by the beneficiary's bank occurs at the earliest of the following times [Com. Code § 11209(b); but see Com. Code § 11209(c), (d)]:

- When the bank pays the beneficiary or notifies the beneficiary that its account has been credited and funds are withdrawable;
- When the bank receives payment of the entire amount [see Com. Code § 11403(a)(1), (2)]; or
- The next funds-transfer business day following the payment date if the sender's order is fully covered by a withdrawable credit in an authorized account of the sender, or the bank has otherwise received full payment from the sender, and the bank does not reject the order.

A receiving bank other than a beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order when it executes the order [Com. Code § 11209(a); but see Com. Code § 11209(d) (date of acceptance)]. For further discussion, see § 56.63.

A payment order is "executed" by a receiving bank when it issues a payment order intended to carry out the payment order received by the bank [Com. Code § 11301(a)]. When a receiving bank accepts a payment order, the bank must follow specified procedures in executing that order [see Com. Code § 11302; see also Com. Code §§ 11303-11305 (execution errors)]. For further discussion, see § 56.68.

[c] Receiving Bank's Duty to Make Refunds and Pay Interest

If a receiving bank accepts a payment order issued in the name of its customer as sender and the order is (1) not authorized and not effective [see Com. Code § 11202], or (2) effective, but not enforceable, in whole or in part, against the customer [see Com. Code § 11203], the bank must refund any payment received from the customer for the payment order to the extent that the bank is not entitled to enforce payment [Com. Code § 11204(a)]. The bank must pay interest on the refundable amount, calculated from the date that the bank received payment until the date of the refund. However, the bank need not pay interest if the customer fails to exercise ordinary care to determine that the order was not authorized by the customer and to notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time (not exceeding 90 days) after the customer received notification from the bank that the order was accepted, or that the customer's account was debited with respect to the order [Com. Code § 11204(a)].

If the sender of an erroneously-executed payment order [see Com. Code § 11303] receives notification from the receiving bank that the order was executed or that the sender's account was debited with respect to the order, the sender must exercise ordinary care to determine, on the basis of information available to the sender, that the order was erroneously executed and to notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days after the notification from the bank was received by the sender [Com. Code § 11304]. If the sender fails to exercise this duty, the bank is not obligated to pay interest on the refundable amount [Com. Code § 11304; see Com. Code § 11402].

If a funds transfer is completed but the receiving bank's breach of its execution obligations [see Com. Code § 11302] results in a delay in payment to the beneficiary, the bank is obligated to pay interest, to either the sender or the beneficiary, for the period of delay caused by the improper execution [Com. Code § 11305(a)].

[d] Additional Damages

In addition to its obligations to make refunds and pay interest on the refundable amount [see [c], above], a bank may be liable for additional damages, such as execution expenses and incidental expenses and interest losses resulting from an improper execution [see Com. Code § 11305(b), (d)], consequential damages if recovery is provided for in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [see Com. Code § 11305(c), (d)], and attorneys' fees [see Com. Code § 11305(e)]. This form may be adapted to demand payment of these additional damages. For further discussion, see §§ 56.70, 56.71, and 56.113.

§ 56.240 Disclosures by Financial Institution Accompanying Distribution of Unsolicited Access Device

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a disclosure that may be used by a financial institution to send an unsolicited electronic fund transfer access card or code to a consumer. This form satisfies the disclosure requirements for unsolicited distributions of access devices set forth in Appendix A to Title 12, Part 205, of the Code of Federal Regulations. An institution that wishes to distribute an unsolicited access device may use these model clauses or disclosure clauses of its own design [12 C.F.R. pt. 205, app. A].

This form can also be used to satisfy other disclosure requirements relating to electronic fund transfers, including the required initial disclosure of terms and conditions when the consumer and the financial institution contract for electronic fund transfer service [12 C.F.R. pt. 205, app. A; see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.5(b)(2), (3), 205.7].

Use of the model clauses and compliance with other requirements of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act will protect an institution from liability to the extent the clauses accurately reflect the institution's services [12 C.F.R. pt. 205, app. A; see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1693m, 1693n].

These disclosures must be clear and readily understandable, in writing, and in a form the consumer may keep [12 C.F.R. § 205.4(a)(1)]. The disclosures must include the matters required by the Act and the governing regulations, to the extent applicable [15 U.S.C. § 1693(c)(a)]. The disclosures may be provided to the consumer in electronic form, subject to compliance with the consumer consent and other applicable provisions of the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-Sign Act) (15 U.S.C. 7001 et seq.) [12 C.F.R. § 205.4(a)(1)]. For further discussion of the E-Sign Act, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[b] Issuance of Access Device

In general, a financial institution may not issue an unsolicited access device [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.5(a)]. However, an institution may distribute an access device to a consumer on an unsolicited basis if [15 U.S.C. § 1693i(b); 12 C.F.R. § 205.5(b); see 15 U.S.C. § 1693c (disclosure requirements)]:

- The access device is not validated;
- The distribution is accompanied by complete disclosure of the consumer's rights and liabilities that will apply if the access device is validated;
- The distribution is accompanied by a clear explanation that the access device is not validated and how to dispose of the access device if validation is not desired; and
- The access device is validated only in response to a request or application from the consumer, and after verification of the consumer's identity by a reasonable means.

For further discussion, see § 56.82.

[c] Contents of Disclosure

A financial institution that wishes to send a consumer an unsolicited access device must include a complete disclosure of the consumer's rights and liabilities that will apply if the access device is validated [12 C.F.R. § 205.5(b)(3); see 12 C.F.R. § 205.7(a)]. The disclosure must be in a readily understandable written statement that the consumer may keep, and must include all of the following [12 C.F.R. § 205.7(b)]:

- A summary of the consumer's liability under 12 C.F.R. § 205.6, or other applicable law or agreement, for unauthorized electronic fund transfers. The financial institution may choose to include a statement on the advisability of promptly reporting loss or theft of the access device or unauthorized transfers.
- The telephone number and address of the person or office to be notified when the consumer believes that an unauthorized electronic fund transfer has been made or may be made.
- The financial institution's business days [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.2(d)].
- The type of electronic fund transfers that the consumer may make and any limitations on the frequency and dollar amount of transfers. The details of the limitations need not be disclosed if their confidentiality is essential to maintain the security of the electronic fund transfer system.
- Any charges for electronic fund transfers or for the right to make transfers.
- A summary of the consumer's right to receive documentation of electronic fund transfers [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.9, 205.10(a), (d)].
- A summary of the consumer's right to stop payment of a preauthorized electronic fund transfer and the procedure for initiating a stop-payment order [see 12 C.F.R. § 205.10(c)].
- A summary of the financial institution's liability to the consumer for its failure to make or stop certain transfers [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693h].
- The circumstances under which the financial institution, in the ordinary course of business, will disclose information to third parties concerning the consumer's account.

- A notice concerning error resolution procedures.
- A notice that a fee may be imposed by an automated teller machine operator when the consumer initiates an electronic fund transfer or makes a balance inquiry, and by any network used to complete the transaction. (For these purposes, an "automated teller machine operator" is any person that operates an automated teller machine at which a consumer initiates an electronic fund transfer or a balance inquiry and that does not hold the account to or from which the transfer is made, or about which an inquiry is made [12 C.F.R. § 205.16(a)(1)].)

PART IV. FORMS
B. Electronic Transfers of Funds
2. Fund Transfers Under Electronic Fund Transfer Act

22-56 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 56.241

§ 56.241 Demand for Resolution of Erroneous Electronic Fund Transfer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used by an individual customer (or "consumer") of a bank or other financial institution to demand that an erroneous electronic fund transfer to or from the customer's account be corrected [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693f(a)]. The right to make this demand is guaranteed by the federal Electronic Fund Transfer Act [15 U.S.C. §§ 1693-1693r]. Acts constituting an error for purposes of this form are discussed in [b], below.

[b] "Error" Defined

For the purpose of the error resolution provisions of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act, an error may consist of any of the following [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(f); 12 C.F.R. § 205.11(a)]:

- An unauthorized electronic fund transfer.
- An incorrect electronic fund transfer from or to the consumer's account.
- The omission from a periodic statement of an electronic fund transfer.
- A computational or bookkeeping error made by the institution relating to an electronic fund transfer.
- Receipt by the consumer of an incorrect amount of money from an electronic terminal.
- An electronic fund transfer not properly documented [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.9 (documentation of transfers), 205.10(a) (preauthorized transfers to a consumer's account)].

- A consumer's request for additional information or clarification concerning an electronic fund transfer or any documentation required by the Act [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 205.9 (documentation of transfers), 205.10(a) (preauthorized transfers to a consumer's account, including a request the consumer makes to determine whether an error exists under 12 C.F.R. § 205.11(a)(1)(i)-(vi) [see items above].

[c] Error Resolution

If the consumer detects an error [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693f(f); see also [b], above] in the electronic fund transfer documentation furnished by his or her financial institution, the consumer may be able to obtain resolution of the problem. The institution must receive oral or written notice of the claimed error within 60 days after having transmitted the documentation of a transfer. The notice must indicate the consumer's name and account number, the consumer's belief that the documentation or account contains an error and the amount of the error, and the reasons for the consumer's belief that an error has occurred. If the notice is oral, the institution may require that written confirmation be furnished within 10 days [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(a)].

The institution must then investigate the alleged error, determine whether an error has occurred, and report or mail the results and its determination to the consumer within 10 business days [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(a)]. If the institution finds that an error did occur, it must correct the error within one business day after making that finding [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(b)].

Rather than investigating, reporting, and, if necessary, correcting a claimed error within the 10-day period discussed above, the institution may elect, pending its investigation and determination, to give the consumer a provisional credit for the amount in dispute plus any applicable interest within 10 business days after receipt of the consumer's notice (less any amount for which the consumer is liable on an unauthorized transfer) [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693g; see also § 56.88]. This investigation, however, must be completed within 45 days after receipt of the error notice; and, during the investigation period, the consumer must be allowed full use of the amount provisionally credited [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(c)]. Alternatively, the institution may issue a denial of error [see 15 U.S.C. § 1693f(d); see also [d], below].

An institution that does not give a provisional credit will be liable for treble damages if it fails to make a good faith investigation of the claimed error or does not have a reasonable basis for believing that the consumer's account is not in error [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(e)(1)]. The institution will also be liable for treble damages if it knowingly and willfully concludes that the consumer's account is not in error when that conclusion cannot reasonably be drawn from the evidence available at the time of the investigation [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(e)(2)].

[d] Denial of Claimed Error

If the institution determines, after an investigation of a claimed error, that an error did not occur, it must send the consumer an explanation of its findings within three business days after the end of its investigation. The explanation letter must include notice of the consumer's right to request reproductions of the documents upon which it relied in denying the consumer's claim that an error occurred. When requested by the consumer, the institution must promptly send him or her those reproductions [15 U.S.C. § 1693f(d)].

§ 57.10 Hardware and Firmware

Computers are referred to in the industry and in this chapter as "hardware," and can be categorized by size. Mainframe computers are the largest and most expensive. Minicomputers are less powerful and less expensive. Both of these are sold as complete systems that may involve peripheral equipment and computer programs in addition to the computers themselves. Contracts for the acquisition of these systems generally are the subject of negotiation between a commercial buyer and the manufacturer or a distributor. The third basic category of hardware consists of personal computers ("microcomputers") that generally are sold to retail stores by distributors and retailed to the general public without negotiation of contract terms.

Every computer has a central processing unit ("CPU") that does the work it is told to do by the instructions contained in computer programs. These programs are generally referred to in the industry and in this chapter as "software," although that term encompasses both computer programs and the written manuals and other materials that accompany them. In copyright law, a "computer program" is a set of statements or instructions to be used directly or indirectly in a computer in order to bring about a certain result [17 U.S.C. § 101].

Computer chips or integrated circuits containing thousands of transistors and circuits photographically etched and deposited on silicon wafers, and the "mask work" patterns embodied in them, are referred to as "firmware". A "semiconductor chip product" ("chip") has two or more layers of metallic, insulating, or semiconductor material deposited on or etched from a piece of semiconductor material and functions as an electronic circuit [see 17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(1)]. A "mask work" is a series of related images that represent the patterns embodied in a semiconductor chip product [see 17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(2)].

A mask work that is fixed in a semiconductor chip product is entitled to special protection [see 17 U.S.C. § 902], similar to copyright protection, under the Semiconductor Chip Protection Act of 1984 [17 U.S.C. §§ 901-914]. A mask work is "fixed" in a chip when its embodiment in the chip is sufficiently permanent or stable to permit the pattern to be perceived or reproduced from the chip for more than a transitory period [see 17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(3)].

§ 57.11 Computer Programs

[1] Computer Program Language

Computer programs are written in different levels of "language." High-level language, such as BASIC, C, C++, COBAL, FORTRAN, Ada, and Pascal, are usually referred to as programming language. A somewhat lower level is "assembly" language; it consists of alphanumeric labels. Both of these are referred to as having been written in "source code" [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1243] . The source code is the version produced initially by a programmer and contains commentary by the programmer indicating how it works and how it may be revised or updated. Moreover, it is the version that is used to "maintain" (revise, update, or correct) the program.

The third and lowest level is "machine" language and consists of binary codes (using 0 and 1 in various combinations). Statements in machine language are referred to as having been written in "object code." The CPU can only follow instructions written in the binary object code. Programs written in source code are translated by a "compiler" program into object code for use by the computer [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1243] .

[2] Computer Programs and Software

Computer programs, or "software", are stored or "fixed" on a variety of memory devices, including tape, disks, CD-Rom's, and chips called "Read Only Memory" ("ROM"). The ROM chip is a permanent memory device that is incorporated into the circuitry of a computer, while the tape, disk, or CD-Rom is an auxiliary memory device that can be inserted into the computer and from which data or instructions can be read [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1243] .

Computer programs are categorized by function as either "application" or "operating system" programs. Application programs usually perform a specific task for the computer user, such as instructing the computer to perform word processing or video game functions. In contrast, operating system programs generally manage the internal functions of the computer or facilitate use of the application programs [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1243] .

Computer programs are also categorized as either "standard" or "custom." A standard program is reproduced and made available to all users without any changes, while custom programs are either custom designed for a particular use or user or standard programs that have been "customized" or modified for a particular use or user. A standard program is most likely to have been tested through use and to have been "debugged," that is, to have had its faults found and corrected. Such a program is generally referred to as "stable and well defined," is generally accompanied by documentation that describes its functions and gives directions for usage, and may be either accompanied by technical specifications or warranted to perform in accordance with those specifications. The custom or customized program may not have that degree of perfection and, accordingly, is most likely to be accompanied by a more limited warranty.

[3] Open Source Software

Open source software is software that is licensed under a General Public License ("GPL") [see <http://www.opensource.org/>; see also http://www.opensource.org/docs/definition_plain.php]. Open source software usually lacks the ownership constraints, such as copyright restrictions, that are usually placed on commercially licensed software. Open source software is the result of a collaboration among many unrelated software developers. The GPL usually requires the one who modifies the software, and distributes the code, to share the modifications at little or not cost. This process of modification and distribution relies on the assumption that each developer that modifies the open source software will honor the intellectual property rights of others. Therefore one of the biggest risks with free and open source software is the potential to make the software user liable for unknown breaches of third party intellectual property rights. Furthermore, the issue of whether or not an open source software license is enforceable is unknown. In Progress Software Corp. v. My SQL AB [Progress Software Corp. v. MySQL AB (D. Mass 2002) 195 F. Supp.2d 328] , in which a licensor sought an injunction, the court did not reach the issue of enforceability of the open source software license and held that the licensor had not shown a likelihood of success on the merits nor irreparable harm. To date, no other court has held whether an open source code license is an enforceable contract.

§ 57.12 Software Licensing

A licensing agreement is not a sale. Rather, it is a grant of permission to do a particular thing or to exercise a certain privilege [Blatz Brewing Co. v. Collins (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 438, 448, 199 P. 2d 34] . A software license is a contract by the owner of the computer program ("Licensor") and a user of the computer program ("Licensee") which outline the rights and responsibilities of the parties in regard to the uses and interests each has in the computer program or software.

Licensing agreements commonly are used with computer software because they do not transfer title to the software. Therefore, the licensee does not have sole and exclusive rights to the software, absent a license provision to that effect. The license permits the software owner to impose use restrictions designed to protect its proprietary interests. Specifically, the software owner can include provisions restricting access to the software, prohibiting its transfer, or prohibiting disclosure of its contents to other persons. Such restricted access is vital to intellectual property protection of software.

If licensed technology is developed with government funding, such as with grants from a federal agency, the software license should include a provision which acknowledges the governmental funding. In such a circumstance, the license should further state that the licensed technology is subject to the Bayh-Dole Act of 1980 [35 U.S.C. § 200 et seq.]. Under the Bayh-Dole Act, the federal government has the ability, under specified circumstances, to (1) suppress the licensed technology in the interest of national security; (2) use the licensed technology for research purposes; and (3) take control of the licensed technology.

For a more detailed discussion of intellectual property protection of software, see §§ 57.20-57.23 and Ch. 103A, Copyrights , and Gilson on Trademarks, Chs. 2, Trademark Subject Matter, and 7A, Trademark Law and the Internet (Matthew Bender).

§ 57.13 Warranty and Remedy Provisions

[1] UCC Divisions 2 and 10

The Uniform Commercial Code, as enacted in California [Com. Code § 1101 et seq.] ("UCC"), contains provisions governing the law of sales [Com. Code §§ 2101-2801], including warranty provisions. The UCC provisions governing the law of sales apply to transactions in goods unless the context of a particular provision requires a different application [Com. Code § 2102]. "Goods" are things that are movable at the time of contracting [Com. Code § 2105(1)], as well as future goods [Com. Code § 2105(2)].

The UCC sales and warranty provisions apply to any outright sale of computer equipment (computers, peripheral equipment, and/or software), just as they would to a similar sale of any other type of goods.

The UCC also has been held to apply to most commercial software license agreements. Even though most software licenses are not characterized as a sale, courts have held that computer software is a "good" and therefore governed by Division 2 of the UCC, which applies to "transactions in goods" [see Com. Code § 2102; see also Micro Data Base Sys., Inc. v. Dharma Sys., Inc. (7th Cir. 1998), 148 F.3d 649, 654-655 ; I.Lan Sys., Inc. v. Netscout Service Level Corp. (D. Mass. 2002), 183 F. Supp.2d 328, 332 ; Berthold Types Ltd. v. Adobe Sys., Inc. (N.D. Ill. 2000) 101 F. Supp.2d 697, 698]. When a license agreement includes provisions for services, such as installation or training, courts will then to look at the whole agreement to determine whether goods or services predominate. Several courts have held that the services necessary for the implementation of a software system are incidental to the essence of the agreement, which is, in substance a contract for the sale of goods [see Newcourt Financial USA, Inc. v. FT Mortgage Companies, Inc. (N.D. Ill. 2001) 161 F. Supp.2d 894, 897-899 ; see also Rosenblatt & Co. v. Davidge Data Sys. Corp. (N.Y. App. Div. 2002), 743 N.Y.S. 2d 471, 472].

For a more detailed coverage of contracts for the sale of goods under the UCC, see Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under The Uniform Commercial Code.

Leases of computer hardware and related equipment are covered by Division 10 of the UCC, which contains warranty provisions similar to those governing sales [see Com. Code §§ 10102, 10210-10215; see also Ch. 53, Personal Property Leasing].

[2] Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act

The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [Civ. Code § 1790 et seq.] covers both sales and leases of goods primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1791(a)]. For purposes of the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act, a "lease" is defined as any contract for lease or bailment for the use of consumer goods by an individual for a term exceeding four months [Civ. Code § 1791(g)]. A "sale" is (1) the passing of title from the seller to the buyer for a price, or (2) a consignment for sale [Civ. Code § 1791(n)]. The Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act was intended to supplement the provisions of the UCC, rather than supersede the rights and obligations created by it, and thus the provisions of the UCC governing sales properly attach to those of the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [Krieger v. Nick Alexander Imports, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 205, 215, 285 Cal. Rptr. 717] .

[3] Contractual Warranties

Regardless of whether or not the UCC or the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act provisions would ordinarily apply, the parties are free to contract for such warranties and remedies as they desire, subject of course to any other legal limitations. Further, the UCC permits parties to vary the effect of its provisions by agreement [see Com. Code § 1302(a)]. Thus, these provisions can be modified or eliminated in situations in which they would ordinarily apply, or made applicable to situations (such as leases or licenses) in which they would ordinarily be inapplicable. Accordingly, the leases, licenses, and other forms contained in this chapter, as well as the sales agreements, include UCC warranty provisions.

[4] Remedies

Remedies for breach of a contract under the UCC are governed by [Com. Code §§ 2701-2725]. The provisions of Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 2101 et seq.] do not impair the remedies for breach of any obligation or promise collateral or ancillary to a contract for the sale of goods [Com. Code § 2701]. Com. Code § 2719 allows parties to expressly contract for remedies in addition to or in substitution for those provided under the UCC [Com. Code § 2719(1)(a)]. Such remedies may include limiting or altering the measure of damages recoverable to the return of goods and repayment of the price, or to repair and replace the nonconforming goods [Com. Code § 2719(1)(a)]. Any contractual remedy is an optional remedy unless it is expressly agreed that the contractual remedy is an exclusive and sole remedy [Com. Code § 2719(1)(b)]. Consequential damages may also be limited or excluded unless such limitation or exclusion is unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. A limitation of consequential damages when the loss is commercial is valid unless it is proved that the limitation is unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)].

§ 57.14 Antitrust Considerations

[1] Sherman Antitrust Act

An attorney preparing a computer or software license that provides for an exclusive dealing arrangement needs to be aware of the relevance and potential application of numerous federal and California statutes regulating trade.

The Sherman Antitrust Act [15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] contains the broadest antitrust language. It provides that every contract, combination in the form of a trust, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the states and with foreign nations is illegal [15 U.S.C. § 1]. In particular, the Act prohibits monopolies [15 U.S.C. § 2], the elements of which are (1) monopoly power, (2) willful acquisition of power, and (3) causal antitrust injury [Christofferson Dairy, Inc. v. MMM Sales, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 849 F.2d 1168, 1174] . In addition, the Sherman Act prevents vertical price fixing, which is a supplier's attempt to set the price charged by those who resell its products [General Cinema Corp. v. Buena Vista Distribution Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 681 F.2d 594, 597 ; see Leegin Creative Leather Prods. v. PSKS, Inc. (2007) 127 S. Ct. 2705, 168 L. Ed. 2d 623, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 8668, at *10 (vertical price restraints are to be judged by rule of reason, not by rule of per se illegality), overruling Dr. Miles Med. Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. (1911) 220 U.S. 373, 407-409, 31 S. Ct. 376, 55 L. Ed. 502 (established rule that it is per se illegal under § 1 of Sherman Act for manufacturer to agree with its distributor to set minimum price that distributor can charge for manufacturer's goods)]; horizontal price fixing, which is an agreement among competitors that interferes with the setting of a price by free market forces [United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc. (1940) 310 U.S. 150, 224, 60 S. Ct. 811, 84 L. Ed. 1129] ; and tying arrangements, which are agreements by a seller to sell a product only on the condition that the buyer purchase a product from the seller, or not purchase from any other supplier [Northern Pac. R. Co. v. United States (1958) 356 U.S. 1, 5, 78 S. Ct. 514, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545] .

The reach of the Sherman Act is extremely broad. It applies to every person engaged in business whose activities might restrain or monopolize commercial dealings among the states [United States v. Underwriters Ass'n (1944) 322 U.S. 533]. This standard theoretically can reach anyone involved in business.

The Sherman Act [15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.], however, does not restrict the right of a manufacturer to exercise independent discretion as to the parties with which it will deal [United States v. Colgate & Co. (1918) 250 U.S. 300, 307, 39 S. Ct. 465, 63 L. Ed. 992] . Accordingly, exclusive distributorships (i.e., exclusive territories) generally have been upheld [see United States v. Arnold, Schwinn & Co. (1967) 388 U.S. 365, 376, 87 S. Ct. 1856, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1249 ; see also Klor's v. Broadway-Hale Stores (1959) 359 U.S. 207, 212, 79 S. Ct. 705, 3 L. Ed. 2d 741] .

For a more detailed discussion of antitrust and trade regulation statutes, see Ch. 91, Contracts with Sales Representatives .

[2] Clayton Act

The Clayton Act [15 U.S.C. § 12 et seq.] prohibits price fixing and tying and exclusive dealing arrangements when the effect of any condition, agreement, or understanding is to substantially lessen competition. Especially pertinent is Section 3 of that Act [15 U.S.C. § 12 et seq.], which makes it unlawful for any person engaged in interstate or foreign commerce to lease, sell, or contract to sell goods or commodities for resale on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser must not deal in goods of a competitor, when the effect of that transaction may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce [15 U.S.C. § 14]. Section 3 of the Clayton Act is considerably broader than the Sherman Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] and, thus, if a particular arrangement does not violate the Clayton Act, it will not violate the Sherman Act [see Times-Picayune Pub. Co. v. United States (1952) 345 U.S. 594, 608, 609, 73 S. Ct. 872, 97 L. Ed. 1277] . Exclusive dealing arrangements may also be subject to the prohibition against unfair methods of competition contained in Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act [see Times-Picayune Pub. Co. v. United States (1952) 345 U.S. 594, 609, 73 S. Ct. 872, 97 L. Ed. 1277] .

A requirement in a computer sale or lease agreement that the buyer or lessee buy goods or services only from the seller or lessor of other goods or services ("tying arrangements") is an exclusionary condition that violates the Sherman Act prohibition against contracts in restraint of trade [see 15 U.S.C. § 1] and the Clayton Act prohibitions against exclusive dealing arrangements [see 15 U.S.C. § 14]. Thus, for example, a computer manufacturer that refused to license its software to anyone who would not also buy its computer equipment was held to be engaged in an unlawful tying arrangement under these statutes [see Digidyne Corp. v. Data General Corp. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1336, 1338, 1339] . Such a requirement may also be treated as an unfair or deceptive trade practice under the Federal Trade Commission Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 45].

To establish that an unlawful tying arrangement exists, all of the following must occur [see Siegel v. Chicken Delight, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 448 F.2d 43, 47] :

- The scheme in question must involve two distinct items (for example, the equipment and a maintenance agreement, or the equipment and specified software) and provide that one, the tying product, cannot be obtained unless the other, the tied product, is also purchased.
- The tying product must possess sufficient economic power to appreciably restrain competition in the tied product market.
- A not insubstantial amount of commerce must be affected by the arrangement.

Until 2006, the fact of sufficient economic power could be presumed if the tying product was patented. The Supreme Court concluded, however, that the presumption cannot be supported in view of the patent law [Ill. Tool Works, Inc. v. Indep. Ink, Inc. (2006) 547 U.S. 28, 31, 42-43, 126 S. Ct. 1281, 164 L. Ed. 2d 26 (any conclusion that particular tying arrangement is unlawful must be supported by proof of power in relevant market rather than by mere presumption, whether or not tying product is patented)].

Legal justification may exist for certain types of tying arrangements [see Siegel v. Chicken Delight, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 448 F.2d 43, 51 ; see also United States v. Jerrold Electronics Corp. (E.D. Pa.1960) 187 F. Supp. 545, 560 , aff'd, 365 U.S. 567 (1961)] . However, there is no basis for an exception when the benefit to the party imposing the arrangement is the elimination of business competition and the creation of a monopoly [see International B. Mach. Corp. v. United States (1935) 298 U.S. 131, 139, 140, 56 S. Ct. 701, 80 L. Ed. 1085] .

For a more detailed discussion of antitrust and trade regulation statutes, see Ch. 91, Contracts with Sales Representatives .

[3] Other Trade Regulations

The Robinson-Patman Antidiscrimination Act [15 U.S.C. §§ 13-13b, 21] amends the Clayton Act and prohibits price discrimination if the effect of the discrimination is to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. However, good faith discrimination is permissible to meet competition [15 U.S.C. § 13(a)].

The Federal Trade Commission Act [15 U.S.C. § 41 et seq.] prohibits unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce [15 U.S.C. § 45]. Conduct that violates this act as "unfair competition" is a flexible concept, and may involve a variety of unrelated activities [Federal Trade Comm'n v. Bunte Bros. (1941) 312 U.S. 349, 353-354, 61 S. Ct. 580, 85 L. Ed. 881] .

The most important California statute regulating trade is the Cartwright Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.], which prohibits most trusts as unlawful, against public policy, and void [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16726; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16725 (agreements to promote competition or trade not unlawful)].

§ 57.20 Copyright Protection

[1] Copyright Protection of Software

A copyright extends to works that have been fixed in any tangible means of expression from which they can be perceived, reproduced, or otherwise communicated, either directly or with the aid of a machine or device [17 U.S.C. § 102(a)]. This statutory language was intended to supersede the former rule that copyright did not extend to material that was not in a form that human beings could perceive [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1248 ; see Williams Electronics, Inc. v. Artic International, Inc. (3d Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 870, 877 ; see also Apple Computer, Inc. v. Formula Int'l Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 562 F. Supp. 775, 781 , aff'd, 725 F.2d 521 (9th Cir. 1984)] . These amendments firmly established the copyrightability of computer programs [Williams Elecs., Inc. v. Artic Int'l, Inc. (3d Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 870, 875 ; Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1248 ; see Apple Computer, Inc. v. Formula Int'l Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 562 F. Supp. 775, 781 , aff'd, 725 F.2d 521 (9th Cir. 1984)] .

The Copyright Act defines "computer program" as a set of statements or instructions to be used directly or indirectly in a computer to bring about a certain result [17 U.S.C. § 101], and provides that it is not an infringement for the owner of a copy of a computer program to make another copy or adaptation of that program when necessary to the utilization of that program or for archival purposes or to make a copy for machine maintenance or repair, if that copy is used in no other manner and is destroyed immediately after the maintenance or repair is complete. However, copies can be transferred only as part of the transfer of all rights in the program, and adaptations can be transferred only with the copyright owner's permission [see 17 U.S.C. § 117]. The Ninth Circuit has held that loading software into a computer's random access memory creates a copy entitled to copyright protection [see MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer, Inc. (9th Cir. 1994) 991 F.2d 511, 519] .

For a general discussion of copyright law, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

[2] Computer Program Constitutes "Literary Work"

Computer programs or software are literary works for purposes of the copyright law [see 17 U.S.C. § 101] ("computer program" and "literary works" defined). Such literary works are protected from unauthorized copying under the copyright law [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1249 , cert. dismissed, 464 U.S. 1033 (1984) (computer program in object code embedded in ROM chip is appropriate subject for copyright); see Williams Elecs., Inc. v. Artic Intern, Inc. (3rd Cir. 1982) 685 F. 2d 870, 877 (rejecting argument that infringement of computer program was limited to copying computer text, but not to duplication of computer program fixed on silicon chip); Micro Star v. Formgen, Inc. (1998) 154 F.3d 1107, 1112 (CD containing 300 downloaded "levels" of play created by players of popular computer game was unauthorized derivative work); Sony Computer Enter., Inc. v. Connectix Corp. (9th Cir. 2000) 203 F.3d 596, 607 (drafting entirely new object code for game station was transformative, despite similarities to defendant's play station in function and screen output, and thus did not infringe on defendant's copyright)].

Copyright protection does not extend to the methodology or processes adopted by the programmer, but only to the "writing" expressing the programmer's ideas [H.R. Rep. No. 94-1476, at 57 (1976); see Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1250] . Copyright protection, however, includes the structure, sequence, and organization of the program, as well as its literal code [Whelan Assocs., Inc. v. Jaslow Dental Lab. (3d Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 1222, 1248] , although the Ninth Circuit has held that certain aspects of graphical user interface software (the use of windows to display multiple images on a computer screen and to facilitate user interaction with the information contained in the windows; iconic representation of familiar objects from the office environment; manipulation of icons to convey instructions and control operation of the computer; use of menus to store information or computer functions in a place that is convenient to reach, but saves screen space for other images; and opening and closing of objects as a means of retrieving, transferring, and storing information) are "ideas" in which no copyright protection inheres [see Apple Computer, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 35 F.3d 1435, 1443-1444] .

For an additional discussion of copyright law as it pertains to computer software, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights § 103A.95.

[3] Infringement of Program Copyright

Determining whether copyright infringement of a computer program has occurred [see 17 U.S.C. § 501] involves a three-step process [Atari Games Corp. v. Nintendo of Am. Inc. (Fed. Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 832, 839] :

- Determining at what level of abstraction copying has occurred.
- Filtering to separate protectable expression from non-protectable material in the copied program.
- Comparing the infringer's work to protectable expression in the copied program.

Proof of copying is made by showing literal copying or by showing that the infringer had access to the copied program and that the infringer's work is substantially similar to the copied work [Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Phoenix Control Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 1173, 1176] .

Disassembly of copyrighted object code is fair use of a copyrighted work [see 17 U.S.C. § 107], and therefore not infringement, if disassembly provides the only means of access to elements of the code that are not protected by copyright (such as ideas and functional elements) and the copier has a legitimate reason for seeking access [Sega Enterprises, Ltd. v. Accolade, Inc. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1992) 977 F.2d 1510, 1527] . Accordingly, reverse engineering of a computer program to understand unprotected elements is fair use [Atari Games Corp. v. Nintendo of Am. Inc. (Fed. Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 832, 843] .

The owner of a copyright in software has a cause of action for infringement if the holder of a license to use the software makes copies of it in violation of the license [Wall Data Inc. v. Los Angeles County Sheriff's Dep't (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 769, 774, 777 (no fair use defense was available to avoid infringement liability when sheriff's department bought 3,663 single-computer licenses for software, installed that software on more than 6,000 computers in its network, and configured network-managing servers so that no more than 3,663 of those computers could use that software at any given time)].

[4] Limitations of Copyright Protection

It is not infringement when the owner of a copy of a computer program makes or authorizes the making of another copy or adaptation of that program, provided that the new copy or adaptation is either [17 U.S.C. § 117(a)]:

- Created as an essential step in the utilization of the computer program in conjunction with a machine and is used in no other manner; or
- For archival purposes only and all archival copies are destroyed in the event that continued possession of the computer program ceases to be rightful.

This protection against infringement liability is afforded to an owner, and does not reach a mere licensee, of a copy of the software. Generally, if the copyright owner makes it clear (for instance, in a "shrink-wrap" license or a "click-through" license) that the owner is granting only a license to a copy of software and imposes significant restrictions on the purchaser's ability to redistribute or transfer that copy, then the purchaser is considered to be a licensee, not an owner, of the software [Wall Data Inc. v. Los Angeles County Sheriff's Dep't (9th Cir. 2006) 447 F.3d 769, 784-785 (also stating in dictum that even if software purchaser were owner rather than licensee of multiple copies of software, "essential step" defense could not embrace copying of software onto many more computers than number of single-computer licenses that were purchased)]. In actual fact, scarcely any end user of software actually owns a copy of the program--a user merely has a license in almost every case, in accordance with common practice in the software industry.

Exact copies prepared as described above may be leased, sold, or otherwise transferred, along with the copy from which the copies were prepared, only as part of the lease, sale, or other transfer of all rights in the program. Adaptations prepared in this manner may be transferred only with authorization of the copyright owner [17 U.S.C. § 117(b)]. In addition, subject to specified conditions, it is not an infringement for an owner or lessee of a machine to make or authorize the making of a copy of a computer program solely for purposes of maintenance or repair of that machine [see 17 U.S.C. § 117(c)].

§ 57.21 Trade Secret Protection of Software

[1] Trade Secret Protection in General

The foundation of trade secret law is Justice Holmes' statement that a party has the right to keep the work it has done or paid for doing to itself and others may not steal that work [see Chicago Bd. of Trade v. Christie Grain & Stock Co. (1905) 198 U.S. 236, 250, 25 S. Ct. 637, 49 L. Ed. 1031]. If the owner of a computer program chooses not to copyright it (and cannot patent it), trade secret protection embodied in a licensing agreement should be used. Trade secret protection is appropriate since intellectual property, as distinguished from the copyrighted contents of a publication or a patented device or process, is given legal protection if it is acquired and used under a contractual or fiduciary relationship between the proprietor and the user [see J. Irizarry y Puente v. President & Fellows of Harvard Col. (1st Cir. [Mass.] 1957) 248 F.2d 799, 802].

A trade secret is given legal protection if it is acquired and used under a contractual or fiduciary relationship between the proprietor and the user [see J. Irizarry y Puente v. President & Fellows of Harvard Col. (1st Cir. [Mass.] 1957) 248 F.2d 799, 802]. Contractually obligated secrecy is a key method of protecting a trade secret embodied in commercially exploited computer software without the automatic public disclosure that is required to patent or copyright a program. Matter that is deposited for copyright registration--the first and last 25 pages of the computer program, printed out [37 C.F.R. § 202.20(c)(2)(vii)]--is a matter of public record except for any trade secrets contained therein [see 5 U.S.C. § 552(a), (b)(4), (e)].

Trade secret law protects a trade secret proprietor against any unauthorized disclosure of confidential information by the user to third parties whom the proprietor does not wish to know that information. However, if an individual discovers a trade secret either independently or by "reverse engineering" applied to a program that has been disseminated to the public, that person has not breached any contractual or fiduciary relationship and would not be liable under trade secret law [see Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)]. The confidentiality aspect of trade secret protection is significantly different from the protection afforded by copyright [for discussion of the protection afforded by copyright law generally, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights].

For common law purposes, California has adopted the broad definition of "trade secret" set forth in the Restatement of Torts [see Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)]. Under this definition, a trade secret may consist of any formula, pattern, device, or compilation of information that is used in the client's business and that gives the client an advantage over competitors who do not know it or use it [see Rigging Int'l Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; see also Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

For the purposes of an action for misappropriation under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], a "trade secret" is information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use and is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Civ. Code § 3426.1(d); see Penal Code § 499c(a)(9)] (criminal law definition of trade secret)]. For further discussion of the application of the Act, see § 57.21[2].

Secrecy is a necessary element of a trade secret; to qualify as a trade secret, the information involved must be difficult for an outsider to acquire. Matters of public or general knowledge in a particular industry cannot be trade secrets. Information that is completely disclosed by a manufactured product cannot be a trade secret. A trade secret generally is known only in the particular business in which it is used. Without losing trade secret protection, the trade secret can be communicated to employees or to others pledged to secrecy. Others may know it independently, however, such as another who has discovered the same process but is also keeping it secret [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)].

The mere agreement of the parties that something is a trade secret does not make it a protectable interest if it is not actually a trade secret [see Ingrassia v. Bailey (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123-124, 341 P. 2d 370] .

The factors to be considered in determining whether particular information is a trade secret are [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)]:

- The extent to which the information is known outside of the business.
- The extent to which the information is known by employees and others involved in the business.
- The measures taken to guard the secrecy of the information.
- The value of the information to the owner and the owner's competitors.
- The effort and money expended in developing the information.
- The relative ease or difficulty with which the information could be properly acquired by others.

[2] California Action for Misappropriation

California has enacted a version of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3425.1 et seq.] that is designed to protect economically valuable trade secrets from misappropriation. Under the Act, an actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret may be enjoined or otherwise limited [see Civ. Code § 3426.2] and damages can be recovered for the misappropriation [see Civ. Code § 3426.3]. The Act does not supersede any other statute relating to trade secret misappropriation or any other statute regulating trade secrets [Civ. Code § 3426.7(a)], nor does it affect contractual, civil, or criminal remedies [see Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)].

Under the Act, a "trade secret" is information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives actual or potential independent economic value from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use and is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)]. Computer software can constitute a trade secret and qualify for trade secret protection under the Act. However, a plaintiff who seeks relief for misappropriation of trade secrets must identify the trade secrets and carry the burden of showing that they exist [MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 511, 522] .

Under the Act, a trade secret is misappropriated if a person does any of the following [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)]:

- Acquires a trade secret knowing or having reason to know that the trade secret has been acquired by "improper means."
- Discloses or uses a trade secret the person has acquired by improper means or in violation of a nondisclosure obligation.
- Discloses or uses a trade secret the person knew or should have known was derived from another who had acquired it by improper means or who had a nondisclosure obligation.
- Discloses or uses a trade secret after learning that it is a trade secret but before a material change of position.

"Improper means" includes "theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a breach of a duty to maintain secrecy, or espionage through electronic or other means." [Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)] Reverse engineering or independent derivation alone are not considered improper means [Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)]. The Act allows for injunctive relief against actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.2; see DVD Copy Control Assn. v. Bunner (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 648, 659] .

An action for misappropriation under the Act must be brought within three years after the misappropriation is discovered or should have been discovered [see Civ. Code § 3426.6]. A prerequisite to discovery in an action for misappropriation under the Act requires the complaining party to identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity [Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210; see Advanced Modular Sputtering, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 826, 835-837, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901 ("reasonable particularity" requires describing trade secret in way that is fair, proper, just, and rational in circumstances of case)], although the court must preserve its secrecy [see Civ. Code § 3426.5].

[3] Contract Actions

The misappropriation or misuse of trade secrets that are protected by license or other contractual provisions can also be remedied by means of traditional contract actions. The Uniform Trade Secrets Act specifically provides that it does not affect contractual remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(1)]. Under the common law definition, a "trade secret" is any formula, pattern, device, or compilation of information used in business which gives one an opportunity to obtain an advantage over competitors who do not know or use it [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198] . Since this definition is broader than that set forth in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, and since the plaintiff in a common law contract action may not have to make the type of disclosure required under the Act, a common law contract action may be more desirable.

[4] Unfair Competition From Unauthorized Use of Trade Secret

The Uniform Trade Secrets Act does not affect other civil remedies "that are not based upon misappropriation of a trade secret" [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(2)], or criminal remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(3)]. Software and other computer-related information are trade secrets as defined by criminal law if they derive independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic benefit from their disclosure or use, and are subject to reasonable efforts, under the circumstances, to maintain their secrecy [Penal Code § 499c(a)(9)].

"Unfair competition" is any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. Therefore, because misuse or misappropriation of a computer program is unlawful [see Penal Code § 499c(b)(1)], misuse or appropriation is unfair competition. The person responsible may be enjoined from continued misuse or misappropriation [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204] and is liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206]. Other remedies, which may include damages for breach of any contractual provision against unauthorized use or disclosure of computer program trade secrets, are also available [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205]. For detailed coverage of Unfair Competition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[5] Trade Secret Not Inconsistent with Copyright

Trade secret protection and copyright protection, though distinct, are not inherently incompatible. Trade secret law is premised on the concepts of breach of trust and confidentiality [see § 57.21[1], above], as opposed to the premise of actions for breach of the copyright law, which is copying [17 U.S.C. § 501]. Trade secret law protects content irrespective of form of expression; copyright law protects form of expression but not the underlying idea [M. Bryce & Assocs. v. Gladstone (1982) 107 Wis.2d 241, 319 N.W.2d 907] . Trade secret law bars unauthorized disclosure or use of these ideas only by persons who are privy to the trade secret by reason of some relationship to the owner which legally limits use or disclosure by them. Copyright law prohibits unauthorized copying by anyone of the form of expression in which the ideas are fixed by the author [Balboa Ins. v. trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 267 Cal. Rptr. 787] . Both the First Amendment and the Copyright Act are rooted in the United States Constitution, but the Uniform Trade Secrets Act lacks any constitutional basis. The prohibition on disclosure of a trade secret is of infinite duration, while the copyright protection is strictly limited in time, and there is no "fair use" exception as there is for copyrighted material. [DVD Copy Control Assn. v. Bunner (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 648, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338] .

Copyright and trade secret law are not equivalent to each other, and a copyright infringement claim therefore would not preclude a subsequent trade secret action [see Warrington Assoc. v. Real-Time Eng. Sys., Inc. (N.D. Ill. 1981) 522 F. Supp. 367, 368, 369] . However, a copyright infringement claim would constitute an admission that there has been either a general publication of the work [see 17 U.S.C. § 106(3)] or some lesser publication [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 106(1), (2), 117]. If the copyright infringement action were successful, this admission would be subject to the doctrine of statutory estoppel, which provides that one who invokes statutory benefits by the making of representations will be estopped to deny those representations [Technicon Med. Info. Sys., Corp. v. Green Bay Packaging (7th Cir. [Wis.] 1982) 687 F.2d 1032, 1034, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1106 (1983)] . Thus, the party that brought the successful copyright infringement action would be estopped from denying in any subsequent trade secret action whatever representations were made in the copyright action concerning publication and resultant loss of confidentiality. Depending on the nature and extent of the publication, this could adversely affect the determination of whether or not the material in question was in fact a trade secret. Accordingly, prudent practice would appear to suggest initial reliance on the trade secret remedy, or, at least, an initial copyright claim that any unauthorized reproduction [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 106(1), 117] was extremely limited.

[6] Trade Secret Not Preempted by Copyright

Although the issuance of a federal copyright preempts rights equivalent to those granted by a copyright [17 U.S.C. § 301(a)], the preemption does not apply to activities that violate legal or equitable rights that are not equivalent to a copyright [17 U.S.C. § 301(b)(3)]. The legislative history of the Copyright Act indicates that the preemption does not apply to deceptive trade practices and misappropriation [see H.R. Rep. No. 94-1476 (1976), p. 132; see also Diamond, "Preemption of State Law," 1977 Summary of Proceedings, Section of Patent, Trademark and Copyright Law, American Bar Association]. Moreover, it has been held that the interests secured by copyright and trade secret law are not "equivalent" to each other [see Warrington Assoc. v. Real-Time Eng. Sys., Inc. (N.D. Ill. 1981) 522 F. Supp. 367, 368, 369] .

§ 57.22 Patent Protection for Software

A patent is issued for a new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter (or an improvement to any of these) [35 U.S.C. § 101]. In State Street Bank & Trust Company v. Signature Financial Group [State Street Bank & Trust Company v. Signature Financial Group (Fed. Cir. 1998), 149 F.3d 1368, 1373-1377] , the court affirmed that computer programs are patentable as business method software. The court in State Street Bank rejected both the mathematical algorithm and business method exceptions to patentability, which were established by the United States Supreme Court in 1981 [see Diamond v. Diehr (1981) 450 U.S. 175, 187, 101 S. Ct. 1048, 67 L. Ed. 2d 155] . To determine the patentability of software, a determination must be made as to whether the computer system as a whole produces a useful, tangible, and concrete result [State Street Bank & Trust Company v. Signature Financial Group (1998), 149 F.3d 1368, 1373-1375] . In 1999, the same circuit court further determined that algorithms are patentable because they limit a general purpose computer to a specific purpose, performing function pursuant to the software [WMS Gaming, Inc. v. Int'l Game Tech (Fed. Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1339, 1348-1349 ; see also In re Alappat (Fed. Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1526] .

§ 57.23 Semiconductor Chip Protection

[1] Semiconductor Chips Not Protected Under Traditional Copyright Law

Copyright law does not protect "useful articles" as such, and semiconductor chip products are defined as useful articles for purposes of the copyright law [17 U.S.C. § 101; see H.R. Rep. No. 98-781, at 5-11, reprinted at 5 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5754-5760 (1984)]. "Masks" (as distinguished from "mask works"), which are the schematic drawings of chip layouts and accompanying technical information, may be registered under the copyright law as technical drawings. However, the protection of a technical drawing does not protect the copyright owner with respect to unauthorized duplication of the finished useful article (the chip embodying the mask work) represented by the drawing [see 17 U.S.C. § 113; H.R. Rep. No. 98-781, at 8, reprinted at 5 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5757 (1984); see also 17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(2) ("mask work" defined as series of related images that represent patterns embodied in semiconductor chip product); see generally 17 U.S.C. § 901(a) (definitions)].

[2] Industrial Copyrights for Mask Works Embodied in Semiconductor Chips

The Semiconductor Chip Protection Act of 1984 ("the Act") [17 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.] created a new approach to protecting intellectual property embodied in semiconductor chips by means of an "industrial copyright," as distinguished from the traditional author's copyright. This industrial copyright is designed to protect the mask work, which is an integral part of the manufacturing process of and embodied in a chip, and therefore the chip, from unauthorized duplication [see H.R. Rep. No. 98-781, at 5-11, reprinted at 5 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5754-5760 (1984)].

The Act defines a semiconductor chip product ("chip") as a product that has two or more layers of metallic, insulating, or semiconductor material deposited on or etched from a piece of semiconductor material, and functions as an electronic circuit [17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(1)]. A "mask work" is a series of related images that represent the patterns embodied in a semiconductor chip product [see 17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(2)].

The Act [17 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.] provides protection for and exclusive rights to persons owning semiconductor chip products. The Act is specific to semiconductor chips, but other applicable copyright provisions are still available [17 U.S.C. § 912(a); see, e.g., § 57.23[1], above]. The owner of a mask work protected under the Act [17 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.] has the exclusive rights to do and to authorize the reproduction of the mask work by any means or the importation or distribution of a semiconductor chip product in which the mask work is embodied [17 U.S.C. § 905; see 17 U.S.C. § 902(a), (b) (eligibility for protection); see also [17 U.S.C. §§ 902(c), 906(a) (limitations on protected rights)]. Owner's rights are further discussed in § 57.23[3], below.

[3] Owner's Exclusive Rights

The "owner" of a mask work is the person who created it, that person's legal representative if the creator is deceased or legally incapacitated, or a transferee. However, if the mask work is created within the scope of a person's employment, the owner is the employer for whom the mask work was created or the transferee from the employer [17 U.S.C. § 901(a)(6)].

In general, the owner of a mask work protected under the Semiconductor Chip Protection Act has exclusive rights to reproduce the mask work or to import or distribute the chip in which it is fixed or embodied and may induce or permit others to do either of these [17 U.S.C. §§ 903(a), 905]. The owner of exclusive rights in a mask work may transfer all of them or license all or less than all of them [17 U.S.C. § 903(b)]. However, if a license has been granted, the owner of a chip made by the licensee may import, distribute, dispose of, or use the chip without further authorization from the owner of the mask work [17 U.S.C. § 906(b)].

Any license or transfer of rights in a mask work may be accomplished by a written instrument signed by the owner or his or her agent [17 U.S.C. § 903(b)].

For a more detailed and comprehensive discussion of mask works and protection under the Semiconductor Chip Protection Act, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, § 103A.99. For the official application for registration of a claim of protection of an owner's rights in a mask work [see 17 U.S.C. 908(a)], see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, § 103A.240.

§ 57.30 Internet Terminology and Concepts

The Internet is an international network of interconnected computers that enables people to communicate with one another and to access vast amounts of information from around the world [Reno v. ACLU (1997) 521 U.S. 844, 849-850, 117 S. Ct. 2329, 138 L. Ed. 2d 874] . The best known category of communication over the Internet is the World Wide Web, which allows users to search for and retrieve information stored in remote computers, as well as, in some cases, to communicate back to designated sites [Reno v. ACLU (1997) 521 U.S. 844, 852, 117 S. Ct. 2329, 138 L. Ed. 2d 874] . The California Business and Professions Code defines the internet as "the global information system that is logically linked together by a globally unique address space based on the Internet Protocol ("IP"), or its subsequent extensions, and that is able to support communications using the Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol ("TCP/IP") suite, or its subsequent extensions, or other IP-compatible protocols, and that provides, uses, or makes accessible, either publicly or privately, high level services layered on the communications and related infrastructure ..." [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538(f)(6)].

§ 57.31 Development of Websites

[1] Basic Website Terminology

A "website" is simply a site or location on the World Wide Web [see Health & Saf. Code § 1368.015(e)(7) (defining "Internet web site" in connection with requirements for health care service plans)]. Websites are usually divided into "pages" or "documents," which are discrete locations within a particular site. Every website, and each page within a website, has a unique internet address known as a "Uniform Resource Locator" (more commonly referred to simply as a "URL") that allows a browser to locate and retrieve the Internet website or page [see Health & Saf. Code § 1368.015(e)(6) (URL defined)]. Website addresses are regulated by means of the domain name registration system, which is discussed in § 57.33[1].

Website pages are composed in Hypertext Markup Language ("HTML"), the authoring language used to create documents on the World Wide Web. HTML defines the structure and layout of a Web document [see Health & Saf. Code § 1368.015(e)(2) (definition)].

The first page or "welcome page" of an Internet website is usually referred to as the "homepage" [see Health & Saf. Code § 1368.015(e)(1) (definition)]. Website users navigate between Internet websites, and between individual pages within a website, by means of "hyperlinks" (more commonly referred to simply as "links"), which consist of special HTML codes that allow text or graphics to serve as a link that, when clicked on, takes the user to another place in the same page, or to another Internet website or Web page [see Health & Saf. Code § 1368.015(e)(3) (definition); see [3], below].

[2] Website Hosting

A website, in order to be seen on the internet, must reside on a computer that is permanently connected to the internet, and that contains software allowing other users to view the files on the computer. A company that provides website hosting services provides such a computer, commonly known as a "server." A computer that is used for website hosting typically is much more powerful and contains more disk space than a personal computer. There are two main types of website hosting: dedicated hosting and shared (or virtual) hosting. With dedicated hosting, the server is dedicated exclusively to a particular user's website. With shared, or virtual hosting, the server is shared among many different websites.

[3] Legal Issues in Building a Website

Several techniques used in building a website have the potential for generating legal liability. The most common technique is "linking" [see [1], above], the process by which a website user can click on a link (that is, a reference to another web page) and be directed immediately to another page within that site or elsewhere on the internet. Another technique is "framing." Framing occurs when a webpage is divided into separate areas and the contents of another website are displayed within the website the user is viewing. "Inlining," which is also known as "mirroring," is similar to framing but involves the process of incorporating a graphic file from one website to another.

Such website development techniques are not always illegal. However, the risk of legal claims arises when website material is modified, or when website users are confused about the associations between websites. This modification or confusion can lead to claims based on trademark infringement and dilution, copyright infringement, unfair competition, and misappropriation. For a discussion of the development of internet linking law, see Sableman, Mark, Link Law Revisited: Internet Linking Law at Five Years, 16 Berkeley Tech L. J. 1273 (2001).

§ 57.32 Copyright Ownership and Protection on Websites

[1] Copyright Considerations

Copyright is a form of protection provided to authors of published or unpublished "original works of authorship," including literary, musical, dramatic, musical, artistic, and certain other intellectual works [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 102, 104]. Websites may be considered "original works of authorship" and, as such, may be registered with the U.S. Copyright office.

The legal protection available for a copyrighted work is expressed in terms of six exclusive rights that are provided by the Copyright Act. These rights are exclusive in that they can be exercised only by their owner [see 17 U.S.C. § 106]. However, these rights are not absolute, as they are subject to a number of limitations in the Act [see 17 U.S.C. § 103A.30-103A.40]. Accordingly, subject to those limitations, a copyright owner has the exclusive right to do or to authorize others to do any of the following activities [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 107-122]:

- To reproduce the copyrighted work in copies or phonorecords.
- To prepare derivative works based upon the copyrighted work.
- To distribute copies or phonorecords of the copyrighted work to the public by sale or other transfer of ownership, or by rental, lease, or lending.
- In the case of literary, musical, dramatic, and choreographic works, pantomimes, and motion pictures and other audiovisual works, to perform the copyrighted work publicly.
- In the case of literary, musical, dramatic, and choreographic works, pantomimes, and pictorial, graphic, or sculptural works, including the individual images of a motion picture or other audiovisual work, to display the copyrighted work publicly.

- In the case of sound recordings, to perform the copyrighted work publicly by means of a digital audio transmission.

For a further discussion of copyright law and registration of copyrights, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights. For an authorization to use a copyright work, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, § 103A.223.

[2] Digital Millennium Copyright Act ("DMCA")

A website owner is liable under the Copyright Act for infringement if the website contains any content that violates a third party's copyright [17 U.S.C. § 501(a)]. Title II of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act ("DMCA") provides a safe harbor, which may limit the liability for copyright infringement by online service providers [see 17 U.S.C. § 512]. The DMCA provides that a service provider is not liable for monetary relief for copyright infringement by reason of the storage at the direction of a user or material that resides on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider [17 U.S.C. § 512(c)(1)]. A "service provider" is defined as an entity offering the transmission, routing, or providing of connections for digital online communications without modification to the content [17 U.S.C. § 512(k)(1)(A)]. The term also includes a provider of online services or network access, or the operator of facilities [17 U.S.C. § 512(k)(1)(B)].

Before a service provider can take advantage of the safe harbor provisions of the DMCA, the provider must file an appropriate notice with the U. S. Copyright Office and display on the website the information set forth in the notice filed with the U. S. Copyright Office.

The safe harbor of the DMCA will not apply if the service provider [17 U.S.C. § 512(c)(1)(A)]:

- Had actual knowledge that the material in question was infringing;
- Was aware of facts or circumstances that made infringement apparent; or
- Did not expeditiously remove or disable access to the material in question upon receipt of knowledge or awareness that the material infringes.

In addition, the service provider must not receive a financial benefit directly attributable to the infringing activity, if the service provider has the right and ability to control the activity; and, after being notified of the claimed infringement, must respond expeditiously to remove or disable access to the material in question [17 U.S.C. § 512(c)(1)(B), (C)].

§ 57.33 Domain Names

[1] Nature, Use, and Registration

The domain name system helps users find their way around the internet. Every computer on the internet has a unique address called its "IP address" (Internet Protocol address). Because IP addresses (which are strings of numbers) are hard to remember, the domain name system allows a familiar string of letters (the "domain name") to be used instead. Thus, for example, rather than typing "192.0.34.65," the user can type "www.icann.org" [see <http://www.icann.org>]. A "domain name" is defined by California law as any alphanumeric designation that is registered with or assigned by any domain name registrar as part of an electronic address on the internet [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529.1(e); Elec. Code § 18320(c)(2)].

The last part of a domain name, referred to as the "top-level domain" (for example, the familiar ".com"), is administered by certain organizations. For example, the .com top-level domain name is administered by Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers ("ICANN"). The registering authority of these top-level domain names, in turn, has been delegated to many organizations commonly referred to as domain name registrars or simply "registries." To register a domain name with a registry, one must contact the registry, usually via the registry's website, and complete the registration process.

ICANN is an internationally organized nonprofit corporation that is responsible for internet protocol address space allocation, protocol identifier assignment, generic and country code top-level domain name system management, and root server system management functions. ICANN is responsible for coordinating the management of the technical elements of the domain name system to ensure universal resolvability so that all users of the internet can find all valid addresses. It does this by overseeing the distribution of unique technical identifiers used in the internet's operations, and delegation of top-level domain names (such as .com, .info, etc.).

[2] California Domain Name Cyber Piracy Statutes

Disputes over domain names have resulted in legislation at both the state and federal level as well as administrative remedies. California statutes attacking "cyber piracy" can be found in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17525-17528.5 and Elec. Code § 18320 et seq. Generally, these statutes make it unlawful for a person acting in bad faith to register, use, or traffic in a domain name that is identical or confusingly similar to the personal name of another living person or deceased personality. The following are factors to consider in determining whether a person has acted in bad faith [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17526(a)-(j)]:

- The trademark or other intellectual property rights in the domain name.
- The extent to which the domain name consists of the legal name or a name that is otherwise commonly used to identify the person alleged to be in violation of this statute.
- The prior use of the domain name in connection with the bona fide offering of any goods or services.
- The legitimate noncommercial or fair use of the person's or deceased personality's name in an internet website accessible under the domain name by the person alleged to be in violation of this statute.
- The intent to divert consumers from the person's or deceased personality's name online location to a site accessible under the domain name that could harm the goodwill represented by that name, either for commercial gain or with the intent to tarnish or disparage that name by creating a likelihood of confusion as to the source, sponsorship, affiliation, or endorsement of the site.
- The offer to transfer, sell, or otherwise assign the domain name to the rightful owner or any third party for substantial consideration without having used, or having an intent to use, the domain name in the bona fide offering of any goods or services.
- The intentional provision of material and misleading false contact information when applying for the registration of the domain name.
- The registration or acquisition of multiple domain names that are identical or confusingly similar to names of other living persons or deceased personalities.
- Whether the person alleged to be in violation of this article sought or obtained consent from the rightful owner to register, traffic in, or use the domain name.
- The intent of a person alleged to be in violation of this article to mislead, deceive, or defraud voters.

California has also enacted the California Political Cyberfraud Abatement Act as a means to curtail political cyberfraud [Elec. Code § 18320 et seq.]. "Political cyberfraud" is defined as "a knowing and willful act concerning a political website that is committed with the intent to deny a person access to a political website, deny a person the opportunity to register a domain name for a political website, or cause a person reasonably to believe that a political website has been posted by a person other than the person who posted the website and would cause a reasonable person, after reading the website, to believe the site actually represents the views of the proponent or opponent of a ballot measure" [Elec. Code § 18320(c)(1)]. A "political website" is a website that urges or appears to urge the support or opposition of a ballot measure [Elec. Code § 18320(c)(3)].

Under this statute, political cyberfraud includes any of the following [Elec. Code § 18320(c)(1)(A)-(D)]:

- Intentionally diverting or redirecting access to a political website to another person's website by the use of a similar domain name, meta-tags, or other electronic measures.

- Intentionally preventing or denying exit from a political website by the use of frames, hyperlinks, mousetrapping, popup screens, or other electronic measures.
- Registering a domain name that is similar to another domain name for a political website.
- Intentionally preventing the use of a domain name for a political website by registering and holding the domain name or by reselling it to another with the intent of preventing its use, or both.

[3] Uniform Dispute Resolution Policy ("UDRP")

ICANN established the Uniform Dispute Resolution Policy ("UDRP") as a private system of domain name dispute resolution [see <http://www.icann.org/udrp/udrp-policy-24oct99.htm>]. All registrars of top-level domains must follow UDRP. Under this policy, most types of trademark based domain name disputes must be resolved by agreement, court action, or arbitration before a registrar will cancel, suspend or transfer a domain name [http://www.icann.org/udrp/udrp.htm]. Disputes alleged to arise from abusive registrations of domain names, such as cybersquatting, may be addressed by expedited administrative proceedings that the holder of the trademark rights initiates by filing a complaint with an approved dispute resolution provider [http://www.icann.org/udrp/udrp.htm]. To invoke UDRP, a trademark owner should either [http://www.icann.org/udrp/udrp.htm]:

- File a complaint in a court of property jurisdiction against the domain-name holder; or
- In cases of abusive registration, submit a complaint to an approved dispute resolution service provider.

[4] Anticybersquatting Consumer Protection Act ("ACPA")

The federal Anticybersquatting Consumer Protection Act ("ACPA") provides another means of domain name disputes within the United States [see 15 U.S.C. § 1125(d)]. Like UDRP, the purpose of ACPA is to provide protection to a trademark owner from the registration by a third parties of a domain names that is confusingly similar to the trademark. ACPA allows a cause of action to the original domain name registrant who loses a UDRP proceeding to challenge that loss in federal court and obtain an injunction returning to the original registrant the disputed domain name [Sallen v. Corinthians Licenciamentos LTDA (1st Cir. 2001) 273 F.3d 14] . ACPA also allows a suit, under the in rem provisions of UDRP, to be brought where the central registry for the top level domain name at issue is located when personal jurisdiction cannot be obtained over the domain name registrant [CNN L.P. v. cnnnews.com (E.D. Va. 2001) 162 F. Supp. 2d 484] .

[5] Trademark Considerations

The term "trademark" includes any word, name, symbol, device, or combination of those items used by a person to identify his or her goods, to distinguish them from those manufactured or sold by others, even if that source is unknown [15 U.S.C. § 1127, Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(a)]. "Service mark" means any word, name, symbol, device, or any combination of those items used by a person to identify his or her services, to distinguish them from others' services, even if that source is unknown [15 U.S.C. § 1127, Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(b)].

Marks are often classified by the courts in five categories of increasing distinctiveness [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S. Ct. 2753, 120 L. Ed. 2d 615, 623-624 ; Park 'N Fly, Inc. v. Dollar Park & Fly, Inc. (1985) 469 U.S. 189, 194, 196, 105 S. Ct. 658, 83 L. Ed. 2d 582 ; Official Airline Guides, Inc. v. Goss (9th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 1385, 1390-1391 ; see also Gilson on Trademarks, Ch. 2, Trademark Subject Matter (Matthew Bender)]:

- Generic.
- Descriptive.
- Suggestive.
- Arbitrary.
- Fanciful.

The latter three categories, because their intrinsic nature serves to identify a particular source of a product, are deemed inherently distinctive and are generally entitled to protection [see, e.g., GoTo.com, Inc. v. Walt Disney Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 202 F.3d 1199, 1207 (logo comprising words "Go" and "To" in white letters enclosed in green circle with ".com" in black letters trailing over circle's edge was suggestive trademark for search-engine web site)]. In contrast, generic marks, those that are merely the common word for a type of product (for example, "car" or "egg") are not registrable even with a showing of secondary meaning [see Filipino Yellow Pages, Inc. v. Asian Journal Publications, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1143, 1146-1147 (combination of two generic terms results in generic mark, not descriptive one)]. A mark that is "merely descriptive" of the product also is not inherently distinctive and generally is not protectable unless it has acquired "secondary meaning"; that is, unless customers associate the mark with a particular source [Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc. (1992) 505 U.S. 763, 112 S. Ct. 2753, 120 L. Ed. 2d 615, 623-624 ; Park 'N Fly, Inc. v. Dollar Park & Fly, Inc. (1985) 469 U.S. 189, 194, 196, 105 S. Ct. 658, 83 L. Ed. 2d 582 ; Official Airline Guides, Inc. v. Goss (9th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 1385, 1390-1391 ; see also Gilson on Trademarks, Ch. 2, Trademark Subject Matter (Matthew Bender)].

Although a trademark may be composed of generic or descriptive words, the mark is not automatically invalid. The validity and distinctiveness of a composite trademark is determined by viewing the trademark as a whole, as it appears in the marketplace, and not by dissecting the term and reviewing the validity of its individual component parts [Self-Realization Fellowship Church v. Ananda Church of Self-Realization (9th Cir. 1995) 59 F.3d 902, 912] .

Registration of a domain name as a trademark is subject to the same registration requirements as any other mark. A mark composed of a domain is registrable as a trademark or service mark only if it functions as a source identifier, and not merely an informational indication of the domain name addressed used to access a web site. If the proposed mark is used in a way that would be perceived as nothing more than an address at which the applicant can be contacted, registration must be refused. [see In re Eilberg (TTAB 1998) 49 USPQ2d 1955 ; USPTO Examination Guide No. 2-99 (Sept. 29, 1999); see also <http://www.uspto.gov/web/offices/tac/notices/guide299.htm>].

The registrant of a mark may hold liable in a civil action any person who, without the registrant's consent, uses in commerce, including use in a domain name, any reproduction, counterfeit, copy, or colorable imitation of a registered mark in connection with the sale, offer for sale, distribution, or advertisement of any goods or services on or in connection with which the use is likely to cause confusion, mistake, or deception. A civil action may also be brought against anyone who reproduces, counterfeits, copies, or colorably imitates a registered mark and applies it to labels, signs, prints, packages, wrappers, receptacles or advertisements intended to be used in commerce on or in connection with the sale, offer for sale, distribution, or advertisement of goods or services or in connection with which the use is likely to cause confusion, mistake, or deception [15 U.S.C. § 1114(1); see Westinghouse Elec. v. Gen. Circuit Breaker & Elec. (9th Cir. 1997) 106 F.3d 894, 899-900 , cert. denied, 522 U.S. 857 (copying of mark is not necessary element of infringement claim, which may be based on defendant's confusing use of plaintiff's actual mark)]. However, a trademark owner is not automatically entitled to claim any related domain name, there must be an association of goods and services between the domain name and trademark. [see Hasbro, Inc. v. Clue Computing, Inc. (D. MA 1999) 66 F. Supp.2d. 117] .

§ 57.34 Online Contracts

[1] Shrink-wrap Agreements

Shrink-wrap agreements are license agreements that are placed inside the cellophane shrink wrap of computer software boxes and that become effective once the shrink wrap is opened. [Stomp, Inc. v. Neato, LLC (C.D. Cal. 1999) 61 F. Supp.2d 1074, 1081, n.11]. Shrink-wrap licenses have been upheld as enforceable, as long as the consumer had an opportunity to review the terms of the license and return the product for a refund if the terms were unacceptable. [ProCD, Inc. v. Zeidenberg (7th Cir. 1996) 86 F.3d 1447].

[2] Click-wrap Agreements

"Click-wrap agreements" evolved from shrink-wrap agreements. Click-wrap agreements are typically used to license software, allow a user to access a website, or to provide a user with a subscription service to an online service provider. With a click-wrap agreement, the user is required to indicate assent to the agreement terms electronically. When the user's assent, or intent to be bound to the agreement, has been obtained, i.e., through the installation process, click-wrap license agreements have been upheld as enforceable [DVD Copy Control Assn. v. Bunner (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 648, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338]. This intent can be shown by proof that the user clicked on an "I Agree" button at the end of the agreement. [see I.Lan Sys., Inc. v. Netscout Service Level Corp. (D. Mass. 2002) 183 F. Supp.2d 328].

[3] Terms of Use

"Terms of use" typically advise the user that in order to access a website, or use the services of the website, they must be bound by terms or conditions imposed by the website operator. The terms provide that if the user does not wish to be bound by those terms, he or she may not access the website or use any of its services [Net2Phone Inc. v. L.A. County Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 583, 151]. A terms of use agreement can also limit the scope of services a website owner provides [see Bernardo v. Planned Parenthood Federation of America (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 322, 333, 345, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 (statement in terms of use that website operator provided abortion information for users'] personal education but not as recommendation for medical care was characterized by court as "significant" in determining whether website content was commercial or noncommercial speech)] and thereby seek to limit the website operator's liability for use or reliance on the contents of the website.

Terms of use have been upheld as valid agreements, even though the provider requires that some contractual terms must be accessed via hyperlink, which is a common practice in internet business [Net2Phone Inc. v. L.A. County Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 583].

[4] Uniform Electronic Transaction Act ("UETA")

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws approved the Uniform Electronic Transaction Act ("UETA") in 1999, and it was subsequently adopted by a number of states, including California [see Civ. Code § 1633.1 et seq.]. UETA generally validates electronic contracts and electronic signatures in transactions when each of the parties has agreed to conduct the transaction by electronic means. Whether the parties have agreed to conduct a transaction by electronic means is determined from the context and surrounding circumstances, including the parties' conduct [Civ. Code § 1633(b)].

UETA provides that a contract may be formed by the interaction of the parties' computer programs, even if no individual was aware of or reviewed the electronic agents' actions or the resulting terms and agreements; or by the interaction of a computer program and an individual [Civ. Code § 1633.14(a)(1), (2); see Civ. Code § 1633.2(f) ("electronic agent" defined)]. It also provides that a contract may not be denied legal effect or enforceability solely because an electronic record was used in its formation [Civ. Code § 1633.7(b); see Civ. Code § 1633.2(g) ("electronic record" defined)].

If a law requires that a contract be in writing, an electronic record satisfies the law [Civ. Code § 1633.7(c)]. Similarly, if a signature is legally required, an electronic signature satisfies that requirement [Civ. Code § 1633.7(d); see Lamle v. Mattel, Inc. (Fed. Cir. 2005) 394 F.3d 1355, 1362-1363 (reaching same result for statute of frauds purposes under California common law in pre-Act case)]. An electronic signature is a binding signature as long as the signature can be traced to an individual who took some affirmative action to agree to the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1633.7(d), 1633.9(a)], such as entering a password or clicking on an "I Agree" button.

The terms of an electronic contract are determined by the substantive law applicable to it [Civ. Code § 1633.14(b)]; thus, internet contracts are subject to general contract law, including that pertaining to illegality, unconscionability, construction of contract terms, and so on.

[5] E-Sign Act

Congress enacted the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act ("E-Sign") [see 15 U.S.C. § 7001 et seq.] in June 2000. E-Sign provides that electronic signatures, contracts, or records relating to transactions in or affecting interstate commerce may not be denied legal effect, validity, or enforceability solely because they are in electronic form [15 U.S.C. § 7001(a)(1)]. E-sign also provides that a contract relating to such a transaction may not be denied legal effect, validity or enforceability solely because of an electronic signature or electronic record was used in its formation [15 U.S.C. § 7001(a)(2)]. Under E-Sign, UETA [see [4], above] is allowed to govern in those states in which UETA has been adopted, including California [15 U.S.C. § 7002].

[6] New Contract Terms Posted on Web Site

The terms of a consumer service contract could be posted on the service provider's web site, and that posting could be the only source to which a customer can refer for those terms. If the service provider posts revised terms on the web site, an issue might arise as to whether a court should enforce the modified contract against an existing customer. Such a party has no obligation to check the terms of the contract on a periodic basis in order to learn whether they have been changed by the service provider. Indeed, the customer could not know when to check the web site for possible changes to the contract terms without being notified as to how the contract has been changed. Even if the customer checked the contract every day for possible changes, still, without such notice, an examination would be fairly cumbersome, as the customer would have to compare every word of the posted contract with the existing contract in order to detect whether it had changed. It is elementary that a party cannot unilaterally change the terms of a contract but must obtain the other party's consent to do so. Presenting a revised contract amounts to nothing more than making an offer and does not bind the other party until it is accepted. Generally an offeree cannot actually assent to an offer unless the offeree knows of its existence. Even if the customer's continued use of the provided service could be considered assent, such assent can be inferred only after the customer has received proper notice of the proposed changes [Douglas v. U.S. Dist. Court (Talk America, Inc.) (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 1062, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 17061, at *4-*5] .

§ 57.35 Privacy Policies

[1] California's Online Privacy Protection Act ("OPPA")

[a] Application

California's Online Privacy Protection Act ("OPPA") [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575 et seq.], which became effective July 1, 2004, requires every operator of a commercial website or online service that collects personally identifiable information through the internet about individual consumers residing in California who use or visit the commercial website or online service to conspicuously post the operator's privacy policy on the website [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(a)].

An operator is any person or entity that owns a website located on the internet or an online service that collects and maintains personally identifiable information from a consumer residing in California who uses or visits the website or online service if the website or online service is operated for commercial purposes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(c)]. It does not include any third party that operates, hosts, or manages, but does not own, a website or online service on the owner's behalf or by processing information on behalf of the owner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(c)].

A consumer is any individual who seeks or acquires, by purchase or lease, any goods, services, money, or credit for personal, family, or household purposes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(d)].

An website operator who is subject to OPPA under Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575 will be in violation if the operator either (1) knowingly and willfully; or (2) negligently and materially, violates the provisions of the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22576].

[b] Privacy Policy Requirement

Under OPPA, an operator's privacy policy must do the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)]:

- Identify the categories of personally identifiable information that the operator collects through the website or online service about individual consumers who use or visit its commercial website or online service, and the categories of third-party persons or entities with whom the operator may share that personally identifiable information.
- If the operator maintains a process for an individual consumer who uses or visits its commercial website or online service to review and request changes to any of his or her personally identifiable information that is collected through the website or online service, the operator must provide a description of that process.
- Describe the process by which the operator notifies consumers who use or visit its commercial website or online service of material changes to the operator's privacy policy for that website or online service.
- Identify its effective date.

[c] Personally Identifiable Information

"Personally identifiable information" means individually identifiable information about an individual consumer collected online by the operator of a website from that individual and maintained by the operator in an accessible form [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(a)]. Personally identifiable information includes the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(a)]:

- First and last name.
- Physical address, including street name and name of a city or town.
- E-mail address.
- Telephone number.
- Social security number.
- Any other identifier that permits the physical or online contacting of a specific individual.
- Information concerning a user, that the website or online service collects online from the user, and maintains in personally identifiable form in combination with an of the above identifiers.

[d] Conspicuously Post

Under OPPA, a website operator must conspicuously post its privacy policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(a)]. The term "conspicuously post" with respect to a privacy policy includes posting the privacy policy in any of the following ways [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22577(b)]:

- A webpage on which the actual privacy policy is posted if the web page is the homepage or first significant page after entering the website.
- An icon that hyperlinks to a webpage on which the actual privacy policy is posted, if the icon is located on the homepage or the first significant page after entering the website, and if the icon contains the word "privacy." The icon must use a color that contrasts with the background color of the web page or is otherwise distinguishable.

- A text link that hyperlinks to a webpage on which the actual privacy policy is posted, if the text link is located on the homepage or first significant page after entering the website, and if the text link (1) includes the word "privacy"; (2) is written in capital letters equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text; or (3) is written in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from the surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

- Any other functional hyperlink that is so displayed that a reasonable person would notice it.

- In the case of an online service, any other reasonably accessible means of making the privacy policy available for consumers of the online service.

[2] Children's Online Privacy Protection Act ("COPPA")

[a] Application

In 1998, Congress enacted the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act of 1998 ("COPPA") [15 U.S.C. § 6501 et seq.; Pub. L. 105-277, Div. C, Title XIII, § 1301 et seq., 112 Stat. 2681-728], which establishes legal requirements for collecting information online from children under the age of 13. COPPA requires the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") to promulgate regulations in accordance with specified statutory requirements [15 U.S.C. § 6502(b)]. It is unlawful for an operator of a website or online service directed to children, or any operator that has actual knowledge that it is collecting personal information from a child, to collect personal information from a child in a manner that violates the FTC regulations [15 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(1)]. In April 2000, the FTC promulgated its implementing regulations [16 C.F.R. § 312.1 et seq.].

COPPA applies to the following [15 U.S.C. § 6501(1), (2); 16 C.F.R. § 312.3]:

- Operators of commercial websites or online services directed to children under the age of 13 that collect personal information from children.
- Operators of general audience sites that knowingly collect personal information from children under 13.
- Operators of general audience sites that have a separate children's area and that collect personal information from children.

[b] Requirements

COPPA requires operators of covered websites to do the following:

- Provide notice on the website or online service of what information it collects from children, how it uses such information, and its disclosure practices for such information [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)].
- Obtain verifiable parental consent prior to any collection, use, and/or disclosure of personal information from children [16 C.F.R. § 312.5].
- Provide a reasonable means for a parent to review the personal information collected from a child and to refuse to permit its further use or maintenance [16 C.F.R. § 312.6].

- Not condition a child's participation in a game, the offering of a prize, or another activity on the child disclosing more personal information than is reasonably necessary to participate in such activity [16 C.F.R. § 312.7].

- Establish and maintain reasonable procedures to protect the confidentiality, security, and integrity of personal information collected from children [16 C.F.R. § 312.8].

[c] Privacy Notice

Under COPPA, operators must provide a clearly labeled link to a privacy notice on the homepage of the website or online service, as well as in close proximity to each area of the website or online service, where children directly provide, or are asked to provide, personal information [C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(1)]. This privacy notice must include all of the following [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(2)]:

- The name, address, telephone number, and e-mail address of all operators collecting or maintaining personal information from children through the website or online service. The operators of a website or online service may list the name, address, phone number, and e-mail address of one operator who will respond to all inquiries from parents concerning the operators' privacy policies and use of children's information, as long as the names of all the operators collecting or maintaining personal information from children through the website or online service are also listed in the notice.

- The types of personal information collected from children and whether the personal information is collected directly or passively.

- How such personal information is or may be used by the operator(s), including but not limited to fulfillment of a requested transaction, record keeping, marketing back to the child, or making it publicly available through a chat room or by other means.

- Whether personal information is disclosed to third parties, and if so, the types of business in which those third parties are engaged, and the general purposes for which the information is used; whether those third parties have agreed to maintain the confidentiality, security, and integrity of the personal information they obtain from the operator; and that the parent has the option to consent to the collection and use of their child's personal information without consenting to the disclosure of that information to third parties.

- That the operator is prohibited from conditioning a child's participation in an activity on the child disclosing more personal information than is reasonably necessary to participate in the activity.

- That the parent can review and have deleted the child's personal information, and refuse to permit further collection or use of the child's information, and state the procedures for doing so.

[d] Parental Notice

COPPA requires operators to make reasonable efforts to ensure that parents receive notice of the operator's practices with regard to the collection, use, and/or disclosure of the child's personal information, including notice of any material change in the collection, use, and/or disclosure practices to which the parent has previously consented [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(c)].

[e] Verifiable Parental Consent

COPPA requires that the operators of covered websites must obtain verifiable parental consent before collecting using, or disclosing personal information from children, subject to certain exceptions [16 C.F.R. § 312.5]. Operators must obtain verifiable parental consent to any material change of their collection, use or disclosure practices which the parent previously consented [16 C.F.R. § 312.5(a)(1)]. An operator also must give the parent the option to consent to the collection and use of the child's personal information, without consenting to the disclosure of the child's personal information to third parties [16 C.F.R. § 312.5(a)(2)].

[3] Federal Privacy Notice Requirements for Financial Institutions

In addition to the California privacy policy requirements, website operators that qualify as "financial institutions" are subject to federal privacy policy requirements governing the dissemination of consumers' nonpublic personal information [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1 et seq.; see also 15 U.S.C. § 6801 et seq. (Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act)]. The term "financial institutions" is liberally defined and includes, among other things, mortgage lenders, finance companies, mortgage brokers, account servicers, check cashers, wire transferors, travel agencies operated in connection with financial services, collection agencies, credit counselors and other financial advisors, tax preparation firms, non-federally insured credit unions, and investment advisors that are not required to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission [16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b)]. Significantly, the term "financial institution" also includes retailers that extend credit by issuing their own credit cards directly to consumers [16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(2)]. For more detailed discussion and a federal privacy notice, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting A New Business, § 1A.206[1].

§ 57.36 Anti-Spam Legislation

[1] Federal "CAN-SPAM" Act

The federal Controlling The Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003 [15 U.S.C. § 7701 et seq.], popularly referred to as the "CAN-SPAM" Act, effective January 1, 2004, covers e-mail that has a primary purpose of advertising or promoting a commercial product or service, including content available on a website.

CAN-SPAM has four main goals:

- Ban false or misleading e-mail header information [see 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(1)].
- Prohibit deceptive subject information [see 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(2)].
- Require that the message include an e-mail or other internet based mechanism by which the recipient can opt out of receiving e-mail messages in the future [see 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(3); see also 15 U.S.C. § 7708].
- Require that commercial e-mail clearly and conspicuously state that it is an advertisement or solicitation and that the recipient may opt out of receiving future e-mail [see 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(5)].

The Federal Trade Commission is authorized to enforce CAN-SPAM and bring enforcement actions against violators, and the Department of Justice has the authority to enforce criminal sanctions [15 U.S.C. § 7711; see also www.ftc.gov]. The FTC is directed or authorized to issue additional rules under CAN-SPAM, in some cases within specified periods after enactment [see 15 U.S.C. §§ 7702(2)(C), (17)(B), 7704(c), (d)(3), 7708; www.ftc.gov; see also www.ftc.gov/spam].

For detailed discussion of the CAN-SPAM Act, see Ch. 50, Advertising and Promotion, § 50.11[6][b].

[2] California's Anti-Spam Act

In 2003, California repealed its then-existing statutes dealing with unsolicited commercial e-mail advertising [see former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538.4, repealed by Stats. 2003, ch. 487] effective January 1, 2004, and enacted a new scheme for regulating unsolicited commercial e-mail [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529 et seq.]. This scheme, as enacted, is one of the toughest anti-spam acts in the United States. Under this scheme, it is unlawful to advertise to or from a California e-mail address in an unsolicited commercial e-mail [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529.2(a), (b)]; that is, an e-mail as to which the recipient neither (1) has provided direct consent to receive advertisements from the advertiser, nor (2) has a preexisting or current business relationship with the advertiser [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529.1(o); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529.1 (l)(defining preexisting or current business relationship)]. Thus, the California statute is an "opt-in" statute; that is, one that generally requires the recipient take some affirmative step before a sender may lawfully send unsolicited commercial e-mail messages to the recipient.

In contrast, the federal CAN-SPAM Act [15 U.S.C. § 7701 et seq.], discussed in [1], above, takes an "opt-out" approach to spam. Under the California law, marketers would have to prove the "direct consent" of the recipients either in response to a clear and conspicuous request for the consent or on the recipient's own initiative [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17529.1(d)]. The federal Act simply requires a business to stop sending e-mails to those who request to be removed from a list [see 15 U.S.C. § 7704(a)(3), (4)].

It appears probable that most or all of the California opt-in law has been preempted by the federal CAN-SPAM Act [see [1], above]. The CAN-SPAM Act generally provides that it supersedes any statute, regulation, or rule of a state or political subdivision that expressly regulates the use of electronic mail to send commercial messages, except to the extent that any such statute, regulation, or rule prohibits falsity or deception in any portion of a commercial electronic mail message or information attached to such a message [15 U.S.C. § 7707(b)(1)].

For detailed discussion of the California anti-spam legislation, see "Unsolicited E-Mail Advertising--California Statutory Scheme" in the Introduction to California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

§ 57.37 Children's Internet Protection Act ("CIPA")

Congress enacted the Children's Internet Protection Act ("CIPA") in December 2000 [Pub. L. 106-554, § 1701 et seq., 114 Stat. 2763A-335; see 20 U.S.C. § 9134(f), 47 U.S.C. § 254(h), (l); see 47 C.F.R. § 54.520 (implementing FCC regulation)]. Under CIPA, schools and libraries will not receive discounts through the E-Rate program, Title III of the Elementary & Secondary Education Act, or the Library Services and Technology Act, unless they certify that specified internet safety measures are in place to block the ability of minors to obtain internet access to images and pictures that are obscene, harmful to minors, or constitute child pornography, and that an internet safety policy is in place [see 20 U.S.C. § 9134(f), 47 U.S.C. § 254(h)(5), (6), (l)].

CIPA requires the internet safety policy to address the following issues [47 U.S.C. § 254 (l)(1)]:

- Access by minors to inappropriate matter on the internet.
- Safety and security of minors when using e-mail, chat rooms, and other forms of electronic communications.
- Unauthorized access and other unlawful activities by minors online.
- Unauthorized disclosure, use, and dissemination of personal information regarding minors.
- Measures designed to restrict minors' access to harmful material.

The constitutionality of CIPA has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court [U.S. v. Am. Library Ass'n (2003) 539 U.S. 194 ; 123 S. Ct. 2297 ; 156 L. Ed. 2d 221] . § 57.38 Disclosure of Customer's Personal Information

Effective January 1, 2005, California law gives customers of businesses the right to know the identity of any third parties to whom their personal information has been disclosed [see Civ. Code § 1798.83]. For purposes of this statute, a "customer" is a California resident who provides personal information to a business during the creation or throughout the duration of an established business relationship, if the business relationship is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1798.83(e)(1)]. This statute applies to businesses that disclose personal information about a customer to one or more third parties within the immediately preceding calendar year, and knows or reasonably should know that the third party will use the data for direct marketing purposes [see Civ. Code § 1798.83(a)].

To comply with this statute, businesses must take action to notify customers of the available means to request the information which has been disclosed [Civ. Code § 1798.83 (b)(1)], and must also provide the customer, within 30 days of their request, (1) the categories of information disclosed [see Civ. Code § 1798.83(e)(6)(A)]; and (2) the names and addresses of the third parties that received the personal information for direct marketing purposes. The statute also provides exceptions for the use of customer information by third parties [see Civ. Code § 1798.83(d)].

For a further discussion of the California statutes regulating disclosure of a customer's personal information, see Ch. 46, Credit Cards and Other Open-End Credit Transactions, § 46.96.

 - Collect, through intentionally deceptive means, personally identifiable information, as defined [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22947.2(b)].
 - Prevent, without authorization, an authorized user's reasonable efforts to block the installation of or disable software, by causing software that the authorized user has properly removed or disabled to automatically reinstall or reactivate on the computer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22947.2(c)].
 - Intentionally misrepresent that the software will be uninstalled or disabled by an authorized user's action [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22947.2(d)].
 - Through intentionally deceptive means, remove, disable, or render inoperative security, antispyware, or antivirus software installed on the computer [see Bus. & Prof.

Finally, a person or entity, who is not an authorized user may not do any of the following with regard to the computer of a consumer in this state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22947.4(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22947.4(b) (exceptions)]:

- Induce an authorized user to install a software component by intentionally misrepresenting that it is necessary for security or privacy or in order to open, view, or play a particular type of content.
- Deceptively causing the copying and execution on the computer of software components with the intent of causing an authorized user to use the components in a way that violates any of the Act's prohibitions.

- c. Personal computer.

NOTE:

This chapter does not include discussion of the legal aspects of, or forms for use in, the acquisition of consumer-oriented hardware since purchase agreements, as such, generally are not used for that purpose. For security agreements and retail installment contracts that may be used for home computer purchases, see Ch. 42, Secured Transactions, and Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, respectively. The law of sales is covered in Ch. 52, Sale of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code. The consumer warranties that should be used in the sale of personal computers are discussed in the § 57.220[1].

[2] Facts Regarding Software Procurement, Development and Maintenance

1. Names and addresses of user's personnel who can give advice concerning its data processing problems and requirements [see § 57.100[1]].

2. Anticipated uses for software:

a. Tasks to be performed.

b. Future capabilities desired.

(1) Licensor or developer; or

(2) Third party.

c. Type of maintenance performance desired:

(1) Performance requirements, either:

- (a) On a 24-hour basis; or
- (b) Only during regular business hours.

(2) Desired response time, e.g.:

- (a) "Within the hour";
- (b) "On call"; and/or
- (c) Regularly scheduled maintenance services.

5. Type of agreement to be used:

a. License agreement.

NOTE:

For a guide to drafting software license agreements, see § 57.141[1].

b. Design consultation agreement.

NOTE:

For a guide to drafting software design consultation agreements, see § 57.141[5].

c. Development agreement.

NOTE:

A guide to drafting software development agreements is set forth in § 57.141[4].

d. Software maintenance agreement.

NOTE:

For a guide to drafting software maintenance agreements, see § 57.141[3].

6. Date when acquisition should be completed.

7. Terms of payment, e.g.:

a. Lump sum upon purchase or licensing.

b. Installment payments upon:

- (1) Execution of agreement.
- (2) Delivery and/or acceptance.
- (3) Completion of:

(a) Installation services; and/or

(b) Training.

c. Provision for increase upon renewal of license, if license is used.

8. If software is to be transferred under license, services required of or to be offered by licensor, such as:

a. Installation.

b. Training of licensee's personnel in use of software:

(1) Initial training after installation.

(2) On continuing basis.

(3) Free or at specified cost.

c. Future modification and development.

NOTE:

If the licensor will not agree to update the software or make future modifications to meet the user's changing business needs, the licensee will want to have at least access to the source code and complete documentation for it so that another programmer can make the needed modifications. The licensee will also want to assure access to the source code in the event that the licensor ceases its business operations because of bankruptcy or any other reason. In either case, the licensor often will seek to avoid giving the licensee the source code because doing so would compromise its trade secret status. A possible solution would be to place the source code in escrow under strictly limited access instructions.

d. Maintenance (including debugging).

NOTE:

Generally, maintenance will be provided by the proprietor of the software since the proprietor is best acquainted with the inner workings of the program, generally has sole control of the source code, and can best act as the central repository of information on defects and cures. Moreover, the experience generated in performing maintenance will enable the proprietor to produce and then market updates.

The licensee generally will want the shortest possible time to pass before the licensor responds to maintenance calls. One device that will tend to assure that result is a license provision tying response time to the maintenance fee.

e. Post-acquisition advice.

9. Whether software is well tested or developed:

a. Has it been used in identical versions by other users for a period of time and, if so, what experiences have other users had with it:

NOTE:

If the answers to these questions are favorable and tend to indicate that the bugs have been worked out, the warranty that accompanies the proposed software can be more extensive and maintenance costs should be lower.

(1) Delays in service from vendor?

(2) Delays caused by defects in proposed software?

(3) Indication of need for improvements?

b. If software has been developed or modified for use by one party, experiences that party has had with it.

NOTE:

If only a single user has used the software or if problems are reported, the warranty accompanying the software will likely be limited and maintenance costs will be high enough to cover the cost of perfecting it (unless it has been used long enough and has been sufficiently maintained or corrected to become well defined and stable and, thus, shown to be in conformity with its specifications).

c. Whether there are well-defined specifications.

d. Whether it has become stable and well developed through debugging (i.e., whether there is a higher degree of certainty that it will conform to its specifications).

[3] Facts Regarding Intellectual Property Protection of Software

1. Extent to which information that constitutes the program is known outside of proprietor's business.

2. Extent to which data is known by proprietor's:

a. Employees.

b. Consultants.

c. Associates.

3. Value of software to:

a. Proprietor's competitors.

b. Proprietor:

(1) Detailed description of its purposes.

(2) Frequency of its use or number of copies licensed or otherwise transferred under trade secret protection provisions.

(3) Amount of effort and money expended in developing it.

4. Whether, absent wrongful disclosure, it would be easy or difficult for others to duplicate the software (such as by reverse engineering).

NOTE:

If a trade secret can be discerned without wrongful disclosure, the party who obtains it in that manner is not liable for its use [see Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)]. For discussion, see § 57.21.

[4] Facts Regarding Internet Related Transactions

1. Names and addresses of business or internet user, or personnel, who can provide information on pending transactional needs.

b. E-mail services.

c. Website hosting services.

d. Preparation of online user agreement.

e. Preparation of terms of use.

f. Preparation of privacy policy.

(1) Whether client collects personal information in connection with website operation.

(2) Nature of information collected.

(3) Whether operator disseminates any of client's personal information to third parties and, if so:

(a) What information is disseminated.

(b) What third parties will receive the information.

g. Registration of domain name.

(1) Domain name desired.

(2) Purpose of registration.

h. Potential domain name dispute.

(1) Domain name involved.

(2) How long current owner has operated under that domain name.

§ 57.110 Hardware Procurement

1. If integrated system (including hardware, software, and maintenance of both or either) is contemplated, should warranties be given to cover:

- a. System as a whole, including hardware and software; or
- b. Software and hardware separately?

NOTE:

Software and hardware are inherently different, and it is likely that the hardware will present relatively fewer warranty-related problems. For this reason the warranties and, more importantly, the warranty remedies, should be stated separately.

2. Which of following procedures should be required for vendee acceptance of hardware:

- a. Completion of installation constitutes acceptance.
- b. Acceptance within specified but limited period following prescribed testing procedures after installation.
- c. Acceptance automatically upon productive use.
- d. Graduated levels of acceptance.

3. Consequences of nonacceptance:

a. Replacement; or

b. Termination of contract, and, if so, liabilities for each party.

4. Should parties agree to use arbitration to settle disputes?

NOTE:

For discussion and a contract provision for arbitration, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions . § 57.111 Software Procurement

1. How will software be acquired?

a. Developed by and for publisher or end user as "work for hire" pursuant to design or development agreement.

NOTE:

This decision should be made by the parties based on such factors as the cost of development versus that of other means of acquisition, the complexity of the task, and the availability of personnel. For a guide to drafting agreements under which an outsider is hired to design and/or develop software for the publisher or user see § 57.141[5]. For an employment agreement that can be adapted for use in hiring "in house" programmers, using trade secret protection provisions, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.222.

b. If software will not be developed:

(1) Transferred to publisher or end user by means of license agreement; or

NOTE:

If the software is transferred under a license agreement, the transferee will not have sole and exclusive rights in it (absent a license provision to that effect), but should be able to include a license provision requiring the licensor to maintain the software (i.e., fix any bugs that become apparent) for any time period on which the parties can agree. For a guide to drafting license agreements, see § 57.141.

(2) Transferred to publisher or end user by means of assignment.

NOTE:

If the software is assigned (sold), the buyer will have sole and exclusive rights to it unless there is a provision in the agreement to negate that effect, but will not have any right to maintenance of the software without a provision in the sales agreement requiring it. For an agreement assigning an author's copyright to a publisher, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .].

c. If software is to be transferred under license, should license be:

(1) Exclusive or nonexclusive?

(2) Transferable or nontransferable?

(3) Limited as to time, and, if so, will it be:

(a) Renewable; or

(b) Nonrenewable?

(4) Limited to use on single specified computer?

(5) Limited as to geographical area?

d. Type of product warranty that can or will be offered?

(1) Warranty of conformity to specifications.

NOTE:

A warranty of conformance to specifications is appropriate if software is thoroughly debugged and can be depended upon to conform to its specifications.

(2) Limited warranties and warranty remedies.

NOTE:

In the absence of certainty that software has been thoroughly debugged, only a limited warranty or a materials warranty would be appropriate from the vendor's point of view. Since software defects can remain hidden for substantial periods of time, vendors generally attempt to give limited warranties and warranty remedies to avoid being held to long-term commitments.

(3) Warranties covering defects in materials and workmanship only.

NOTE:

This type of warranty is the most limited and is the one most vendors attempt to give.

e. If user has programming personnel capable of maintaining licensed software (i.e., if it is capable of doing its own debugging and program improvement or development), or intends to contract separately for that service:

(1) Will any improved version be owned by licensor or licensee?

NOTE:

Generally a licensor will attempt to include a provision in the license agreement for ownership of all modifications made in the software, particularly those made by the licensor.

(2) What responsibilities should either party bear for modifications made by licensee?

NOTE:

Generally, a software vendor will desire to avoid responsibility or liability for modifications made by the licensee and should include a disclaimer in the license agreement.

(3) What level or cost of maintenance should be agreed to between licensor and licensee?

f. What procedure should be required for acceptance of software by transferee:

(1) No acceptance as such, with either:

(a) Delivery on "as is" basis constituting acceptance; or

(b) Productive use constituting acceptance?

(2) Acceptance within specified but limited period following prescribed testing procedures designed to show that software meets its specifications?

(3) Acceptance testing on alternate hardware (of same make as designated hardware) if designated hardware is unavailable for installation of software?

(4) Graduated levels of acceptance?

(5) What result in event of nonacceptance:

(a) Replacement; or

(b) Termination and, if so, what liabilities for either party?

g. Should parties agree to use arbitration to settle disputes?

NOTE:

For discussion and a contract provision for arbitration, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions. For detailed coverage of arbitration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), Ch. 30, Using Alternative Dispute Resolution, and succeeding chapters.

§ 57.112 Software Protection

1. Should software be marketed by sale or under license?

NOTE:

Licensing agreements typically are used in the marketing of computer software because they do not transfer title to the software, with the result that the licensee does not have sole and exclusive rights in it (absent a license provision to that effect). This fact permits the owner to impose use restrictions designed to protect its proprietary interests. In contrast, sales agreements do transfer title unless there is a provision in the agreement to negate that effect and, therefore, do not permit such restrictions to be imposed. For additional discussion, see § 57.220[1].

2. Does software constitute a trade secret?

NOTE:

For definitions of "trade secret" and general discussion of trade secret protection for computer software, see § 57.21.

3. What measures should be taken to guard secrecy of software and protect its owner's proprietary interests while exploiting it commercially?

a. What proprietary markings should be placed on and within software:

(1) Copyright notice?

NOTE:

For coverage of copyright law and procedures, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

(2) Trademark?

NOTE:

For coverage of trademark law and procedures, see Gilson on Trademarks (Matthew Bender).

(3) Trade secret legend?

b. Should copying be permitted and, if so:

NOTE:

As a practical matter, the vendor will almost always desire to keep copying to a minimum. When trade secret protection is the primary or only means of protection, this is a matter of the utmost importance and the license agreement should either forbid copying or strictly limit the number of copies that can be made, the persons or types of employees permitted to have copies, and the nondisclosure agreements to be signed by the vendee's personnel.

When copyright is relied upon, the license agreement should contain similar limitations. However, it is not an infringement for the owner of a copy of a computer program to make another copy or adaptation of that program when necessary to the utilization of that program or for archival purposes or to make a copy for machine maintenance or repair, if that copy is used in no other manner and is destroyed immediately after the maintenance or repair is complete. Such copies can be transferred only as part of the transfer of all rights in the program and adaptations can be transferred only with the copyright owner's permission [see 17 U.S.C. § 117].

(1) How many and for what purposes?

(2) Where should they be stored?

(3) Requirement for reproduction of proprietary markings?

(4) How many or what type of employees should have access?

c. What kind of security should licensee be required to exercise?

NOTE:

The license agreement should require the licensee to acknowledge and agree that the software is confidential and constitutes the licensee's valuable trade secret. It should also include requirements for physical security requirements and the licensee's agreement not to disclose the licensee's trade secret.

(1) Store software in secure place.

(2) Impose restrictions on access and use, either:

(a) Designed to prevent unauthorized disclosure; or

(b) Satisfactory to licensor.

(3) Use same degree of care it would with its own confidential materials.

(4) Agree not to deface proprietary marks.

d. Should license agreement provide that disclosure constitutes breach of agreement?

4. Does copyright registration of software provide appropriate protection?

NOTE:

A computer program, even one that is "copy protected" (i.e., programmed to defeat attempts to make copies), generally can be duplicated regardless of such protection and therefore is a good candidate for the protection afforded by registration of a copyright as an unpublished work. Such registration is relatively easy and inexpensive [see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, see also Gilson on Trademarks, Ch. 1, General Principles (Matthew Bender) (federal trademark registration)]. The protection afforded to an individual author lasts for that person's lifetime plus 70 years [17 U.S.C. § 302(a)], while a copyright issued for a work made for hire lasts for 95 years from the year of its first publication, or for 120 years from the year of its creation, whichever expires first [17 U.S.C. § 302(c)].

5. Should use of software be limited to:

a. Use on single designated computer?

NOTE:

Generally, software is designed for use on specific brand name hardware only. Thus, it is generally necessary to restrict its use to that hardware so that both will function properly and to avoid damage to the software.

b. Single computer at specific site or multiple system use with additional payment for that use?

NOTE:

Generally, the software vendor will seek to prevent reproduction and multiple use of the software it has licensed to the end user by restricting its use to a single computer at a specified site.

c. Single user:

(1) Prohibition against use on network?

NOTE:

A prohibition against network accessibility will tend to keep a program from being copied or used by persons who have access to the network and, at least, will provide a contractual basis for an action for damages if the prohibition is breached. Databases (information files) and certain programs are available on networks pursuant to the permission of their proprietors. For a guide to drafting computer access agreements, see § 57.140[6].

(2) Prohibition against assignment of right to use software to other user or users?

d. Specified uses or purposes?

NOTE:

A restriction on the use of licensed software will tend to keep a program from being used so indiscriminately that its status as a trade secret can be lost and, at least, will provide a contractual basis for an action for damages if the prohibition is breached.

[2] Computer Purchase Agreement

NOTE:

This drafting guide outlines provisions to be considered for the sale of computer equipment. The law of sales, detailed drafting and procedural guides related to the sale of goods generally, and alternate sales agreement provisions can be found in Ch. 52, Sale of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code . NOTE:

For a detailed guide to drafting commercial software license agreements, see § 57.141. That guide should be consulted if software license provisions are to be included in the agreement for procurement of the computer hardware. A complete commercial software license is set forth in § 57.220.

b. Set forth software license provisions in hardware purchase agreement [see § 57.200[2], Art. 2].

15. Provide for computer hardware maintenance services, either:

NOTE:

For a guide to drafting computer maintenance agreements, see § 57.140[4]. That guide should be consulted if hardware maintenance provisions are to be included in the agreement for procurement of the computer hardware. For a complete separate computer maintenance agreement, see § 57.203.

NOTE:

This type of indemnification provision may be appropriate if the system being sold has been custom designed to meet the specifications of a sophisticated purchaser who is competent to prepare very detailed plans for the system. However, the purchaser should view such a provision with extreme caution. Because the purchaser is in effect accepting responsibility for any infringements by the seller, the seller is effectively relieved of any incentive to be careful in this regard.

29. Include purchaser's agreement to maintain in confidence and not to disclose, reproduce, or copy any materials, data, documentation, or specifications provided by seller that are copyrighted, patented, trademarked, or otherwise marked as confidential, secret, or proprietary, except as otherwise provided [see § 57.200[2], P 4.11; see also § 57.200[2], P 4.02].

- b. Purchaser's failure or neglect to perform or observe any of its existing or future obligations under agreement, including timely payment of any sums due;
- c. Any assignment of purchaser's business for benefit of creditors;
- d. Filing of petition in bankruptcy by or against purchaser;
- e. Appointment of receiver or trustee in bankruptcy for purchaser's property; or
- f. Adjudication of purchaser as a bankrupt.

32. Limit purchaser's remedies for breach of warranty liability with respect to products or services to those provided in agreement [see § 57.200[2], P 4.14].

33. Limit seller's liability for damages arising from services or products to total charges paid or payable for either [see § 57.200[2], P 4.14]:

- a. Services during specified period if liability arises from service; or
- b. Purchase price of products if liability results.

34. Include purchaser's agreement disclaiming seller's liability for any of following arising out of subject matter of agreement, even if seller had been advised of potential liability [see § 57.200[2], P 4.15]:

- b. Incidental damages.
- c. Indirect damages.
- d. Consequential damages.

- b. That no single or partial exercise of any right, power, or privilege under the agreement precludes its further exercise

40. Provide for risk of loss, either on purchaser or seller, prior to date of purchase [see § 57.201[2], P 5].

41. Include standard severability clause [see § 57.200[2], P 4.21].

42. Include clause specifying governing law [see § 57.200[2], P 4.22].

43. Include "entire agreement" clause [see § 57.200[2], P 4.23].

44. Provide for payment of attorneys' fees to prevailing party [see Civ. Code § 1717; see also [see § 57.200[2], P 4.24].

NOTE:

For discussion of attorneys' fees provisions, see § 57.200[1][g].

45. If system is acquired pursuant to purchaser's purchase order, state that in event of conflict between contract and purchase order, terms and conditions of contract control [see § 57.200[2], P 4.25].

[3] Computer Lease Agreement

NOTE:

This drafting guide deals with computer equipment leases. The law of equipment leasing, including important tax considerations, procedural and other guides, and alternate provisions that may be adapted for use in computer leasing, are set forth in Ch. 53, Personal Property Leasing, and these should be consulted before drafting a computer lease agreement.

1. State that lessor leases and lessee hires use of computer equipment described in attached lease schedule, subject to terms and conditions of lease [see § 57.202[2], P 1].

2. Include title provision stating that lessee's agreement that equipment is and remains lessor's property and that lessor may remove it upon termination of agreement [see § 57.202[2], P 2].

3. Specify lessee's right to use equipment:

- a. State lessor's covenant of quiet possession during term and subject to conditions of lease as long as lessee is not in default [see § 57.202[2], P 3(a)].
- b. Include provision governing lessee's right to sell time on equipment to third parties;

either specifically:

(1) Permit lessee to sell time [see § 57.202[2], P 3(b)]; or

(2) Prohibit lessee from selling time.

4. Specify term of agreement [see § 57.202[2], P 4]:

NOTE:

For a guide to drafting computer maintenance agreements, see § 57.140[4]. That guide should be consulted if hardware maintenance provisions are to be included in the agreement for procurement of the computer hardware. For a complete separate computer maintenance agreement, see § 57.203.

- b. Adhere to standards set by National Board of Fire Underwriters for protection of electronic computer systems.

10. Provide for supplies to be used by lessee [see § 57.202[2], P 10]:

- a. Make lessee responsible for all supplies consumed or required by equipment.
- b. Require supplies to meet specifications established by equipment manufacturer.

NOTE:

Although antitrust considerations prohibit a manufacturer from requiring a lessee to use supplies that the lessor manufactures, the manufacturer may require supplies to meet specifically stated specifications [see International B. Mach. Corp. v. United States (1935) 298 U.S. 131, 139, 140, 56 S. Ct. 701, 80 L. Ed. 1085].

 - b. Use or performance of equipment.
 - c. Any interruption or loss of service, use, or performance of equipment.
 - d. Loss of business or other consequential damage.
- 18. Consider inclusion of provision permitting lessee to make alterations and attachments to equipment upon prior written notice to lessor and receipt of express written approval, subject to following conditions [see § 57.202[2], P 17]:

a. For performance of engineering changes determined by contractor to be applicable or necessary [see § 57.200[2], P 3.04].

b. Imposing surcharge for usage in excess of stated no-charge usage limit schedule, with surcharge determined under current schedule of excess usage charges [see § 57.200[2], P 3.14].

a. Effective from date of execution.

b. To remain in force until:

(1) Terminated by specified party or parties on specified prior written notice; or

(2) End of stated period, subject to renewal for another period.

NOTE:

The computer owner should be aware of the need for a lengthy term for a maintenance agreement to avoid being forced to buy new or updated versions of the equipment because service is no longer available for the old equipment.

19. Include contractor's warranty, either:

a. That under normal conditions of use and operation [see § 57.203[2], P 7(a)]:

(1) Its services will be free from defects in workmanship.

(1) Parts that contractor finds not in conformity with manufacturer's published specifications within specified period after installation and acceptance.

NOTE:

The warranty period should be no greater than the warranty period given by the parts manufacturer.

(2) Repair or replacement, at its option, of those parts.

21. Apply these warranties and conditions to any repaired or replaced product, part, or component supplied by contractor [see § 57.203[2], P 7(c)].

22. Limit customer's remedies to warranties and remedies stated [see § 57.203[2], P 7(d)].

§ 57.141 Software Related Transactions

[1] Commercial Software License Agreement

1. Define "software" to include [see § 57.220[2], P 1.01]:

NOTE:

The licensed software must be precisely defined in order to void subsequent claims that more was expected and that the licensor breached its contract obligations [see Law Research Service, Inc. v. General Automation, Inc. (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1974) 494 F.2d 202, 204].

- a. Computer program itself, identified in definition or on a purchase schedule.
- b. Whether program is in object or source code, or whether both are included.

NOTE:

A majority of software licenses are for object code based programs only. However, in some instances, a company may wish to license the source code of the program to a licensee. For an example of a source code access agreement, see § 57.223.

- c. All written materials delivered with program, including necessary supporting documentation for source code if licensed.

2. If definition provision is not used or is not drafted to include updated versions of computer program portion of software, consider use of clause to supply program updates [see § 57.220, P 2.07]

3. If definition provision is not used or is not drafted to include source code version of computer program portion of software, consider use of provision for transfer of source code to licensee if [see § 57.223 (source code access agreement)]:

a. Licensor:

- (1) Ceases business.
- (2) Ceases doing business as software producer and supplier.
- (3) Is declared bankrupt or insolvent.

b. Licensee:

- (1) Promises to pay reasonable cost.
- (2) Agrees that source program will be subject to terms of license agreement.

4. Describe scope of license [see § 57.220, P 2.01]:

- a. Nontransferable or transferable.
- b. Exclusive or nonexclusive.
- c. If desired, grant licensee authority to adapt, modify, or convert software.
- d. If desired may limit to geographic area as opposed to worldwide license.
- e. If desired may make it a royalty bearing license, as opposed to a royalty free license.

5. Limit licensee's right to use software to use for [see § 57.220, P 2.02]:

- a. Licensee's sole and exclusive benefit; or
- b. Specific described purposes.

6. Specify license period:

a. State term of license, either:

- (1) Useful life of software [see § 57.220, P 2.05];
- (2) Minimum specified term, unless terminated prior to that time as provided elsewhere in agreement [see § 57.220, P 2.05]; or
- (3) From date of acceptance or execution of agreement until expiration or termination of agreement [see § 57.200, P 2.05].

b. Require licensee to certify at end of license period that all copies of software were either returned or destroyed [see § 57.200, P 2.05].

7. If minimum license term is specified and renewal is desired, consider either [see § 57.220, P 2.05]:

a. Granting licensee option to renew license for additional minimum term; or

b. Providing for automatic renewal for successive minimum terms unless licensee notifies licensor, within specified period prior to expiration of a term, of intention not to renew.

8. Include provision governing licensee's right to make copies, either:

a. Expressly prohibit any copying;

b. Permit specified number of copies for stated purposes only, and require recording and reporting of copies [see § 57.220, § 2.03 (a)]:

(1) One or more "backup" copies for archival purposes.

(2) Additional copy for use in adapting, modifying, or converting it, if desired.

(3) Consider requiring licensee to provide licensor with written description of procedures for making backup copies for licensor's approval.

c. Permit software to be copied [see § 57.200, P 2.03]:

(1) In whole or part.

(2) For licensee's internal use only.

(3) With title in all copies reserved to licensor.

(4) Disclaiming transfer of title in any copy to licensee.

9. Require licensee to reproduce and include on all copies of software (including modifications adaptations, and/or conversions), licensor's marks and notices, as appropriate [see § 57.220, P 2.03(b); see also § 57.200, P 2.04]:

a. Copyright notice.

b. Patent notice.

c. Trademark or service mark.

d. All other proprietary markings.

e. Any confidential legends implanted within software.

10. Consider adding provision making licensee exclusively responsible for supervision, management, and control of its use of software, including, but not limited to [see § 57.220, P 2.04]:

- a. Assuring proper configuration of all equipment or devices.
- b. Establishing adequate operating methods.
- c. Implementing procedures sufficient to satisfy its software security obligations, including appropriate action between it and its employees to prevent the following:
 - (1) Misuse.
 - (2) Unauthorized copying.
 - (3) Unauthorized modification.
 - (4) Unauthorized disclosure.

11. Consider provision allowing licensee to modify software for its own use and merge it into other material to form revised materials:

- a. Add any limitations on licensee's right to modify software, such as [see § 57.220, P 2.06]:

- (1) Upon termination of license, all licensed materials must be deleted from any revised materials and either destroyed or returned to licensor.

- (2) Any revised materials be used strictly in accordance with terms of license.

- b. Consider including provision disclaiming or limiting licensor's responsibilities for maintenance of modified software.

12. If appropriate, include provision for licensee to receive updates of software [see § 57.220, P 2.07].

13. Have license specifically state ownership rights to software [see § 57.220, P 3.01]:

- a. Licensee acknowledges and agrees that software is confidential and proprietary property of licensor.
- b. Licensee receives no rights to sell, lease, market, transfer or otherwise encumber software.
- c. Ownership rights of each party to any modifications and derivative works of software.
- d. If desired, provision stating that nothing provided by licensor will be deemed a "work for hire".

NOTE:

For a discussion of "works for hire," see § 57.225[1].

14. Have licensee agree to protection of proprietary interests [see § 57.220, P 3.02; see also § 57.200, P 2.05]:

- a. Acknowledge that software:

- (1) Is confidential in nature.

- (2) Constitutes intellectual property belonging to licensor.

b. Agree either to:

(1) Hold it in trust and not to transfer or disclose it to any other party; or

(2) Use best efforts to prevent inadvertent disclosure to third party either during license term or thereafter.

NOTE:

Most license agreements contain confidentiality terms. However, some vendors may feel more comfortable having a stand alone confidentiality agreement. For a mutual nondisclosure agreement, see § 57.228.

15. Specifically state licensee's agreement regarding software security:

a. Agreement to keep software in secure place, under access and use restrictions not less strict than those applicable to licensee's own trade secrets and either [see § 57.220, P 3.03]:

(1) Designed to prevent disclosure of software to unauthorized persons; or

(2) Satisfactory to licensor.

b. Define degree of care by having licensee agree to instruct its personnel to use same care and discretion that they use with other data designated by licensee as confidential [see § 57.220, P 3.04].

c. Include licensee's agreement that any disclosure of software to any third party constitutes material breach and will result in termination of license [see § 57.220, P 3.05].

d. Include licensee's agreement that it will be strictly liable for all damages to licensor resulting from any disclosure of software to third parties [see § 57.220, P 3.06].

16. Include licensee's agreement not to remove, deface, or destroy any copyright, patent notice, trademark, service mark, other proprietary markings, or confidential legends placed on or within software [see § 57.220, P 3.07].

17. Provide for payment by licensee [see § 57.220, P 4.01; see also § 57.200, P 2.07] either:

a. In full upon execution of license.

b. Installment payment of specified percentages upon:

(1) Execution of license;

(2) Delivery and installation of software; and

(3) Completion by licensor of on-site support (if provided for by license).

c. Periodic payment of specified sum with:

(1) Initial license fee payable upon execution of license; or

(2) Succeeding periodic charges payable:

(a) Automatically in advance; or

(b) Within specified period after advance billing.

NOTE:

In drafting payment provisions, it is important to consider when payment will be considered accepted and irrevocable and consistent with recognition of revenue principles.

18. If agreement provides for periodic payments and periodic increases are desired [see § 57.220, P 4.04]:

a. Specify that licensor may increase periodic license fee upon notice to licensee.

b. State that increase becomes effective on date specified in notice of increase unless licensee terminates license by notice to licensor and returns software to licensor.

19. Provide that licensee must pay all taxes assessable on software or its use, including personal property taxes, sales and/or use taxes, and excise taxes [see § 57.220, P 4.02].

20. If license provides option for renewal, include provision for payment of renewal license fee in specified sum at beginning of new option period [see § 57.220, P 4.03].

24. Provide for acceptance of software, either [see § 57.220, P 5.04]:

- a. When it has met prescribed acceptance criteria; or
- b. After completion of prescribed testing and either:

- (1) Productive use by licensee; or
- (2) Reasonable period of use by licensee, not to exceed specified time.

NOTE:

In drafting acceptance provisions, it is important to consider when the software will be considered accepted, because license fees for non-accepted software may not be deemed payments received under recognition of revenue principles.

25. Provide that upon any refusal by licensee to accept software, licensee must do the following [see § 57.220, P 5.04]:

- a. Return software to licensor.
- b. Report reasons for unacceptability.

(b) Travel costs.

(c) Living expenses.

28. Consider including provision requiring licensee to enter into software maintenance agreement [see § 57.220, P 5.07].

NOTE:

For an example of a software maintenance agreement, see § 57.224.

29. Consider clause which specifies that the software licensor is obligated to maintain program by correcting errors or providing updated versions of program in response to claims of error [see § 57.220, P 5.08].

30. Include warranty provisions for software, specifying [see § 57.220, P 6.01]:

a. That software will conform to specifications [see § 57.220, P 6.01; see also § 57.200, P 2.09].

a. Warranties of merchantability.

b. Warranties of fitness for a particular purpose.

NOTE:

The disclaimer or modification of an implied warranty of merchantability or fitness must be conspicuous [see Com. Code § 2316(2)]. For discussion of the use of boldface, all capital letters to make a conspicuous disclaimer, see § 57.200[1][e].

32. Include indemnification provisions [see § 57.220, PP 6.03, 6.04].

- a. Require licensee to notify licensor of any claim that software or its use violates trade secret, trademark, copyright, patent, or other proprietary right of any other party.
- b. Require licensee to cooperate with licensor in investigation and resolution of any claimed violation.
- c. Include licensor's promise to defend licensee against any and all claimed violations.
- d. Include licensor's promise to indemnify and hold licensee harmless from any liability for damage, costs, or other loss incurred in connection with any claimed violation.
- e. Specify licensor's options if it appears that software is likely to become subject to copyright or patent infringement claim:
 - (1) Procure right to continue using software;
 - (2) Replace or modify software to render it noninfringing; or
 - (3) Discontinue it.
- f. Disclaim licensor's liability for any claim of copyright or patent infringement based on use of original version of software if infringement would have been avoided by use of updated version.
- g. Disclaim licensor's liability for any claim based on licensee's use of any:

 - (1) Designate each category.
 - (2) Specify what services will be provided in each category.
- b. Provide that category for any item can be changed by licensor [see § 57.229, P 2]:
 - (1) Upon notice to licensee.
 - (2) With licensee's agreement that change may result in discontinuance of service.

c. Include provision permitting licensor to make additional service charges for any additional effort required to provide programming services resulting from licensee's [see § 57.229, P 3]:

(1) Modification of software; or

(2) Use of any version other than latest available version of software.

d. Include product warranties applicable to each category [see § 57.229, P 4].

e. Include limitation of warranty provision [see § 57.229, P 5].

34. Conspicuously (in boldface capital letters) state licensee's agreement to limitation of licensor's liability [see § 57.220, P 6.05]:

NOTE:

The limitation of liability must be conspicuous. For discussion of the use of boldface, all capital letters to make a conspicuous disclaimer, see § 57.200[1][e].

a. Provide that neither party will be liable to each other for any consequential, indirect, incidental, or special damages.

b. Consider placing a cap on licensor's liability to amount of actual payments made under agreement.

b. Licensee's disclosure of software to any third party whether directly or indirectly and whether inadvertently or otherwise.

c. Licensee's refusal to pay any periodic license fee or any increase provided for in license agreement.

d. If licensee or any successor or assign to whom software was legitimately transferred ceases business.

e. If licensee commits an "event of default," defined to include [see § 57.220, P 7.02]:

(1) Any attempt by licensee to use, copy, license, or convey software:

(a) In any manner contrary to terms of license.

(b) In derogation of licensor's proprietary rights in software.

(2) Licensee's failure or neglect to perform or observe any of its existing or future obligations under license (e.g., timely payment of any sums due licensor within specified period after notice of delinquency).

(3) Any assignment of licensee's business for benefit of creditors.

(4) Filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against licensee.

(5) Appointment of receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or similar officer to take charge of all or part of licensee's property.

(6) Adjudication of licensee as a bankrupt.

36. Specify whether, upon occurrence of any of the above, license will be terminated:

a. Automatically and without further notice [see § 57.220, P 7.01]; or

b. Following notice and failure to cure within specified period.

37. Describe licensee's agreement as to effect of termination [see § 57.220, P 7.03]:

a. Immediately upon operation of termination provisions licensee will either:

(1) Return all copies of software to licensor; or

(2) Destroy all copies of software and certify that fact to licensor.

b. In event of termination through licensee's default, all fees or charges due for remainder of license period are immediately due and payable.

c. Licensor's obligations cease upon termination.

38. Include standard general terms and conditions:

a. Include notice provision [see § 57.220, P 8.01].

b. Prohibit licensee's assignment of its rights under agreement without prior written consent of licensor, and specify that any attempt to do so without consent is void [see § 57.220, P 8.02].

c. State that agreement may be modified only by written agreement duly executed by persons authorized to execute agreements on parties' behalf [see § 57.220, P 8.03].

d. Include nonwaiver provision stating that [see § 57.220, P 8.04]:

(1) No failure or delay in exercising any right, power, or privilege by either party will operate as waiver of any right, power, or privilege.

(2) No single or partial exercise of any right, power, or privilege precludes its further exercise.

e. Provide that if legal action is necessary to enforce license terms, prevailing party is entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees [see Civ. Code § 1717; see also § 57.220, P 8.05].

NOTE:

For discussion of attorneys' fees provisions, see § 57.200[1][g].

f. Include severability provision [see § 57.220, P 8.06].

g. Include provision specifying governing law [see § 57.220, P 8.07].

h. Include "entire agreement" provision [see § 57.220, P 8.08].

i. If software is acquired under license agreement but pursuant to licensee's purchase order, state that in event of conflict between license and purchase order, terms and conditions of license control [see § 57.220, P 8.09].

39. Consider provision that if license is acquired pursuant to buyer's purchase order, in event of conflict between license and purchase order, terms and conditions of license control [see § 57.200, P 4.25].

40. Consider use of provision for arbitration to settle disputes [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.250].

[2] Consumer "Packaged" Software Agreements

NOTE:

Computer software is usually transferred under a license agreement rather than by purchase and sale because licenses do not transfer title and, as a result the owner is able to impose use restrictions designed to protect its proprietary interests. Sales agreements, on the other hand, do transfer title and therefore such restrictions cannot be imposed. For additional discussion, see § 57.220[1]. For discussion of the generally used methods of protecting proprietary interests in software, see § 57.225[1][c]; see also §§ 57.20-57.22.

Consumer "package" software agreements can be available in a number of ways. Software may be purchased of the shelf, and may be subject to a "shrink-wrap" license, which binds the licensee once the software package is opened. Consumer "package" software agreements may also come in a "click-wrap" form in which the license agreement appears when the software is getting ready to be installed on a computer. In such a situation, the licensee must accept the terms of the license agreement before the software may be installed. "Click-wrap" agreements are common when installing software from a media such as a CD-ROM, or downloading from an internet website. For an example of a consumer packaged software agreement, see § 57.221.

1. Begin agreement with conspicuous (boldface, all capital letters) legend [see § 57.221]:

NOTE:

A term is "conspicuous" if it is written, displayed, or presented so that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term is "conspicuous" or not is a decision for the court [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

Thus, for example, it has been held that the disclaimer of an implied warranty must be printed in boldfaced capital letters [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 18, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516 (prior law)] .

- a. Cautioning licensee or buyer to read all license terms before opening, installing, or using software.
- b. Stating that opening of package, installing or using software, or clicking the "I Accept" button in the software installation program, indicates acceptance of terms and conditions of agreement.

NOTE:

To ensure that a click-wrap agreement is binding, the user should be required to take some affirmative action to agree to it, and prevented from proceeding with use if the user does not agree to it. When the user is purchasing software (or services), the user should also be given an option to return or end use of the product and receive a full refund if the user does not assent to the terms of the agreement.

2. Consider including clause that specifically states ownership rights to software, such as [see § 57.221, P 1]:

- a. Software and any accompanying documentation is owned and copyrighted by licensor and is protected by intellectual property laws.
- b. Licensee only owns tangible physical media on which software was originally recorded or fixed.
- c. License has no ownership interests in software itself.

3. Repeat that opening package, installing or using software, or clicking the "I Accept" button indicates acceptance of agreement terms and conditions [see § 57.221, P 2].

4. State agreement to return package and its contents unopened in order to obtain refund or replacement in absence of agreement with terms of agreement [see § 57.221, P 2].

5. Grant right to [see § 57.221, P 3]:

- a. Use program for specified use(s).
- b. Make copies of program:
 - (1) In specified numbers.

(2) In any machine readable form.

(3) For specified purposes, including back-up or modification purposes in support of buyer's use of program on the single computer (unless the package includes a "copy protected" marking).

6. If desired, limit licensee's right to:

a. Copy or modify the software [see § 57.221, P 3(d)].

b. Sublicense, assign, or transfer license [see § 57.221, P 3(e)].

NOTE:

This type of provision, whether it specifies that the licensee may not transfer the program and license to anyone at all, or permits such a transfer to one or two or more persons [see P 7, below], should be included in order to provide a contractual basis for an action against a consumer who copies the program and disposes of it to others without regard to the licensor's rights.

7. If desired, permit licensee to transfer program and license under specific limitations; e.g., to one other party:

a. On condition that other party agrees to accept terms and conditions of agreement.

b. Subject to agreement to either:

(1) Transfer all copies, whether in printed or machine readable form, to licensee; or

(2) Destroy any copies not transferred, including all modifications and portions of the program contained or merged into other programs.

c. Subject to agreement:

(1) Not to sublicense, assign, or transfer license except as expressly permitted by license agreement.

(2) That any attempt to do so in any way other than expressly permitted is null and void.

8. Provide for termination [see § 57.221, P 4]:

a. State that agreement will be effective until terminated.

b. Permit licensee to terminate at any time by destroying program and all copies, modifications, and merged portions.

c. Provide for automatic termination if licensee fails to comply with any term or condition of license agreement.

d. Include licensee's agreement to destroy program and all copies, modifications, and merged portions immediately upon termination of license agreement.

9. Draft limited product warranty:

a. Provide limited warranty [see § 57.221, P 5]:

(1) Include warranty that software will perform substantially in accordance with documentation.

(2) Include warranty that medium on which program is furnished is free from defects in materials and workmanship under normal conditions of use.

(3) Limit warranty to specified period from date of delivery of program to licensee as set forth on receipt for the purchase.

b. Exclude from warranty coverage any software that has been [see § 57.221, P 5]:

(1) Altered.

(2) Damaged.

(3) Abused.

(4) Misapplied.

(5) Used other than in accordance with license.

c. Set forth warranty remedies [see § 57.221, P 5]:

(1) Licensor (at licensor's option) will repair or replace a defective medium within warranty period; or

(2) Provide a refund of license fees paid.

d. Consider provision in which licensor does not warrant use or results of use of software in terms of correctness, accuracy, reliability or otherwise [see § 57.221, P 5].

e. Consider provision that no oral or written information will create a warranty of any kind [see § 57.221, P 5].

14. Include conspicuous (boldface, all capital letters) [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B) and Paragraph 19, below] statement of waiver of implied warranties, stating that no warranties other than those expressly stated are made, and that licensor expressly disclaims all warranties not stated in license agreement, including [see § 57.221, P 6]:

NOTE:

The disclaimer or modification of an implied warranty of merchantability or fitness must be conspicuous [see Com. Code § 2316(2)]. For discussion of the use of boldfaced capital letters to make a conspicuous disclaimer, see § 57.200[1][e].

Inasmuch as software usually is sold nationally and the law regarding disclaimer of warranties may vary from state to state, this type of limitation typically includes language limiting the effects of the disclaimer to what is permitted under the applicable state law [see § 57.221, P 6].

- a. Warranties of merchantability.
- b. Warranties of fitness for a particular purpose.
- c. Noninfringement.

15. Include licensee's express agreement that sole remedies and licensor's entire liability are as set forth in agreement [see § 57.221, P 75].

a. Include conspicuous (boldface, all capital letters) statement that licensor is not liable to licensee or any other persons for any of following that arise out of use or inability to use program [see § 57.221, P 6]:

NOTE:

The disclaimer or modification of an implied warranty of merchantability or fitness must be conspicuous [see Com. Code § 2316(2)]. For discussion of the use of boldfaced capital letters to make a conspicuous disclaimer, see § 57.200[1][e].

- (1) Damages, including incidental or consequential damages.
- (2) Expenses.
- (3) Lost profits.
- (4) Lost savings.
- (5) Other damages.

b. Consider placing a cap on licensor's liability to amount of license fees paid under agreement.

18. Include governing law provision [see § 57.221, P 7].

19. Conclude with conspicuous (boldface, all capital letters) statement containing [see § 57.221, P 8]:

NOTE:

A term is "conspicuous" if it is written, displayed, or presented so that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term is "conspicuous" or not is a decision for the court [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

Thus, for example, it has been held that the disclaimer of an implied warranty must be printed in boldface, capital letters [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 18, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516 (prior law)].

- a. Licensee's acknowledgment that he or she has read and understood agreement.
- b. Licensee's agreement to be bound by license agreement terms and conditions.
- c. "Entire agreement" provision.

[3] Software Maintenance Agreement

NOTE:

For an example of a software maintenance agreement, see § 57.224.

1. State that supplier and customer have entered into a software license or purchase agreement, pursuant to which [see § 57.224[2], Recitals]:
 - a. Supplier licensed or sold specified computer program.
 - b. Customer agreed to enter into software maintenance agreement.
2. Set forth supplier's agreement to provide services necessary to remedy any software programming error attributable to supplier [see § 57.224[2], P 1(a)]:

 - (1) Replacing software; or
 - (2) Taking appropriate corrective action.
 - b. Promptly after customer identifies claimed programming error and notifies supplier.
3. State that only one copy of any corrected or replacement software will be delivered to customer [see § 57.224[2], P 1(b)].
4. If software is licensed to customer, include customer's agreement that corrected or replacement software [see § 57.224[2], P 2]:
 - a. Is and will remain property of software licensor.
 - b. Constitutes trade secret of licensor.
 - c. Will be delivered only after customer executes a license agreement with licensor governing its use, unless licensor, at its option, waives requirement for execution of new license.

5. Disclaim any obligation on supplier's part to provide services on or with respect to modifications made by customer to software or other program incorporating it [see § 57.224[2], P 3].
6. State customer's agreement to give supplier access to customer's data and computer, [see § 57.224[2], P 4] including:
 - a. Printouts of software or data in storage that exhibits evidence of programming error.
 - b. Sufficient computer time to enable supplier to:
 - (1) Duplicate problem;
 - (2) Determine that it results from software; and
 - (3) After corrective action or replacement has taken place, determine that problem has been alleviated.
7. Specify term of agreement [see § 57.224[2], P 5]:
 - a. From specified date, such as date of expiration of warranty in software license or sale agreement.
 - b. For specified period.
 - c. Subject to renewal or termination by either party upon specified period of prior written notice.
8. State that replaced or corrected software will be subject to warranties, warranty remedies, and warranty limitations or disclaimers set forth in original software license agreement, incorporating those provisions by reference [see § 57.224[2], P 6].
9. Specify periodic maintenance service fee and state that it is payable in advance [see § 57.224[2], P 7].

14. Include provision disclaiming supplier liability for any delay in performance resulting from [see § 57.224[2], P 12]:

a. Acts of customer or its agents.

b. Force majeure event, including causes beyond supplier's control.

15. Include "entire agreement" provision [see § 57.224[2], P 13].

- e. Reasonably incurred business expenses.

8. Include provisions for consultant's agreement relating to confidentiality of proprietary information [see § 57.225[2], P 10].

It is common to request that a consultant sign an independent nondisclosure agreement at the outset of the relations. For a mutual nondisclosure agreement, see § 57.228.

9. Prohibit consultant from using or circulating any confidential information [see § 57.225[2], P 11]:

- a. Except when specifically authorized in advance to do so; and

 - b. Provide consultant agrees that all works are "works for hire" and belong to company.
 - c. Specify any pre-existing intellectual property rights of consultant.
15. Include warranty by consultant that any materials provided by consultant do not violate any third party copyright interests [see § 57.225[2], P 17].
16. State term of agreement and provide termination provisions [see § 57.225[2], P 18]:

For an example of a privacy policy meeting the California requirements noted in this section, see § 57.242.

Effective January 1, 2005, a business that collects customer personal information may also be subject to a statute covering disclosure of customers' personal information [see Civ. Code § 1798.83 (effective January 1, 2005)]. For further discussion of the disclosure of a customer's personal information, see § 57.38; see also Ch. 46, Credit Cards and Other Open-End Credit Transactions, § 46.96.

In addition to the California privacy policy requirements, website operators that fall within the federal definition of "financial institutions" [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b); see also § 57.35[3]] are subject to detailed federal privacy policy requirements governing the dissemination of consumers' nonpublic personal information [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1 et seq.; see also 15 U.S.C. § 6801 et seq. (Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act)]. This drafting guide does not deal with compliance with these federal requirements. For more detailed discussion and a federal privacy notice, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting A New Business, § 1A.206[1].

1. Inform website developer and owner that privacy policy must be "conspicuously posted" by one of following methods [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(a), 22577(b)]:

- a. Posting actual privacy policy on homepage or first significant page after entering website.

NOTE:

Although the California statute does not specify exact color, size, and font requirements for the privacy policy itself (as opposed to text links and hyperlinks, noted in (b) and (c), below), in order to assure that the policy meets the requirement that it be "conspicuously posted," it is advisable to post the policy so that it stands out, clearly labeled, and is in a different color, different font, or larger type size than the surrounding text [compare 16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(2)(ii), (iii) (federal privacy notice requirements applicable to financial institutions)].

b. Icon that hyperlinks to web page on which actual privacy policy is posted, if:

(1) Icon is located on homepage or first significant page after entering website;

(2) Icon contains word "privacy"; and

(3) Icon uses color that contrasts with background color of web page or is otherwise distinguishable.

c. Text link that hyperlinks to web page on which actual privacy policy is posted, if:

(1) Text link is located on homepage or first significant page after entering website; and

(2) Text link does one of following:

(a) Includes word "privacy."

(b) Is written in capital letters equal to or greater in size than surrounding text.

(c) Is written in larger type than surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to surrounding text of same size, or set off from surrounding text of same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to language.

d. Other functional hyperlink that is so displayed that a reasonable person would notice it.

2. Include a "commitment to privacy" statement if desired [see § 57.242[2], P 1].

NOTE:

Such a statement is not legally required but is commonly included in this type of statement by operators seeking to impress website users with their commitment to protect the privacy of their users.

a. State website owner's commitment to protection of privacy

b. State that by use of website user is accepting terms of privacy policy.

3. Identify categories of "personally identifiable information" that will be collected by website owner from website user, e.g. [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(b)(1), 22577(a); see § 57.242[2], P 2]:

a. First and last name.

b. Home or other physical address, including street name and name of a city or town.

- c. E-mail address.
- d. Telephone number.
- e. Social security number.
- f. Any other identifier that permits physical or online contacting of specific individual.
- g. Other information concerning user that website or online service collects online from user and maintains in personally identifiable form in combination with an identifier described above, such as:

- (1) Information provided from website user.

- (2) Automatic information.

- (3) Use of "cookies."

NOTE:

"Cookies" are pieces of information that are transferred to the user's computer from a web server. They can be used for a variety of purposes by the website operator.

4. Explain how and when information that is collected from website user will be used by website owner [see § 57.242[2], P 3].

5. Identify categories of third-party persons or entities with whom operator may share personally identifiable information collected from user [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(b)(1); see § 57.242[2], P 4].

6. If desired, inform user of importance of password protection on website, and state that user should log out of website when done using the site [see § 57.242[2], P 4].

NOTE:

These statements are not legally required under the California statute regulating internet privacy policies, but may be included to educate users regarding security procedures that may help them maintain the confidentiality of their personal information on the site.

7. If desired, explain who has access to information provided by website user [see § 57.242[2], P 5].

NOTE:

The California statute requiring internet privacy policies requires only that the policy specify the categories of third-party persons or entities with whom the operator may share information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(1); see P 5, above]; specific identification of third parties with whom the operator may share information is not required. However, operators sometimes include this type of statement for informational purposes.

8. If desired, explain how website operator protects information provided by website user [see § 57.242[2], P 6].

NOTE:

These statements are not legally required under the California statute regulating internet privacy policies, but operators sometimes include this type of statement for informational purposes.

- a. Reference any security software used.
- b. State that business practices are periodically reviewed.
- c. Explain limitations on employee access to information.

9. Specified intended audience of website [see § 57.242[2], P 7].

- a. Is website for adults?
- b. Is website intended for children under age of 13?

NOTE:

If the website is intended for children under the age of 13, the privacy policy must copy with the Children's Online Privacy Protections Act (COPPA) [15 U.S.C. § 6501 et seq.] and its implementing FTC regulations [16 C.F.R. § 312 et seq.; see § 57.35[2]; see also <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/online/edcams/coppa/index.html>]. For a drafting guide to COPPA compliance, see § 57.142[6].

10. If operator maintains process for users to review and request changes to personally identifiable information that is collected through website, describe that process [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(2); see § 57.242[2], P 8].

11. Provide consent statement in which user acknowledges that [see § 57.242[2], P 9]:

- a. Use of website provides consent to collection of information.
- b. Use of website provides consent to use of information.

12. Describe process by which operator notifies users of material changes to operator's privacy policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(3); see § 57.242[2], P 10].

13. State effective date of policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(4); see § 57.242[2], P 11].

[6] COPPA Compliant Privacy Policy

NOTE:

Privacy policies for websites or online services that are directed to children under the age of 13, or for general audience websites that have a children's area and collect personal information from children, must comply with the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act ("COPPA") [15 U.S.C. § 6501 et seq.] and its implementing FTC regulations [16 C.F.R. § 312 et seq.; see also 16 C.F.R. § 312 et seq.; <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/online/edcams/coppa/index.html>], in addition to the California COPPA requirements discussed in [5], above. For additional discussion of COPPA, see § 57.35[2].

1. State privacy policy homepage of website or on homepage of children's area of website [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(1)].

2. Include links to privacy policy near each and every place where personal information is collected from children under age 13 [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(1)].

3. Provide names, addresses, telephone numbers and e-mail addresses of all parties who collect or maintain personal information from children through site [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(2)(i)].

NOTE:

The operators of a website or online service may list the name, address, phone number, and e-mail address of one operator who will respond to all inquiries from parents concerning the operators' privacy policies and use of children's information, as long as the names of all the operators collecting or maintaining personal information from children through the website or online service are also listed in the notice [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(2)(i)].

4. Specifically state in a descriptive manner each type of personal information collected [16 C.F.R. § 312.4(b)(2)(ii)].

§ 57.200 Computer Purchase Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an integrated agreement for use when a computer supplier and a commercial buyer bargain for the procurement of an entire computer system consisting of hardware, software, and an agreement for the maintenance of both. This type of system is sometimes referred to as a "bundled system." It is "integrated" or "bundled" in that it contains the buyer's agreement to purchase hardware from the seller, the seller's agreement to license some or all of the software to be used on the system, and the seller's hardware maintenance agreement.

For a separate commercial software license agreement, see § 57.220. A consumer software licensing agreement is illustrated in § 57.221. The form in § 57.203 is a separate computer maintenance agreement. For a separate software maintenance agreement, see § 57.224.

[b] Warranty Provisions In General

This form contains "commercial" warranties (warranties applicable to commercial as distinguished from consumer transactions) covering the hardware [see § 57.200[2], PP 1.07-1.12], the software [see § 57.200[2], PP 2.08-2.10], and the maintenance services [see § 57.200[2], PP 3.18, 3.19] provided under the contract. The warranties in this agreement are single-level, that is, the items covered by the warranties are not differentiated into different classes, each covered by a different level of warranty coverage.

The California Commercial Code provides for warranties of title and against infringement [see Com. Code § 2312], express warranties [see Com. Code § 2313], and implied warranties of merchantability [see Com. Code § 2314] and fitness for a particular purpose [see Com. Code § 2315]. These warranties are discussed in Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code.

The federal Magnuson-Moss Consumer Warranty Act [15 U.S.C. § 2301 et seq.] and the California Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [Civ. Code § 1790 et seq.] do not apply to the warranties contained in this form because this form is intended for commercial rather than consumer use. For discussion of the application of these statutes to consumer software licensing agreements, see § 57.221.

[c] Warranty Disclaimers

The language that creates an express warranty and any language intended to limit a warranty must be consistent [Com. Code § 2316(1)]. This means that no warranty, whether express or implied, can be modified or disclaimed unless the seller clearly limits its liability [see Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 119, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377]. In addition, the disclaimer of an implied warranty of merchantability must mention "merchantability," and be conspicuous and the disclaimer of any implied warranty of fitness must be both written and conspicuous [Com. Code § 2316(2)]. Therefore, the warranty disclaimer clauses in this form state that its express warranties are in lieu of all other warranties, express or implied, including any warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose and, moreover, are complemented by specific warranty remedy provisions. For the implied warranty disclaimers to meet the requirement for conspicuousness, the disclaimer clause must be printed in boldfaced capital letters [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 18, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516 ; see also § 57.200[1][e]].

There are other ways to disclaim implied warranties. They are excluded by expressions like "as is," "with all faults," or language that makes it plain there is no implied warranty [Com. Code § 2316(3)(a)] or by a phrase like "there are no warranties that extend beyond the description on the face hereof" [Com. Code § 2316(2)]. An implied warranty can also be negated by conduct such as the examination of a model [see Com. Code § 2316(3)(b), (c)].

[d] Disclaimer of Consequential Damages for Breach of Warranty

Remedies for breach of warranty, including the measure of damages, can be limited by contract [see Com. Code §§ 2316(4), 2719]. Moreover, the limitation or exclusion of consequential damages when the loss is commercial is valid unless it can be proven that the limitation is unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. However, language excluding consequential damages must be conspicuous [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 20, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516]. For that reason, the language in this form that excludes consequential damages is printed in boldfaced capital letters within the body of the agreement [see § 57.200[1][e]].

[e] Requirement for Conspicuousness

A term is "conspicuous" if it is written, displayed, or presented so that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term is "conspicuous" or not is a decision for the court [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)]. Conspicuous terms include [Com. Code § 1201(b)(10)(A), (B)]:

- A heading in capitals equal to or greater in size than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same or lesser size; and
- Language in the body of a record or display in larger type than the surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.

It has been held that implied warranty disclaimers and language excluding consequential damages must be printed in boldfaced capital letters [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 18, 20, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516 (prior law)], as they are in this form.

[f] Avoidance of Disclaimers Under Fraud Theory

Notwithstanding the use of warranty disclaimer provisions, it is important for the seller of a computer system to avoid any misrepresentations in making the sale, whether incorporated into the contract or not. Even though California has not enacted UCC § 2-302, under which courts could refuse to enforce unconscionable contract provisions (such as the warranty disclaimer provisions when used as a defense against sales misrepresentations), and even if a California contract contains a valid and effective disclaimer of warranty provision, that does not necessarily vitiate later claims by a computer system purchaser that the seller made fraudulent misrepresentations concerning the system.

If a computer system is sold in justifiable reliance on a misrepresentation knowingly made with the intent of inducing reliance, and damage results, fraud is established under California law [Glovatorium, Inc. v. NCR Corp. (9th Cir. 1982) 684 F.2d 658, 660] . Fraud may be inferred from the seller's failure to perform a promise, including a promise regarding the manner in which a computer will operate or produce results [Glovatorium, Inc. v. NCR Corp. (9th Cir. 1982) 684 F.2d 658, 661] .

[g] Attorneys' Fees

In any contract action, if the contract provides for attorneys' fees to be awarded to a specified party or the party prevailing on the contract (generally, the party who recovered a greater relief in the action on the contract), the party later found to be the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees [see Civ. Code § 1717(a); see also Jackson v. Homeowners Assn. Monte Vista Estates-East (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 773, 779-780, 782, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 363 (parties who agreed on record and in written settlement agreement that trial court would determine prevailing party in action and amount of attorney fee award before dismissal of action could and did waive provisions of Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), which provides there will be no prevailing party when an action is dismissed pursuant to settlement); Sears v. Baccaglio (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1154-1155, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 (reviewing legislative history of Civ. Code § 1717 and finding that party can fail to recover net monetary judgment and still prevail for purposes of collecting fees in action founded on contract)]. A court may deny a contractual claim for attorneys' fees by a defendant who has been voluntarily dismissed from a suit prior to trial [see Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 602, 608, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830, 951 P.2d 399 (examining recovery of attorneys' fees incurred defending action when plaintiff has voluntarily dismissed action before trial); see also Topanga and Victory Partners, LLP v. Toghia (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 775, 778, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 104 (defendant who was not party to contract but was sued for breach of contract and other causes of action may not recover attorney fees incurred in defending noncontract causes of action when plaintiff has filed voluntary dismissal with prejudice); Silver v. Boatwright Home Inspection, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 443, 446, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475 (holding that defendant was not prevailing party when plaintiffs obtained their litigation objective through settlement with other defendants)]. The court may determine that there is no party prevailing on the contract for the purpose of awarding attorneys' fees [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1); but see Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) (defendant who has tendered to plaintiff the full amount due may be party prevailing on contract)].

A provision for attorneys' fees will be construed to be applicable to the entire contract unless each party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the contract and that fact is stated in the contract [see Civ. Code § 1717(b)]. The provision in this form [see § 57.201[2], P 4.24] is specifically applicable to the entire contract.

For forms and additional discussion of contract provisions governing the award of attorneys' fees, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.252.

§ 57.201 Computer Purchase Agreement--Computer Installed Under Prior Lease Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the purchase of a business computer (as distinguished from a personal computer) that is already in place on the buyer's premises under a preexisting lease agreement. It deals solely with the sale of the hardware and does not include software license terms or maintenance provisions. For an integrated computer purchase agreement combining the sale of hardware, the licensing of software, and maintenance of the hardware, see § 57.200. For a separate commercial software license agreement, see § 57.221. For a separate computer maintenance agreement, see § 57.203.

[b] Warranty Provisions

This agreement includes warranty [see § 57.201[2], PP 7, 8], warranty remedy [see § 57.201[2], P 8], warranty limitation [see § 57.201[2], P 9], and warranty disclaimer provisions [see § 57.201[2], P 10] designed for use in connection with computers used in business rather than for personal, family, or household purposes. The service warranty provisions in this form differ from those contained in § 57.200 in that this form identifies different classes of equipment and applies a different level of warranty obligation to each class. For discussion of the law of warranty and warranty disclaimers, see § 57.200[1].

Buyer shall notify Seller of the assertion of any such claim and shall cooperate with Seller in the investigation and resolution thereof.

(c) Seller shall not indemnify Buyer against any claim or liability based on Buyer's modification or conversion of the Equipment and/or the subsequent use of that modification or conversion.

8. Limited Service Warranty.

(a) BUYER AGREES THAT ITS PURCHASE OF ITEMS OF EQUIPMENT THAT HAVE BEEN INSTALLED ON BUYER'S PREMISES FOR MORE THAN ONE YEAR PRIOR TO THE DATE OF PURCHASE (hereinafter "WARRANTY CATEGORY I PROPERTY") IS ON AN "AS IS" BASIS. Service on and replacement parts for Warranty Category I Property shall be furnished by Seller at the applicable hourly rates, prices, and terms current at the time furnished.

§ 57.202 Computer Lease Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a computer lease agreement for use by a firm that leases computer equipment for commercial purposes. It does not include provisions for the maintenance of the system being leased. Instead, it includes a requirement that the lessee execute a separate maintenance agreement [see § 57.202[2], P 7]. For a computer maintenance agreement, see § 57.203.

[b] Warranty Provisions

This form contains warranty provisions applicable to commercial as distinct from consumer agreements [see § 57.202[2], PP 13-15 of form]. For discussion of the California Commercial Code provisions relating to warranty provisions and disclaimers used in agreements between a computer lessor and a commercial lessee, see § 57.200[1].

This form may be adapted to lease a computer to a consumer by replacing the warranty provisions included in this form with the consumer warranty provisions contained in § 57.221. For coverage of warranties and warranty disclaimers and waivers used in consumer transactions, see § 57.221[1][b].

Computer Lease Agreement

COMPUTER LEASE

Lease No.: _____

_____[name of lessor], _____[address] ("Lessor"), and _____[name of lessee], _____[address] ("Lessee") in consideration of the promises made in this Agreement and intending to be legally bound, agree as follows:

1. Lease. Lessor leases to Lessee, and Lessee hires from Lessor, the use of the computer equipment ("Equipment") described in the Lease Schedule attached to and made a part of this Agreement, subject to the terms and conditions of this Lease.

2. Ownership. Lessee agrees that all Equipment is and shall remain Lessor's property and that it may be removed from Lessee's premises by Lessor or its duly authorized agents at any time after termination of this Agreement.

3. Quiet Possession and Use. (a) Lessor covenants with Lessee that Lessee shall be entitled to quiet possession of the Equipment under and during the term of this Agreement, in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement, as long as Lessee is not in default under the Agreement.

(b) Lessee shall be entitled to unlimited use of the Equipment and may sell time on the Equipment to third parties.

4. Term of Agreement. This Agreement shall be effective from the date of its execution by Lessor and Lessee, and shall remain in force until terminated by Lessee on _____[number] days prior written notice to Lessor; provided, however, that Lessee shall not, except as otherwise expressly permitted herein, terminate this Agreement as to any item of equipment covered by this Lease prior to a date _____[number] months from the first day of the first month following the commencement date (the "Initial Term").

5. Commencement Date. The commencement date of this Agreement for the purpose of determining when the monthly rental charges and Initial Term begin shall be the date the Equipment is installed and accepted by Lessee as ready for use. Lessee shall advise Lessor promptly in writing of its confirmation that each item of Equipment is in satisfactory operating condition, the date of that confirmation, and its acceptance of each item of Equipment as of that date.

6. Rental Charges and Taxes. (a) Lessee shall pay Lessor for the use of each item of Equipment the monthly availability charge set forth for that item in the Lease Schedule attached to and made a part of this Agreement.

(b) Lessee shall also pay Lessor the amount of any taxes due on the Equipment or its use or on this Agreement, no matter how designated, levied, or based, including any state and/or local privilege or excise taxes based on gross revenue and any taxes or amounts in lieu thereof paid or payable by Lessor with respect to the Equipment or its use or on this Agreement, _____[inclusive or exclusive] of personal property taxes assessed on the Equipment and exclusive of taxes based on net income.

(c) The monthly availability charge shall be payable monthly in advance. Charges for taxes due and charges made under any other provision of this Agreement shall be made by invoice, are due immediately upon receipt by Lessee, and shall be paid by Lessee when invoiced. Payments due Lessor under this Agreement shall be made to Lessor at _____[address] or to such other person and place as may be designated in writing from time to time by Lessor.

7. Maintenance. Lessee shall enter into and maintain in force a Maintenance Agreement covering maintenance of each item of Equipment. Lessee shall cause the other party to the Maintenance Agreement to keep the Equipment in good working order in accordance with the provisions of that agreement and make all necessary adjustments and repairs to the Equipment. If the agreement is made with the manufacturer of the Equipment, the manufacturer is hereby authorized to accept the directions of Lessee, and Lessee shall allow the manufacturer full and free access to the Equipment.

8. Manufacturer's Maintenance Charges. Lessee agrees that all of the Equipment manufacturer's maintenance charges, whether under the Maintenance Agreement (if made with the manufacturer) or otherwise, including the expenses, if any, of the manufacturer's customer engineers charged by the manufacturer in connection with its maintenance and repair services, shall be borne by Lessee. Charges for any repairs or replacements required as a result of any willful or negligent act of Lessee, any user of the Equipment, or improper repair or maintenance, shall be borne by Lessee.

9. Facilities. Lessee shall meet all of the requirements for installation of the Equipment specified in the manufacturer's installation manual, including a suitable place of installation with appropriate air conditioning and suitable electric power supply. Lessee's installation and facilities shall at all times meet the minimum standard of the National Board of Fire Underwriters for the protection of electronic computer systems as recommended by the National Fire Protection Association.

10. Supplies. Lessee shall be responsible for and shall furnish all supplies consumed or required by the Equipment. All supplies, including data processing cards, magnetic tapes, disks, and other storage media shall meet the manufacturer's applicable specifications.

11. Location. Lessee agrees that during the term of this Agreement, the Equipment shall be located at _____[address] and shall not be moved without the prior express written consent of Lessor.

12. Risk of Loss. (a) Lessee agrees that during the period that any item of Equipment is installed on its premises, Lessee shall be responsible for loss or damage thereto caused by fire, fire suppressant gasses or chemicals, water damage whether from sprinkler leakage or otherwise, lightning, windstorm or tornado, explosion, smoke or smudge, aircraft or motor vehicle damage, earthquake, collapse of buildings or structures, strikes, riots, civil commotion, vandalism and malicious mischief, burglary and theft. Lessee further agrees to maintain a policy of insurance against any of these risks for which insurance can be purchased and to designate Lessor as the loss payee. Lessee shall not be responsible for loss or damage to the Equipment caused by or as a result of hostile or warlike action in time of peace or war; insurrection, rebellion, revolution, or civil war; or nuclear reaction, radiation, or contamination.

(b) If any item of Equipment is damaged, lost, or destroyed by any means for which Lessee is responsible, Lessee shall be liable for the expense of repairing that item, or, if repair cannot be made, for an amount equal to the cost of purchasing similar equipment from the manufacturer, less the amount of any insurance or other recovery received by Lessor.

(c) Lessee agrees that upon the occurrence of any irreparable damage, loss, or destruction to any item of Equipment for any reason, Lessor may terminate Lessee's rights under this Agreement as to each and every item of Equipment [add if right to terminate will be limited to damaged, lost, or destroyed equipment: irreparably damaged, lost, or destroyed].

13. Warranty of Title. (a) Lessor warrants that it has good title to the Equipment and the right to lease it to Lessee free of any proprietary rights of any other party or any other encumbrance whatever.

(b) Lessor shall defend Lessee against any and all claims that the Equipment or Lessee's use thereof under this Agreement violates the trade secret, trademark, copyright, patent, or other proprietary right of any other party asserted by any third party. Lessor shall indemnify and hold Lessee harmless from any liability for damage, costs, or other loss incurred by Lessee in connection with any such claim. Lessee shall notify Lessor of the assertion of any such claim and shall cooperate with Lessor in the investigation and resolution thereof. However, Lessor shall not be liable for any consequential damages arising out of the subject matter of this Agreement.

(c) Lessor shall not indemnify Lessee against any claim or liability based on Buyer's modification or conversion of the Equipment and/or the subsequent use of that modification or conversion.

14. Enforcement of Manufacturer's Warranty. Upon receipt of a written request from Lessee during the term of this Agreement, Lessor shall take all reasonable action requested by Lessee to enforce any manufacturer's warranty, express or implied, issued on or applicable to any item of Equipment and which is enforceable by Lessor in its own name. Lessor further represents that it will obtain for Lessee all service furnished by the manufacturer in connection therewith [; provided, however, that Lessor shall not be obligated to commence or resort to any litigation to enforce any such warranty unless Lessee pays all expenses in connection with that litigation]. If any such warranty is enforceable by Lessee in its own name, upon receipt of a written request from Lessor during the term of this Agreement, Lessee shall take all reasonable action requested by Lessor to enforce that warranty, and Lessee shall obtain for Lessor all service furnished by the manufacturer in connection therewith.

15. Warranty Disclaimer.

EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE EXPRESSLY PROVIDED HEREIN, LESSOR MAKES NO WARRANTIES, EITHER EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, AND SHALL NOT, BY VIRTUE OF HAVING LEASED THE EQUIPMENT COVERED BY THIS AGREEMENT, BE DEEMED TO HAVE MADE ANY REPRESENTATION OR WARRANTY AS TO THE MERCHANTABILITY, FITNESS, DESIGN, OR CONDITION OF, OR THE QUALITY OF THE MATERIAL OR WORKMANSHIP IN THE EQUIPMENT.

16. Indemnity. Lessor shall not be liable to Lessee for, and Lessee shall indemnify and hold Lessor harmless with respect to any third party from, any liability, claim, loss, damage, or expense of any kind or nature caused directly or indirectly by the inadequacy of any item of the Equipment for any purpose; any deficiency or defect in any item of the Equipment; the use or performance of any item of the Equipment; any interruption or loss of service, use, or performance of any item of the Equipment; or any loss of business or other consequential damage whether or not resulting from any of the foregoing.

17. Alterations and Attachments. Upon prior written notice to Lessor and receipt of express written approval, Lessee, at its own expense, may make alterations in or add attachments to the Equipment; provided, however, that such alterations or attachments shall not interfere with the normal operation of the Equipment. Unless Lessor agrees otherwise in writing, all such alterations and attachments shall be removed by Lessee and the Equipment shall be restored to its original condition, reasonable wear and tear excepted, upon termination of this Agreement. If the alteration or attachment interferes with the normal and satisfactory operation or maintenance of any item of the Equipment in a manner that increases the cost of maintenance or creates a safety hazard, Lessee, upon receipt of notice from Lessor to that effect, shall promptly remove the alteration or attachment and restore the Equipment to its previous condition.

18. Transportation Expenses. All transportation, rigging, and drayage charges related to the Equipment, both for delivery to Lessee and return to Lessor, shall be paid by Lessee. Necessary packing materials for the return of the Equipment and a representative to supervise the packing will be furnished to Lessee by Lessor [without charge]. Lessee shall furnish any labor that may be necessary for unpacking the Equipment upon delivery to Lessee and for repacking it for return to Lessor.

19. Notice of Incident or Claim. (a) Lessee shall notify Lessor in writing of each accident or incident arising out of the apparent or alleged improper manufacture, functioning, or operation of any item of the Equipment, immediately after the occurrence thereof. The notice shall identify the item of Equipment and include the time, place, and nature of the accident or incident, the damage, the names and addresses of any parties involved, persons injured, witnesses, and owners of any property damaged, and any other information that may be known.

(b) Lessee shall promptly advise Lessor of all correspondence, papers, notices, and documents of any kind whatsoever received by Lessee in connection with any claim or demand involving or relating to any alleged improper manufacture, functioning, or operation of any item of Equipment or charging Lessor with liability, and shall, together with Lessee's employees, aid in the investigation and defense of all such claims and in the recovery of damages from any third persons liable.

(c) Upon request, Lessee shall permit persons designated by Lessor to examine each item of Equipment.

20. Remedy for Default by Lessor. If Lessor defaults in the performance of any of its obligations under this Agreement for a continuous period of _____[specify number] days after receipt by Lessor of written notice of the default from Lessee, Lessee, at Lessee's option, may terminate this Agreement as of the end of that period by delivering notice to Lessor together with payment to Lessor of all sums due hereunder to the date of Lessor's default.

21. Remedies for Default by Lessee. If Lessee defaults in the payment of any sum of money due hereunder beyond the _____[specify number] day after receipt by Lessee of written notice of default from Lessor, or in the performance of any other of its obligations under this Agreement for a continuous period of _____[specify number] days after receipt by Lessee of written notice of default from Lessor, Lessor, at its option, may do any or all of the following: terminate this Agreement as of the end of that period by delivering notice of termination to Lessee; take immediate possession of any or all items of Equipment, wherever situated, and for that purpose, enter upon any premises without liability for so doing, whether or not this Agreement is terminated; and sell, dispose of, hold, use, or lease any repossessed item of Equipment as Lessor in its sole discretion may decide. Lessee agrees that it shall remain liable for the remaining unpaid rent for the balance of the term of this Agreement and for all other charges payable by Lessee in accordance with this Agreement.

22. Assignments. Lessee shall not assign this Agreement or sublet any item of Equipment without the prior express written consent of Lessor, which consent shall not be unreasonably withheld. Lessee acknowledges that the terms and conditions of this Agreement have been fixed in anticipation of the possible assignment of Lessor's rights under this Agreement in and to the Equipment as collateral security to a third party (the "Assignee") which will rely on and be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of this Agreement. Lessee agrees with Lessor and that Assignee to recognize in writing any such assignment within _____[specify number] days after receipt of written notice thereof and thereafter to pay all sums due Lessor directly to the Assignee as directed by the notice. No such assignment shall transfer to the Assignee any of Lessor's obligations hereunder, and any such assignment shall be subject to Lessee's rights to the use and possession of the Equipment under this Agreement as long as Lessee is not in default under this Agreement.

23. Parties Bound. This Agreement shall be binding on and inure to the benefit of Lessor and Lessee and their respective successors and (to the extent specified in any assignment) assigns.

24. Notices. Any notices or reports required by this Agreement to be given by one party to the other party shall be made in writing to that party at the address shown at the beginning of this Agreement or at such other address as that party may designate in writing from time to time.

25. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

26. Attorneys' Fees. If any legal action is necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire Agreement.

§ 57.203 Computer Maintenance Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a computer maintenance agreement designed for use between the purchaser or lessee of a computer or computer system and a computer maintenance firm. Generally, computer maintenance is performed by the party from whom the computer is acquired, either under the terms of the computer sale or lease agreement or under a separate maintenance agreement entered into by the buyer or lessee pursuant to a requirement in the sale or lease agreement [see § 57.202]. For an example of maintenance provisions included in a contract for the sale of a computer, see § 57.200.

This agreement is essentially a service contract. For detailed discussion of possessory liens for services and repairs, the preliminary determinations prior to drafting a service contract, and a guide to specific service contract provisions, see Ch. 92, Service Contracts .

[b] Warranty Provisions

This form includes warranty provisions designed for use in connection with computers used for commercial purposes [see P 7 of form]. It also includes alternate warranty provisions ("consumer goods" warranty provisions) to use if the agreement is to cover personal computers in home use [see § 57.203[2], P 7(f)]. The federal Magnuson-Moss Consumer Warranty Act [15 U.S.C. §§ 2301-2312] and the California Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [Civ. Code §§ 1794.4, 1794.41; see Civ. Code §§ 1790-1795.8] apply to warranties and service contracts on consumer goods. For a discussion of the application of these statutes, see Ch. 92, Service Contracts .

§ 57.204 Distribution Agreement Between Computer Equipment Manufacturer and Distributor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a distribution agreement between a computer equipment manufacturer and a distributor. It grants the distributor the right to sell specified computer equipment within a designated territory. It may also be adapted for use between a distributor and a retailer or for the distribution of computer software at either the manufacturer-distributor level or the distributor-retailer level. For an agreement between the author of a computer program and a software producer granting the producer a license to mass produce and distribute the program, see § 57.226.

This form provides that the manufacturer will sell the computer equipment to the distributor, who in turn will resell it to the public. For an agreement for sale on consignment, containing consignment language that may be used to adapt this form for such an arrangement, Ch. 52, Sale of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 52.206. For a sales agent agreement under which the distributor acts merely as an agent and receives a commission for its sales services, see Ch. 91, Contracts With Sales Representatives, § 91.02. For additional distributor agreements and provisions, see Ch. 91, Contracts With Sales Representatives.

[b] Antitrust Considerations

A distribution contract that provides for an exclusive dealing arrangement may have antitrust implications. Especially pertinent is Section 3 of the Clayton Act [15 U.S.C. § 12 et seq.], which makes it unlawful for any person engaged in interstate or foreign commerce to lease, sell, or contract to sell goods or commodities for resale on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser must not deal in goods of a competitor, when the effect of that transaction may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce [15 U.S.C. § 14]. Section 3 of the Clayton Act is considerably broader than the Sherman Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] and, thus, if a particular arrangement does not violate the Clayton Act, it will not violate the Sherman Act [see Times-Picayune

Pub. Co. v. United States (1952) 345 U.S. 594, 608, 609, 73 S. Ct. 872, 97 L. Ed. 1277]. Exclusive dealing arrangements may also be subject to the prohibition against unfair methods of competition contained in Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act [see Times-Picayune Pub. Co. v. United States (1952) 345 U.S. 594, 609, 73 S. Ct. 872, 97 L. Ed. 1277].

The Clayton Act applies to corporations [15 U.S.C. § 12], associations [15 U.S.C. § 12], and individuals [Hoffman Motors Corp. v. Alfa Romeo S.p.A. (S.D.N.Y. 1965) 244 F. Supp. 70, 82], and is designed to suppress combinations to restrain competition and attempts to monopolize [Balian Ice Cream Co. v. Arden Farms Co. (S.D. Cal. 1952) 104 F. Supp. 796, 799, aff'd, 231 F.2d 356 (1955), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 991 (1956), reh'g denied, 351 U.S. 928 (1956)]. Unlawful combinations to restrain competition and attempts to monopolize include, under appropriate circumstances, exclusive dealing contracts in which the purchaser agrees not to purchase goods from competitors of the seller and requirements contracts in which the purchaser agrees to purchase from the seller all of the goods he requires in the course of business. The practical effect of both types of restrictive contracts is essentially the same, since both operate to preclude the purchasers from acquiring goods from competitors of the seller. The courts, accordingly, treat both types of contracts in the same manner.

§ 57.205 Network Access Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an agreement between a network owner and a individual to provide for access to the computer or internet network. Network access agreements are used in many contexts, ranging from academic, scientific and legal information. Network access agreements are becoming increasing popular with schools and school districts as a means of providing students access to the internet at school with the consent of a parent.

Network access agreements are also typically provided by the providers through their websites. Many such agreements are a modified terms of use [see § 57.241[2]], and require a user to assent to the terms and conditions of the network access agreement before the user can access the services. Furthermore, if such an access agreement is coupled with a website, the website owner will typically have a privacy policy in conjunction with an access agreement [see § 57.242].

[2] FORM

Network Access Agreement

NETWORK ACCESS AGREEMENT

This Network Access Agreement ("Agreement") is entered into between _____[name of network provider] ("Provider") and _____[name of network user] ("User"), who hereby agree as follows:

1. Network Use. Provider grants User the nonexclusive revocable right, subject to all the terms and conditions of this Agreement, to obtain access to and use Provider's Network ("Network").

2. Permitted Uses. (a) User's access to and use of the Network shall be limited to the purpose and type of activity set forth in Attachment A ("Permitted Uses"). Any other use of the Network and any other method of accessing the Network is strictly prohibited and may subject the User to civil and criminal prosecution.

(b) In accessing and using the Network for the Permitted Uses, User may not use Network resources; modify, view, copy or obtain programs or data if not authorized to do so; insert any program or data if not authorized to do so; or do anything else that might cause damage to the Network.

3. Fees. Access to and use of the Network shall be at User's expense. Provider will charge User a fee for access to or use of the Network as specified on the fee schedule attached to this Agreement. All charges are exclusive of sales, use, excise or other tax. All payments shall be due and payable upon net 30-day terms from the date of invoice.

4. Equipment and Access Procedures. Provider may provide User with certain equipment and/or passwords to access the Network ("Equipment"). User shall not share the Equipment with any third party and user shall take all reasonable steps to secure physical access to and use of the Equipment. User agrees to assume sole responsibility for the Equipment and to pay Provider replacement costs for any damage or loss to the Equipment while in User's possession. User shall notify Provider promptly of any loss, damage, or theft of the Equipment.

5. Term and Termination. This agreement shall terminate _____ [length of term] from the date this agreement is executed, or upon mutual agreement of the parties. Upon termination, User shall immediately cease using the Network and immediately return all Equipment to Provider.

6. Nondisclosure and Ownership. (a) Through use of the Network, User may have access to certain information that is confidential and proprietary to Provider ("Confidential Information"). User agrees to protect all Confidential Information by using a reasonable degree of care to prevent the unauthorized use, dissemination, or publication of the Confidential Information. This Agreement imposes no obligation to User with respect to Confidential Information which is (1) generally known to the public; (2) becomes generally known to the public other than as a result of an act or omission of User; (3) was rightfully known to User prior to User receiving the same information from Provider; (4) is disclosed by Provider to a third party without a duty of confidentiality on the third party; (5) is independently developed by User; (6) is disclosed under operation of law; or (6) is disclosed by User with Provider's prior written consent.

(b) User acknowledges and agrees that Provider is the owner of the Network and all data contained therein. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to transfer any of Provider's proprietary or intellectual property rights to user. User agrees that Provider may offer use of and access to the Network to other parties.

(c) User agrees that a breach of the confidentiality provisions of this Agreement will breach the security of Provider's Network and thus would cause irreparable harm to Provider for which no adequate remedy at law exists. User therefore agrees that in addition to any other remedies available, Provider shall be entitled to injunctive relief to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

7. Warranty Disclaimer/Limitation of Liability.

USER ACCEPTS ACCESS TO THE NETWORK ON AN "AS IS" BASIS. PROVIDER MAKES NO REPRESENTATIONS OR WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND WITH RESPECT TO PERFORMANCE, DATA QUALITY, ACCESSIBILITY OR INTEGRITY OF THE NETWORK, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE WARRANTIES OF FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE OR MERCHANTABILITY. PROVIDER ASSUMES NO RESPONSIBILITY IN CONNECTION WITH USER'S ACCESS TO OR USE OF THE NETWORK. PROVIDER SHALL NOT BE LIABLE FOR ANY DAMAGES WHATSOEVER ARISING OUT OF THE COMPANY'S ACCESS TO OR USE OF THE NETWORK.

8. Indemnification.

USER SHALL BE LIABLE FOR, AND HOLD PROVIDER HARMLESS FOR, ANY DAMAGES SUSTAINED BY PROVIDER, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO, LOSSES, LIABILITIES, CLAIMS, DEMANDS, SUITS, CAUSES OF ACTION, JUDGMENTS, COSTS OR EXPENSES (INCLUDING COURT COSTS AND ATTORNEY'S FEES), ARISING OUT OF THE USER'S ACCESS TO OR USE OF THE NETWORK.

9. Assignment. The rights granted in this Agreement may not be assigned or transferred by User without the prior written approval of Provider. User shall not be permitted to delegate its responsibilities or obligations hereunder without the prior written approval of Provider.

10. Governing Law, Jurisdiction. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of California [or specify other state].

11. Severability. In the event that any provision of this Agreement is held to be invalid or unenforceable, the remaining provisions of this Agreement will remain in full force and effect.

12. Entire Agreement. Materials may be made available for review or duplication in whole or in part, subject to the terms of the governing agreement and any copyright or other applicable restrictions.

Access agreements also typically are provided by database providers through their websites. Many such agreements are a modified form of the website terms of use [see § 57.241[2]], and require a user to assent to the terms and conditions of the database access agreement before the user can access the services. Furthermore, if such an access agreement is coupled with a website, the website owner typically will have a privacy policy in conjunction with an access agreement [see § 57.242].

AUTHOR: Fiona C. Newell Kaufman, J.D. Revision Author

§ 57.220 Commercial Software License Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a nonexclusive and nontransferable license agreement for the use of computer software between a publisher of computer software and a commercial user of that software. For an agreement licensing the use of "off the shelf" or "clickwrap" software, see § 57.221.

This form does not include provisions for software maintenance or updating. A software maintenance agreement is set forth in § 57.224.

This form is drafted to license the use of a single computer program and its associated documentation. It can be adapted to license the use of more than one computer program; however, the attorney must first determine whether it makes more sense to use separate agreements for each licensed item. In addition, if there are separate computer programs licensed under one agreement, and the warranties are different, § 57.229 offers some alternative language for warranty provisions with differing levels of support.

[b] Use of License to Protect Proprietary Interests

A software developer or producer who intends to market software must decide whether the software will be sold outright to prospective users or licensed to those users. This choice can have important effects on the proprietary interests of the producer or developer of the software.

Licensing agreements are commonly used in the marketing of computer software because they do not transfer title to the software, with the result that the licensee does not have sole and exclusive rights to it (absent a license provision to that effect). This permits the software producer to impose use restrictions designed to protect its proprietary interests.

Specifically, the producer can include provisions restricting access to the software and prohibiting its transfer or disclosure of its contents to other persons. This restricted access is vital to intellectual property protection of the software and is the reason why licensing is usually the only acceptable alternative if the developer or producer desires to protect the intellectual properties of the software.

For example, a company that made programmable chips and provided software for programming its chips could effectively prevent competitors from using its software (which a competitor might use for programming its own similar devices) by specifying in the software license agreement that customers may "use the Licensed Programs for the sole purpose of programming logic devices manufactured by ALTERA and sold by ALTERA or its authorized distributors (the "Permitted Use")" [Altera Corp. v. Clear Logic, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1079, 1091-1092 (plaintiff had claim for tortious interference with contractual relations)].

In contrast, if the software is sold outright, the buyer will have sole and exclusive rights to it. This means that the seller will not be able to impose use and disclosure restrictions and that it will be far more difficult to maintain intellectual property protection for the software.

For discussion of the generally acknowledged methods of protecting proprietary interests in software, see §§ 57.20-57.23; see also § 57.225[1].

[c] Commercial Warranties In General

This form contains warranties applicable to commercial as distinguished from consumer transactions. The Uniform Commercial Code, as enacted in California [Com. Code § 1101 et seq.] (referred to in this chapter for convenience as "UCC"), provides for warranties of title and against infringement [see Com. Code § 2312], express warranties [see Com. Code § 2313], and implied warranties of merchantability [see Com. Code § 2314] and fitness for a particular purpose [see Com. Code § 2315]. These warranties are discussed in Ch. 52, Sales of Goods Under the Uniform Commercial Code.

There are two alternative types of product warranty provisions in this form. The first [see §§ 6.03, 6.04 (first alternatives) of Form] should be used only if the program is tried and proven to be "bug-free." The second [see §§ 6.03, 6.04 (second alternatives) of Form] is a limited warranty that is advisable when, as is in almost all cases, the licensor cannot be sure that the program is bug-free and thus does not wish to be held to a long term commitment. For a third type of warranty provision, establishing different levels of warranty commitment for different grades or types of programs, see § 57.229.

The federal Magnuson-Moss Consumer Warranty Act [15 U.S.C. § 2301 et seq.] and the California Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act [Civ. Code § 1790 et seq.] do not apply to the warranties contained in this form because the transaction is not a sale and because the software involved is intended for commercial rather than consumer use [see 15 U.S.C. § 2301(6), (7); Civ. Code § 1791.1, 1791.2, 1792, 1793]. For discussion of the application of these statutes to consumer software licensing agreements, see § 57.221[1].

[d] Warranty Disclaimers

The language that creates an express warranty and any language intended to limit a warranty must be consistent [Com. Code § 2316(1)]. This means that no warranty, whether express or implied, can be modified or disclaimed unless the seller clearly limits its liability [see Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 119, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377]. In addition, the disclaimer of an implied warranty of merchantability must mention "merchantability," and the disclaimer of any implied warranty of fitness must be both written and conspicuous [Com. Code § 2316(2)]. Therefore, the warranty disclaimer clauses in this form state that its express warranties are in lieu of all other warranties, express or implied, including any warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose and, moreover, are complemented by specific warranty remedy provisions. Printing the disclaimer clause in boldfaced capital letters (as they are in this form) is the best way of assuring that it will be conspicuous, and failure to use both boldfaced and capital letters has been held to result in an inadequate disclaimer [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 18, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516] .

There are other ways to disclaim implied warranties. They are excluded by expressions such as "as is," "with all faults," by language that makes it plain there is no implied warranty [Com. Code § 2316(3)(a)], or by a phrase such as "there are no warranties which extend beyond the description on the face hereof" [Com. Code § 2316(2)]. An implied warranty can also be negated by conduct such as the examination of a model [see Com. Code § 2316(3)(b), (c)].

[e] Disclaimer of Consequential Damages for Breach of Warranty

Remedies for breach of warranty, including the measure of damages, can be limited by contract [see Com. Code §§ 2316(4), 2719]. Moreover, the limitation or exclusion of consequential damages when the loss is commercial is valid unless it can be proved that the limitation is unconscionable [Com. Code § 2719(3)]. However, language excluding consequential damages must be conspicuous [see Dorman v. International Harvester Co. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 11, 20, 120 Cal. Rptr. 516] . For that reason, the language in this form that excludes consequential damages is printed in boldfaced capital letters within the body of the agreement [see P 6.06 of Form].

[f] Avoidance of Disclaimers Under Fraud Theory

Notwithstanding the use of warranty disclaimer provisions, the licensor must avoid any misrepresentations in consummating the transaction, whether incorporated into the contract or not. Even though California has not enacted Uniform Commercial Code Section 2-302, under which courts could refuse to enforce unconscionable contract provisions (such as the warranty disclaimer provisions when posed as a defense against misrepresentations), and even if a California contract contains a valid and effective disclaimer of warranty provision, that does not necessarily vitiate future claims made by a licensee that the licensor made fraudulent misrepresentations concerning the system.

If the licensor justifiably relies on a misrepresentation knowingly made with the intent of inducing reliance, and damage results, fraud is established under California law [see Glovatorium, Inc. v. NCR Corp. (9th Cir. 1982) 684 F.2d 658, 660 (computer system sale)]. Fraud may be inferred from the seller's failure to perform a promise, including a promise regarding the manner in which an item will operate or produce results [see Glovatorium, Inc. v. NCR Corp. (9th Cir. 1982) 684 F.2d 658, 661] .

[g] Indemnification

Indemnification is an obligation by which one party engages to save another from a legal consequence of the conduct of one of the parties, or of some other person [Civ. Code § 2772 et seq.]. Such an obligation to indemnification can arise as implied by law or under an express contract under which one party assumes a duty to hold the other harmless under circumstances specified in the contract. Indemnification provisions can be drafted in many different forms, so it becomes imperative to draft indemnification clauses specific to the relationship at hand.

Sometimes an indemnification provision will call for indemnity for the performance of the work specified under the agreement. In such a case, it is important to ensure that an appropriate standard of care is also specified. If a standard is not specified, the indemnifying party may be held to a standard of care that is inappropriate for the work that party is performing.

If an indemnification provision provides for indemnity for the breach of the agreement, it is important that there is a cap on damages. Otherwise the indemnified party may be able to recover all costs and all expenses.

In the event an indemnification provision calls for indemnity for the manufacture, use or sale of a product, it is important that the indemnifying party has control over the entire process.

If an indemnification provision calls for a party to indemnify against all claims for intellectual property infringement, the indemnifying party needs to perform enough due diligence to be able to agree to such a liability. It is very important that a party limits such a provision to match what they have control over, or to what they can adequately perform due diligence on.

In drafting an indemnification provision, care should be taken to distinguish between liability and loss or damages. It would be beneficial to avoid a clause that calls for an indemnifying party to cover liability; otherwise a party may end up being required to pay for the prevention of the harm or injury. A provision which provides for the payment of loss or damages will ensure that a party will be required only to pay for actual loss paid out.

ARTICLE 6. WARRANTY, INDEMNIFICATION AND LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

6.01. Warranty. Licensor warrants to Licensee that the Software, in unmodified form and when used as authorized by this Agreement, will perform materially in accordance the Specifications for a period of _____ days from the date initially delivered to Licensee ("Warranty Period"). If during the Warranty Period, Licensee demonstrates to Licensor that the Software does not perform materially in accordance with its Specifications ("Defect"), then Licensor, within _____ days of receiving written notice of such a Defect, shall respond to Licensee with either (a) a statement that Licensor has in good faith and using reasonable efforts not yet been able to duplicate the alleged Defect, or (b) a plan indicating whether Licensor intends, at its option and expense, to: (1) use commercially reasonable efforts to correct the Defect; or (2) provide Licensee with replacement Software of equivalent or greater functionality. If Licensor determines that neither of the preceding options is commercially feasible, then Licensor shall return to Licensee any license fees paid for the Software in question, and in that event, any licenses granted by Licensor to Licensee for the Software shall terminate.

6.02. Warranty Disclaimer.

THE PROVISIONS OF THIS ARTICLE 6 STATE THE SOLE AND EXCLUSIVE REMEDIES AVAILABLE TO LICENSEE, AND LICENSOR'S SOLE AND EXCLUSIVE LIABILITY, FOR ANY PERFORMANCE OR NONPERFORMANCE OF THE SOFTWARE. LICENSOR DISCLAIMS ALL OTHER WARRANTIES, INCLUDING ALL EXPRESS OR IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY, SATISFACTORY QUALITY, TITLE, NONINFRINGEMENT, AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE.

6.03. Indemnification by Licensor. (a) Except as otherwise provided, Licensor, at its own expense, will defend, indemnify, and hold Licensee harmless from any claim made or threatened or any suit or proceeding brought against Licensee insofar as it is based on an allegation that any Software furnished to Licensee under this Agreement infringes any copyright or patent in existence on the date the Software was initially provided to Licensee, but only if Licensee does all of the following:

- (1) Notifies Licensor of that action in writing within a reasonable period of time (such that Licensor suffers no prejudice to its rights);
- (2) Gives Licensor the right to control and direct the defense and settlement of that action;
- (3) Makes no compromise, settlement, or admission of liability; and
- (4) Provides reasonable assistance and cooperates in the defense of that action at Licensor's expense.

Subject to the limitations set forth in this Article 6, Licensor shall pay any resulting damages, costs and expenses finally awarded to a third party, including but not limited to reasonable legal fees. Licensor will have no responsibility for the settlement of any claim, suit, or proceeding made by Licensee without Licensor's prior written approval.

(b) If any Software is held to infringe and the use of that Software is enjoined, Licensor, at its expense, will do one of the following:

- (1) Procure for Licensee the right to continue using the infringing or potentially infringing Software;
- (2) Replace the infringing or potentially infringing Software with non-infringing Software; or
- (3) Modify the infringing or potentially infringing Software so that it become non-infringing.

If none of the foregoing remedies are commercially feasible, then Licensor will return to Licensee any license fees paid for that Software, and upon such a return, any licenses granted to Licensee for that Software shall terminate immediately.

(c) Licensor's obligations as stated in this Section will not apply to any claim, suit or proceeding to the extent it is based on any of the following:

- (1) Any modification of the Software other than by Licensor or the combination of the Software with non-Licensor hardware or software, if the claim, suit or proceeding would have been avoided if the Software had not been so modified or combined;
- (2) Licensee's use of other than the latest release of the Software if Licensee is informed that a claim, suit or proceeding can be avoided by use of the latest release;
- (3) Any use of the Software not authorized by this Agreement; or
- (4) A modification or derivative work made by Licensor based on Licensee's instructions, designs or specifications.

(d) This Section 6.03 sets forth the entire obligation of Licensor, and Licensee's exclusive remedy, for the actual or alleged infringement by any Software of any patent, copyright, trade secret or other intellectual property right of any person or entity.

6.04. Indemnification by Licensee. [(a)] Licensee shall defend, indemnify, and hold Licensor harmless, under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent as Licensor's indemnification obligation pursuant to Section 6.03, from and against any and all claims asserted by a third party against Licensor to the extent such a claim is based or alleges the infringement of that third party's intellectual property rights by (1) modification(s) of the Software made by Licensee, or (2) derivative works made by Licensee.

[Optional provision:]

(b) Licensee acknowledges that the Software is not designed, made, or intended for any use in hazardous environments requiring fail-safe performance, such as in the operation of nuclear facilities, aircraft control, communications, or navigation, air traffic control, medical devices, nuclear applications, missile and defense systems that could lead directly to death, personal injury or severe physical or environmental damage ("Unintended Uses"). In the event any Licensee's Products incorporating any Software is used for any Unintended Uses, Licensee shall indemnify and hold Licensor and its suppliers, successors and assigns harmless from any claims, losses, costs, damages, expenses, or liability arising out of or in connection with any such Unintended Uses.

[Continue with the following:]

6.05. Limitation of Liability.

IN NO EVENT WILL EITHER PARTY BE LIABLE TO EACH OTHER OR TO ANY THIRD PARTY FOR ANY CONSEQUENTIAL, INDIRECT, INCIDENTAL OR SPECIAL DAMAGES, EVEN IF THE PARTY TO BE CHARGED HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES. IN NO EVENT WILL LICENSOR'S TOTAL LIABILITY UNDER ANY OR ALL PROVISIONS OF THIS AGREEMENT FOR ALL CAUSES OF ACTION ON A CUMULATIVE BASIS EXCEED THE PAYMENTS ACTUALLY MADE TO LICENSOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT FOR ALL SOFTWARE OR SERVICES OR SUPPORT OR MAINTENANCE RESULTING IN LIABILITY OR OBLIGATIONS ON LICENSOR'S PART DURING THE IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING _____[specify number of months or years] PERIOD. NOTWITHSTANDING THE FOREGOING, WITH REGARD TO LICENSOR'S LIABILITY UNDER THIS SECTION, LICENSOR'S TOTAL LIABILITY SHALL NOT EXCEED THE GREATER OF SUCH PAYMENTS OR $_____.

ARTICLE 7. TERMINATION

7.01. Grounds for Automatic Termination. The license granted by this Agreement shall be terminated automatically and without further notice upon the occurrence of any of the following:

Licensee agrees that immediately upon the operation of Section 7.01, whether or not it receives notice of termination, it shall immediately _____[return all copies of the Software to Licensor or destroy all copies of the Software and certify that fact to Licensor]. Licensee further agrees that in the event of termination through its default, all fees or charges due for the remaining term of this Agreement shall immediately become due and payable. Upon termination of the license granted hereunder, Licensor's obligations under this Agreement shall cease.

ARTICLE 8. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

8.01. Notices. Unless otherwise provided in this Agreement, any notice required or permitted by this Agreement to be given to either party shall be deemed to have been duly given if in writing and delivered personally or mailed by first-class, registered, or certified mail, postage prepaid and addressed (when intended for Licensee) to _____[address, including appropriate department] or (when intended for Licensor) to _____[address, including appropriate department].

8.02. Assignment of Contract. Licensee shall not assign _____[or otherwise transfer its rights under this Agreement, including the license granted hereunder, or the Software obtained pursuant to this Agreement or this Agreement or its rights hereunder] without the prior written consent of Licensor. 8.05. Attorneys' Fees. If any legal action is necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire Agreement.

8.06. Severability. If any part of this Agreement is adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, that judgment shall not affect or nullify the remainder of this Agreement, and the effect shall be confined to the part immediately involved in the controversy adjudged.

8.07. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be deemed to have been made in, and shall be construed pursuant to, the laws of the State of California.

8.08. Entire Agreement. Licensee acknowledges and agrees that this Agreement is the complete and exclusive statement of the mutual understanding of the parties, and that it supersedes and cancels all previous written and oral agreements and communications relating to the subject matter of this Agreement.

[Add the following if licensee uses a purchase order for acquisition of the software:]

8.09. Effect of Purchase Order. In the event of any conflict between this Agreement and the terms and conditions of any purchase order or similar document pursuant to which Licensee acquired the license granted by this Agreement, the terms and conditions of this Agreement shall control.

§ 57.221 Consumer "Packaged" Software Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement under which consumer software may be licensed to businesses or individuals. Consumer software agreements may be available in a number of formats. Software may be purchased of the shelf, and may be subject to a "shrink-wrap" license, which binds the licensee once the software package is opened. Consumer software agreements may also come in a "click-wrap" form in which the license agreement appears when the software is being installed on a computer. In such a situation, the licensee must accept the terms of the license agreement before the software may be installed. "Click-wrap" agreements are common when installing software from a media such as a CD-Rom, or downloading from an internet website.

For comment on the reasons for using a license to transfer software, see § 57.200[1].

This form does not include provisions for software maintenance or updating. For additional provisions that may be adapted and included in this form to provide for these functions, see §§ 57.220 and 57.224.

For a review of the basic terminology used in describing and dealing with computer software, see the discussion in §§ 57.10-57.13. For discussion of the generally acknowledged methods of protecting proprietary interests in software see §§ 57.20-57.23, 57.225[1]. For additional discussions on general intellectual property rights see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, and Gilson on Trademarks, Ch. 1, General Principles (Matthew Bender).

[b] Warranty Provisions

This agreement contains a limited product warranty that the software will conform substantially in accordance with the specifications, and provides a limited warranty against defects in materials and workmanship [see P 5 of Form]. This form includes express warranties, warranty disclaimer and waiver language, and warranty remedies. The California version of the Uniform Commercial Code provides for warranties of title and against infringement [see Com. Code § 2312], express warranties [see Com. Code § 2313], and implied warranties of merchantability [see Com. Code § 2314] and fitness for a particular purpose [see Com. Code § 2315]. For additional discussion of applicable warranty provisions, see §§ 57.13 and 57.200[1].

[c] Acceptance of Contract

This agreement is not executed, in the traditional sense, by either party. The agreement, however, specifies that the buyer of the packaged software accepts the terms of the agreement by the act of opening the package containing the software, by installing the software, or by clicking an "I Accept" button. That act constitutes acceptance of the agreement [see Civ. Code § 1584].

Licensee further agrees that if he or she does not agree with any of the following terms and conditions, he or she shall promptly return the unused Software along with proof of purchase to the place of purchase for a full refund of the licensee fee paid.

3. License. (a) Licensor hereby grants, and Licensee hereby accepts, a nontransferable, non-exclusive, worldwide, perpetual license to use the software, subject to the conditions and for the period specified herein.

(b) Licensee agrees to use the software for _____ [its sole and exclusive benefit or specify purposes, e.g., Licensee's _____ (own or internal) purposes or in the performance of data processing services for others only].

(c) Licensee is authorized to use make one copy of the Software in any machine readable form for back-up or

(e) Licensee agrees not to sublicense, assign, or transfer the license granted by this Agreement or the Software except as expressly provided herein, and agrees that any attempt to do so in any way other than expressly provided herein shall be null and void.

4. Termination of License. This License is effective until terminated. Licensee may terminate this License at any time by destroying all copies of the Software and its Documentation. This License will terminate immediately without notice from Licensor, if Licensee fails to comply with any provision of this License. Upon termination, Licensee must destroy all copies of the Software and its Documentation.

5. Limited Warranty. Licensor warrants that the Software will perform substantially in accordance with the accompanying documentation and the media on which the Software is distributed is properly recorded and free from defects in materials and workmanship under normal use for a period of 90 days from the date of original purchase. This Limited Warranty does not apply to Software that has been altered, damaged, abused, mis-applied, or used other than in accordance with this License and any instructions and documentation that accompany the Software. Licensor's entire liability and Licensee's exclusive remedy will be that Licensor will repair or replace a defective media returned within the warranty period or will, at Licensor's option, refund the money Licensee paid for the Software provided that the Software is returned within the warranty period along with a copy of the original purchase receipt. Any replacement Software will be warranted for the remainder of the original warranty period or 30 days, whichever is longer. Licensor does not warrant that the functions contained in the Software will meet the Licensee's requirements, or that the operation of the software will be uninterrupted or error-free, or that defects in the Software will be corrected. Furthermore, Licensor does not warrant or make any representations regarding the use or the results of the use of the Software or its documentation in terms of their correctness, accuracy, reliability, or otherwise. No oral or written information or advice given by Licensor or its authorized representative shall create a warranty or in any way increase the scope of this warranty. Some jurisdictions do not allow the exclusion of implied warranties, so the above exclusion may not apply.

NEITHER LICENSOR NOR ITS SUPPLIERS SHALL IN ANY EVENT BE LIABLE FOR ANY DAMAGES WHATSOEVER ARISING OUT OF OR RELATED TO THE USE OF OR INABILITY TO USE THE SOFTWARE, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO DIRECT, INDIRECT, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES, AND DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF BUSINESS PROFITS, BUSINESS INTERRUPTION, LOSS OF BUSINESS INFORMATION, OR OTHER PECUNIARY LOSS, EVEN IF LICENSOR HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES, WHETHER SUCH LIABILITY IS BASED ON CONTRACT, TORT, WARRANTY, OR ANY OTHER LEGAL OR EQUITABLE GROUNDS. BECAUSE SOME STATES DO NOT ALLOW THE EXCLUSION OR LIMITATION OF LIABILITY FOR CONSEQUENTIAL OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES, THE ABOVE LIMITATION MAY NOT APPLY TO LICENSEE. HOWEVER, IN NO CASE SHALL LICENSOR'S LIABILITY EXCEED THE PURCHASE PRICE FOR THE SOFTWARE.

7. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be construed according to, and the rights of the parties shall be governed by, the law of the State of California.

8. Licensee's Acknowledgment.

LICENSEE ACKNOWLEDGES THAT HE OR SHE HAS READ THIS AGREEMENT, UNDERSTANDS IT, AND AGREES TO BE BOUND BY ITS TERMS AND CONDITIONS. LICENSEE FURTHER AGREES THAT IT IS THE COMPLETE AND EXCLUSIVE STATEMENT OF THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN LICENSEE AND _____[name of software owner] AND THAT IT SUPERSEDES ANY PRIOR AGREEMENT, ORAL OR WRITTEN, AND ANY OTHER COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN LICENSEE AND _____[name of software owner] RELATING TO THE SUBJECT MATTER OF THIS AGREEMENT.

§ 57.222 Software Development Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the services of a computer software development firm in developing, preparing, and installing a computer program tailored to the needs of an individual or business. It differs from the software consultant agreement in § 57.225 in that the consultant in this agreement is not an individual but a software development firm. In addition, this form calls for installation and post-installation services as well as program design.

This form is not intended for use as an employment agreement between a computer software firm and a person hired as a computer programmer employee. For that type of agreement, including language that may be used in this form, and related comments, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.222.

[b] Intellectual Property Protection

For discussion of the various methods used in protecting the proprietary rights of the person for whom computer software is designed, see § 57.225.

2. Work Product Description. Company desires to have Designer perform all services and produce Work Product as described _____ [below: _____ (describe projected features and function) or in Appendix A attached to this Agreement and incorporated herein by reference].

3. Services. Designer agrees to provide all services necessary to produce the Work Product as described in _____ [Paragraph 2, above or Appendix A].

4. Term of Agreement. This Agreement shall be effective from the date upon which it is executed until terminated by Company upon _____ [specify period] prior written notice or by Designer on _____ [specify period] prior written notice, terminated pursuant to any other provision of this Agreement, or until completion of all services contemplated by this Agreement.

[For periodic charges, use the following provision:]

5. Periodic Payment. Company shall pay Designer for all services rendered in accordance with Designer's established rates contained in its rate schedule dated _____ which are attached to this Agreement as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference, and all applicable taxes, including sales or use taxes. Company also shall pay Designer for _____ [specify extra items, e.g.: travel costs, including travel time, meals, and lodging, related to performance of this Agreement]. Company shall also reimburse Designer for special or unusual expenses incurred at Company's specific request. All rates are subject to change by Designer on _____ [specify period, e.g., 30 days] prior written notice. Charges shall be billed _____ [specify period, e.g.: monthly] and shall be payable immediately upon receipt of each invoice. Payment is contingent upon completion of the Work Product and acceptance of the Work Product by Company. [Concurrent with the execution of this Agreement, Company shall deposit with Designer the sum of $ _____ as an advance to be applied against the charges billed to Company by Designer as specified above.]

[Or, for a lump-sum purchase price:]

5. Purchase Price. Company shall pay Designer the sum of $ _____ as the purchase price for all services rendered. Concurrent with the execution of this Agreement, Company shall deposit with Designer an amount equal to _____ percent of that purchase price to be applied against the purchase price. Payment of the balance shall be made upon completion of the Work Product and acceptance of the Work Product by Company.

[Continue with the following:]

6. Development and Acceptance of Specifications. (a) Within _____ working days after the date of this Agreement, the parties shall meet and discuss the basic purpose and functions of the Work Product and the specific features necessary in order to accomplish its specific purpose. Following agreement on the purpose and basic features of the Work Product, Designer shall prepare specifications for any software portion of the Work Product. If these specifications are acceptable to Company, Company shall execute a copy of the Specifications Acceptance Agreement attached to this Agreement as Exhibit C.

(b) If Designer and Company are unable to agree upon specifications for the software portion of the Work Product, this Agreement shall be terminated and all copies of any specifications or other materials furnished by Designer to Company shall be returned immediately [add if lump sum purchase price provision was used and parties agree that designer will be entitled to retain deposit:], but Designer shall retain that portion of the purchase price deposited by Company at the time this Agreement was executed].

7. Completion and Acceptance of Work Product. When Company accepts the specifications for the software portion of the Work Product, Designer shall commence preparation and development of the program in accordance with those specifications. If the final complete program meets the specifications in all material respects, Company shall promptly accept it and Designer shall complete the additional portion of the Work Product.

8. Failure to Complete Work Product. Designer's failure to complete the Work Product in accordance with the specifications adopted under Paragraph 6 shall constitute a breach of this Agreement for which Company may seek damages.

9. Confidential Information. (a) Designer agrees that all information communicated to it with respect to the proposed Work Product, including any confidential information relating to the proposed Work Product gained by Designer or its personnel, whether or not that information was directly or intentionally communicated, is confidential. Designer further agrees that all information, conclusions, recommendations, reports, advice, or other documents generated by Designer pursuant to this Agreement is confidential.

(b) Designer promises and agrees that it shall not disclose any confidential information to any other person unless specifically authorized in writing by Company to do so. If Company gives Designer written authorization to make any disclosures, Designer shall do so only within the limits and to the extent of that authorization.

(c) Designer shall use its best efforts to prevent inadvertent disclosure of any confidential information to any third party. Designer shall instruct its personnel to keep that information confidential by using the same care and discretion that they use with similar data designated by Designer as confidential.

(d) Designer acknowledges and agrees that all information concerning the Work Product and any future and proposed products of Company or any of its associates constitutes an exceptionally valuable trade secret of Company. That information includes, among other matters, the facts that the Work Product is planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions of the features of the Work Product.

10. Use and Disclosure of Confidential Data. Designer shall not use any confidential information or circulate it to any other person or persons, except when specifically authorized in advance by Company and then only to the extent necessary for any of the following:

(a) Conducting negotiations, discussions, and/or consultations with designated Company representatives.

(b) Supplying Company with goods or services at its order.

(c) Preparing confidential estimates, bids or proposals, and invitations for bids or requests for proposals for submission to Company.

(d) Accomplishing any purpose Company may later specify in writing.

11. Copies of Confidential Data. Designer agrees that copies of confidential information shall not be made without the express written permission of Company and that all such copies shall be returned to Company along with the originals. [Notwithstanding the foregoing, Company agrees that Designer, subject to the other terms and conditions of this Agreement, may make one and only one copy of any materials supplied by or to Company and retain those copied materials solely for its use as historical and legal references.]

12. Return of Materials. Designer shall return to Company, promptly at Company's request, all confidential materials [other than material that Consultant may retain under Paragraph 11 of this Agreement]. Any materials that Company specifically requests to be returned shall be returned promptly at the conclusion of the work on the project to which the materials relate, or, if no work is performed, at the time Designer ceases to be involved with that project.

[If buyer is to have exclusive rights to the work product:]

13. Property Rights in Work Product. Company and Designer agree that all original material, including all computer programs and all related printed materials comprising the Work Product, originated and prepared for Company by Designer pursuant to this Agreement, shall belong exclusively to Company and shall constitute a trade secret owned exclusively by Company. Designer acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of information concerning the Work Product [and any future proposed products of Company or any of its associates, the facts that those products are planned, under consideration, or in production,] as well as any descriptions of the features thereof shall constitute unfair competition. Designer promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Company.

[Or, if rights are to be retained by designer:]

13. Property Rights and License. Company and Designer agree that all original material, including all computer programs and all related printed materials comprising the Work Product, originated and prepared for Company by Designer pursuant to this Agreement, shall belong exclusively to and be the property of Designer, and that Designer shall have the exclusive right to protect the Work Product by copyright or any other means. However, Designer agrees that upon receipt of payment in full pursuant to the terms of this Agreement, Designer shall convey to Company _____ [a nonexclusive or an exclusive] _____ [assignable or nonassignable] license for the use of the Work Product which _____ [shall or shall not] include the right to reproduce, publish, or sublicense the Work Product to other parties. Company acknowledges and agrees that the Work Product is confidential and agrees to use all reasonable means necessary to protect its confidentiality. [Optional: Designer agrees to pay Company a royalty of _____ [specify dollar or percentage amount] on each license Designer grants with respect to the Work Product or any modification or amendment it makes thereto.]

[Continue with the following:]

14. Joint Use of Concepts. Company and Designer acknowledge and agree that the technical expertise developed during the course of this Agreement by Designer's personnel or jointly by Designer's personnel and Company's personnel may be used by either party in any way that party deems appropriate.

15. Indemnification. Consultant shall indemnify Company against all losses and expenses incurred by Company, including but not limited to reasonable attorneys' fees, resulting from any breach of this Agreement by Designer. Designer agrees to indemnify and hold Company harmless from all claims for bodily injury or property damage that may arise from Designer's performance of services for Company. Designer waives all rights against Company for damages covered by other insurance.

16. Liability Limitation.

NOTWITHSTANDING ANYTHING TO THE CONTRARY WITHIN THIS AGREEMENT, ALL LIABILITY OF COMPANY UNDER THIS AGREEMENT SHALL BE LIMITED TO THE AMOUNTS OWED TO DESIGNER BY COMPANY FOR WORK ACTUALLY PERFORMED BY DESIGNER.

17. Independent Contractor Status. Company and Designer agree that Designer shall perform its duties under this Agreement as an independent contractor. Personnel employed by Designer who perform duties related to this Agreement shall remain under the supervision, management, and control of Designer.

18. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be construed according to, and the rights of the parties shall be governed by, the law of the State of California.

19. Attorneys' Fees. If any legal action is necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire Agreement.

20. Entire Agreement. This Agreement sets forth the entire agreement between the parties with regard to the subject matter hereof. No other agreements, representations, or warranties have been made by either party to the other with respect to the subject matter of this Agreement.

21. Severability. If any of the provisions of this Agreement are found or deemed by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid or unenforceable, they shall be severable from the remainder of this Agreement and shall not cause the invalidity or unenforceability of the remainder of this Agreement.

22. Amendment.

This Agreement may be amended only by a written agreement signed by both parties.

§ 57.223 Source Code Access Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in conjunction with a software license agreement, such as the form in § 57.220[2], to give the licensee the right to obtain a copy of the source code version of a computer program. Such a form is typically used if the licensee requests to make modifications or alterations to the computer program, and requires source code in order to do such modifications or alterations. Alternatively, this form may also be used with a software license agreement to give the licensee the right to obtain a copy of the source code should the licensor go out of business or declare bankruptcy. This form is designed for use with agreements that otherwise grant the licensee right only to the object code version of the software.

[b] Definition of Source Code

Computer programs are written in different levels of "language." High-level language, such as BASIC, C, C++, COBAL, FORTRAN, Ada, and Pascal, are usually referred to as programming language. A somewhat lower level is "assembly" language; it consists of alphanumeric labels. Both of these are referred to as having been written in "source code" [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1243] . The source code is the version produced initially by a programmer and contains commentary by the programmer indicating how it works and how it may be revised or updated. Moreover, it is the version that is used to "maintain" (revise, update, or correct) the program.

[c] Limitations on Use of Source Code

It is common for a licensor to limit the use of the source code by specifying what the licensee is going to do with the source code [see § 57.223[2], Exhibit A]. Furthermore, a licensor typically will provide that a licensee may not engage in activities that would compete with licensor [see § 57.223 [2], P 7], and that the licensee must use best efforts to protect and safeguard the source code [see § 57.223 [2], P 4].

[2] FORM

Source Code Access Agreement

SOURCE CODE ACCESS AGREEMENT

This Agreement is entered into as of _____ [date] (the "Effective Date") between _____ [name of company], a _____ [state of incorporation] corporation with its principal place of business at _____ [address of company] ("Company"), and _____ [name of customer], a _____ [state of incorporation] corporation with its principal place of business at _____ [address of customer] ("Customer"). The parties agree as follows:

1. Source Code Access. Company wishes to provide Customer with access to certain documentation and source code as set forth in Exhibit A attached to this Agreement (the "Company Information"), and Customer wishes to access the Company Information on a temporary basis in order to undertake the development activities described in Exhibit A (the "Services"). Company and Customer have also entered into a _____ [specify agreement, usually a mutual nondisclosure agreement or a master software license agreement], dated _____ [date of prior agreement] (the "Prior Agreement").

Customer also warrants and represents to Company that its procedures for safeguarding and protecting the Company Information shall meet or exceed industry standards regarding source code access.

5. Compliance with Governmental Restrictions. Customer will comply with all applicable export control laws or regulations administered by the U.S. Commerce Department, or any other government agency in performing the Services hereunder.

6. Additional Confidentiality Provisions. The confidentiality provisions set forth within the Prior Agreement shall apply to the Customer Personnel and the Services to be performed, except that the following additional provisions shall also apply:

(a) Confidential Information shall be deemed to include Company Information and any source code written by Customer resulting from the Services ("Work Product") without the need for any confidential or proprietary markings.

8. Insurance. Customer agrees to obtain and maintain general commercial liability insurance in an amount of not less than $_____. Upon written request, Customer shall furnish Company with certificates of insurance, within 30 days of request, to evidence its compliance with this provisions.

9. Ownership of Company Information. Customer recognizes and acknowledges that ownership of all rights to the Company Information shall remain with Company at all times. The right of Customer to access and use the Company Information to perform the Services will not include, implicitly or otherwise, either ownership or the right to incorporate, distribute or sublicense the Company Information. As between the parties, Company's products, implementation methodology, related Company products, and any changes or modifications thereto as a result of this Agreement, and all related intellectual and proprietary rights are exclusively owned by Company, and Customer shall (and hereby does) make assignments as necessary to effect such ownership. Customer agrees not to change or delete any proprietary notices from any of Company's products. Customer will not take any action to jeopardize, limit or interfere in any manner with Company's ownership of or rights with respect to Company's products. Nothing in this Agreement shall preclude or restrict Company from developing, acquiring, using, marketing or distributing any software, documentation, or other products performing the same or similar functions as any extensions created by Customer under this Agreement.

10. Extensions of Modifications to Information. Customer acknowledges and agrees that Customer shall be solely responsible for supporting any extensions to Company's unmodified products or modifications to the Company Information made hereunder, and that (1) Company shall have no responsibility for providing support for any such extensions or modifications, and (2) if such extensions or modifications affect Company's ability to support Customer's use of Company's unmodified products, and if Customer has a license to use Company products under a separate agreement, then Company shall not be obligated to provide support to Customer under any such separate agreement.

11. No Fees or Royalties. Except as the parties may otherwise expressly agree in writing, neither party shall owe the other party any fees, royalties, or other payments of any kind for any of the Services performed or rights granted under this Agreement.

12. Termination. (a) Either party may terminate this Agreement at any time upon written notice.

(b) Paragraphs 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15 of this Agreement shall survive any termination of this Agreement.

(c) Upon the expiration or termination of this Agreement, or upon any breach of the terms and conditions of this Agreement or the termination or breach of the separate agreement under which Customer has a license to use Company products, Customer shall immediately return and deliver to Company or destroy all Company Information and all other proprietary or confidential materials belonging to Company, in its possession and Customer shall warrant in writing that it has not retained any copies of (1) the Company Information, (2) the documentation, if any, related to the Company Information, (3) any licensing, delivery or technical information regarding the Company Information, or (4) any other proprietary or confidential information of Company relating to the Company Information.

13. Disclaimer of Warranty.

THE COMPANY INFORMATION IS PROVIDED TO CUSTOMER AS IS WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND. COMPANY DISCLAIMS ALL WARRANTIES, EITHER EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY, FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE, TITLE AND NONINFRINGEMENT, WITH RESPECT TO THE COMPANY INFORMATION.

14. No Liability for Damages.

EXCEPT FOR CUSTOMER'S (1) MISUSE OR DISCLOSURE OF COMPANY INFORMATION OR THE WORK PRODUCT; (2) CLAIM OF OWNERSHIP OF COMPANY INFORMATION; OR (3) CLAIM OF OWNERSHIP OF ANY WORK PRODUCT, IN NO EVENT SHALL EITHER PARTY BE LIABLE FOR ANY CONSEQUENTIAL, INDIRECT, INCIDENTAL, PUNITIVE, SPECIAL OR OTHER DAMAGES WHATSOEVER, INCLUDING WITHOUT LIMITATION, DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF BUSINESS PROFITS, BUSINESS INTERRUPTION, LOSS OF BUSINESS INFORMATION, AND THE LIKE, ARISING OUT OF THIS AGREEMENT OR THE USE OF OR INABILITY TO USE THE COMPANY INFORMATION EVEN IF COMPANY HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

15. Miscellaneous Provisions. (a) In the event any court or tribunal of competent jurisdiction determines that any term or provision of this Agreement is unenforceable, that provision shall be enforced to the maximum extent permitted by law and all other terms and provisions shall remain in full force and effect.

(b) Customer shall not assign or otherwise transfer, whether by merger, operation of law, or otherwise, any rights or responsibilities set forth in this Agreement. Any attempted assignment in violation of this provision shall be null and void.

(c) Neither party's failure to exercise any right under this Agreement shall be deemed a waiver of that right.

(d) This Agreement represents the entire understanding and agreement between the parties as to the matters set forth herein, and supersedes all prior communications, written and oral, relating to the subject matter of this Agreement.

(e) This Agreement may only be modified by a writing signed by an authorized representative of each party.

(f) This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of California without regard to conflicts of laws provisions thereof.

§ 57.224 Software Maintenance Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a software maintenance agreement for use between a computer software supplier and a software licensee or buyer. It provides for the maintenance of the software after expiration of the warranty period specified in the software license or sale agreement. "Maintenance of software" may include updates containing changes, additions, and enhancements, correction of defects or "bugs," and physical replacement of lost or damaged computer programs or written documentation materials.

Generally, software maintenance agreements are used only in connection with software intended for commercial use. The service is usually performed by the party from whom the software was acquired, either under the terms of the software license agreement or under a separate maintenance agreement entered into by the purchaser or licensee pursuant to a requirement in the sale or license agreement [see § 57.221].

A packaged or "consumer" software license agreement may include maintenance provisions, but these are generally limited to "update service."

This agreement is essentially a service contract. For discussion of possessory liens for services and repairs, the preliminary determinations prior to drafting a service contract, and a guide to specific service contract provisions, see Ch. 92, Service Contracts.

§ 57.225 Software Design Consultant Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement by an individual software consultant acting as an independent contractor to perform a software design study as the first stage in the design and development of a computer program.

This form may be used when an individual or a company has a basic idea or goal for a software program, or when there is a relatively highly developed idea (whether derived from its own personnel or outside programmers) of what the program should do to accomplish its goals. In either case, the agreement contemplates that the consultant will refine the existing idea or goal. To that end, it describes in general terms the function the prospective program is expected to perform and specifies the types of materials to be delivered to the consultant to aid that person in designing or redesigning the software program. An agreement containing alternate language that is designed for use in contracting for the services of a software development firm to develop, prepare, and install a computer program is set forth in Form 57.222.

This form is not intended for use as an employment agreement between a computer software firm and a computer programmer hired as an employee. For employment agreements see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements. For a guide to the preparation of an agreement for consultation or advice, and methods for compensating a consultant, see Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services. For a complete employment contract for a professional person, specifically a research and development engineer, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.221. For a complete employment contract between a software publisher and a programmer, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.222. For a contract between a business consultant and a client for whom the consultant will perform specified services, such as computer consulting services, see Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, § 86.200. For a sample of a vendor to vendor consulting services agreement, see Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, § 86.203.

Nondisclosure agreements protect a client's confidential and proprietary information, and may be incorporated into an agreement for services. However, nondisclosure issues are frequently covered in separate agreements. For a sample separate nondisclosure contract, see § 57.228; see also Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, § 86.204. For a separate provision specific to maintaining the confidentiality of trade secrets, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.440.

[b] Independent Contractor Status

In determining whether a person performing work is an independent contractor or an employee, the courts will look beyond the language of the agreement to the substance of the relationship between the parties [Grant v. Woods (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 647, 653, 654, 139 Cal. Rptr. 533 ; Pacific Lumber Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 410, 422, 139 P.2d 892] . For discussion of the factors leading to a determination of this issue and other legal issues relating to independent contractors, as well as guides to the drafting of agreements with independent contractors, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors .

[c] Intellectual Property Protection of Software

The greatest problem in the computer software field is finding a way to protect the software from unauthorized disclosure to and use by third parties. The three generally acknowledged methods of protecting proprietary rights in software are trade secret, copyright, and patent protection.

Of the three methods mentioned above, patent protection is the least likely since, a determination must be made as to whether the computer system as a whole produces a useful, tangible, and concrete result [State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group (1998), 149 F.3d 1368, 1373-1375] . For further discussion, see § 57.22.

Copyright protection is available for computer programs, or software, as they are considered literary works [see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("computer program" and "literary works" defined)]. Such literary works are protected from unauthorized copying under the copyright law [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Franklin Computer Corp. (3d Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 1240, 1249 , cert. dismissed, 464 U.S. 1033 (1984) (computer program in object code embedded in ROM chip is appropriate subject for copyright); see also § 57.20]. However, even though it is clear that the right to copyright work created "for hire" belongs to the employer [see 17 U.S.C. § 201(b)], an action for copyright infringement, in most cases, cannot be instituted without first registering the program [see 17 U.S.C. § 411 (exceptions)] and depositing at least part of the documentation [17 U.S.C. § 408; see 37 C.F.R. § 202.20(c)(2)(vii), (d)]. Registration and deposit obviously can defeat the secrecy of a computer program, and for this reason copyrighting a program that is not intended for general distribution is generally viewed as inadequate protection.

The third method of software protection, the application of trade secret law, offers protection in the form of traditional contract actions and the right to injunctive and other relief [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17202-17209] without the public disclosure (and loss of secrecy) required under patent law or the registration and publication of a work under copyright law. Under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], an actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret may be enjoined or otherwise limited [see Civ. Code § 3426.2] and damages can be recovered for the misappropriation [see Civ. Code § 3426.3; see also § 57.21].

[d] Ownership and Works for Hire

In Paragraph 16 of this form, the consultant disclaims any rights that he or she might have in the product as the result of his or her work pursuant to the agreement. In copyright law, work done for hire is considered the work of the employer [17 U.S.C. § 201(b)]. However, since it is entirely possible that the party for whom the work is to be done may elect not to protect the work under copyright, it is necessary to include this type of disclaimer.

Lab. Code § 2870 makes unenforceable as against public policy any employment agreement provision assigning an employee's rights in any invention for which no equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information of the employer was used, which was developed entirely on the employee's own time, and which does not either relate, at the time of conception or reduction to practice of the invention, to the employer's business or research and development or result from any work performed by the employee for the employer [see Lab. Code § 2870]. This statutory provision should not apply to this form since the agreement contemplates an independent contractor relationship rather than that of employer and employee. It also contemplates the consultant's use of the other party's trade secret information and assumes that the work product will relate to the other party's work. Nevertheless, prudent practice dictates an assumption that Lab. Code § 2870 might be found applicable to this agreement under some circumstances (for example, if a court decided in a given case that notwithstanding the terms of the contract the relationship of the parties actually was that of employer and employee). Since the Labor Code also requires the employer to notify the employee that the agreement does not apply to an invention that would remain the employee's property under the law, and since that notice must be given at the time the agreement is made [Lab. Code § 2872], Paragraph 16(f) contains that notice.

(c) Consultant shall receive no royalty or other remuneration whatsoever on the production or sale of the Software.

(d) If Consultant so desires, Consultant shall receive credit by name for Consultant's contribution to the creation of the Software, displayed on Software's packaging in a form to be determined by Company.

9. Expenses. Expenses that are reasonably incurred by Consultant in the performance of this Agreement and approved in advance by Company shall be reimbursed to Consultant upon proper documentation.

10. Confidentiality of Data. (a) Consultant agrees that all information communicated to Consultant with respect to the Software, including any confidential information gained by Consultant or Consultant's representatives by reason of association or employment with Company or its associates, whether or not that confidential information was directly or intentionally communicated, is confidential. (d) Consultant acknowledges and agrees that all information concerning the Software and any future and proposed products of Company or any of its associates is and constitutes an exceptionally valuable trade secret of Company. That information includes, among other matters, the facts that the Software is planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions of the features of the Software.

11. Use and Disclosure of Confidential Data. Consultant shall not use any confidential information or circulate it to any other person or persons, except when specifically authorized in advance by Company and then only to the extent necessary for any of the following:

- (d) Accomplishing any purpose Company may later specify in writing.

12. Copies of Confidential Information. Consultant agrees that copies of confidential information may not be made without the express written permission of Company and that all such copies shall be returned to Company along with the originals. [Notwithstanding the foregoing, Company agrees that, subject to the other terms and conditions of this Agreement, Consultant may make one and only one copy of any materials supplied by or to Company and that Consultant may retain those copied materials solely for Consultant's use as historical and legal references.]

13. Return of Materials. Consultant shall return to Company, promptly at Company's request, all confidential materials [other than copies that Consultant may retain pursuant to Paragraph 12 of this Agreement]. Any materials the return of which is specifically requested shall be returned promptly at the conclusion of the work on, or consideration of work on, the project to which the materials relate.

14. Confidentiality of Relationship. Consultant acknowledges and agrees that the fact that Company is using Consultant's services is confidential. Company agrees that the fact that it is using the services of Consultant is confidential and that Company may disclose that fact to others only with Consultant's written permission.

15. Competitive Activities. (a) Consultant acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Company's trade secrets obtained by Consultant pursuant to this Agreement, including information concerning the Software and any future and proposed products of Company or any of its associates, the facts that those products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions of the features of those products, constitute unfair competition. Consultant promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Company [without Company's prior written consent].

(b) Consultant further promises and agrees that during the term of this Agreement, Consultant shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any competitive activity relating to the Software [without Company's written consent].

16. Ownership of Work Product. (a) Consultant agrees that any and all intellectual properties, including, but not limited to, all ideas, concepts, themes, computer programs or parts thereof, documentation or other literature, or

(d) This Paragraph shall exclude patent rights and copyrights that relate to Consultant's present employment, but shall include those patent rights and copyrights that relate to Consultant's present employment and that pertain and relate to the subject matter of Consultant's work for Company pursuant to this Agreement and Company's business.

[Continue with the following:]

(e) This Paragraph shall exclude rights in patents and copyrights obtained by Consultant that do not directly pertain to Consultant's work for Company and that are obtained 10 or more years after completion of Consultant's last work for Company under this Agreement.

(f) The provisions of this Paragraph shall not apply to assign to Company any of Consultant's rights in any invention for which no equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information of Company was used, which was developed entirely on Consultant's own time, and which:

(1) Does not relate, at the time of conception or reduction to practice of the invention, to Company's business or to Company's actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development; or

(2) Does not result from any work performed by Consultant for Company.

17. Use of Copyrighted Materials. Consultant warrants that any materials provided by Consultant for use by Company pursuant to this Agreement shall not contain any material that is protected under the Copyright Act or any other similar law, except to the extent of "fair use," as that concept is defined in the Copyright Act. Consultant shall be solely responsible for ensuring that any materials provided by Consultant for use by Company pursuant to this Agreement satisfy this requirement, and Consultant agrees to hold Company harmless from all liability or loss, including debt or expense for attorneys' fees to which Company is exposed on account of Consultant's failure to perform this duty.

18. Termination of Contract. (a) Unless otherwise terminated as provided herein, this Agreement shall continue in force until the services provided for have been fully and completely performed, and shall thereupon terminate unless renewed in writing by both parties.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Agreement, either party hereto may terminate this Agreement at any time by giving written notice thereof to the other.

(c) In the event that either party, in that party's sole judgment, determines that a conflict of interest exists between them, that party may terminate this Agreement by giving written notice to the other party. With respect to "conflict of interest," Consultant warrants that Consultant is not now under any obligation to any company or other person to perform services of the kind to be performed under this Agreement or that constitutes rival work. "Rival work" means any electronic or software work that is, or is in substantial part [designed to _____] (describe projected features and function, e.g., function as a medical services system) or designated as _____ (name or title of program or programs).

(d) Notice of termination shall be mailed by _____ [specify type of mail] to Consultant at _____ [address] and to Company at _____ [address].

(e) Notice of termination shall be deemed effective on its receipt by the other party.

(f) On termination of this Agreement, Consultant shall have no further obligation to provide services for Company and Company shall have no further obligation to pay compensation beyond that for services rendered before the notice of termination is received.

19. Indemnification. Consultant shall indemnify Company against all losses and expenses incurred by Company, including but not limited to reasonable attorneys' fees, resulting from any breach of this Agreement by Consultant. Consultant agrees to indemnify and hold Company harmless from all claims for bodily injury or property damage that may arise from Consultant's performance of services for Company. Consultant waives all rights against Company for damages covered by other insurance.

20. Liability Limitation.

NOTWITHSTANDING ANYTHING TO THE CONTRARY WITHIN THIS AGREEMENT, ALL LIABILITY OF COMPANY UNDER THIS AGREEMENT SHALL BE LIMITED TO THE AMOUNTS OWED TO CONSULTANT BY COMPANY FOR WORK ACTUALLY PERFORMED BY CONSULTANT.

21. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be construed according to, and the rights of the parties shall be governed by, the law of the State of California.

22. Attorneys' Fees. If any legal action is necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire Agreement.

23. Entire Agreement. This Agreement sets forth the entire agreement between the parties with regard to the subject matter hereof. No other agreements, representations, or warranties have been made by either party to the other with respect to the subject matter of this Agreement.

24. Severability. If any provision of this Agreement is found or deemed by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid or unenforceable, they shall be considered severable from the remainder of this Agreement and shall not cause the remainder to be invalid or unenforceable.

25. Amendment. This Agreement may be amended only by a written agreement signed by both parties.

§ 57.226 License for Distribution of Computer Software Between Program Owner and Licensee

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an agreement between a computer program author and a computer software publisher under which the author grants the publisher a license to reproduce and sublicense the program. Such agreements typically are drafted as licenses because they do not transfer title to the software and thus permit the author to protect his or her trade secret interests. In contrast, sales agreements do transfer title and therefore do not protect the owner from disclosure of the secrets inherent in the software [see § 57.220[1]].

With respect to remedies specified in a license agreement generally, see Sun Microsystems Inc. v. Microsoft [Sun Microsystems Inc. v. Microsoft (N.D. Cal. 1998) 999 F. Supp. 1301] , which involved a technology license and distribution agreement between a creator of a computer language and a developer of software products. In that case, the court held that the agreement did not preclude injunctive relief for the developer's allegedly intentional breaches of the agreement's compatibility provisions. The agreement placed no limitations on the creator's remedies for the developer's intentional breaches of the compatibility provisions, and no language in the agreement precluded the creator from injunctive relief to redress infringement of its trademark [Sun Microsystems Inc. v. Microsoft (N.D. Cal. 1998) 999 F. Supp. 1301, 1306-1307] .

For discussion of trade secret protection of software and the other methods available for the protection of proprietary rights in computer software see §§ 57.20-57.23; see also § 57.225[1]. For discussion of the legitimacy of exclusive territory distributorships, see § 57.204[1].

§ 57.227 Software Evaluation License

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an agreement by a software company to license its software to a customer for evaluation or beta testing purposes. It is different from a software license in that it limits the term of the license, usually to a time period or until the completion of the evaluation or "beta test," [see P 9] and it is specific to a specified use [see P 3]. Additionally, an evaluation agreement is also limited to the number of copies of the software the customer will be receiving to evaluate [see P 3]. As with standard software licenses, this form confirms that all intellectual property rights are retained by the software owner [see P 6], and that no interest in any form is transferred to the customer [see P 12].

Accordingly, Customer shall use the Products furnished under this Agreement only for purposes of evaluation testing and not for any business use.

12. No License. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed as granting a license or conferring any right, expressly, implicitly or otherwise, in any of the Products, Product Information, or intellectual property rights related thereto, other than as expressly provided in this Agreement.

13. No Export. The Products and certain Product Information may be subject to export restrictions under United States export laws and regulations. § 57.228 Mutual Non-Disclosure Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a separate mutual agreement for nondisclosure of proprietary and confidential information. Nondisclosure issues may be covered in the contract for services, or in a separate agreement. It is common for nondisclosure and confidentiality to be covered in hardware procurement, software license or other service contract. Many companies routinely require a stand-alone nondisclosure agreement from potential customers at the beginning of a business relationship. The main reasons to have a stand alone agreement in the early stages of a business arrangement are to protect each party and allow for the disclosure of proprietary and confidential information so that both parties can adequately make informed business decisions. The form describes the confidential information to be disclosed and a promise on the part of the receiving party not to disclose the information. The form also specifies the party's obligations in regard to the protection of proprietary and confidential information, the allowable uses of such information, and the conditions of disclosure.

The use of an agreement against disclosure, misappropriation, or misuse is recommended because, even though injunctive and other relief may be available against a person who uses confidential and proprietary information to the owner's prejudice, an agreement such as this one provides a firm written basis for traditional contract remedies and clearly informs the receiving party of his or her obligation not to divulge the confidential information.

For a separate nondisclosure agreement for general consultant services, see Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services, § 86.204.

[2] FORM

Mutual Non-Disclosure Agreement

MUTUAL NONDISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

The undersigned Customer and Company, on behalf of themselves and their subsidiaries and affiliates, acknowledge that, by reason of their business relationship, they may have access to information and materials concerning the other's business, plans, products and technical data concerning the purpose of this Agreement which is confidential and of substantial value that would be impaired if the information were disclosed to third parties. Accordingly, for the protection of such confidential information, the parties agree as follows:

1. Confidential Information. For the purposes of this Agreement, "Confidential Information" means any technical, business, financial, contractual terms and conditions or other information or data furnished by one party to the other relating to the Purpose: (a) in written or other tangible form marked with a proprietary legend, or (b) in oral or visual form, identified as being confidential at the time of disclosure and thereafter summarized in a writing which identifies the confidential information and is transmitted to the recipient party within 30 days after such oral or visual disclosure. The disclosing party hereby warrants that it has the right to disclose such information to the receiving party.

2. Purpose of Agreement. The purpose of this Agreement is the mutual analysis and evaluation of a prospective business relationship between the parties.

3. Period of Protection. The period of protection during which Confidential Information received pursuant to this Agreement shall be subject to an obligation of confidentiality and protection is _____[number] years from the date of first receipt of the information.

4. Standard of Care. The standard of care which each party shall be required to employ in protecting and handling Confidential Information received pursuant to this Agreement is the same degree of care which the recipient party employs to protect and safeguard its own Confidential Information of the kind, but not less than a reasonable degree of care.

5. Restrictions on Use. Confidential Information shall be used solely for internal evaluation and use pertaining to the Purpose of this Agreement and shall not otherwise be used for the benefit of the recipient or others. Confidential Information shall be disclosed only to the employees of the recipient who have a "need to know" and who have executed an internal non-disclosure agreement.

6. Information Not Subject to Confidentiality. The Confidential Information of a party shall not include and the foregoing obligations shall not apply to information or data which:

- (a) Was generally available to the public at the time of receipt from the disclosing party, or thereafter to have become generally available to the public; or
- (b) Is known to the recipient party on a non confidential basis prior to its receipt from the disclosing party; or
- (c) Was disclosed with the prior written consent of the disclosing party; or
- (d) Becomes known to the recipient party from a source other than the disclosing party without breach of this Agreement by the recipient party; or
- (e) Was required to be disclosed pursuant to law; or
- (f) Was developed independently by personnel of the recipient party who had no substantive knowledge of the disclosing party's Confidential Information at the time of its independent development.

7. No License. The disclosure of Confidential Information shall not be construed as granting either a license under any patent, patent application or any right of ownership in said Confidential Information.

8. Equitable Relief. The receiving party acknowledges and agrees that in the event of a breach or threatened breach of any provision of this Agreement, the disclosing party shall have no adequate remedy at law and shall therefore be entitled to enforce any such provision by temporary or permanent injunctive or mandatory relief obtained in any court without the necessity of proving damages, posting any bond or other security, and without prejudice or diminution of any other rights or remedies which may be available at law or in equity. This Agreement shall be construed in accordance with the laws of the state of California excluding its conflict of law provisions.

9. Export Regulations. The receiving party will not transfer any confidential information received hereunder or any product made using such confidential information to any country prohibited from obtaining such data or product by the United States Department of Commerce Export Administration Regulations without first obtaining a validated export license.

10. Termination. This Agreement may be terminated by either party upon a 30-day written termination notice to the other party. Upon expiration or termination of this Agreement, each party shall cease all use of the other party's Confidential Information and return to the other party all tangible copies of the other party's Confidential Information.

§ 57.240 Website Development Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a website development agreement between a website development company and a customer for the development of a website. It is designed for either a new website or enhancement of an existing website. This form can be adapted to provide for the performance of differing website services by use of an Exhibit A, which should describe the specifications, milestones, and timelines for the website development.

This form provides for a flat rate fee for basic website development services, with additional charges for extra services and changes or modifications to the basic specifications. Paragraph 2 of the form can be modified to provide for a flat hourly rate or other method of compensation, if desired.

This form does not include provisions for website hosting or computer server services. A website hosting agreement is set forth in § 57.244.

For a co-marketing agreement to be used by an operator of a retail website to buy promotional links and advertising on another party's portal website, see Ch. 50, Advertising and Promotion, § 50.280[2].

[b] Ownership Rights

In drafting a website development agreement it is important to clarify who will own the work being performed. This agreement provides that the work and services to be performed are to be "works for hire" and all rights, title and interest will be vested in the Customer. For a further discussion of ownership and works for hire, see § 57.225[1][d].

For an authorization (license) to use a copyrighted work to be used in gaining permission to use a copyrighted work, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, § 103A.223[2]. For an agreement assigning all of a copyright owner's rights under a copyright, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights, § 103A.224[2].

WEBSITE DEVELOPMENT AGREEMENT

This agreement ("Agreement") is made as of _____[date] ("Effective Date"), by and between _____[name of customer] ("Customer") and _____[name of website developer] ("Website Developer"). The parties agree as follows:

(f) All dates specified above [and on Exhibit A] are dependent on the timeliness of delivery of materials and information by the Customer. In the event materials are not timely delivered, the specified delivery dates are automatically extended by the number of dates in which the Customer's materials are late. In the event that Website Developer becomes unable to deliver the website on the completion date because of events outside of Website Developer's control, or if the Customer, after execution of this Agreement, orders options or creates the necessity for overages, then Website Developer shall give reasonable assurance of the new completion date. All payments are non-refundable except in the case of a breach of this Agreement by Website Developer.

(b) Nothing in this section shall expand the limitations of Website Developer's warranties as provided in this agreement.

(c) Subject to this section, to the extent Website Developer incorporates any of its intellectual property owned by it prior to the development of the website, it hereby grants Customer a perpetual, irrevocable, fully paid-up and royalty free, worldwide, sub-licensable, non-exclusive and unrestricted license and right to use, reproduce, modify, transfer, and maintain such intellectual property and all of its derivatives on the website, except for any licensed software.

4. Website Developer's Warranties. (a) Website Developer warrants that the website as installed pursuant to the specifications shall be free from defects in workmanship for a period of _____ [insert warranty period, e.g., six months from the date of final invoice] ("Warranty Period"). If any failure to conform becomes apparent during the Warranty Period, Website Developer shall, upon notice from Customer, repair the website to make it conform to the terms of this Agreement. THIS WARRANTY IS EXCLUSIVE AND IN LIEU OF ALL OTHER WARRANTIES, WHETHER EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY, FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE AND NONINFRINGEMENT.

(b) If content developed or used in connection with the development of this the website by Website Developer because the subject of a claim of infringement or misappropriation of a patent, copyright, trademark, or proprietary right of a third party, Website Developer, in addition to its obligations set forth in (a), above, shall use its best efforts to:

- (1) Promptly replace such content with compatible non-infringing content; or
- (2) Promptly modify the content to make it non-infringing without materially impairing the ability to use the content as intended; or
- (3) Promptly protect Customer's right to continue using the content; or
- (4) If none of the above alternatives is reasonably available to Website Developer, promptly pay to Customer all of the monies paid and costs incurred by Customer to Website Developer.

This section (b) shall only apply to materials provided by Website Developer and not to materials provided by Customer.

The Customer shall be entitled to reasonable legal fees in the event the services of an attorney are necessary for collection.

§ 57.242 Privacy Policy

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a sample privacy policy to be used by operators of websites or on-line services. It is designed to comply with the privacy policies of California's Online Privacy Protection Policy Act (OPPA) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575 et seq.]. This policy is designed for a simple website that does not market to children [see [d], below] and does not engage in activities (such as issuing credit cards in its own name to consumers [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.3(k)(2)]) that would classify it as a "financial institution" for federal privacy notice purposes [see [e], below].

To be compliant with California's Online Privacy Protection Policy Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575 et seq.], the privacy policy must do all of the following:

- Be conspicuously posted on the website [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(a), 22577(b); see [b], below].
- Identify the categories of personally identifiable information collected [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(b)(1), 22577(a); see P 2 of form].
- Identify categories of third-party persons or entities with whom the operator may share personally identifiable information collected from the user [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(1); see P 4 of form].
- If the operator maintains a process for users to review and request changes to their personally identifiable information that is collected through the website, describe that process [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(2); see P 8 of form].
- Describe the process by which the operator notifies users of material changes to the operator's privacy policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(3); see P 9 of the form].

- State the effective date of the policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22575(b)(4); see § 57.242[2], P 10].

Various other provisions not expressly required by OPPA typically are included by website operators. One particularly important provision is a consent statement in which the user agrees that use of the website constitutes the user's consent to the collection and use of information in accordance with the privacy policy [see P 9 of Form]. For a detailed guide to drafting OPPA privacy policies, see § 57.142[5]. For a discussion of OPPA and its requirements, see § 57.35[1].

[b] Posting Privacy Notice on Website

The privacy policy must be "conspicuously posted" on the website by one of following methods [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22575(a), 22577(b)]:

- Posting the actual privacy policy on the homepage or first significant page after entering the website.
- Using an icon that hyperlinks to a web page on which the actual privacy policy is posted, if the icon (1) is located on the homepage or first significant page after entering the website; (2) contains the word "privacy"; and (3) uses color that contrasts with the background color of the web page or is otherwise distinguishable.
- A text link that hyperlinks to a web page on which the actual privacy policy is posted, if the text link is located on the homepage or first significant page after entering website, and either (1) includes the word "privacy"; (2) is written in capital letters equal to or greater in size than surrounding text; or (3) is written in larger type than surrounding text, or in contrasting type, font, or color to the surrounding text of the same size, or set off from the surrounding text of the same size by symbols or other marks that call attention to the language.
- Any other functional hyperlink that is so displayed that a reasonable person would notice it.

Although OPPA does not specify exact color, size, and font requirements for the privacy policy itself (as opposed to text links and hyperlinks, as noted above), in order to assure that the policy meets the requirement that it be "conspicuously posted," it is advisable to post the policy so that it stands out, clearly labeled, and is in a different color, different font, or larger type size than the surrounding text [compare 16 C.F.R. § 313.3(b)(2)(ii), (iii) (federal privacy notice requirements applicable to financial institutions)].

[c] Collection of Customer Personal Information

Effective January 1, 2005, businesses that collect customer personal information may also be subject to statutory requirements covering disclosure of customers' personal information [see Civ. Code § 1798.83]. For additional discussion of this legislation, see § 57.38; see also Ch. 46, Credit Cards and Other Open-End Credit Transactions, § 46.96. This form is not specifically designed to comply with statutory requirements governing disclosure of personal information.

[d] Children

In drafting a privacy policy for an operator of a website that is directed to children under the age of 13, or of a general audience website that has a children's area and collects personal information from children, the privacy policy must also comply with the federal Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA) [15 U.S.C. § 6501 et seq.] and its implementing FTC regulations [16 C.F.R. § 312 et seq.]. For a discussion of COPPA and its requirements, see § 57.35[2].

The privacy policy in this form is directed to websites operated primarily or exclusively for adults, and therefore does not include the additional information necessary for COPPA compliance [see P 7 of form]. For a guide to drafting COPPA-compliant privacy policies, see § 57.142[6].

[e] Federal Requirements for Financial Institutions

In addition to the California privacy policy requirements, website operators that fall within the federal definition of "financial institutions" [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1(b); see also § 57.35[3]] are subject to detailed federal privacy policy requirements governing the dissemination of consumers' nonpublic personal information [see 16 C.F.R. § 313.1 et seq.; see also 15 U.S.C. § 6801 et seq. (Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act)]. This form is not specifically designed to comply with these federal requirements. For more detailed discussion of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act and a federal privacy notice, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting A New Business, § 1A.206[1].

§ 57.243 Domain Name Purchase Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the purchase and sale of a domain name; that is, the transfer of the name from the current a domain name registrant to a buyer. This form assumes that the domain name has already been registered in the name of the seller, as opposed to the first instance of registering a domain name that did not previously exist. Registration of a new domain name with one of the many domain name registries may be a less expensive alternative if a suitable unregistered name can be found.

When transferring or purchasing a domain name it is important to consider the rules of the relevant domain name registry and to ensure that the purchaser is eligible to be the registrant of the domain name.

§ 57.244 Website Hosting Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a website hosting agreement for use by website hosting providers to individual or company users. Providers of website hosting services may use this type of agreement to define the specific services they are providing, define the usage that a user may engage in, restrict the usage that a user may engage in, and limit liability.

Most website hosting services have a variety of standard plans geared to the particular user, ranging from low-end plans for individuals with limited internet and e-mail needs to high-end plans designed for use by businesses. The services included in these plans vary as to the amount of storage space, number of dial up and e-mail accounts, amount of file transfers during a given period, and so on. This form is designed for web service providers who may offer a variety of accounts, by incorporating appendices containing the terms and conditions of the user's particular plan, as well as the general policies and terms of the web service provider.

[2] FORM

Website Hosting Agreement

WEBSITE HOSTING AGREEMENT

This Website Hosting Agreement ("Agreement") is entered into between _____ [name of service provider] ("Company") and _____ [name of user] ("User"). The parties agree as follows:

1. Acceptance. By accepting this Agreement and using Company's Website Hosting Services ("Services"), User agrees to be bound by all the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

2. Provision of Services. Company agrees to provide User with website hosting services consisting of website server space, e-mail capability, internet access, [domain name registration,] and such additional services as may be provided by Company from time to time. A more detailed description of the services included in User's service plan is attached to this agreement as Appendix A. Company reserves the right to change or modify the features of User's service plan from time to time on _____ [e.g., 30 days] written or e-mailed notice to User. User's continued use of Company's services after receipt of such a notice of modification shall constitute User's acceptance of and agreement to be bound by the Company's modification of the terms and conditions of this agreement and Appendix A.

3. Agreement Term. The initial term of this agreement shall commence on the date of execution of this agreement and shall continue through the remainder of the calendar month in which this agreement was executed (the "Initial Term"). After the initial term, this agreement shall be automatically renewed for successive monthly periods until terminated by one of the parties as provided in this agreement. [Optional: If User chooses to pay Company quarterly, the renewal term shall continue for each quarter (three months) that he or she pays for Company's services.]

4. Termination Without Cause. (a) User may terminate this agreement at any time, for any reason, by contacting Company, either by phone or e-mail, and requesting that User's account be canceled. In the event of a cancellation, Company will not refund amounts already billed for the current monthly [or other term] service period in which User terminates the agreement. [Any amounts paid in advance by User for future service terms following the current monthly (or other term) service term will be promptly refunded by Company.]

(b) Company may terminate this agreement at any time, for any reason, by providing written or e-mail notice of termination to User's primary website e-mail contact address no less than 30 days prior to the service termination.

(c) If either Party terminates this Agreement under this Paragraph, Company will back up all user's current Website content, databases, and e-mail messages as an archive file, and send them to User either as an attachment to an e-mail or via other file transfer process, or mail them to User in the form of a CD-ROM.

5. Termination for Cause. User agrees to abide by the terms of this Agreement and by Company's general use policies as set forth in this agreement and on Appendix B attached, as those policies may exist from time to time. Company may change its use policies on 30-day written notice to Customer by e-mail message, mail, or facsimile transmission. Any violation by User of the terms of this Agreement or of Company's general use policies shall be grounds for immediate termination of User's account for cause. If Company terminates User's account for a violation of this Agreement under this Paragraph, Company shall not be required to refund any amounts billed for the billing period in which Company terminates User's services.

6. Payment Terms. (a) User agrees to pay Company the amount specified on Appendix A for the Company's services. Company reserves the right to change or modify its charges for User's plan from time to time on _____ [e.g., 30 days] notice written or e-mailed to User. User's continued use of Company's services after receipt of such a notice shall constitute User's acceptance of and agreement to be bound by the Company's modified charges for its services. Additional charges for add-on services not included in User's plan will be made as specified on Appendix A.

(b) Service charges are payable in advance _____ [on a _____ (monthly or quarterly) basis or in one, 3, 6 or 12 month installments, at User's option]. Company will invoice User at the beginning of each payment period. Company will submit all invoices to User by e-mail. Payment is due immediately upon receipt of invoice. Payments can be made online or by check. Interest in the amount of _____ [amount of interest] per month will be added to any outstanding invoices remaining unpaid for more than 30 days. [User may elect to have payments charged to a credit or debit card or other account automatically on the first day of any payment period.]

(c) User agrees to be billed for all recurring and one-time charges, including late charges, for any Services ordered by User and any fees owed to Company.

(d) Any charges for upgrading User's current hosting package, or performing add-on requests, will not be billed until the next invoice.

7. Taxes. Company shall not be liable for any taxes and other governmental fees related to purchases made by User or from Company's server. User agrees that he or she will be fully responsible for all taxes and fees of any nature associated with products or services sold through the use of or with the aid of services provided to User by Company.

8. Materials and Products. Any material and data User provides to company in connection with Services shall be in a form requiring no additional manipulation on the part of Company. Company shall make no effort to validate this material or data for content, correctness, or usability. Material or data that is not in this condition shall be a breach of this Agreement. Company, in its sole discretion, may reject material or data that User has placed on Company's servers or that User has requested that Company put on Company's servers. Company agrees to notify User immediately of its refusal of any material or data and provide User with an opportunity to amend or modify the material or data to meet the Company's requirements. User's failure to amend or modify the data or material as directed by Company within a reasonable time shall be a breach of this Agreement.

9. Electronic Mail Abuse. Harassment by e-mail, whether through language, frequency, or size of messages, is prohibited. User may not send e-mail to any person who does not wish to receive it. If a recipient asks to stop receiving e-mail, User must not send that person any further e-mail. Users are explicitly prohibited from sending unsolicited bulk e-mail messages ("junk mail" or "spam"). This includes, but is not limited to, bulk mailing of commercial advertising, informational announcements, and political tracts. Such material may only be sent to those who have explicitly requested it. Users may not forward or otherwise propagate chain letters, whether or not the recipient wishes to receive such mailings. Malicious e-mail, including but not limited to "mail bombing" (flooding a user or site with very large or numerous pieces of e-mail) and "trolling" (posting outrageous messages to generate numerous responses) is prohibited. Forging of header or any other information is not permitted. Subscribing someone else to an e-mail list or removing someone else from a mail list without that person's permission is prohibited. Company's accounts or services may not be used to collect replies to messages sent from another Internet Service Provider if those messages violate this Agreement or any usage policy of that other provider. Violations of this Agreement will result in immediate account termination and provider reserves the right to charge an administrative clean-up fee of up to $_____ and a deactivation fee of $_____.

10. Violations of Network Security. User is prohibited from violating or attempting to violate the security of the network. Violations of system or network security may result in civil or criminal liability in addition to immediate termination of User's agreement. Company will investigate occurrences, which may involve such violations and may involve, and cooperate with, law enforcement authorities in prosecuting Users who are involved in such violations. These violations include, without limitation:

- (a) Accessing data not intended for the User or logging into a server or account that the User is not authorized to access.
- (b) Attempting to probe, scan, or test the vulnerability of a system or network, or to breach security or authentication measures without proper authorization.
- (c) Attempting to interfere with service to any user, host or network, including, without limitation, via means of overloading, "flooding," "mail bombing," or "crashing".
- (d) Forging any TCP/IP packet header or any part of the header information in any e-mail or news group posting.
- (e) Taking any action in order to obtain services to which the User is not entitled.

11. Warranty Against Unlawful Use. User warrants and represents that User shall use Services only for lawful purposes and in accordance with all valid federal, state, and local laws and regulations governing use of e-mail and the Internet, whether or not specifically prohibited elsewhere in this Agreement. Failure to abide by the terms of this paragraph shall be grounds for immediate termination of User's account for cause.

12. Liability; No Warranty; Limitation of Damages. (a) User expressly agrees that use of Services provided by Company is at User's sole risk.

(b) Company guarantees _____ percent uptime for its Web servers. If uptime for User's Web server falls below _____ percent during any given month [or specify other payment period], Company will credit User as follows: _____ [specify amount or formula for computation of credit]. Any such credit shall be applied to future invoices. (c) COMPANY, ITS AGENTS, AFFILIATES, LICENSORS OR THE LIKE, DO NOT REPRESENT OR WARRANT, EXPRESSLY OR IMPLIEDLY, THAT THEIR SERVICES WILL NOT BE INTERRUPTED OR ERROR FREE; NOR DO THEY MAKE ANY WARRANTY AS TO THE RESULTS THAT MAY BE OBTAINED FROM THE USE OF THEIR SERVICES OR AS TO THE ACCURACY, RELIABILITY, OR CONTENT OF ANY INFORMATION SERVICE OR MERCHANDISE CONTAINED IN OR PROVIDED THROUGH THEIR SERVICES, UNLESS OTHERWISE EXPRESSLY STATED IN THIS AGREEMENT.

(d) COMPANY, ITS OFFICERS, AGENTS, OR ANYONE ELSE INVOLVED IN PROVIDING SERVICES SHALL NOT BE LIABLE FOR ANY DIRECT, INDIRECT, INCIDENTAL, SPECIAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES THAT RESULT FROM THE USE OR INABILITY TO USE SERVICES; OR FOR ANY DAMAGES THAT RESULT FROM MISTAKES, OMISSIONS, INTERRUPTIONS, DELETION OF FILES, ERRORS, DEFECTS, DELAYS IN OPERATION, OR TRANSMISSION, OR ANY FAILURE OF PERFORMANCE, WHETHER OR NOT LIMITED TO ACTS OF GOD, COMMUNICATION FAILURE, THEFT, DESTRUCTION, OR UNAUTHORIZED ACCESS TO COMPANY'S RECORDS, PROGRAMS, OR SERVICES.

(e) Company will exercise no control over the content of the information passing through Company's network except those controls expressly provided herein.

(f) COMPANY MAKES NO WARRANTIES OR REPRESENTATIONS OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, FOR THE SERVICES IT IS PROVIDING. 13. Patents, Copyrights, Trademarks, and Other Intellectual and Proprietary Rights. [(a)] Except for rights expressly granted herein, this Agreement does not transfer any intellectual or other property or proprietary right to User. User agrees that all right, title, and interest in any product or service provided to User belongs to Company. These products and services are only for User's use in connection with Services provided to User as outlined in this Agreement.

Company makes no representations, warranties, or assurances that User's equipment will be compatible with Company Services.

15. Age. User expressly represents and warrants that User and any person to whom User grants access to User's Company account are at least 18 years of age.

16. Indemnification. User agrees to defend, indemnify, and hold Company harmless from any and all demands, liabilities, losses, costs, and claims, including reasonable attorneys' fees, asserted against Company, its agents, servants, officers, and employees, that may arise or result from any Service provided or performed or agreed to be performed or any product sold by User, User's agents, employees, or assigns. User further agrees to defend, indemnify, and hold harmless Company against liabilities arising out of:
