e. Contributions, other than long term capital gain property, to organizations qualifying for 30-percent deduction limitation, to the extent of the lesser of the following; any excess is carried over to subsequent taxable years [I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(B)]:

(1) Thirty percent of contribution base; or

(2) Excess of 50 percent of contribution base over all deductions made under Paragraphs 4(a)-(d), above.

f. Contributions of capital gain property to organizations qualifying for 30-percent deduction limitation, to the extent of the lesser of the following; any excess is carried over to subsequent taxable years [see I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(D)]:

(1) Twenty percent of contribution base; or

(2) Excess of 30 percent of contribution base over all deductions made under Paragraphs 4(a)-(e), above.

g. Contributions to organizations qualifying for 30-percent deduction limitation, other than contributions of long term capital gain property, that have been carried over from past five years (beginning with deductions made in tax years ending after July 18, 1984) to extent of any excess of 30 percent of contribution base over all deductions made under Paragraphs 4(a)-(f), above; any excess from past four years is carried over to subsequent taxable years [I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(B)]:

h. Contributions of capital gain property to organizations qualifying for 30-percent deduction limitation that have been carried over from past five years (beginning with deductions made in tax years ending after July 18, 1984), to the extent of the lesser of the following; any excess from past four years is carried over to subsequent taxable years [see I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(D)]:

(1) Twenty percent of contribution base; or

(2) Excess of 30 percent of contribution base over all deductions made under Paragraphs 4(a)-(g), above.

5. For corporate donor, compute total allowable deduction in tax year, in following order [see I.R.C. § 170(b)(2)]:

a. Contributions paid or treated as paid [see I.R.C. § 170(a)(2); see also NOTE in § 69.122, P 6] in current year, to extent of 10 percent of contribution base [see § 69.180, P 1(b) (computation of contribution base for corporations)]; any excess is carried over.

b. Amounts carried over from past five years, starting with oldest, to extent of any remaining portion of 10 percent of contribution base; any excess from past four years is carried over [see I.R.C. § 170(d)(2)].

NOTE:

If the donor corporation also has a net operating loss carryover, any charitable contribution must be reduced to the extent that the excess charitable contributions have the effect of increasing the amount of net operating loss carryover [see I.R.C. § 170(d)(2)(B)].

6. Assemble documentation in support of charitable deduction, as follows:

NOTE:

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 [Pub. L. No. 93-66] (OBRA) imposed a substantiation requirement for contributions of $250 or more, as enumerated in (a), below [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)]. The documentation requirements discussed in the remainder of this P6 predate OBRA and are set forth in the Treasury Regulations. The two sets of requirements are not fully coextensive, and are also duplicative to some extent. The requirements imposed by the regulations are generally more detailed than the OBRA requirements, but the $250 threshold value at which the OBRA requirements apply is lower than that for most of the requirements imposed by the regulations. Until such time as the regulations may be amended, compliance with both sets of requirements is the safest course.

a. If value of gift is $250 more, donee's contemporaneous written acknowledgment of gift is required [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)].

(1) Acknowledgment must meet requirements listed in § 69.160, P 6 [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)(B)].

(2) If donor did not obtain acknowledgment at time gift was made, obtain acknowledgment at any time up to earlier of [I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)(C)]:

NOTE:

Acknowledgments are regarded as "contemporaneous" if they are obtained by the earlier of the dates listed below [I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)(C)].

(a) Date on which donor files a return for taxable year in which contribution is made; or

(b) Due date (including any extensions) for filing such a return.

b. If taxpayer claims deduction for cash contribution, taxpayer must maintain cancelled check, receipt, or other reliable written record for each contribution, showing all of following [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(a)(1)]:

(1) Name of donee;

(2) Date of contribution; and

(3) Amount of contribution.

NOTE:

A letter or other communication from the charitable donee acknowledging receipt of the contribution and showing the date and amount of the contribution qualifies as a receipt [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(a)(1)(ii)].

c. If taxpayer claims deduction for noncash contribution of property valued at $500 or less, taxpayer must maintain reliable written records for each item of property donated, showing all of following [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(b)(1), (2)].

(1) Donee organization's name and address.

(2) Date and location of contribution.

(3) Description of property in detail reasonable under circumstances.

NOTE:

If the property consists of securities, the description must include the name of the issuer, the type of security, and whether or not the donated security is regularly traded on a stock exchange or in the over-the-counter market [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(b)(2)(ii)(C)].

(4) Fair market value of property at time of contribution, method used to determine value, and, if property was appraised, copy of signed report of appraiser.

(5) If property is subject to appreciated property reduction rules [see I.R.C. § 170(e); see also § 69.180, P 2(b), (c)], adjusted basis, amount of reduction, and how it was computed; and, if taxpayer elects application of appreciated property reduction rules [see § 69.180, P 2(c)(3)], years for which election was made and contributions to which it applies.

(6) If taxpayer contributed less than taxpayer's entire interest in property, all of following:

(a) Total amount claimed as deduction for current tax year and amount claimed as deduction in any prior year or years for contributions of other interests in same property;

(b) Each donee's name and address;

(c) Place where property is located or kept (if tangible); and

(d) Name of any person other than donee having actual possession.

(7) Terms of any agreement or understanding relating to use, sale, or other disposition of contributed property.

d. If taxpayer claims deduction for noncash contribution of property valued at more than $500, but not more than $5,000, taxpayer must maintain receipt from donee showing all of following [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(b)(1), (c)]:

(1) Name and address of donee;

(2) Date and location of contribution;

(3) Description of property.

NOTE:

The detail of the description must be reasonably sufficient under the circumstances. Although the fair market value of the property is one of the circumstances to be taken into account in determining the amount of detail to be included on the receipt, the value need not be stated on the receipt. A letter or other written communication from the donee acknowledging receipt of the contribution, showing the date of the contribution, and containing the required description of the property contributed constitutes a receipt for this purpose. A receipt is not required if the contribution is made in circumstances in which it is impractical to obtain a receipt (for example, by depositing property at a charity's unattended drop site). In such cases, however, the taxpayer must maintain reliable written records showing all of the information required by Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(b)(1), (2). A description of donated property for which a deduction of more than $500 is claimed must be included with the donor's return [I.R.C. § 170(f)(1)(B)].

e. If taxpayer claims deduction for noncash contribution of property valued at more than $5,000 taxpayer must do all of following:

NOTE:

An appraisal need not be provided for a donation of cash, property described in I.R.C. § 1221(a)(1), publicly traded securities, or any qualified vehicle for which an acknowledgment under I.R.C. § 170(f)(12)(B) is provided [I.R.C. § 170(f)(11)(A)(ii)]. For purposes of determining the $5,000 threshold amount, all similar items of property donated to one or more donees are treated as one property [I.R.C. § 170(f)(11)(F)].

(1) Obtain appraisal prepared, signed, and dated by qualified appraiser, showing all of following [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(c)(3)(i), (ii)]:

(a) Description of property containing enough detail so that person not generally familiar with the type of property can ascertain that appraised property is same as contributed property;

(b) For tangible property, its physical condition;

(c) Date (or expected date) of contribution;

(d) Terms of any agreement or understanding relating to use, sale, or other disposition of property, including any restrictions on donee's right to use or dispose of property;

(e) Name, address, and taxpayer identification number, if any, of qualified appraiser, or person or entity (other than donor) who engaged appraiser;

(f) Qualifications of qualified appraiser, including background, experience, education, and membership in any professional appraisal association;

(g) Statement that appraisal was prepared for income tax purposes;

(h) Date or dates on which property was valued; and

(i) Appraised fair market value of property on date or expected date of contribution, valuation method used, and specific basis for valuation, if any, such as any specific comparable sales transactions.

NOTE:

Only one qualified appraisal is required for a group of similar items contributed in the same year. However, the information listed above must be provided for each item of similar property, except the appraiser may select and use a group description for any items whose aggregate value is appraised at $100 or less. A separate qualified appraisal is required for each item of property that is not included in a group of similar items of property [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-13(c)(3)(iv)(A)].

(2) Attach copy of appraisal to donor's tax return [I.R.C. § 170(f)(11)(C), (D)].

§ 69.300 Letter Formalizing Charitable Gift

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter to a charity memorializing a charitable gift. It should be mailed or hand delivered to the recipient organization, accompanied in appropriate instances by any other gift documents such as a formal gift instrument, documents of title (deed to real property, vehicle registration, share certificates, and similar documents), and, in the case of cash, by a check or money order for the amount of the gift. For a discussion of delivery requirements generally, see Ch. 60A, Gifts .

[b] Need for More Formal Gift Instrument

In most cases this letter and an acknowledgement of receipt of the gift [see § 69.340] will sufficiently document the gift for tax purposes [see discussion in [c], below], and a more formal gift document will be unnecessary. However, if the donor wishes to state the purpose of the gift and/or enumerate the terms and conditions on which it is given, or if the gift is an item of substantial value, it may be desirable to utilize, in addition to this letter, a more formal gift instrument such as § 69.320.

[c] Importance of Written Record

Written records of charitable contributions must be maintained to support the donor's tax deductions. If an individual claims a charitable deduction of more than $200 for an item of property other than cash, additional information on the property must be attached to the donor's federal income tax return [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-1(a)(2)(ii); see § 69.180, P 6].

In addition, an appraisal by a qualified appraiser is mandatory if the claimed value of the property, plus the claimed value of all similar items of property donated to one or more donees, exceeds $5,000, or $10,000 if the property consists of nonpublicly traded stock [Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 155(a)(1), (2)]. The taxpayer must attach to the return an appraisal summary, in a form provided by the Internal Revenue Service, signed by the qualified appraiser and containing the appraiser's taxpayer identification number. The summary must also be acknowledged by the donee of the appraised property [Pub. L. No. 98-369, § 155(a)(1)(B), (a)(3)].

The IRS may also require a statement concerning the gift from the donee organization [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-1(a)(2)(iii)]; see § 69.180, P 6(c)].

_____ [name of charitable organization]

_____ [street and number]

_____ [city, state, zip code]

Dear Sir or Madam:

The purpose of this letter is to formally notify you that _____ [name of donor] is contributing to your organization the sum of $ _____ [or, if personal property rather than cash is being enclosed, describe property, e.g., one concert grand piano].

[Add if additional documents are enclosed:]

The following documents pertaining to this gift are enclosed:

1. _____ [describe, e.g., A certified check for $ _____].
2. _____ [e.g., A formal gift instrument setting forth the terms and conditions on which this gift is to take effect].
3. _____ [e.g., An acknowledgment of receipt to be signed by an authorized representative of your organization upon receipt of this gift and returned to the above address].
4. _____ [specify any other documents accompanying letter, such as a deed, share certificate, or other document of title].

This gift is made only on the terms and conditions described in the enclosed Declaration of Gift and is to be used for the purpose or purposes described therein [or, if a formal gift instrument is not used, purpose of gift may be stated].

[If gift is to be picked up by donee, add:]

Please arrange to pick up the above property no later than _____ [date].

Sincerely,

_____ [signature of donor]

§ 69.301 Corporate Resolution for Charitable Contribution

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a corporate resolution authorizing disbursement of corporate funds or property for a charitable contribution. It is designed to be included in the minutes of a directors' meeting, but may be easily adapted if the action is to be taken by unanimous written consent of the directors. For a discussion of the powers and duties of directors, the conduct of meetings, and corporate recordkeeping requirements in general, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions.

[b] Federal Income Tax Considerations

The Internal Revenue Code permits a corporation to take an income tax deduction for its charitable contributions [I.R.C. § 170(a)(1)]. Ordinarily, the deduction must be taken in the taxable year in which the contribution is actually made, regardless of the corporation's accounting method. However, corporations on the accrual basis may elect to treat a contribution as made in the year in which it is authorized by the board of directors if it is paid on or before the fifteenth day of the third month of the following year [I.R.C. § 170(a)(2)].

A corporation's charitable deduction is limited to 10 percent of its taxable income, computed in a specified manner [I.R.C. § 170(b)(2); see § 69.180, P 1(b)]. Corporations, like individuals, are permitted a five-year carryover for contributions in excess of 10 percent of taxable income made in a specified year [I.R.C. § 170(d)(2); see discussion in § 69.15[7]].

Special tax benefits are available for qualified contributions by corporations of inventory to be used for the care of the ill, needy, or infants [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)], or of scientific equipment to institutions of higher education for use in experimentation or research [I.R.C. § 170(e)(4)]. For a detailed discussion of the available benefits, the Internal Revenue Code requirements, and a gift instrument that may be used to make such a contribution, see § 69.321.

[2] FORM*Corporate Resolution for Charitable Contribution*RESOLUTION AUTHORIZING CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTION

WHEREAS, the Board of Directors believes it is consistent and compatible with the purposes of this corporation to promote _____[state specific purpose of charity to be designated as donee; e.g., better housing for economically underprivileged segments of the community in which this corporation is located]; therefore, be it:

RESOLVED, that this corporation [add if desired: through its President] contribute to _____[exact name and address of specific charity; or such charities as the President in his (or her) absolute discretion may designate], the sum of _____ dollars ($_____) [or, if property other than cash is to be donated, describe property], to be used for the purpose specified above [or state more specific purpose with particularity].

[Add if amount of gift is to be limited to corporation's maximum income tax deduction for charitable year:]

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the recipient [or all recipients] of this contribution, and all purposes or uses made of this contribution, must be recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as organizations, purposes, and uses for which a charitable deduction from federal income tax is allowed; and that the total amount of this contribution [or all charitable contributions made by this corporation] shall not exceed ten percent of the taxable income of this corporation for the taxable year ending ____[year], computed as provided in Section 170(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code. If the total amount of this contribution [or all charitable contributions made by this corporation] is greater than ten percent of the taxable income of this corporation as provided above, the total amount shall be reduced to that percentage.

§ 69.320 General Form for Inter Vivos Gift to Charitable Organization

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an instrument for making an inter vivos gift of personal property to a charitable organization. It is a general form that can be used for most types of inter vivos transfers to charity. For a discussion of when this form should be used, and when a less formal gift instrument will suffice, see § 69.300[1].

When the subject matter of the gift is real property, the transfer should be made by deed [see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording]. For formal language making conditional fee simple transfers of real property, and discussion of the applicable law, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities.

[b] Modification of Form for Gifts to Specific Types of Entities

This is a general form illustrating an appropriate format for formal instruments making inter vivos charitable gifts. The testamentary gift forms in this chapter include numerous provisions for gifts to specific types of entities. To avoid unnecessary duplication, forms for identical inter vivos gifts are not included in this chapter. To modify this form for specific types of gifts, the attorney should refer to the appropriate testamentary gift provision and incorporate the relevant language into an inter vivos gift instrument, using the format illustrated in this form. For gifts to religious institutions, see §§ 69.380-69.383. For gifts to educational institutions, museums, and similar institutions, see §§ 69.400-69.404. For gifts to hospitals and scientific organizations generally, see §§ 69.420 and 69.421. For gifts to social welfare organizations, see §§ 69.440-69.442. Inter vivos dedications of land to a government entity are discussed in Ch. 27A, Dedication. For inter vivos instruments transferring property into an existing pooled income fund, see Ch. 74, Split-Interest Charitable Trusts, §§ 74.231-74.233.

[c] Execution, Delivery, and Validity in General

This form should be signed by the donor. If the gift is community or quasi-community property, both spouses should sign.

A gift of community property requires written consent of the other spouse [Fam. Code § 1000(b)]. A spouse may dispose of quasi-community property without the consent of the other spouse, but the other spouse may acquire certain rights in the property after the donor spouse's death [see Prob. Code § 102]. In the case of a gift deed to real property, both spouses must sign [Fam. Code § 1102].

This form includes an optional acknowledgment clause. However, failure to include an acknowledgment will not invalidate the gift. A statement of acceptance to be signed by the donee is also included. However, a more formal receipt such as § 69.340 may be used if desired.

When a formal gift instrument such as this form is used, it should be delivered to the donor accompanied by a cover letter such as § 69.300, together with any other documents pertaining to the gift. For a discussion of delivery requirements, and the mechanics and validity of gifts in general, see Ch. 60A, Gifts .

[d] Tax Considerations in Inter Vivos Gifts--In General

Before making a charitable gift, it is vital that the attorney examine its tax consequences. The tax treatment of charitable contributions and the importance of the federal income and gift tax charitable deductions are discussed in the Legal Background. The steps in determining the tax treatment of a particular contribution are treated in detail in § 69.120 et seq., and are not repeated here. However, the attorney should keep in mind the following basic questions relating to the tax treatment of any charitable contribution:

- Has the IRS determined that contributions to the prospective donee will qualify for the federal income tax charitable deduction [see § 69.120, P 1]?
- If the donor is an individual rather than a corporation, is the donee organization a "50-percent organization" or a "30-percent organization" [see § 69.120, P 2; see also I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A), (B)]?
- If the property being donated is something other than cash, is it classified as ordinary income property or long-term capital gain property [see § 69.122, PP 2, 3]? Because of the unfavorable treatment of ordinary income property, the available tax deduction for charitable contributions of such property often is minimal.
- What percentage of the donor's income for the tax year is represented by the gift and by all other charitable gifts made in the tax year? If this percentage exceeds the maximum amount deductible in the year of the contribution, is a carryover available, and does the donor already have carryovers from past years [see § 69.122, P 4; see also discussion in § 69.15[7]]?

[2] FORM

General Form for Inter Vivos Gift to Charitable Organization

I [or We], _____ [donor's full name] ("Donor"), give to _____ [exact legal name and address of charity; if an obscure group, consider adding: a charitable organization] ("Donee"), the sum of $ _____ ..... [or if subject matter of gift is personal property, describe, e.g., my concert grand piano or, where several items of property are involved: those items of property more particularly described on the attached Schedule A, which is incorporated by reference] .

[If conditions are attached to gift, they should be enumerated in the following manner. The following provisions are illustrative only; for language applicable to specific types of gifts, see 60.30-69.460.]

This gift shall be invested through any other trust or fund managed for the benefit of the Donee, and shall remain in trust as principal. The income therefrom shall be paid or applied not less frequently than annually to the following purposes in the order of priority set forth below, until all such income has been expended:

- (1) To support and maintain the exterior grounds, yard, gardens, and landscaped areas on the premises occupied by the Donee, including such additions and improvements as the Donee determines are necessary or beneficial, but not including the acquisition of additional land or the construction of additional buildings;
- (2) To conduct free educational programs on botany and horticulture for the benefit of the general public; and
- (3) For any other general use related to the purpose or function constituting the basis for the Donee's exemption from taxation under Internal Revenue Code § 501.

This gift is made on the terms and conditions specified in this instrument. The Donee, by its acceptance of this gift, warrants and represents that this gift shall be held and administered in accordance with all the terms and conditions enumerated herein.

§ 69.321 Corporate Gift of Inventory for Care of Ill or Needy or Qualified Research Contribution

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is to be used by a corporation for making a charitable gift, either of inventory to be used for the care of the ill, the needy, or infants, or of scientific research property. Qualifying transfers of such property receive more favorable tax treatment than other ordinary income property [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3), (4); see § 69.321[1][b]]. In addition to other requirements, the donee must give the donor a written representation that the property will be used in a manner that meets Internal Revenue Code requirements. For a form for such a representation, see § 69.341. For general information regarding charitable gift instruments, see § 69.320[1].

[b] Tax Treatment of Qualified Contributions

In computing the available federal income tax charitable deduction, the fair market value of property must ordinarily be reduced by the amount of gain which would not have been long-term capital gain had the property been sold by the donor at its fair market value on the date of the gift [I.R.C. § 170(e)(1)(A)]. The effect of this rule is to reduce the available deduction for such property to the donor's basis. Property subject to this reduction is referred to as "ordinary income property" [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-4(b)(1)], and includes inventory and depreciable and real property used in the donor's trade or business [I.R.C. §§ 1221(a)(1), (a)(2), 1222(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-4(b)(1)].

A special exception is available to corporations for qualified contributions, either of inventory for the care of the ill, needy, or infants, or of scientific equipment to institutions of higher education for experimentation or research. Property qualifying for this exception is reduced by only one-half the amount of gain that would not have been long-term capital gain [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(B)(i), (4)(A)] (instead of the entire amount of such gain), plus the amount, if any, by which the charitable deduction (computed in the manner described above) exceeds twice the basis of the property [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(B)(ii), (4)(A)].

The favorable tax treatment described above is available only for contributions by corporations [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(A), (4)(B)]. The corporate donor is still subject to the general rule limiting its contributions in any taxable year to a maximum of 10 percent of its taxable income [I.R.C. § 170(b)(2)].

[c] Contributions of Inventory for Care of Ill, Needy, or Infants

Property will qualify for the favorable tax treatment discussed above if it is inventory or depreciable or real property used in the donor's trade or business [I.R.C. §§ 170(e)(3)(A), 1221(a)(1), (a)(2)]. The donee must be a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 501(c)(3). Contributions to private foundations, other than private operating foundations, do not qualify [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(A); see I.R.C. §§ 509(a), 4942(j)(3)]. In addition, the gift must meet all of the following requirements [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(A)(i)-(iv)]:

- The donee's use of the property must be related to the purpose or function constituting the basis for the donee's tax-exempt status under I.R.C. § 501, and the property must be used by the donee solely for the care of the ill, the needy, or infants.
- The property may not be transferred by the donee in exchange for money, other property, or services.
- The donor must obtain from the donee a written statement representing that the use and disposition of the property will be in accordance with the two criteria stated above [see § 69.341].
- If the property is subject to regulation under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, it must fully satisfy all applicable requirements of that Act and the applicable regulations.

[d] Qualified Research Contributions

Property will also qualify for the favorable tax treatment discussed above if it is a "qualified research contribution"; in other words, a contribution of scientific property constructed by the donor and donated to an institution of higher education [I.R.C. § 170(e)(4)]. The property must be inventory or property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the donor's trade or business [I.R.C. §§ 170(e)(4)(B), 1221(a)(1)]. The gift must also meet the following requirements [I.R.C. § 170(e)(4)(B)(i)-(vii)]:

- The donee must be an educational institution of higher learning which normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on [see I.R.C. §§ 170(b)(1)(A)(ii), 3304(f)].
- The property must be constructed by the donor. Property is "constructed by the donor" only if the cost of the parts used in construction does not exceed 50 percent of the donor's basis in the property [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(C)].
- The contribution must be made not later than two years after the date construction of the property is substantially completed.
- The donee must be the original user of the property.
- The property must be scientific equipment or apparatus substantially all of the use of which by the donee is for research or experimentation or for research training in the United States in physical or biological sciences.
- The property cannot be transferred by the donee in exchange for money, property, or other services.

■ The donor must receive from the donee a written representation that the use and disposition of the property will be in accordance with (5) and (6) above [see § 69.341].

§ 69.340 General Form of Acceptance and Receipt

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an instrument by which the recipient of an inter vivos charitable gift formally acknowledges receipt and acceptance of the gift and, in appropriate instances, warrants that the gift will be used in accordance with the terms, conditions, and instructions in the gift instrument. The acknowledgment of receipt may be drafted by the donor's attorney at the time the formal gift instrument is prepared, and forwarded to the donee to be signed by an appropriate representative and returned to the donor.

Requirements for valid acceptance and delivery of gifts in general are discussed in Ch. 60A, Gifts .

[b] Importance of Written Records

No federal income tax charitable deduction is allowed for any gift of $250 or more unless the donor substantiates the gift with a contemporaneous written acknowledgment by the donee [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)]; see also §§ 69.140, P 9, 69.160, P 6, 69.180, P 6]. This form meets the statutory requirements for a contemporaneous written acknowledgment. A written acknowledgment of receipt also serves as evidence that ownership of the gift property was actually transferred by the donee, and that the gift property was delivered and accepted.

[c] Time Frame for Obtaining Receipt

Ordinarily a receipt is obtained at the time the contribution is made. However, for contributions of $250 or more that are subject to the substantiation requirements noted in [b], above, it is sufficient if the donee's written acknowledgment is obtained on or before the earlier of (1) the date which the donor files a return for the taxable year in which the contribution is made; or (2) the due date (including extensions) for filing that return [I.R.C. § 170(f)(8)(C)].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a special instrument acknowledging receipt of an inter vivos charitable gift, either of inventory to be used for the care of the ill, the needy, or infants, or of scientific property for research. Qualifying transfers of such property by corporations receive favorable tax treatment not available to other contributions of ordinary income property [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3), (4)]. The tax treatment of such contributions, and the requirements for eligibility, are discussed in detail in § 69.321[1].

One important requirement is that the donor must obtain from the donee a written representation that the property will be used in a manner meeting Internal Revenue Code requirements [I.R.C. § 170(e)(3)(A)(iii), (e)(4)(B)(vii)]. This special acknowledgment may be used to satisfy this requirement, as well as the general recordkeeping requirements applicable to all charitable gifts [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(8); see also §§ 69.140, P 9, 69.160, P 6, 69.180, P 6].

The form in § 69.340 is a general acknowledgment that may be used in other situations.

 B. Testamentary Dispositions to Charity
 1. General Provisions

§ 69.360 Pecuniary Devise to Charity--General Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving a specified amount of cash to a charitable organization. It is a general form that may be used for any general pecuniary gift [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118 ("general pecuniary gift" defined)] not otherwise covered by the forms in this chapter dealing with specific types of gifts [see § 69.380-69.480]. It is intended for use when the testator has a general charitable intent; that is, when his or her principal concern is simply that the designated sum be used for any charitable purpose, as opposed to a more specifically defined purpose [see §§ 69.365, 69.366] or for the benefit of a specific organization [see § 69.367]. This form is a will provision, but it may be adapted for a codicil by using the format illustrated in Ch. 62, Codicils. If the subject matter of the gift is personal property other than cash, see § 69.361.

[b] Importance of Determining Tax Consequences

Before using this form or any other will provision in this chapter, the attorney should determine whether it is important to obtain a federal estate tax deduction for the charitable contribution, and, if so, whether a contribution to the organization under consideration will qualify for the deduction. General estate planning considerations, including the role of charitable dispositions, are discussed in Ch. 60, Estate Planning. Classes of organizations qualifying for the federal estate tax charitable deduction are discussed in §§ 69.16[2], 69.120.

In making any testamentary gift, it is important that the beneficiary be adequately described. This is particularly important in the case of charitable dispositions to organizations that have branches, chapters, or other subdivisions, such as fraternal societies and many religious institutions. Although a more general description will not necessarily invalidate the gift [see discussion in § 69.12], it is prudent to include the full proper name of the organization (e.g., "Loyal Order

It has been held that an attorney is not liable to a charitable beneficiary for including an ambiguous description of the beneficiary in a will because, among other reasons, the task of proving whether the ambiguity was the result of the negligence of the drafting attorney or a deliberate choice on the part of the testator would impose an "insurmountable burden" [ Ventura County Humane Society v. Holloway (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 897, 904-905 (gift to "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (Local or National)")]. Further, an attorney is not liable for using words suggested or selected by the testator if they later prove to be ambiguous [ Ventura County Humane Society v. Holloway (1974) 115 Cal. Rptr.464] . Nevertheless, it is suggested that in the best interests of the client the better practice is to verify that the client has provided the correct name of the beneficiary organization, and, if the client suggests a description that is general in nature or otherwise inherently ambiguous, to advise the client that use of such a description is likely to result in litigation between charitable organizations that come within that description.

[d] Alternate Beneficiary

This form and most of the other will provisions in this chapter contain a clause providing for disposition to an alternate beneficiary in the event that the primary beneficiary fails for any reason to take the gift. It is highly desirable that the will contain such an alternate disposition. In the case of a noncharitable beneficiary, a gift that fails to take effect will simply pass under the residuary clause of the will unless the testator has made some other alternate disposition. This general rule also applies to charitable gifts. However, because of the liberal application of the cy pres doctrine [see discussion in § 69.12], there is a somewhat greater likelihood of litigation between charitable institutions and the residuary beneficiaries if the named charity fails to take the gift. The unfortunate result is that litigation expenses may consume much of the gift. One way of reducing the likelihood of such a situation is to clearly specify an alternate beneficiary.

Pecuniary Devise to Charity--General Form

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of charity; if an obscure group, consider adding: a charitable organization], the sum of _____ dollars ($_____) [if gift is to be paid out of a specific fund (a demonstrative legacy), identify fund, e.g., from my savings account no. _____ at _____ (name and address of financial institution)], to be used by said organization for its general purposes. In the event that _____ [restate name of charity] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that it shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate.].

 1. General Provisions

25-69 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 69.361

§ 69.361 Testamentary Gift of Property to Charity--General Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision making a gift of one or more specific items of property to a charitable organization. It may be used for any gift or property not otherwise covered by the forms in this chapter [see §§ 69.380-69.460]. Like § 69.360, it is intended for use where the testator has a general charitable intent. For additional information relevant to the use of this form, see § 69.360[1]. If the subject matter of the gift is cash rather than items of property, § 69.360 should be used instead of this form.

Before drafting any devise to a charity, the attorney should determine the charity's correct legal name and verify that it is qualified to receive charitable devises under the Internal Revenue Code. This can be done by contacting the organization's development office or by consulting IRS Publication No. 78, the Cumulative List of Organizations Described in Section 170(c) of the Internal Revenue Code .

It is always good practice to specify what will happen to the devised property if a charitable devisee fails to take, or fails to qualify as a charitable devisee at the time of the testator's death. This form allows the drafter to specify that the gift will go to an alternate beneficiary, or that it will lapse and become part of the residue of the testator's estate.

[b] Tax Considerations--Gifts of Partial Interests

As noted in § 69.360[1], it is important to determine the tax consequences of any contemplated disposition and the effect of that disposition on the overall estate plan. In the case of gifts to specific items of property, as opposed to cash, a federal estate tax deduction is generally unavailable for gifts of less than the testator's entire interest in property. For example, if a testamentary gift of stock is made to a charity, no deduction will be allowed if, during the period of estate administration, a noncharitable beneficiary is to receive dividends from the stock [ Rev. Rul. 83-45, 1983-1 C.B. 233 ]. The importance of this rule, and its exceptions, are discussed in § 69.16[3]. For language to be used in making a gift of a future interest when it has been determined that the tax consequences of such a gift are acceptable to the testator, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities .

This form is a will provision that may be used to give the residue of the testator's estate to charity. A residuary gift is a testamentary transfer of property that remains after all specific and general gifts have been satisfied [Prob. Code § 21117(f); see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined), (b) ("general gift" defined)]. A residuary gift passes all property that the testator owns at death [see Prob. Code § 21105 (property that passes by will)].

Like §§ 69.360 and 69.361, this form is intended for use when the testator has a general charitable intent. When the testator desires that the gift be put to a more specific use, see §§ 69.365-69.367 and the forms for dispositions to particular classes of entities [§§ 69.380-69.480]. For general information relevant to testamentary dispositions to charity, see § 69.360[1].

§ 69.363 Selection of Charity to Be Made by Executor

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision leaving a specified amount of cash or other property to one or more charitable organizations to be selected by the executor of the estate following the testator's death. This provision may be used when the testator wishes to make a testamentary disposition to charity but does not have a specific beneficiary in mind, or when the testator would prefer for tax or other reasons to have the charity evaluated after his or her death. Because of the nature of the disposition, it is obviously suitable only when the testator has a general charitable intent.

This provision gives the executor a special power of appointment in favor of an indefinite class of charities [see Prob. Code § 611 ("general" and "special" powers of appointment); Estate of Dailey (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998, 182 Cal. Rptr. 95 (executor as donee given power to determine members of class of beneficiaries); see also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.43[1] et seq.].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 69 CHARITABLE DISPOSITIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Testamentary Dispositions to Charity
 1. General Provisions

25-69 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 69.364

§ 69.364 Selection of Charity to Be Made by Trustee

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision leaving a specified amount of cash or other property to the trustee of a trust established by the testator, to be distributed to charity by the trustee. The transfer is solely for charitable purposes and is wholly independent of any other trust created by the testator. This provision may be used in place of the form in § 69.363 when the testator prefers to have the charities designated by a third party other than the executor. It may be modified if a third party other than a trustee will have the power to designate the charities that receive the gift. Like the preceding will provisions in this chapter [see § 69.360-69.363], this provision should be used only when the testator has a general charitable intent. The power conferred on the trustee or other third party amounts to a presently exercisable imperative special power of appointment in favor of an indefinite class of charities [see Prob. Code §§ 611-613; see also § 69.363[1]].

It is recommended that the provision specify a reasonable time limit for the distribution to charity. Ordinarily, there should be no reason to postpone distribution beyond the date of entry of the decree of final distribution of the estate. Specification of a longer period normally serves no useful purpose and creates the possibility of increased administration expenses.

For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[2] FORM

Selection of Charity to Be Made by Trustee

I give to _____ [name of trustee, or the Trustee of the Trust created under Article _____ of this will], in trust, the sum of $_____ dollars [or describe property], to be distributed to any one or more charities as the Trustee may in his [or her] discretion select, for the general purposes of any such charity chosen [; provided, however, that the Trustee shall select only charities which entitle my estate to a deduction from federal estate tax under Section

2055 of the Internal Revenue Code for all amounts (or property) so given]. The Trustee shall retain this sum [or property] while making any necessary investigation and evaluation of potential charitable recipients. Pending such disposition, the Trustee shall hold this amount [or property] separate from all other assets and property of my estate, and shall not commingle it with any other funds or property held in trust. No part of this disposition is to be invested in any manner [other than being deposited in a savings account]. The Trustee shall be entitled to a sum not to exceed $_____ dollars as his [or her] fee, and shall be entitled to reimbursement for any other reasonable expenses of administration in connection with this distribution. The Trustee shall distribute the entire amount [or all property] governed by this provision no later than _____[specify time period; e.g., one year from the date of my death or the date of the final decree of distribution of my estate, whichever occurs later] .

 1. General Provisions

25-69 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 69.365

§ 69.365 Disposition for Specific Purpose With Discretion to Use for Other Charitable Purpose

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used when the testator wishes to give money or property to charity to be used for a specific purpose, but also wishes to give the charity discretion to use the gift for other purposes. If the testator desires that the gift should be used exclusively for a specified purpose and for no other purpose, the form in § 69.366 should be used instead of this form. The choice of this type of form over a more binding direction is discussed in § 69.366[1]. In general, however, it is preferable to give the charity more discretion. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[2] FORM

Disposition for Specific Purpose With Discretion to Use for Other Charitable Purpose

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of charity; if an obscure group, consider adding: a charitable organization], the sum of $_____ dollars [or describe specific items of property], to be used by said organization _____ [describe specific purpose for which gift is made, e.g., to purchase kitchen appliances and equipment for use in its program to provide meals to orphans and underprivileged children]. In the event that this gift cannot be used for the preceding purpose [, or if the above organization in the exercise of its discretion determines that it could be better used for another charitable purpose], it may be used for any other charitable purpose that such organization may direct. If _____ [restate name of charity] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that it shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

 CHAPTER 69 CHARITABLE DISPOSITIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Testamentary Dispositions to Charity
 1. General Provisions

25-69 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 69.366

§ 69.366 Disposition Exclusively for Specific Purpose--Alternative Disposition of Amounts Not So Expended

[1] Comment

This form is a will provision that may be used when the testator wishes to make a charitable gift to be used exclusively for a specific purpose. It should be used if the testator does not have a general charitable intent [see § 69.360[1]].

Where it is of paramount importance to the testator that a charitable gift should be used only for a particular purpose, that fact should be clearly stated in the Will provision making the disposition. Courts favor charitable dispositions and endeavor to carry them into effect whenever possible, and can apply the cy pres doctrine to permit a charitable gift that cannot be given effect in the precise manner specified by the testator to take effect in a manner consistent with the testator's intent [ Estate of Gatlin (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 644, 648, 94 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see discussion in § 69.12]. Therefore, if the testator wants the gift to fail if it cannot be used for the specified purpose, it is important to include a clear statement to that effect.

Where this form is used, the testator or attorney should contact the charity in advance to verify that the gift will be accepted for the stated purpose. Failure to make an advance determination greatly increases the risk that the gift will fail at the time of the testator's death.

For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[b] Should Use of Gift Be Limited to Specified Purpose?

Where the testator has a strong wish that the gift be used for a specific purpose, the attorney has a choice between using this form, which provides that the gift will fail if not put to the specified use, or the form in § 69.365, which specifies a primary use but permits the organization to direct the gift to another use if it cannot be used for the stated purpose. Which of these forms is most appropriate depends on the significance which the testator attaches to the purpose. Unless the testator is adamant that the gift be used only for the stated purpose, it is recommended that the form in § 69.365 be used. This is because there is obviously considerably less likelihood that the gift will fail if the charity is given greater discretion to determine its use. In addition, if the alternate beneficiary is an individual or other noncharitable beneficiary, failure of the charitable gift may disrupt the estate plan by depriving the estate of a needed federal estate tax deduction.

Where this form is used, one possible method of minimizing the chance that the gift will fail is to name one or more alternate beneficiaries that perform the same function as the primary beneficiary, and provide that the alternate beneficiaries can take only on the same conditions as the primary beneficiary.

Disposition Exclusively for Specific Purpose--Alternative Disposition of Amounts Not So Expended

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of charity; if an obscure group, consider adding: a charitable organization], the sum of $_____ dollars [or describe specific items of property], to be used by said organization _____ [describe specific purpose for which gift is made, e.g., to purchase redwood trees to be planted along the northeast border of Central Park]. I direct that this gift may be accepted only on the precise terms and conditions specified herein, and that it shall be used only for the exact purpose stated in this disposition and for no other similar purpose. If _____ [restate name of charity] fails for any reason to accept and use this gift for the exact purpose specified herein, I direct that it shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 69 CHARITABLE DISPOSITIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Testamentary Dispositions to Charity
 1. General Provisions

25-69 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 69.367

§ 69.367 Disposition Exclusively for Benefit of Specific Organization

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used when the testator's primary intent in making a charitable gift is to benefit a specific organization rather than to make a contribution for a specific charitable purpose. This situation typically occurs where the testator is a member of a religious group or a society such as a fraternal order. If the named charity is intended merely to function as a conduit through which the gift will pass, the form in § 69.360 or another appropriate form should be used. If a noncharitable alternate beneficiary is named, any anticipated federal estate tax charitable deduction will be lost if the primary beneficiary does not take the gift.

[b] Application of Cy Pres Doctrine

Under the cy pres rule, a charitable disposition that cannot go to the charity named in the will ordinarily will go to another charity performing the same or a similar function [see discussion in § 69.12]. If the testator's primary purpose is to benefit the designated organization, such a result would be contrary to the testator's actual intent. Therefore, cy pres is inapplicable if the charitable gift is meant to benefit only the named organization, as evidenced from the will or extrinsic evidence [ Estate of Klinkner (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 942, 951, 151 Cal. Rptr. 20 ]. The primary purpose of this form is to clearly state the testator's intent for the benefit of any reviewing court.

[2] FORM

Disposition Exclusively for Benefit of Specific Organization

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of charity; if an obscure group, consider adding: a charitable organization], the sum of $_____ dollars [or describe specific items of property], to be used by that organization for its general purposes [or describe specific purpose for which gift is made]. The primary purpose of this gift is to benefit the above organization; and, in the event that this organization fails for any reason to take this gift, this gift shall not pass to any other organization having a similar function or purpose, but instead shall _____[go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

§ 69.380 Gift for Support of Clergy Member

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving a specified amount of cash to a religious institution for the support of a clergy member. It provides for investment of the principal and payment of the income for the stated purpose. For an outright gift without any investment requirement, appropriate language from this form should be added to the form in § 69.360. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[b] Designation of Beneficiary

Many religious groups are subdivided into parishes or similar individual units, and dissimilar religious groups sometimes have confusingly similar names. For this reason, the beneficiary should be precisely described by its full legal name and address, not merely by a general denominational designation such as "the Methodist Church in San Francisco" or "the Archbishop of Los Angeles and San Diego" [see, e.g., Estate of Cleaver (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 341, 178 Cal. Rptr. 729]. If there is any question about the proper name for the recipient, or which subdivision should actually be designated as beneficiary, the attorney or client should contact the institution personally to resolve the matter.

[c] Individual Clergy Member as Beneficiary--Tax Considerations

Caution must be exercised in designating an individual clergy member as the recipient of a religious contribution, or the federal estate tax charitable deduction may be disallowed. Because the deduction is available only for contributions to or for the use of corporations and associations organized for religious purposes [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 1.2055-1(a)(2)], contributions to individual members of religious orders (usually members of the testator's family) have been disallowed [see Estate of George W. Dichtel (1958) 30 T.C. 1258, 1261-1262], even if the testator was aware that the donee was under a legally enforceable obligation to turn over all bequests to the church [see Barry's Estate v. C.I.R.

(9th Cir. [T.C.] 1962) 311 F.2d 681, 683-684 ; Letter Rul. 200437032, 2004 PLR LEXIS 614 (decedent's residuary bequest to beneficiary who is individual that is member of religious order and has taken vow of poverty does not qualify for estate tax charitable deduction under I.R.C. § 2055(a); see also Cox v. Commissioner (2d Cir. [T.C.] 1961) 297 F.2d 36] . In one case, for example, funds that a mother and father transferred to their sons while the sons served as full-time, unpaid missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints were not charitable contributions "to or for the use of" the church within the meaning of I.R.C. § 170(c). A contribution is "for the use of" a qualified organization only if it is held in a legally enforceable trust for the organization, or in some similar legal arrangement [ Davis v. United States (1990) 495 U.S. 472, 486, 110 S. Ct. 2014, 109 L. Ed. 2d 457] . If an individual clergy member is named as the recipient of the bequest, it is important that the provision include language creating a legal or equitable interest in the religious institution itself [see Cox v. Commissioner (2d Cir. [T.C.] 1961) 297 F.2d 36, 38] . The simplest method of creating such an interest is to specify that the gift is made in trust to the clergy member for the benefit of the religious organization; however, it is strongly recommended that this device be avoided entirely if possible. For special considerations when religious services are involved, see § 69.383[1].

Gift for Support of Clergy Member

I give to _____[exact name and address of specific church or other religious institution] the sum of $_____, to provide for [or, go toward] the support of a _____[designate member of clergy, e.g., minister or priest or rabbi; or other individual to be supported]. The principal may be invested through any trust or fund managed for the benefit of the donee. The income shall be used first for adequate support of the individual recipient in amounts determined by the appropriate authorities of the donee institution. Any excess income shall be used to furnish the recipient with an appropriate expense account or to furnish [or supplement] the recipient's rent in an adequate residence [; and any income remaining after fulfillment of all the above purposes shall be applied to the general purposes of the donee institution]. In the event that _____[restate name of church] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that this gift shall instead _____[go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

This form is a will provision that may be used when the testator wishes to make a testamentary gift of money or land for construction of a church building or another religious purpose. Many religious institutions maintain building funds for this purpose. Before making such a gift, the testator should determine whether it is realistic or possible for the institution to accept the gift for this purpose.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving money to be used for performance of religious services, such as Masses in a Roman Catholic church.

In making this type of bequest, particular attention should be paid to the designation of the beneficiary. Although a bequest to an individual clergy member to perform religious services in memory of the decedent has been held to create a trust for charitable uses under California law [ Estate of Hamilton (1919) 181 Cal. 758, 771, 186 P. 587 ], the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that a bequest to a member of a religious order to say Masses for the dead is nondeductible even if the order requires that the clergyman take a vow of poverty. The IRS takes the position that in such a case the gift passes to the order under a contractual arrangement between the individual clergy member and the order rather than by way of the decedent's bequest under the will [ Rev. Rul. 68-459, 1968-2 C.B. 411 ; see Letter Rul. 200437032, 2004 PLR LEXIS 614 (decedent's residuary bequest to beneficiary who is individual that is member of religious order and has taken vow of poverty does not qualify for estate tax charitable deduction under I.R.C. § 2055(a))]. To avoid this situation, it is probably the better practice in most cases to make the bequest to the institution rather than to a specific individual or, in appropriate instances, to the Archbishop of the particular region as a corporation sole. If an individual recipient is designated, it is suggested that there is a greater chance of obtaining a charitable deduction if the gift is made to that individual in trust for the specified purpose [see Cox v. Commissioner (2d Cir. [T.C.] 1961) 297 F.2d 36, 38 ] ; however, it is recommended that this device be avoided entirely if at all possible. For additional discussion of this problem, see the discussion in § 69.380[1][c].

If the testator wishes to specify the number of services to be performed, he or she should be instructed to contact the church in question and determine whether it is customary to allocate a specific sum for each such service.

For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[Optional: These Masses are to be said (or These services are to be held) at _____ (name of church) on _____ (time, if any, e.g., each anniversary of my death) by _____ (name of clergy member).]

§ 69.400 Gift for Educational Facilities

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving money or property to an educational institution for construction or improvement of educational facilities. If the money or property is to be used only for a narrowly defined purpose, the donor or attorney should verify in advance that this purpose is compatible with the institution's own plans. If real property is involved, the donor must consider whether the size and location of the property would render it useful to the institution. For information on descriptions, and general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[b] Federal Estate Tax Considerations for Gifts to Educational Institutions

A federal estate tax charitable deduction is allowed for contributions to corporations and associations operated exclusively for educational purposes [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(2)]. As a general rule, both the courts and the IRS have been comparatively liberal in allowing this deduction [see, e.g., Rev. Rul. 60-367, 1960-2 C.B. 73 (gift to college for housing for members of specific fraternity); Marine Midland Trust Co. of Southern N.Y. v. McGowan (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1955) 223 F.2d 408 (deduction allowed for contribution to fraternity where all parties agreed property was to be used only for educational purposes)]; there are no specific limitations comparable to those used in determining availability of the 50-percent deduction limit for federal income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A)(ii); Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-9(b)(1), (2)].

[c] Institutions Practicing Racial Discrimination

Educational institutions practicing policies that discriminate against individuals on the basis of race or national origin are not regarded as "charitable" because their discriminatory policies are contrary to the well-established federal policy against racial discrimination in education. Therefore, these institutions are ineligible for federal tax-exempt status and contributions to such institutions are ineligible for the federal income tax charitable deduction. This restriction extends to schools operated by religious institutions, and applies to policies such as discrimination in admissions and restrictions on interracial marriage and dating [ Rev. Rul. 71-447, 1971-2 C.B. 230 ; Rev. Rul. 75-231, 1975-1 C.B. 158 (both issued under I.R.C. §§ 170, 501(c)(3)); see Bob Jones University v. United States (1983), 461 U.S. 574, 103 S. Ct. 2017, 76 L. Ed. 2d 157].

§ 69.401 Gift for Athletic or Recreational Facilities

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving money or property to an educational institution for construction or improvement of recreational or athletic facilities. The illustrated provision is somewhat more detailed than will be necessary in most cases, and is included to illustrate drafting possibilities where the gift is sufficiently large to warrant dealing with such contingencies. For additional information on gifts to educational institutions, see § 69.400[1]. For information on descriptions, and general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

This provision is for use when the beneficiary is an educational institution. A charitable deduction is also available for contributions to noneducational groups which are organized and operated exclusively to foster national or international amateur sports competition [I.R.C. §§ 2055(a)(2), 2522(a)(2)]. No part of the activities of such a group may involve the provision of athletic facilities or equipment [I.R.C. §§ 2055(a)(2), 2522(a)(2)], except in the case of contributions to a "qualified amateur sports organization"; that is, one organized primarily to conduct national or international amateur sports competition, or to support and develop amateur athletes for national or international sports competition [I.R.C. § 501(j)(2), 2522(a)].

[2] FORM

Gift for Athletic or Recreational Facilities

I give to _____[exact legal name and address of educational institution; if an obscure group, consider adding: an educational institution], the sum of $ _____[or describe real property], to be used [or to go toward] _____[describe particular facilities, e.g., construction of an indoor Olympic swimming pool, including lockers, dressing rooms, and similar adjunct facilities or a gymnasium with accommodations for up to 3,000 spectators or describe other use], to be located on _____[describe location, either generally, e.g., the property of the above institution at a location determined by its governing body or with particularity, e.g., on that real property which I have given to the above institution under Article _____ of this will]. This facility shall be permanently known as _____[name]. Any portion of the above amount unspent or remaining after construction is completed shall be invested through any other trust fund managed for the benefit of the above institution, and the income therefrom shall be used exclusively for maintenance of the above facility and for hiring and paying the salaries of the staff, including a director [or instructor]. [If institution is to be given greater discretion in use of gift, add: In the event that this gift cannot be so used, or if the governing body of the above institution in the exercise of its discretion determines that it could be better used, this gift may be used to construct or provide such other athletic or recreational facilities as the governing body of the above institution may direct.] If _____[restate name of institution] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that it shall instead _____[go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision establishing a scholarship fund. The principal is to be invested and the income paid to support students meeting eligibility standards set forth in the instrument. This provision should only be used where the gift is sufficiently large to warrant creation of a separate fund that will generate enough income to provide a meaningful scholarship. When smaller amounts are involved, it is easier to simply make a cash gift into an existing fund [see § 69.360]. For additional information on gifts to educational institutions, see § 69.400[1]. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[2] FORM

Creation of Scholarship Fund

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of educational institution or administering foundation], the sum of $_____, for the establishment of a perpetual scholarship fund. This fund shall be permanently known as the _____ [name] Scholarship Fund, and shall be held and administered on the terms set forth below:

(a) The amount specified above shall constitute the principal of the fund and shall be invested through any other trust or fund managed for the benefit of the above institution. The above institution may accept additional contributions to the principal of this fund to be administered in accordance with these terms.

(b) The income accruing to this fund shall [or may, at the discretion of the appointing committee,] be awarded annually to one or more qualified candidates to support their attendance at _____ [name of particular institution, or: any college or university of their choice], for _____ [if scholarship is made for a specific purpose, specify, e.g., study leading toward the degree of _____ (specify, e.g., Bachelor of Arts) in the field of _____ (specify, e.g., medieval history) or graduate study in _____ (specify field or area)].

(c) The appointing committee shall be named by the governing body [or shall consist of _____ (specify, e.g., the tenured professors in the history department)] of the above institution. The appointing committee shall establish conditions for the award of this scholarship in accordance with acceptable modern standards of scholarship administration and consistent with the purpose of this fund, and shall institute rules to assure that all candidates meet and maintain appropriate academic standards.

(d) The amount awarded to each candidate in any single academic year shall not exceed _____ [specify maximum; either a dollar amount, e.g., ($1,000) or other limitation, e.g., an amount which the appointing committee determines is reasonable to pay the tuition and incidental expenses, including living expenses, of a regularly enrolled full-time student at the above institution]. The amount awarded is [or is not] to be determined on the basis of the candidate's need. [Candidates are to be exclusively (or preferably) drawn from _____ (specify, e.g., dependents of families with annual incomes of less than $10,000 or culturally and financially underprivileged neighborhoods or communities).]

(e) A candidate who has once been awarded a grant under this scholarship shall thereafter be preferred as a candidate until such time as the appointing committee determines that the candidate has completed his or her academic program, or has ceased to make reasonable progress toward such completion, or has ceased to be regularly enrolled at the above institution [or an institution of higher learning].

(f) Any interest not awarded to any qualified candidate in the year that such interest accrued shall not be awarded in any subsequent year, but shall be added to the principal of this fund.

§ 69.403 Creation of Professorship or Teaching Position

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving a specific amount of money to fund the salary for a teaching position or establish a "professor's chair" on the faculty of an educational institution. Use of this provision should be considered only when the amount given will generate enough income to provide such a salary; in other words, it is normally suitable only for very substantial gifts. It is recommended that gifts of smaller amounts be made as simple cash gifts or gifts into an existing fund earmarked for faculty salaries [see § 69.360 (general form for cash gift)]. For additional information on gifts to educational institutions, see § 69.400[1]. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[2] FORM

Creation of Professorship or Teaching Position

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of educational institution or administering foundation], the sum of $_____, for the establishment and perpetuation of a teaching position [or professorship or chair] on its faculty in the Department [or School or College] of _____ [subject; e.g., Biology]. The principal shall be invested through any fund or trust managed for the benefit of the above institution. The appropriate authorities of the above institution shall decide what portion of the income is to be designated as the salary of the recipient instructor [or professor] for each year, and the remaining income, if any, is to be allocated to the Department of _____ for its current needs and expenses. Any person filling this position will serve according to all normal rules and procedures in force at the above institution during such time [note any special qualifications; e.g., provided that such person must have a competent background in and be accredited to teach the subjects of anatomy or physiology]. This faculty position shall be permanently known as the _____ [name of position; normally that of donor followed by subject matter, e.g., Ralph Waldo Smith Professor of Anatomy and Physiology].

§ 69.404 Gift of Tangible Personal Property to Museum or Similar Institution

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving one or more items of tangible personal property to a museum or other comparable institution. It may be used where the testator wishes to donate an individual item or an entire collection. Before this provision is used, it is recommended that either the testator or the attorney contact the institution and determine whether it is willing to accept the donation on the terms and conditions established by the testator. If the gift consists of cash rather than tangible personal property, § 69.360 (a general form for gifts of cash) should be used instead of this form.

Descriptions of property are generally covered in § 69.361[1]. If the property involved is a collection or accumulation consisting of a number of items, each item should be described in detail in a separate inventory attached to the will and incorporated by reference into the provision making the gift.

For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[b] Federal Estate Tax Treatment of Works of Art and Similar Items

A federal estate tax charitable deduction is available for testamentary gifts to corporations and associations organized and operated exclusively for literary or educational purposes, including the encouragement of art [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(2)]. For federal estate tax purposes, property is generally valued at its fair market value at the time of the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 2031; Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-1(b)]; see discussion in § 69.16[4]. This valuation rule applies even to property created by the testator (as in the case of a testamentary gift of paintings by the artist), and should not be confused with federal income tax valuation rules generally limiting the available deduction for such contributions to the donor's basis [see I.R.C. § 170(e)(1)(A), (B); Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-4(a)(1), (b)(1)]; see also discussion in § 69.15[5].

Donation of collections, individual works of art, and similar items is frequently a valuable estate planning tool for large estates. It permits the estate to obtain a deduction for the full fair market value of unproductive assets or items that have less personal appeal to the beneficiaries than to the testator, while relieving the estate tax burden on assets that are more productive. Where estate tax savings are an important consideration, it is especially important to decide in advance upon a suitable beneficiary and to verify that the gift will be accepted.

[2] FORM

Gift of Tangible Personal Property to Museum or Similar Institution

I give to _____ [exact name and address of institution] my _____ [if a single item is involved, include precise description: for a painting or other work of art, include title of work and name of artist; or, for a collection or accumulation, include general description and incorporate detailed inventory by reference, e.g., entire collection of nineteenth- and early twentieth-century original Art Nouveau posters, more particularly itemized and described in Schedule A attached to this will and incorporated by reference herein], located at _____ [describe location or whereabouts of item], to be housed by the above institution _____ [as it deems appropriate or specify any special conditions, e.g., in a separate, permanent display area to be constructed with the funds provided for that purpose under Article _____ of this will, with appropriate staff]. If _____ [restate name of institution] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that it shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

§ 69.420 Gift for Project or Research in Science or Medicine

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving a specified amount of cash for a scientific project or scientific research. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

[b] Tax Considerations in Gifts for Scientific Projects and Research

A federal estate tax deduction is available for contributions to any corporation or association operated exclusively for scientific purposes [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2)]. However, no part of the earnings of the corporation or association can inure to the benefit of any stockholder or individual, other than as a legitimate object of its scientific purpose [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(2)]. Scientific projects and medical research may obviously have important economic consequences. To obtain a charitable deduction for such a contribution, it is important to verify that the organization's purpose is exclusively charitable. For example, contributions to local medical societies have been disallowed because the organizations directly or indirectly engage in lobbying activities and provide other noncharitable services to their members [see Krohn v. United States (D. Colo. 1965) 246 F.Supp. 341 ; see also Hammerstein v. Kelley (8th Cir. [Mo.] 1965) 349 F.2d 928 (bequest to medical society library held nondeductible)].

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of hospital, educational institution, nonprofit testing company, or other organization], the sum of $ _____, to be used for research in the area of _____ [describe specific purpose, e.g., heart disease].

Up to $_____ may be expended in the construction of suitable facilities, including the acquisition of any necessary equipment. The remainder shall be invested in any trust or fund managed for the benefit of the above institution, and the income therefrom shall be used to provide for the salaries of staff members whose duties are substantially connected with research in the field of _____*[specify], and for ongoing expenses of the project. The entire research project is to be known as the _____[name]* Project.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

§ 69.440 Gift to Social Welfare Organization for Benefit of Undeprived Persons

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving a specified amount of cash to a social welfare organization for ultimate distribution to underprivileged persons; in other words, traditional almsgiving. Because no federal estate tax deduction is available for direct contributions to individuals, such a contribution today must be made through a charitable organization if the testator is to derive any tax benefits. This provision requires investment of the principal and payment of the income for the stated purpose. Thus, the size of the gift must be sufficient to generate enough income to make the gift worthwhile. The organization may be able to pool smaller contributions, but it is probably better practice simply to make such gifts outright to the organization for the stated purpose, without any investment requirement [see § 69.365].

The principal shall be invested through any other trust fund managed for the benefit of the above institution. The income shall be distributed to the recipients on the basis of need as determined from formal application or discovery by the staff of the above organization, and shall be awarded only following reasonable research and confirmation of the facts in each case. _____ [restate name of organization] shall establish formal criteria for eligibility for grants from this fund. Grants may be made for activities including but not limited to the following, as determined in each instance in the absolute discretion of the above organization: _____ [specify, e.g., supplemental income for food, rent, and other living expenses, underwriting or guaranteeing small proprietary enterprises, or tuition and educational expenses toward acquiring job skills]. In the event

This form is a will provision giving money or property to a social welfare organization to provide physical facilities such as a counseling facility or similar venture. It is designed for gifts that are sufficiently large to support the construction or operation of such a facility. Smaller gifts should be made in the form of cash donations for the stated purpose [see § 69.365]. For information on the description of property generally, see § 69.361[1]. [1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving money or property to a social welfare organization to be used to help support the expenses of recreational and educational activities for institutionalized persons, such as elderly nursing home residents or persons in mental institutions.

If an estate tax charitable deduction is desired, care should be taken in designating the beneficiary of this type of provision. For example, no federal estate tax deduction would be available for a direct gift to a private nursing home that is operated for profit rather than as a nonprofit charitable institution [see I.R.C. § 2055(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(2)].

§ 69.460 Gift of Land to Municipal Authority for Civic Purposes

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving land to a municipal government for a civic purpose, such as a public city park. Such a gift amounts to a common law dedication, and must be accepted by the appropriate municipal authority before it becomes effective. Therefore, it is important to contact the appropriate municipal authorities in advance to determine whether the proposed dedication will be acceptable. For a detailed discussion of the law governing dedication, see Ch. 27A, Dedication. For general information relevant to all testamentary dispositions to charity, see §§ 69.360[1] and 69.361[1].

Contributions to or for the use of the United States or any state, territory, or political subdivision, qualify for the federal estate tax charitable deduction if they are made for exclusively public purposes [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(1); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(1)].

[2] FORM

Gift of Land to Municipal Authority for Civic Purposes

I give to _____ [exact name of governmental entity, e.g., the City and County of San Francisco or the Orange County Flood Control District, etc.], that real property known as _____ [address or general description], more fully described in Appendix A attached to and incorporated by reference into this will], _____ [state purpose, e.g., to be used as a public park and children's recreation center]. The property shall be designated by an appropriate plaque or other official civic reference as the _____ [name, e.g., Wilbur Smith Memorial Park]. In the event that _____ [restate name of governmental entity] fails for any reason to accept this gift, I direct that it shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

PART IV. FORMS

7. Fraternal Organizations

§ 69.480 Gift to Fraternal Organization

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision giving money or property to a fraternal order or society to be used for a charitable purpose. Due to the federal estate tax treatment of gifts to this type of organization, will provisions making these gifts must be more specific than most other charitable dispositions [see § 69.480[1][b]], and must be more carefully drafted. In describing the donee, it is important that the full name of the organization be specified, including the name or number of the specific lodge or chapter and its address [see § 69.360[1][c]].

[b] Federal Estate Tax Considerations

A testamentary gift to a fraternal society, order, or association operating under the lodge system qualifies for the federal estate tax charitable deduction if the gift is to be used exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(3)]. However, a gift to such an organization that engages in both charitable and noncharitable activities will qualify for the federal estate tax charitable deduction only if the testator has specifically limited its use to exclusively charitable purposes [ First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. United States (8th Cir. [Neb.] 1983) 681 F.2d 534, 541-542, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1104 (no estate tax charitable deduction for bequest of Masonic order)]. The limitation must be definite and legally enforceable [ First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. United States (8th Cir. [Neb.] 1983) 681 F.2d 534, 542, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1104 ; Mississippi Valley Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (8th Cir. [B.T.A.] 1934) 72 F.2d 197, 199, cert. denied, 293 U.S. 604 (1934)].

Most if not all fraternal societies and similar organizations engage in social and fraternal as well as charitable activities. Accordingly, this form contains a provision limiting the use of the gift to a specific charitable purpose, or, alternatively, any purpose qualifying for the federal estate tax charitable deduction.

An organization will not qualify for the federal estate tax deduction if a substantial part of its activities consists of carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation, or if it participates in any political campaign, including publishing or distributing statements, on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office [I.R.C. § 2055(a)(3); Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-1(a)(3)].

Gift to Fraternal Organization

I give to _____ [exact legal name and address of social or fraternal organization, including name or number of local chapter, if any] the sum of $ _____ [or describe property, e.g., my grand piano or, where several items of property are involved: those items of my property more particularly described on Schedule A attached to this will and incorporated by reference herein], to be used

[If gift is made for a specific charitable purpose:]

_____ [describe specific charitable purpose for which gift is made, e.g., in the above organization's program to support orphans and underprivileged children]. If this gift cannot be used for the preceding purpose, or if the above organization, in the exercise of its discretion, determines that it could be better used for another charitable purpose, it may be used for any other purpose that the above organization may direct, provided that it shall be used only for purposes that will entitle my estate to claim a federal estate tax charitable deduction for this gift [for alternative language limiting use of the gift exclusively to a single specified purpose, see § 69.366].

[Or, if testator does not wish to limit gift to a specific purpose:] for any religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes (including the prevention of cruelty to children or animals) that the above organization in the exercise of its sole discretion may direct; provided, however, that this gift shall be used exclusively for purposes that will entitle my estate to claim a federal estate tax charitable deduction for this gift.

In the event that _____ [restate name of social or fraternal organization] fails for any reason to take this gift, I direct that this property shall instead _____ [go to _____ (name and address of alternate beneficiary) or specify another alternate disposition, e.g., be disposed of as part of the residue of my estate].

Scope

Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman* Scope

This chapter covers revocable trusts, which are also commonly referred to as "revocable inter vivos trusts" or "living trusts." The Legal Background discusses the nature of revocable trusts, their use in estate planning, the basic content and format of trust instruments, and general drafting principles. The Transaction Guide provides a step-by-step guide to the forms. Part A of the forms consists of complete trust forms based on typical fact situations likely to be encountered in practice. Part B illustrates several alternative patterns of distribution that may be substituted for distribution provisions in the complete forms in appropriate cases. Part C includes alternative distribution provisions that may be substituted for the comparable provisions that appear in the complete forms.

The complete trust forms in Part A include all the provisions that typically will be needed in a complete revocable trust. Due to space considerations, this chapter does not illustrate the thousands of possible alternative and optional provisions that might conceivably be included in such a trust. For a range of alternative provisions, the reader may consult Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. Many of the forms in those chapters may be adapted for use in revocable trusts. Attorneys who want to view an even wider range of alternative provisions should refer to Matthew Bender's specialty publication, California Wills & Trusts. Specific references to California Wills & Trusts are included in appropriate locations in this chapter.

The forms in Part A include complete marital deduction trusts, along with basic commentary on their use. For detailed discussion of the marital deduction and its use in estate planning, as well as alternative forms for both testamentary and revocable marital deduction trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions. The planning and drafting of a trust is part of the overall estate planning process. A revocable trust should be created only after the attorney has carefully evaluated the client's estate planning needs and goals. General estate planning principles are covered in Ch. 60, Estate Planning.

Testamentary trusts may be used in place of or in addition to revocable trusts. For discussion of the planning and drafting of testamentary trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, and Ch. 63, Will Provisions. For general principles of planning, drafting, and funding irrevocable trusts, see Ch. 72. For insurance trusts, see Ch. 73. For split-interest charitable trusts, see Ch. 74.

§ 70.10 Introduction to the Revocable Trust

[1] Definition

A revocable trust is simply a trust that can be revoked by the settlor [see Black's Law Dictionary 1517-1518 (7th ed. 1999)]. A settlor who creates a revocable trust typically retains the power to revoke the trust during his or her lifetime.

All revocable trusts are "inter vivos" or "living" trusts; that is, trusts that are created and become operational during the lifetime of the settlor. Since a settlor can revoke a trust only while the settlor is living, a revocable trust may be created only during the settlor's lifetime. In contrast, trusts created by will are known as "testamentary trusts" and are always irrevocable [see § 70.10[3]; see also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions ]. Although an inter vivos trust can be either revocable or irrevocable, the terms "living trust" and "inter vivos trust" are almost always used to refer specifically to revocable inter vivos trusts.

Most revocable trusts become irrevocable at some point during their existence. Typically, this will occur on the settlor's death, although it is theoretically possible to establish a trust that will become irrevocable on the occurrence of an earlier contingency. It should be noted that for gifts made after 2009, except as provided in regulations, a transfer to a trust will be treated as a taxable gift, unless the trust is treated as wholly owned by the donor or the donor's spouse under the grantor trust provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 2511(c); see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 (grantor trust provisions)].

PRACTICE TIP:

If an initially revocable trust becomes irrevocable prior to the death of the settlor, an adverse gift tax consequence ordinarily will result. This is because there will be a completion of the gift of the remainder interest in the trust property upon the settlor's loss of the power to revoke the trust [ see I.R.C. § 2511(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b)]. In practice, it is difficult to conceive of a case in which a revocable trust is designed to become irrevocable prior to the settlor's death when it would not have been more logical simply to start with an irrevocable trust. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

When a trust is created by joint settlors, a portion of the trust usually becomes irrevocable on the first settlor's death, with the balance typically remaining revocable during the lifetime of the surviving settlor.

[2] Types of Revocable Trusts

There are many types of revocable trusts, and these trusts are often categorized according to their purpose, or according to the general pattern of distribution specified in the trust instrument. Some of the more commonly encountered terms used to describe specific characteristics of revocable (as well as testamentary) trusts are:

(1) "Pot" (or "family pot") trust, which describes a single trust fund or share with multiple beneficiaries (who, in the case of a "family pot" trust, are members of the same family; typically the children and grandchildren of the settlor).

(2) "Separate share" trust, which describes a trust set up for the benefit of only one income beneficiary; typically a child or grandchild of the settlor under an arrangement whereby a single trust instrument creates separate trusts for each beneficiary.

(3) "Sprinkling" trust, which describes a trust that gives the trustee discretion to allocate trust income and/or principal among the various trust beneficiaries in accordance with criteria specified in the trust instrument.

(4) "Marital deduction" trust, which describes a trust designed to avoid federal estate tax on the death of the settlor by naming the settlor's spouse as life beneficiary of the trust in a manner that will qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056]. Marital deduction trusts are further subdivided into "lifetime income/power of appointment" trusts [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)], "qualified terminable interest property" (or "QTIP") trusts [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], "qualified domestic trusts" (or "QDOTs") [see I.R.C. § 2056A], and "estate trusts" [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)]. Marital deduction trusts are discussed separately in Ch. 71.

(5) "Bypass" or "credit shelter" trust, which describes a trust that is designed to avoid taxation in the estates of both the settlor and the settlor's surviving spouse by taking advantage of the unified credit against federal estate and gift taxes [see I.R.C. § 2510]. Bypass trusts typically are used in conjunction with marital deduction trusts and are also discussed in Ch. 71.

(6) "Spendthrift" trust, which describes a trust designed to protect the trust assets from the creditors or prospective creditors of the beneficiary.

A given trust may possess a combination of the characteristics discussed above. Thus, for example, a bypass trust may also be a "sprinkling" trust as well as a "spendthrift" trust. Moreover, it is common for trust instruments to establish more than one individual trust, or to provide for division or (less frequently) combination of trusts at various points during the duration of the estate plan contemplated by the trust instrument.

[3] Uses

[a] Probate Avoidance

In California, revocable trusts are commonly created for the purpose of avoiding probate of the trust assets on the settlor's death. Because the trustee and not the settlor holds title to the assets, it is not necessary to subject the assets to probate administration when the settlor dies. The trustee continues to hold the assets after the settlor's death. This continuity of title is not affected by the settlor's death. If the settlor was the original trustee, a successor trustee (designated in the trust instrument or appointed by the court) will take over the original trustee's duties when the settlor dies. Settlers commonly serve as trustees of revocable inter vivos trusts without impairing the probate avoidance objectives of the trusts.

Probate administration is a highly regulated judicial procedure designed to conserve and marshal the assets of deceased persons, to assure that taxes and creditors' claims are properly paid out of the decedent's assets, and to distribute the assets to the persons entitled to distribution. However, it also can be expensive and time-consuming [see Ch. 65, Executors, for a general description of probate administration; see also California Probate Practice (Matthew Bender) for detailed coverage of the probate process]. The compensation of personal representatives and their attorneys is generally determined according to a statutory schedule based on the "value of the estate accounted for," without reduction for liens or encumbrances on the estate property [see Prob. Code §§ 10800 (personal representative), 10810 (attorney)]. Further, probate assets ordinarily cannot be distributed to the recipients until certain formalities have been complied with and the court has made an order for distribution [see Prob. Code § 11750 (responsibility of personal representative for distribution); see also Prob. Code §§ 11600-11642 (order for distribution)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Many of the comparisons between the time and expense involved in a formal probate administration and the time and expense involved in a private trust administration overlook the practical realities in a typical postmortem trust administration. With respect to the time involved, while many trusts theoretically can be distributed within days after the settlor's death, in practice this rarely happens and is often inadvisable. If the deceased settlor was one of two married settlors, frequently complex decisions regarding division and allocation of assets to various subtrusts must be made. In many cases, regardless of the identity of the settlors, a federal estate tax return must be filed and taxes paid. The return is not due until nine months after the settlor's death, and if taxes must be paid the decision is almost always made to wait until the due date to file the return and pay the taxes. If liquidity and/or solvency are problems (whether for payment of taxes or other claims and expenses), the trustee rarely will be free to make distributions before other higher priority cash needs are satisfied. Thus, many trust administrations will take as long to complete as the typical probate administration.

With respect to the expense, it is true that private trusts are not subject to statutory fees. However, attorneys and accountants are often involved in handling various aspects of trust administration, including taxes. Attorneys may bill monthly in private trust administrations, whereas in probate proceedings they typically wait until the conclusion of the administration to receive any fees. Especially in mid-sized estates ($500,000 to $1 million) where there are problems with creditors or others, the final expense may not be vastly different from that incurred in the probate situation. Also, it must be observed that in many cases when a relative is acting as the executor, no statutory commissions will be claimed (because the same person will inherit the funds which would otherwise be received as a fee subject to tax on earned income). While it is true that this same person would be unlikely to claim a fee for serving as trustee, it should be noted that automatically including the statutory executor's commissions in an expense comparison often ignores reality. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

All of this can be avoided if the settlor creates a revocable trust and transfers assets to the trustee during his or her lifetime. In some cases, however, it may not always be clear whether probate avoidance is desirable.

PRACTICE TIP:

For example, if siblings have never gotten along well and it seems likely that there will be disharmony after their parents have died, a formal probate proceeding may make more sense. When the court is involved from the beginning, many little arguments that might escalate into major litigation outside the court's view can be settled with less acrimony and expense. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

Further, probate will be avoided only to the extent that assets are actually transferred to the trustee while the settlor is living. If an asset is outside the trust when the settlor dies, that asset is not part of the trust and cannot be dealt with by the trustee or successor trustee. Unless the asset can be transferred in some other way (for example, by a judicial "set aside" or affidavit procedure), the asset will be subject to probate.

A full discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of probate is beyond the scope of this chapter. For a discussion of that subject, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning. For a detailed description of probate and the duties of personal representatives, see Ch. 65, Executors.

[b] Asset Management and Avoidance of Conservatorship

Asset management is the second major reason for creating a revocable trust. A settlor who is unable or unwilling to manage his or her own assets may prefer to transfer that responsibility to someone else. Asset management may be achieved by entering into a management contract with a professional investment adviser or manager, or by creating a trust and transferring the assets that are to be managed to the trustee. The trustee will have the responsibility for collecting income from the assets, paying expenses (including taxes) attributable to the assets, seeing to it that the assets are properly insured and maintained, and, when appropriate, selling the assets and investing the proceeds in other property.

Asset management is ordinarily a concern to two classes of persons: (1) those who are unsuited by training, experience, or natural ability to manage assets that they have acquired by inheritance or gift; and (2) persons who cannot manage their own assets because they are incapacitated, or who are concerned that they may become incapacitated at some later time. For example, spouses and children with little business experience or aptitude sometimes inherit substantial estates that they are ill-prepared to manage. Realizing their limitations, they may elect to transfer the assets to the trustee of a revocable trust so that the trustee will manage the assets. If the assets are valuable, they may select a trustee with professional property management experience (for example, a bank, trust company, or individual professional private fiduciary).

A person who has acquired a substantial estate through his or her own efforts may have no difficulty in managing the assets now, but may anticipate that he or she may lose interest or have difficulties in the future. Such a person may create a revocable trust, name himself or herself as the original trustee, designate another person (or bank) as the successor trustee, and authorize the successor trustee to take over the trust if and when the settlor no longer wants to manage the trust assets or becomes incapacitated. This will help to avoid the necessity for seeking the appointment of a conservator if the settlor ever becomes incapacitated [see Prob. Code § 1801(b) (conservator of estate may be appointed for person who is unable to manage own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence)]. Conservatorships, like probate proceedings, are highly regulated and typically involve expensive and time-consuming judicial proceedings [see Prob. Code §§ 1400-3925 (guardianship, conservatorship, and other protective proceedings)]. A revocable trust (particularly when executed in conjunction with a durable power of attorney for property management) [see Prob. Code §§ 4123(a), (b), (c), 4124, 4125, and discussion in § 60.17[7]] may avoid the need for a conservatorship.

[c] Preserving Privacy

The revocable trust is well suited to preserving the settlor's privacy, both during the settlor's lifetime and after the settlor's death. If assets are held in the name of the trustee, it may be possible to conceal the settlor's true identity as the owner of the trust assets. Third parties, such as brokers, transfer agents, and title insurers, may ask to examine the trust instrument (which will, of course, disclose the identity of the settlor), but the instrument itself is not a public document. It need not be recorded, and it can be shielded from unwanted public examination (except in the rare case when litigation concerning the affairs of the trust becomes necessary).

A property owner will rarely be concerned about concealing his or her identity as owner while he or she is living and capable of managing the property. However, an owner will often be concerned about protecting his or her privacy in the event of incapacity or death. If a conservatorship proceeding should ever become necessary, all records of the proceeding would be available for public inspection. The mere existence of the conservatorship proceedings would be embarrassing to many property owners and their family members. Further, after the property owner's death, probate proceedings may seriously impair the family's privacy. All documents filed in a probate proceeding are public documents and available for public inspection. This includes the will, the inventory of assets, the names and addresses of the heirs (and the proportions in which each will share in the probate estate), the existence and the amount of creditor's claims, and the details of any will contest or similar dispute. All of this can be avoided by a revocable trust, which is a private document (like a contract) and need not be recorded or filed with any court (unless, of course, the trust is the subject of litigation).

PRACTICE TIP:

While privacy is often touted as a strong reason for using a revocable trust as the central vehicle of one's estate plan, this is rarely a meaningful concern for most individuals. The typical person has financial affairs and an estate plan that would neither shock nor surprise his or her friends, relatives and neighbors. For this reason, most of us need not worry that some prying acquaintance will go to the courthouse to research our lives through our probate files. This virtually never happens, and in the rare cases when it does, there is little worth "hiding." Conversely, however, those who are famous (if only within their local community) or controversial, or who have wealth or estate plans that would surprise others who might inquire, will often decide to use revocable trusts precisely because of the privacy they offer. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[d] Saving Taxes

Clients sometimes are under the impression that revocable trusts may be used as tax-savings devices. As a general proposition, this is not true. Revocable trusts are often described as "tax-neutral"--that is, as a general rule they neither increase nor decrease overall income or estate tax liability. Because the settlor retains the power to revoke a revocable trust, no irrevocable transfer of the trust assets takes place until the settlor dies, and the settlor's assets therefore are included in the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2038]. Similarly, the income of a revocable trust is taxed to the settlor for federal income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 676].

Virtually any tax planning that can be achieved with a revocable trust can also be achieved through inter vivos gifts [see Ch. 60A, Gifts], testamentary gifts, or other means, with one important exception noted below. In fact, from a drafting standpoint, it is often easier to draft outright property dispositions that will achieve favorable tax consequences than it is to draft revocable trusts that will achieve comparable tax treatment. For example, it is a relatively simple matter to draft outright dispositions of property that will qualify for the federal estate tax marital or charitable deductions [see I.R.C. §§ 2055, 2056]. In contrast, revocable trusts must meet specific and often very technical requirements in order to qualify for these deductions [see I.R.C. §§ 2055(e)(2)(A), 2056(b); see also I.R.C. § 664; Chs. 71, 74].

The general rule that revocable inter vivos trusts are "tax-neutral" is subject to one important exception: A settlor may create a trust that will use the settlor's unified credit against federal estate and gift tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2010, 2505] to allow the trust assets to escape taxation on both the settlor's death and the death of the settlor's surviving spouse, while concurrently giving the surviving spouse substantial rights and powers (but not absolute control) over the trust assets. This is done by naming the surviving spouse as life beneficiary of the trust, and in some cases as trustee as well, and then giving the surviving spouse as much control over the trust assets as the tax laws allow. If such a trust is properly drafted, the surviving spouse will not be treated as owner of the trust even though he or she has considerable practical control over it, and the remaining trust assets will pass to the remainder beneficiaries (typically the settlor's children and issue). This result could not be achieved by an outright gift of assets to the surviving spouse, since the spouse would then own those assets outright and the assets would be included in the spouse's taxable estate. This is the basic principle behind so-called "bypass" or "credit shelter" trusts, which are an important tool in family estate planning. As might be expected, these trusts must be carefully drafted to assure that they do not run afoul of the tax laws by granting the surviving spouse too much power, thereby causing inclusion of the trust property in the surviving spouse's estate. Bypass trusts are generally used in conjunction with marital deduction formula trusts [see the forms in §§ 70.202[2] and 70.203[2], which contain marital deduction and bypass trusts], and are discussed in greater detail in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.14.

PRACTICE TIP:

These same tax planning devices may be incorporated into a will that includes testamentary trusts, with the same estate tax results. Furthermore, the mere use of a revocable trust does not automatically guarantee the availability of any of these advantages. Rather, as is the case with testamentary trusts, the instrument must be carefully drafted to include appropriate provisions that will provide for the optimal use of the unified credit against gift and estate taxes and the unlimited marital deduction (as well as other tax-saving planning tools). Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[4] Choosing Between Revocable Trust and Testamentary Trust

[a] In General

A revocable inter vivos trust differs from a testamentary trust in important ways. Unlike a revocable inter vivos trust, a testamentary trust generally cannot be used to avoid probate [see [b], below]. A testamentary trust also may not be used to obtain property management during the settlor's lifetime [see [c], below] or to preserve the settlor's privacy [see [d], below].

Although a will may be executed long before the testator's death, a testamentary trust does not come into being until the testator dies. Further, a testamentary trust usually does not become effective until the will is admitted to probate and the court orders that property be distributed to the trustee pursuant to the will. When the court makes an order of distribution to a trustee named in the will, it determines the existence and validity of the trust and describes all of the property that passes to the trustee. The terms of the order of distribution supersede the terms of the will, except when there is an ambiguity in the order and it is necessary to refer to the will to resolve the ambiguity [see California Wills & Trusts, § 110.08[2] (Matthew Bender)].

Certain small estates may be transferred to a testamentary trust without the necessity of first probating the estate. For example, if the gross value of all of the decedent's real and personal property in California does not exceed $100,000, the trustee may collect money, receive tangible personal property, or have a chose in action transferred to the trustee by filing an affidavit with the person or persons holding the money, property, or chose in action [Prob. Code § 13100; see Prob. Code § 13006(a) (testamentary trust as "successor of the decedent")]. A similar procedure may be used to transfer real property to the trust when the gross value of all of the decedent's real property located in California does not exceed $20,000 [see Prob. Code §§ 13200-13210; see also Prob. Code § 13006(a) (testamentary trust as "successor of the decedent")].

PRACTICE TIP:

In practice, it is rare to come across real property located in California with a gross fair market value of less than $20,000. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

The trustee may also petition the court for an order transferring real or personal property to the trust when the value of the estate does not exceed $100,000 [see Prob. Code §§ 13150-13158].

PRACTICE TIP:

A so-called "pourover will" (one that adds the residue of the probate estate to a revocable inter vivos trust) can yield the same result as the transfer of property to a testamentary trust as described above. However, it may be more difficult to convince third parties to recognize the authority of the trustee of a testamentary trust that has not been established pursuant to a court order than it would be to get the same third parties to recognize the authority of the trustee of a revocable trust. Moreover, there is a question whether one would ever choose to create a trust with total assets of less than $100,000. This would rarely make sense in light of the expenses in fees, higher tax brackets and tax preparation charges to which the small trust would be subject. If the concern is the protection of a minor's interest in property, it will usually be more expedient to use a custodial arrangement under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [ Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

However, these "summary" procedures are available only when the estate is small and only when it is deemed expedient to proceed without a court order establishing and funding the trust. In most cases, it is either necessary or preferable to proceed through formal probate proceedings to determine the existence and terms of a testamentary trust and to determine the identity and value of all of the trust property.

[c] Asset Management Considerations

Since a testamentary trust does not come into existence until after the death of the settlor, it obviously cannot be used to obtain property management during the testator's lifetime [see § 70.10[3][b] for discussion of the use of revocable trusts for property management]. However, a testamentary trust can be used to provide for management of property after the testator's death. For example, the testator's spouse or children may be unable to personally manage property that the testator wishes to leave to them. If the property is left in trust rather than devised outright, it will then be managed by the trustee until such time as it is distributed or the trust is terminated.

[d] Privacy Considerations

Since wills that create trusts are typically probated, a testamentary trust cannot be used to preserve the testator's privacy, or the privacy of family members [see § 70.10[3][c] for discussion of the use of revocable trusts to preserve privacy]. The terms of the will, the nature and amount of the assets, and the identities and shares of the beneficiaries all become a matter of public record during probate proceedings.

[e] Testamentary Formalities

Since a testamentary trust can be created only by a valid will, the trust instrument must be executed with all of the formalities required for the execution of a will. This means that it must be properly signed by the testator and at least two witnesses [see Prob. Code § 6110 and discussion of the execution and attestation of wills in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms ].

PRACTICE TIP:

Testamentary trusts may also be established under holographic wills meeting the requirements set forth in Probate Code Section 6111. Of course, holographic wills are often fraught with problems, and are more likely to be contested than formal, witnessed wills. Given the complexity inherent in creating any testamentary trust, the use of a holographic will to establish a testamentary trust is strongly discouraged. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

An inter vivos trust instrument need not be witnessed [see § 70.11 for discussion of the execution requirements for inter vivos trust instruments].

PRACTICE TIP:

While there may not be the same specific, formal requirements surrounding the execution of a trust instrument as there are for a will, proper execution of a trust instrument is important in order to clearly establish that the trustee and settlor understand and accept the terms of the trust(s) to be established pursuant to the instrument. Additionally, sound practice dictates that in most instances the signatures of the trustee and settlor be acknowledged before a notary public. While contests of revocable inter vivos trusts are relatively rare, this may be because their use has only begun to be broadly popular in recent years. It can be anticipated that with the increasing number of deaths of settlors of such trusts in the coming years, there will be a corresponding increase in the number of contests of those trusts. Prudence requires that formal and consistent procedures be established for the execution of revocable trust instruments as part of one's office practices. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[f] Time and Expense of Administration

The various advantages of revocable trusts over testamentary trusts must be balanced against the time and expense of startup and administration associated with revocable trusts.

When a revocable trust is created, assets must be retitled in the name of the trustee, and a separate bank account must be established. These startup costs usually will substantially exceed the cost of simply having an attorney draft a will that contains a testamentary trust. A testamentary trust, in effect, defers these costs until after the client's death, when many of them will eventually be covered by statutory commissions to personal representatives and statutory attorneys' fees payable in probate proceedings. Some clients may opt for this immediate saving, even when it will ultimately increase expenses to the estate by subjecting the estate to probate costs, because they would rather see the shares of their heirs reduced than incur additional expense during their own lifetimes.

Further, after the trust is operational, separate records must be kept, and the settlors must respect the legal formalities of the trust as a separate entity when dealing with trust property. As a practical matter, this may be bothersome to persons who are used to dealing freely with their own property. If someone other than the settlor is the trustee, the settlor will have to deal with the trust assets through the trustee, rather than directly. Moreover, a third-party trustee such as a bank or trust company will charge a fee for management of the trust assets. When a testamentary trust is used, these issues will arise, if at all, only after the settlor's death.

For discussion of the startup procedures for revocable trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 140, Implementing the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender).

[5] Choosing Between Revocable Inter Vivos Trust and Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trust

Revocable inter vivos trusts differ from irrevocable inter vivos trust in one obvious key respect: revocability. Although this difference in itself is relatively simple to understand, the consequences that flow from the difference have enormous importance.

Since the right to revoke a trust is an important and valuable right, a settlor will usually give up that right only in return for some advantage. Typically, this advantage will be a tax advantage. As discussed in [3][d], above, a revocable trust is not treated as a separate entity for tax purposes. In contrast, irrevocable trusts that meet applicable tax requirements are treated as separate entities for federal income and estate tax purposes. Income generated by the trust is taxed to the trust itself, or to the trust beneficiaries, rather than to the settlor, and trust assets will not be subject to estate taxation in the settlor's estate when the settlor dies.

Creation of an irrevocable trust, or transfer to an existing irrevocable trust, may generate gift tax liability to the settlor or donor at the time of transfer. However, any subsequent appreciation in the trust assets ordinarily is removed from the settlor's estate, and thereby may escape some or all of the estate and income tax to which it otherwise would be subject.

The essential difference between the uses of revocable versus irrevocable trusts in estate planning may be better understood if the irrevocable trust is thought of as a gift substitute and the revocable trust is thought of as a probate substitute. An irrevocable trust is used to give property away during the settlor's lifetime, while a revocable trust is used to retain the property during the settlor's lifetime and pass it to designated beneficiaries without probate after the settlor's death.

Detailed discussion of irrevocable trusts is beyond the scope of this chapter. For discussion, see Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts. For discussion of the tax consequences of creating a revocable trust, see § 70.10[3][d]. For detailed coverage of the use, planning, and drafting of irrevocable inter vivos trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 114, Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[6] Presumption of Revocability

Prob. Code § 15400 provides that a trust is revocable by the settlor unless expressly made irrevocable by the trust instrument. This rule creates a presumption of revocability, which may be overcome only by an express statement in the instrument. However, Prob. Code § 15400 applies only if [Prob. Code § 15400]:

- The settlor is domiciled in California when the trust is created;
- The trust instrument is executed in California; and
- The trust instrument provides that the law of California governs the trust.

The California presumption of revocability is contrary to the majority rule in the United States [see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 114, Irrevocable Inter Vivus Trusts, § 114.02[3] (Matthew Bender)]. In most states, a trust is irrevocable unless the settlor reserves the right to revoke when the trust is created [California-Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 768, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 (presumption of revocability has been rule in California since 1931 and applies to trusts created since then)]; see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Rev. Comm'n Reports 1207, 1268 (1986)]. Because clients who have executed trust instruments often move from state to state, and because the loss of the power to revoke a trust can be devastating, it is essential when drafting any trust instrument to clearly state whether the settlor reserves the power to revoke the trust [see § 70.12[5]].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.11

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.11 Creation

[1] Settlers

A person who establishes a revocable trust is referred to as the "settlor," "grantor," or "trustor." The California statutes generally use the term "settlor" [see, e.g., Prob. Code § 15201], and that term therefore has also been adopted in this publication. The Internal Revenue Code and implementing regulations use the term "grantor" [see, e.g., I.R.C. §§ 671-679].

A trust may be created by more than one settlor, acting jointly. Although the Probate Code does not specifically state that a trust can be created by more than one person [see, e.g., Prob. Code §§ 15200, 15201], the practice is extremely common, and references in the code to "joint settlers" clearly indicate that such arrangements are contemplated [see, e.g., Prob. Code §§ 15209(b), 15401(b)]. Joint settlers usually are married persons, although unmarried cohabiting persons, and, less frequently, other persons, also sometimes create trusts as joint settlers.

[2] Elements of a Trust

[a] In General

In California, four elements are essential to the creation of an "express" trust [ California-Nevada Annual Conf. of the United Methodist Church v. St. Luke's United Methodist Church (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 754, 767, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442] :

- Intent [see Prob. Code § 15201; see also [b], below];
- Property [see Prob. Code § 15202; see also [c], below];
- A purpose [see Prob. Code § 15203; see also [d], below]; and

- At least one beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 15205(a); see also [e], below].

An "express" trust is a trust that is declared in express terms and that arises from the voluntary action of the settlor or settlors and the trustee [Black's Law Dictionary (6th ed. 1990) at 1511]. A trust is not an "express" trust if it is classified as a "resulting" trust or a "constructive" trust. A "resulting" trust is a trust that arises when property is transferred under circumstances showing that the transferee was not intended to take a beneficial interest in the trust property [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 404]. A "constructive" (or "involuntary") trust is a remedy imposed by a court of equity to compel a person who wrongfully holds property that belongs to another to transfer the property to the rightful owner [ Calistoga Civic Club v. City of Calistoga (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 111, 117, 191 Cal. Rptr. 571 ] . For a discussion of the classification of trusts, with detailed discussion of the differences between "express" trusts, "resulting" trusts, and "constructive" trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 80 Introduction to Trusts, § 80.03 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Intent

An express trust is created only if the settlor properly manifests an intention to create a trust [Prob. Code § 15201]. Although no particular words are necessary to create a trust, the language used must unequivocally manifest an intention that the trust property be held by the trustee for the benefit of the beneficiary or beneficiaries [ Estate of Shaw (1926) 198 Cal. 352, 360, 246 P. 48 ; Hayden Plan Co. v. Wood (1929) 97 Cal. App. 1, 9-10, 275 P. 248 ] . The intention to create a trust is typically manifested in a written document called a trust "instrument" [see [3], below].

PRACTICE TIP:

In most instances, trusts are established under declarations rather than agreements. Thus, the only formally expressed "intention" is generally found in the settlor's consent to and/or acceptance of the terms of the trust as declared by the trustee. It is for this reason that all of the forms in this volume for declarations of trust specifically provide for the execution of the instrument by the settlor as well as by the trustee. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[c] Property

A trust is created only if there is trust property [Prob. Code § 15202]. This element is generally satisfied when property is transferred to the trustee to be held pursuant to the terms of the trust instrument. It has been held that at least under some circumstances, simply listing an asset in a schedule attached to and incorporated by reference into a trust instrument may suffice to transfer the asset to the trust [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 (trust created by declaration of trust); Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (trust created by declaration of trust); see Prob. Code § 15200(a) (trust may be created by a declaration by the owner that he or she holds property as trustee); see also § 70.11[3][b]]. However, the proper practice is to formally retitle the asset in the name of the trustee [for discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender); see also discussion of trust funding in [4], below].

Although each item of property held by the trustee need not be described in detail, the trust property must be capable of being readily identified [see Garrison v. Edward Brown & Sons (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 473, 480 ; Estate of Northcutt (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 683, 688-689, 107 P.2d 607 ] . Broadly inclusive property descriptions, such as "all of my property" or "all of the property I own at the time of my death," will usually be sufficient, although more specific descriptions may be necessary for specific items, such as cash or a cash equivalent [see Molera v. Cooper (1916) 173 Cal. 259, 261, 160 P. 231 ; Ilse v. Burgess (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 654, 656, 83 P.2d 527 P.2d527]. This is only the minimum legal requirement, however. In the revocable trust context, the proper practice is to include a clear and detailed description of all trust assets, either in the trust instrument itself or, more frequently, in a schedule attached to and incorporated by reference into the trust instrument.

[d] Purpose

A trust must have a purpose [see California Wills & Trusts, Requisites of a Valid Trust, § 90.05[1] (Matthew Bender)]. Although a trust may be created for any purpose that is not illegal or against public policy [Prob. Code § 15203], the purpose must be reasonably certain [ Estate of Ralston (1943) 1 Cal. 2d 724, 726, 37 P.2d 76 ; Estate of Berges (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 106, 110, 142 Cal. Rptr. 635 ]. If the stated purpose is not definite enough for the trust to be carried out, the purpose is not reasonably certain and no trust is created [ Estate of Gaines (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 255, 265-266, 100 P.2d 1055 ].

PRACTICE TIP:

Occasionally, the exact purpose of the trust will be expressly stated in the instrument. For example, the document may explain that the settlor's purpose in creating the trust is primarily to provide for a particular beneficiary, with the interests of all other beneficiaries being of secondary importance. Similarly, a trust may specifically state that it is the settlor's purpose in creating the trust to provide for the education of a particular individual or to provide supplementary payments for the "special needs" of a beneficiary receiving public benefits payments. More often, however, the exact purpose of the trust is not stated expressly, but may be inferred from the specific provisions of the trust, most particularly its dispositive provisions. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

A private (that is, non-charitable) trust may be created only if there is at least one beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 15205(a)]. A beneficiary may be an individual or a class of individuals. When the beneficiary is a class, the members of the class must be ascertainable with reasonable certainty [Prob. Code § 15205(b)(1)]. The requirement of a beneficiary may also be satisfied if the trustee or some other person is given the power to select the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 15205(b)(2)].

The beneficiary or beneficiaries of a charitable trust may be designated with less specificity than the beneficiary or beneficiaries of a non-charitable trust. Since it is the nature of most charitable trusts to bestow their benefits broadly on large numbers of people, the courts have generally sustained charitable trusts when the beneficiaries have been designated only in a very general way [see Fay v. Howe (1902) 136 Cal. 599, 601-603, 69 P. 423 ("deserving aged native-born in the town of Southboro, Massachusetts"); In re Estate of DeMars 20 Cal. App. 2d 514, 515-516, 67 P.2d 374 (1937) ("the poor soldiers [of] Letterman Hospital")].

A settlor may be the beneficiary, provided that all of the interests in the trust (legal and equitable) are not united (or "merged") in the settlor [see Prob. Code § 15209]. All of the interests in a trust are not united in the settlor merely because the settlor is the trustee and also has a lifetime interest in the trust property, provided other persons will have interests in the trust property after the settlor's death [see Prob. Code § 15209].

[3] Trust Instrument

[a] Nature and Types

A revocable inter vivos trust typically is created by a written document known as the "trust instrument." There are two basic forms of trust instruments: the "trust agreement" and the "declaration of trust."

A "trust agreement" is a two-party instrument by which the settlor transfers property to the trustee and the trustee agrees to hold it in trust under terms of the agreement. If, as is often the case, the settlor is also to serve as trustee, he or she will execute the agreement in both capacities. If the settlor and the trustee are different persons, each will execute the agreement in his or her individual capacity.

A "declaration of trust" is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument. Only the trustee is required to execute the declaration. However, it is common for the settlor to sign the declaration to signify his or her approval of the terms of the trust.

[b] Use

Either a trust agreement or a declaration of trust, when properly drafted, will create a valid trust. Prior to 1993, the choice was largely a matter of individual preference. Attorneys who preferred the trust agreement format often did so on the ground that when a client is to act both as trustee and settlor, the agreement format requires the client to sign in both capacities and thus emphasizes for the client the distinction between the two roles. However, the 1993 case of Estate of Heggstad [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433] has prompted many estate planners who preferred trust agreements to re-evaluate their preference. In Heggstad, the court of appeal held that a parcel of real property that was described as a trust asset in a schedule attached to the trust declaration was trust property even though it had never been formally conveyed to the trust. The court specifically referred to language in Prob. Code § 15200(a) that permits a trust to be created by a "declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee" [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 ; see also Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ] . The court did not speculate on whether the result would have been the same if the trust in question had been created by a trust agreement rather than a declaration, but since the result under a declaration is clear, many California estate planners now recommend that revocable trusts be created by declarations rather than trust agreements.

[4] Funding

[a] In General

The process of transferring property to a trust (or, more precisely, to the trustee) is commonly referred to as "funding" the trust. The benefits of a revocable inter vivos trust generally are not available unless the trust is properly funded. For a discussion of the process of transferring property to a trust, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender).

Most assets held by a typical settlor may be used to fund a revocable trust. Cash, securities, and real property are commonly transferred to revocable trusts. Some assets, however, cannot be held in a trust, may be unsuitable for inclusion in a trust, or are subject to special rules when held in a trust. These assets include professional practices and corporations, unincorporated businesses, general partnership interests, joint tenancy property [see [e], below], untitled personal property, S corporation stock [see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1379 and discussion in [f], below], and I.R.C. § 1244 stock [see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.21]. For a more detailed discussion of assets that are unsuitable for a revocable trust, or that are subject to special problems or restrictions when held in trust, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Devices, § 3.05[2][e] (Matthew Bender) and California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 94, Trust Property (Matthew Bender).

A revocable trust may be funded with community property [see [b], below], separate property [see [c], below], or a combination of the two [see [d], below].

[b] Community Property

Often, the bulk of a married couple's estate will consist of community property [for discussion of the rules governing the characterization of property as separate or community property, see Ch. 121, Provisions for Division of Property, §§ 121.30-121.40]. When a community property asset is transferred to a revocable trust, it is usually desirable to preserve the community property character of the asset. One reason for doing so is that each spouse's rights to the ultimate management and control of the property are thereby preserved. Another reason is that in the event of a complete or partial revocation of the trust, the parties will be restored to the status with regard to their property that existed prior to its transfer to the trust.

Moreover, retention of community property status has an important tax advantage. When one spouse dies, only one-half of the community property is included in the deceased spouse's gross estate for federal tax purposes, whereas all of the deceased spouse's separate property is included [see I.R.C. § 2033 (property in which decedent had an interest)]. Nevertheless, both halves of the community property receive a new basis determined by the fair market value of the property at the time of the deceased spouse's death [see I.R.C. § 1014(b)(6)]; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, for a detailed discussion]. If the property has appreciated substantially since it was purchased, and if the property is later sold, this valuation (commonly called a "stepped-up" or "double stepped-up" basis) may produce substantial income tax savings. For further discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Device, § 3.04[5][d] (Matthew Bender).

The character of community property may be preserved after it has been transferred to the trust if the trust instrument provides that the trust is revocable as to the community property during the marriage and that the power, if any, to modify the trust as to the rights and interests in the community property during the marriage may be exercised only with the joinder or consent of both spouses [Fam. Code § 761(a)]. When a revocable inter vivos trust is funded with community property, it is common for the spouses to act as joint or co-settlors of the trust. A revocable inter vivos trust instrument typically will provide that the entire trust is revocable during the joint lifetimes of the settlors, and that after the death of the first settlor, the survivor will retain the right to revoke the trust as to his or her share of the community property during the survivor's lifetime.

Unless the trust instrument expressly provides otherwise, a power to revoke as to community property may be exercised by either spouse acting alone [Fam. Code § 761(b)]. This rule operates as an important exception to the general rule that except as otherwise provided in the trust instrument, each settlor may revoke the trust as to the portion of the trust property contributed by that settlor [see Prob. Code § 15401(b)]. In one case involving a trust that was revocable at any time during the life of either spouse and that was funded with community property, revocation by the surviving spouse after the first spouse's death resulted in one-half of the trust assets being returned to the surviving spouse and the other half being disposed of according to the deceased spouse's will. Under Prob. Code § 100, the community property in the trust was transmuted at the first spouse's death to separate property. Therefore, survivor's revocation was effective only as to his half of the trust corpus [ Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ].

If either settlor's statutory right to unilaterally revoke the trust as to community property is restricted, it is likely that the settlor will be held to have made a taxable gift to the remainder beneficiaries on transfer of the property to the trust [see I.R.C. § 2511(a) (tax applies whether gift is direct or indirect); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b) (cessation of donor's dominion or control over property constitutes gift), (f) (relinquishment or termination of power to change beneficiaries of transferred property completes gift)]. Therefore, revocable trusts typically provide that each settlor will have the power to unilaterally revoke the trust as to community property [see § 70.12[5][c]; for forms, see §§ 70.201[2], P 3.01, 70.202[2], P 3.01].

When married persons establish a revocable trust, it is common for them to name themselves as co-trustees. When the settlors are co-trustees, it is a good idea for the trust to delineate the extent of their powers over community property as trustees, as distinct from their revocation powers as settlors [see §§ 70.201[2], P 6.06, 70.202[2], P 6.06].

[c] Separate Property

A revocable inter vivos trust may be funded with the separate property of a married person. When that is done, the married person will often serve as the trustee. However, the spouse or some other person may act as the trustee or co-trustee without affecting the separate property character of the trust property [see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 111, Revocable Inter Vivos Trusts, § 111.05[2] (Matthew Bender)]. When a joint settlor contributes his or her separate property to a revocable trust, that settlor will retain the right to unilaterally revoke the trust as to that property, unless the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 15401(b); see § 70.12[5][c]].

[d] Separate and Community Property

Married persons who wish to fund a revocable inter vivos trust with a combination of separate and community property may create either separate trusts for the different types of property or a so-called "mixed property trust" that includes both separate and community property. Many estate planners believe that it is easier to deal with separate and community property in separate trusts, and recommend that approach when possible. In addition, mixed property trusts are usually more difficult to draft. When separate trusts are used, separate provisions can be drafted to suit each type of property, and the danger of inadvertent commingling can be avoided. Nevertheless, mixed property trusts are commonly used, in part because some clients are reluctant to accept multi-trust plans that they may regard as confusing and complex.

When a mixed property trust is created to hold community property, it is desirable to have the community property retain its community property character in the trust [see [b], above]. This may be done by including a trust provision making the trust revocable by either spouse as to the community property [see [b], above; see also Fam. Code § 761].

Furthermore, the trust instrument should spell out the differences between the rights of the parties with respect to community property and their rights with respect to separate property. Typically, each spouse will have absolute management and control rights with respect to that spouse's separate property, and no rights with respect to the management and control of the other spouse's property. If, as is commonly the case, the joint settlors name themselves as co-trustees, their powers as trustees (as opposed to their powers as settlors) should be delineated in a similar manner.

Married persons who wish to create a revocable inter vivos trust with a combination of separate and community property may also consider the option of transmuting the property before it is transferred to the trust. Community property may be transmuted to separate property, and separate property may be transmuted to community property. However, transmutations are subject to special rules designed to protect the rights of the spouses [see Fam. Code §§ 850-853]. For coverage of transmutation agreements, see Ch. 112, Postnuptial Agreements .

[e] Joint Tenancy Property

Many married couples hold title to their real property in joint tenancy. However, property held in joint tenancy form may actually be community property, regardless of the form in which title is held [see Tomaiier v. Tomaiier (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 754, 146 P.2d 905 (evidence admissible to show that parties intended property to be community property, regardless of form of title)]. This rule, coupled with the effect of the California transmutation statutes [see Fam. Code § 852], can generate difficult questions regarding the true character of property held in joint tenancy form [see, e.g., Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911]. Moreover, a direct transfer of joint tenancy property to a trust automatically severs the joint tenancy interest [see Civ. Code § 683.2(a)] and raises issues as to whether the resulting interests are community property, or separate property held as tenants in common. For discussion of these issues, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Devices, § 3.06[1][b] (Matthew Bender). To avoid these problems, experienced estate planners recommend that when joint tenancy property is transferred to a revocable trust, the property always should first be converted to community property by means of a transmutation agreement or conveyance. For discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust, § 140.06[9][a] (Matthew Bender).

[f] S Corporation Stock

S corporation stock may be transferred to a trust, but only after the consequences of the transfer are carefully considered. An S corporation is a small business corporation that has elected to be taxed as a partnership rather than a corporation under Subchapter S of Chapter 1 of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1379]. To qualify for taxation under Subchapter S, a corporation must have no more than 100 shareholders [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004; for earlier tax years, the corporation must have no more than 75 shareholders). All of the shareholders (except for estates, certain qualifying trusts, and tax-exempt organizations described below) must be individuals [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997; for earlier tax years, the shareholders must all be individuals, except for estates and certain qualifying trusts), and none of the shareholders can be nonresident aliens [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(C)]. The corporation cannot have more than one class of stock [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D)].

To qualify as a shareholder in an S corporation, an organization must be a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock-bonus plan described in I.R.C. § 401(a), and exempt from income taxation under I.R.C. § 501(a), or a tax-exempt organization described in I.R.C. § 501(c)(3) that is exempt from income taxation under I.R.C. § 501(a) [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B), (c)(6)].

A trust may hold stock in an S corporation if statutory requirements are met. If a citizen or resident of the United States is treated as owner of all the trust under the grantor trust rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in § 60.15[3][b]], the trust may properly hold the stock during the owner's lifetime and for two years thereafter [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(i), (ii)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996), and the deemed owner or the deemed owner's estate will be treated as the shareholder [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(i), (ii)]. If stock is transferred to a trust as a result of a will, the trust may continue to hold it for two years after the stock is transferred to it [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(iii)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996) and the estate of the testator will be treated as the shareholder [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(iii)]. If a trust was created primarily to exercise the voting power of S corporation stock, it may properly hold the stock without time limitations [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(iv)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996), and each beneficiary will be treated as a shareholder [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(iv)].

A Qualified Subchapter S Trust (QSST) may also hold stock in an S corporation without time limitations [I.R.C. § 1361(d)]. A QSST is a trust that distributes all of its income to one person who is a citizen or resident of the United States [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(B)]. A substantially separate and independent share of a trust may also qualify as a QSST if it distributes all of its income to one person who is a citizen or resident of the United States [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(B)]; see I.R.C. § 663(c) (separate shares treated as separate trusts). The terms of a QSST must require, among other things, that there will be only one income beneficiary during the life of the current income beneficiary [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(A)]. During the current beneficiary's lifetime, the trust will not cease to qualify as a QSST merely because there may be multiple beneficiaries after the current beneficiary's death [see I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(A)]. The beneficiary or legal representative must elect to have the trust treated as a QSST [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(1), (2)].

In tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, an Electing Small Business Trust (ESBT) may also hold stock in an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(v)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996); I.R.C. § 1361(e) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996). The rules for ESBTs vary according to the applicable tax years. For tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, and before January 1, 1998, a trust will qualify as an ESBT if it does not have as a beneficiary any person other than an individual, an estate, or a qualified charitable beneficiary, which holds a contingent interest and is not a potential current beneficiary [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(i)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, and before January 1, 1998); see I.R.C. § 170(c)(2)-(5) (qualified charitable beneficiaries, other than governmental organizations). For tax years beginning after December 31, 1997, a trust will qualify as an ESBT if it does not have as a beneficiary any person other than an individual, an estate, or a qualified charitable beneficiary or, if they hold only contingent interests and are not potential current beneficiaries, state governments, or U.S. possessions, or any of their political subdivisions, or the United States or the District of Columbia [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(i)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997); see I.R.C. § 170(c)(1)-(5) (qualified charitable beneficiaries). In all cases, the trust will qualify as an ESBT only if no interest in the trust was acquired by purchase and the trustee makes the necessary election [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(ii), (iii)]; see I.R.C. § 1361(b)(3) (election). An ESBT may not be a QSST for which there is a current election or a trust that is exempt from income taxation [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(B)]. If a trust qualified as an ESBT, each potential current beneficiary will be treated as a shareholder of the S corporation [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(v)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996)].

Because the rules relating to S corporations are technical and complex, any transfer of S corporation stock to a trust should be planned with care. Any transfer of S corporation stock to a trust that will cause the corporation to lose its S status should be avoided. For example, stock in an S corporation should not be transferred to a trust with more than one beneficiary if the effect of the gift would be to raise the number of shareholders to more than 75 [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996; for earlier tax years, the corporation must have no more than 35 shareholders)]. If an S corporation's status has been terminated, it cannot make another election for five years, unless the IRS consents [I.R.C. § 1362(g)]. However, a termination may be disregarded if the circumstances leading to it were inadvertent, if steps are taken to cure it within a reasonable time, and if the corporation and its shareholders agree to make any adjustments that may be required for the period of termination [I.R.C. § 1362(f)].

For a detailed discussion of S corporations and the Subchapter S election, see Ch. 2B, Electing Subchapter S Status .

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 70.12 Drafting

[1] In General

[a] General Principles Governing Construction of Trust Instruments

Prior to 1995, the general Probate Code rules governing the construction and interpretation of wills said nothing about the applicability of those rules to inter vivos trusts, resulting in uncertainty over the extent to which these rules applied to trusts that were not created by will. This uncertainty was clarified in 1994 when the Legislature repealed the then-existing provisions governing the construction of wills [see Stats. 1994, ch. 806, § 21, repealing Prob. Code §§ 6140-6179, eff. Jan. 1, 1995] and substituted a similar series of provisions [Prob. Code §§ 21101-21140] that apply to wills, trusts, deeds, and "any other instrument[s]" [Prob. Code § 21101].

Enactment of these statutes means that the general rules applicable to construction of wills are now expressly applicable to inter vivos trusts. Rules that are especially significant in the context of inter vivos trusts are the survivorship rules [see Prob. Code § 21109], the "anti-lapse" statute [see Prob. Code § 21110], the construction of gifts to "heirs" [see Prob. Code § 21114], the rules governing persons included for purposes of class gifts [see Prob. Code § 21115(a)], and the rules for interpretation of language and resolution of inconsistencies [see Prob. Code §§ 21120, 21121]. These rules are discussed generally in the Legal Background to Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, and specifically in the comments to the relevant forms in Ch. 63, Will Provisions .

The paramount rule in the construction of trusts, as in wills, is that the intent of the settlor (or testator) controls the legal effect of all dispositions made in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. The statutory rules of construction apply only when the intention of the transferor is not indicated by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(b)]. However, these provisions do not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)].

The drafting of a trust instrument is not governed by rigid rules of style or format, but rather by general considerations of clarity, precision, and simplicity. The legal formalities applicable to wills (and testamentary trusts) are inapplicable to revocable trusts. Because the intention of the testator is controlling [Prob. Code § 21102(a); see discussion in [a], above], an attorney's goal in drafting a trust instrument should be to record the settlor's intentions accurately, to avoid ambiguities and uncertainties, and to anticipate problems that are likely to arise in interpreting or construing the instrument.

Under case law, the test is not what the settlor intended to say, but what the settlor intended by what he or she in fact said in the instrument [see Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Duffill (1923) 191 Cal. 629, 642, 218 P. 14; Kropp v. Sterling Sav. & Loan Assn. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1044-1045, 88 Cal. Rptr. 878]. Further, a trust instrument must be construed on the basis of the instrument as a whole and not on the basis of an individual provision or provisions in the instrument [see Prob. Code § 21121; Estate of Bixby (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 819, 824, 13 Cal. Rptr. 411, 362 P.2d 43; Brock v. Hall (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 885, 887, 206 P.2d 360]. If a court is called upon to construe a trust instrument, it must examine the entire instrument with a view to discovering the settlor's general scheme, plan, or purpose [see County Nat. Bank etc. Co. v. Sheppard (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 205, 215, 288 P.2d 880; Estate of Raymond (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 808, 814, 216 P.2d 515] and read each word or phrase in the light of the entire instrument rather than as an isolated statement of intention [see Estate of Raymond (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 808, 814, 216 P.2d 515; Randall v. Bank of America (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 249, 252, 119 P.2d 754; Lawrence v. Wilson (1919) 44 Cal. App. 690, 693, 187 P. 30; see also Prob. Code § 21120 (instruments interpreted to give every provision some effect)].

[c] Style and Organization of Trust Instrument

The statutory rules that bear on the creation of a trust are almost wholly substantive [see § 70.11[2] for discussion of the elements of a valid trust]. They do not prescribe any rules of style, and do not specify how a trust instrument must be organized. Generally, any logical organization that is designed to reflect the settlor's intentions and to avoid ambiguities and uncertainties will be sufficient. However, certain conventions regarding trust organization have developed over the years. The trust forms in this chapter generally follow those conventions. For illustrative purposes, the discussion that follows is largely geared to those trust forms and the conventions reflected in them.

PRACTICE TIP:

While the order in which the various provisions of a properly drafted trust instrument may vary from practitioner to practitioner, most of the individual elements of such a trust as explained in this chapter are incorporated by all experienced practitioners. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[2] Name of Trust

The trust instrument should establish the name of the trust. If more than one trust is created by the instrument, each trust should be named.

The name of a trust may include appropriate identifying information, such as the name of the settlor, the name of the person or family for whose benefit the trust is created, and the year in which the trust is created. For example, a revocable inter vivos trust created by John A. Smith in 1994 could be named the "John A. Smith 1994 Trust" [see § 70.200[2], P 1.02]. Similarly, a revocable inter vivos trust created in 1994 by Robert B. Jones and Jenny C. Jones could be named the "Jones Family 1994 Trust" [see § 70.201[2], P 1.02] or the "Robert B. Jones and Jenny C. Jones 1994 Trust." The inclusion of the year of creation in the name of the trust will help to distinguish the trust from other trusts that may be created in subsequent years by the same settlor or settlors for similar purposes. For example, John A. Smith may create another trust in 1995 and name that trust the "John A. Smith 1995 Trust."

If more than one trust is created by a trust instrument, the instrument may give a collective name to those trusts and state that each separate trust created under the instrument will be referred to by adding the name or designation of the separate trust as it appears in the appropriate Paragraph of the instrument [see §§ 70.202[2], P 1.02, 70.203[2], P 1.02].

The trust name, as well as information identifying the instrument creating the trust, will be used when property is transferred to the trustee. The instrument of transfer will name the trustee and identify him or her as trustee. For example, a deed conveying real property to the revocable inter vivos trust created by Robert B. Jones and Jenny C. Jones might designate the grantees as "Robert B. and Jenny C. Jones as trustees under the Jones Family 1994 Trust, created by declaration of trust dated June 1, 1994."

[3] Family Information

The trust instrument should include basic information about the settlor's family and marital status. If the settlor has children or grandchildren who are to be beneficiaries of the trust, stating their names and birthdates will serve a useful purpose. Distributions often occur on specific birthdays, and setting forth the beneficiaries' birthdates will help the trustee determine when the distributions are to be made.

[4] Trust Estate

[a] Definition

The trust instrument often will include language identifying the trust property and subjecting that property to the authority of the trustee. This will typically be done by including a definition of the words "trust estate" and stating that the "trust estate" will be "held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument" [see §§ 70.200[2], P 2.01, § 70.201[2], P 2.01, § 70.202[2], P 2.01, § 70.203[2], P 2.01].

The trust property may be identified in the trust instrument itself, or included in an attached schedule. Most estate planners prefer to use a schedule of assets to avoid having to include a long list of assets among the substantive provisions of the trust instrument, and because a schedule can be amended without affecting the rest of the trust instrument.

PRACTICE TIP:

Experienced practitioners do not rely on the schedule of assets attached to the trust instrument to fund the trust. Rather, they formally transfer each asset into the name of the trustee. Accordingly, many practitioners do not amend the schedule of assets originally attached to the trust, but they do include a statement in the trust instrument itself explaining that the trust estate will include all assets set forth on the schedule of assets "together with such other assets as may be transferred to the trustee from time to time." Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

If the trust uses the trust declaration format [see § 70.11[3]], a provision specifying that property is included in the trust estate may be sufficient, in and of itself, to create a trust with respect to that property, even if the property is never formally conveyed to the trustee [see Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 (trust created by declaration of trust); see also Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (trust created by declaration of trust); Prob. Code § 15200(a) (trust may be created by a declaration that owner holds property as trustee)]. The result is less clear if the trust agreement format is used [see § 70.11[3]]. In either case, however, the proper practice is to formally transfer each asset to the trust by means of an appropriate written instrument [see §§ 70.11[2][c], [4][e]; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender)].

[b] Characterization of Property

Special provisions may be necessary to protect the character of trust property as separate property or community property [see § 70.11[4]]. If the trust is to be a "mixed trust" including both community and separate property [see §

70.11[4][d]], the instrument typically will state that community property will continue to be community property after it is transferred to the trust, and that separate property will continue to be separate property [see §§ 70.201[2], P 2.02, § 70.202[2], P 2.02].

[c] Additions

Trust instruments typically include provisions specifying whether the trustee is authorized to accept additions to the trust and, if so, from what sources. Revocable inter vivos trusts typically are not funded all at once. The settlors will often contribute some property to the trust at the time of creation, and add more property in later years. It is also common for settlors (acting in their capacity as trustees) to withdraw property from revocable inter vivos trusts from time to time and to replace the withdrawn property with other property. For this reason, it is almost always advisable to authorize the trustee to accept additions to a revocable inter vivos trust from the settlor(s) [see § 70.230[2] (additions by settlors only)]. In most cases, the settlors will also wish to authorize the trustee to accept additions from third parties as well [see §§ 70.200[2], P 2.02, § 70.201[2], P 2.03, § 70.202[2], P 2.03, § 70.203[2], P 2.02]. In rare cases, the trustee will be prohibited from accepting additions [see § 70.231[2] (form)].

[5] Revocability and Amendment

[a] In General

Every revocable inter vivos trust instrument should include a clause clearly stating that the trust is revocable and specifying how and by whom it may be revoked. Failure to include such a clause may endanger the revocability of the trust, with possibly disastrous consequences for the settlor's estate plan [see § 70.10[6]]. Additionally, if a settler wishes to make a particular method of revocation the only way to revoke a trust, care must be taken to ensure the revocation clause is explicitly exclusive, or revocation of trust by way of statute may be held to be valid [Prob. Code § 15401(a)(2), see Masry v. Masry, (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 738, 740, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 915 (Family trust provided trustors power to revoke by writing delivered to the other trustor, however as revocation provision was not explicitly exclusive, revocation by delivering notice of revocation to oneself as trustee was held valid and in compliance with Prob. Code § 15401(a)(2))].

The trust instrument should also specify how and by whom the trust may be amended. Although a power to revoke might appear at first glance to include a power to amend, trusts created by joint settlors typically distinguish between the power to revoke and the power to amend, and restrict the latter to preclude one spouse from changing the terms of the trust without the other's knowledge or consent [see [f], below].

[b] Revocation by Sole Settlor

If the trust has only one settlor, the instrument will typically state that the trust may be amended, revoked, or terminated by the settlor, in whole or in part, at any time during the settlor's lifetime [see §§ 70.200[2], P 3.01, 70.203[2], P 3.01]. The trust will then become irrevocable on the settlor's death.

[c] Revocation by Joint Settlers

If there are two settlors, the revocation clause must be drafted with more care. If the trust is funded in whole or in part with community property, and if the settlors wish the community property to retain its community character after it has been transferred to the trust, the clause must contain language providing that the trust will be revocable as to community property during the joint lifetimes of the settlors [Fam. Code § 761(a); see §§ 70.201[2], P 3.01, 70.202[2], P 3.01]. By statute, such a power to revoke as to community property is exercisable by either spouse acting alone, unless the trust instrument provides otherwise [Fam. Code § 761(b)]. For tax reasons, it is inadvisable to restrict this power of revocation in the trust instrument. If either settlor's statutory right to unilaterally revoke the trust as to community property is restricted, it is likely that the settlor will be held to have made a taxable gift to the remainder beneficiaries on transfer of the property to the trust [see I.R.C. § 2511(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b) (relinquishment of dominion and control over property may constitute taxable gift)].

If the trust is to be a "mixed property trust," containing both community property and separate property, the revocation provisions should give both spouses the unilateral power to revoke the trust as to community property, and a spouse who contributes separate property the unilateral right to revoke the trust as to that property [see § 70.11[3][d]; see also §§ 70.201[2], P 3.01, 70.202[2], P 3.01]. Such a provision will reinforce the general statutory rule (applicable to all property other than community property that will retain its community property character after being transferred to the trust) that unless the instrument provides otherwise, each settlor may revoke the trust as to the portion of the trust contributed by that settlor [Prob. Code § 15401(b)].

[d] Revocation by Surviving Settlor

When there are two settlors, the instrument must also state whether all or part of the trust can be revoked after the death of the first settlor. In practice, at a minimum, the surviving settlor is usually given the right to revoke the trust as to the survivor's own separate property, and his or her share of the settlors' community property. This is done (1) because the survivor normally will want to be able to exercise ultimate control over his or her own property; and (2) to avoid the gift tax problems that can result when a settlor gives up his or her right of management or control over the trust property [see [a], above]. To facilitate this division, the survivor's share of the property is commonly segregated into a separate "survivor's trust" after the death of the first spouse, and that trust remains revocable by the surviving spouse during his or her lifetime [see § 70.12[6][f]; see also § 71.15 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions].

Under some circumstances, the surviving settlor may also be given the power to revoke the trust as to a portion of the deceased spouse's assets. Such a power will, of course, deprive the deceased settlor of a substantial measure of control over the ultimate disposition of his or her own property because the survivor may then revoke the trust and dispose of the property as he or she wishes at any time. However, in a significant number of cases, the clients' desire to give the surviving spouse maximum control over the couple's assets may overcome concern over the ultimate disposition of those assets. When a nonformula marital deduction trust is used, the entire trust may simply remain revocable by the surviving settlor, if desired. In the typical formula marital deduction trust, the surviving settlor's share is divided into assets qualifying for the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056] and assets intended to pass under the deceased settlor's unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010; see also Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.12]. If desired, the surviving settlor may be given the power to revoke the trust as to the portion of the assets designed to qualify for the marital deduction, although this deprives the deceased settlor of any control over what ultimately happens to those assets. When the marital deduction share is made revocable in this manner, it is often lumped together with the survivor's share of the trust assets, and both shares are placed in a single lifetime income/power of appointment marital deduction trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see also Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.15[4]]. However, the surviving settlor may not be given the power to revoke the trust as to the portion of the assets designed to qualify for the unified credit of the deceased spouse (in other words, the assets earmarked for the bypass trust) without defeating important tax purposes of the trust. For more detailed discussion of these issues in the context of the marital deduction and marital deduction planning, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

[e] Manner of Revocation

If the trust instrument specifies the manner in which the trust may be revoked, the trust can only be revoked in that manner [Prob. Code § 15401(a)(1)]. The settlor should specify in the trust instrument how the trust is to be revoked, remembering that the method specified will control [see Gardenhire v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 882, 890, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 143; Conservatorship of Irvine (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1344-1345, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587 (amendment of trust)].

When a trust expressly permits revocation during the settlor's lifetime by written notice signed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee, and the settlor does not limit or qualify the term "written notice," the settlor is deemed to have authorized revocation by any writing that unambiguously manifests his or her intention to revoke the trust, including a will [ Gardenhire v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 882, 888, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 143 ]. The power to revoke a trust by will need not be specifically and expressly stated in the trust [ Gardenhire v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 882, 893-895, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 143 ].

Typically the instrument will provide that a revocation can be accomplished by a written instrument, signed by the settlor or settlors and delivered to the trustee [see §§ 70.200[2], P 3.01, 70.201[2], P 3.03, 70.202[2], P 3.03, 70.203[2], P 3.01]. If there are two settlors and the instrument permits a revocation by one settlor acting alone, the instrument will typically require the revoking settlor to deliver a copy of the revoking instrument to the other settlor as well as to the trustee [see §§ 70.201[2], P 3.03, 70.202[2], P 3.03].

[f] Amendment

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, if a trust is revocable by the settlor, the settlor may amend or modify the trust by the procedure prescribed for revocation of the trust [Prob. Code § 15402]. Since the method prescribed in the trust instrument for revocation is binding on the settlor [see Prob. Code § 15401(a)(1) and discussion in [e], above], the same method controls the manner in which the trust may be amended or modified and is equally binding on the settlor [ Conservatorship of Irvine (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1344-1345, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587 ].

In a one-settlor trust, there is no reason why the settlor's power to amend the trust should not be coextensive with the power of revocation. The appropriate section of the trust should simply give the settlor the absolute power to revoke or amend the trust instrument.

In the case of a two-settlor trust, the power to amend the trust usually will not be coextensive with the power of revocation. With respect to community property, the trust is usually made revocable by either spouse, as discussed in [c], above [see Fam. Code § 761(a), (b)]. However, to preserve the character of community property in the trust, the trust instrument must provide that the power to modify (i.e., amend) the trust as to the rights and interests in community property during the marriage may be exercised only with the joinder or consent of both spouses [Fam. Code § 761(a); see § 70.11[4][b]]. This requirement prevents one spouse from amending the trust to effect a unilateral transmutation of the other's community property. If the trust is a "mixed trust" containing separate as well as community property, it should give each settlor the right to amend the trust with respect to his or her separate property, to avoid depriving either settlor of control over his or her own assets.

[g] Revocation or Amendment by Conservator

The trust instrument may also confer the right to revoke or amend the trust on a third party or parties acting for or on behalf of the settlor or settlors.

If a conservator is appointed for a settlor, whether or not the conservator will have the power to exercise a right of revocation or amendment held by the settlor depends on the provisions of the trust instrument. A conservator may petition the court for an order authorizing the conservator to revoke or amend the trust [see Prob. Code § 2580(b)(11)]. However, the court may not grant that authority if the trust instrument evidences an intent to reserve these rights exclusively to the settlor, if the instrument expressly provides that a conservator may not revoke or amend the trust, or if the instrument otherwise evidences an intent that would be inconsistent with authorizing the conservator to exercise the power of revocation or amendment [Prob. Code § 2580(b)(11); see Johnson v. Kotyck (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87-88, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 ]. If the instrument is silent on the issue of revocation or amendment by the conservator, the court will have authority to decide whether the conservator should be permitted to exercise the right [see Prob. Code § 2580(b)(11)].

It is not necessary to address the issue of revocation or amendment by a conservator if the power is conferred on an attorney in fact acting under a durable power of attorney [see [h], below].

[h] Amendment or Revocation by Attorney in Fact

A durable power of attorney for property management is a versatile instrument that can play an important part in a comprehensive estate plan [see Prob. Code §§ 4123(a), (b), (c), 4124, 4125; see also Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.17[7]]. The proper use of a durable power of attorney can help to avoid many difficult problems that would otherwise have to be addressed by a conservator [see § 70.10[3][b]]. When an attorney in fact is given authority to act for the principal, the authority can be limited, qualified, or conditioned in any way the principal deems appropriate.

A trust may not be modified by an attorney in fact acting under a power of attorney unless the trust instrument expressly permits such a revocation [Prob. Code § 15401(c); but see Prob. Code § 15401(e) (rule applicable only to instruments executed on or after July 1, 1987; prior trusts governed by prior law)]. However, this impediment can be avoided by including a trust provision giving any attorney in fact acting under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act the power to exercise the settlor's power to revoke or amend the trust [see §§ 70.200[2], P 3.04, 70.201[2], P 3.09, 70.202[2], P 3.09, 70.203[2], P 3.04; see also Prob. Code §§ 4001, 4124-4127, 4206, 4304, 4305 (Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act)]. The trust instrument may limit the attorney in fact's authority by providing that the attorney in fact can amend or revoke the trust only if distribution of the settlor's estate is not substantially altered by the amendment or revocation, and no adverse tax consequences result to the estate [see §§ 70.200[2], P 3.04, 70.201[2], P 3.09, 70.202[2], P 3.09, 70.203[2], P 3.04].

Some settlors will be reluctant to grant any person, even an attorney in fact chosen by the settlor, authority to amend or revoke the trust. A settlor who harbors such misgivings may provide that the power of the attorney in fact to act for or on behalf of the settlor will not extend to the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust [see §§ 70.200[2] (optional language in P 3.04), 70.201[2] (optional language in P 3.09), 70.202[2] (optional language in P 3.09), 70.203[2] (optional language in P 3.04); see also § 70.240[2] (statement that power of revocation is personal to settlors)]. A provision of this kind can be drafted so that it will prohibit any amendment or revocation by a conservator as well as an attorney in fact [see §§ 70.200[2] (optional language in P 3.04), 70.201[2] (optional language in P 3.09), 70.202[2] (optional language in P 3.09), 70.203[2] (optional language in P 3.04)].

[6] Payments and Distributions

[a] In General

The payments and distributions provisions of the trust instrument specify who will receive money or other property from the trust, in what amounts or proportions, and when. As used in this chapter, the word "payments" generally applies to trust income, and the word "distributions" to trust principal [see discussion in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.37]. The payments and distributions provisions of the trust instrument must be carefully planned. They must be mutually consistent and drafted in such a way as to avoid inconsistencies or inaccuracies that run the risk of frustrating the settlor's plans or the trust's goals.

[b] Accumulations of Income

When the beneficiaries of a trust are minors or young adults, settlors sometimes prefer to accumulate income, in whole or in part, rather than paying it out to the trust beneficiaries. However, because of the compressed income tax rates applicable to income of trusts [see I.R.C. § 1(e)], accumulations of income can have undesirable tax consequences [for discussion of the income taxation of trusts and estates, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.15]. These tax consequences must be balanced against the benefits of accumulation to determine whether or not accumulation is desirable. One alternative may be to pay income to a custodian of a minor under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925], although the maximum age by which custodial property must be distributed under the UTMA [see Prob.

Code §§ 3920, 3920.5] may be younger than that preferred by many clients [for discussion of the UTMA, see the Legal Background to Ch. 60A, Gifts]. Often clients will opt for accumulation even after considering the unfavorable income tax consequences. For additional discussion of mandatory accumulations of income, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 95, Trust Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal, § 95.06[2].

[c] Mandatory and Discretionary Distributions

Trust payments and distributions may be either mandatory or discretionary. Mandatory payments and distributions are fixed by the terms of the trust instrument and must be made by the trustee once all terms and conditions for the distributions have been satisfied. Typical mandatory provisions include provisions for the periodic distribution of all income, the distribution of a fixed amount of principal when the beneficiary reaches a stated age, or a right in the beneficiary to demand payment of specified amounts of income and/or distribution of principal from the trustee. Mandatory distributions are simple, easy to follow, and place less responsibility on the trustee. However, they also lack flexibility.

In contrast, discretionary payments and distributions are not fixed by the terms of the trust instrument. Rather, the trust instrument sets out specified criteria for payments and distributions, and allows the trustee to apply these standards in determining whether payments of distributions are proper. Typically, these standards are related to the financial needs of the beneficiaries. A commonly used standard is the so-called "ascertainable standard," under which income and/or principal may be distributed as need for the "health, education, support, and maintenance" of the beneficiary.

Discretionary payments and distributions provide greater flexibility and for that reason are often more desirable than mandatory payments and distributions. However, the discretionary aspect of the payments creates tax pitfalls, and under some circumstances adverse tax consequences may result if too much discretion is given to the trustee. The danger arises when a trustee is also a beneficiary of the trust, or owes a legal obligation of support to a beneficiary of the trust. For income tax purposes, a trustee who has the power, exercisable solely by himself or herself, to vest income or principal of any portion of the trust in himself or herself, is treated as the owner of that portion of the trust and is taxed on the income from that portion of the trust, whether or not that income is actually paid to the trustee [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)]. This is not always the determinative factor, but it must be taken into account in appropriate cases in deciding whether or not to provide for discretionary payments and distributions.

More importantly, a trustee/beneficiary who has an unrestricted power to appoint any portion of the trust income to himself or herself is deemed to have a general power of appointment over the trust assets, and those assets will be included in the trustee's estate [I.R.C. § 2041] unless appropriate precautions are taken. A trustee in this situation is commonly referred to as a "sensitive" trustee. In such a situation, the trust drafter may avoid inclusion of the property in the trustee's estate by either (1) limiting the trustee's power by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)] (see above); (2) providing that the trustee may exercise the power only with the concurrence of another person who is either the creator of the power (i.e., the settlor) or who has a substantial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise of the power (i.e., another trust beneficiary) [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)]; or (3) appointing a "special trustee" to make all distributions to the trustee/beneficiary. For more detailed discussion of the tax considerations generated by discretionary payment and distribution powers in the trustee, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 96, Powers of Trustee, § 96.08[3], and Ch. 95, Trust Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal, §§ 95.06[1][c], [3][d] (Matthew Bender).

[d] During Settlor's Lifetime

The payments and distributions provisions of a revocable inter vivos trust instrument usually give the settlor free and unrestricted access to the principal and income of the trust as long as the settlor is living. Since the settlor is treated as the owner of the trust property for both income and estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 676 (income tax), 2038 (estate tax)], there is no tax reason to restrict or limit the settlor's access to the income or principal.

Free and unrestricted access to the trust income may be insured by either requiring the trustee to pay all of the income to the settlor, or by giving the settlor the right to demand income at any time and for any reason [see §§ 70.200[2], P 4.01, 70.201[2], PP 4.01, 4.02, 70.202[2], PP 4.01, 4.02, 70.203[2], P 4.01]. If the trustee is to be required to pay all of the income to the settlor, the instrument will ordinarily provide that the payments are to be made at regular intervals (for example, monthly, quarterly, or annually) [see §§ 70.200[2], P 4.01, 70.203[2], P 4.01].

The settlor's right to trust principal may be ensured by giving the settlor the right to demand principal at any time and for any reason, or by giving the trustee discretion to make principal distributions to the settlor whenever the trustee determines that the settlor needs principal [see §§ 70.200[2], P 4.02, 70.201[2], PP 4.03, 4.04, 70.202[2], PP 4.03, 4.04, 70.203[2], P 4.02]. As long as the settlor retains the power to revoke the trust, it can be expected that the trustee will be generous in satisfying the settlor's needs for principal.

[e] Payment of Taxes, Debts, and Expenses

On the death of a settlor, arrangements need to be made for payment of the expenses of the settlor's estate, and for death taxes. These items are charges against the settlor's estate, and the executor (if there is one) of the settlor's estate has a duty to pay them [see Prob. Code §§ 11401 ("debt" defined), 11420-11424 (payment), 11640(a),(c) (payment of debts as condition for final distribution of estate)]. If a decedent does not make different arrangements, the beneficiaries' shares of the estate will abate to pay these expenses in the manner prescribed by the Probate Code [Prob. Code §§ 21400-21405; for discussion of the statutory abatement rules, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.416]. However, if the governing instrument provides a different pattern for abatement, that pattern will control [Prob. Code § 21400]. If the bulk of a decedent's assets are in a revocable trust, it may make sense to provide for the payment of these expenses from the trust assets, and specify the trust shares from which payment will be made [see §§ 70.200[2], PP 5.02 (death taxes), 5.03 (expenses), 70.201[2], PP 5.02 (death taxes), 5.03 (expenses), 70.202[2], P 5.02 (death taxes, debts, and expenses), 70.203[2], PP 5.02 (death taxes), 5.03 (expenses)].

Special Probate Code rules govern the payment of estate taxes [see Prob. Code §§ 20100-20125]. With specified exceptions [see Prob. Code § 20110(b)(2) (federal law controls)], these rules basically provide that estate taxes will be equitably prorated among the persons interested in the estate [Prob. Code § 20110] in the proportion that the value of the property received by each person bears to the value of property received by all persons interested in the estate [Prob. Code § 20111]. In making this proration, allowances for credits, deductions, and other adjustments allowed by the federal tax law are factored in [Prob. Code § 20112(a)], so that persons who receive property for which a deduction or credit is allowed are not charged with a proportionate share of the overall tax liability. For more detailed discussion of the statutory proration rules, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.310[1]. Since a revocable trust can generate substantial estate tax liability, the trust instrument should specify how that liability is to be discharged.

The statutory proration rules provide a method of apportionment that generally will be fair, equitable, and in accord with the decedent's intentions. Therefore, many revocable trusts, including the trust forms in this chapter, contain a provision adopting or essentially restating the statutory proration rules, and providing that they will govern allocation of tax liability attributable to the trust assets [see §§ 70.200[2], P 5.02, 70.201[2], P 5.02, 70.203[2], P 5.02 (optional language)].

However, a settlor or decedent has the power to vary the statutory rules governing the proration of taxes [Prob. Code § 20110(b)(2)]. For example, if most of the decedent's assets are held in a revocable trust, the decedent may want to provide that all estate taxes will be paid out of the trust assets [see §§ 70.200[2], P 5.02, 70.201[2], P 5.02, 70.202[2], P 5.02, 70.203[2], P 5.02 (optional language)]. Conversely, if the decedent wants certain assets to pass tax free, either under the revocable trust or the decedent's will, the estate plan may be structured accordingly.

The statutory procedure for prorating estate taxes does not include consideration of future income tax consequences.

Unless income tax consequences can be ascertained with reasonable certainty for purposes of equitable reallocation at the time of distribution, the beneficiaries of an estate are responsible for paying their own future income taxes [ Klein v. Hughes (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 121, 128-131, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 613] .

In a marital deduction trust, tax apportionment provisions must be structured with a view toward preservation of the marital deduction. Ordinarily, this means that the tax apportionment provision should not designate a specific source or fund out of which death taxes are to be paid if any part of that fund is intended to qualify for the marital deduction. For additional discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 23, Provisions for Payment of Taxes, Expenses, and Debts, § 23.03[2][c], [d] (Matthew Bender).

Coordination between the settlor's will and the revocable trust instrument is important. The attorney should make certain that any tax payment provisions in both instruments are consistent and appropriate considering the respective amount of assets that will pass through the trust and the probate estate. For example, it makes little sense to require estate taxes to be paid out of the residue of the decedent's probate estate if the bulk of his or her assets are in an inter vivos trust.

PRACTICE TIP:

It is crucial that boilerplate tax allocation clauses not be used in the estate planning process, regardless of whether or not a revocable trust is being employed. Just as important as coordinating the tax provisions of the settlor's will with those appearing in the trust instrument is the task of determining which assets will become part of the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes and which of those assets will generate an estate tax liability. For example, in addition to probate assets and assets held in the revocable trust, a settlor's gross estate might include assets held in qualified plan or individual retirement accounts, as well as proceeds of insurance policies insuring the life of the settlor. The specific tax provisions used must take into account both the potential sources of tax liability as well as the potential sources of payment of the tax. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

For more detailed coverage of will and trust provisions covering the apportionment of taxes, expenses, and debts, see 1 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 23, Provisions for Payment of Taxes, Expenses, and Debts (Matthew Bender).

[f] After Death of First Settlor in Two-Settlor Trust

In a two-settlor trust, it is necessary to specify what will happen to the trust assets after the death of the first settlor. In theory, it is possible to provide simply that the trust will be terminated and its assets distributed to the survivor. Doing so, however, would eliminate the advantages of probate avoidance on the survivor's death [see § 70.10[3][a]], asset management for the survivor [see § 70.10[3][b]], and, in the case of married settlors, the tax advantages that may be available through the use of bypass ("credit shelter") trusts [see § 70.10[3][d]; see also Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.11, for discussion of marital deduction planning and the role of bypass trusts]. In practice, therefore, the trust almost always continues for the lifetime of the surviving settlor.

The rights of the surviving settlor to receive principal and income should be specified in the trust instrument. In the case of trusts designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056] and/or the federal unified credit against estate and gift taxes [I.R.C. § 2010], the distribution rights of the parties are shaped to an important degree by the requirements of the federal estate tax laws. If the joint settlors are not married to one another (i.e., they are unrelated cohabiting individuals or have some other relationship, such as parent and child), the trust drafter has much greater flexibility.

In the usual case, the settlors are married persons and all or part of the trust assets are community property. When the first settlor dies, the trust assets are usually divided into two or more new trusts [see § 71.12 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ]. One of these trusts will contain the survivor's separate property and his or her share of the community property. This trust is commonly referred to as the "survivor's trust." The settlor will usually have the broadest possible powers to receive income and principal from this trust during his or her lifetime [for discussion of survivors' trusts, see § 71.15 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions]. The remaining assets consist of the deceased spouse's separate property and his or her share of the community property. In most cases, the trust will be designed so that some or all of this property will qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056]. If a marital deduction formula trust is used, a formula will provide for a further division of assets into a share designed to qualify for the marital deduction and a second share designed to qualify for the unified credit [I.R.C. § 2010]. The marital deduction share will be placed in a marital deduction trust, which will be either a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] (which may be combined with the survivor's share in a single trust) or a Qualified Terminable Interest Property ("QTIP") Trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. In either case, all the income of the marital deduction trust must be payable to the surviving spouse. The surviving spouse may also be given rights to receive or request trust principal.

The portion of the trust assets designed to qualify for the unified credit are placed in a "bypass" or "credit shelter" trust, the terms of which usually provide for distribution of some portion of the income to the surviving settlor. A bypass trust may also permit or require the distribution of income or principal to other persons, such as the settlors' children. The terms of the bypass trust must be drafted carefully to avoid inclusion of the bypass trust principal in the surviving settlor's estate, which would defeat the whole purpose of the bypass trust. The limitations applicable to payments and distributions from bypass trusts are discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.14.

This discussion presents only a very brief and simplified overview of the structure of the typical marital deduction trust; these trusts, and the applicable income and distribution requirements, are discussed in detail in Ch. 71.

[g] After Death of Sole Settlor

When a sole settlor dies, the trust assets often pass to one or more income beneficiaries. If the settlor is married, the income beneficiary may be the spouse of the settlor, under a marital deduction trust similar to that which would be used in a testamentary marital deduction trust [see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.210], and more or less comparable (with allowance for the special issues presented in a two-settlor trust) to that described for joint settlors in [c], above. If the settlor is not married at the time of death, the beneficiaries may be children, grandchildren, issue, or other persons.

When children and/or issue are to be the trust beneficiaries, the settlor must decide whether the trust should be divided into separate shares for the individual beneficiaries, or whether the assets should be retained in a single "family pot" trust. The general characteristics of each approach, and their respective advantages and disadvantages, are discussed in § 70.210[1][b] and in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, §§ 64.200[1] and 64.203[1]. As a general proposition, a family pot trust provides greater flexibility to address the individual circumstances of each beneficiary, but is more likely to generate animosity among beneficiaries because of the unequal treatment they may receive under the "sprinkling" provisions of a family pot trust. In contrast, separate trusts give each beneficiary a predetermined share of the total assets, but provide less flexibility to accommodate beneficiaries whose needs may be significantly different from one another.

If the beneficiaries are children or issue, the trust commonly will either accumulate income until the beneficiaries reach a stated age, or provide for limited payments of income for the support of the beneficiaries until they reach a stated age. It is also common to provide for distributions of principal for support of the beneficiaries if the income of the trust is insufficient for that purpose. As beneficiaries get older, they may be given increased rights to demand income and principal from the trust. In the usual case, at some point the trust principal will be distributed to the beneficiaries and the trust will terminate. The distribution of principal may take place all at once, such as when the beneficiary attains the age of 30, or may occur in increments, such as the beneficiary's 25th, 30th, and 35th birthdays.

The trust should also specify what will happen if one of the remainder beneficiaries dies leaving issue surviving. In most cases, the deceased beneficiary's share will be divided among his or her issue according to one of the statutory patterns of distribution [see Prob. Code §§ 240, 245-247; for discussion of these patterns, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][d]], and thereafter will be distributed to the issue or held in trust for them for some specified period of time. Often a pattern of distribution identical to that specified for the settlor's children is used.

In unusual cases, a trust may be drafted so that it continues for one or more additional generations, subject to the limitations of the rule against perpetuities. A trust designed to continue for as long as legally possible is sometimes referred to as a "maximum duration trust."

[h] After Death of Surviving Settlor in a Two-Settlor Trust

After the death of the surviving settlor in a two-settlor trust, the trust (or multiple trusts created in a marital deduction trust plan) typically either terminate or continue for some period of time in favor of the ultimate beneficiaries, usually the children and/or grandchildren of the settlors. Any number of arrangements are possible, depending on the age and economic situations of the beneficiaries, as well as many other factors. The arrangement may involve separate share trusts or a single "pot trust" for all beneficiaries, or some combination of both. The drafter's options basically parallel those available on the death of a sole settlor (or the sole settlor's spouse), as discussed in § 70.12[6][f].

[i] Disclaimer Trust

A "disclaimer" is a writing that declines, refuses, renounces, or disclaims an interest in property that would otherwise be taken by a beneficiary [Prob. Code § 265]. If a person makes a "qualified disclaimer" [see I.R.C. § 2518(b)] of an interest in property, the interest will be treated for estate and gift tax purposes as if it had never been transferred to that person [I.R.C. § 2518(a)]. The requirements for a "qualified disclaimer" under federal and California law [see Prob. Code §§ 260-295] are discussed in Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.230[1].

A qualified disclaimer can be a valuable estate planning tool. Disclaimers can be used to shift assets from beneficiaries in high tax brackets to those in lower tax brackets, or to shift assets away from a marital deduction trust and into the hands of the remainder beneficiaries if it would be advantageous, for tax purposes or otherwise, to do so on the first settlor's death.

In order to constitute a "qualified disclaimer" for federal tax purposes, the disclaimed interest must pass, without any direction on the part of the person making the disclaimer, to the decedent's spouse or a person other than the person making the disclaimer [I.R.C. § 2518(b)(4)]. This means that in order to obtain the tax advantages that may be available through the use of qualified disclaimers, a preexisting mechanism must exist to enable the property to pass to the desired persons. The mechanism commonly used to achieve these advantages is a disclaimer trust. Basically, a disclaimer trust provides that any trust assets disclaimed by the primary income beneficiary of the trust will pass to a separate trust in favor of one or more other persons, typically the remainder beneficiaries [see Letter Rul. 200442047 (example of use of series of disclaimer trusts)]. Under the typical marital deduction trust plan, the disclaimer trust will have terms similar or identical to those of the bypass trust.

Most knowledgeable estate planners strongly recommend including a disclaimer trust provision in every trust, even when the parties do not anticipate making any disclaimers. The disclaimer trust greatly increases the flexibility available to the settlor's executor and the trustee, and may prove invaluable in meeting unanticipated contingencies. If no disclaimers are made, the disclaimer trust simply never becomes operative. All the complete trust forms in this chapter contain disclaimer trusts.

[j] Division of Trusts for Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Purposes

When a trust pays income to a person who is two or more generations below the generation of the settlor (such as a grandchild), a potential for generation-skipping transfer tax ("GST") liability exists [see I.R.C. §§ 2611(a), 2612, 2613(a)]. Although the GST tax has been repealed effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2664; see Ch. 60, Estate Planning , for a detailed discussion], until then it remains in effect. Proper planning can help minimize GST liability.

GST liability is computed by multiplying the maximum federal estate tax rate [see I.R.C. § 2001(c)(1)] by a number known as the "inclusion ratio" [I.R.C. § 2641(a)]. The inclusion ratio will always be a number between zero and one. A transfer with an inclusion ratio of zero is wholly exempt from the tax, while a transfer with an inclusion ratio of one is fully subject to the tax. Transfers with an inclusion ratio between zero and one are partly exempt and partly subject to the tax.

Every individual has an exemption (called the "GST exemption") [see I.R.C. §§ 2631(a), (c), 2010(c) and discussion in § 60.16[3]]. The transferor or the transferor's executor may allocate the exemption to any property subject to the tax [I.R.C. §§ 2613(a), 2632]. Allocations are made according to statutory rules in the absence of allocations by the transferor or transferor's executor [see I.R.C. § 2632]. The GST exemption is factored into the calculation of the inclusion ratio. It reduces the inclusion ratio of property to which the exemption is applied [see I.R.C. § 2642(a)]. If the exemption is applied against the full value of property, that property has an inclusion ratio of zero and is not taxed.

A trustee can establish inclusion ratios of zero and one by severing a trust that is subject to the GST tax in a "qualified severance." If a qualified severance is made, the trusts resulting from the severance are treated as separate trusts for purposes of the GST tax [I.R.C. § 2642(a)(3)(A), effective for severances occurring after December 31, 2000]. The severance may be made at any time [I.R.C. § 2642(a)(3)(C)]. A qualified severance is a division of a single trust and the creation of two or more trusts if the following requirements are met [I.R.C. § 2642(a)(3)(B)(i)]:

- The single trust was divided on a fractional basis; and
- The terms of the new trusts, in the aggregate, provide for the same succession of interests of beneficiaries as are provided in the original trust.

If a trust has an inclusion ratio of greater than zero and less than one, a severance is a qualified severance only if the single trust is divided into two trusts, one of which receives a fractional share of the total value of all trust assets equal to the applicable fraction of the single trust immediately before the severance. In that case, the trust receiving the fractional share will have an inclusion ratio of zero and the other trust will have an inclusion ratio of one [I.R.C. § 2642(a)(3)(B)(ii)].

Proposed treasury regulations explain the proper procedure, timing, and required reporting of a qualified severance, and the permitted methods of funding the trusts resulting from such a severance. Each new trust must receive assets with a value equal to a fraction or percentage of the total value of the trusts assets. For example, the severance of a single trust into one trust funded with 40 percent of the trust assets and another trust funded with the remaining 60 percent of the trust assets satisfies this requirement. Similarly, a severance stated in terms of a fraction of the trust assets such that one trust is to receive, for example, that fraction of the trust assets the numerator of which is $1,500,000 and the denominator of which is the fair market value of the trust assets on a specified date, and the second trust is to receive the remaining fraction, satisfies this requirement. However, the severance of a trust based on a pecuniary amount (for example, one trust is to be funded with $1,500,000, and the other trust is to be funded with the balance of the trust corpus), does not satisfy this requirement [see Prop. Treas. Reg. § 26.2642-6(b)(3)]. Each separate trust need not be funded with a pro rata portion of each asset held by the original trust; they may be funded on a non pro rata basis if funding is based on the total fair market value of the assets on the funding date [Prop. Treas. Reg. § 26.2642-6(b)(3)].

The beneficiaries of each separate trust resulting from the severance need not be identical to those of the original trust.

For trusts that grant the trustee the discretionary power to make non pro rata distributions to beneficiaries, the separate trusts are considered to have the same succession of interests of beneficiaries if the following qualifications are satisfied:

- The terms of the separate trusts are the same as the terms of the original trust.
- The severance does not shift a beneficial interest in the trust to any beneficiary in a lower generation than the person or persons who held the beneficial interest in the original trust.
- The severance does not extend the time for vesting of any beneficial interest in the trust beyond the period provided for in the original trust [Prop. Treas. Reg. § 26.2642-6(b)(4)].

A qualified severance must be reported by taking all of the following steps [Prop. Treas. Reg. § 26.2642-6(c)]:

- Filing a Form 706-GS(T) (Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Return for Terminations) and writing "Qualified Severance" in red at the top.
- Attaching a "Notice of Qualified Severance" that clearly identifies the trust that is being severed and the new trusts created, and that provides the inclusion ratio of the trust that is being severed and the inclusion ratios of the new trusts.
- Filing the return and attached notice even if the severance does not result in a taxable termination.

Each complete trust form in this chapter contains a provision that (depending on the language selected) requires or permits the trustee to divide any trust created by the instrument into "exempt" and "non-exempt" trusts for purposes of allocating the GST exemption [see I.R.C. § 2631]. The exempt trust will contain property equal in value to the amount of the GST exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. It will have an inclusion ratio of zero and thus will not be subject to the tax. The non-exempt trust will contain the balance of the trust property. It will have an inclusion ratio of one and be fully subject to the tax. The trustee is authorized (but not required) to make distributions that would otherwise be subject to GST tax from the exempt trust, and distributions that are not subject to GST tax from the non-exempt trust.

This complex provision is designed to provide maximum flexibility in allocating the full generation-skipping transfer tax exemption. It helps assure that the entire GST exemption will be applied to property that would otherwise incur GST liability. In the usual case, distributions to children will be made from the non-exempt trust, while distributions to grandchildren will be made from the exempt trust. If desired, assets in the exempt trust may be left to grow for future generations. Moreover, this approach opens up other planning opportunities by allowing the trustee to pursue growth-oriented investments for the exempt trusts and income-oriented investments in the non-exempt trusts. For additional discussion of this type of planning, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies. For a more detailed discussion of the operation of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.16.

It is recommended that a provision such as the one described above be included in every revocable trust, even if the settlor does not anticipate any realistic possibility of GST liability. Predeceased beneficiaries and unanticipated increases in the value of trust assets may combine to generate GST liability when none was expected. If GST issues never arise, the provision simply never becomes operative. It is recommended that division of the trusts be made optional rather than mandatory, except when the size of the trust estate is large enough to make GST liability a virtual certainty.

[7] Trustee

[a] Appointment

Every trust must have at least one trustee. When the trust is created by a sole settlor, the settlor will often name himself or herself as the trustee. If the settlor is an older person, he or she may appoint an adult child to serve as trustee, or to serve as co-trustee with the parent [see [c], below, for further discussion of co-trustees].

Inter vivos trust instruments typically name the trustee or co-trustees in the introductory clause of the trust, which establishes the basic format of the instrument. If the instrument is a declaration of trust [see § 70.11[2]], the trustee (or co-trustees) will execute the declaration [see §§ 70.200[2], P 1.01, 70.201[2], P 1.01, 70.202[2], P 1.01, 70.203[2], P 1.01]. If the instrument is a trust agreement [see § 70.220[2]], the trustee (or co-trustees) will be designated as a party or parties to the agreement [for signature blocks for declarations of trust, see § 70.290[2]]. No other provision appointing or designating a co-trustee or co-trustees will be necessary. However, other provisions may be necessary to designate a successor trustee or co-trustees [see [b], [c], below].

The trust instrument should make some provision for an alternate or successor trustee (or co-trustees) to serve in the event any vacancy occurs in the position of trustee [see Prob. Code § 15660(b) (vacancy in office of trustee will be filled as provided in trust instrument)]. If the instrument makes no provision for alternates or successors, it is necessary to apply to the court for the appointment of a successor trustee [see Prob. Code § 15660(d) (authority of court to fill vacancy)].

The instrument may designate a successor or alternate trustee by name, or name several successors and specify the order (for example, first, second, and third) in which they will be entitled to serve [see §§ 70.200[2], P 6.02, 70.201[2], P 6.02, 70.202[2], P 6.02, 70.203[2], P 6.02]. The instrument may also authorize acting trustees or third parties to designate successor trustees, or may provide that the settlor or settlors will have the right to designate alternate or successor trustees while they are living [see §§ 70.200[2], P 6.02, 70.201[2], P 6.02, 70.202[2], P 6.02, 70.203[2], P 6.02]. In appropriate circumstances, the instrument may also give the beneficiaries the authority to designate successors. When the beneficiaries are given this right, the instrument will often specify that the right can be exercised by a majority of the adult beneficiaries who are then entitled to receive income under the trust, or who would be entitled to receive a distribution of principal if the trust were then terminating.

PRACTICE TIP:

Whenever any provision is included in the trust instrument authorizing anybody other than the settlor to nominate a successor trustee, consideration should be given to restricting the group of individuals or institutions from which a successor may be selected. For example, a certain group of individuals (e.g., the settlor's children) may be "sensitive trustees" for whom tax problems would be created if they were to serve as trustee. In other cases, the settlor simply may not like or trust a particular individual, such as a former spouse, an in-law, or an improvident child. In such cases, the instrument should be described as accurately as possible which individuals or groups may or may not be nominated to serve as successor trustee. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

For additional forms relating to the appointment of successor trustees, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division II, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Form 5.20 (Matthew Bender). For further discussion of alternate and successor trustees, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 93, Appointment of Trustees, § 93.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Co-Trustees

When a husband and wife join to create a revocable inter vivos trust, they will often name themselves as co-trustees [see §§ 70.201[2], P 1.01, 70.202[2], P 1.01]. This enables them to maintain personal control over the trust and often simplifies income tax reporting for the trust [see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 111, Revocable Inter Vivos Trusts, § 111.07 (Matthew Bender) for discussion of the income tax reporting requirements of revocable trusts].

When a husband and wife serve as co-trustees, special provisions should be made for successor trustees [see [b], above]. These provisions should adequately cover the possibility that only one of the co-trustees will cease to serve, or that both will do so. While the settlors (co-trustees) are living, they can be given the option to designate successors if either or both of them resign [see §§ 70.201[2], P 6.02, 70.202[2], P 6.02]. If one of the co-trustees ceases to serve and no successor is designated, the instrument can provide that the other co-trustee will act as the sole trustee [see §§ 70.201[2], P 6.02, 70.202[2], P 6.02]. If both co-trustees cease to serve and they do not designate a successor (either because they fail to act or because both are deceased), the instrument can designate a successor trustee or trustees by name [see §§ 70.201[2], P 6.02, 70.202[2], P 6.02].

[d] Bond

Trustees generally are not required to post bonds to secure the performance of their duties [see Prob. Code § 15602(a)]. A bond will be required of a trustee only if the trust instrument requires a bond, the court finds a bond necessary to protect the interests of the beneficiaries or other persons having an interest in the trust, or the court fills a vacancy in the office of trustee with an individual who is not named as trustee in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15602(a)]. In most cases, a bond will be neither necessary nor desirable. Further, a bond will never be required when a trustee company is serving as trustee [Prob. Code §§ 301(a), 15602(e)] The complete trust forms in this chapter waive bond for the trustee.

In rare circumstances, the settlor may wish to require that the trustee post a bond. This requirement will generally be imposed only when the trustee will be an individual who is not also the principal beneficiary of the trust and the settlor believes that the additional security to be derived by requiring a bond will protect the beneficiaries. A bond may be appropriate, for example, when one of the settlor's children is to serve as trustee and all of the children are to be beneficiaries. If there is any reason to believe that the child who serves as trustee would not discharge all of his duties in a competent and even-handed manner, or if there is reason to believe that the child who serves as trustee would be subject to suspicions on the part of the other children, a bond may help to protect (or at least to assuage the suspicions of) the beneficiaries.

PRACTICE TIP:

Of course, in such circumstances, the practitioner should inquire closely why the client would be willing to allow such a person to act as trustee in the first place. When the client has such serious reservations about the trustworthiness, fairness, impartiality, or competence of a potential successor trustee, the drafter should suggest that the client consider alternative candidates for that role, including banks, trust companies, and individual professional private fiduciaries. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

Some attorneys choose to deal with the subject of the trustee's bond by providing that a bond will not be required when the settlor is serving as trustee, but that a bond will be required of any other trustee. A variation on this provision is to provide that a bond will not be required of the settlor or any trustee named as trustee in the trust instrument, but a bond will be required of any other trustee not named in the instrument. Optional language can be added forbidding the beneficiaries from waiving the requirement of a bond.

[e] Powers

Every trust instrument should contain provisions describing, defining, and limiting the powers of the trustee. These provisions can simply refer to and incorporate the powers conferred on trustees by law, or provide detailed lists of powers that the trustee will have the authority to exercise.

A general provision relating to the powers of the trustee will often provide that, to carry out the purposes of the trust, the trustee will have "all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law," or words to similar effect. The advantage of incorporating the statutory powers by reference is that it reduces the overall length of the trust instrument. However, many experienced planners recommend including a detailed list of the trustee's powers in every trust agreement [see §§ 70.200[2], P 6.07, 70.201[2], P 6.08, 70.202[2], P 6.08, 70.203[2], P 6.08]. Such a list shows all persons interested in the trust exactly what powers the trustee has and does not have. This will be helpful when the trustee deals with third parties, such as banks, brokers, transfer agents, title insurers, and others. It may also be useful as a guide to nonprofessional trustees, and to trust beneficiaries who have questions about the scope of the trustee's powers. Finally, the inclusion of a detailed list of trustee powers also makes it possible for the settlor or settlors to tailor the trustee's powers to the particular needs of the trust. This can be particularly important when it is desirable for tax reasons to restrict the trustee's powers. A general statement of the trustee's powers is not a suitable vehicle for such tailoring.

A detailed discussion of the powers of trustees is beyond the scope of this chapter. For general coverage of trustee powers, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions. For more detailed discussion of trustee powers, see 2 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 96, Powers and Duties of Trustee (Matthew Bender).

[8] Concluding Provisions

[a] In General

Trust provisions that are essential to the operation or interpretation of the trust but that do not logically fit into other articles will often be grouped together at the end of the instrument under the heading of "Concluding Provisions." Provisions that should be included in this article will generally include perpetuities savings clauses [see [b], below], simultaneous death clauses [see [c], below], no-contest clauses [see [d], below], definitional clauses [see [e], below], number and gender clauses [see [f], below], governing law clauses [see [g], below], and similar matters.

[b] Perpetuities Savings Clause

A perpetuities savings clause is designed to guard against the inadvertent violation of the rule against perpetuities by setting an overall limit on the time within which interests created under the instrument must vest or terminate. When used, a perpetuities savings clause is not part of the dispositive provisions of the instrument, but operates independently of those provisions.

Every private (non-charitable) trust instrument should include a perpetuities savings clause. Although the adoption in California of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231 (Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities) operative Jan. 1, 1992; see also Prob. Code §§ 21205(b), 21206(b), 21207(b) (90-year "wait-and-see" rule)] has dramatically reduced the danger of violating the rule against perpetuities, good drafting practice still requires the inclusion of an appropriately drafted savings clause in any instrument that creates a trust or otherwise calls for a complicated disposition of property to take effect at some time in the future [see Halbach, USRAP Perpetuities Reform: Cy Pres and Wait-and-See Benefits With No Need to Revise Existing Documents or Practices, 13 CEB Estate Planning & California Probate Reporter 96, 98 (December 1991)].

The rule against perpetuities requires that property interests and powers of appointment either vest or terminate within a specified period of time (generally 21 years after the death of a person or persons alive when the interest or power is created) [see Prob. Code §§ 21205 (nonvested property interests), 21206, 21207 (powers of appointment)]. It does not require the termination of a trust within the specified period if all interests in the trust either vest or terminate within that period. Notwithstanding this, it is generally good practice to require the termination of a trust on expiration of the perpetuities period, as this will ensure that all interests and powers created by the trust will either vest or terminate within the applicable period [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.01, 70.201[2], P 7.01, 70.202[2], P 7.01, 70.203[2], P 7.01].

If a trust is terminated under the terms of a perpetuities savings clause, the trustee should have directions as to how the trust property is to be distributed. These directions can be set forth in an alternative distribution clause, specifically requiring the trustee to distribute property to a designated person or persons if the trust is terminated under the savings clause [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.01, 70.201[2], P 7.01, 70.202[2], P 7.01, 70.203[2], P 7.01].

For a detailed discussion of the rule against perpetuities and its use in California, see the Legal Background to Volume 12, Chapter 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities. For further coverage of the same subject, see 1 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 24, Devises--General Considerations, Section 24.09 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Simultaneous Death Clause

When a trust is created by joint settlors, it may include a special clause governing the disposition of the trust property in the event that the settlors die in a common disaster or under other circumstances that render it difficult or impossible to determine who died first. Such a clause may also be used when there is only one settlor and there is a possibility that the settlor and one of the principal beneficiaries under the instrument may die in a common disaster. A clause that does this is called a "simultaneous death clause."

The Probate Code includes a special rule for the distribution of property in cases of simultaneous death. Under that rule, if title to or devolution of property depends upon the priority of two people's deaths and it cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence which of the two died first, each person's property will be dealt with as if he or she had survived the other [Prob. Code § 220]. This presumption avoids the double administration and taxation of property that might otherwise be necessary when two people die at or close to the same time.

A trust instrument may deal with the possibility of simultaneous death by reaffirming the Probate Code presumption or "reversing" it. Although it is not essential to reaffirm the Probate Code presumption, doing so confirms the settlor's intention that the presumption is to apply. Simultaneous death clauses reaffirming the Probate Code presumption vary somewhat in their terms, depending on whether there are one or two settlors [see §§ 70.201[2], P 7.02, 70.202[2], P 7.02 (two settlors); §§ 70.200[2], P 7.02, 70.203[2], P 7.02 (one settlor)].

It can be advantageous for estate tax purposes to "reverse" the Probate Code presumption when one of two persons, typically a spouse, has a significantly larger estate than the other. In this situation, the statutory presumption preserves the disparity in the sizes of the spouses' estates following their deaths, with the result that one spouse's estate may be taxed at a significantly higher rate than the other. On the other hand, if the Probate Code presumption is "reversed" as to the estate of the spouse with the greater estate, in the event of simultaneous death the assets of that spouse would pass as though the spouse with the lesser estate had survived--presumably, some portion of the assets of the spouse with the larger estate would pass into and ultimately through the estate of the spouse with the smaller estate. Depending on the nature and amounts of the dispositions made by the spouse with the larger estate, the net effect in some situations will be toward equalization of the estates of the spouses. This can reduce the overall estate tax rate applicable to the combined estates of the spouses, and thereby achieve tax savings. However, reversal of the presumption must be specifically limited to the spouse with the larger estate. If it is not, pouring the estate of the spouse with the smaller estate into the estate of the spouse with the larger estate would serve no useful purpose and in fact could increase rather than reduce the combined estate tax liability of the two estates.

In any case, the theoretical estate tax liabilities of the parties should be carefully computed before reversing the presumption, to ensure that under the specific circumstances presented, reversal of the presumption will have the desired effect. For additional discussion, and an example of a situation in which tax savings can be achieved by reversing the statutory presumption, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 21, Devises, § 21.05 (Matthew Bender). The Probate Code presumption can be "reversed" by simply providing that in the event of simultaneous death, the person with the smaller estate will be deemed to have survived the person with the larger estate. [see §§ 70.280[2] (one-settlor trust), 70.281[2] (two-settlor trust)].

[d] No-Contest Clause

No-contest clauses are commonly included in wills for the purpose of discouraging will contests by providing that any person who contests the will or any of its provisions will receive nothing under the instrument. However, no-contest clauses do not usually cover property that passes outside the will. If all or substantially all of the testator's property will pass on the testator's death through a revocable inter vivos trust, the will's no-contest clause may be largely ineffective, since a person may freely contest the will and still receive any benefits he or she would be entitled to receive under the trust. This result can be avoided by including a no-contest clause in the trust instrument as well as in the will.

A no-contest clause in an inter vivos trust instrument will typically provide that if any beneficiary under the trust instrument directly or indirectly opposes, objects to, or seeks to invalidate any provision of the instrument, or any provision of the settlor's will, that person will receive nothing under the instrument, and any interest in the trust property that the person would otherwise have been entitled to receive will pass as if the person had predeceased the settlor [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.03, 70.201[2], P 7.03, 70.202[2], P 7.03, 70.203[2], P 7.03]. For further discussion of no-contest clauses and their use, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 655[1]. For detailed coverage of disinheritance and no-contest clauses, see 2 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 40, Disinheritance and No-Contest Clauses (Matthew Bender).

[e] Definitions

It is good drafting practice to include one or more provisions defining key words and phrases that are used in other parts of the instrument. Definitions of this kind will add to the precision of the instrument, clarify the settlor's intentions, and help to avoid litigation should disputes later arise as to the precise meaning of a word or phrase. Words and phrases that should generally be defined in the instrument include "death taxes" [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.04, 70.201[2], P 7.04, 70.202[2], P 7.04, 70.203[2], P 7.04], "debts and expenses" [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.05, 70.201[2], P 7.05, 70.202[2], P 7.05, 70.203[2], P 7.05], "deceased settlor" and "surviving settlor" [see §§ 70.201[2], P 7.06, 70.202[2], P 7.06], "child" and "children" [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.06, 70.201[2], P 7.07, 70.202[2], P 7.07, 70.203[2], P 7.06], and "issue" [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.07, 70.201[2], P 7.08, 70.202[2], P 7.08, 70.203[2], P 7.07].

[f] Number and Gender

Trusts instruments often include one or more provisions designed to clarify number and gender references in other provisions of the instrument. These provisions typically state that references in the instrument in the masculine gender will be deemed to include the feminine and neuter genders, and vice versa; and that references to the singular will be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context permits [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.09, 70.201[2], P 7.10, 70.202[2], P 7.10, 70.203[2], P 7.09]. These provisions may help to clarify the terms of other trust provisions where number and gender references are otherwise uncertain, ambiguous, or imprecise.

[g] Governing Law

Trust instruments should include a provision stating that all questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of the trust will be governed by the law of a particular state [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.12, 70.201[2], P 7.13, 70.202[2], P 7.13, 70.203[2], P 7.12]. Although the power of a settlor to specify that the trust will be governed by the law of a particular state is subject to some limitations, the power is generally and widely recognized [see 1 California Wills & Trusts, § 5.07[3] (Matthew Bender)].

Most settlors who create trusts in California will want legal questions concerning the operation and administration of the trust to be governed by California law. If a settlor executes a trust instrument in California and later moves to another state, it may still be preferable to have California law apply to the trust. The trust will probably have been planned with California law in mind, and the law of the other state may either be unknown or less favorable to the purposes and goals of the trust. For this reason, most California trust instruments provide that all questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of the instrument will be governed by the law of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.12, 70.201[2], P 7.13, 70.202[2], P 7.13, 70.203[2], P 7.12]. If the settlor prefers to designate the law of some other state, the provision can be modified accordingly.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.13

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.13 Execution

[1] In General

Inter vivos trust instruments are not subject to the same execution requirements as wills. Although every trust instrument must be signed, there is no requirement that the signatures be witnessed, or that the witnesses sign their names, as in the case of a will [see Prob. Code §§ 6110(c)(1), 6112 (witnesses)].

If the trust instrument is an agreement [see § 70.11[3]], it must be signed by the settlor or settlors and the trustee or co-trustees [see §§ 70.200[2], P 8.01, 70.201[2], P 8.01, 70.202[2], P 8.01, 70.203[2], P 8.01]. If the instrument is a declaration of trust [see § 70.11[3]], only the trustee is required to sign. However, it is generally considered good practice for the settlor or settlors to signify approval of the terms of a declaration of trust by adding their signatures to that of the trustee. All the signature blocks for the complete forms in this chapter provide space for the signature of the settlor or settlors.

When a settlor is also trustee (or one of the co-trustees), there is no requirement that the settlor sign the trust instrument in both capacities. However, it is the practice of some experienced estate planning attorneys to ask a client who is to serve in dual capacities to sign the instrument twice, to underscore the dual capacities in which the client is acting.

There is no legal requirement that a trust instrument be acknowledged before a notary public [see Civ. Code § 1217 (unrecorded instrument valid as between parties and persons with knowledge of instrument); see also Civ. Code §§ 1180-1207(acknowledgment and proof of execution of instruments)]. However, the instrument cannot be recorded unless the signatures are properly acknowledged [see Gov. Code § 27287 (acknowledgment of execution or proof by subscribing witness as prerequisite to recordation)]. Although transfer documents signed by trustees (for example, deeds, deeds of trust, and leases) are frequently recorded, trust instruments themselves are not usually recorded. Nevertheless, it may be desirable in some cases to record the trust instrument. If it is necessary to establish the succession of the trustees, for example, the trust instrument may be recorded to establish the succession provisions of the instrument. However, recordation is not always necessary even when the right to succession is in issue, since the facts essential to establish the right may be set forth in an affidavit, and the affidavit may be recorded in place of the full trust instrument.

Even when recordation is not necessary, acknowledgment of the instrument may help to authenticate the client's signature. This may be helpful if the authenticity of the instrument is ever put at issue.

§ 70.14 Amending the Trust Instrument

[1] In General

The settlor will generally retain the right to amend a revocable trust instrument for life, or, much less frequently, for some other period of time. When the settlor retains the right to revoke a trust, the lesser right to amend the trust is also retained [Prob. Code § 15402; but see § 70.12[5][f] regarding limitations on the power to amend a two-settlor trust that are typically imposed by the trust instrument]. When a trust becomes irrevocable, it also becomes unamendable unless the trust instrument provides otherwise. Amendments are often prompted by changes in the settlor's financial status or family situation, or by changes in the tax laws.

A trust may be amended either by a separate "amendment" to the original trust instrument, or by an amended and restated trust instrument.

If the proposed amendment is relatively insubstantial, it may be accomplished by drafting a separate "amendment," which is analogous in some respects to making a codicil to a will. The amendment should identify the original instrument (and any prior amendments) by title and date and state whether it is the first, second, third, or subsequent amendment of that instrument. If, for example, the original trust was named the "Jones Family 1994 Trust" and the amendment is the first amendment to that trust, it will be titled "First Amendment to Jones Family 1991 Trust."

The amendment should clearly specify which sections of the original instrument are to be modified or deleted. If provisions are to be added, the terms of the added provisions should be set forth in full, together with a clear statement identifying which provisions of the original instrument the added provisions are intended to supersede. An amendment to an existing trust instrument should be drafted in much the same way that a codicil to a will is drafted. For detailed coverage of codicils, see Chapter 62, Codicils.

[3] Amended and Restated Trust Instrument

An "amended and restated instrument" should be drafted if the changes in the original instrument are substantial and require extensive changes in the original trust instrument. Like an "amendment," an amended and restated instrument should indicate the instrument it is intended to amend and state whether it is the first, second, or third (and so on) instrument of its type. Unlike an amendment, however, an amended and restated instrument will restate all of the terms of the original instrument, as amended. The title of the instrument should reflect the amendment, for example, "Jones Family 1994 Trust--First Amended and Restated Declaration of Trust."

[4] Execution

Both amendments and amended and restated trust instruments should be executed in the same manner as the original trust instrument. For a discussion of the execution procedures for inter vivos trust instruments, see Section 70.13.

§ 70.110 Suitability of Revocable Trust for Client's Purposes

1. Determine whether, for one or more of the following reasons, it is desirable to avoid probate on client's death:

- a. Size of client's estate and circumstances of beneficiaries are such that probate would almost certainly be required.
- b. Client wishes to avoid costs and delays of probate.
- d. Client is willing to incur additional expenses to establish and fund revocable trust now.
- e. Client owns real property located in more than one state.
- f. Client owns substantial life insurance that could be used to fund trust.

PRACTICE TIP:

If a client is considering putting any significant amount of insurance on his or her own life into a revocable trust, the practitioner should have the client give serious consideration to the alternative of using an irrevocable life insurance trust to hold those insurance policies. This technique can achieve substantial estate tax savings on the death of the client. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

- g. Benefits of probate avoidance offset administrative cost of trust during client's lifetime and additional inconvenience of dealing with property through trust rather than directly.

2. Determine whether, for either or both of the following reasons, it is desirable to establish a mechanism for asset management for client:

- a. Client is unable or unwilling to manage own assets.
- b. Client wishes to avoid conservatorship in event of disability or incapacity.

3. Determine whether client deems it desirable to preserve privacy of client and client's financial affairs.

§ 70.111 Features of Revocable Trust

1. If client is married, determine whether client should establish revocable trust as sole settlor, or as joint settlor with spouse.

NOTE:

Resolution of this issue will depend on a number of questions that are centered on the nature of the client's property. If the trust assets will consist exclusively of the separate property of one individual, that person will create the trust as a sole settlor. Conversely, if the bulk of the trust assets will be community property, it is easier to draft a single trust for both spouses as joint settlors. If the estate contains significant percentages of both separate and community property, the attorney may either draft a joint settlor trust for the community property and separate sole settlor trusts for the separate property of each spouse, or may place both the separate and community property in a so-called "mixed property" trust [see § 70.11[4][d]].

The nature of the dispositions planned by the spouses may also affect the decision to draft a single trust or separate trusts. If the spouses want significantly different dispositions of their respective property, different trusts may be the best way to implement their dispositive plans.

The determinations in this Transaction Guide contain numerous references to "client and spouse." Although it may sound obvious, the attorney should bear in mind that when he or she prepares a trust for two spouses, both of the spouses are clients and the attorney owes equal duties to each of them. Conflicts of interest can arise in this context that will make representation of both spouses unwise or ethically impermissible. For determinations relating to the existence of a conflict of interest, see Section 60.110 in Chapter 60, Estate Planning ; see also California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility . In any situation involving representation of both spouses, the attorney must be alert for actual or potential conflict of interest situations [see § 60.110 in Ch. 60, Estate Planning].

2. Determine who will serve as trustee(s).

a. During lifetime(s) of client:

NOTE:

The trust forms in this publication assume that the client (or both spouses, in the case of a two-settlor trust) will want to serve as initial trustees.

- (1) Client, in a one settlor trust;
- (2) Both settlors, in a two-settlor trust; or
- (3) Third party such as professional trustee or trusted family member.

b. In a two-settlor trust, after death of first settlor:

NOTE:

The complete two-settlor trusts in this chapter assume that the surviving settlor in a two-settlor trust will be trustee after the death of the first settlor.

- (1) Surviving settlor; or
- (2) Third party such as professional trustee or trusted family member.

c. After death of settlor (or death of surviving settlor, in a two-settlor trust):

- (1) Professional trustee;
- (2) One or more trusted family members or associates; or
- (3) Combination of the two.

3. Determine identity of trust beneficiaries.

- a. Client.
- b. Spouse.
- c. Children.
- d. Person with special needs (for example, disability or incapacity).

4. If client is to be beneficiary, determine provisions for:

a. Payment of income during client's lifetime.

b. Distributions of principal during client's lifetime.

c. Distribution of trust principal after client's death:

(1) Outright distribution to named beneficiary or beneficiaries.

(2) Continued administration of trust for benefit of surviving beneficiary or beneficiaries.

5. If client and spouse are to be beneficiaries, determine provisions for:

a. Payment of income during joint lifetimes of client and spouse.

(1) All income to client and spouse.

(2) Income at request of client and spouse.

(3) Income at discretion of trustee.

b. Distributions of principal during joint lifetimes of client and spouse.

(1) Income at request of client and spouse.

(2) Income at discretion of trustee.

c. Distribution of trust principal after death of first spouse to die:

(1) Outright distribution to spouse or other beneficiary or beneficiaries.

(2) Continued administration of trust for benefit of spouse or other beneficiary or beneficiaries.

6. If surviving spouse is to be beneficiary after death of first spouse, determine basic plan for administration and distribution of trust assets after death of first spouse to die:

a. Survivor's trust, if trust is created by client and spouse as joint settlors.

NOTE:

A survivor's trust is a trust designed to hold property that the surviving spouse owned before the death of the first spouse to die--the surviving spouse's separate and quasi-community property (if any), and the surviving spouse's one-half interest in the community property of the spouses [see § 71.15 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions].

b. Nonformula marital deduction trust [see § 70.201[1]].

c. Formula marital deduction trust [see § 70.202[1]].

d. Bypass trust.

NOTE:

A bypass (or "credit shelter") trust is ordinarily designed to confer lifetime benefits on the surviving spouse while avoiding inclusion of the trust assets in the estate of either spouse for estate tax purposes [see § 70.12[6][f]; see also §§ 71.11, 71.14 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

e. Disclaimer trust.

NOTE:

A disclaimer trust is a trust designed to hold property that the surviving spouse disclaims after the death of the first spouse to die [see § 70.12[6][i]; see also § 71.16 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

7. If trust plan is to include survivor's trust [see P 6(a), above], determine provisions for:

- a. Payments of income.
- b. Distributions of principal.
- c. Distribution of trust principal on death of surviving spouse.

8. If trust plan is to include nonformula marital deduction trust [see P 6(b), above], determine provisions for:

- a. Payments of income during joint lifetimes of client and spouse.
- b. Distributions of principal during joint lifetimes of client and spouse.
- c. Payments of income after death of first spouse to die.
- d. Distributions of principal after death of first spouse to die.
- e. Distribution of trust principal after death of surviving spouse.

9. If trust is to include formula marital deduction trust [see PP 6(b), (c), above], determine what type of formula should be used to apportion trust assets between marital deduction share and nonmarital share (bypass trust):NOTE:

The use and consequences of these various formulas are discussed in detail in Ch. 71.

a. Pecuniary formula, either:

NOTE:

A pecuniary marital deduction formula clause requires that assets be allocated between the marital and nonmarital shares based on their value.

- (1) Pecuniary marital deduction formula [see § 70.202[1][k]; see also §§ 71.200, 71.201 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions]; or

NOTE:

A pecuniary marital deduction formula clause funds the marital deduction share first, and allocates the balance of the trust assets to the nonmarital share (bypass trust).

(2) Pecuniary bypass formula [see §§ 71.202, 71.203 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

NOTE:

A pecuniary bypass formula clause funds the nonmarital share (bypass trust) first, and allocates the balance of the trust assets to the marital deduction share.

b. Fractional formula clause [see §§ 71.204, 71.205 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

NOTE:

A fractional formula clause, in contrast to a pecuniary formula clause, divides each and every trust asset between the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share (bypass trust), so that the respective shares hold fractional interests in each and every item of trust property.

10. If trust plan is to include marital deduction trust (either formula or nonformula) [see PP 6(b), (c), above], determine what type of marital deduction trust should be used:

NOTE:

Either type of trust will qualify for the marital deduction. Because of its flexibility, the QTIP trust is probably the most widely used marital deduction trust in modern estate planning practice. For further discussion, see Ch. 71.

a. Qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7); see §§ 70.202[2], 70.203[2]]; or

b. Lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see § 71.13 [4] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

11. If trust plan is to include bypass trust [see NOTE to P 6(d), above] in favor of surviving spouse, determine provisions for:

- a. Payments of income.
- b. Distributions of principal.
- c. Distribution of trust principal on death of surviving spouse.

12. If trust plan is to include disclaimer trust [see NOTE to P 6(e), above], determine provisions for:

- a. Payments of income.
- b. Distributions of principal.

13. If client is not married or spouse will not be beneficiary, determine identity of beneficiaries and pattern of payment and distribution:

a. Payment of income to client while client is living:

- (1) All income to client.
- (2) Income to client at client's request.

b. Distributions of principal to client while client is living:

- (1) Distributions to client at client's request.
- (2) Distributions to client in trustee's discretion.

c. Payments of income and distributions of principal after client's death:

- (1) To one beneficiary.
- (2) To two or more beneficiaries from separate trusts.
- (3) To two or more beneficiaries from one trust.

§ 70.120 Basic Trust Arrangement

NOTE:

The complete trust forms in Sections 70.200 through 70.203 have been designed to fit typical fact situations. These complete forms include all of the provisions that would most often be required to draft a complete revocable trust instrument for a client. Except to the extent that individual provisions should be varied or modified as indicated, these complete trust instruments may be used as set forth in this chapter.

1. If client is unmarried and wishes to create trust for own benefit during client's lifetime and for benefit of one or more beneficiaries after client's death, select complete trust instrument in Section 70.200[2].

a. If trust will benefit one principal beneficiary (e.g., an "only child" or a favorite niece or nephew) after settlor's death, use form without modification.

b. If trust will benefit more than one principal beneficiary (e.g., all the settlor's children) after settlor's death, modify form as follows:

NOTE:

See Sections 70.210[1] and 70.211[1] for more detailed information on these patterns of distribution.

(1) To create "family pot" trust with sprinkling provisions on settlor's death, substitute provisions in Section 70.210[2]; or

(2) To create separate trusts or shares for each beneficiary on settlor's death, substitute provisions in Section 70.211[2].

2. If client is married and wishes to create nonformula marital deduction trust for benefit of client and spouse during their joint lifetimes, select complete trust instrument in Section 70.201[2].

a. If client wants trust to be divided into separate trusts or shares for children and issue (or other beneficiaries) on death of surviving settlor, use form without modification.

b. If client wants trust to be held as a "family pot" trust with sprinkling provisions, for collective benefit of children and issue (or other beneficiaries) on death of surviving settlor, substitute provisions in Section 70.212[2].

3. If client is married, wishes to create trust for benefit of client and spouse during joint lifetimes, and has large enough estate to make marital deduction formula trust advantageous, select complete trust instrument in Section 70.202[2].

a. Marital deduction formula:

(1) To include pecuniary marital deduction formula, use form without modification [see also provisions in § 71.201 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions , for a sample pecuniary marital deduction formula clause with additional optional language].

(2) To include pecuniary bypass formula, substitute provisions in Section 71.203 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

(3) To include fractional formula, substitute provisions in Section 71.205 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

b. Type of marital deduction trust:

(1) To use qualified terminable interest (QTIP) trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], use form without modification.

(2) To use lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] containing separate survivor's trust and separate marital deduction trust, select appropriate option in marital deduction formula clause and substitute provisions in Section 71.231 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

(3) To use lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)] in which survivor's share and marital deduction share are combined into a single trust, select appropriate option in marital deduction formula clause and substitute provisions in Section 71.231 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

c. Treatment of beneficiaries on death of surviving settlor:

(1) If client wants trust to be divided into separate trusts or shares for children and issue (or other beneficiaries) on death of surviving settlor, use form without modification.

(2) If client wants trust to be held as a "family pot" trust with sprinkling provisions, for collective benefit of children and issue (or other beneficiaries) on death of surviving settlor, substitute provisions in Section 70.212[2].

4. If client is married, and wishes to create trust for benefit of client and spouse during joint lifetimes, but wishes to fund trust solely with client's own separate or quasi-community property, select complete trust instrument in § 70.203[2].

a. Marital deduction formula:

(1) To include pecuniary marital deduction formula, use form without modification [see also § 71.200[2] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions , for a sample pecuniary marital deduction formula clause with additional optional language].

(2) To include pecuniary bypass formula, substitute provisions in Section 71.202 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

(3) To include fractional formula, substitute provisions in Section 71.204 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

b. Type of marital deduction trust:

(1) To use qualified terminable interest (QTIP) trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], use form without modification.

(2) To use lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)], select appropriate option in marital deduction formula clause and substitute provisions in Section 71.231 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

§ 70.121 Modification of Individual Trust Provisions

NOTE:

It is obvious that the terms of any trust agreement, particularly the dispositive provisions desired by the client and provisions relating to the settlor's marital status and family members, but also the powers and duties of the trustees, the payment of estate taxes, and others, may have to be modified to fit the circumstances of the estate plan. A complete guide to all variations reasonably likely to be required in a given case would far exceed the space limitations of this publication.

Numerous individual and alternative trust provisions for use in testamentary trusts are illustrated in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. Many of these provisions are also suitable for revocable inter vivos trusts, and can be adapted to that purpose with only minor modifications. This section provides a guide only to alternative provisions that are specific to inter vivos trusts, have no counterpart in testamentary trusts, and are illustrated in Part C of the forms in this chapter.

For a large selection of provisions designed specifically for revocable inter vivos trusts, and extensive commentary on their use, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions (Matthew Bender).

1. To change basic format of trust instrument from declaration of trust to trust agreement [for discussion, see § 70.11[3]]:

NOTE:

The complete trust forms in this chapter are all drafted as declarations of trust [see §

70.11[3]]. However, they may easily be adapted to the trust agreement format if desired.

a. Substitute introductory language in Section 70.220[2] for Paragraph 1.01 of any of the complete forms in this chapter, and

b. Substitute signature and execution block in Section 70.290[2] for the signature and execution block in the form being modified.

2. To limit trustee's right to accept additions to trust:

NOTE:

In most cases, it is desirable to authorize the trustee to accept additions to the trust, either from the settlor or settlors or from other sources. In rare cases, however, the settlor may wish to prohibit additions [see §§ 70.12[4][c], 70.231[1]].

a. To permit trustee to accept additions only from settlors, substitute form in Section 70.230[2] for following provisions in complete trust forms:

(1) Paragraph 2.02 in Section 70.200[2].

(2) Paragraph 2.03 in Section 70.201[2].

(3) Paragraph 2.03 in Section 70.202[2].

(4) Paragraph 2.02 in Section 70.203[2].

b. To prohibit trustee from accepting additions to trust, substitute form in Section 70.231[2] for following provisions in complete trust forms:

(1) Paragraph 2.02 in Section 70.200[2].

(2) Paragraph 2.03 in Section 70.201[2].

(3) Paragraph 2.03 in Section 70.202[2].

(4) Paragraph 2.02 in Section 70.203[2].

3. To state that right to revoke trust is personal to settlor(s) and may not be exercised by any other person(s), substitute form in Section 70.240[2] for following provisions in complete trust forms:

NOTE:

It is usually desirable to include a provision authorizing other persons (such as attorneys in fact or conservators) to exercise rights or powers that the settlor could exercise personally if the settlor should ever be unable to exercise those rights or powers personally. However, some settlors will be reluctant to grant any person authority to revoke the trust [see §§ 70.12[5], 70.240[1][c]].

a. Paragraph 3.04 in Section 70.200[2].

c. Paragraph 3.09 in Section 70.202[2].

d. Paragraph 3.04 in Section 70.203[2].

4. To require trustee to make one or more "special gifts" on the death of the settlor (or the first settlor in a two-settlor trust), use the following provisions in place of, or in addition to, Paragraph 5.01 in any of the complete trust forms in this chapter:

NOTE:

As used in this publication, the term "special gift" refers to a gift to a person who is not one of the primary beneficiaries of the bulk of the trust assets. Such a gift is analogous, in some respects, to a specific devise or a general pecuniary devise in a will [see §§ 70.200[1][h], 70.250[1][b]].

a. To make pecuniary special gift from two-settlor trust on first death only if a specified settlor dies first, use form in Section 70.250.

b. To make pecuniary special gift to charity from one-settlor trust, use form in Section 70.251.

c. To make pecuniary special gift to charity from two-settlor trust on first death, regardless of order of death of settlors, use form in Section 70.252.

d. To make pecuniary special gift to charity from two-settlor trust on first death only if a specified settlor dies first, use Form in Section 70.253.

e. To make special gift of tangible personal property from one-settlor trust on settlor's death, use form in Section 70.254.

f. To make special gift of tangible personal property from two-settlor trust on first death only if a specified settlor dies first, use form in Section 70.255.

5. To reverse statutory presumption regarding simultaneous death, substitute following provisions for their counterparts in the complete forms:

NOTE:

Probate Code Section 220 establishes a rule that applies when the right to receive property depends upon the priority of two persons' deaths and it cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence that one of the persons survived the other. Under that rule, the person whose property is to be distributed is presumed to have survived the person to whom the property is to be distributed. The complete trust instruments in this chapter all include a provision reaffirming this statutory presumption [see §§ 70.200[2], P 7.02, 70.201[2], P 7.02, P 7.02, 70.203[2], P 7.02]. In special cases, however, it may be advantageous to "reverse" the statutory presumption and treat the property of a particular person as if that person had died first, so that the property will be distributed to the other person before it is distributed to other beneficiaries [see § 70.280[1][c]].

a. To reverse presumption in a one-settlor trust, substitute form in Section 70.280[2] for:

(1) Paragraph 7.02 in Section 70.200[2].

(2) Paragraph 7.02 in Section 70.203[2].

b. To reverse presumption in a one-settlor trust, substitute form in Section 70.281[2] for:

(1) Paragraph 7.02 in Section 70.201[2].

(2) Paragraph 7.02 in Section 70.202[2].

§ 70.200 Revocable Trust for Unmarried Settlor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete trust instrument for a sole settlor who wishes to create a revocable inter vivos trust for his or her own benefit during his or her lifetime, and for the benefit of another person after the settlor's death. The trust provides for income payments and discretionary principal distributions to the beneficiary after the settlor's death, with outright distribution of the trust principal to the beneficiary in three installments.

This type of trust is typically created by an unmarried person. Less frequently, such a trust may be created by a married person who does not want to provide for his or her surviving spouse, either because the spouse has sufficient assets of his or her own to survive without being provided for, or because the settlor has provided for the spouse in another trust or by will.

This form can be used as a basic template for most types of revocable trusts that are likely to be created by an unmarried person. The fact situation contemplated in this form is that the settlor is an unmarried person who wants his or her assets to go to one beneficiary, such as an only child, a grandchild, a favorite relative, or a close friend. In many cases, however, the settlor may want to spread his or her assets among a number of different beneficiaries, such as children, grandchildren, or relatives. This form can be modified for that purpose as follows:

- (1) To create a "family pot" trust--that is, a single trust in favor of a number of beneficiaries following the settlor's death [see § 70.210[1]], delete Paragraph 5.04 of this trust, and substitute the provisions in § 70.210[2].

(2) To create a "separate share" trust--that is, a trust that on the death of the settlor will be divided into separate trusts or shares, each having only one beneficiary [see §§ 70.210[1][b], 70.211[1][b]], delete Paragraph 5.04 of this trust, and substitute the provisions in § 70.211[2].

The rest of the trust provisions in this form are fundamentally compatible with these alternative distribution schemes. However, the resulting instrument must always be reviewed carefully to guard against any inadvertent inconsistencies generated by a particular fact pattern.

[c] Trust Declaration Format

This trust instrument uses the trust declaration format. A "declaration of trust" is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument [see [2], P 1.01, below]. Only the trustee is required to execute the declaration. However, it is common for the settlor to sign the declaration to signify his or her approval of the terms of the trust [for signature blocks for declarations of trust, see [2], P 8.01, below].

A trust agreement, in contrast, is a two-party agreement between the settlor and the trustee. Either format will create a valid inter vivos trust, and prior to 1993 the choice was largely a matter of the drafter's preference. However, as discussed in § 70.11[3][b], many estate planners now believe that the trust declaration format is more advantageous as a result of the decision in Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433. In Heggstad, the court of appeal held that a parcel of real property that was described as a trust asset in a schedule attached to the trust declaration was trust property even though it was never formally conveyed to the trust. The court specifically referred to language in Prob. Code § 15200(a) that permits a trust to be created by a "declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee" [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433; see Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501]. The court did not speculate on whether the result would have been the same if the trust in question had been created by a trust agreement rather than a declaration, but since the result under a declaration is clear, many California estate planners now recommend that revocable trusts be created by declarations rather than trust agreements.

[d] Family Information

This form includes paragraphs that may be used to provide information about the settlor's family. Family information ordinarily will cover the settlor's marital status [see [2], P 1.04, below], the settlor's children [see [2], P 1.05, below], and may also include grandchildren, particularly if they are children of a deceased child of the settlor [see [2], P 1.05, below]. If the settlor has no living children, or had children who are now deceased, those facts can be stated. The names and birthdates of children and grandchildren may also be included. For discussion of the utility of including family information in a trust instrument, see § 70.12[3].

As noted in [a], above, this form assumes that the settlor is an unmarried person. If a married settlor wishes to create a trust that does not provide for his or her spouse, the marital declaration provisions of this trust may be modified accordingly. For an illustrative marital status declaration for a married person, see § 70.203[2], P 1.04.

[e] Trust Estate

Property is one of the essential elements of every trust [Prob. Code § 15202; see § 70.11[2][c], [4]]. The words "trust estate" are used in this form to refer to the trust property. Paragraph 1.01 defines the "trust estate."

It is common for attorneys to attach a list of assets to the trust instrument. Designated as Schedule A in this form, this list includes all of the property that is to be transferred to the trustee at the outset of the trust. If the trust is not to be "fully funded" until a later date, Schedule A may include a skeleton list of assets, or only one asset (for example, the sum of $100), and additional property may be added to it at a later date.

PRACTICE TIP:

It is less important that Schedule A be completed or kept up to date as assets are added to the trust than it is that the assets that are to comprise the trust are formally transferred to the trustee, such as by recording a deed for real property, having a new signature card prepared for a bank account, and so on.
Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[f] Rights and Powers of Settlor

This form gives the settlor the right to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust, in whole or in part, at any time during the settlor's lifetime [see [2], P 3.01, below]. Upon the settlor's death, the trust becomes irrevocable.

The form also gives the settlor the power to direct the investments of the trust [see [2], P 3.02, below]. This provision will not be important while the settlor is serving as trustee [see [k], below]. However, it will give the settlor control over trust investments if the settlor does not choose to serve as trustee, or if the settlor should resign or become disabled after serving as the trustee for a period of time. The form also gives the settlor broad powers to borrow money from the trust estate [see [2], P 3.03, below].

The form includes a provision authorizing an attorney in fact acting under a durable power of attorney to exercise the settlor's rights and powers over the trust estate during any time that the settlor is unable to exercise those rights and powers personally [see [2], P 3.04, below]. If no attorney in fact is acting for the settlor, then the settlor's rights can be exercised by a duly appointed conservator, but only after petition to the court. If the settlor does not wish to delegate the power to amend or revoke the trust, this provision may be amended by the addition of optional language stating that all of the settlor's powers, except the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust, can be exercised by the attorney in fact or conservator [see [2], P 3.04, below]. For further discussion of the revocability of a trust, and delegating the power to revoke a trust to an attorney in fact or conservator, see Section 70.12[5].

This form gives the settlor the right to receive income payments and principal distributions during his or her lifetime [see [2], art. 4, below]. The trustee can be required to pay the settlor all of the income of the trust, or as much of the income as the settlor may request from time to time [see [2], P 4.01, below]. In either case, the settlor will have the substantial right to enjoy all of the trust income.

The trustee can also be required to distribute principal to the settlor on the settlor's request, or when the trustee in the exercise of the trustee's discretion determines that principal distributions should be made [see [2], P 4.02, below]. In either case, the settlor will have the substantial right to enjoy all of the trust principal.

The form includes a provision giving an attorney in fact acting under a durable power of attorney authority to request income or principal on the settlor's behalf if the settlor is unable to make those requests personally. If there is no attorney in fact, then the trustee will have the right to make the requests for the settlor [see [2], P 4.03, below].

[h] Special Gift on Settlor's Death

This form includes a provision making a so-called "special gift" on the settlor's death [see [2], P 5.01, below]. The term "special gift," as used in this form, means a gift that the trustee is required to make after the settlor's death to someone other than the residuary beneficiary. It is analogous, in many respects, to a specific devise or a general pecuniary devise in a will. The special gift in this form is a pecuniary devise, but special gifts of tangible personal property are not uncommon [see § 70.254[1]].

The special gift will be made before any distributions are made to the principal beneficiary. The special gift typically will be made to a family member or friend whom the settlor wishes to remember after his or her death, but whom the settlor does not wish to receive the full benefit of the residue of the trust estate.

If the settlor does not wish to make a special gift, this provision can be deleted. If the settlor wants to make more than one special gift, identical provisions may be included as necessary.

[i] Treatment of Remaining Trust Assets Following Settlor's Death

After the special gift has been made [see [h], above], the remainder of the trust estate will be held for one beneficiary. This beneficiary will often be a minor or young adult who is expected to need the benefits of property management for a temporary period of time after the settlor's death, depending on his or her age at the time of the settlor's death.

The trust principal will be distributed to the beneficiary in three installments at three specified ages. A typical pattern of distribution would be to distribute one-third of the principal to the beneficiary at age 21, one-third at age 25, and one-third at age 30. However, these ages are not inflexible. The needs of the residuary beneficiary should be balanced against his or her intelligence, experience, and level of maturity, to determine what ages are most appropriate for distributions.

Until all of the trust principal has been distributed, the trustee will make income payments and principal distributions to the beneficiary. The form requires the trustee to pay all of the income to the beneficiary on a current basis and to make principal distributions at the trustee's discretion. The trustee's discretion can be limited by an "ascertainable standard" or a broader standard. A standard is an "ascertainable standard" if distributions can be made only for the beneficiary's "health, education, support, and maintenance" [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2); see also § 70.12[6][c] and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4]]. A standard is not "ascertainable" if distributions can be made for other purposes, such as for the beneficiary's "comfort, welfare, and happiness" [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. An ascertainable standard should be used if the beneficiary is to be the trustee after the settlor's death and the drafter wants to avoid having the trust assets included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A) (power limited by ascertainable standard is not general power of appointment for estate tax purposes)]. In almost all other cases (in other words, any situation not involving expenditures for the support of a trustee's dependent), a broader standard may be used at the option of the settlor. The settlor should bear in mind, however, that in practice even an ascertainable standard is broad enough to encompass almost any reasonable, non-frivolous expenditure.

PRACTICE TIP:

If the remainder beneficiary is a minor at the time the trust is being drafted, consideration may be given to accumulating income until a specified age (such as 18 or 21), and only thereafter providing for mandatory payments of current income to the beneficiary. This will avoid having large sums paid out to a parent, guardian, or custodian under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act during the beneficiary's minority. Such payments may distort the settlor's intention in two ways: (1) substantial amounts of property set aside by the settlor for the beneficiary's benefit will be managed by someone other than the trustee designated by the settlor; and (2) a potentially large sum will be distributable to the beneficiary before he or she would have received any lump sum distribution under the trust (possibly as early as age 18). Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[j] Division of Trust for Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Purposes

This form contains a complex provision permitting or requiring the trustee to divide the trust into exempt and non-exempt trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax (GST) purposes. For discussion of this provision, see Section 70.12[6][j]. Although GST liability may seem like a remote possibility in a trust that has only one beneficiary who is a child of the settlor, the situation may change if the beneficiary dies prior to final distribution of the trust assets and the next person in line to receive the assets is in a generation that is two or more generations below that of the settlor [see I.R.C. §§ 2611(a), 2612, 2613(a)]. For that reason, it is recommended that a this provision be included in every revocable trust. If it is not needed, the provision simply will never become operative. Unless the value of the trust assets is substantial, it is recommended that this provision be drafted to make division of the trusts optional rather than mandatory.

[k] Trustee

Any qualified person may serve as the trustee of this trust. A sole settlor who creates a revocable inter vivos trust will often act as the initial trustee. Since a revocable inter vivos trust cannot be used to achieve income or estate tax savings while the settlor is still living, there is no tax reason to appoint a third party as trustee. If the settlor is an older person, however, the settlor may appoint an adult child to serve as trustee, or to serve as co-trustee with the parent. In this form, the initial trustee is named in the opening paragraph of the trust instrument [see [2], P 1.01, below ; see also § 70.12[7][a]].

This form includes a provision for successor trustees [see [2], P 6.02, below ]. It provides that if the trustee resigns, or is unable or unwilling to act as trustee, the settlor may designate a successor trustee. If the trustee ceases to act as trustee and no successor trustee is designated by the settlor within a specified period of time, then specific persons and entities will succeed to the office of trustee. The provision names those persons and entities and specifies the order in which they will be entitled to succeed. Typically, successor trustees will be other trusted relatives or a professional trustee (bank or individual).

Because the trust contemplates that there will be only one beneficiary, the beneficiary may not also be the sole trustee, or the trust will be extinguished under the doctrine of merger [see Estate of Washburn (1909) 11 Cal. App. 735, 746, 106 P. 415]. A sole beneficiary may be named as a co-trustee [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 115(2)]. However, if the beneficiary is a minor or young person whom the settlor believes needs enough asset management protection to merit continuing the trust in the first instance, it would make little sense to name the beneficiary as a successor co-trustee.

[m] Removal, Resignation, and Filling Vacancies

This form includes provisions dealing with removal of the trustee, resignation by the trustee, and filling vacancies in the office of trustee. Paragraph 6.03 gives the settlor unlimited power to remove and replace the trustee, at any time and for any reason. It also gives the court the power to remove the trustee, upon petition by any beneficiary, when the trustee has committed a breach of trust, has become insolvent, or has shown other unfitness to administer the trust.

Paragraph 6.04 prescribes the procedure for the resignation of the trustee. Although it gives the trustee the right to resign at any time without specifying a reason, it requires the trustee to give notice of the resignation a specified time before it is to take effect, and it provides that a resignation will become effective only upon acceptance of the trust by the successor trustee.

Paragraph 6.05 gives the court the power to fill vacancies in the office of the trustee when the vacancy is not filled in some other way. It provides that in selecting a trustee, the court must give consideration to the wishes of any beneficiary who is at least 14 years of age, although the court is not bound by those wishes.

[n] Trustee's Bond

This form includes a provision stating that no bond will be required of any trustee. As discussed in Section 70.12[7][d], a bond requirement will generate additional expense for the estate, and may cause problems because it may be difficult to procure a bond for an individual trustee. However, circumstances can arise in which it may be desirable to require a bond [see § 70.12[7][d] for discussion]. If the settlor wants to require a bond for individuals who are successor trustees, the provision should be modified accordingly. A bond will never be required of a trust company [Prob. Code §§ 301(a), 15602(e)].

[o] Trustee's Powers

This form includes a detailed list of the trustee's powers [see [2], P 6.07, below]. As discussed in Section 70.12[7][e], trustee powers may either be incorporated by reference or set out in detail in the trust instrument. This publication recommends that a complete set of trustee powers be included in every trust. If the trustee's powers are ever questioned, or if the trustee is ever requested to perform a particular act, a detailed list will make it easier to determine precisely what powers the trustee does and does not have. The detailed list in this form is introduced by general language making it clear that the listed powers are in addition to other powers conferred on trustees by law, and the trustee's powers are to be exercised in furtherance of the purposes of the trust and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in the trust instrument [see [2], P 6.07, below].

This form also includes general provisions relating to and defining the trustee's powers. For example, Paragraph 6.08 is a general provision stating that the grant to the trustee of a specific power is not to be deemed a limitation on the trustee's general powers, while Paragraph 6.09 permits the trustee to disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee holds under the instrument. Paragraph 6.10 gives the trustee discretion to permit income beneficiaries to occupy real property forming a part of the trust estate, and Paragraph 6.11 gives the trustee discretion to terminate a trust when the value of the trust principal has become so low that continued administration of the trust is uneconomical.

Revocable Trust for Unmarried Settlor

DECLARATION OF TRUST

ARTICLE 1 : Creation of Trust

1.01. Declaration. _____ [identify trustee(s), e.g., Mary E. Smith or North Berkeley National Bank & Trust Co.] (the "trustee [s]") hereby declare[s] that _____ [he has or she has or it has or they have] received certain property (the "trust estate") from _____ [identify settlor, e.g., Mary E. Smith, of Berkeley, California] (the "settlor"), and hold [s] that property in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Name of Trust. The name of the trust created by this instrument shall be _____ [name of trust, e.g., The Mary E. Smith 1995 Trust].

1.03. Effective Date. This declaration shall be effective _____ [on the date it is executed by the parties or immediately upon execution by all the parties or specify other effective date].

1.04. Marital Status. The settlor _____ [has never been or is not currently] married.

[If settlor is widow or widower, add:]

The settlor was previously married to _____ [name of deceased spouse, e.g., Melvin D. Smith], who died _____ [year or date, e.g., in 1990 or on or about August 1, 1990].

[Or, if settlor's marriage was dissolved or annulled, add:]

The settlor was previously married to _____ [name of previous spouse, e.g., Melvin D. Smith], but that marriage was _____ [dissolved or annulled] [if desired, add details, e.g., by the Superior Court of the State of California for the County of Alameda] _____ [year or date, e.g., in 1990 or on or about July 1, 1990].

1.05. Children. The settlor has _____ [never had any children or no living children or] _____ (number) living _____ (child or children), whose name(s) and date(s) of birth _____ (is or are) as follows:

Name	Date of Birth
e.g., Barney F. Smith	e.g., June 3, 1966

[If settlor had children who are now deceased, add:]

The settlor has _____ [number, e.g., one or two] child[ren] who _____ [is or are] now deceased: _____ [name(s) and date(s) of death, e.g., Clyde A. Smith, who died on or about May 1, 1985].

[If settlor has living grandchild(ren), add if desired:]

1.06. Grandchildren. The settlor has _____ [number, e.g., one or two] grandchild[ren] who _____ [is or are] now living:

e.g., Petunia S. Smith,	e.g., January 23, 1987

ARTICLE 2 : Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All of the property described in Schedule A, attached to this instrument, and any other property that may hereafter be subject to this trust, is referred to in this instrument as the "trust estate," and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added, or by titling any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument. During any time that the settlor is not also serving as trustee or cotrustee of this trust, any transfer of property to the trust under this paragraph shall be effective only upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any property added to the trust estate shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

ARTICLE 3 : Rights and Powers of Settlor

3.01. Revocation and Amendment. This trust may be revoked, amended, or terminated at any time and for any reason by a writing signed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail.

_____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any instrument revoking or terminating the trust, the trustee shall deliver any and all property affected by the revocation or termination to the settlor, or to a person or persons designated in that writing to receive that property. Upon the death of the settlor, this trust shall be irrevocable and not subject to amendment.

3.02. Investments. The settlor shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to do any or all of the following:

- (a) Invest trust funds in specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment;
- (b) Retain specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment held in trust under this instrument; and
- (c) Sell, encumber, lease, abandon, or dispose of any trust property.

All such directions shall be in writing, signed by the settlor, and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. If a direction is to remain in effect for a specified period of time only, or to be subject to any condition or conditions, the writing must specify the period of time and the condition or conditions. If trust property is invested in accordance with any direction given as specified in this paragraph, the trustee shall not be liable for losses sustained as a direct or indirect result of the trustee's compliance with the direction. After the settlor's death, no person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest trust property.

3.03. Borrowing. While the settlor is living, the settlor shall have the power to borrow money from the trust estate in such amounts and on such terms as the settlor may specify in a writing or writings delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. The settlor's power to borrow money as provided in this paragraph shall extend to both the income and the principal of the trust estate.

3.04. Exercise of Settlor's Rights and Powers by Others. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any right or power that the settlor could exercise personally under the terms of this instrument, _____ [except or including] the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ [this trust or any trust created by this instrument], may be exercised for and on behalf of the settlor by any attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by a duly appointed and acting conservator of the settlor, after petition to the court in accordance with California Probate Code Section 2580, or any successor statute [add optional clause to limit authority to amend or revoke, e.g.:; provided, however, that the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ (this trust or any trust created by this instrument), in whole or in part, may be exercised by an attorney in fact or conservator only if distribution of the settlor's estate during the settlor's lifetime is not substantially altered by the amendment, revocation, or termination, and the amendment, revocation, or termination does not result in any adverse tax consequences to the settlor's estate].

ARTICLE 4 : Payments and Distributions During Settlor's Lifetime

4.01. Payments of Income. So long as the settlor is living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor _____ [all of the net income of the trust or as much of the net income of the trust as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing]. [If trustee is to pay all income: Payments shall be made in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually. Or if settlor is to have right to request payments: A request made pursuant to this paragraph may specify that the payments are to be made periodically.]

4.02. Distributions of Principal. So long as the settlor is living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor as much of the principal of the trust as _____ [the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing or the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary or appropriate for the settlor's comfort, welfare, and happiness]. [If settlor is to have right to request distributions, add: A request made pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically.]

4.03. Requests on Settlor's Behalf. If, at any time, the settlor is unable personally to make a request of the trustee, the settlor's right to make the request may be exercised for or on behalf of the settlor by an attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by the trustee acting for and on behalf of the settlor. The trustee shall have discretion to determine when the settlor is unable personally to make a request for purposes of this paragraph.

4.04. Trustee's Power to Make Gifts at Direction of Settlor. During the settlor's lifetime, the trustee shall distribute such sums of trust principal to any person or persons who are the natural objects of the settlor's bounty as the settlor may direct in writing. In the event that the settlor is unable to direct the trustee in writing under this Paragraph due to incapacity, such a direction may be made on the settlor's behalf by a duly authorized attorney in fact acting under a valid durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act (or successor statute) [optional]; so long as the durable power of attorney so executed by the settlor specifically authorizes the attorney in fact to exercise a withdrawal or gifting power through enforceable demands on the trustee]; provided, however, that the amount of gifts pursuant to the direction of an attorney in fact to any one person in any one year shall not exceed the annual amount excluded from gift tax under Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b) (or a successor statute).

ARTICLE 5 : Payments and Distributions After Settlor's Death

5.01. Special Gift. Upon the settlor's death, the trustee shall distribute the sum of $_____ to _____ [name of beneficiary, e.g., Linda S. Harris] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if she survives the settlor (for 60 days)]. [If distribution is conditioned on survival, add alternative disposition, e.g.: If _____ Linda W. Harris does not survive the settlor (for 60 days), this gift shall _____ (e.g., lapse or be distributed to Patricia J. Harris).]

5.02. Payment of Death Taxes. All death taxes payable by reason of the settlor's death [to include taxes on assets passing outside trust, add]; whether attributable to assets of this trust or to assets outside the trust,] shall be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate as provided in the California Probate Code].

5.03. Payment of Debts and Expenses. All debts and expenses of the settlor and the trust may, in the trustee's discretion, be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate in the same manner as the death taxes].

5.04. Disposition of Trust Upon Death of Settlor. Upon the death of the settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [name of beneficiary, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments [as agreed upon by _____ (e.g., Petunia S. Smith) and the trustee], but not less often than annually, until _____ [he or she] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of _____ [name of beneficiary; e.g., Petunia

S. Smith], until _____ [he or she] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for _____ [his or her] _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or to specify a broader standard: comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) When _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 21] years, the trustee shall distribute to _____ [him or her] outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one-third or thirty-three and one-third percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made. If _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 21] years before the settlor's death, then upon the settlor's death the trustee shall distribute to _____ [him or her] outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one-third or thirty-three and one-third percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, and the balance shall be retained in trust pursuant to the applicable provisions of this paragraph.

(d) When _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute to _____ [him or her] outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one-half or fifty percent] of the fair market value of the remaining principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made. If _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years before the settlor's death, then upon the settlor's death the trustee shall distribute to _____ [him or her] outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., two-thirds or sixty-six and two-thirds percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, and the balance shall be retained in trust pursuant to the applicable provisions of this paragraph.

(e) When _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to _____ [him or her] outright the balance of the trust property. If _____ [name, e.g., Petunia S. Smith] reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years before the settlor's death, then upon the settlor's death the trustee shall distribute all of the trust principal to _____ [him or her] outright.

(f) If _____ [e.g., Petunia S. Smith] dies before the trust property has been fully distributed as provided in this paragraph, this trust shall terminate and the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [e.g., the issue of Petunia S. Smith or specify other beneficiaries] [if beneficiaries are members of a class, specify pattern of distribution, e.g.: in the manner provided in California Probate Code section _____ (specify either 240, 246, or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. If _____ [e.g., none of the issue of Petunia S. Smith] survive at the time of distribution, any remaining trust property shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor].

5.05. Consideration of Other Resources. In making any _____ [distributions of principal or payments of income or payments of income or distributions of principal] from this trust for _____ [specify standard of discretion as set forth in provision authorizing the discretionary distribution, e.g., the health, education, support, and maintenance or care and comfort] of _____ [e.g., Petunia S. Smith], the trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent the trustee deems advisable, any other income or resources available to _____ [him or her] that are known to the trustee and that are reasonably available for that purpose.

5.06. Undistributed Payments and Distributions. Upon termination of any beneficiary's right to receive income payments or principal distributions as provided in this instrument, all payments and distributions that are accrued but undistributed by the trustee at the date of the termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest under the terms of this instrument.

5.07. Determinations of Principal and Income. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the trustee shall determine all questions as to what is principal and what is income of the trust estate, and all questions respecting the apportionment and allocation of receipts and expenditures between principal and income accounts, in accordance with the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act as that Act exists at the time the determination is made. However, the trustee shall have discretion to determine any such matter for which there is no provision in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act or in this instrument.

5.08. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this paragraph apply to any trust under this instrument that is created on or at any time after the settlor's death and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by the settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this paragraph applies, the trustee _____ [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this Paragraph, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlor's intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust, so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The Trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subparagraph.

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this Paragraph, the trustee shall _____ [for a pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for a fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided]. [If preceding sentence provides for a pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of the settlor's death, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this Paragraph, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the settlor's death to the date of payment).]

(c) Regardless of whether or not subparagraph (a) applies, if the amount of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) to a trust to which this paragraph applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this paragraph applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust terms to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code § 2613(a) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust terms to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code § 2613(b) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

(e) The purpose of this paragraph is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and nontax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlor's intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subparagraph are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(f) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax, the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this Paragraph.

ARTICLE 6 : Trustee

6.01. Definition. Unless the context requires otherwise, all references in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed to refer to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees.

6.02. Successor Trustees. If, for any reason, the trustee fails or ceases to act as trustee, the settlor shall have the power to designate any suitable entity or person to act as successor trustee. The successor trustee shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor. If the trustee ceases to act as trustee and no successor trustee is designated by the settlor within _____ [e.g., 14 days] after the vacancy occurs, the following persons, in the order of priority indicated, shall be successor trustee:

First, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Maxwell J. Smith, of San Francisco, California];

Second, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Fritz P. Garcia, of Hillsborough, California];

Third, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., North Berkeley National Bank & Trust Co., Berkeley, California].

6.03. Removal and Replacement. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the settlor shall have the power, at any time and for any reason, with or without cause, to remove any trustee acting under this instrument and appoint another trustee to replace the removed trustee. Removal shall be effected by giving a written notice of removal to the trustee to be removed and to the person or entity legally entitled to act as successor trustee. The removal shall become effective upon delivery to the settlor of a written acceptance of the trust by the successor trustee, and the settlor shall promptly notify the trustee being removed of the receipt of that acceptance.

(b) The court shall have the power to remove the trustee upon petition by any beneficiary, for any of the following reasons:

- (1) Commission of a breach of trust.
- (2) Insolvency or other unfitness to administer the trust.
- (3) Hostility or lack of cooperation among the co-trustees that impairs the administration of the trust.
- (4) Failure or refusal to act.
- (5) Other good cause, as determined by the court.

6.04. Resignation. Any trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, at least _____ [specify; e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the settlor, if living, to any other trustee then acting, to any persons authorized to designate a successor trustee, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor trustee, if a successor has been designated in accordance with the provisions of this instrument. A resignation shall be effective upon written acceptance of the trust by a successor trustee.

6.05. Vacancies. If a vacancy should occur in the office of the trustee, whether by reason of death, resignation, removal, or other cause, and no successor trustee is appointed as provided in this instrument, the court shall appoint a new trustee to fill the vacancy. In filling a vacancy, the court may, in its discretion, appoint the original or any other number of trustees. In selecting a trustee, the court shall give consideration to the wishes of the beneficiaries who are 14 years of age or older.

6.06. Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any individual who serves as a trustee under this instrument [optional; except any successor trustee appointed by court order under Paragraph 6.05 of this instrument].

6.07. Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trust created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention is in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards set forth in California Probate Code Section 16040 and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

(b) Invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole, and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among the circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.

- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plans within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property of type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in this provision or the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

- (c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.
- (d) Acquire and maintain as a trust asset a life insurance policy on the life of any person, including the trustee, issued by any company and in any amount that the trustee may deem advisable, and exercise all rights of ownership granted in that policy.
- (e) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.
- (f) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estate of the settlor that are in the best interest of any trusts created in this instrument.
- (g) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (h) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (i) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (j) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(k) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [optional: unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(l) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional adviser employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(m) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations and, in that connection, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(n) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(o) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(p) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(q) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(r) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and to purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(s) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(t) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(u) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

6.08. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit General Powers. The grant to the trustee of a specific power or powers in this instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to exercise in furtherance of the purposes of this instrument or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

6.09. Disclaimer or Release of Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold under this instrument, whether expressly granted in this instrument or implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current income payments, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by the successor trustee.

6.10. Discretion to Permit Income Beneficiaries to Occupy Real Property. The trustee may permit any current income beneficiary of this trust to occupy any real property that forms a part of the trust. The terms of the occupancy shall be determined by the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, and may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupancy or occupancy in consideration of full or partial payment of mortgage or trust deed payments, taxes, assessments, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs.

6.11. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

6.12. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

6.13. Payments and Distributions to or for Benefit of Beneficiaries. In lieu of making a direct payment or distribution to any beneficiary who at the time of the payment or distribution is a minor or suffering from a legal disability, or who appears to the trustee by reason of illness, age, injury, or other cause, to be unable to accept the payment or distribution or to make intelligent or responsible use of the same, the trustee may make the payment or distribution to any conservator or guardian duly appointed and acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary; to any custodian acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state (including a suitable custodian selected by the trustee); to any suitable person or persons, such as a relative or friend, with whom the beneficiary is residing; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

6.14. Written Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event upon which the right to payments from any trust may depend, the trustee shall incur no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

6.15. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

PRACTICE TIP

Probate Code Section 16062 requires the trustee of any trust to provide an annual account to the beneficiaries, except under limited circumstances, such as when the trust may be revoked, when the beneficiary waives an accounting, or when the trustee and the beneficiary are the same person [see Prob. Code § 16064]. The contents of the annual account are described in Probate Code Section 16063. Generally, the accounting must reveal all of the information required in a formal accounting, although it may be presented in summary form. Additionally, information must be provided regarding trustee, attorney, and accountant compensation, and statements regarding the rights of the beneficiary to challenge the actions of the trustee must be included [see Prob. Code § 16063].

In light of these provisions, the planner may wish to consider omitting the requirement that an accounting be provided. This provision would only add the burden of preparing a full, formal accounting, which can always be required by the beneficiary in any case when he or she feels that more detail must be revealed by the trustee [see Prob. Code §§ 16061, 16062(a)]. Indeed, many attorneys specifically waive the requirement that any accounting whatsoever be rendered by the trustee. Even with such a waiver in the trust instrument, a beneficiary could still obtain an accounting if it appears that a material breach of the trust has occurred [see Prob. Code § 16064]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

ARTICLE 7 : Concluding Provisions

7.01. Perpetuities Savings Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any trust created by this instrument or by a power of appointment created by this instrument that has not terminated earlier shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of _____ [name individual(s) or describe class of persons whose life or lives are to be the measuring life or lives, e.g.: the settlor and the issue of the settlor living on the date of the settlor's death or the beneficiaries of the trust who are living on the date of the settlor's death]. If a trust is terminated because of the preceding sentence, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this instrument, distribution shall be to the persons entitled to receive income immediately before the termination _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240]. If there is no person who is entitled to receive income immediately before the termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income to _____ [name distributee(s) or specify class, e.g., the issue of the settlor then surviving in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240].

7.02. Simultaneous Death. If the settlor and any beneficiary under this instrument die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, the settlor shall be deemed to have survived the beneficiary, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly.

7.03. No-Contest Clause. If any beneficiary under this instrument, singularly or in combination with any other person or persons, directly or indirectly contests this instrument or the will of the settlor, in whole or in part, or opposes, objects to, or seeks to invalidate any of the provisions of this instrument or of the will of the settlor, or seeks to succeed to any part of the estate of the settlor other than in the manner specified in this instrument or in the will of the settlor, then the right of that person to take any interest given to him or her by this instrument shall be void, and any gift or other interest in the trust property to which the beneficiary would otherwise have been entitled shall pass as if he or she had predeceased the settlor [optional: without issue].

7.04. Definition of Death Taxes. As used in this instrument, the term "death taxes" means all inheritance, estate, succession, and other similar taxes that are payable by any person on account of that person's interest in the decedent's estate or by reason of the decedent's death, including penalties and interest, but excluding the following:

- (a) Any additional tax that may be assessed under Internal Revenue Code Section 2032A.
- (b) Any federal estate taxes recoverable, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A, from the holder or recipient of any qualified terminable interest property that is included in the settlor's federal gross estate under Internal Revenue Code Section 2044.
- (c) Any federal or state tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer, as that term is defined in the federal tax laws, unless that generation-skipping transfer tax is payable directly out of the assets of a trust created by this instrument.

7.05. Definition of Debts and Expenses. As used in this instrument, the term "debts and expenses" shall include the following:

- (a) All costs, expenses of litigation, counsel fees, or other charges that the trustee incurs in connection with the determination of the amount of the death taxes, interest, or penalties referred to in Paragraph 5.02 of this instrument, and
- (b) legally enforceable debts, funeral expenses, expenses of last illness, and administration and property expenses.

7.06. Definition of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the words "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined and derived.

7.07. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the word "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

7.08. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

- (a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;
- (b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;
- (c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and
- (d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

7.09. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

7.10. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

7.11. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

7.12. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

7.13. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of the settlor that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Trust Instruments

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.201

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.201 Nonformula Marital Deduction Trust for Married Settlers

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete trust instrument that may be used by married settlors who wish to create a revocable trust for their own benefit during their lifetimes and the benefit of their children following their deaths, but who are not concerned about reducing estate taxes in the estate of the surviving settlor.

This trust uses the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056] to eliminate all tax on the death of the first settlor. However, this trust does not use a marital deduction formula to take advantage of the unified credit [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505 (gift tax)] to avoid or reduce the overall estate tax burden on the settlors' combined estates. For a marital deduction formula trust for joint settlors, see the form in § 70.202[2].

Nonformula trusts typically are used by settlors who are more interested in giving the surviving spouse maximum control over the trust assets than in saving federal estate tax when the surviving spouse dies. Such persons usually have combined estates that are not large enough to be seriously affected by the estate tax; or, regardless of the size of their estates, are not concerned about the ultimate tax consequences to their children or other beneficiaries.

In a formula marital deduction trust, a portion of the trust assets is placed in a "bypass" or "credit shelter" trust that is structured to escape taxation in the surviving settlor's estate and thereby pass tax-free to the ultimate beneficiaries [see §§ 70.10[3][d], 70.12[6][f], 70.202, P 5.09 (form); see also § 71.14[1] in Ch. 7, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions 1]. As a trade-off for the fact that the property in the bypass trust escapes taxation in the surviving spouse's estate, the surviving spouse must give up a measure of control over the assets in the bypass trust [see §§ 70.10[3][d], 70.12[6][c]; see also § 71.14 in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ]. In contrast, when a nonformula marital deduction trust is used, there is no need to limit the surviving spouse's powers over the trust assets, since those assets will be included in the survivor's estate in any event. Because one of the main attractions of nonformula trusts is the fact that they can permit the surviving spouse to exercise a greater degree of control than formula trusts, the terms of a nonformula trust typically are drafted to maximize the surviving settlor's control. The provisions in this form reflect that purpose.

When the settlors' combined estates are modest--e.g., not greater in value than the sum of the two "applicable exclusion amounts" that will be available in the years of their deaths [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]]--there will be no estate tax liability in any event, and a formula trust will provide no advantage over a nonformula trust. Once the combined estates begin to exceed the sum of the two "applicable exclusion amounts," however, it becomes increasingly more advantageous from a tax point of view to use the marital deduction and unified credit in tandem to reduce the estate tax that would otherwise be payable in the estate of the second spouse to die. This kind of coordinated estate plan can be achieved only through the use of a formula marital deduction trust.

It is important to consider the possibility that assets in the spouses' combined estates will appreciate in value between the time the trust is created and the death of the surviving spouse. Even in a relatively modest estate, sufficient appreciation could cause the total value of the combined estate to exceed the amount protected under the unified credit.

PRACTICE TIP:

Selection of an estate plan of the type created by this form entails certain risks for the clients, particularly the risk that their estate may grow in value to the point where estate tax planning might have been warranted. The practitioner must be cautious in recommending an estate plan which, for the most part, provides for no mandatory estate tax planning. Especially in the case of younger clients, when the potential for growth or appreciation of assets is substantial, care must be exercised before employing the form shown in this section.

Similarly, clients' selection of such a plan entails certain risks for the estate planner, particularly the risk that the clients' children or other beneficiaries may attack the planner for not "insisting" that the clients adopt an estate plan that requires the minimization of estate taxes. Accordingly, an attorney who is considering the use of this form should write a letter to the clients setting forth the possible pitfalls of using this type of estate plan and confirming that it is the clients' desire to prefer simplicity over mandatory tax savings.

One option other than the formula marital deduction trust is the use of a disclaimer trust, which allows the surviving settlor to make the postmortem decision of whether or not to engage in tax planning involving the use of the deceased settlor's unified credit. This option is demonstrated in the form illustrated in this section. Nevertheless, it bears observation that relying solely on the making of a disclaimer in order to use the unified credit means that in a possibly significant number of cases, no tax planning at all will take place. Only by employing a formula marital deduction trust will the estate planner be assured that the unified credit will be fully used in all cases in which its use will provide an overall tax saving. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

For an overview of the operation of the federal estate and gift tax laws, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, §§ 60.13, 60.14. For more detailed discussion of marital deduction formulas and marital deduction planning, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

[c] Trust Declaration Format

This trust instrument uses the trust declaration format. A "declaration of trust" is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument [see [2], P 1.01, below]. Only the trustee is required to execute the declaration. However, it is common for the settlor to sign the declaration to signify his or her approval of the terms of the trust [for signature blocks for declarations of trust, see [2], P 8.01, below ].

A trust agreement, in contrast, is a two-party agreement between the settlor and the trustee. Either format will create a valid inter vivos trust, and prior to 1993 the choice was largely a matter of the drafter's preference. However, many estate planners now believe that the trust declaration format is more advantageous as a result of the decision in Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 . In Heggstad, the court of appeal held that a parcel of real property that was described as a trust asset in a schedule attached to the trust declaration was trustproperty even though it was never formally conveyed to the trust. The court specifically referred to language in Prob. Code § 15200(a) that permits a trust to be created by a "declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee" [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 ; see Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ] . The court did not speculate on whether the result would have been the same if the trust in question had been created by a trust agreement rather than a declaration, but since the result under a declaration is clear, many California estate planners now recommend that revocable trusts be created by declarations rather than trust agreements.

[d] Family Information

It is assumed in this form that the settlors have children, and that neither settlor has children from a prior marriage [see [2], P 1.04, below ]. If either settlor has children from a previous marriage, each of those children should be identified by name, date of birth, and name of the child's other parent. For a form listing children from a prior marriage, see § 70.203, P 1.05 (provision for one-settlor trust).

[e] Revocation and Amendment by Settlers

This form gives the settlors the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust at any time while they are both living [see [2], P 3.01, below ]. Either settlor, acting alone, may revoke or terminate the trust as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor, and as to the community property of the settlors. As discussed in Section 70.12[5][c], the unilateral right to revoke as to community property is necessary both to preserve the character of any community property assets contributed to the trust [see Fam. Code § 761(a), (b)] and to avoid potential gift tax liability that could result if either settlor renounced his or her statutory right to unilaterally revoke the trust as to community property [see I.R.C. § 2511(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b)](relinquishment of dominion and control over property may constitute taxable gift)].

The trust may be modified or amended by either spouse acting alone as to that spouse's separate and quasi-community property in the trust. However, a modification or amendment of the trust affecting any community property of the settlors may be made only by the settlors acting jointly [see [2], P 3.01, below ]. As discussed in § 70.12[5][f], this power is also necessary to preserve the character of community property transferred to the trust [see Fam. Code § 761(a)].

After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving spouse retains the power of revocation and amendment over all of the trust assets except the Disclaimer Trust [see [2], P 3.02, below ; see also [j], below (discussion of Disclaimer Trust)]. This broad power of revocation furthers the goal of maximizing the surviving settlor's control over trust assets, which is typically an important goal in the creation of a nonformula marital deduction trust [see [b], above].

[f] Settlers' Powers to Direct Investments and Borrow From Trust Estate

The settlors are also given powers to direct investments and to borrow money from the trust estate. While both settlors are living, these powers may be exercised with respect to community property only by both settlors acting jointly [see [2], PP 3.05, 3.07, below ]. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor may exercise these powers [see

[2], PP 3.06, 3.08, below ]. Again, these broad powers are consistent with the goal of maximizing the surviving settlor's control over the trust assets [see [b], above]. Optional language restricts the surviving settlor from borrowing from the Disclaimer Trust [see [j], below (discussion of Disclaimer Trust)]. If the surviving settlor is given the power to borrow from the Disclaimer Trust, language restricting the terms of any loan should be included to assure that the surviving settlor's powers over that trust are not overbroad.

[g] Payments and Distributions While Both Settlers Are Living

While both settlers are living, they will have the right to receive as much of the net income of the community property of the trust as they request [see [2], P 4.01, below ]. If either settlor has contributed separate or quasi-community property to the trust, that settlor will have substantially identical income rights in that property [see [2], P 4.02 below ]. The settlers also have analogous rights to request distributions of principal from the community property, separate property, and quasi-community property [see [2], PP 4.03, 4.04, below ].

[h] Special Gift on Deceased Settlor's Death

This form includes a provision making a so-called "special gift" on the deceased settlor's death [see [2], P 5.01, below ]. The term "special gift," as used in this form means a gift that the trustee is required to make after the deceased settlor's death to someone other than the residuary beneficiary. It is analogous, in many respects, to a specific devise or a general pecuniary devise in a will. The special gift in this form is a pecuniary devise, but special gifts of tangible personal property are not uncommon [see § 70.255[2] (form)].

The special gift will be made before any distributions are made to the surviving settlor or any other beneficiary. The special gift typically will be made to a family member or friend whom the settlor wishes to remember after his or her death, but whom the settlor does not wish to receive the full benefit of the residue of the trust estate.

If the settlor does not wish to make a special gift, this provision can be deleted. If the settlor wants to make more than one special gift, identical provisions may be included as necessary.

The special gift used in this form is not intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction. Therefore, if the amount of the gift exceeds the amount protected by the available unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010], it will be subject to estate tax. Under the tax payment provision in this form [see [2], P 5.02., below ], the special gift will not be exempt from proration of estate taxes, with the result that the actual amount that will pass to the recipient may be less than the pecuniary amount specified in the special gift provision. If, as is frequently the case, the settlers want a special gift to pass to the recipient tax free, the tax payment provision in the form must be modified to exclude the special gift from any liability for estate taxes. Before modifying the tax provision, however, the settlers should be reminded that if the special gift is to pass tax free, any tax attributed to the special gift will have to be paid out of other trust assets that would otherwise go to the surviving settlor or other trust beneficiaries.

[i] Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor

After the special gift has been made (or if there is to be no special gift), the trustee will hold the remaining assets in a single trust for the benefit of the surviving settlor. This trust is designed to qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); for additional discussion of this type of trust, see § 71.13 [5] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions]. Although most estate planners generally prefer qualified terminable interest property ("QTIP") trusts [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)] to lifetime income/power of appointment trusts because QTIP trusts offer greater postmortem planning flexibility [see discussion of QTIP trusts in § 71.13 [4] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions], the use of a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is appropriate for a nonformula trust when tax consequences are secondary and the goal is to maximize the surviving spouse's control over the trust assets. For a QTIP trust created by joint settlers, see Section 70.202[2].

Under the lifetime income/power of appointment trust in this form, the surviving settlor will receive all of the income from the trust and have a general power of appointment over the trust assets exercisable on his or her death. The trust must contain these terms in order to qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. The surviving settlor will also have an unlimited power to invade the trust principal during his or her lifetime. The surviving spouse will retain the right to revoke the entire trust (except the Disclaimer trust, discussed below) at any time and for any reason.

[j] Disclaimer Trust

This form gives the surviving spouse the option to disclaim all or part of the assets that he or she would otherwise receive on the death of the deceased spouse. Any assets that are thus disclaimed will be held in a special Disclaimer Trust. The Disclaimer Trust is designed so that the trust assets will not be included in the surviving spouse's taxable estate when the surviving spouse dies. To achieve this tax treatment, the surviving spouse's rights in and powers over the Disclaimer Trust are appropriately limited. First, the surviving spouse has no power of revocation over the Disclaimer Trust. Second, the surviving spouse will receive principal from the Disclaimer Trust only in accordance with an "ascertainable standard." In other words, the surviving spouse has only a limited right to receive principal from the Disclaimer Trust.

The Disclaimer Trust provides for mandatory payments of income to the surviving spouse. Alternatively, the trust instrument may permit income payments, like principal distributions, only in accordance with an ascertainable standard. However, if the amount of income generated by the Disclaimer Trust exceeds what is necessary to maintain the surviving spouse in accordance with the specified standard, any excess income will be accumulated in the trust, where it will be taxed at the relatively high income tax rates applied to trust income [see I.R.C. § 1(e)]. This the reason why this form provides for payment of all income.

The Disclaimer Trust will provide some postmortem planning flexibility in the event that unanticipated changes in the settlors' circumstances make it advantageous for the surviving settlor to disclaim some part of the trust property. As discussed in § 70.12[6][i], many experienced estate planners advocate including a disclaimer trust in every trust instrument. However, it is especially important in this particular trust, since it provides the only available flexibility to accomplish any meaningful postmortem tax planning. If, for example, the settlors "win the lottery," inherit a large sum of money, or are awarded a large personal injury judgment, this flexibility may suddenly become very important. If the Disclaimer Trust is not needed, it simply will never become operative.

[k] Payments and Distributions After Death of Surviving Settlor

After the death of the surviving settlor, any remaining portion of the trust assets that the surviving settlor does not dispose of under his or her general power of appointment [see [i], above] (including any assets remaining in the Disclaimer Trust) will be held in a "family pot" trust for the benefit of the settlor's children until the youngest child reaches a specified age, such as 25 [see [2], PP 5.04(e)] (payments made in accordance with disclaimer trust terms), 5.07 (terms of disclaimer trust)]. If the settlors would prefer a "separate share" arrangement whereby each child has his or her own discrete trust or share [see §§ 70.210[1][b], 70.211[1][b] for discussion], the form can be modified appropriately. For a sample "separate share" arrangement that can be adapted for use with this trust, see § 70.202[2], Paragraph 5.10.

If any of the settlors' children predecease the surviving settlor and leave issue who survive the surviving settlor, the share of each deceased child will be divided among the child's issue and distributed to those issue. Optional language permits the share of any issue who is under a stated age to be retained in a separate trust for that issue until he or she reaches the age of distribution. Many clients prefer the latter option, which assures that the shares of any grandchildren will be kept in trust until they reach an age that the settlors believe is appropriate for them to receive the trust property.

If all the settlors' children predecease the surviving settlor, and leave no surviving issue, the property will be given to a named charity, or disposed of in some other manner designated by the settlors.

[l] Division of Trust for Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Purposes

This form contains a complex provision permitting or requiring the trustee to divide the trust into exempt and non-exempt trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax (GST) purposes. For discussion of this provision, see § 70.12[6][j]. Although GST liability may seem like a remote possibility in a nonformula marital deduction trust that is not directed toward maximizing tax savings, the situation may change if the assets appreciate substantially and any of the beneficiaries are in a generation that is two or more generations below that of the settlors [see I.R.C. §§ 2611(a), 2612, 2613(a)]. For this reason, it is recommended that the provision be included. If it is not needed, the provision simply will never become operative. Since it is assumed that the value of the trust assets are modest (and will probably be less than the available GST exemption) [see I.R.C. §§ 2631, 2010(c)]; for the exemption amounts. See Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.16[3]], it is recommended that this provision be drafted to make division of the trusts optional rather than mandatory.

PRACTICE TIP:

Despite the fact that the recommended provision provides postmortem planning flexibility without requiring any specific action on the part of the surviving settlor, the practitioner may sometimes encounter considerable resistance if he or she suggests adding this type of provision to a particular estate plan. This is because the provision is somewhat lengthy and technical to the point that most clients do not understand it, the flexibility it provides, or the benefit of having that flexibility. In the face of such client opposition, the planner should consider carefully whether such a provision is likely to make a significant difference in the plan. Such considerations should include a review of the clients' assets, analysis of the specific dispositive provisions of the plan after the surviving settlor's death, and a determination of whether or not the use of the deceased settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption, via the disclaimer trust (or plus the full surviving settlor's exemption is likely to cover all potential generation-skipping transfers [I.R.C. § 2631]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman).

[m] Trustees

When a revocable inter vivos trust is funded with community property, it is common for the spouses to act as joint or co-trustees of the trust during their lifetimes. It is assumed that the settlors will act as the co-trustees of this trust during their lifetimes, and that the surviving settlor will thereafter continue as sole trustee [see [2], P 1.01, below]. However, the form includes a full complement of provisions designed to provide for successor trustees to serve in the event one or both of the settlors ceases to act as trustee [see [2], PP 6.01- 6.05, below]. If the trust continues after the death of the surviving settlor, it will be necessary to appoint a successor trustee in any case.

[n] Trustee's Powers

This form includes a detailed list of the trustee's powers [see [2], P 6.08, below]. This publication recommends that a complete set of trustee powers be included in every trust. For general discussion of the list of trustee powers included in the forms in this publication, and other general provisions governing the conduct of the trustee, see § 70.200[1][o].

When a marital deduction trust is involved, modifications to the statutory trustee powers should be considered very carefully. Powers that appear innocuous in themselves may imperil the marital deduction if they might conceivably affect the surviving spouse's right to all the trust income or limit the survivor's general power of appointment over trust assets. For example, a power or duty to retain unproductive trust assets will disqualify the trust from the marital deduction unless the surviving settlor has the power to compel the trustee to make the assets productive [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. Obviously, any power to withhold or accumulate income during the surviving settlor's lifetime will also disqualify the trust.

Baxter, husband and wife, of Anaheim, California or First National Bank and Trust Co.*] (the "trustee[s]") hereby declare[s] that _____ [he has or she has or it has or they have] received certain property (the "trust estate") from _____ [identify settlors, e.g., Jeffrey G. Baxter and Mary S. Baxter, husband and wife, of Anaheim, California] (the "settlors"), and hold[s] that property in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Name of Trust. The name of the trust created by this instrument shall be _____ [name of trust, e.g., The Baxter Family 1995 Trust].

1.03. Effective Date. This declaration shall be effective _____ [on the date it is executed by the parties or immediately upon execution by all of the parties or specify other effective date].

1.04. Children. The settlors have _____ living _____ [child or children], whose name[s] and date[s] of birth _____ [is or are] as follows:

Name	Date of Birth
[e.g., Linda S. Baxter	January 28, 1990]
[e.g., Robert B. Baxter	May 31, 1992]
[e.g., Patricia R. Baxter	October 6, 1994]

Neither settlor has any deceased children.

ARTICLE 2 : Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All of the property described in Schedule A, attached to this instrument, and any other property that may hereafter be subject to this trust, is referred to in this instrument as the "trust estate," and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

2.02. Character of Trust Assets. All community property of the settlors transferred to this trust, and the proceeds of all such property, shall continue to be the community property of the settlors under the laws of California. All separate property shall remain the separate property, and all quasi-community property shall remain the quasi-community property, of the contributing settlor.

2.03. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added, or by titling any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument. During any time that neither settlor is serving as trustee or cotrustee of this trust, any transfer of property to the trust under this paragraph shall be effective only upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any property added to the trust estate shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

ARTICLE 3 : Rights and Powers of Settlers

3.01. Powers of Revocation and Amendment While Both Settlers Are Living. During the joint lifetimes of the settlers, this trust may be revoked or terminated, in whole or in part, by either settlor as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor and any community property of the settlers. This trust may be modified or amended by either settlor acting alone as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor, and by both spouses acting jointly as to any community property of the settlers.

3.02. Revocation and Amendment After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor may at any time amend, revoke, or terminate any trust created by this instrument, other than the Disclaimer Trust, which shall be irrevocable and not subject to amendment. Upon the death of the surviving settlor, every trust created by this instrument shall be irrevocable and not subject to amendment.

3.03. Method of Revocation or Amendment. Any amendment, revocation, or termination shall be made only by a writing signed by the amending or revoking settlor or settlers and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. If the writing is signed by only one settlor and the other settlor is living, a copy of the writing shall also be delivered to the other settlor in person or by certified mail.

3.04. Delivery of Property After Revocation. _____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any writing revoking or terminating the trust as to any community property forming part of the trust estate, the trustee shall deliver the affected property to the settlers or to a person or persons designated by both settlers in that writing to receive the property. Unless otherwise provided in the revocation or this trust instrument, any community property so returned shall continue to be the community property of the settlers. _____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any writing revoking or terminating the trust as to any separate or quasi-community property of either settlor, the trustee shall deliver the affected property to the revoking settlor or to a person or persons designated in that writing to receive the property.

3.05. Power to Direct Investments While Both Settlers Are Living. While both settlers are living, the settlers shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to do any or all of the following:

- (a) Invest trust funds in specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment;
- (b) Retain specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment held in trust under this instrument; and
- (c) Sell, encumber, lease, abandon, or dispose of any trust property.

Directions with respect to any portion of the trust estate that is the community property of the settlers may be given only by a writing signed by both settlers. Directions with respect to any portion of the trust estate that is separate or quasi-community property of one settlor may be given by a writing signed by that settlor alone. If a direction is to remain in effect for a specified period of time only, or to be subject to any other condition or conditions, the writing must specify the period of time and the condition or conditions. If trust property is invested in accordance with any direction given as specified in this paragraph, the trustee shall not be liable for losses sustained as a direct or indirect result of the trustee's compliance with the direction.

3.06. Power to Direct Investments After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor and while the surviving settlor is living, the surviving settlor shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to sell, exchange, or invest property of any trust created under this instrument, except the Disclaimer Trust. No person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest property of the Disclaimer Trust. Any direction given to the trustee shall be in writing and signed by the surviving settlor. If a direction is to remain in effect for a specified period of time only, or to be subject to any other condition or conditions, the writing must specify the period of time and the condition or conditions. If trust property is invested in accordance with any direction given as specified in this paragraph, the trustee shall not be liable for losses sustained as a direct or indirect result of the trustee's compliance with the direction. After the death of the surviving settlor, no person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest any trust property.

3.07. Power to Borrow From Trust Estate While Both Settlers Are Living. While both settlers are living, the settlers shall have the power to borrow from the income or principal of the trust estate, with or without security, as provided in this paragraph. Any loan from any portion of the trust estate that is the community property of the settlers may be made only by a writing signed by both settlers, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan. Any loan from any portion of the trust estate that is the separate or quasi-community property of one of the settlers may be made only by a writing signed by that settlor, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan.

3.08. Power to Borrow From Trust Estate After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor shall have the power to borrow from the income or principal of any trust created under this instrument [optional:; except the Disclaimer Trust]. Any such loan may be made only by a writing signed by the surviving settlor, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan. [If surviving settlor is given power to borrow from the Disclaimer Trust (see above), include the following language: Any loan made from the Disclaimer Trust to the surviving settlor shall be made on such reasonable security and at such a reasonable rate of interest as would generally be appropriate for a market loan of similar amount and term and for a similar purpose.]

3.09. Exercise of Settlers' Rights and Powers by Others. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any right or power that either settlor could exercise personally under the terms of this instrument, _____ [except or including] the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ [this trust or any trust created by this instrument], may be exercised for and on behalf of that settlor by any attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for that settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by that settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by a duly appointed and acting conservator of that settlor, after petition to the court in accordance with California Probate Code Section 2580, or any successor statute [add optional clause to limit authority to amend or revoke, e.g.::; provided, however, that the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ (this trust or any trust created by this instrument), in whole or in part, may be exercised for or on behalf of that settlor by an attorney in fact or conservator only if distribution of that settlor's estate during that settlor's lifetime is not substantially altered by the amendment, revocation, or termination, and the amendment, revocation, or termination does not result in any adverse tax consequences to that settlor's estate].

ARTICLE 4 : Payments and Distributions While Both Settlers Are Living

4.01. Payments of Income From Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlers, or either of them, as much of the net income of the community property of the trust as the settlers, or either of them, shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that payments are to be made periodically.

4.02. Payments of Income From Separate and Quasi-Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of a settlor whose separate or quasi-community property constitutes part of the trust estate as much of the net income of that property as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that payments are to be made periodically.

4.03. Distributions of Principal From Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlers, or either of them, as much of the principal of the community property of the trust, up to the whole thereof, as the settlers, or either of them, shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically. Any money or other property paid or distributed to or for the benefit of the settlors, or either of them, from the community property of the trust shall remain the community property of the settlors. A settlor who receives any such property shall have the same obligations with respect to that property that he or she would have with respect to community property generally.

4.04. Distributions of Principal From Separate and Quasi-Community Property. While both settlors are living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of a settlor whose separate or quasi-community property constitutes part of the trust estate as much of the principal of that property, up to the whole thereof, as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically.

4.05. Requests on Settlor's Behalf. If, at any time, either settlor is unable personally to make a request of the trustee, the settlor's right to make the request may be exercised for or on behalf of the settlor by an attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by the trustee acting for and on behalf of the settlor. The trustee shall have discretion to determine when the settlor is unable personally to make a request for purposes of this paragraph.

4.06. Settlor's Obligation for Community Property Distributed. Any payment of income or principal from the trust community property to or for the benefit of the settlors, or either of them, shall remain the community property of the settlors. A settlor who receives any such payment shall have the same obligations respecting that property that he or she would have with respect to all community property generally.

4.07. Trustee's Power to Make Gifts at Direction of Settlor. So long as both settlors are living, the trustee shall have the power to make gifts, as specified in this Paragraph:

(a) Community Property. The trustee shall distribute such sums of community property trust principal to such person or persons who are the natural objects of the settlors' bounty, as the settlors, acting jointly, may direct in writing.

(b) Separate and Quasi-Community Property. The trustee shall distribute such sums of trust principal that is the separate property or the quasi-community property of a settlor to such person or persons who are the natural objects of that settlor's bounty, as that settlor may direct in writing.

(c) Incapacity of a Settlor. In the event that a settlor is unable to direct the trustee in writing under this Paragraph due to incapacity, such a direction may be made on the settlor's behalf by a duly authorized attorney in fact acting under a valid durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act (or successor statute) [optional: as long as the durable power of attorney so executed by the settlor specifically authorizes the attorney in fact to exercise such a withdrawal power, or power to make gifts from trust principal, through enforceable demands on the trustee]; provided, however, that the total amount of any such gifts made pursuant to the direction of an attorney in fact to any one person in any one year shall not exceed the annual amount excluded from gift tax under Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b) (or a successor statute).

ARTICLE 5 : Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor

5.01. Special Gift. On the death of the deceased settlor, the trustee shall distribute the sum of $ _____ to _____ [name of beneficiary, e.g., Amy Bush] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if she survives the deceased settlor or if she survives the deceased settlor for 60 days]. [If distribution is conditioned on survival, add alternative disposition, e.g.: If _____ (name, e.g., Amy Bush) does not survive the deceased settlor (for that period), this gift shall _____ (e.g., lapse or be distributed to Albert W. Hall)]. This gift may be satisfied only out of the deceased settlor's one-half interest in the community property of the settlors or the deceased settlor's interest in his or her separate or quasi-community property.

5.02. Payment of Taxes. All death taxes payable by reason of the deceased settlor's death [to include taxes on assets passing outside trust, add:, whether attributable to assets of this trust or to assets outside the trust,] shall be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate as provided in the California Probate Code]. However, payments under this paragraph shall be made only out of the deceased settlor's separate property or the deceased settlor's one-half interest in the community or quasi-community property and shall not be made from the surviving settlor's property. [To except property qualifying for marital deduction from apportionment, add: Any death taxes attributable to any property passing to the surviving settlor that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction shall be paid pro rata out of property that does not qualify for the marital deduction, so that property qualifying for the marital deduction shall pass to the surviving settlor free of any death taxes].

5.03. Payment of Debts and Expenses. All debts and expenses attributable to any property in the trust or the deceased settlor's estate may, in the trustee's discretion, be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate in the same manner as the death taxes].

5.04. Disposition of Trust on Death of Deceased Settlor. Upon the death of the deceased settlor, and after any distributions or payments under Paragraphs 5.01 through 5.03 of this instrument have been made, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments, as agreed upon by the surviving settlor and the trustee, but not less often than annually. Any other provision of this instrument to the contrary notwithstanding, in determining the net income of the trust payable under this paragraph, the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income to qualify the trust for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that deduction. It is the intention of the settlors that the surviving settlor, as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during his or her lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is consistent with this expressed intention. It is also the intention of the settlors that the trust produce for the surviving settlor during his or her lifetime the income, or that the surviving settlor shall have the benefit of the trust property, as is consistent with the value of the trust property and with its preservation.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor as much of the principal of the trust, up to the whole thereof, as the surviving settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically.

(c) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee may pay any death taxes [add if appropriate: attributable to property held in the trust] and the expenses of the last illness and funeral of the surviving settlor out of the principal of the trust, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses.

(d) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall distribute the trust property then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the estate of the surviving settlor, on such terms and conditions, either outright or in trust, or by creating further powers of appointment, as the surviving settlor shall appoint by his or her valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. The trustee may rely upon any instrument admitted to probate as the last will of the surviving settlor in carrying out the terms of the power of appointment and shall not be liable for any good faith act in reliance upon that will, even if it is later determined to be invalid with respect to its purported exercise of this power of appointment. In the event the will of the surviving settlor is not offered for probate, the trustee may make an independent determination with respect to the validity of the will and whether or not the will has effectively exercised this power of appointment. If the trustee receives no notice of the existence of a will of the surviving settlor within six months after the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee may distribute the trust assets and income as if this power of appointment had not been exercised, and shall in that event be conclusively presumed to have acted in good faith, even if a valid will is later discovered.

(e) If any property subject to the foregoing power of appointment is not effectively appointed by the surviving settlor, that property, after any payment of taxes, debts, and expenses pursuant to the applicable provisions of this instrument, shall be distributed _____ [if generation-skipping transfer taxes are not a concern: to the Disclaimer Trust created in this instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Disclaimer Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph 5.07 pertaining to the Disclaimer Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Disclaimer Trust unless this trust and the Disclaimer Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

5.05. Disclaimer of Property. Any property or portion of property that is disclaimed by the surviving settlor shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Disclaimer Trust. However, if the surviving settlor also disclaims an interest in all or any portion of the Disclaimer Trust, the disclaimed interest shall be administered and distributed as if the surviving settlor predeceased the deceased settlor.

5.06. Treatment of Disclaimer Trust During Lifetime of Surviving Settlor. During the lifetime of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Disclaimer Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the surviving settlor and the trustee, but not less often than annually.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the surviving settlor's health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, shall be within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) Upon the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust as a single trust for the benefit of the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors as provided in Paragraph 5.07 of this instrument.

5.07. Disposition of Disclaimer Trust Upon Death of Surviving Settlor. Upon the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Disclaimer Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlors, until the youngest child reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income and principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the health, education, support, and maintenance of each of them. In making these payments and distributions, the trustee may pay, distribute, or apply more to or for some beneficiaries than others, and may make payments or distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [Optional: No amount paid or applied as provided in this subparagraph need be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust.] All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph shall be within the trustee's discretion and final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) At any time or times before the time specified in this instrument for distribution of the assets of this trust, the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may make an early distribution of principal to any of the children of the settlors if, in the trustee's opinion, there is a valid reason for making the distribution [optional: and if the remaining principal and income will be adequate for the reasonable health, education, support, and maintenance of all of the beneficiaries]. The trustee shall deduct the early distribution, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the share ultimately distributed to the child [optional: or his or her issue]. Early distributions to a child shall not exceed, in the aggregate, [if amount of distributions is to be limited to specified fraction or percentage of beneficiary's distributive share of trust, add: _____ (fraction or percentage, e.g., 50 percent of or one-third of)] the portion of the trust that would be distributed to that child, after offsetting any prior early distributions and any loans or advances not repaid to the trustee, if the trust were to be terminated and its assets distributed on the date that the early distribution is made. However, no child who is a trustee or co-trustee of the trust shall have the power to make early distributions of principal to himself or herself pursuant to this subparagraph]. The trustee, upon making any distribution in accordance with this subparagraph, shall give the beneficiary receiving the distribution written notice identifying the distribution as "an early distribution under Paragraph 5.07(b)."

(c) When the youngest child of the settlors reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute the balance of the trust property among the children of the settlors then living, in equal shares. If any of the children of the settlors are deceased at the time of distribution and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child had he or she survived shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue [who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 25 years] shall be distributed outright to that issue. [The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ (e.g., 25 years) shall be placed in a separate trust for that issue, held and administered in accordance with this Paragraph, and distributed to that issue when he or she attains the age of _____ (e.g., 25 years)]. If all the children of the settlors die before reaching the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years without surviving issue, the trustee shall distribute the balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlors].

5.08. Release, Disclaimer, or Restriction of Power of Appointment. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any power of appointment created by this instrument, whether expressly granted in this instrument or implied by law, may be released, disclaimed, or restricted in scope. Any such power may be released to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Probate Code Section 661 and disclaimed to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Probate Code Sections 260-295, or any applicable successor statutes that exist on the date of exercise of the release or disclaimer.

5.09. Consideration of Beneficiary's Other Resources. In making any discretionary payments of income or distributions of principal from any trust created by this instrument for the benefit of any person, the trustee may take into consideration, to the extent the trustee deems advisable, any other income or resources available to that person that are known to the trustee and that are reasonably available for that purpose.

5.10. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of any trust under this instrument and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act.

5.11. Trustee Shall Favor Income Beneficiaries. The primary purpose in establishing the trusts created by this instrument is to benefit the persons who are the income beneficiaries. It is the settlors' intention that the trustee shall exercise the powers and discretion granted in this instrument in favor of the persons who are the then-current income beneficiaries of the trust, except when such an exercise would be inconsistent with other provisions of this instrument. In each instance, the rights of subsequent beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries shall be considered subordinate to the rights of the then-current income beneficiaries. This declaration of intention is intended to include, but is not limited to, investment policy, the exercise of discretionary powers to determine what constitutes principal and what constitutes income, and the determination of the amounts to be paid to or applied for the benefit of the income beneficiaries.

PRACTICE TIP

Caution should be used before the above provision is employed. In many cases, the settlors do not intend to primarily benefit income beneficiaries, but instead have just as much interest in providing for the remainder beneficiaries. In those cases, this provision should be omitted. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

5.12. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this paragraph apply to any trust under this instrument that is created on or at any time after the deceased settlor's death and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by the deceased settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the deceased settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this paragraph applies, the trustee

_____ [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [*If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this Paragraph, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlors' intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust, so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The Trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subparagraph.*

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this Paragraph, the trustee shall _____ [*for a pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for a fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided. [*If preceding sentence provides for a pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of the deceased settlor's death, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the deceased settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this Paragraph, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the deceased settlor's death to the date of payment.]

(c) Regardless of whether subparagraph (a) applies, if the amount of the deceased settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) to a trust to which this paragraph applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the deceased settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the deceased settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this paragraph applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust terms to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(a) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust terms to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(b) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

[Optional:]

(e) If the trustee determines that the burdens of generation-skipping transfer taxes, income taxes, and death taxes on a Non-Exempt Trust, either settlor's estate, or the beneficiaries of that trust would be reduced, the trustee may petition the court to amend the trust to grant to one or more trust beneficiaries who are non-skip persons in a generation below the deceased settlor a general testamentary power of appointment over all or a specified portion of that Non-Exempt Trust. Any power to amend the trust is within the discretion of the court, and the preceding sentence shall not be construed to give the trustee any power that the trustee does not already have under California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances, nor shall it be construed to limit the power of the trustee or any beneficiary under the California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances.

(f) The purpose of this paragraph is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and nontax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlors' intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subparagraph are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(g) If, upon the death of the surviving settlor, (1) the surviving settlor is considered to be the transferor of any Non-Exempt Trust established by this instrument for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, and (2) the surviving settlor's executor allocates any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the surviving settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) (or any equivalent successor statute) to that Non-Exempt Trust so that the entire trust then has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, that trust shall then be considered to be an Exempt Trust for purposes of this paragraph of the trust instrument.

(h) In no event may the trustee exercise any power under this paragraph in a manner that will impair the marital deduction.

(i) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax, the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this Paragraph.

ARTICLE 6 : Trustee

6.01. Definition. Unless the context requires otherwise, all references in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed to refer to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees.

6.02. Successor Trustees. (a) If, while both settlors are living, any co-trustee fails or ceases to act as co-trustee, the settlors shall have the power to designate any suitable person or entity to act as successor co-trustee. This power may be exercised _____ [only by both settlors, acting jointly or by the settlors, acting either jointly or individually]. The successor co-trustee shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor. If a successor trustee is not designated in this way, then no successor co-trustee shall be appointed. Rather, the remaining co-trustee shall have full power to act as trustee and to complete the trust administration.

(b) If, after the death of the deceased settlor, any trustee or co-trustee fails or ceases to act as trustee or co-trustee, the surviving settlor shall have the power to designate any suitable person or entity to act as successor trustee or co-trustee. The successor trustee or co-trustee shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor.

(c) If, for any reason, the office of trustee becomes vacant and no trustee is designated under subparagraphs (a) or (b) of this paragraph, the following persons, in the order of priority indicated, shall be successor trustee:

First, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., William J. Gray, of Anaheim, California];

Second, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Sandra M. Green, of Buena Park, California];

Third, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., First National Bank and Trust Company, Los Angeles, California].

6.03. Removal and Replacement. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, while both settlors are living, the settlors, acting jointly, shall have the power, at any time and for any reason, to remove any trustee acting under this instrument and appoint another trustee to replace the removed trustee. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor shall have the power, at any time and for any reason, to remove any trustee acting under this instrument and appoint another trustee to replace the removed trustee. Removal shall be effected by giving a written notice of removal to the trustee to be removed and to the person or entity legally entitled to act as successor trustee. The removal shall become effective upon delivery to the settlors (or the surviving settlor) of a written acceptance of the trust by the successor trustee. The settlors (or the surviving settlor) shall promptly notify the trustee being removed of the receipt of that acceptance.

(b) The court shall have the power to remove the trustee upon petition by any beneficiary, for any of the following reasons:

- (1) Commission of a breach of trust.
- (2) Insolvency or other unfitness to administer the trust.
- (3) Hostility or lack of cooperation among the co-trustees that impairs the administration of the trust.
- (4) Failure or refusal to act.
- (5) Other good cause, as determined by the court.

6.04. Resignation. Any trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, at least _____ [specify; e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the settlors, if living, to any other trustee then acting, to any persons authorized to designate a successor trustee, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor trustee, if any has been designated under the provisions of this instrument. A resignation shall be effective upon written acceptance of the trust by a successor trustee.

6.05. Vacancies. If a vacancy should occur in the office of the trustee, whether by reason of death, resignation, removal, or other cause, and no successor trustee is appointed as provided in this instrument, the court shall appoint a new trustee to fill the vacancy. In filling a vacancy, the court may, in its discretion, appoint the original or any other number of trustees. In selecting a trustee, the court shall give consideration to the wishes of the beneficiaries who are 14 years of age or older.

6.06. Exercise of Management Powers While Settlor's Are Co-Trustees. While both settlors are acting as co-trustees under this instrument, with respect to community property held in the trust, either of them may be sole signatory of all checks and other withdrawal instruments drawn on any trust account, and of any instruments of conveyance of trust property other than community real property or a community property interest in a business operated and managed by one settlor. A settlor acting as a trustee and operating or managing a business that is community property may, acting alone, sell, exchange, encumber, or dispose of that business after giving prior notice to the other settlor of any sale, lease, exchange, encumbrance, or other disposition of all or substantially all of the personal property used in the operation of the business (including personal property used for agricultural purposes). Any and all powers relating to the management of any trust property that comprises the separate or quasi-community property of either settlor shall be exercised only by the settlor who contributed that property to the trust.

6.07. Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any individual who serves as a trustee under this instrument [optional; except any successor trustee appointed by court order under Paragraph 6.05 of this instrument].

6.08. Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention is in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards set forth in California Probate Code Section 16040. and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

(b) Invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole, and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among the circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.

- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plans within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property of type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in this provision or the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

- (c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.
- (d) Acquire and maintain as a trust asset a life insurance policy on the life of any person, including the trustee, issued by any company and in any amount that the trustee may deem advisable, and exercise all rights of ownership granted in that policy; provided, however, that as to any assets of the trust (other than assets held in the Disclaimer Trust), the surviving settlor shall have the right, by delivery of a written instrument to the trustee, to require the trustee to convert any such policy into productive property within a reasonable time following the receipt of that request.
- (e) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.
- (f) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estate of either settlor that are in the best interest of any trusts created in this instrument.
- (g) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (h) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (i) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (j) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(k) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [optional: unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(l) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional adviser employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(m) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations and, in that connection, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(n) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(o) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(p) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(q) In the trustee's discretion, make loans to beneficiaries out of funds of the trust, and guarantee the repayment of loans made to beneficiaries by third parties by encumbering trust assets.

(r) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(s) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and to purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(t) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(u) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(v) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

6.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit General Powers. The grant to the trustee in this instrument of a specific power or powers shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to exercise in furtherance of the purposes of this instrument or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

6.10. Retention of Family Residence. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall retain, in any trust or trusts created by this trust instrument, any interest in real property used by the settlors as their principal residence at the time of the first settlor's death ("the family residence"), and shall deal with the family residence in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

(a) During his or her lifetime, the surviving settlor shall have the right to occupy the family residence (or any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) free of any rent.

(b) The trustee shall pay as much of the mortgage or trust deed payments, property taxes, assessments, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs on the family residence (or on any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) as corresponds to the trust's proportionate interest in the same. The trustee shall make those payments out of income or principal of the trust or trusts in accordance with the principles applicable to charging of payments under California law, but in no event shall payment be made in a manner that disqualifies any part of any trust, that would otherwise so qualify, for the federal estate tax marital deduction.

(c) The surviving settlor, at his or her option, shall have the right to advise the trustee in writing that he or she no longer wishes to occupy the family residence and to direct the trustee to sell it, or any interest therein. In deciding on the terms and conditions relating to any sale, the trustee shall take into account all relevant factors, including, but not limited to, the intent of the settlors that no sale be made in a "forced sale" situation (other than at the direction of the surviving settlor) or at a time when, because of high mortgage rates or otherwise, the residential real estate market is depressed. In selling the family residence, the trustee may dispose of it on such terms as the trustee deems desirable, including an installment sale or any other desirable method of disposing of the family residence, provided that if the sale is for consideration other than cash, the purchaser's obligation shall be secured by a first deed of trust. In the event of a sale, the surviving settlor may direct the trustee in writing to apply the proceeds of the sale to the purchase of a substitute residence or residential property, of comparable or lesser value, to be selected by the surviving settlor, or to reinvest the proceeds in any manner that he or she may direct, provided that any such investments satisfy normal fiduciary standards of prudence and safety, and to use the income from reinvestment to pay the rental or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected by the surviving settlor. Any net trust accounting income from any such investments, in excess of the trust share of the rental costs and any other expenses of trust administration, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

(d) If the surviving settlor does not direct the trustee to sell the family residence, he or she shall have the right to direct the trustee in writing to lease it, or any interest in it. In the event of lease, the trustee shall continue to pay the expenses of maintaining the family residence as specified above, subject to the lease terms, and shall use the entire net income from the lease to pay the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected and occupied by the surviving settlor. Any net trust accounting income from any lease of the family residence, in excess of the trust's share of the cost of the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.]

(e) Upon the death of the surviving settlor, the trust's interest in either the family residence, any proceeds remaining from the sale of the family residence, or any substitute residence or residential property purchased by the trustee with any proceeds of sale or lease of the family residence, shall be distributed in accordance with the applicable provisions of the trust or trusts in which the interest or interests are held, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

6.11. Power to Divide or Combine Trusts. The trustee shall have the power to divide a single trust into separate shares, each to be administered in accordance with the terms and conditions of the single trust from which they were created, when the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, determines that division is desirable or advisable in view of tax considerations (including considerations related to the income tax, the gift tax, the estate tax, and the generation-skipping transfer tax) or other objectives of the trusts and their beneficiaries. The trustee shall not be required to make a physical segregation or division of the various trust shares created under this trust instrument, except as segregation or division may be required by reason of the termination and distribution of any of the trusts, but the trustee shall keep separate accounts and records for different undivided interests. The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, shall have the further power to combine two or more trusts having substantially the same terms into a single trust for purposes of administration, when tax or other factors indicate that such combination would be desirable or advisable. [Optional: In deciding whether to combine trusts, the trustee should consider the generation-skipping transfer tax "inclusion ratio" of the trusts to be combined. Trusts having the same inclusion ratios may be combined. Trusts having different inclusion ratios generally should not be combined unless their inclusion ratios are maintained unchanged through substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 2654(b), and the applicable regulations thereunder.]

6.12. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

6.13. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

6.14. Payments and Distributions to or for Benefit of Beneficiaries. In lieu of making a direct payment or distribution to any beneficiary who at the time of the payment or distribution is a minor or suffering from a legal disability, or who appears to the trustee by reason of illness, age, injury, or other cause, to be unable to accept the payment or distribution or to make intelligent or responsible use of the same, the trustee may make the payment or distribution to any conservator or guardian duly appointed and acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary; to any custodian acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state, including a suitable custodian selected by the trustee; to any suitable person or persons, such as a relative or friend, with whom the beneficiary is residing; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

6.15. Limitation on Powers That Would Imperil Marital Deduction. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall exercise power and discretion over any trust or trust share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction only in a manner consistent with all statutory and regulatory requirements for the full allowance of the marital deduction for that trust or share.

6.16. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. Any trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by the other trustee or trustees.

6.17. Trustee's Liability. No [optional: "family" or individual] trustee [optional: who is serving without compensation under this trust instrument] shall be liable to any interested party for acts or omissions of that trustee, except those resulting from that trustee's willful misconduct or gross negligence. [Optional: As used in this provision, a "family" trustee is a trustee who is related to the settlors by blood or marriage.] This standard shall also apply regarding a trustee's liability for the acts or omissions of any co-trustee or predecessor trustee.

PRACTICE TIP

One should carefully consider whether or not the above provision should be included. In effect, this provision partially relieves the trustee of liability in exchange for the trustee's waiver of any claim to compensation. This provision may be omitted if the client prefers not to allow the trustee to effectively "buy" a lesser standard of conduct by waiving compensation. While the savings in compensation may sound attractive, the settlor should consider whether or not it might be preferable, in the long run, to pay for the trustee's time and services and require, in return, that the trustee adhere to a high standard of conduct. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

6.18. Written Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event upon which the right to payments from any trust may depend, the trustee shall incur no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

6.19. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

PRACTICE TIP

Probate Code Section 16062 requires the trustee of any trust to provide an annual account to the beneficiaries, except under limited circumstances, such as when the trust may be revoked, when the beneficiary waives an accounting, or when the trustee and the beneficiary are the same person [see Prob. Code § 16064]. The contents of the annual account are described in Probate Code Section 16063. Generally, the accounting must reveal all of the information required in a formal accounting, although it may be presented in summary form. Additionally, information must be provided regarding trustee, attorney and accountant compensation, and statements regarding the rights of the beneficiary to challenge the actions of the trustee must be included [see Prob. Code § 16063].

In light of these provisions, the planner may wish to consider omitting the requirement that an accounting be provided. This provision would only add the burden of preparing a full, formal accounting, which can always be required by the beneficiary in any case when he or she feels that more detail must be revealed by the trustee [see Prob. Code §§ 16061, 16062(a)]. Indeed, many attorneys specifically waive the requirement that any accounting whatsoever be rendered by the trustee. Even with such a waiver in the trust instrument, a beneficiary could still obtain an accounting if it appears that a material breach of the trust has occurred [see Prob. Code § 16064]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

ARTICLE 7 : Concluding Provisions

7.01. Perpetuities Savings Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any trust created by this instrument or by a power of appointment created by this instrument that has not terminated earlier shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of _____ [name individual(s) or describe class of persons whose life or lives are to be the measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlors and the issue of the settlors living on the date of the deceased settlor's death or the beneficiaries of the trust who are living on the date of the deceased settlor's death]. If a trust is terminated because of the preceding sentence, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this instrument, distribution shall be to the persons entitled to receive income immediately before the termination _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240]. If there is no person who is entitled to receive income immediately before the termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income to _____ [name distributee(s) or specify class, e.g., the issue of the settlors then surviving, in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240].

7.02. Simultaneous Death. If the settlors die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, each settlor shall be deemed to have survived the other, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly. If the settlors, or either of them, and any beneficiary under this instrument die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, the settlor or settlors, as the case may be, shall be deemed to have survived the beneficiary, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly.

7.03. No-Contest Clause. If any beneficiary under this instrument, singularly or in combination with any other person or persons, directly or indirectly contests this instrument or the wills of the settlors in whole or in part, or opposes, objects to, or seeks to invalidate any of the provisions of this instrument or of the wills of the settlors, or seeks to succeed to any part of the estate of the settlors other than in the manner specified in this instrument or in the wills of the settlors, then the right of that person to take any interest given to him or her by this instrument shall be void, and any gift or other interest in the trust property to which the beneficiary would otherwise have been entitled shall pass as if he or she had predeceased the settlors [optional: without issue].

7.04. Definition of Death Taxes. As used in this instrument, the term "death taxes" means all inheritance, estate, succession, and other similar taxes that are payable by any person on account of that person's interest in the decedent's estate or by reason of the decedent's death, including penalties and interest, but excluding the following:

- (a) Any additional tax that may be assessed under Internal Revenue Code Section 2032A.
- (b) Any federal estate taxes recoverable, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A, from the holder or recipient of any qualified terminable interest property that is included in the settlor's federal gross estate under Internal Revenue

Code Section 2044.

(c) Any federal or state tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer, as that term is defined in the federal tax laws, unless that generation-skipping transfer tax is payable directly out of the assets of a trust created by this instrument.

7.05. Definition of Debts and Expenses. As used in this instrument, the term "debts and expenses" shall include the following:

(a) All costs, expenses of litigation, counsel fees, or other charges that the trustee incurs in connection with the determination of the amount of the death taxes, interest, or penalties referred to in Paragraph 5.02 of this instrument, and

(b) Legally enforceable debts, funeral expenses, expenses of last illness, and administration and property expenses.

7.06. Definition of Deceased Settlor and Surviving Settlor. As used in this instrument, the words "deceased settlor" refer to the first settlor to die, and the words "surviving settlor" refer to the other settlor.

7.07. Definition of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the words "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined and derived.

7.08. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the word "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

7.09. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

(a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;

(b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;

(c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and

(d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

7.10. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter genders, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

7.11. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

7.12. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

7.13. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

7.14. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of either or both settlors that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor or settlors had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor or settlors.

ARTICLE 8 : Execution

8.01. Execution. We certify that we have read the foregoing declaration of trust and that it correctly states the terms and conditions under which the trust estate is to be held, administered, and distributed. As trustees of the trusts created by this declaration of trust, we approve this declaration of trust in all particulars, and agree to be bound by its terms and conditions. As settlors of the trusts created by this declaration of trust, we approve this declaration of trust in all particulars, and agree to be bound by its terms and conditions.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Complete Trust Instruments

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.202

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.202 Formula Marital Deduction Trust for Married Settlers--Survivor's Trust, QTIP Trust, and Bypass Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete trust instrument that may be used by married settlors who wish to create a revocable trust for their own benefit during their lifetimes and the benefit of their children (or other beneficiaries) following their deaths, and who wish to save or reduce estate taxes by taking full advantage of the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056] and the unified credit [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505 (gift tax)].

Under this form, no federal estate tax will be due on the death of the first settlor (referred to in this form as the "deceased settlor"), because the marital deduction and the deceased settlor's unified credit will shelter the entire estate from federal estate tax. Moreover, the portion of the assets sheltered by the deceased settlor's unified credit will also avoid taxation when the second settlor (referred to in this form as the "surviving settlor") dies. The net effect of this plan will be to avoid or reduce estate taxes in the combined estates of both settlors. It is assumed that the combined estates of the two settlors are large enough to enable them to benefit from this kind of planning.

PRACTICE TIP:

In using this form, the attorney should bear in mind that this estate plan, by itself, will not necessarily automatically result in the lowest possible amount of death taxes being paid when considering the total taxes paid at both deaths. This is because the plan ensures only that the unified credit of the first settlor to die will be fully utilized. Unfortunately, the first effective tax bracket of 41% (i.e., the first bracket after the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the estates of decedents dying after 2001 and before the year 2004) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]], extends only to transfers up to $1 million. Above that amount, the marginal estate tax rate continues to increase until it hits the maximum rate [see I.R.C. § 2001(c)]. If the surviving settlor's taxable estate will exceed $

1 million, then further savings are possible by fully utilizing the lower estate tax brackets of the deceased settlor by voluntarily paying some estate tax at the deceased settlor's death. This can be done by having the surviving settlor disclaim some portion of the property that would otherwise pass to the QTIP Trust. This form enables this to be done with great flexibility via the use of a Disclaimer Trust. See § 70.202[1][o]. In practice, surviving spouses often refuse to make this disclaimer, even though taxes can be lowered. Nevertheless, the practitioner can at least leave the door open to this sort of planning by including the Disclaimer Trust provisions. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[b] General Features of Estate Plan

This trust implements an estate plan that is typical of marital deduction formula trusts created by married settlors. Under this form, the settlors retain broad powers over the trust during their joint lifetimes [see [2], Articles 3, 4, below]. When the first settlor dies, the trust is divided into three separate trusts [see [2], P 5.03, below]. The first trust, referred to as the "survivor's trust," contains all of the surviving spouse's separate property, together with one-half of the community property of the settlors, and remains fully revocable by the surviving spouse during his or her lifetime. When the surviving settlor dies, this trust will pass to the person or persons designated by the surviving settlor, or, if the settlor does not designate anyone, to the children or other persons named in the instrument [see [2], PP 5.03(a), (b), 5.07, below].

The deceased spouse's separate property, and his or her share of the community property, is further divided into two trusts. This division is accomplished by means of a formula, known as a "marital deduction formula" [see [2], P 5.03(c), below]. One trust will contain assets designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction. This trust, known as the "marital deduction trust," is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a "qualified terminable interest property" ("QTIP") trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7); see [2], P 5.08, below]. The form can be modified to accommodate a "lifetime income/power of appointment trust" [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] if desired [see § 71.13[5] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

PRACTICE TIP:

If the "lifetime income/power of appointment" type of marital deduction trust is selected, consideration may be given to combining the marital deduction trust with survivor's trust. This will combine the tax planning provided by a marital deduction formula trust with the simplicity of a nonformula marital deduction trust. By modifying the forms in this manner, one less trust will be created, meaning one less tax return will have to be filed, and one less set of trust books maintained. Combination of the survivor's trust and the marital deduction trust is discussed in §§ 71.14[4] and 71.231[1][f] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions . The formula clauses in contain optional language, not appearing in this form, that allows the drafter to create an estate plan in which the marital deduction assets and the survivor's assets are pooled in a single trust. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

The marital deduction trust will pay income (and principal, if desired) to the surviving settlor for life, and on his or her death the balance will go to the children or other beneficiaries designated by the settlors.

The third trust, known as the "bypass trust," is designed to take advantage of the deceased settlor's unified credit. With certain restrictions, bypass trust income will be paid to the surviving settlor for life, and will pass to the children or other designated beneficiaries on his or her death [see [2], P 5.09, below].

[c] Advantages

Either a nonformula marital deduction trust such as the form in § 70.201, or a formula trust like the one in this form, will eliminate estate tax in the estate of the first spouse to die. However, a nonformula trust does nothing to reduce the federal estate that will be due on the death of the second spouse. In contrast, the trust in this form allows a portion of the deceased settlor's estate (the "bypass trust") to bypass the estate of the surviving settlor and thereby escape taxation in the survivor's estate. If the combined estates of the two settlors, taking into account the likelihood of asset appreciation during both their lifetimes, are likely to exceed the "applicable exclusion amount" that will be available in the year of the second spouse's death [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] a marital deduction formula trust will have a tax advantage over a nonformula trust. This advantage becomes increasingly greater as the size of the settlors' combined estates increases. For a comparison of the advantages and disadvantages of formula and nonformula trusts, see § 70.201[1][b].

This form also is designed to provide a high degree of postmortem tax planning flexibility. Features such as the QTIP trust [see [2], P 5.08, below ], the Disclaimer Trust [see [2], P 5.11, below ], and the provision authorizing division of the trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes [see [2], P 5.15, below ], all enhance the tax planning flexibility available to the trustee after the first settlor's death.

[d] Trust Declaration Format

This trust instrument uses the trust declaration format. A "declaration of trust" is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument [see [2], P 1.01, below ]. Only the trustee is required to execute the declaration. However, it is common for the settlors to sign the declaration to signify their approval of the terms of the trust [for signature blocks for declarations of trust, see [2], P 8.01, below ]. For discussion of the distinction between a trust declaration and a trust agreement, and the advantages and disadvantages of the two formats, see Section 70.11[3].

[e] Family Information

It is assumed in this form that the settlors have children, and that neither settlor has children from a prior marriage [see [2], P 1.04, below ]. For a form containing sample provisions listing children from a prior marriage, see Section 70.203[2], Paragraph 1.05. That provision can be adapted to the two-settlor trust illustrated in this form. For a discussion of drafting problems that can arise when either or both settlors have children from a previous marriage, see [v], below.

[f] Revocation and Amendment by Settlers

This form gives the settlors the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust at any time while they are both living [see [2], P 3.01, below ]. Either settlor, acting alone, may revoke or terminate the trust as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor, and as to the community property of the settlors. As discussed in Section 70.12[5][c], the unilateral right to revoke as to community property is necessary both to preserve the character of any community property assets contributed to the trust [see Fam. Code § 761(a), (b)] and to avoid potential gift tax liability that could result if either settlor renounced his or her statutory right to unilaterally revoke the trust as to community property [see I.R.C. § 2511(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b) (relinquishment of dominion and control over property may constitute taxable gift)]. The unilateral right to revoke as to separate property will assure that each spouse retains control over his or her separate property, and will reinforce the general statutory rule (applicable to all property other than community property that will retain its character as such in the trust) that unless the instrument provides otherwise, each settlor may revoke the trust as to the portion of the trust contributed by that settlor [Prob. Code § 15401(b)].

The trust may be modified or amended by either spouse acting alone as to that spouse's separate and quasi-community property in the trust. However, a modification or amendment of the trust affecting any community property of the settlors may be made only by the settlors acting jointly [see [2], P 3.01, below ]. As discussed in Section 70.12[5][f], this power is also necessary to preserve the character of community property transferred to the trust [see Fam. Code § 761(a)]. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving spouse retains the power of revocation and amendment over the Survivor's trust [see [2], P 3.02, below ; see also [j], below (discussion of Survivor's Trust)]. All the other trusts become irrevocable on the deceased settlor's death see [o], below (irrevocability of Disclaimer Trust)].

[g] Settlor's Powers to Direct Investments and Borrow From Trust Estate

The settlors are also given powers to direct investments and to borrow money from the trust estate. While both settlors are living, these powers may be exercised with respect to community property only by both settlors acting jointly [see [2], PP 3.05, 3.07, below ]. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor may exercise investment powers only with respect to the assets of the survivor's trust, while optional language permits the imposition of a similar restriction on the power to borrow from the trust estate [see [2], PP 3.06, 3.08, below ].

[h] Payments and Distributions While Both Settlor's Are Living

While both settlors are living, they will have the right to receive as much of the net income of the community property of the trust as they request [see [2], P 4.02, below ]. If either settlor has contributed separate or quasi-community property to the trust, that settlor will have substantially identical income rights in that property [see [2], P 4.01, below ]. The settlors also have analogous rights to request distributions of principal from the community property, separate property, and quasi-community property [see [2], PP 4.03, 4.04, below ].

[i] Special Gift on Death of Deceased Settlor

This form includes a provision making a so-called "special gift" on the deceased settlor's death [see [2], P 5.01, below ]. The term "special gift," as used in this form, means a gift that the trustee is required to make after the settlor's death to someone other than the residuary beneficiary. It is analogous, in many respects, to a specific devise or a general pecuniary devise in a will. The special gift in this form is a pecuniary devise, but special gifts of tangible personal property are not uncommon [see § 70.255[2] (form)].

The special gift will be made before any distributions are made to the surviving settlor or any other beneficiary. The special gift typically will be made to a family member or friend whom the settlor making the gift wishes to remember after his or her death, but whom that settlor does not wish to receive the full benefit of the residue of the trust estate. The special gift in this form is not contingent upon whether or not a particular settlor is the first settlor to die, but special gifts based on such a contingency are common. For an alternative special gift provision that makes a pecuniary gift that is dependent on a particular settlor being the first settlor to die, see § 70.250[2].

If neither settlor wants to make a special gift, this provision can be deleted. If more than one special gift is to be made, identical provisions may be included as necessary.

The special gift used in this form is not intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction. Therefore, if the amount of the gift exceeds the amount protected by the available unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010], it will be subject to estate tax. Under the tax payment provision in this form [see [2], P 5.02, below ], the special gift will not be exempt from proration of estate taxes, with the result that the actual amount that will pass to the recipient may be less than the pecuniary amount specified in the special gift provision. If, as is frequently the case, the settlors want a special gift to pass to the recipient tax free, the tax payment provision in the form must be modified to exclude the special gift from any liability for estate taxes. Before modifying the tax provision, however, the settlors should be reminded that if the special gift is to pass tax free, any tax attributed to the special gift will have to be paid out of other trust assets that would otherwise go to the surviving settlor or other trust beneficiaries.

PRACTICE TIP:

Even if the amount of the special gift does not exceed the amount protected by the available unified credit, if it is at all large it can have a serious impact on the estate plan. For example, if part of the plan is intended to create a bypass trust that will ultimately pass tax free to the deceased settlor's children, a large nonmarital special gift will significantly reduce the amount that can be placed into the bypass trust without creating an immediate tax. Thus, caution must be exercised, not only in including special gifts, but in evaluating the effect of special gifts on the tax liabilities generated and the size of any remaining nonmarital gifts. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[j] Survivor's Trust

After the special gift has been made (or if there is no special gift), the trustee will be required to divide the trust estate into three shares or trusts [see [b], above]. These are referred to in this form as the "Survivor's Share" [see [2], PP 5.03(a), (b), 5.07, below ], the "Marital Deduction Share" (or "QTIP Trust") [see [2], PP 5.03(c), (d), 5.08, below ], and the "Nonmarital Share" (or "Bypass Trust") [see [2], PP 5.03(e), (f), 5.09, below ]. The Survivor's Share is carved out first. The Survivor's Share will consist of the surviving settlor's share of the community property, and any separate or quasi-community property contributed to the trust by the surviving settlor [see [2], P 5.03(a), below]. The Survivor's Share will be held as a separate trust called the Survivor's Trust.

Since the Survivor's Trust will consist exclusively of property that the surviving settlor owned before the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor will continue to be regarded as the owner of the Survivor's Trust for all income and estate tax purposes, and there is no reason to restrict the surviving settlor's control over the trust. Accordingly, this form provides that the Survivor's Trust will be subject to amendment, revocation, or termination by the surviving settlor at any time and for any reason [see [2], P 3.02, below ]. On the death of the surviving settlor, the Survivor's Trust will become irrevocable [see [2], P 3.02, below ].

The surviving settlor will receive all of the net income of the Survivor's Trust for life [see [2], P 5.07(a), below], and have an unlimited right to request principal distributions [see [2], P 5.07(b), below]. After the death of the surviving settlor, the trust principal and any undistributed income will be distributed to whoever the surviving settlor designates in his or her will [see [2], P 5.07(c), below]. In other words, the surviving settlor has a general testamentary power of appointment over the trust assets [see Prob. Code §§ 611(a), 612(a); see also discussion of powers of appointment in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.43 et seq.]. If the surviving settlor does not exercise this power of appointment, the trustee is required to distribute the principal and undistributed income to the persons or entities entitled to distribution of the Bypass Trust [see [2], P 5.07(c), below; see also [2], P 5.09, below (bypass trust)].

[k] Marital Deduction Formula

After the Survivor's Trust has been carved out of the trust assets, the remainder of the trust, consisting of the deceased settlor's separate property and his or her half of the settlor's community property, will be further subdivided into a Marital Deduction Share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and a Nonmarital Share that does not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction but that will be protected under the deceased settlor's unified credit. The actual dollar amount of the trust assets allocated to each share is determined by means of a formula, known as a marital deduction formula [see [2], P 5.03(c), below]. Essentially, this formula apportions assets between the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share in a manner that will assure that the Nonmarital Share is funded to the extent of the available unified credit, and the balance of the estate is allocated to the Marital Deduction Share where it will be protected from taxation by the marital deduction.

Marital deduction formulas can be either "pecuniary" or "fractional." This trust uses a pecuniary formula, which allocates to each trust assets having a dollar value determined by the formula. Once the value has been determined, particular assets will be allocated to each share. In contrast, a fractional formula requires the trustee to allocate a fractional share of each trust asset to the Marital and Nonmarital Shares. The advantages and disadvantages of pecuniary and fractional formulas are discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender).

A pecuniary formula marital deduction clause can specify that the marital deduction share will be equal to a specified pecuniary amount, with the residue being allocated to the nonmarital share. Conversely, it can specify that the nonmarital share will be equal to a specified pecuniary amount, with the residue being allocated to the marital deduction share. This form follows the first of these two approaches, which is (at least arguably) the most frequently used by estate planners. When this approach is used, the marital deduction share will be limited to the specified amount, determined as of the date of distribution. If assets appreciate in value between the date of death and the date of distribution, the appreciation will be allocated to the nonmarital share.

PRACTICE TIP:

The choice of whether to define the marital deduction amount or the bypass amount with a pecuniary formula often hinges on the size of the estate. When a pecuniary gift--including a gift defined by a pecuniary formula--is funded with an asset that has appreciated between the date of death and the date of distribution to the trust, a capital gain is recognized. Thus, many practitioners choose to use the pecuniary formula to define the gift they expect to be smaller when the first settlor dies. For example, if the deceased settlor's taxable estate (not considering the trust assets attributable to the surviving settlor) is expected to be $800,000, then the pecuniary formula would be used to define the marital deduction amount. On the other hand, if the deceased settlor's taxable estate is expected to be $2 million, then the pecuniary formula would be used to define the bypass amount. In each instance, the larger gift would be the residuary (that is, the non-pecuniary) share, which would tend to minimize the exposure to capital gains taxes. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

If the trust drafter wants to modify this form to use a different type of marital deduction formula, the following provisions may be substituted:

(1) To use a "pecuniary bypass formula" specifying that the nonmarital share will be equal to a specified amount, delete Paragraph 5.03 of this trust, and substitute the form in Section 71.203[2] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

(2) To use a "fractional formula" [see above], delete Paragraphs 5.03 and 5.04 of this trust, and substitute the form in Section 71.205[2] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

Many sensitive issues are presented when a marital deduction formula clause is drafted. A detailed discussion of those issues is beyond the scope of this comment. For further discussion, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions; see also 3 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[I] QTIP Trust

The marital deduction share of this trust is placed in a marital deduction trust [see [2], P 5.08, below]. The marital deduction trust used in this form is a qualified terminable interest property (or "QTIP") trust, the terms of which comply with the "qualified terminable interest property" provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7). As required by the tax rules, all the income from the QTIP Trust is payable to the surviving settlor for life, and no person has any power to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the surviving spouse during his or her lifetime [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)]. After the death of the deceased settlor, his or her executor must make an irrevocable election on the estate tax return filed for the deceased spouse's estate to treat the all or part of the trust assets as QTIP property [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(III), (v)].

The surviving spouse need not be given a power of appointment over the assets of a QTIP trust. Thus, the deceased settlor may specify who will receive the trust property after the death of the surviving settlor. This makes QTIP trusts particularly suitable for clients who do not want the surviving spouse to be able to alter the dispositions of the client's assets after the deceased spouse's death. The "classic" situation calling for the use of a QTIP trust is one in which there are children of a former marriage and animosity exists between those children and the current spouse. However, as discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, there are important reasons for using a QTIP trust even when no such considerations are present. Essentially, because the deceased spouse's executor can elect to qualify all or only part of the trust for the marital deduction, the QTIP trust allows a much wider measure of portmortem planning flexibility. Most experienced estate planners recommend using a QTIP trust whenever possible.

The most common alternative to a QTIP trust is a so-called "lifetime income/power of appointment trust," which will also qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. Under such a trust, the surviving spouse must be entitled (as with a QTIP trust) to all the trust income for life. In addition, the survivor must be given the right, in the form of a general power of appointment, to designate the recipient of all remaining trust assets on the survivor's death. Since the survivor has such broad powers over the trust assets, a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is suitable only when each of the settlors has a high degree of confidence that the other will dispose of the remaining assets in the manner that will be consistent with the wishes of the deceased spouse. Moreover, a lifetime income/power of appointment trust lacks the postmortem planning flexibility available through use of the QTIP trust. However, it is nevertheless preferred by some settlors who want to demonstrate their confidence in one another by giving each other a great measure of control over the disposition of one another's property.

If the drafter wants to convert the marital deduction trust in this form into a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, Paragraph 5.07 of this form should be deleted, and the form in Section 71.231 [2] substituted in its place. In addition, when a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is used, the trust drafter should consider combining the survivor's share and the marital deduction share into a single trust, as noted in the Practice Tip in [1][b], above [see also §§ 71.14 [4] and 71.231[1][f] in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions]. In the latter case, the marital deduction formula clause will also have to be modified to reflect the creation of two rather than three trusts. The formula clauses in Ch. 71 contain optional language, not appearing in this form, that allows the drafter to create an estate plan in which the marital deduction assets and the survivor's assets are pooled in a single trust.

[m] Bypass Trust

Assets attributable to the deceased settlor that are not allocated to the QTIP Trust will go into the Nonmarital Share [see [2], P 5.03(e), below]. The Nonmarital Share will be placed in a Bypass Trust [see [2], PP 5.03(f), 5.09, below]. The Bypass Trust is structured so that the trust assets will "bypass" (that is, escape taxation in) the surviving settlor's estate. Such a trust is also sometimes referred to as a "credit shelter" trust, because it uses the unified credit available to the deceased settlor to "shelter" a portion of the deceased settlor's estate from taxation.

The trustee is given discretion to pay income and distribute principal from the bypass trust to the surviving settlor according to an "ascertainable standard" [see [2], P 5.09(a)]. The specification of an "ascertainable standard" will ensure that the trust assets will not be included in the gross estate of the surviving settlor for estate tax purposes, even if the surviving settlor serves as the trustee [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2); see also § 70.12[6][c] and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4]]. If desired, the terms of the bypass trust may be modified to require mandatory payment of all income to the surviving settlor, coupled with discretionary payments of principal in accordance with an ascertainable standard. Mandatory payment of income may avoid adverse income tax consequences in some cases by avoiding the high income tax rates applicable to accumulated trust income [see I.R.C. § 1(e)], unless the surviving settlor is also likely to be in a high income tax bracket. Any potential income tax savings should be computed after considering the probable size of the surviving spouse's estate, and balanced against any competing non-tax goals of the settlors.

[n] "Five or Five" Power Over Bypass Trust Principal

The surviving settlor is also given a "five or five" power over the principal of the Bypass Trust [see [2], P 5.09(b)], below]. This power permits the surviving settlor to withdraw up to $5,000 or five percent of the trust, whichever is greater, in each calendar year. This power is optional and should be included only after carefully considering the consequences of the power.

The advantage of a five or five power is that it gives the surviving settlor control over a portion of the trust principal without the constraints imposed by an ascertainable standard. Thus, for example, the spouse may use the power to make annual tax-free gifts to the children to take advantage of the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]].

However, a five or five power can also have adverse tax consequences. A power to invade the principal of a trust will not cause the trust principal to be included in the estate of the person who holds the power if the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the current value of the trust each year [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3) and § 70.212[2]]. However, the power must be "non-cumulative"; that is, it must lapse if it is not exercised by the end of a calendar year [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3)].

In addition, any property subject to an unexercised five or five power in the year of the holder's death will be included in the holder's estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)]. Furthermore, the I.R.S. takes the position that a beneficiary who holds a five or five power over the principal of a trust will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8142061 ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8326074 ; see I.R.C. § 678 (income tax consequences of power to invade trust corpus)]. Thus, the surviving settlor will have to pay any income tax due on the trust income, even if the five or five power is used to transfer property to someone else, or is not used at all. If the surviving settlor is receiving all the trust income in any event, this will not increase his or her tax liability. However, if trust income is being distributed to other parties, or being left to accumulate in the trust, the additional income tax liability that a five or five power will impose on the surviving settlor may be undesirable.

If the settlors do not want to have part of the trust assets included in the surviving settlor's estate for estate tax purposes, and to have the surviving settlor treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes, the five or five power should be omitted.

PRACTICE TIP:

It should be borne in mind that granting the surviving settlor a five or five power over the Bypass Trust also can simply distort the settlors' estate plan. From the deceased settlor's perspective, the Bypass Trust principal should only be tapped as a last resort; indeed, many revocable trusts specifically provide that the Bypass Trust's principal may (or should) be invaded only after the principal of all other trusts created under the instrument has been exhausted [ see, e.g., [2], P 5.09(a), below]. Such a provision is intended, in part, to give some assurance to each settlor that should he or she die first, the maximum portion possible of the assets he or she leaves will pass to his or her intended beneficiaries, regardless of any later changes that may be made by the surviving settlor as to those trusts which remain revocable (such as the Survivor's Trust). At the same time, such a provision protects both settlors' tax plan. The Bypass Trust's assets will pass free of death tax at the surviving settlor's death. Thus, it is advantageous to allow as much growth as possible to occur in this trust. If the surviving settlor regularly exercises a five or five power he or she may hold over the Bypass Trust, then the tax plan intended by the instrument will be compromised, even if the compromise is inadvertent. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[o] Disclaimer Trust

This form gives the surviving settlor the option to disclaim all or part of the assets that he or she would receive on the death of the deceased settlor [see [2], P 5.06, below ]. Any assets that are disclaimed will be held in a special "Disclaimer Trust" [see [2], P 5.11, below ]. As discussed in § 70.12[6][i], many experienced estate planners advocate including a disclaimer trust in every trust instrument.

The Disclaimer Trust, like the Bypass Trust [see [m], above], is designed so that the trust assets will not be included in the surviving settlor's taxable estate when the surviving settlor dies. To achieve this tax treatment, the surviving settlor's rights in and powers over the Disclaimer Trust are appropriately limited. First, the surviving settlor has no power of revocation over the disclaimer trust [see [2], P 3.02, below]. Second, the surviving settlor will receive income and principal only in accordance with an "ascertainable standard" [see [2], P 5.11(a), below; see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2) and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4]]. If desired, the terms of the disclaimer trust, like those of the bypass trust [see [m], above], may be modified to require mandatory payment of all income to the surviving settlor, coupled with discretionary payments of principal in accordance with an ascertainable standard. See [1][m], above, for discussion of potential income tax advantages to the latter approach.

In the context of the estate plan implemented by this trust, the Disclaimer Trust provides additional postmortem planning flexibility in the event that unanticipated changes in the settlors' circumstances make it advantageous for the surviving settlor to disclaim some part of the trust property. For example, to minimize overall estate taxes in the estates of both settlors, it may be desirable to pay some additional estate tax on the death of the first settlor by having the surviving settlor disclaim property that would otherwise pass into the marital deduction trust. The disclaimer trust gives the survivor that option.

One factor that can weigh against actually disclaiming an inheritance is the increasing estate tax unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)]. If the surviving settlor is in good health and is likely to survive several years, it may be prudent not to disclaim and not to pay estate tax in the deceased settlor's estate. By not disclaiming, the surviving settlor can enjoy the increasing estate tax exemption resulting from the increasing exclusion amount. The surviving settlor may even avoid estate taxes altogether, with the enacted repeal of the estate taxes, for decedents dying after 2009 [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2210(a)]. There is a great deal of uncertainty with respect to planning in this area, because optimal results are dependent on the year of death of the surviving settlor. In addition, although the estate tax is repealed for decedents dying after 2009, a sunset provision of the repealing legislation re-imposes the estate tax at its pre-2001 rates after 2010, unless Congress re-enacts repeal of the estate tax before that time [I.R.C. § 2210(a); Pub. Law 107-16, § 901]. Many commentators feel legislative changes will be made regarding the repeal before 2010 [for discussion, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A].

If the surviving settlor does not disclaim any property, the Disclaimer Trust simply will never become operative.

[p] Payments and Distributions After Death of Surviving Settlor

After the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee will distribute the assets of the Survivor's Trust as directed by the surviving settlor in a testamentary power of appointment [see [2], P 5.07(c), below; see also [iii], above]. If the surviving settlor fails to appoint the property to anyone, it will pass in the same manner as the property in the Bypass Trust.

The assets of the QTIP and Bypass Trusts, and any assets that may have been allocated to the Disclaimer Trust, will be divided into separate shares for each named child and the issue of each named child who dies before the surviving settlor [see PP 5.08(i), 5.09(c), 5.11(b), below]. The share of any child who has reached a specified age (for example, 30 years) will be distributed outright, while the shares of children who have not reached that age will be retained in separate trusts for those children [see PP 5.09(d), 5.11(c), below]. Each child will receive all of the income from his or her trust, plus as much of the principal as is necessary to maintain the child in accordance with a standard specified in the instrument [see [2], P 5.10(a), (b), below].

PRACTICE TIP:

Many practitioners provide that income will be accumulated until the beneficiary attains a specified age, after which he or she will automatically receive the income periodically. In this way, income need not be distributed to a young beneficiary under circumstances in which the creation of a guardianship or a custodial account might otherwise be required. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

The trust principal will be distributed to the child in two increments when the child reaches specified ages (for example, 25 years and 30 years) [see [2], P 5.10(c), (d), below].

The share of any deceased child is given outright to the issue of that child if those issue have reached a specified age (such as 30), or held in trust for minor issue until they reach that age [see [2], P 5.10(e), below]. The latter provision creates a remote possibility of a violation of the rule against perpetuities, but under the current "wait and see" rule [Prob. Code § 21205; see discussion under "Rule Against Perpetuities--In General" and succeeding headings in the Legal Background to Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities] and the perpetuities savings clause in this instrument [see [2], P 7.01, below ], there is no chance of a violation that could disrupt the estate plan. If the deceased child has no issue, his or her share is divided among the other children and issue of the settlors.

This form may be modified to provide for a "family pot" arrangement, rather than a separate share arrangement, on the death of the surviving settlor. Under a "family pot" arrangement, the trust assets are lumped together in a single trust, rather than segregated into separate shares as provided in this form. The trustee usually will be given the power to "sprinkle" income, and principal if desired, among the various trust beneficiaries. To convert this trust into a "family pot" trust following the death of the surviving settlor, Paragraphs 5.09, 5.10, and 5.11 of this form should be deleted and replaced with the alternative provisions in § 70.212[2]. For additional discussion about "family pot" trusts, see § 70.210[1][b].

[q] Division of Trust for Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Purposes

This form contains a complex provision permitting or requiring the trustee to divide the trust into exempt and non-exempt trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax (GST) purposes. This provision may become important if the trust assets are substantial and distributions are made to grandchildren or more remote issue. For discussion of this provision, see § 70.12[6][j]. For a discussion of the operation of the generation-skipping transfer tax and its application to trust planning, see the Legal Background to Ch. 60, Estate Planning; for further discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[r] Settlers as Co-Trustees

The settlors may act as the co-trustees of this trust, or may select some other person or entity (such as a bank or trust company) to serve as trustee. When married persons create a revocable trust, they usually will want to act as trustees of the trust during their lifetimes.

No adverse tax consequences will result from the settlors serving as co-trustees during their lifetimes, because the trust will have no tax consequences while the settlors are living. Since the settlors retain the power to revoke the trust at any time and for any reason while they are both living [see [2], P 3.01, below ], they are deemed to be the owners of the trust for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 676] and, on their deaths, the trust principal will be included in their gross estates for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2038].

After the death of the deceased settlor, the assets of the Survivor's Trust [see [2], PP 5.03(a), (b), 5.07, below ] and the QTIP Trust [see [2], PP 5.03(c), (d), 5.08, below ] will be included in the surviving settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes, and no adverse consequences will result if the surviving settlor continues to serve as the trustee of these trusts.

[s] Surviving Settlor as Trustee of Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts

As discussed above, both the Bypass Trust [see [2], PP 5.03(e), (f), 5.09, below ] and the Disclaimer Trust [see [2], PP 5.06, 5.11, below ] are designed to escape taxation in the surviving settlor's estate. If the surviving settlor is to serve as the trustee of these trusts, care should be taken not to give the trustee overly broad administrative powers. In these circumstances, it is essential to limit the trustee's power to invade the principal of the trust to an "ascertainable standard." If the surviving settlor, as trustee of the Bypass Trust or the Disclaimer Trust, has an unlimited power to invade the principal of those trusts, the power will be deemed a general power of appointment and will cause the trust assets to be included in the surviving settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)]. However, a power to invade the principal of a trust will not be construed as a general power of appointment if it is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the beneficiary of the power [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)].

This form does give the trustee the power to invade the principal of the Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts for the benefit of the surviving settlor. That power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" [see [2], PP 5.09(a), 5.11(a), below], so the power will not, in itself, require that the trust assets be included in the estate of the surviving settlor for estate tax purposes.

Even when the power is limited by an "ascertainable standard," it may be unwise to give the surviving settlor unlimited discretion to allocate receipts and expenses of the Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts to income and principal, or even to give the trustee power to allocate receipts and expenses to income and principal in accordance with the Uniform Principal and Income Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375]. Under Prob. Code § 16313, the trustee is not required to set aside a reserve or allowance from trust income for depreciation or depletion of any trust property unless the trust instrument expressly requires a reserve or allowance. Thus, the trustee could invest in heavily depreciable and depletable assets without creating any reserve or allowance for depreciation or depletion, thereby substantially increasing the income at the expense of the principal. This could be considered an unlimited right to invade the trust principal and thereby cause the assets in the Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts to be included in the surviving settlor's estate for estate tax purposes [see Darling v. Commissioner (1965) 43 T.C. 520, 534-535 (disallowance of charitable deduction for value of remainder interest transferred to charity when donors retained broad lifetime powers over trust property)]. To guard against this danger, the trust should specifically require the trustee to establish reserves for depreciation and depletion [see [2], P 5.14, below ].

The trustee's power to purchase bonds at a premium without any requirement that the premium be amortized can also favor the income beneficiary. When a bond is purchased at a premium, the income is increased and the principal is decreased, since the value of the bond at maturity is less than the amount paid to acquire the bond. To avoid any danger that the power to purchase bonds at a premium will be deemed a general power of appointment over the trust assets, the trust instrument should require the trustee to amortize the premiums [see [2], P 6.08(w), below].

The trust instrument authorizes a surviving settlor who serves as trustee of the Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts to disclaim any power that would endanger the tax goals of those trusts [see [2], P 6.16, below ]. The attorney may choose to delete the limitations on the trustee's powers discussed above and instead rely on this general disclaimer clause to deal with any powers that become troublesome at the time the surviving spouse actually become trustee. However, these provisions may also serve to alert the trustee to problem areas and guard against any inadvertent failure to disclaim a potentially troublesome interest.

[t] Third Party or Trust Company as Trustee

If the settlors do not want to restrict the trustee's powers over the Bypass and Disclaimer Trusts as suggested in [s], above, they may prefer to designate a third party, or a trust company, to serve as trustee. The appointment of a disinterested third party as trustee will avoid any potential problems that might arise from the surviving settlor's retention of particular powers over those trusts. This form is suitable for use when a third party or trust company is the trustee.

[u] Concluding Provisions

Article 7 of this form contains miscellaneous provisions common to all the trust forms in this chapter. These provisions have been adapted as appropriate for a marital deduction trust. For discussion of these provisions, see § 70.12[8].

[v] Modification to Fit More Complicated Distribution Patterns Involving Children From Prior Marriages

This form assumes that the settlors have no children from previous marriages. Obviously, however, second marriages are common, especially in the context of QTIP trusts. The format illustrated in this form can be adapted to incorporate distribution patterns involving children from prior marriages, but in some cases significant modifications will be required.

When there are children from a prior marriage, the settlors will want to treat these children in one of three basic ways:

First and most simply, if the spouses wish to treat all the children equally--in effect, treat children from prior marriages as part of their current family--only minor modifications to this form are necessary. The children and issue declaration should be modified to indicate that there are children from a previous marriage, and the references in the distribution provisions should be drafted to refer to the children of either settlor.

Second, if the spouses want "mirror image" treatment--that is, each spouse wants his or her share of the property to go to his or her own children and not the children of the other spouse, but the pattern of distribution for each set of children is otherwise identical--the distribution provisions of the various trusts may be modified accordingly. For example, the trust may be modified to provide that regardless of the order of death of the settlors, the survivor's trust will default to the survivor's children if the survivor does not appoint it in some other manner, and the deceased spouse's children will be beneficiaries of the bypass trust. In this scenario, modification of the default provision of the survivor's trust is especially important to assure that in the event of a nonexercise of the survivor's power of appointment, the property will not default to the wrong set of children.

Third, each spouse may want to dispose of his or her share in a completely different manner than that desired by the other settlor. There are thousands of possible variations within this pattern. For example, one settlor may want to exclude specific children, while the other settlor wants to include them. The settlors may desire different ages of distribution, or different rights over income and principal, for their respective children. Or one or both spouses may want to distribute his or her portion of the trust assets in unequal shares.

When the spouses want different distribution patterns, the modifications that must be made to this form are more complex. Essentially, the trust drafter must include two different sets of trust provisions for the Survivor's Trust and Bypass Trust, contingent on the order of death of the settlors. Only one of those sets of provisions will actually take effect. If Settlor A dies first, then Survivor's Trust A and Bypass Trust A will become operative, while if Settlor B dies first, then Survivor's Trust B and Bypass Trust B will become operative instead. The default provisions in both Survivor's Trusts must be carefully examined to make sure that the desired results will be achieved. If the parties want different treatment for minor children and/or the issue of deceased children, two separate sets of provisions may have to be substituted for the provisions set out in Paragraph 5.10 as well. For a sample QTIP trust illustrating many of these modifications, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 1, Complete Inter Vivos Trusts, Trust 33.

[2] FORM

Formula Marital Deduction Trust for Married Settlers--Survivor's Trust, QTIP Trust, and Bypass Trust

DECLARATION OF TRUST

ARTICLE 1 : Creation of Trust

1.01. Declaration. _____[identify trustee(s), e.g., William T. Bowen and Lucy R. Bowen, husband and wife, of Fresno, California or Double Eagle Bank] (the "trustee[s]") hereby declare[s] that _____[he has or she has or it has or they have] received certain property (the "trust estate") from _____[identify settlors, e.g., William T. Bowen and Lucy R, Bowen, husband and wife, of Fresno, California] (the "settlors"), and hold [s] that property in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Names of Trusts. The trusts created by this instrument shall be known collectively as _____[name of trust, e.g., The William T. Bowen and Lucy R. Bowen 1995 Trust or The BowenFamily 1995Trust], and each separate trust created under this instrument shall be referred to by adding the name or designation of that separate trust as it appears in the appropriate paragraph of this instrument.

1.03. Effective Date. This declaration shall be effective _____[on the date it is executed by the parties or immediately upon execution by all of the parties or specify other effective date].

1.04. Children. The settlors have _____ living _____ child [ren], whose name[s] and date[s] of birth _____[is or are] as follows:

Name	Date of Birth
[e.g., William T. Bowen, Jr.	February 1, 1990]
[e.g., Elaine W. Bowen	May 15, 1992]
[e.g., Joshua J. Bowen	December 1, 1994]

Neither settlor has any deceased children.

ARTICLE 2 : Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All of the property described in Schedule A, attached to this instrument, and any other property that may hereafter be subject to this trust, is referred to in this instrument as the "trust estate," and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

2.02. Character of Trust Assets. All community property of the settlors transferred to this trust, and the proceeds of all such property, shall continue to be the community property of the settlors under the laws of California. All separate property shall remain the separate property, and all quasi-community property shall remain the quasi-community property, of the contributing settlor.

2.03. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added, or by titling any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument. During any time that neither settlor is serving as trustee or cotrustee of this trust, any transfer of property to the trust under this paragraph shall be effective only upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any property added to the trust estate shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

ARTICLE 3 : Rights and Powers of Settlers

any trust created by this instrument may be revoked or terminated, in whole or in part, by either settlor as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor and any community property of the settlors. Any trust created by this instrument may be modified or amended by either spouse acting alone as to any separate and quasi-community property of that settlor, and by both spouses acting jointly as to any community property of the settlors.

3.02. Revocation and Amendment After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor may at any time amend, revoke, or terminate the Survivor's Trust. All other trusts shall become irrevocable and shall not be subject to amendment after the death of the deceased settlor. Upon the death of the surviving settlor, every trust created by this instrument shall be irrevocable and not subject to amendment.

3.03. Method of Revocation or Amendment. Any amendment, revocation, or termination shall be made only by a writing signed by the amending or revoking settlor or settlors and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. If the writing is signed by only one settlor and the other settlor is living, a copy of the writing shall also be delivered to the other settlor in person or by certified mail.

3.04. Delivery of Property After Revocation. _____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any writing revoking or terminating the trust as to any community property forming part of the trust estate, the trustee shall deliver the affected property to the settlors or to a person or persons designated in that writing to receive the property. Unless otherwise provided in the revocation or this trust instrument, any community property so returned shall continue to be the community property of the settlors. _____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any writing revoking or terminating the trust as to any separate or quasi-community property of either settlor, the trustee shall deliver the affected property to the revoking settlor or to a person or persons designated in that writing to receive the property.

3.05. Power to Direct Investments While Both Settlers Are Living. While both settlors are living, the settlors shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to do any or all of the following:

- (a) Invest trust funds in specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment;
- (b) Retain specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment held in trust under this instrument; and
- (c) Sell, encumber, lease, abandon, or dispose of any trust property.

Directions with respect to any portion of the trust estate that is the community property of the settlors may be given only by a writing signed by both settlors. Directions with respect to any portion of the trust estate that is separate or quasi-community property of one settlor may be given by a writing signed by that settlor alone. If a direction is to remain in effect for a specified period of time only, or to be subject to any condition or conditions, the writing must specify the period of time and the condition or conditions. If trust property is invested in accordance with any direction given as specified in this paragraph, the trustee shall not be liable for losses sustained as a direct or indirect result of the trustee's compliance with the direction.

3.06. Power to Direct Investments After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor and while the surviving settlor is living, the surviving settlor shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to sell, exchange, or invest property of the Survivor's Trust and the QTIP Trust. No person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest property of any other trust after the death of the deceased settlor. Any direction given to the trustee shall be in writing and signed by the surviving settlor. If a direction is to remain in effect for a specified period of time only, or to be subject to any other condition or conditions, the writing must specify the period of time and the condition or conditions. If trust property is invested in accordance with any direction given as specified in this paragraph, the trustee shall not be liable for losses sustained as a direct or indirect result of the trustee's compliance with the direction. After the death of the surviving settlor, no person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest any trust property.

3.07. Power to Borrow From Trust Estate While Both Settlers Are Living. While both settlers are living, the settlers shall have the power to borrow from the income or principal of the trust estate, with or without security, as provided in this paragraph. Any loan from any portion of the trust estate that is the community property of the settlers may be made only by a writing signed by both settlers, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan. Any loan from any portion of the trust estate that is the separate or quasi-community property of one of the settlers may be made only by a writing signed by that settlor, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan.

3.08. Power to Borrow From Trust Estate After Death of Deceased Settlor. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor shall have the power to borrow from the income or principal of _____ [to permit surviving settlor to borrow from any trust created by instrument, including the Bypass Trust and the Disclaimer Trust: any trust created by this instrument or, to prohibit surviving settlor from borrowing from Bypass Trust or Disclaimer Trust: the Survivor's Trust and the QTIP Trust]. Any such loan may be made only by a writing signed by the surviving settlor, filed with the trustee, and specifying the amount and terms of the loan. [If surviving settlor is given power to borrow from the Bypass Trust and the Disclaimer Trust (see above), include the following language: Any loan made from the Bypass Trust or the Disclaimer Trust to the surviving settlor shall be made on such reasonable security and at such a reasonable rate of interest as would generally be appropriate for a market loan of similar amount and term and for a similar purpose.]

3.09. Exercise of Settlers' Rights and Powers by Others. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any right or power that either settlor could exercise personally under the terms of this instrument, _____ [except or including] the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ [this trust or any trust created by this instrument], may be exercised for and on behalf of that settlor by any attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for that settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by that settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by a duly appointed and acting conservator of that settlor, after petition to the court in accordance with California Probate Code Section 2580, or any successor statute [add optional clause to limit authority to amend or revoke, e.g.,; provided, however, that the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ (this trust or any trust created by this instrument), in whole or in part, may be exercised for or on behalf of that settlor by an attorney in fact or conservator only if distribution of that settlor's estate during that settlor's lifetime is not substantially altered by the amendment, revocation, or termination, and the amendment, revocation, or termination does not result in any adverse tax consequences to that settlor's estate].

ARTICLE 4 : Payments and Distributions While Both Settlers Are Living

4.01. Payments of Income From Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlers, or either of them, as much of the net income of the community property of the trust as the settlers, or either of them, shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that payments are to be made periodically.

4.02. Payments of Income From Separate and Quasi-Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of a settlor whose separate or quasi-community property constitutes part of the trust estate as much of the net income of that property as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that payments are to be made periodically.

4.03. Distributions of Principal From Community Property. While both settlers are living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlers, or either of them, as much of the principal of the community property of the trust, up to the whole thereof, as the settlers, or either of them, shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically. Any money or other property paid or distributed to or for the benefit of the settlers, or either of them, from the community property of the trust shall remain the community property of the settlors. A settlor who receives any such property shall have the same obligations with respect to that property that he or she would have with respect to community property generally.

4.04. Distributions of Principal From Separate and Quasi-Community Property. While both settlors are living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of a settlor whose separate or quasi-community property constitutes part of the trust estate as much of the principal of that property, up to the whole thereof, as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing. A request pursuant to this paragraph may specify that distributions are to be made periodically.

4.05. Requests on Settlor's Behalf. If, at any time, either settlor is unable personally to make a request of the trustee, the settlor's right to make the request may be exercised for or on behalf of the settlor by an attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by the trustee acting for and on behalf of the settlor. The trustee shall have discretion to determine when the settlor is unable personally to make a request for purposes of this paragraph.

4.06. Settlor's Obligation for Community Property Distributed. Any payment of income or principal from the trust community property to or for the benefit of the settlors, or either of them, shall remain the community property of the settlors. A settlor who receives any such payment shall have the same obligations respecting that property that he or she would have with respect to all community property generally.

4.07. Trustee's Power to Make Gifts at Direction of Settlor's. So long as both settlors are living, the trustee shall have the power to make gifts, as specified in this Paragraph:

(a) Community Property. The trustee shall distribute such sums of community property trust principal to such person or persons who are the natural objects of the settlors' bounty, as the settlors, acting jointly, may direct in writing.

(b) Separate and Quasi-Community Property. The trustee shall distribute such sums of trust principal that is the separate property or the quasi-community property of a settlor to such person or persons who are the natural objects of that settlor's bounty, as that settlor may direct in writing.

(c) Incapacity of a Settlor. In the event that a settlor is unable to direct the trustee in writing under this Paragraph due to incapacity, such a direction may be made on the settlor's behalf by a duly authorized attorney in fact acting under a valid durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act (or successor statute) [optional: as long as the durable power of attorney so executed by the settlor specifically authorizes the attorney in fact to exercise such a withdrawal power, or power to make gifts from trust principal, through enforceable demands on the trustee]; provided, however, that the total amount of any such gifts made pursuant to the direction of an attorney in fact to any one person in any one year shall not exceed the annual amount excluded from gift tax under Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b) (or a successor statute).

ARTICLE 5 : Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor

5.01. Special Gift. On the death of the deceased settlor, the trustee shall distribute the sum of $ _____ to _____ [name of beneficiary, e.g., Robert H. Bowen] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if he survives the deceased settlor or if he survives the deceased settlor for 60 days]. [If distribution is conditioned on survival, add alternative disposition, e.g., If _____ (e.g., Robert H. Bowen) does not survive the deceased settlor (for that period), this gift shall _____ (e.g., lapse or be distributed to Ursula J. Bowen)]. This gift may be satisfied only out of the deceased settlor's one-half interest in the community property of the settlors or the deceased settlor's interest in his or her separate or quasi-community property.

5.02. Payment of Taxes, Debts, and Expenses. After the deceased settlor's death, upon receipt by the trustee of a written statement from the personal representative of the deceased settlor's estate requesting that the trustee pay death taxes, debts, and expenses (as defined in Article 7) with respect to any property in the deceased settlor's estate, the trustee shall pay, either directly or to the personal representative, any amounts requested by the personal representative for those purposes, in the manner specified below. The trustee may rely on the personal representative's statement and shall not be liable for any act or omission by the personal representative in protesting or failing to protest the legality, propriety, or amount of the death taxes, debts, and expenses. If there is no personal representative, the trustee shall make the payments directly. Payments of debts and expenses may, in the trustee's discretion, be made by the trustee from the trust estate. All death taxes payable by reason of the death of the deceased settlor shall be paid by the trustee out of the trust estate. Payment of death taxes and expenses shall be charged to the nonmarital share (as defined in Paragraph 5.03), except for any death taxes that are attributable to a disclaimer of property under this instrument by the surviving settlor, which shall be paid from the Disclaimer Trust. Payment of any debts allocable against the separate property of the deceased settlor shall be charged against the nonmarital share. Debts allocable against community property shall be allocated to the survivor's share and the nonmarital share in accordance with California law in effect at the death of the deceased settlor, so long as charges against the survivor's share do not exceed the value of community property allocable to that share.

5.03. Disposition of Trust on Death of Deceased Settlor. On the death of the deceased settlor, and after any distributions or payments under Paragraphs 5.01 and 5.02 of this instrument, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into three shares, hereafter referred to as the Survivor's Share, the Marital Deduction Share, and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Survivor's Share shall consist of the portion of the trust estate consisting of the surviving settlor's one-half interest in the settlors' community property, the surviving settlor's one-half interest in the deceased settlor's quasi-community property, and all of the surviving settlor's separate property and quasi-community property.

(b) The Survivor's Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Survivor's Trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.07.

(c) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of assets (excluding assets included in the Survivor's Share) having a value equal to the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at the death of the deceased settlor, taking into account the following:

(1) The net value of all other property that passes or has passed to the surviving settlor under this trust instrument, the will of the deceased settlor, or otherwise, and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. For purposes of this subparagraph, any qualified disclaimer made by the surviving settlor shall be disregarded, and any property that will qualify as qualified terminable interest property under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) if the requisite election is made shall be considered to be qualified terminable interest property, regardless of whether the election is made;

(2) All federal estate tax deductions and exclusions actually allowed other than the marital deduction;

(3) The applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to the estate of the deceased settlor,

(4) The credit for state death taxes available to the estate of the deceased settlor, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and

(5) Any other allowable credits available to the estate of the deceased settlor (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of death of the deceased settlor), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify this gift from receiving the marital deduction.

(d) The Marital Deduction Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the QTIP Trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.08.

(e) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Survivor's Share or the Marital Deduction Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(f) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.09.

5.04. Allocation and Valuation of Assets. In allocating assets between the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share, the trustee shall allocate the trust assets in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not; subject, however, to the following:

(a) Only assets that qualify for the marital deduction shall be allocated to the marital deduction share.

(b) Assets allocated in kind shall be _____ [to use date of distribution values: valued for purposes of allocation on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "minimum worth" test: deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, but in no event shall the date of distribution values be less than the amount of the marital deduction or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "fair representation" test: deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided, however, that the trustee shall act impartially, consistent with equitable principles requiring impartiality among beneficiaries, in allocating assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction share, so that any distribution of assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction share shall be made of assets, including cash, fairly representative of appreciation or depreciation in the value of all property thus available for distribution].

(c) The trustee shall not allocate assets that qualify for the foreign death tax credit to the marital deduction share unless all other assets or interests available for allocation have been so allocated.

[Optional: (d) Any incidents of ownership to a policy of insurance on the life of a person other than the deceased settlor shall be allocated to the nonmarital share.]

5.05. Intention That Marital Deduction Share Qualify for Marital Deduction. The settlors intend that the marital deduction share qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly.

5.06. Disclaimer of Property. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any property or portion of property that is disclaimed by the surviving settlor shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Disclaimer Trust. However, if the surviving settlor also disclaims an interest in all or any portion of the Disclaimer Trust, the disclaimed interest shall be administered and distributed as if the surviving settlor predeceased the deceased settlor.

5.07. Survivor's Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Survivor's Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the surviving settlor and the trustee, but not less often than annually, for life.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to the surviving settlor such amounts from the principal of the trust, up to the whole of the trust principal, as the surviving settlor may request of the trustee in writing from time to time.

(c) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall distribute the trust property then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the estate of the surviving settlor, on such terms and conditions, either outright or in trust, or by creating further powers of appointment, as the surviving settlor shall appoint by his or her valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. The trustee may rely upon any instrument admitted to probate as the last will of the surviving settlor in carrying out the terms of the power of appointment and shall not be liable for any good-faith act in reliance upon that will, even if for any reason it is later determined to be invalid with respect to its purported exercise of this power of appointment. In the event the will of the surviving settlor is not offered for probate, the trustee may make an independent determination with respect to the validity of the will and whether or not the will has effectively exercised this power of appointment. If the trustee receives no notice of the existence of a will of the surviving settlor within six months after the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee may distribute the trust assets and income as though this power of appointment had not been exercised and shall in that event be conclusively presumed to have acted in good faith, even if a valid will is thereafter discovered.

(d) If any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by the surviving settlor, that property, after any payment of taxes, debts, and expenses pursuant to the applicable provisions of this instrument, shall be distributed _____ [if generation-skipping transfer taxes are not a concern: to the Bypass Trust created in this instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph 5.09 applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Bypass Trust unless this trust and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

(a) If the executor has elected that the trust qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section), the trustee shall thereafter administer the trust in a manner that will not invalidate the election or disqualify the property in which the surviving settlor has a qualifying income interest for life. Any provision of this trust that could be deemed to invalidate the qualification under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) shall be disregarded.

(b) If an election is made under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section) to qualify some but not all of the property allocated to the QTIP Trust for the federal estate tax marital deduction, the QTIP Trust shall be divided into two separate trusts pursuant to the terms of the election. The division shall be based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of the division. One of the trusts shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has been made and shall be designated as the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The other trust shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has not been made and shall be designated the Nonqualifying QTIP Trust. The Nonqualifying QTIP Trust shall be subject to all of the rights, interests, powers, and other terms prescribed for the Qualifying QTIP Trust. If a partial election is made and the trust is divided into two separate trusts, the terms "trust," "marital deduction trust," and "QTIP Trust," as used in this paragraph and elsewhere in this trust instrument, shall be construed in a manner consistent with the provisions of this subparagraph of the trust instrument.

(c) It is the settlors' intent that the executor of the deceased settlor's estate shall notify the trustee in writing if the executor intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (hereafter referred to as "the estate tax election") and also intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) (or any equivalent successor section) to have the estate tax election disregarded for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes with respect to some but not all of the property in the QTIP Trust. Upon receipt of written notification, the trustee shall divide the QTIP Trust into two separate trusts, to be known as the Exempt QTIP Trust and the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust, in accordance with Paragraph 5.15 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts. Property allocated to the Exempt QTIP Trust must be fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation of all QTIP Trust property. It is the settlors' intent that the executor shall then actually make the election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) with respect to the Exempt QTIP Trust and not the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust. If a partial estate tax election is to be made, then this subparagraph, if applicable at all, shall apply only with respect to the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with the provisions of this subparagraph. Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed as being inconsistent with Paragraph 5.15 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts, which shall apply to the QTIP trust without regard to the application of the remainder of this subparagraph.

(d) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, so long as the surviving settlor lives, the entire net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the surviving settlor and the trustee, but not less often than annually. [Optional: In determining the net income of the trust distributable to the surviving settlor, the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income in order for the trust to qualify for the marital deduction under the federal estate tax law, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that marital deduction, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this instrument or any applicable provisions of state law. Assuming the trust has qualified under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7), then any grant of rights, powers, discretion, and authority to the trustee in any provision of this instrument or any statute relating thereto shall not be effective if and to the extent that the provision or statute, if effective, would disqualify, for federal estate tax purposes, the marital deduction trust held under this paragraph. It is the intention of the settlors that the surviving settlor, as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during his or her lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall not exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is not in accord with this expressed intention. It is also the intention of the settlors that the trust produce for the surviving settlor during his or her lifetime the income, or that the surviving settlor shall have the benefit of the trust property, as is consistent with the value of the trust property and with its preservation.]

(e) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for his or her _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not make any discretionary payments of principal from the QTIP Trust to the surviving settlor unless the principal of the Survivor's Trust has been exhausted.

(f) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may pay the taxes, debts, and expenses arising on his or her death, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses. Any payments made under this paragraph _____ [may be made out of income or principal (or partly from each) of the QTIP Trust or shall be made first out of the income or principal of the QTIP Trust and the Survivor's Trust, and then out of the income or principal of the Bypass Trust and the Disclaimer Trust, if any, to the extent that the QTIP Trust is insufficient for that purpose].

(g) On the death of the surviving settlor, the net income of the trust then accrued but uncollected, and all net income remaining in the hands of the trustee, shall be distributed to the estate of the surviving settlor. The trust principal shall be dealt with as set forth below in this paragraph.

(h) The trustee shall determine from the personal representative of the estate of the surviving settlor the amount of the federal estate tax allocable to the property of the trust by reason of Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A (the "Section 2207A tax share") and shall set aside a portion of the trust principal for the purpose of paying that tax upon written demand of the personal representative.

(i) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall distribute the balance of the principal of the QTIP Trust (or all of the QTIP Trust principal, if the personal representative of the estate of the surviving settlor does not in due course make written demand for payment of the Section 2207A tax share), _____ [if generation-skipping transfer tax consequences are not a concern: to the Bypass Trust created in this trust instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph 5.09 applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Bypass Trust unless this trust and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

5.09. Bypass Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Bypass Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for his or her health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not make discretionary payments of principal from the Bypass Trust to the surviving settlor unless the principal of the QTIP Trust and the Survivor's Trust has been exhausted.

(b) In addition to any other payments and distributions that the surviving settlor may receive under this instrument, the trustee shall distribute to the surviving settlor during the surviving settlor's lifetime, such amounts from the principal of the trust estate as he or she may from time to time request of the trustee in writing, not to exceed in any calendar year the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the end of the calendar year. This right of withdrawal is not cumulative, so that if the surviving settlor does not withdraw the full amount that he or she is entitled to withdraw under this provision in any calendar year, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse at the end of the calendar year. This power shall exist each year until the death of the surviving settlor.

(d) Each share created for a surviving child shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at the time the assets of the trust are divided. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at that time, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument.

(e) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument.

(f) If all the aforementioned children of the settlors die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this Paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the surviving settlor].

5.10. Separate Trusts for Children and Issue. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of each separate trust established for a child or issue under Paragraph 5.09 as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child or issue all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, until that child or issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of that child or issue, until he or she reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for his or her _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) When that child or issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or 50 percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made. If that child or issue has already reached the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years when property is first allocated to this trust, then upon making the allocation, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or 50 percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, and the balance shall be retained in trust pursuant to the applicable provisions of this paragraph.

(d) When _____ that child or issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright the balance of the trust property.

(e) If that child or issue dies before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the assets of his or her separate trust shall be divided among his or her issue in _____ [the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in this Paragraph. If that child or issue dies without issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute the entire undistributed balance of his or her separate share outright among the other then-living persons for whom separate shares were created _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust is being administered under this paragraph, that part shall instead be added to that trust and shall thereafter be administered according to its terms. If there are no surviving persons who may take the share of that child or issue under this paragraph, any remaining portion of that share shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlors].

5.11. Disclaimer Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Disclaimer Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for his or her health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each child named in Paragraph 5.09 who survives the surviving settlor, and one share for the issue who survive the surviving settlor of each child named in Paragraph 5.09 who predeceases the surviving settlor.

(c) Each share created for a surviving child shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at the time the assets of the trust are divided. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at that time, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument.

(d) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue asset forth in Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument.

(e) If all the children named in Paragraph 5.09 die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlors].

5.12. Release, Disclaimer, or Restriction of Power of Appointment. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any power of appointment created by this instrument, whether expressly granted in this instrument or implied by law, may be released, disclaimed, or restricted in scope. Any such power may be released to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Probate Code Section 661 and disclaimed to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Probate Code Sections 260-295, or any successor sections, as they exist at the date of exercise of the release or disclaimer.

5.13. Consideration of Beneficiary's Other Resources. In making any payments of income or distributions of principal from any trust created by this instrument for _____ [specify standard of discretion as set forth in provision authorizing the discretionary distribution, e.g., the health, education, support, and maintenance or care and comfort] of any person, the trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent the trustee deems advisable, any other income or resources available to that person that are known to the trustee and that are reasonably available for that purpose.

5.14. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of the trust estate and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument or of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act, the trustee must establish a reserve for depreciation of all income-producing real and personal property and of capital improvements, and for extraordinary repairs. In addition, a reasonable reserve for depletion of all depletable natural resources, including, but not limited to, oil, gas, and mineral and timber property, shall be charged to income from time to time; distributions by mutual funds and similar entities of gains from the sale or other disposition of property shall be credited to principal; and a reasonable reserve for amortization of all intangible property with a limited economic life including, but not limited to, patents and copyrights shall be charged to income from time to time.

5.15. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this paragraph apply to any trust under this instrument that is created on or at any time after the deceased settlor's death and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by the deceased settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the deceased settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this paragraph applies, the trustee

_____ [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this Paragraph, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlors' intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust, so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The Trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subparagraph.

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this Paragraph, the trustee shall _____ [for a pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for a fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided]. [If preceding sentence provides for a pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of the deceased settlor's death, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the deceased settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this Paragraph, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the deceased settlor's death to the date of payment).]

(c) Regardless of whether or not subparagraph (a) applies, if the amount of the deceased settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) to a trust to which this paragraph applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the deceased settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632)

so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the deceased settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this paragraph applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust terms to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(a) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust terms to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(b) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

[Optional:]

(e) If the trustee determines that the burdens of generation-skipping transfer taxes, income taxes, and death taxes on a Non-Exempt Trust, either settlor's estate, or the beneficiaries of that trust would be reduced, the trustee may petition the court to amend the trust to grant to one or more trust beneficiaries who are non-skip persons in a generation below the deceased settlor a general testamentary power of appointment over all or a specified portion of that Non-Exempt Trust. Any power to amend the trust is within the discretion of the court, and the preceding sentence shall not be construed to give the trustee any power that the trustee does not already have under California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances, nor shall it be construed to limit the power of the trustee or any beneficiary under the California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances.

(f) The purpose of this paragraph is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and nontax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlors' intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subparagraph are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(g) If, upon the death of the surviving settlor, (1) the surviving settlor is considered to be the transferor of any Non-Exempt Trust established by this instrument for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, and (2) the surviving settlor's executor allocates any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the surviving settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) (or any equivalent successor section) to that Non-Exempt Trust so that the entire trust then has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, that trust shall then be considered to be an Exempt Trust for purposes of this paragraph of the trust instrument.

(h) In no event may the trustee exercise any power under this paragraph in a manner that will impair the marital deduction.

(i) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax, the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this Paragraph.

ARTICLE 6 : Trustee

6.01. Definition. Unless the context requires otherwise, all references in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed to refer to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees.

6.02. Successor Trustees. (a) If, while both settlors are living, any trustee or co-trustee fails or ceases to act or to continue to act, the settlors shall have the power to designate any suitable person or entity to act as successor to that trustee or co-trustee. This power may be exercised _____ [only by both settlors, acting jointly or by the settlors, acting either jointly or individually]. The successor shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor. If a successor trustee is not designated in this way, [include only if settlors are initially to serve as co-trustees: no successor co-trustee shall be appointed. Rather, the remaining co-trustee shall act as sole trustee and shall have full power to complete the trust administration.

(b) If, after the death of the deceased settlor, any trustee or co-trustee fails or ceases to act as trustee or co-trustee, the surviving settlor shall have the power to designate any suitable person or entity to act as successor trustee or co-trustee. The successor trustee or co-trustee shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor.

(c) If, for any reason, the office of trustee becomes vacant and no trustee is designated under subparagraphs (a) or (b) of this paragraph, the following persons, in the order of priority indicated, shall be successor trustee:

First, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., William J. Gray, of Sacramento, California];

Second, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Sandra M. Green, of Roseville, California];

Third, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Double Eagle Bank, Fresno, California].

6.03. Removal and Replacement. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, while both settlors are living, the settlors, acting jointly, shall have the power, at any time and for any reason, to remove any trustee acting under this instrument and appoint another trustee to replace the removed trustee. After the death of the deceased settlor, the surviving settlor shall have the power, at any time and for any reason, to remove any trustee acting under this instrument and appoint another trustee to replace the removed trustee. Removal shall be effected by giving a written notice of removal to the trustee to be removed and to the person or entity legally entitled to act as successor trustee. The removal shall become effective upon delivery to the settlors (or the surviving settlor) of a written acceptance of the trust by the successor trustee. The settlors (or the surviving settlor) shall promptly notify the trustee being removed of the receipt of that acceptance.

(b) The court shall have the power to remove the trustee upon petition by any beneficiary, for any of the following reasons:

- (1) Commission of a breach of trust.
- (2) Insolvency or other unfitness to administer the trust.
- (3) Hostility or lack of cooperation among the co-trustees that impairs the administration of the trust.
- (4) Failure or refusal to act.
- (5) Other good cause, as determined by the court.

6.04. Resignation. Any trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, at least _____ [specify; e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the settlors if living, to any other trustee then acting, to any persons authorized to designate a successor trustee, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor trustee, if any has been appointed under the provisions of this instrument. A resignation shall be effective upon written acceptance of the trust by a successor trustee.

6.05. Vacancies. If a vacancy should occur in the office of trustee, whether by reason of death, resignation, removal, or other cause, and no successor trustee is appointed as provided in this instrument, the court shall appoint a new trustee to fill the vacancy. In filling a vacancy, the court may, in its discretion, appoint the original or any other number of trustees. In selecting a trustee, the court shall give consideration to the wishes of the beneficiaries who are fourteen years of age or older.

6.06. Exercise of Management Powers While Settlers Are Co-Trustees. While both settlors are acting as co-trustees under this instrument, with respect to community property held in the trust, either of them may be sole signatory of all checks and other withdrawal instruments drawn on any trust account, and of any instruments of conveyance of trust property other than community real property or a community property interest in a business operated and managed by one settlor. A settlor acting as a trustee and operating or managing a business that is community property may, acting alone, sell, exchange, encumber, or dispose of that business after giving prior notice to the other settlor of any sale, lease, exchange, encumbrance, or other disposition of all or substantially all of the personal property used in the operation of the business (including personal property used for agricultural purposes). Any and all powers relating to the management of any trust property that comprises the separate or quasi-community property of either settlor shall be exercised only by the settlor who contributed that property to the trust.

6.07. Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any individual who serves as a trustee under this instrument optional; except any successor trustee appointed by court order under Paragraph 6.05 of this instrument].

6.08. Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention is in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards set forth in California Probate Code Section 16040 and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

(b) Invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole, and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among the circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plans within the overall trust portfolio.

- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them;
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property of type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in this provision or the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

- (c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.
- (d) Acquire and maintain as a trust asset a life insurance policy on the life of any person, including the trustee, issued by any company and in any amount that the trustee may deem advisable, and exercise all rights of ownership granted in that policy; provided, however, that as to any assets of the trust (other than assets held in the Bypass Trust and the Disclaimer Trust), the surviving settlor shall have the right, by delivery of a written instrument to the trustee, to require the trustee to convert any such policy into productive property within a reasonable time following the receipt of that request.
- (e) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.
- (f) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estate of the settlor that are in the best interest of any trusts created in this instrument.
- (g) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (h) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (i) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (j) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(k) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [optional: unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(l) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional adviser employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(m) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in that connection, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(n) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(o) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(p) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(q) In the trustee's discretion, make loans to beneficiaries out of funds of the trust, and guarantee the repayment of loans made to beneficiaries by third parties by encumbering trust assets.

(r) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(s) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(t) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(u) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(v) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

(w) Purchase bonds at such premiums as the trustee shall, in the trustee's discretion, deem advisable; provided, however, that any premium paid by the trustee for any bond shall be periodically repaid to principal out of the interest received on the bond, in a reasonable manner as the trustee determines and, to the extent necessary, from the proceeds on the sale or other disposition of the bond.

6.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit General Powers. The grant to the trustee in this instrument of a specific power or powers shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to exercise in furtherance of the purposes of this instrument or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

6.10. Retention of Family Residence. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall retain, in any trust or trusts created by this trust instrument, any interest in real property used by the settlors as their principal residence at the time of the first settlor's death ("the family residence"), and shall deal with the family residence in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

(a) During his or her lifetime, the surviving settlor shall have the right to occupy the family residence (or any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) free of any rent.

(b) The trustee shall pay as much of the mortgage or trust deed payments, property taxes, assessments, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs on the family residence (or on any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) as corresponds to the trust's proportionate interest in the same. The trustee shall make those payments out of income or principal of the trust or trusts in accordance with the principles applicable to charging of payments under California law, but in no event shall payment be made in a manner that disqualifies any part of any trust, that would otherwise so qualify, for the federal estate tax marital deduction.

(c) The surviving settlor, at his or her option, shall have the right to advise the trustee in writing that he or she no longer wishes to occupy the family residence and to direct the trustee to sell it, or any interest therein. In deciding on the terms and conditions relating to any sale, the trustee shall take into account all relevant factors, including, but not limited to, the intent of the settlors that no sale be made in a "forced sale" situation (other than at the direction of the surviving settlor) or at a time when, because of high mortgage rates or otherwise, the residential real estate market is depressed. In selling the family residence, the trustee may dispose of it on such terms as the trustee deems desirable, including an installment sale or any other desirable method of disposing of the family residence, provided that if the sale is for consideration other than cash, the purchaser's obligation shall be secured by a first deed of trust. In the event of a sale, the surviving settlor may direct the trustee in writing to apply the proceeds of the sale to the purchase of a substitute residence or residential property, of comparable or lesser value, to be selected by the surviving settlor, or to reinvest the proceeds in any manner that he or she may direct, provided that any such investments satisfy normal fiduciary standards of prudence and safety, and to use the income from reinvestment to pay the rental or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected by the surviving settlor. Any net trust accounting income from any such investments, in excess of the trust's share of the rental costs and any other expenses of trust administration, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

(d) If the surviving settlor does not direct the trustee to sell the family residence, he or she shall have the right to direct the trustee in writing to lease it, or any interest in it. In the event of lease, the trustee shall continue to pay the expenses of maintaining the family residence as specified above, subject to the lease terms, and shall use the entire net income from the lease to pay the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected and occupied by the surviving settlor. Any net trust accounting income from any lease of the family residence, in excess of the trust's share of the cost of the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

(e) Upon the death of the surviving settlor, the trust's interest in either the family residence, any proceeds remaining from the sale of the family residence, or any substitute residence or residential property purchased by the trustee with any proceeds of sale or lease of the family residence, shall be distributed in accordance with the applicable provisions of the trust or trusts in which the interest or interests are held, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

6.11. Power to Divide or Combine Trusts. The trustee shall have the power to divide a single trust into separate shares, each to be administered in accordance with the terms and conditions of the single trust from which they were created, when the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, determines that division is desirable or advisable in view of tax considerations (including considerations related to the income tax, the gift tax, the estate tax, and the generation-skipping transfer tax) or other objectives of the trusts and their beneficiaries. The trustee shall not be required to make a physical segregation or division of the various trust shares created under this trust instrument, except as segregation or division may be required by reason of the termination and distribution of any of the trusts, but the trustee shall keep separate accounts and records for different undivided interests. The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, shall have the further power to combine two or more trusts having substantially the same terms into a single trust for purposes of administration, when tax or other factors indicate that such combination would be desirable or advisable. [Optional: In deciding whether to combine trusts, the trustee should consider the generation-skipping transfer tax "inclusion ratio" of the trusts to be combined. Trusts having the same inclusion ratios may be combined. Trusts having different inclusion ratios generally should not be combined unless their inclusion ratios are maintained unchanged through substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 2654(b), and the applicable regulations thereunder.]

6.12. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

6.13. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

6.14. Payments and Distributions to or for Benefit of Beneficiaries. In lieu of making a direct payment or distribution to any beneficiary who at the time of the payment or distribution is a minor or suffering from a legal disability, or who appears to the trustee by reason of illness, age, injury, or other cause, to be unable to accept the payment or distribution or to make intelligent or responsible use of the same, the trustee may make the payment or distribution to any conservator or guardian duly appointed and acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary; to any custodian acting for and in behalf of the beneficiary under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state including a suitable custodian selected by the trustee; to any suitable person or persons, such as a relative or friend, with whom the beneficiary is residing; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

6.15. Limitation on Powers That Would Imperil Marital Deduction. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall exercise power and discretion over any trust or trust share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction only in a manner consistent with all statutory and regulatory requirements for the full allowance of the marital deduction for that trust or share.

6.16. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. Any trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by the other trustee or trustees.

6.17. Trustee's Liability. No [optional: "family" or individual] trustee [optional: who is serving without compensation under this trust instrument] shall be liable to any interested party for acts or omissions of that trustee, except those resulting from that trustee's willful misconduct or gross negligence. [Optional: As used in this provision, a "family" trustee is a trustee who is related to the settlors by blood or marriage.] This standard shall also apply regarding a trustee's liability for the acts or omissions of any co-trustee or predecessor trustee.

PRACTICE TIP

One should carefully consider whether or not the above provision should be included. In effect, this provision partially relieves the trustee of liability in exchange for the trustee's waiver of any claim to compensation. This provision may be omitted if the client prefers not to allow the trustee to effectively "buy" a lesser standard of conduct by waiving compensation. While the savings in compensation may sound attractive, the settlor should consider whether or not it might be preferable, in the long run, to pay for the trustee's time and services and require, in return, that the trustee adhere to a high standard of conduct. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

6.18. Written Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event upon which the right to payments from any trust may depend, the trustee shall incur no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

6.19. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

PRACTICE TIP

Probate Code Section 16062 requires the trustee of any trust to provide an annual account to the beneficiaries, except under limited circumstances, such as when the trust may be revoked, when the beneficiary waives an accounting, or when the trustee and the beneficiary are the same person [see Prob. Code § 16064]. The contents of the annual account are described in Probate Code Section 16063. Generally, the accounting must reveal all of the information required in a formal accounting, although it may be presented in summary form. Additionally, information must be provided regarding trustee, attorney and accountant compensation, and statements regarding the rights of the beneficiary to challenge the actions of the trustee must be included [see Prob. Code § 16063].

In light of these provisions, the planner may wish to consider omitting the requirement that an accounting be provided. This provision would only add the burden of preparing a full, formal accounting, which can always be required by the beneficiary in any case when he or she feels that more detail must be revealed by the trustee [see Prob. Code §§ 16061, 16062(a)]. Indeed, many attorneys specifically waive the requirement that any accounting whatsoever be rendered by the trustee. Even with such a waiver in the trust instrument, a beneficiary could still obtain an accounting if it appears that a material breach of the trust has occurred [see Prob. Code § 16064]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

ARTICLE 7 : Concluding Provisions

7.01. Perpetuities Savings Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any trust created by this instrument or by a power of appointment created by this instrument that has not terminated earlier shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of _____ [name individual(s) or describe class of persons whose life or lives are to be the measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlors and the issue of the settlors living on the date of the deceased settlor's death or the beneficiaries of the trust who are living on the date of the deceased settlor's death]. If a trust is terminated because of the preceding sentence, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this instrument, distribution shall be to the persons entitled to receive income immediately before the termination _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240]. If there is no person who is entitled to receive income immediately before the termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income to _____ [name distributee(s) or specify class, e.g., the issue of the settlors then surviving in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240].

7.02. Simultaneous Death. If the settlors die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, each settlor shall be deemed to have survived the other, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly. If the settlors, or either of them, and any beneficiary under this instrument die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, the settlor or settlors, as the case may be, shall be deemed to have survived the beneficiary, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly.

7.03. No-Contest Clause. If any beneficiary under this instrument, singularly or in combination with any other person or persons, directly or indirectly contests this instrument or the wills of the settlors in whole or in part, or opposes, objects to, or seeks to invalidate any of the provisions of this instrument or of the wills of the settlors, or seeks to succeed to any part of the estate of the settlors other than in the manner specified in this instrument or in the wills of the settlors, then the right of that person to take any interest given to him or her by this instrument shall be void, and any gift or other interest in the trust property to which the beneficiary would otherwise have been entitled shall pass as if he or she had predeceased the settlors [optional: without issue].

7.04. Definition of Death Taxes. As used in this instrument, the term "death taxes" means all inheritance, estate, succession, and other similar taxes that are payable by any person on account of that person's interest in the decedent's estate or by reason of the decedent's death, including penalties and interest, but excluding the following:

(a) Any additional tax that may be assessed under Internal Revenue Code Section 2032A.

(b) Any federal estate taxes recoverable, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A, from the holder or recipient of any qualified terminable interest property that is included in the settlor's federal gross estate under Internal Revenue Code Section 2044.

(c) Any federal or state tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer, as that term is defined in the federal tax laws, unless that generation-skipping transfer tax is payable directly out of the assets of a trust created by this instrument.

7.05. Definition of Debts and Expenses. As used in this instrument, the term "debts and expenses" shall include the following:

(a) All costs, expenses of litigation, counsel fees, or other charges that the trustee incurs in connection with the determination of the amount of the death taxes, interest, or penalties referred to in Paragraph 5.02 of this instrument, and

(b) Legally enforceable debts, funeral expenses, expenses of last illness, and administration and property expenses.

7.06. Definition of Deceased Settlor and Surviving Settlor. As used in this instrument, the words "deceased settlor" refer to the first settlor to die, and the words "surviving settlor" refer to the other settlor.

7.07. Definition of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the words "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined and derived.

7.08. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the word "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

7.09. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

(a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;

(b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;

(c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and

(d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

7.10. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter genders, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

7.11. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

7.12. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

7.13. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

7.14. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of either or both settlors that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor or settlors had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor or settlors.

CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Complete Trust Instruments

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.203

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.203 Formula Marital Deduction Trust for One Married Settlor--QTIP Trust and Bypass TRUST

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete trust instrument designed to be used by a married person who wishes to create a revocable trust that will benefit himself or herself and his or her spouse during their lifetimes and their children after their deaths, and that will avoid or reduce estate taxes by taking full advantage of the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056] and the unified credit [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505 (gift tax)].

Under this form, if the settlor is survived by his or her spouse, no federal estate tax will be due on the settlor's death because the marital deduction and the settlor's unified credit will shelter the entire estate from federal estate tax. Moreover, the portion of the assets sheltered by the settlor's unified credit will also avoid taxation when the settlor's spouse dies. The net effect of this plan will be to avoid or reduce estate taxes in the combined estates of both spouses. It is assumed that the combined estates of the spouses are large enough to enable them to benefit from this kind of planning.

If the settlor is not survived by his or her spouse, the trust estate will be divided into shares for the settlor's children and held, administered, and distributed at specified ages.

[b] Trust Property

This trust is basically similar to the two-settlor trust in Section 70.202[2] [see § 70.202[1][b] for discussion of the basic plan underlying that form], except that it has been adapted for one settlor. When one married person creates a marital deduction trust, it is usually because that person has a significant separate or quasi-community property estate. Often, such a trust will be created in conjunction with a second revocable trust, created by both spouses, that will contain their community property. Segregation of separate and quasi-community property into a separate trust avoids the drafting, recordkeeping, and administrative problems that can result when separate and community property are lumped together in a so-called "mixed property" trust.

Ordinarily, it is impractical for a married sole settlor to create a marital deduction trust that contains community property. Community property that is transferred to a trust will lose its community character unless the trust, originally or as amended before or after the transfer, provides that the power, if any, to modify the trust as to the rights and interests in that property may be exercised only with the joinder or consent of both spouses [Fam. Code § 761(a), (b)]. A trust that is created by a sole settlor cannot meet that requirement unless the trust instrument gives the settlor's spouse the power to join with the settlor in modifying the trust as to the rights and interests in the community property. Moreover, funding such a trust would require the conveyance of a fractional interest in each community property asset to the trust, which is likely to cause a myriad of administration problems later on. In short, it is a bad idea. Revocable trusts containing community property are almost always two-settlor trusts such as the forms contained in Sections 70.201[2] (nonformula trust) and 70.202[2] (formula trust).

[c] Trust Declaration Format

This trust instrument uses the trust declaration format. A "declaration of trust" is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument [see [2], P 1.01]. Only the trustee is required to execute the declaration. However, it is common for the settlor to sign the declaration to signify his or her approval of the terms of the trust [for signature blocks for declarations of trust [see [2], P 8.01]. For discussion of the distinction between a trust declaration and a trust agreement, and the advantages and disadvantages of the two formats, see Section 70.11[3].

[d] Family Information

It is assumed in this form that the settlor has children. It is also assumed that the settlor has previously been married and has one or more children from the prior marriage [see [2], PP 1.04, 1.05, below ]. Finally, it is assumed that the settlor wants all his or her children to share equally in the trust assets. This is a common fact pattern for a married settlor with a large separate property estate [see [b], above], as well as for the use of a qualified terminable interest property ("QTIP") trust [see [i], below]. However, the existence of children from a prior marriage is not a prerequisite to use of the type of estate plan illustrated in this form. If the settlor has not been previously married, or has no children from a prior marriage, the appropriate family information simply can be deleted.

[e] Rights and Powers of Settlor

This form gives the settlor the right to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust, in whole or in part, at any time during the settlor's lifetime [see [2], P 3.01, below ]. Upon the settlor's death, the trust becomes irrevocable.

The form also gives the settlor the power to direct the investments of the trust [see [2], P 3.02, below ]. This provision will not be important while the settlor is serving as trustee [see [p], below]. However, it will give the settlor control over trust investments if the settlor later wants another person to take over as trustee. The form also gives the settlor broad powers to borrow money from the trust estate [see [2], P 3.03, below ].

The form includes a provision authorizing an attorney in fact acting under a durable power of attorney to exercise the settlor's rights and powers over the trust estate during any time that the settlor is unable to exercise those rights and powers personally [see [2], P 3.04, below ]. If no attorney in fact is acting for the settlor, then the settlor's rights can be exercised by a duly appointed conservator, but only after petition to the court. If the settlor does not wish to delegate the power to amend or revoke the trust, this provision may be amended by the addition of optional language stating that all of the settlor's powers, except the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust, can be exercised by the attorney in fact or conservator [see [2], P 3.04, below ]. For further discussion of the revocability of a trust, and delegation of the power to revoke a trust to an attorney in fact or conservator, see Section 70.12[5].

[f] Payments and Distributions During Settlor's Lifetime

This form gives the settlor the right to receive income payments and principal distributions during his or her lifetime [see [2], art. 4, below]. The trustee can be required to pay the settlor all of the income of the trust, or as much income as the settlor may request from time to time [see [2], P 4.01, below]. In either case, the settlor will have the substantial right to enjoy all of the trust income.

The trustee can be required to distribute principal to the settlor on the settlor's request, or when the trustee in the exercise of the trustee's discretion determines that principal distributions should be made [see [2], P 4.02, below]. In either case, the settlor will have the substantial right to enjoy all of the trust principal.

The form includes a provision giving an attorney in fact acting under a durable power of attorney authority to request income or principal on the settlor's behalf if the settlor is unable to make those requests personally. If there is no attorney in fact, then the trustee will have the right to make the requests for the settlor [see [2], P 4.03, below].

[g] Special Gift on Settlor's Death

After the settlor's death, the trustee is required to make a "special gift" [see [2], P 5.01, below]. The term "special gift," as used in this form, means a gift that the trustee is required to make after the settlor's death to someone other than the residuary beneficiary. It is analogous, in many respects, to a specific devise or a general pecuniary devise in a will. The special gift in this form is a pecuniary devise, but special gifts of tangible personal property are not uncommon [see § 70.254[2] (form)].

The special gift will be made before any distributions are made to the surviving spouse or any other beneficiary. The special gift typically will be made to a family member or friend whom the settlor wishes to remember after his or her death, but whom the settlor does not wish to receive the full benefit of the residue of the trust estate.

If the settlor does not wish to make a special gift, this provision can be deleted. If the settlor wants to make more than one special gift, identical provisions may be included as necessary.

The special gift used in this form is not intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction. Therefore, if the amount of the gift exceeds the amount protected by the available unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010], it will be subject to estate tax. Under the tax payment provision in this form [see [2], P 5.02, below], the special gift will not be exempt from proration of estate taxes, with the result that the actual amount that will pass to the recipient may be less than the pecuniary amount specified in the special gift provision. If, as is frequently the case, the settlor wants a special gift to pass to the recipient tax free, the tax payment provision in the form must be modified to exclude the special gift from any liability for estate taxes. Before modifying the tax provision, however, the settlor should be reminded that if the special gift is to pass tax free, any tax attributed to the special gift will have to be paid out of other trust assets that would otherwise go to the surviving spouse or other trust beneficiaries.

PRACTICE TIP

Even if the amount of the special gift does not exceed the amount protected by the available unified credit, if it is at all large it can have a serious impact on the estate plan. For example, if part of the plan is intended to create a bypass trust that will ultimately pass tax free to the settlor's children, a large nonmarital special gift will significantly reduce the amount that can be placed into the bypass trust without creating an immediate tax. Thus, caution must be exercised, not only in including special gifts, but in evaluating the effect of special gifts on the tax liabilities generated and the size of any remaining nonmarital gifts. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[h] Marital Deduction Formula

After the special gift has been made (or if there is to be no special gift) [see [g], above], the distribution of the trust estate will vary, depending on whether or not the settlor is survived by his or her spouse. If the settlor is not survived by his or her spouse, the trust assets will simply be divided into shares for the settlor's children in the manner described in [n], below, and the marital deduction provisions of the trust will never become operative [see [2], P 5.07, below].

If the settlor is survived by his or her spouse, then on the settlor's death the trust assets are divided into a Marital Deduction Share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and a Nonmarital Share that does not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056] but that will be protected under the deceased settlor's unified credit [I.R.C. § 2010].

PRACTICE TIP

The provisions of the Bypass Trust to be funded with the Nonmarital Share, as contained in the form in this section [ see [j], below], cannot qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction because all income is not required to be distributed at least annually to the settlor's surviving spouse, and the settlor's children are included as potential income beneficiaries during the surviving spouse's lifetime. In actual practice, the great majority of bypass trusts provide that all income be paid at least annually to the surviving spouse alone, and their other provisions also qualify them for the federal estate tax marital deduction QTIP election described in Internal Revenue Code § 2056(b)(7). Of course, were one to make the QTIP election as to a bypass trust, the entire tax planning aspect of the estate plan would be undermined. Thus, one should never include language in any trust form requiring the personal representative to make the QTIP election as to any trust which qualifies for that election. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

The actual dollar amount of the trust assets allocated to each share is determined by means of a formula, known as a marital deduction formula. Essentially, this formula apportions assets between the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share in a manner that will assure that the Nonmarital Share is funded to the extent of the available unified credit, and the balance of the estate is allocated to the Marital Deduction Share where it will be protected from taxation by the marital deduction.

Marital deduction formulas can be either "pecuniary" or "fractional." This trust uses a pecuniary formula that funds the Marital Deduction Share first. For discussion of the use of marital deduction formula clauses, see Section 70.202[1][k]; for more detailed discussion, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions; see also 2 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender). If the trust drafter wants to modify this form to use a different type of marital deduction formula, the following provisions may be substituted:

(1) To use a "pecuniary bypass formula" specifying that the Nonmarital Share will be equal to a specified amount, delete Paragraph 5.04 of this form, and substitute the form in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.202[2].

(2) To use a "fractional formula" [see above], delete Paragraphs 5.04 and 5.05 of this form, and substitute the form in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.204[2].

[i] QTIP Trust

The Marital Deduction Share is placed in a marital deduction trust. The marital deduction trust used in this form is a qualified terminable interest property (or "QTIP") trust, the terms of which comply with the "qualified terminable interest property" provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7). As required by the tax rules, all the income from the QTIP Trust is payable to the settlor's surviving spouse for life, and no person has any power to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the settlor's surviving spouse during his or her lifetime [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)]. After the death of the settlor, his or her executor must make an irrevocable election on the estate tax return filed for the settlor's estate to treat the all or part of the trust assets as QTIP property [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(III), (v)].

The settlor's surviving spouse need not be given a power of appointment over the assets of a QTIP trust. Thus, the settlor may specify who will receive the trust property after the death of the surviving spouse. This makes QTIP trusts particularly suitable for clients who do not want their spouses to be able to alter the dispositions of the client's assets after the client's death. The "classic" situation calling for the use of a QTIP trust is one in which there are children of a former marriage and animosity exists between those children and the client's current spouse. However, as discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, there are important reasons for using a QTIP trust even when no such considerations are present. Essentially, because the settlor's executor can elect to qualify all or only part of the trust for the marital deduction, the QTIP trust allows a much wider measure of portmortem planning flexibility. Most experienced estate planners recommend using a QTIP trust whenever possible.

The most common alternative to a QTIP trust is a so-called "lifetime income/power of appointment trust," which will also qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. Under such a trust, the settlor's surviving spouse must be entitled (as with a QTIP trust) to all the trust income for life. In addition, the settlor's surviving spouse must be given the right, in the form of a general power of appointment, to designate the recipient of all remaining trust assets on his or her death. Since the settlor's surviving spouse has such broad powers over the trust assets, a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is suitable only when the settlor has a high degree of confidence that his or her spouse will dispose of the remaining assets in a manner that will be consistent with the wishes of the settlor. Moreover, a lifetime income/power of appointment trust lacks the postmortem planning flexibility available through use of the QTIP trust.

If the drafter wants to convert the marital deduction trust into this form into a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, Paragraphs 5.04 and 5.09 should be deleted, the form in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.231[2], substituted in their place, and references to the QTIP trust in the remainder of the instrument modified to refer to the lifetime income/power of appointment trust instead.

A detailed discussion of QTIP trusts is beyond the scope of this comment. For further coverage of that subject, see § 70.202[1][1]. For general coverage of the marital deduction, see Ch. 71 and California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[j] Bypass Trust

Assets that are not allocated to the QTIP Trust will go into the Nonmarital Share. The Nonmarital Share will be placed in a Bypass Trust [see [2], P 5.10, below]. The Bypass Trust is structured so that the trust assets will "bypass" (that is, escape taxation in) the surviving spouse's estate [see [2], P 5.10, below]. Such a trust is also sometimes referred to as a "credit shelter" trust because it uses the deceased settlor's unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010] to "shelter" a portion of the estate from federal estate tax.

The trustee has discretion to distribute income and principal of the Bypass Trust to the settlor's surviving spouse and children according to an "ascertainable standard" [see [2], P 5.10(a), below]. The specification of an "ascertainable standard" will ensure that the trust assets will not be included in the gross estate of the surviving spouse for estate tax purposes, even if the surviving spouse serves as the trustee [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2); see also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4]]. If desired, the terms of the bypass trust may be modified to require mandatory payment of all income to the surviving spouse, coupled with discretionary payments of principal in accordance with an ascertainable standard. Mandatory payment of income may avoid adverse income tax consequences in some cases by avoiding the high income tax rates applicable to accumulated trust income [see I.R.C. § 1(e)]. Any potential income tax savings should be computed after considering the probable size of the surviving spouse's estate, and balanced against any competing non-tax goals of the settlor.

[k] "Five or Five" Power Over Bypass Trust Principal

The settlor's surviving spouse is also given a "five or five" power over the principal of the Bypass Trust [see [2], P 5.10(b), below]. This power permits the surviving spouse to withdraw up to $5,000 or five percent of the trust, whichever is greater, in each calendar year. This power is optional and should be included only after carefully considering the consequences of the power.

The advantage of a five or five power is that it gives the surviving spouse control over a portion of the trust principal without the constraints imposed by an ascertainable standard. Thus, for example, the spouse may use the power to make annual tax-free gifts to the children to take advantage of the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b); for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]].

However, a five or five power can also have adverse tax consequences for the surviving spouse. A power to invade the principal of a trust will not cause the trust principal to be included in the estate of the person who holds the power if the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the current value of the trust each year [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3) and § 70.212[2]]. However, the power must be "non-cumulative"; that is, it must lapse if it is not exercised by the end of a calendar year [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3)].

Any property subject to an unexercised five or five power in the year of the holder's death will be included in the holder's estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)]. Moreover, the IRS takes the position that a beneficiary who holds a five or five power over the principal of a trust will be treated as the owner of a portion of the trust for income tax purposes [Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8142061 ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8326074 ; see I.R.C. § 678 (income tax consequences of power to invade trust corpus)]. Thus, the settlor's surviving spouse will have to pay any income tax due on the trust income, even if the five or five power is used to transfer property to someone else, such as the children, or is not used at all.

If the settlor does not want to have part of the trust assets included in the surviving settlor's estate for estate tax purposes, and to have the surviving spouse treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes, the five or five power should be omitted.

PRACTICE TIP

The trust drafter should also bear in mind that granting the settlor's surviving spouse a five or five power over the Bypass Trust can simply distort the settlor's estate plan. From the settlor's perspective, the Bypass Trust's principal should be tapped only as a last resort; indeed, many revocable trusts specifically provide that invasion of the Bypass Trust's principal may (or should) be made only after the principal of all other trusts created under the instrument has been exhausted. Similarly, the invasion provisions of a sole settlor's Bypass Trust often require the trustee to carefully consider the surviving spouse's other resources before making a distribution of principal. Such provisions are intended, in part, to give some assurance to the settlor that if he or she dies before his or her spouse, the maximum possible portion of the assets he or she leaves will pass to his or her intended beneficiaries, regardless of the provisions of his or her surviving spouse's estate plan. At the same time, such a provision protects the settlor's tax plan, and the Bypass Trust's assets will pass free of death tax at the surviving spouse's death. Thus, it is advantageous to allow as much growth as possible to occur in this trust. If the surviving spouse regularly exercises a five or five power he or she may hold over the Bypass Trust, then the tax plan intended by the instrument will be compromised, even if the compromise is inadvertent. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[l] Disclaimer Trust

This form gives the surviving spouse the option to disclaim all or part of the assets that he or she would receive on the death of the settlor [see [2], P 5.08, below]. Any assets that are disclaimed will be held in a special "Disclaimer Trust" [see [2], P 5.12, below]. As discussed in § 70.12[6][i], many experienced estate planners advocate including a disclaimer trust in every trust instrument.

The Disclaimer Trust, like the Bypass Trust [see [j], above], is designed so that the trust assets will not be included in the surviving spouse's taxable estate when the surviving spouse dies. To achieve this tax treatment, the surviving spouse's rights in and powers over the Disclaimer Trust are appropriately limited. First, the surviving spouse has no power of revocation over the disclaimer trust [see [2], P 3.01, below]. Second, the surviving spouse will receive income and principal only in accordance with an "ascertainable standard" [see [2], P 5.12(a), below; see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2) and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4]]. If desired, the terms of the disclaimer trust, like those of the bypass trust [see [m], above], may be modified to require mandatory payment of all income to the surviving spouse, coupled with discretionary payments of principal in accordance with an ascertainable standard. See [1][j], above, for discussion of potential income tax advantages to the latter approach.

The Disclaimer Trust provides additional postmortem planning flexibility in the event that unanticipated changes in the circumstances of the settlor and his or her spouse make it advantageous for the surviving spouse to disclaim some part of the trust property. For example, to minimize overall estate taxes in the estates of both spouses, it may be desirable to pay some additional estate tax on the death of the first spouse by having the surviving spouse disclaim property that would otherwise pass into the marital deduction trust. The Disclaimer Trust gives the survivor that option. Whether the option should be exercised will depend in part on the increasing estate tax unified credit [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)]. If the surviving spouse is in good health and is likely to survive several years, it may be prudent to not disclaim and not to pay estate tax in the deceased settlor's estate. By not disclaiming, the surviving spouse can enjoy the increasing estate tax exemption resulting from the increasing exclusion amount. The surviving spouse may even avoid estate taxes altogether, with the enacted repeal of the estate taxes, for decedents dying after 2009 [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2210(a)]. There is a great deal of uncertainty with respect to planning in this area, because optimal results are dependent on the year of death of the surviving spouse. In addition, although the estate tax has been repealed for decedents dying after 2009, a sunset provision of the repealing legislation re-imposes the estate tax at its pre-2001 rates after 2010 unless Congress re-enacts the repeal before that time [I.R.C. § 2210(a); Pub. Law 107-16, § 901]. Many commentators feel legislative changes will be made regarding the repeal before 2010 [for discussion, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A].

If the surviving spouse does not disclaim any property, the Disclaimer Trust simply will never become operative.

[m] Payments and Distributions After Death of Surviving Spouse

On the death of the surviving spouse, the trustee will divide the assets of the QTIP, Bypass, and Disclaimer Trusts into shares for each of the settlor's children and the issue of each child who dies before the surviving spouse [see [2], PP 5.09(i), 5.10(c), 5.12(b), below]. The share of any child who has reached a specified age (for example, 30 years) will be distributed outright, while the shares of children who have not reached that age will be retained in separate trusts for those children [see [2], PP 5.09(i), 5.10(d), 5.12(c), below]. Each child will receive all of the income from his or her trust, plus as much of the principal as is necessary to maintain the child in accordance with a standard specified in the instrument [see [2], P 5.11(a), below]. If the trust drafter would prefer to avoid creating a situation in which income may be paid to very young children (or, more accurately, to the guardians or custodians of minor children), the income payment provision may be modified to provide for an accumulation of income until the beneficiary reaches a stated age (such as 18 or 21), and payment of income thereafter. However, accumulation of income can have negative income tax consequences due to the high income tax rates applicable to relatively small amounts of income [see I.R.C. § 1(e) (tax rates applicable to income of estates and trusts)].

The trust principal will be distributed to the child in two increments when the child reaches specified ages (for example, 25 years and 30 years) [see [2], P 5.11(b), (c), below]. The share of any deceased child is given outright to the issue of that child if those issue have reached a specified age (such as 30), or held in trust for minor issue until they reach that age [see [2], P 5.10(e), below]. The latter provision creates a remote possibility of a violation of the rule against perpetuities, but under the current "wait and see" rule [Prob. Code § 21205; see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16] and the perpetuities savings clause in this instrument, there is no chance of a violation that could disrupt the estate plan. If the deceased child has no issue, his or her share is divided among the other children and issue of the settlor.

This form may be modified to provide for a "family pot" arrangement, rather than a separate share arrangement, on the death of the surviving spouse. Under a "family pot" arrangement, the trust assets are lumped together in a single trust, rather than segregated into separate shares as provided in this form. The trustee usually will be given the power to "sprinkle" income, and principal if desired, among the various trust beneficiaries. To convert this trust into a "family pot" trust following the death of the surviving spouse, Paragraphs 5.07, 5.10, 5.11, and 5.12 of this form should be deleted and replaced with the alternative provisions in § 70.213[2]. For additional discussion about "family pot" trusts, see § 70.210[1][b].

[n] Payments and Distributions if Settlor Is Not Survived by Spouse

If the settlor's spouse dies before the settlor, then on the settlor's death the trustee will be required to divide the trust estate into equal shares for each of the settlor's children and the issue of each child who dies before the settlor [see [2], P 5.07, below]. These shares will be held, administered, and distributed in a manner identical to that described in [m], above.

[o] Division of Trust for Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Purposes

This form contains a complex provision permitting or requiring the trustee to divide the trust into exempt and non-exempt trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax (GST) [I.R.C. § 2601 et seq.] purposes. This provision may become important if the trust assets are substantial and distributions are made to grandchildren or more remote issue. For discussion of this provision, see § 70.12[6][j]. For a discussion of the operation of the generation-skipping transfer tax and its application to trust planning, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.16; for further discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender). Note that the generation-skipping transfer tax, like the estate tax, has been repealed, effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2664]. However, it is uncertain whether or not this repeal will take effect as scheduled, and significant changes in the status of the GST are possible prior to the slated repeal date. For discussion, see Ch. 60 Estate Planning, § 60.16.

The settlor may act as the trustee of this trust, or may select some other person or entity (such as a bank or trust company) to serve as the trustee. A sole settlor who creates a revocable marital deduction trust usually will want to act as trustee of the trust during his or her lifetime.

No adverse tax consequences will result if the settlor serves as the trustee. Because the settlor retains the power to revoke the trust while he or she is living [see [2], P 3.01, below], the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for both income and estate tax purposes whether the settlor or some other person or entity serves as the trustee [see I.R.C. §§ 676 (income tax), 2038 (estate tax)].

If the settlor prefers to appoint some other person or entity to serve as the trustee, this may be done without endangering any of the goals of the trust. A settlor who wishes to obtain professional property management may prefer to name a corporate trustee, such as a bank or trust company, or a trusted friend or business associate. If the settlor is elderly and has an adult child who has some skill in handling property, the settlor may appoint that child to serve as the trustee.

[q] Successor Trustees

On the settlor's death, or in the event the settlor resigns while still living, a successor trustee will succeed to the trustee's duties. The successor may be the surviving spouse, or some other person or entity.

The settlor will have the power to designate a successor trustee if the settlor resigns or becomes unable to act as trustee [see [2], P 6.02, below]. If the settlor does not (or cannot) designate a successor, then the successor will be a person or entity named in the instrument. This form provides space for naming successor trustees and specifying the order in which they will be entitled to succeed to the office of trustee if the settlor does not designate a successor [see [2], P 6.02, below]. If a vacancy should occur in the office of the trustee and no successor trustee is appointed as provided in the instrument, the court is authorized to appoint a successor trustee or co-trustees to fill the vacancy [see [2], P 6.04, below].

[r] Surviving Spouse as Trustee

If the surviving spouse is to serve as trustee after the settlor's death, precautions should be taken to make sure that the trustee has no powers that would cause the assets of the Bypass Trust [see [2], PP 5.04(c), (d), 5.10, below] or Disclaimer Trust [see [2], PP 5.08, 5.12, below] to be included in the surviving spouse's estate. These trusts are designed so that their assets will not be included in the surviving spouse's estate for estate tax purposes. The trustee's powers, as set out in this form, are limited in such a way that this goal will not be endangered. Care should be taken in modifying or varying the trustee's powers if the surviving spouse is to serve as trustee of the Bypass or Disclaimer Trusts. For additional discussion of the limitations that should be placed on the surviving spouse's power over the Bypass Trust and Disclaimer Trust, see Section 70.202[1][s]. It is extremely important that attorneys be aware of these limitations before attempting to modify these trusts. For detailed discussion of the selection of trustees and tax issues presented by trustee powers, see 2 California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 93, Appointment of Trustees, and Chapter 96, Powers and Duties of Trustee (Matthew Bender). If an independent trustee is to serve after the death of the settlor, wider latitude will be permissible in drafting the trustee's powers.

No adverse tax consequences will result if the surviving spouse serves as the trustee of the QTIP Trust [see [2], PP 5.04(a), (b), 5.09, below]. This trust is designed to qualify for the marital deduction [see [2], P 5.06, below]. Property that qualifies for the marital deduction as QTIP property will be included in the gross estate of the surviving spouse, regardless of whether the surviving spouse or some other person or entity serves as the trustee [I.R.C. § 2044(b)(1)(A)].

[s] Concluding Provisions

Article 7 of this form contains miscellaneous provisions common to all the trust forms in this chapter. These provisions have been adapted as appropriate for a marital deduction trust. For discussion of these provisions, see Section 70.12[8].

[2] FORM

Formula Marital Deduction Trust for One Married Settlor--QTIP Trust and Bypass TRUST

DECLARATION OF TRUST

ARTICLE 1 : Creation of Trust

1.01. Declaration. _____ [identify trustee(s), e.g., Edward J. Greeble of San Diego, California or Sunset National Bank] (the "trustee [s]") hereby declare[s] that _____ [he has or she has or it has or they have] received certain property (the "trust estate") from _____ [identify settlor, e.g., Edward J. Greeble, of San Diego, California] (the "settlor"), and hold [s] that property in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Names of Trusts. The trusts created by this instrument shall be known collectively as _____ [name of trust, e.g., The Edward J. Greeble 1995 Trust or The GreebleFamily 1995Trust], and each separate trust created under this instrument shall be referred to by adding the name or designation of that separate trust as it appears in the appropriate paragraph of this instrument.

1.03. Effective Date. This declaration shall be effective _____ [on the date it is executed by the parties or immediately upon execution by all of the parties or specify other effective date].

1.04. Marital Status. The settlor is married to _____ [name of spouse, e.g., Marilyn W. Greeble], and all references in this trust instrument to the settlor's " _____ [husband or wife]" are to _____ [him or her]. [If settlor was married previously: The settlor was previously married to _____ (name of former spouse, e.g., Jean A. Greeble), but that marriage was _____ [dissolved or annulled] _____ [if desired, add details relating to dissolution or annulment, e.g., in _____ (year) or by judgment of the Superior Court of the State of California for the County of _____, action no. _____, dated _____].]

1.05. Children. The settlor has _____ [number] living _____ [child or children], whose name [s] and date[s] of birth _____ [is or are] as follows:

Name	Date of Birth	_____
		[Father or Mother]
[e.g., Edward J. Greeble, Jr.]	August 1, 1985	Jean A. Greeble
[e.g., Evelyn W. Greeble]	June 15, 1988	Jean A. Greeble
[e.g., Patricia L. Greeble]	October 1, 1990	Marilyn W. Greeble

The settlor has no deceased children.

ARTICLE 2 : Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All of the property described in Schedule A, attached to this instrument, and any other property that may hereafter be subject to this trust, is referred to in this instrument as the "trust estate," and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added, or by titling any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument. During any time that the settlor is not also serving as trustee or cotrustee of this trust, any transfer of property to the trust under this paragraph shall be effective only upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate upon written acceptance by the trustee. Any property added to the trust estate shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

ARTICLE 3 : Rights and Powers of Settlor

3.01. Revocation and Amendment. While the settlor is living, this trust may be revoked, amended, or terminated at any time and for any reason by a writing signed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail.

_____ [Promptly upon or Within _____ days after] receipt of any instrument revoking or terminating the trust, the trustee shall deliver any and all property affected by the revocation or termination to the settlor, or to a person or persons designated in that writing to receive that property. Upon the death of the settlor, this trust shall be irrevocable and not subject to amendment.

3.02. Investments. The settlor shall have the power from time to time to direct the trustee to do any or all of the following:

(a) Invest trust funds in specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment;

(b) Retain specified securities, properties, or other forms of investment held in trust under this instrument; and

(c) Sell, encumber, lease, abandon, or dispose of any trust property. All directions shall be in writing, signed by the settlor, and delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. If the directions are subject to any conditions, or are to be effective only during a specified period of time, the writing shall specify the conditions and the applicable period of time. The trustee shall incur no liability for losses resulting directly or indirectly from any investment made or retained in compliance with a direction given by the settlor as provided in this paragraph. After the settlor's death, no person shall have the power to direct the trustee to invest trust property.

3.03. Borrowing. While the settlor is living, the settlor shall have the power to borrow money in such amounts and on such terms as the settlor may specify in a writing or writings delivered to the trustee in person or by certified mail. The settlor's power to borrow money as provided in this paragraph shall extend to both the income and the principal of the trust estate.

3.04. Exercise of Settlor's Rights and Powers by Others. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any right or power that the settlor could exercise personally under the terms of this instrument, _____ [except or including] the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ [this trust or any trust created by this instrument], may be exercised for and on behalf of the settlor by any attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by a duly appointed and acting conservator of the settlor, after petition to the court in accordance with California Probate Code Section 2580, or any successor statute [add optional clause to limit authority to amend or revoke, e.g.,; provided, however, that the power to amend, revoke, or terminate _____ (this trust or any trust created by this instrument), in whole or in part, may be exercised by an attorney in fact or conservator only if distribution of the settlor's estate during the settlor's lifetime is not substantially altered by the amendment, revocation, or termination, and the amendment, revocation, or termination does not result in any adverse tax consequences to the settlor's estate].

PRACTICE TIP

It is not uncommon to require that the durable power of attorney under which the attorney in fact is attempting to act specifically refer to the power to exercise the settlor's rights under the trust instrument as granted in that instrument. Sometimes a power of attorney is granted for a very specific purpose, such as handling a particular transaction, or dealing with the principal's affairs while he or she is out of the country. By requiring that the power of attorney specifically mention the power to exercise the settlor's rights under his or her trust, there can be some assurance that the settlor/principal intended that the attorney in fact have the authority to take actions in regard to the trust. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

ARTICLE 4 : Payments and Distributions During Settlor's Lifetime

4.01. Payments of Income. So long as the settlor is living, the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor _____ [all of the net income of the trust or as much of the net income of the trust as the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing]. [If trustee is to pay all income: Payments shall be made in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually. Or if settlor is to have right to request payments: A request made pursuant to this paragraph may specify that the payments are to be made periodically.]

4.02. Distributions of Principal. So long as the settlor is living, the trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor as much of the principal of the trust as _____ [the settlor shall from time to time request of the trustee in writing or the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary or appropriate for the settlor's comfort, welfare, and happiness].

4.03. Requests on Settlor's Behalf. If, at any time, the settlor is unable personally to make a request of the trustee, the settlor's right to make the request may be exercised for or on behalf of the settlor by an attorney in fact who, at the time of the exercise, is duly appointed and acting for the settlor under a valid and enforceable durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act, or any successor statute; or, if there is no such attorney in fact, by the trustee acting for and on behalf of the settlor. The trustee shall have discretion to determine when the settlor is unable personally to make a request for purposes of this paragraph.

4.04. Trustee's Power to Make Gifts at Direction of Settlor. During the settlor's lifetime, the trustee shall distribute such sums of trust principal to any person or persons who are the natural objects of the settlor's bounty as the settlor may direct in writing. In the event that the settlor is unable to direct the trustee in writing under this Paragraph due to incapacity, such a direction may be made on the settlor's behalf by a duly authorized attorney in fact acting under a valid durable power of attorney executed by the settlor under the Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act (or successor statute) [optional:, as long as the durable power of attorney so executed by the settlor specifically authorizes the attorney in fact to exercise such a withdrawal power, or power to make gifts from trust principal, through enforceable demands on the trustee]; provided, however, that the total amount of any such gifts made pursuant to the direction of an attorney in fact to any one person in any one year shall not exceed the annual amount excluded from gift tax under Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b) (or a successor statute).

ARTICLE 5 : Payments and Distributions After Settlor's Death

5.01. Special Gift. On the settlor's death, the trustee shall distribute the sum of $_____ to _____ [name of beneficiary, e.g., Ruth B. Greeble] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if she survives the settlor or if she survives the settlor for 60 days]. [If distribution is conditioned on survival, add alternative disposition, e.g.: If _____ Ruth B. Greeble does not survive the settlor (for that period), this gift shall _____ (e.g., lapse or be distributed to Linda J. Wilson)].

5.02. Payment of Death Taxes. All death taxes payable by reason of the settlor's death [to include taxes on assets passing outside trust, add:, whether attributable to assets of this trust or to assets outside the trust,] shall be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate as provided in the California Probate Code].

5.03. Payment of Debts and Expenses. All debts and expenses of the settlor and the trust may, in the trustee's discretion, be _____ [paid by the trustee out of the trust estate or equitably prorated and apportioned among the persons interested in the settlor's estate in the same manner as the death taxes].

5.04. Division of Trust Estate if Settlor Is Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], on the death of the settlor, and after any distributions or payments under Paragraphs 5.01 through 5.03 of this instrument, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into two shares, hereafter referred to as the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of assets having a value equal to the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at the death of the settlor, taking into account the following:

(1) The net value of all other property that passes or has passed to the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] under this trust instrument, the will of the settlor, or otherwise and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. For purposes of this subparagraph, any qualified disclaimer made by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] shall be disregarded, and any property that will qualify as qualified terminable interest property under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) if the requisite election is made shall be considered to be qualified terminable interest property, regardless of whether the election is made;

(2) All federal estate tax deductions and exclusions actually allowed, other than the marital deduction;

(3) The applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to the estate of the settlor;

(4) The credit for state death taxes available to the estate of the settlor, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and

(5) Any other allowable credits available to the estate of the settlor (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of death of the settlor), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify this gift from receiving the marital deduction.

(b) The Marital Deduction Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Qualified Terminable Interest Property ("QTIP") Trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.09.

(c) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Marital Deduction Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(d) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.10.

5.05. Allocation and Valuation of Assets. In allocating assets between the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share, the trustee shall allocate the trust assets in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not; subject, however, to the following:

(a) Only assets that qualify for the marital deduction shall be allocated to the marital deduction share.

(b) Assets allocated in kind shall be _____ [to use date of distribution values: valued for purposes of allocation on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "minimum worth" test:

deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, but in no event shall the date of distribution values be less than the amount of the marital deduction or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "fair representation" test: deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided, however, that the trustee shall act impartially, consistent with equitable principles requiring impartiality among beneficiaries, in allocating assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction share, so that any distribution of assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction share shall be made of assets, including cash, fairly representative of appreciation or depreciation in the value of all property thus available for distribution].

(c) The trustee shall not allocate assets that qualify for the foreign death tax credit to the marital deduction share unless all other assets or interests available for allocation have been so allocated.

[Optional: (d) Any incidents of ownership to a policy of insurance on the life of a person other than the settlor shall be allocated to the nonmarital share.]

5.06. Intention That Marital Deduction Share Qualify for Marital Deduction. The settlor intends that the marital deduction share qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly. Except as otherwise provided in this instrument with respect to the QTIP election, no fiduciary shall take any action or exercise any power that may impair the federal estate tax marital deduction.

5.07. Disposition of Trust Estate if Settlor Is Not Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is not survived by [his wife or her husband], upon the death of the settlor, and after any distributions or payments pursuant to Paragraphs 5.01 through 5.03 of this instrument, the trustee shall divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each child of the settlor who survives the settlor, and one share for the issue who survive the settlor of each child of the settlor who predeceases the settlor.

(a) Each share created for a surviving child of the settlor shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at the time the assets of the trust are divided. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at that time, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

(b) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

5.08. Disclaimer of Property. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any property or portion of property that is disclaimed by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Disclaimer Trust. However, if the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] also disclaims an interest in all or any portion of the Disclaimer Trust, the disclaimed interest shall be administered and distributed as if the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] predeceased the settlor.

5.09. QTIP Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the QTIP Trust as follows:

(a) If the executor has elected that the trust qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section), the trustee shall thereafter administer the trust in a manner that will not invalidate the election or disqualify the property in which the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] has a qualifying income interest for life. Any provision of this trust that could be deemed to invalidate the qualification under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) shall be disregarded.

(b) If an election is made under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section) to qualify some but not all of the property allocated to the QTIP Trust for the federal estate tax marital deduction, the QTIP Trust shall be divided into two separate trusts pursuant to the terms of the election. The division shall be based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of the division. One of the trusts shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has been made and shall be designated as the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The other trust shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has not been made and shall be designated the Nonqualifying QTIP Trust. The Nonqualifying QTIP Trust shall be subject to all of the rights, interests, powers, and other terms prescribed for the Qualifying QTIP Trust. If a partial election is made and the trust is divided into two separate trusts, the terms "trust," "marital deduction trust," and "QTIP Trust," as used in this paragraph and elsewhere in this trust instrument, shall be construed in a manner consistent with the provisions of this subparagraph of the trust instrument.

(c) It is the settlor's intent that the executor of the settlor's estate shall notify the trustee in writing if the executor intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (hereafter referred to as "the estate tax election") and also intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) (or any equivalent successor section) to have the estate tax election disregarded for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes with respect to some but not all of the property in the QTIP Trust. Upon receipt of written notification, the trustee shall divide the QTIP Trust into two separate trusts, to be known as the Exempt QTIP Trust and the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust, in accordance with Paragraph 5.15 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts. Property allocated to the Exempt QTIP Trust must be fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation of all QTIP Trust property. It is the settlor's intent that the executor shall then actually make the election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) with respect to the Exempt QTIP Trust and not the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust. If a partial estate tax election is to be made, then this subparagraph, if applicable at all, shall apply only with respect to the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with the provisions of this subparagraph. Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed as being inconsistent with Paragraph 5.15 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts, which shall apply to the QTIP trust without regard to the application of the remainder of this subparagraph.

(d) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], so long as the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] lives, the entire net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] and the trustee, but not less often than annually. [Optional: In determining the net income of the trust distributable to the settlor's _____ (husband or wife), the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income in order for the trust to qualify for the marital deduction under the federal estate tax law, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that marital deduction, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this instrument or any applicable provisions of state law. Assuming the trust has qualified under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7), then any grant of rights, powers, discretion, and authority to the trustee in any provision of this instrument or any statute relating thereto shall not be effective if and to the extent that the provision or statute, if effective, would disqualify, for federal estate tax purposes, the marital deduction trust held under this paragraph. It is the intention of the settlor that the settlor's _____ (husband or wife), as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during

_____ (his or her) lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall not exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is not in accord with this expressed intention. It is also the intention of the settlor that the trust produce for the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) during _____ (his or her) lifetime the income, or that the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) shall have the benefit of the trust property, as is consistent with the value of the trust property and with its preservation.]

(e) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], for life, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for _____ [his or her] _____ to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(f) On the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may pay the taxes, debts, and expenses arising on _____ [his or her] death, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses. Any payments made under this paragraph _____ [may be made out of income or principal (or partly from each) of the QTIP Trust or shall be made first out of the income or principal of the QTIP Trust, and then out of the income or principal of the Bypass Trust and the Disclaimer Trust, if any, to the extent that the QTIP Trust is insufficient for that purpose].

(g) Upon the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the net income of the trust then accrued but uncollected and all net income remaining in the hands of the trustee shall be distributed to the estate of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife]. The trust principal shall be dealt with as set forth below in this paragraph.

(h) The trustee shall determine from the personal representative of the estate of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] the amount of the federal estate tax allocable to the property of the trust by reason of Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A (the "Section 2207A tax share") and shall set aside a portion of the trust principal for the purpose of paying that tax upon written demand of the personal representative.

(i) Upon the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall distribute the balance of the principal of the QTIP Trust (or all of the QTIP Trust principal, if the personal representative of the estate of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] does not in due course make written demand for payment of the Section 2207A tax share), _____ [if generation-skipping transfer tax consequences are not a concern: to the Bypass Trust created in this trust instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph 5.10 applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Bypass Trust unless this trust and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

5.10. Bypass Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Bypass Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] during _____ [his or her] lifetime, and the settlor's children during the lifetime of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay, distribute, or apply more to or for some beneficiaries than others, and may make payments or distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not make discretionary payments of principal from the Bypass Trust to the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] unless the principal of the QTIP Trust has been exhausted.

(b) In addition to any other payments and distributions that the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] may receive under this instrument, the trustee shall distribute to the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], during _____ [his or her] lifetime, such amounts from the principal of the trust estate as _____ [he or she] may from time to time request of the trustee in writing, not to exceed in any calendar year the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the end of the calendar year. This right of withdrawal is not cumulative, so that if the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] does not withdraw the full amount that _____ [he or she] is entitled to withdraw under this provision in any calendar year, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse at the end of the calendar year. This power shall exist each year until the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife].

(c) On the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each child of the settlor who survives the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], and one share for the issue who survive the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] of each child of the settlor who predecease the settlor's _____ [husband or wife].

(d) Each share created for a surviving child shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at the time the assets of the trust are divided. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at that time, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

(e) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue asset forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

(f) If all the children of the settlor die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlor].

5.11. Separate Trusts for Children and Issue. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the separate trust for each child or issue as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of that child or issue, until he or she reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for his or her _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When that child or issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or fifty percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made. If that child or issue has already reached the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years when property is first allocated to this trust, then upon making the allocation, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or fifty percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, and the balance shall be retained in trust pursuant to the applicable provisions of this paragraph.

(c) When that child or issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to him or her outright the balance of the trust property.

(d) If that child or issue dies before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the assets of his or her separate trust shall be divided among his or her issue in _____ [the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in this Paragraph. If that child or issue dies without issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute the entire undistributed balance of his or her separate share outright among the other then-living persons for whom separate shares were created _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust is being administered under this paragraph, that part shall instead be added to that trust and thereafter shall be administered according to its terms. If there are no surviving persons who may take the share of that child or issue under this paragraph, any remaining portion of that share shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlor].

5.12. Disclaimer Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Disclaimer Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for _____ [his or her] _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) On the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each child of the settlor who survives the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], and one share for the issue who survive the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] of each child of the settlor who predeceases the settlor's _____ [husband or wife].

(c) Each share created for a surviving child shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at the time the assets of the trust are divided. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years at that time, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

(d) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue asset forth in Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument.

(e) If all the children of the settlor die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the heirs of the settlor(s)].

5.13. Consideration of Beneficiary's Other Resources. In making any payments of income or distributions of principal from any trust created by this instrument for _____ [specify standard of discretion as set forth in provision authorizing the discretionary distribution, e.g., the health, education, support, and maintenance or care and comfort] of any person, the trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent the trustee deems advisable, any other income or resources available to that person that are known to the trustee and that are reasonably available for that purpose.

5.14. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of the trust estate and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument or of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act, the trustee must establish a reserve for depreciation of all income-producing real and personal property and of capital improvements, and for extraordinary repairs. In addition, a reasonable reserve for depletion of all depletable natural resources, including, but not limited to, oil, gas, and mineral and timber property, shall be charged to income from time to time; distributions by mutual funds and similar entities of gains from the sale or other disposition of property shall be credited to principal; and a reasonable reserve for amortization of all intangible property with a limited economic life including, but not limited to, patents and copyrights shall be charged to income from time to time.

5.15. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this paragraph apply to any trust under this instrument that is created on or at any time after the settlor's death and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by the settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this paragraph applies, the trustee _____ [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this Paragraph, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlor's intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust, so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The Trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subparagraph.

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this Paragraph, the trustee shall _____ [for a pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for a fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided]. [If preceding sentence provides for a pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of the settlor's death, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this Paragraph, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the settlor's death to the date of payment).]

(c) Regardless of whether or not subparagraph (a) applies, if the amount of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) to a trust to which this paragraph applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor (or automatically allocated under Internal Revenue Code Section 2632) so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this paragraph applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust term to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(a) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust term to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(b) or any equivalent successor statute) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

(e) If the trustee determines that the burdens of generation-skipping transfer taxes, income taxes, and death taxes on a Non-Exempt Trust, the settlor's estate, or the beneficiaries of that trust would be reduced, the trustee may petition the court to amend the trust to grant to one or more trust beneficiaries who are non-skip persons in a generation below the settlor a general testamentary power of appointment over all or a specified portion of that Non-Exempt Trust. Any power to amend the trust is within the discretion of the court, and the preceding sentence shall not be construed to give the trustee any power that the trustee does not already have under California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances, nor shall it be construed to limit the power of the trustee or any beneficiary under the California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances.

(f) The purpose of this paragraph is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and nontax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlor's intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subparagraph are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(g) If, upon the death of the settlor's surviving spouse, (1) the settlor's surviving spouse is considered to be the transferor of any Non-Exempt Trust established by this instrument for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, and (2) the surviving spouse's executor allocates any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the surviving spouse under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) (or any equivalent successor statute to that Non-Exempt Trust so that the entire trust then has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, that trust shall then be considered to be an Exempt Trust for purposes of this paragraph of the trust instrument.

(h) In no event may the trustee exercise any power under this paragraph in a manner that will impair the marital deduction.

(i) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax, the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this Paragraph.

ARTICLE 6 : Trustee

6.01. Definition. Unless the context requires otherwise, all references in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed to refer to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees.

6.02. Successor Trustees. If the trustee resigns or is unable or unwilling to act or continue to act as trustee, the settlor shall have the power to designate any suitable entity or person to act as successor trustee. The successor trustee shall be designated by a signed writing delivered to the person or entity designated as successor. If a successor trustee is not designated, the following persons, in the order of priority indicated, shall be successor trustee:

First, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Marilyn W. Greeble, of San Diego, California];

Second, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Ruth B. Greeble, of La Jolla, California];

Third, _____ [name and place of residence or business, e.g., Sunset National Bank, San Diego, California].

6.03. Resignation. Any trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, at least _____ [specify; e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the settlor, if living, to any other trustee then acting, to any persons authorized to designate a successor trustee, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor trustee, if any has been designated under the provisions of this instrument. A resignation shall be effective upon written acceptance of the trust by a successor trustee.

6.04. Vacancies. If a vacancy should occur in the office of the trustee, whether by reason of death, resignation, removal, or other cause, and no successor trustee is appointed as provided in this instrument, the court shall appoint a new trustee to fill the vacancy. In filling a vacancy, the court may, in its discretion, appoint the original or any other number of trustees. In selecting a trustee, the court shall give consideration to the wishes of the beneficiaries who are 14 years of age or older.

6.05. Co-Trustees to Act by Majority Vote. At any time when there are two or more trustees serving under this instrument, they shall act by majority vote, and any exercise of a power or discretion by a majority of the trustees shall have the same effect as an exercise by all of them [if unanimity is to be required for any specified actions, specify those actions; e.g.,; except that the initial trust property, commonly known as the "High Eagle Ranch" in Riverside County, California, shall not be sold, conveyed, exchanged, transferred, liquidated, or otherwise disposed of without the unanimous consent of all of the trustees then acting]. [Optional provision to permit a third party to resolve disputes in case of deadlock: If, by reason of their failure to agree in the manner required by this paragraph, the trustees shall be unable to exercise a power or discretion conferred on them by this instrument, or to take any other appropriate or necessary action, _____ (name), of _____ (city and state), shall have the power to direct the trustees in writing with respect to the manner in which that power or discretion shall be exercised or not exercised. The trustees shall promptly comply with any written direction received from _____ (name) pursuant to this provision and shall incur no liability to any interested party for following that direction, or for failing to act in the absence of any such direction.]

6.06. Co-Trustee May Delegate Acts to Other Co-Trustees. _____ [If instrument contains provision requiring either unanimous or majority action: Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any or if instrument does not contain such provision: Any] one or more of the co-trustees may, from time to time, delegate to another co-trustee or co-trustees routine acts of trust administration [optional:; and may establish bank or other accounts for the trust that will honor the signature of one, or fewer than all, of the co-trustees then serving].

6.07. Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any individual who serves as a trustee under this instrument [optional:; except any successor trustee appointed by court order under Paragraph 6.04 of this instrument].

6.08. Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention is in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards set forth in California Probate Code Section 16040 and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

(b) Invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole, and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among the circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plans within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them;

(7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.

(8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property of type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in this provision or the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

(c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(d) Acquire and maintain as a trust asset a life insurance policy on the life of any person, including the trustee, issued by any company and in any amount that the trustee may deem advisable, and exercise all rights of ownership granted in that policy; provided, however, that as to any assets of the trust (other than assets held in the Disclaimer Trust), the settlor's surviving spouse shall have the right, by delivery of a written instrument to the trustee, to require the trustee to convert any such policy into productive property within a reasonable time following the receipt of that request.

(e) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

(f) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estate of the settlor that are in the best interest of any trusts created in this instrument.

(g) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.

(h) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.

(i) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.

(j) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(k) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [optional: unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(l) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional adviser employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(m) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(n) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(o) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(p) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(q) In the trustee's discretion, make loans to beneficiaries out of funds of the trust, and guarantee the repayment of loans made to beneficiaries by third parties by encumbering trust assets.

(r) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(s) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(t) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(u) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(v) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

(w) Purchase bonds at such premiums as the trustee shall, in the trustee's discretion, deem advisable; provided, however, that any premium paid by the trustee for any bond shall be periodically repaid to principal out of the interest received on the bond, in a reasonable manner as the trustee determines and, to the extent necessary, from the proceeds on the sale or other disposition of the bond.

6.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit General Powers. The grant to the trustee in this instrument of a specific power or powers shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to exercise in furtherance of the purposes of this instrument or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

6.10. Retention of Family Residence. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall retain, in any trust or trusts created by this trust instrument, any interest in real property used by the settlor and the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] as their principal residence at the time of the settlor's death ("the family residence"), and shall deal with the family residence in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

(a) During _____ [his or her] lifetime, the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] shall have the right to occupy the family residence (or any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) free of any rent.

(b) The trustee shall pay as much of the mortgage or trust deed payments, property taxes, assessments, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs on the family residence (or on any substitute residence or residential property purchased as provided in this paragraph of the trust instrument) as corresponds to the trust's proportionate interest in the same. The trustee shall make those payments out of income or principal of the trust or trusts in accordance with the principles applicable to charging of payments under California law, but in no event shall payment be made in a manner that disqualifies any part of any trust, that would otherwise so qualify, for the federal estate tax marital deduction.

(c) The settlor's _____ [husband or wife], at _____ [his or her] option, shall have the right to advise the trustee in writing that _____ [he or she] no longer wishes to occupy the family residence and to direct the trustee to sell it, or any interest therein. In deciding on the terms and conditions relating to any sale, the trustee shall take into account all relevant factors, including, but not limited to, the intent of the settlor that no sale be made in a "forced sale" situation (other than at the direction of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife]) or at a time when, because of high mortgage rates or otherwise, the residential real estate market is depressed. In selling the family residence, the trustee may dispose of it on such terms as the trustee deems desirable, including an installment sale or any other desirable method of disposing of the family residence, provided that if the sale is for consideration other than cash, the purchaser's obligation shall be secured by a first deed of trust. In the event of a sale, the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] may direct the trustee in writing to apply the proceeds of the sale to the purchase of a substitute residence or residential property, of comparable or lesser value, to be selected by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], or to reinvest the proceeds in any manner that _____ [he or she] may direct, provided that any such investments satisfy normal fiduciary standards of prudence and safety, and to use the income from reinvestment to pay the rental or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife]. Any net trust accounting income from any such investments, in excess of the trust's share of the rental costs and any other expenses of trust administration, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

(d) If the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] does not direct the trustee to sell the family residence, _____ [he or she] shall have the right to direct the trustee in writing to lease it, or any interest in it. In the event of lease, the trustee shall continue to pay the expenses of maintaining the family residence as specified above, subject to the lease terms, and shall use the entire net income from the lease to pay the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, to be selected and occupied by the settlor's _____ [husband or wife]. Any net trust accounting income from any sale or lease of the family residence, in excess of the trust share of the cost of the mortgage, rental, or lease payments on another residence or residential property, shall be added to the other trust income and distributed in accordance with the relevant provisions of the trust or trusts, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

(e) Upon the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trust's interest in either the family residence, any proceeds remaining from the sale of the family residence, or any substitute residence or residential property purchased by the trustee with any proceeds of sale or lease of the family residence, shall be distributed in accordance with the applicable provisions of the trust or trusts in which the interest or interests are held, as set forth in Article 5 of this trust instrument.

6.11. Power to Divide or Combine Trusts. The trustee shall have the power to divide a single trust into separate shares, each to be administered in accordance with the terms and conditions of the single trust from which they were created, when the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, determines that division is desirable or advisable in view of tax considerations (including considerations related to the income tax, the gift tax, the estate tax, and the generation-skipping transfer tax) or other objectives of the trusts and their beneficiaries. The trustee shall not be required to make a physical segregation or division of the various trust shares created under this trust instrument, except as segregation or division may be required by reason of the termination and distribution of any of the trusts, but the trustee shall keep separate accounts and records for different undivided interests. The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, shall have the further power to combine two or more trusts having substantially the same terms into a single trust for purposes of administration, when tax or other factors indicate that such combination would be desirable or advisable. [Optional: In deciding whether to combine trusts, the trustee should consider the generation-skipping transfer tax "inclusion ratio" of the trusts to be combined. Trusts having the same inclusion ratios may be combined. Trusts having different inclusion ratios generally should not be combined unless their inclusion ratios are maintained unchanged through substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 2654(b), and the applicable regulations thereunder.]

6.12. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

6.13. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

6.14. Payments and Distributions to or for Benefit of Beneficiaries. In lieu of making a direct payment or distribution to any beneficiary who at the time of the payment or distribution is a minor or suffering from a legal disability, or who appears to the trustee by reason of illness, age, injury, or other cause, to be unable to accept the payment or distribution or to make intelligent or responsible use of the same, the trustee may make the payment or distribution to any conservator or guardian duly appointed and acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary; to any custodian acting for and on behalf of the beneficiary under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state, including a suitable custodian selected by the trustee; to any suitable person or persons, such as a relative or friend, with whom the beneficiary is residing; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

6.15. Limitation on Powers That Would Imperil Marital Deduction. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall exercise power and discretion over any trust or trust share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction only in a manner consistent with all statutory and regulatory requirements for the full allowance of the marital deduction for that trust or share.

6.16. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. Any trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by the other trustee or trustees.

6.17. Trustee's Liability. No [optional: "family" or individual] trustee [optional: who is serving without compensation under this trust instrument] shall be liable to any interested party for acts or omissions of that trustee, except those resulting from that trustee's willful misconduct or gross negligence. [Optional: As used in this provision, a "family" trustee is a trustee who is related to the settlors by blood or marriage.] This standard shall also apply regarding a trustee's liability for the acts or omissions of any co-trustee or predecessor trustee.

PRACTICE TIP

One should carefully consider whether or not the above provision should be included. In effect, this provision partially relieves the trustee of liability in exchange for the trustee's waiver of any claim to compensation. This provision may be omitted if the client prefers not to allow the trustee to effectively "buy" a lesser standard of conduct by waiving compensation. While the savings in compensation may sound attractive, the settlor should consider whether or not it might be preferable, in the long run, to pay for the trustee's time and services and require, in return, that the trustee adhere to a high standard of conduct. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

6.18. Written Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event upon which the right to payments from any trust may depend, the trustee shall incur no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

6.19. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

PRACTICE TIP

Probate Code Section 16062 requires the trustee of any trust to provide an annual account to the beneficiaries, except under limited circumstances, such as when the trust may be revoked, when the beneficiary waives an accounting, or when the trustee and the beneficiary are the same person [see Prob.

Code § 16064. The contents of the annual account are described in Probate Code Section 16063. Generally, the accounting must reveal all of the information required in a formal accounting, although it may be presented in summary form. Additionally, information must be provided regarding trustee, attorney, and accountant compensation, and statements regarding the rights of the beneficiary to challenge the actions of the trustee must be included [see Prob. Code § 16063].

In light of these provisions, the planner may wish to consider omitting the requirement that an accounting be provided. This provision would only add the burden of preparing a full, formal accounting, which can always be required by the beneficiary in any case when he or she feels that more detail must be revealed by the trustee [see Prob. Code §§ 16061, 16062(a)]. Indeed, many attorneys specifically waive the requirement that any accounting whatsoever be rendered by the trustee. Even with such a waiver in the trust instrument, a beneficiary could still obtain an accounting if it appears that a material breach of the trust has occurred [see Prob. Code § 16064]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

ARTICLE 7 : Concluding Provisions

7.01. Perpetuities Savings Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any trust created by this instrument or by a power of appointment created by this instrument that has not terminated earlier shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of _____ [name individual(s) or describe class of persons whose life or lives are to be the measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlor and the issue of the settlor living on the date of the settlor's death or the beneficiaries of the trust who are living on the date of the settlor's death]. If a trust is terminated because of the preceding sentence, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this instrument, distribution shall be to the persons entitled to receive income immediately before the termination _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240]. If there is no person who is entitled to receive income immediately before the termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and undistributed income to _____ [name distributee(s) or specify class, e.g., the issue of the settlor then surviving in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section 240].

7.02. Simultaneous Death. If the settlor and any beneficiary under this instrument die under circumstances in which the order of their deaths cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence, the settlor shall be deemed to have survived the beneficiary, and this instrument shall be construed accordingly.

7.03. No-Contest Clause. If any beneficiary under this instrument, singularly or in combination with any other person or persons, directly or indirectly contests this instrument or the will of the settlor in whole or in part, or opposes, objects to, or seeks to invalidate any of the provisions of this instrument or of the will of the settlor, or seeks to succeed to any part of the estate of the settlor other than in the manner specified in this instrument or in the will of the settlors, then the right of that person to take any interest given to him or her by this instrument shall be void, and any gift or other interest in the trust property to which the beneficiary would otherwise have been entitled shall pass as if he or she had predeceased the settlor [optional: without issue].

7.04. Definition of Death Taxes. As used in this instrument, the term "death taxes" means all inheritance, estate, succession, and other similar taxes that are payable by any person on account of that person's interest in the decedent's estate or by reason of the decedent's death, including penalties and interest, but excluding the following:

- (a) Any additional tax that may be assessed under Internal Revenue Code Section 2032A.
- (b) Any federal estate taxes recoverable, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A, from the holder or recipient of any qualified terminable interest property that is included in the settlor's federal gross estate under Internal Revenue

Code Section 2044.

(c) Any federal or state tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer, as that term is defined in the federal tax laws, unless that generation-skipping transfer tax is payable directly out of the assets of a trust created by this instrument.

7.05. Definition of Debts and Expenses. As used in this instrument, the term "debts and expenses" shall include the following:

(a) All costs, expenses of litigation, counsel fees, or other charges that the trustee incurs in connection with the determination of the amount of the death taxes, interest, or penalties referred to in Paragraph 5.02 of this instrument, and

(b) Legally enforceable debts, funeral expenses, expenses of last illness, and administration and property expenses.

7.06. Definition of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the words "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined and derived.

7.07. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the word "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

7.08. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

(a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;

(b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;

(c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and

(d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

7.09. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

7.10. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

7.11. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

7.12. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

7.14. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of either or both settlors that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor or settlors had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor or settlors.

ARTICLE 8 : Execution

8.01. Execution. _____ [I or we] certify that _____ [I or we] have read the foregoing declaration of trust and that it correctly states the terms and conditions under which the trust estate is to be held, administered, and distributed. § 70.210 Trust Created by One Settlor--"Family Pot" Trust with Sprinkling Provisions on Death of Settlor

[1] Comment

This form contains a set of trust distribution provisions creating a so-called "family pot" trust on the death of a sole settlor. It is designed to replace Paragraph 5.04 of the form in Section 70.200[2] when an unmarried settlor creates a trust that will have more than one beneficiary on the settlor's death, and the settlor wishes to keep all the assets in a single trust after his or her death for the collective benefit of those beneficiaries. When these provisions are used, Paragraph 5.04 of the form in Section 70.200[2] should be deleted and replaced with these provisions, and the remainder of Article 5 in that form renumbered accordingly. All incidental references to the affected sections, as well as any references to the beneficiaries, should also be checked and conformed as necessary.

It is assumed that the beneficiaries of the trust will be the settlor's children (and the issue of any deceased children), since that is the most common circumstance under which this type of trust is created. If the beneficiaries are grandchildren or more remote relatives, the trust terms must be modified accordingly, or a separate share arrangement such as that illustrated in the form in Section 70.211[2] used instead.

[b] Nature of "Family Pot" Trust

A "family pot" trust is one in which the trust assets are pooled together for the collective benefit of a group of beneficiaries, rather than segregated into separate and distinct shares for each beneficiary. Typically, a "family pot" trust contains a "sprinkling" provision that allows the trustee to allocate income, and often principal, among the beneficiaries in accordance with their individual needs [see discussion in [d]-[e], below]. The flexibility of family pot trusts to address the varying needs of individual beneficiaries is the principal reason for their use. A second advantage is administrative simplicity: because all the assets are lumped together until the time of distribution, there is often no need to keep track of the respective shares of the beneficiaries, as would be the case with a "separate share" trust.

The biggest disadvantage of a "family pot" trust is that because the trustee is usually given discretion to treat the beneficiaries unequally, trust distributions can generate friction and animosity among the beneficiaries. A second disadvantage is that final distribution of the trust assets usually must be postponed until the youngest beneficiary reaches a specified age, which means that older beneficiaries must wait for the younger ones to mature before they can get their distributive shares. The latter problem, however, can be ameliorated by providing for staggered distributions and, if desired, by permitting the trustee to make advance distributions in appropriate situations.

For additional discussion of the differences between "family pot" trusts and "separate share" trusts, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, §§ 64.200[1][d] and 64.201[1][b].

[c] Description of Beneficiaries

It is assumed in this form that the beneficiaries will be the children and issue of the settlor. The settlor's spouse may also be made the beneficiary of a family pot trust, but the spouse's interest in such a trust would not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)]. Therefore, unless the trust is very small or the settlor does not intend to claim the marital deduction, the spouse should not be a beneficiary of the trust created by this form [for a form creating a bypass trust for the settlor's spouse and children, followed by a family pot trust for the settlor's children and issue, see the form in § 70.213[2]].

The beneficiaries are the children and issue of the settlors as a class. Using a class gift in this matter can be useful because it will accommodate additional children without the need to amend the dispositive provisions of the trust. For this reason, it is usually best to describe the beneficiaries as a class when possible.

If the settlor wants to omit one or more specific class members, it may be possible to limit the class description accordingly (e.g., "the children and issue of the settlor, except for Joseph Smith"). Alternatively, if the settlor is unlikely to have additional children, the beneficiaries may simply be described by name (e.g., "Catherine Smith, Rodney Smith, and Elaine Smith"). This form also presupposes that the ultimate distribution of trust assets will be made in equal shares [see [2], P 5.05(d), below]. If the ultimate distribution is to be made in unequal shares, a class description may be unworkable. Often, however, a separate share arrangement is more likely to be used when unequal distributions are desired.

If the beneficiaries are persons other than children, issue, or any other easily definable group (e.g., "the settlor's nieces and nephews"), it is usually necessary to identify them by name.

[d] Sprinkling Provisions

This form contains provisions giving the trustee the power to distribute income and principal among the trust beneficiaries in accordance with a specified standard. Such provisions are known as "sprinkling provisions" because they give the trustee the power to "sprinkle" income among the beneficiaries. The trustee is not required to distribute income or principal equally if unequal distributions are necessary to maintain the various beneficiaries according to the standard specified in the instrument. A sprinkling power can apply to payments of income, distributions of principal, or both. The provisions in this form apply the sprinkling power to both payments of income [see [2], P 5.05(a), below] and distributions of principal [see [2], P 5.05(b), below]. If the power is to be limited to one or the other, the appropriate language in the form can simply be deleted.

Sprinkling provisions are popular because they give the trustee the ability to allocate trust resources to the beneficiaries based on their respective needs, rather than according to a predetermined fractional allocation. For example, if one of the settlor's children is attending law school while the others are gainfully employed, the law student may need substantially more money than the other children to meet his or her tuition and basic living expenses. Under a sprinkling provision, the trustee could allocate a greater share of the total trust assets to this specific beneficiary. In contrast, under a separate share arrangement, each beneficiary would receive principal and income only from his or her own fractional share of the total trust assets, without regard to the relative needs of all the beneficiaries.

On the negative side, sprinkling provisions can cause or exacerbate animosity between family members. If the trustee allocates trust assets unequally, those beneficiaries who receive less may resent those who receive more, and feel that they have been treated unfairly. This can put a lot of pressure on the trustee and, in extreme cases, lead to litigation between the trustee and the beneficiaries. If, after analyzing the personalities and financial circumstances of the persons who will be trust beneficiaries, the settlor believes that unequal treatment of trust beneficiaries may create animosity, the settlor may want to consider a separate share arrangement instead of a "family pot" trust.

The broad discretion given to the trustee in a sprinkling trust also creates the potential for favoritism and abuse by the trustee. The appointment of a neutral trustee who will administer the trust in a fair and impartial manner becomes increasingly more critical as the trustee's discretion is increased.

[e] Standard of Discretion in Sprinkling Provisions

The standard of discretion specified in a "sprinkling" provision can be any standard desired by the settlor. It is common to use an "ascertainable standard"--that is, a standard relating to the health, education, support, and maintenance of the beneficiary. Such a standard will permit the trustee to pay for almost any reasonable expense incurred by a trust beneficiary. Although there is little law on exactly what expenses might reasonably be paid pursuant to an ascertainable standard, presumably such a standard would exclude items such as extensive recreational travel, gifts to third parties, and extravagant purchases that are beyond the beneficiary's usual standard of living. If the settlor wants to give the trustee the power to accommodate an even broader range of expenses, a broader (non-ascertainable) standard--typically "comfort, welfare, and happiness"--may be substituted.

PRACTICE TIP

Quite often, an ascertainable standard will be related to the beneficiary's standard of living at a particular point in time, such as the date of the trust instrument, or as of the date of the settlor's death. In such a case, it would probably be difficult to justify invasions of principal designed to go far beyond the beneficiary's usual standard of living. Thus, the language of the invasion standard should be tailored to the desires of the individual settlor. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

This form uses separate subparagraphs for the payment of income and distribution of principal, rather than a single subparagraph governing both income and principal [see [2], P 5.05(a) (income), (b) (principal), below]. This permits the drafter to specify one standard for payment of income and a second standard for distribution of principal. For example, if the settlor wants to give the trustee broad discretion to pay trust income, but to restrict the purposes for which trust principal may be distributed in order to preserve the trust assets, this form will accommodate that possibility.

[f] Consideration of Beneficiary's Other Resources

In a sprinkling trust, it is especially important to specify whether or not the trustee should consider the beneficiary's other resources in applying the standard of discretion specified in the trust instrument. Ordinarily, the settlor will want these resources taken into account in making payments and distributions.

For example, if one beneficiary is well off and able to provide for his or her own support, and another is not, it may make the most sense to allocate trust resources to the beneficiary who most needs them. Paragraph 5.05 in the form in § 70.200[2] is a provision requiring the trustee to take other resources of the beneficiary into consideration. That provision ordinarily should be incorporated into every sprinkling trust. In the unlikely event that the settlor wants the trust to provide support for the beneficiaries without regard to their other resources, a provision to the latter effect should be substituted. For an example of such a provision, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 4, Alternative 4.480-2.

PRACTICE TIP

Frequently the trustee will have no direct knowledge of the beneficiary's other resources. For this reason, it is advisable to describe in the trust instrument the extent of inquiry that the trustee is expected to make. In some cases, this may be no inquiry at all; in others, some specific measures must be taken, for example, reviewing a financial statement from the beneficiary. The rigor of any such required inquiry must be directly related to the intention of the settlor in making it relatively easy or relatively difficult for a beneficiary to invade the trust principal for his or her benefit. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[g] Treatment of Undistributed Income

Any income that the trustee does not distribute will be added to the trust principal. As discussed in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.15[3][e], the accumulation of income can have undesirable income tax consequences. Specifically, the tax brackets for trusts are substantially compressed [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2) (individual income tax rates), (e) (rates applicable to trusts and estates)], as a result of which trusts pay significantly more tax than individuals on comparable amounts of income. For this reason, it is preferable from a tax point of view to distribute trust income rather than accumulate it in the trust. However, in some cases, such as when a beneficiary is a minor or is incapable of managing money, accumulation may be preferable to distribution. These matters generally are best left to the discretion of the trustee.

[h] Repayment of Discretionary Principal Distributions

The settlor should consider whether or not to require that discretionary distributions of principal be repaid by the recipient. Ordinarily, such repayment takes the form of a deduction from the ultimate share of trust principal distributed by that beneficiary. The feelings of settlors may vary on this issue. This form provides three options: (1) no repayment; (2) repayment at the discretion of the trustee; and (3) automatic repayment [see [2], P 5.05(b), below]. The first and third options are self-explanatory. The second option, giving the trustee discretion to require repayment, may be useful when the trustee is also given a very broad standard of discretion--for example, it may make sense to require reimbursement for distributions made to cover the purchase of a home or luxury items, but not distributions for basic expenses.

PRACTICE TIP

In one sense, the idea of requiring a beneficiary of a principal distribution from a pot trust to repay that distribution goes against the very nature of a pot trust. That is, a pot trust is intended to allow for substantially varying degrees of benefit to be enjoyed by each beneficiary of the trust. In contrast, the concept of repayment may be seen as suggesting that some equalization of benefits was intended by the settlor.

In any event, one should consider whether such a provision would be enforceable. Because a pot trust is designed to address specific current needs of the beneficiaries, it may be that once the distribution is made, the money will be spent and it will prove to be difficult or impossible for the beneficiary to make repayment. This issue, in turn, is affected by when the repayment may be requested by the trustee, and on what terms.

Finally, one should carefully consider the consequences before using the second alternative. If the trustee may, but need not, request repayment, the trustee will be under tremendous pressure from a distributee to not require repayment, while other beneficiaries may demand that repayment be required. Similarly, disparate treatment of beneficiaries in this area could create problems among the beneficiaries, as well as between the trustee and the beneficiaries. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[i] Distribution of Trust Assets and Termination of Trust

This form provides that the trust assets ultimately will be distributed to the children in equal shares (less any deductions for advance distributions of principal) [see [2], P 5.05(d), below]. This distribution will occur in two steps or stages that are keyed to the age of the settlor's youngest child. One half will be distributed to the beneficiaries when the settlor's youngest child reaches the first specified age, such as 25, and the balance when the youngest child reaches the second specified age, such as 30. Any other ages that the settlor believes appropriate may be substituted. Alternatively, the trust assets may be distributed all at once, or in more than two stages. For examples of provisions making a single-step or a three-step distribution, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 4, Alternatives 4.410-1 (1-step distribution), 4.410-3 (3-step distribution). Another alternative method of distribution is to require that the pot trust be split into separate shares for the respective beneficiaries when the youngest beneficiary reaches the stated age, and place each of the separate shares in a separate trust that will be distributed to the particular beneficiary when that beneficiary reaches the age or ages at which the settlor wants distribution to occur.

The necessity of waiting until the youngest child reaches a specified age before the trust property is distributed may work a hardship on the other children, who are required to wait until they are older to receive their share of the trust assets. This can mean that trust assets would be unavailable to these beneficiaries for important purposes such as purchasing a home, starting a business, educating their children, and so on. To reduce the undesirable effects on older beneficiaries, this form contains an optional provision permitting the trustee to make advance distributions of principal, up to a specified percentage of the share that the beneficiary would otherwise receive, if a valid reason exists for the distribution [see [2], P 5.05(c), below]. This optional language may be deleted if the settlor does not want to provide for early withdrawal rights.

[j] Treatment of Issue of Deceased Beneficiaries

The possibility exists that one or more of the settlor's children may die prior to final distribution of the trust assets, leaving surviving issue. Because of the time frame of the distributions contemplated in this form, any surviving issue of deceased children will probably be minors at the time the trust assets are distributed and the trust is terminated. To avoid having to make an outright disposition of the trust assets to minor issue under these circumstances, this form provides that the share of any such issue will continue to be held in trust until that issue reaches the age at which he or she would have been entitled to receive the property outright [see [2], P 5.05(h), below]. In effect, it creates a separate trust for each surviving issue who is under a specified age at the time the family pot trust is terminated. This provision creates a remote possibility of a violation of the rule against perpetuities, but under the current "wait and see" rule [see Prob. Code § 21205(b); see also Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16] and the perpetuities savings clause that is included in the form in Section 70.200[2] [see § 70.200[2], P 7.01], there is no chance of a violation that could disrupt the estate plan.

[k] "Sensitive Trustee" Issues

This form assumes that the trustee will not be a person who is also a beneficiary of the trust. If the settlor contemplates that one or more of the trust beneficiaries (such as older children) will serve as trustees at some point during the existence of the trust, the trustee of a sprinkling trust may be subject to undesirable income and estate tax consequences unless the trust provisions are carefully structured to avoid this result. The two problems that must be considered are:

- (1) A trustee who has the power, exercisable solely by himself or herself, to vest income or principal of any portion of the trust in himself or herself, is treated as the owner of that portion of the trust and is taxed on the income from that portion of the trust, whether or not that income is actually paid to the trustee [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)]; and
- (2) A trustee/beneficiary who has an unrestricted power to appoint any portion of the trust income to himself or herself is deemed to have a general power of appointment over the trust assets, and those assets will be included in the trustee's estate [I.R.C. § 2041] unless appropriate precautions are taken.

The simplest way to avoid these problems is to avoid naming a beneficiary as trustee. The income tax issues can be avoided by providing that any distributions of income to the trustee/beneficiary can be required only with the consent of another person, either a co-trustee or a "special trustee" appointed specifically for that purpose [see I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)]. The estate tax problems may be addressed by either (1) limiting the trustee's power by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)]; (2) providing that the trustee may exercise the power only with the concurrence of another person who is either the creator of the power or who has a substantial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise of the power (i.e., another trust beneficiary) [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)]; or (3) appointing a "special trustee" to make all distributions to the trustee-beneficiary.

For additional discussion of the tax considerations generated by discretionary payment and distribution powers in the trustee, see § 70.12[6][c]; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 96, Powers of Trustee, § 96.08[3]; Ch. 95, Trust Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal, § 95.06[1][c], [3][d] (Matthew Bender).

[I] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Considerations

PRACTICE TIP

An attorney who plans a family pot trust should be aware of the generation-skipping transfer tax implications of a family pot trust that will be held for the benefit of more than one generation below that of the settlor, when some of the beneficiaries are members of the generation immediately below the generation of the settlor. In such a trust, some of the beneficiaries will be "non-skip persons" (i.e., the settlor's children) [see I.R.C. § 2613(b)], and the remaining beneficiaries will be "skip persons" (i.e., the settlor's grandchildren and any more remote descendants) [see I.R.C. § 2613(a)]. Ideally, such a trust will be made completely exempt from the generation-skipping transfer tax through allocation of the settlor's GST exemption [see I.R.C. § 2631(a), (c) (base exemption is $1 million, with upward adjustments for inflation for generation-skipping transfers made in calendar years after 1998) and discussion in § 60.16[3]].

However, what can be done if the family pot trust in question will be larger than the available amount of the settlor's GST exemption? One solution might be to divide into two portions, one with a value equal to the available amount of the settlor's GST exemption and the other holding the balance of the original trust's assets. The settlor's entire GST exemption can then be allocated to the first trust, giving it an inclusion ratio of zero [see I.R.C. § 2642] and making it entirely exempt from the generation-skipping transfer tax. The other trust will then have an inclusion ratio of one and be completely subject to the tax. Of course, if some portion of the settlor's GST exemption has already been allocated (or can be more wisely allocated to other transfers), the trust designed to receive the allocation of the settlor's tax exemption will be appropriately smaller. The generation-skipping transfer tax provisions in the complete trust forms in this chapter give the trustee discretion to divide trusts into exempt and non-exempt trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, and are broad enough to authorize the type of division discussed in this Practice Tip.

Once such a split has been made, it is imperative that the trustee administer the separate trusts to take full advantage of the different inclusion ratios. If the payments or distributions are to be made to the settlor's children, they should be made first from the trust with the inclusion ratio of one, until that trust is completely exhausted. Even though distributions from that trust are potentially subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax, distributions to non-skip persons will not generate a tax. Likewise, payments or distributions to the settlor's grandchildren should be made first from the trust with the inclusion ratio of zero. Because the trust, and distributions from it, are exempt from the generation-skipping transfer tax, these generation-skipping transfers will go untaxed. For more detailed discussion of these and other generation-skipping transfer tax planning considerations, see California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies. [2] FORM

5.04. Disposition of Trust Upon Death of Settlor. On the death of the settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust as a single trust for the benefit of _____ [name(s) or description(s) of beneficiaries, e.g., the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor] in accordance with Paragraph 5.05 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust. If _____ [name(s) or description(s), e.g., the children of the settlor] all predecease the settlor without leaving issue who survive the settlor, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.05. Sprinkling Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Sprinkling Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor, until the youngest then-living child of the settlor reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor, until the youngest then-living child of the settlor reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these distributions, the trustee may distribute or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [No amount paid out or applied under this subparagraph (b) need thereafter be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust or The trustee _____ (shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,) deduct any amount so distributed to any beneficiary, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the amounts distributed to that beneficiary under (d) and (f), below.] All decisions of the trustee regarding distributions under this subparagraph, if any, shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may at any time or times prior to the time specified in this instrument for distribution of the trust property, make an early distribution of principal to any _____ [child of the settlor or beneficiary] if, in the trustee's opinion, there is a valid reason for making the distribution [and if the remaining principal and income will be adequate for the reasonable health, education, support, and maintenance of all of the beneficiaries]. The trustee shall deduct the early distribution, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the share ultimately distributed to the _____ [child or beneficiary] or his or her issue. Early distributions to any [child or beneficiary] shall not exceed, in the aggregate, [if amount of distributions is to be limited to a specified fraction or percentage of the beneficiary's distributive share of the trust, add: _____ (fraction or percentage, e.g., 50 percent or one third) of] that portion of the trust that would be distributable to that particular _____ [child or beneficiary], after offsetting any prior early distributions and any loans or advances not repaid to the trustee, if the trust were to be terminated and its assets distributed on the date that the early distribution is made. The trustee, upon making any distribution in accordance with this subparagraph, shall give the beneficiary receiving the distribution written notice identifying the distribution as "an early distribution under Paragraph 5.05(c)."

(d) When there is no living child of the settlor under the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute among the children of the settlor then living, in equal shares, an amount from the trust principal equal to _____ [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or 50 percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made. If no child of the settlor survives to the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, but there are surviving issue of one or more children of the settlor on the death of the last child of the settlor, then on the death of the last surviving child of the settlor, the entire trust estate shall be divided among the issue as provided in (e), below.

(e) If any of the children of the settlor are deceased at the time of the distribution provided for in (d), above, and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child if he or she had survived shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in (h), below.

(f) When there is no living child of the settlor under the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the children of the settlor then living, in equal shares, the balance of the trust property. If no child of the settlor survives to the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, but there are surviving issue of one or more children of the settlor on the death of the last child of the settlor to die, then on the death of the last surviving child of the settlor, the remaining trust estate shall be divided among the issue as provided in (g), below.

(g) If any of the children of the settlor are deceased at the time of the distribution provided for in (f), above, and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child if he or she had survived shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30 years] shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in (h), below.

(h) The share of any issue who is under the age specified for outright distribution at the time of any distribution made pursuant to (e) or (g), above, shall be retained in trust for that issue until he or she attains the age at which he or she would have been entitled to receive that distribution outright. Until that issue reaches the specified age, the trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of that issue as much of the income and principal of that issue's share of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of that issue. When that issue reaches the specified age, the trustee shall distribute the property outright to that issue. If that issue dies before reaching the age of distribution, the trustee shall distribute the share of that issue outright among the issue of that issue (or, if there are none, among the issue of the nearest ancestor of that issue who is also an issue of the settlor and who has issue then surviving, or if there are no such issue, among the heirs of the settlor), _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided that if any part of the share of that issue would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust or share is being administered under this instrument, that part shall instead be added to that trust or share and thereafter shall be administered according to its terms.

(i) If all the children of the settlor die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Alternative Sets of Trust Distribution Provisions

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.211

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.211 Trust Created by One Settlor--Trust Divided Into Separate Trusts or Shares on Death of Settlor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains a set of trust distribution provisions creating "separate share" trusts for individual beneficiaries on the death of a sole settlor. It is designed to replace Paragraph 5.04 of the form in Section 70.200[2] when an unmarried settlor creates a trust that will have more than one beneficiary on the settlor's death, and the settlor wants to divide the trust into separate trusts or shares for the individual trust beneficiaries. When these provisions are used, Paragraph 5.04 of the form in Section 70.200[2] should be deleted and replaced with these provisions, and the remainder of Article 5 of that form renumbered accordingly. All incidental references to the affected sections, as well as any references to the beneficiaries, should also be checked and conformed as necessary.

It is assumed that the beneficiaries of the trust will be the settlor's children and the issue of any deceased children. However, a separate share arrangement is easily adaptable to most other patterns of distribution as well.

[b] Nature of "Separate Share" Trust

In a "separate share" arrangement, each trust beneficiary receives his or her own share of the trust assets on the death of the settlor. That share is held separately from the shares of other beneficiaries, and no beneficiary has any interest in the shares of the other beneficiaries. Thus, each beneficiary must look solely to his or her own share for support. In contrast, under a "family pot" trust, the trust assets are pooled in a single trust and each beneficiary typically receives assets in accordance with his or her needs. For discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of "family pot" trusts relative to "separate share" arrangements, see § 70.210[1][b]; see also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, §§ 64.200[1][c] and 64.201[1][b].

It is assumed in this form that the beneficiaries will be the children and other issue of the settlor. The disposition is made to the children and other issue of the settlor as a class. For discussion of the use of class descriptions as opposed to naming specific individuals, see § 70.210[1][c].

[d] Shares of Beneficiaries

Under this form, on the settlor's death the trust will be divided into a number of shares equal to the number of the settlor's surviving children plus the number of the settlor's deceased children who died leaving surviving issue [see [2], P 5.04(a), below]. Each child receives one share [see [2], P 5.04(b), below]. The share of each deceased child is divided among the deceased child's issue in accordance with a statutory pattern of distribution selected by the settlor [see [2], P 5.04(c), below; for discussion of the statutory patterns of distribution, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15].

This form assumes that the shares of the children will be equal. In the vast majority of cases, settlors will want their children to share equally in the trust assets. However, settlors sometimes want the division to be made in unequal shares. When this is the case, the provision should specify the fraction or percentage of the total trust assets that should be allocated to each share, and the beneficiaries must be specifically identified (which may make drafting the disposition as a class gift impractical). For examples of provisions making unequal divisions of trust assets, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 4, Alternatives 4.240-10-4.240-12.

[e] Treatment of Each Share

Some settlors will want the payment of income and distribution of principal to be handled identically for each child. Others may want individual children treated differently in this regard. For illustrative purposes, this provision shows elements of both approaches. It assumes that the settlor has several children, and, with one exception, wants payments and distributions to these children to be handled in the same manner [see [2], P 5.04(b), below]. It further assumes that the settlor has one child who is to be treated differently from the others [see [2], P 5.04(b), below]. This child may be one whom the settlor regards as financially irresponsible, incapable of managing money, or otherwise likely to squander his or her inheritance. For examples of more complex provisions providing specific methods of treating individual trust shares, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 4, Alternatives 4.240-9, 4.240-12.

In this form, one group of trust provisions applies to all the settlor's children except the one receiving different treatment [see [2], P 5.05, below]. A second set of provisions applies exclusively to the child who is to be treated differently [see [2], P 5.06, below]. As noted above, this manner of distribution is purely illustrative. If the settlor wants all the children treated equally, the optional material can be deleted and the remaining paragraphs renumbered accordingly.

Note that the payment and distribution provisions applicable to the one child receiving special treatment are not designed to preserve any entitlement that child might have to government assistance benefits. So-called "special needs trusts," designed to preserve a trust beneficiary's entitlement to government benefits to the maximum extent possible, require special provisions and are beyond the scope of this chapter. For a detailed discussion of special needs trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Chapter 118, Special Needs Trusts (Matthew Bender). For illustrative special needs trusts, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 1, Complete Inter Vivos Trusts, Trust 3, § 5.05 (special needs trust provisions for one beneficiary of revocable trust) and Trust 43 (irrevocable special needs trust).

[f] Payments and Distributions During Lifetimes of Beneficiaries

This form provides for a relatively common and simple pattern of distribution: payment of all trust income to the beneficiary until he or she reaches a specified age, supplemented by as much of the trust principal as is necessary to support the beneficiary until that time [see [2], P 5.05(a), (b), below]. The principal payments are made according to a specified standard, which can be an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, and maintenance of the beneficiary or, if desired by the settlor, some broader standard. For discussion of the use of ascertainable standards, see Section 70.12[6][c] and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4].

Some attorneys prefer not to provide for the payment of all trust income to or for the benefit of a minor, especially if the trust income is likely to be substantial and to exceed the amount reasonably necessary for support of the minor. As an alternative to the approach illustrated in Paragraph 5.05, payments and distributions of both principal and income can be made discretionary. When income payments are discretionary, any unpaid income will be added to principal. Still another approach preferred by many attorneys is simply to accumulate income until the beneficiary reaches a specified age, such as 18 or 21, and then provide for mandatory payment of all income from that time until the trust principal is finally distributed. As discussed in Chapter 60, Estate Planning, § 60.15[3][e], the accumulation of income can have undesirable income tax consequences. Nevertheless, some settlors would prefer to pay more income tax than to distribute the income to a minor or young adult whom they believe is not responsible enough to make proper use of it. In the context of this form, it makes sense to restrict income payments to a beneficiary who is not trusted enough to receive his or her share of the trust estate outright during his or her lifetime. Hence, this approach is taken in Paragraph 5.06 of the form.

[g] Distribution of Trust Principal and Termination of Trust

This form provides that with the exception of the one child receiving special treatment, each of the settlor's children will receive his or her share of the trust assets when he or she reaches a specified age, such as 30 [see [2], P 5.05(d), below]. As an alternative to this simple method of outright distribution, the trust may provide for a two-step distribution similar to that illustrated in Section 70.210[2], a three-step distribution, or any other pattern of distribution desired by the settlor. For provisions illustrating these approaches as specifically applied to separate share trusts, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Division 2, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 4, Alternatives 4.420-2, 4.420-3.

If any of the children die prior to the age at which they are to receive their share of the trust outright, their share is divided among their issue, if any, at the time of their death. Issue over a specified age will receive their shares outright, while the shares of those issue under the stated age will be retained in trust for them until they reach that age [see [2], PP 5.05(e), 5.07]. This provision creates a remote possibility of a violation of the rule against perpetuities, but under the current "wait and see" rule [see Prob. Code § 21205(b); see also Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, 67.16] and the perpetuities savings clause that is included in the form in Section 70.200[2] [see § 70.200[2], P 7.01], there is no chance of a violation that could disrupt the estate plan.

The trust for the one child who is receiving special treatment will continue for that child's entire lifetime [see [2], P 5.06(a)]. When that child dies, his or her share of the trust assets will be divided among his or her issue. Issue over a specified age will receive their shares outright, while the shares of those issue under the stated age will be retained in trust until they reach that age [see [2], PP 5.06(c), 5.07].

PRACTICE TIP

If the beneficiary of this special trust has issue, the special trust will automatically create a generation-skipping transfer. Thus, special consideration should be given to allocation of the settlor's exemption from the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. § 2631] to this share. The fact that this will be a generation-skipping trust is not "bad" in and of itself, and proper planning for this eventuality may actually confer an extra benefit upon the beneficiary of this share and his or her issue. However, it is important that this fact be considered in advance and discussed with the client at the stage of designing the trust. This will allow the planner to determine whether the client is willing to confer the potential advantages of allocation of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption unequally in favor of the child who is having the lifetime trust created for his or her benefit. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[2] FORM

Trust Created by One Settlor--Trust Divided Into Separate Trusts or Shares on Death of Settlor

5.04. Disposition of Trust Upon Death of Settlor.

(a) On the death of the settlor the trustee shall divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each child of the settlor who survives the settlor, and one share for the issue who survive the settlor of each child of the settlor who predeceases the settlor.

(b) Each share created for a surviving child of the settlor [to make exception for one or more shares held for specific persons, add: except the share(s), if any, created for _____ (name[s], e.g., John B. Smith)] shall be distributed outright to that child if that child has reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years. If the child has not reached the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the share created for the child shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust as set forth in Paragraph 5.05 of this instrument. [To make exception for one or more shares held for specific persons, add: The share(s), if any, created for _____ (name[s], e.g., John B. Smith) shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee in a separate trust according to the terms set forth in Paragraph 5.06 applicable to the Trust for _____ (e.g., John B. Smith), regardless of _____ (his age or her age or their ages) at the time of the settlor's death.]

(c) Each share created for the issue of a deceased child of the settlor shall be divided among those issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in Paragraph 5.07 of this instrument.

(d) If all the children of the settlor predecease the settlor without leaving issue who survive the settlor, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.05. Separate Trusts for Children. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the separate trust for each child as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments [agreed upon by that child and the trustee], but not less often than annually, until that child reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of that child, until that child reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary [, when added to the income payments from this trust,] for that child's _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) On the death of that child, the trustee may pay [any death taxes (add if appropriate: attributable to property held in the trust) and] the expenses of the last illness and funeral of that child out of the principal of the trust, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses.

(d) When that child reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to that child outright the balance of the trust property.

(e) If that child dies before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the assets of that child's separate trust shall be divided among that child's issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either: 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in Paragraph 5.07 of this instrument. If that child dies without issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute the entire undistributed balance of that child's separate share outright among the other then-living persons for whom separate shares were created _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such persons are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust is being administered under this paragraph, that part shall instead be added to that trust and shall thereafter be administered according to its terms. If there are no surviving persons who may take the share of that child under this paragraph, any remaining trust property shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.06 Trust for _____ [e.g., John B. Smith]. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the trust for _____ [e.g., John] as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of _____ [e.g., John B. Smith], for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for _____ [e.g., John B. Smith's] _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) On the death of _____ [e.g., John B. Smith], the trustee may pay [any death taxes (add if appropriate: attributable to property held in the trust) and] the expenses of the last illness and funeral of _____ [e.g., John B. Smith] out of the principal of the trust, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses.

(c) On the death of _____ [e.g., John B. Smith], the trustee shall divide the trust property among _____ [e.g., John B. Smith's] issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either: 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in Paragraph 5.07 of this instrument. If the issue of _____ [e.g., John B. Smith] all predecease _____ [e.g., John B. Smith], the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright among the other then-living persons for whom separate trusts were created under this instrument, in _____ [the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____].

_____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or equal shares, regardless of whether or not all those persons are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whom a trust is being administered under this instrument, that part instead shall be added to that trust and thereafter shall be administered according to its terms. If there are no surviving persons who may take the trust assets under this paragraph, any remaining trust assets shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.07. Separate Trusts for Issue of Each Deceased Child. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of each separate trust for an issue of a deceased child of the settlor as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the beneficiary, until the beneficiary reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the beneficiary's _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When the beneficiary reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the beneficiary outright the balance of the trust property.

(c) If the beneficiary dies before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the assets of his or her separate trust shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either: 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue as set forth in this paragraph. If the beneficiary dies without issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute the entire undistributed balance of his or her separate share outright among the issue of the nearest ancestor of that beneficiary who is also an issue of the settlor and who has issue then surviving, _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust is being administered under this paragraph, that part shall instead be added to that trust and shall thereafter be administered according to its terms. If there are no surviving persons who may take the share of the beneficiary under this paragraph, any remaining trust property shall be distributed outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

CHAPTER 70 COMPLETE REVOCABLE TRUST FORMS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Alternative Sets of Trust Distribution Provisions

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.212

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.212 Trust Created by Two Settlers--"Family Pot" Trust With Sprinkling Provisions on Death of Surviving Settlor

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form contains a set of trust distribution provisions creating a so-called "family pot" trust on the death of the surviving settlor in a two-settlor trust. It is designed to modify the terms of the form in Section 70.202[2], a two-settlor marital deduction trust, by replacing Paragraphs 5.09, 5.10, and 5.11 of that form. It assumes that the trust will contain a survivor's trust, a marital deduction trust, and a bypass trust. It also assumes that a disclaimer trust is being used.

The form in Section 70.202[2], the two-settlor marital deduction trust in this publication, provides that on the death of the surviving settlor, the trust assets (including any portion of the survivor's trust not appointed by the surviving settlor under the general power of appointment granted to him or her under the form in Section 70.202[2]) will be divided into separate trusts or shares for the settlor's children and issue. The provisions in this form convert that "separate share" arrangement into a "family pot" arrangement instead. The other distribution arrangements, such as the terms of the survivor's trust and the marital deduction trust, and distributions from the bypass and disclaimer trusts during the lifetime of the surviving settlor, are unaffected.

For discussion of the use of "family pot" trusts and "sprinkling" provisions, see Section 70.210[1][b], [d]-[f]. Otherwise, the general commentary in Section 70.202[1] regarding the use of the form in Section 70.202[2] continues to apply to that form as modified by these provisions.

When these provisions are used, all incidental references to the affected sections, as well as any references to the beneficiaries, should also be checked and conformed as necessary.

5.09. Bypass Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Bypass Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for his or her health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not make discretionary payments of principal from the Bypass Trust to the surviving settlor unless the principal of the QTIP Trust and the Survivor's Trust has been exhausted.

(b) In addition to any other payments and distributions that the surviving settlor may receive under this instrument, the trustee shall distribute to the surviving settlor, during the surviving settlor's lifetime, such amounts from the principal of the trust estate as he or she may from time to time request of the trustee in writing, not to exceed in any calendar year the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the end of the calendar year. This right of withdrawal is not cumulative, so that if the surviving settlor does not withdraw the full amount that he or she is entitled to withdraw under this provision in any calendar year, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse at the end of the calendar year. This power shall exist each year until the death of the surviving settlor.

PRACTICE TIP

One may want to consider eliminating this "5 or 5 power" from the Bypass Trust. The Bypass Trust ordinarily is intended to grow as much as possible, in order to allow the maximum amount possible to pass tax-free on the death of the surviving settlor. Frequent exercise of this power by the surviving settlor will undercut this planning, and violates the intention expressed in the last sentence of Paragraph 5.09(a) that the Bypass Trust be invaded only after the QTIP and Survivor's Trusts have been exhausted.

Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

(c) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust for the benefit of the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors in accordance with Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. If the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors all predecease the surviving settlor, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., one half to the heirs of the deceased settlor and one half to the heirs of the surviving settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.10. Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Sprinkling Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors, until the youngest then-living child of the settlors reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors, until the youngest then-living child of the settlors reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these distributions, the trustee may distribute or apply more to some beneficiaries than to others, and may make distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [No amount paid out or applied under this subparagraph (b) need thereafter be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust or The trustee _____ (shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,) deduct any amount so distributed to any beneficiary, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the amounts distributed to that beneficiary under (d), below.] All decisions of the trustee regarding distributions under this subparagraph, if any, shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may at any time or times prior to the time specified in this instrument for distribution of the trust property, make an early distribution of principal to any _____ [child of the settlors or beneficiary] if, in the trustee's opinion, there is a valid reason for making the distribution [and if the remaining principal and income will be adequate for the reasonable health, education, support, and maintenance of all of the beneficiaries]. The trustee shall deduct the early distribution, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the share ultimately distributed to the _____ [child or beneficiary] or his or her issue. Early distributions to any [child or beneficiary] shall not exceed, in the aggregate, [if amount of distributions is to be limited to a specified fraction or percentage of the beneficiary's distributive share of the trust, add: _____ (fraction or percentage, e.g., 50 percent or one third) of] that portion of the trust that would be distributable to that particular _____ [child or beneficiary], after offsetting any prior early distributions and any loans or advances not repaid to the trustee, if the trust were to be terminated and its assets distributed on the date that the early distribution is made. The trustee, upon making any distribution in accordance with this subparagraph, shall give the beneficiary receiving the distribution written notice identifying the distribution as "an early distribution under Paragraph 5.05(c)."

(d) When there is no living child of the settlor under the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the children of the settlors then living, in equal shares, the balance of the trust property. If no child of the settlors survives to the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, but there are surviving issue of one or more children of the settlors on the death of the last child of the settlors, then on the death of the last surviving child of the settlors to die, the remaining trust estate shall be divided among the issue as provided in (e), below.

(e) If any of the children of the settlors are deceased at the time of the distribution provided for in (d), above, and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child if he or she had survived shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30 years] shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in (f), below.

(f) The share of any issue who is under the age specified for outright distribution at the time of any distribution made pursuant to (d), above, shall be retained in trust for that issue until he or she attains the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years. Until that issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of that issue as much of the income and principal of that issue's share of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of that issue. When that issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute the property outright to that issue. If that issue dies before reaching the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute the share of that issue outright among the issue of that issue (or, if there are none, among the issue of the nearest ancestor of that issue who is also an issue of the settlors and who has issue then surviving, or if there are no such issue, to the heirs of the settlors, one half to the heirs of the deceased settlor and one half to the heirs of the surviving settlor) _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided that if any part of the share of that issue would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust or share is being administered under this instrument, that part shall instead be added to that trust or share and thereafter shall be administered according to its terms.

(g) If all the children of the settlors die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., one half to the heirs of the deceased settlor and one half to the heirs of the surviving settlor or to the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the surviving settlor, for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for his or her health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) On the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust for the benefit of the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors in accordance with Paragraph 5.10 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. If the children of the settlors and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlors all predecease the surviving settlor, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., one half to the heirs of the deceased settlor and one half to the heirs of the surviving settlor or to the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

PART IV. FORMS
B. Alternative Sets of Trust Distribution Provisions

26-70 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 70.213

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 70.213 Trust Created by One Settlor--"Family Pot" Trust With Sprinkling Provisions on Death of Settlor's Surviving Spouse

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form contains a set of trust distribution provisions creating a so-called "family pot" trust on the death of a sole settlor's surviving spouse (or, if the spouse does not survive, on the death of the settlor). It is designed to modify the terms of the form in Section 70.203[2], a one-settlor marital deduction trust, by replacing Paragraphs 5.07, 5.10, 5.11, and 5.12 of that form. It assumes that the trust will follow the standard 2-trust arrangement consisting of a marital deduction trust and a bypass trust. It also assumes that a disclaimer trust is being used.

The form in Section 70.203[2], the one-settlor marital deduction trust in this publication, provides that on the death of the settlor's surviving spouse, or on the settlor's death if the settlor's spouse predeceases the settlor, the trust will be divided into separate trusts or shares for the settlor's children and issue. The provisions in this form convert the separate share arrangement into a "family pot" arrangement instead. The other distribution arrangements, such as the terms of the marital deduction trust and distributions from the bypass and disclaimer trusts during the lifetime of the settlor's surviving spouse, are unaffected.

For discussion of the use of "family pot" trusts and "sprinkling" provisions, see Section 70.210[1][b], [d]-[f]. Otherwise, the general commentary in Section 70.203 regarding the use of that form remains applicable to that form as modified by these provisions.

When these provisions are used, all incidental references to the affected sections, as well as any references to the beneficiaries, should also be checked and conformed if necessary.

5.07. Disposition of Trust Estate if Settlor Is Not Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is not survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], on the death of the settlor the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust as a single trust for the benefit of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor in accordance with Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. If the children of the settlor all predecease the settlor without leaving issue who survive the settlor, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.10. Bypass Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Bypass Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] during _____ [his or her] lifetime, and the settlor's children during the lifetime of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay, distribute, or apply more to or for some beneficiaries than others, and may make payments or distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not make discretionary payments of principal from the Bypass Trust to the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] unless the principal of the QTIP Trust has been exhausted.

(b) In addition to any other payments and distributions that the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] may receive under this instrument, the trustee shall distribute to the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], during _____ [his or her] lifetime, such amounts from the principal of the trust estate as _____ [he or she] may from time to time request of the trustee in writing, not to exceed in any calendar year the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the end of the calendar year. This right of withdrawal is not cumulative, so that if the settlor's _____ [husband or wife] does not withdraw the full amount that _____ [he or she] is entitled to withdraw under this provision in any calendar year, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse at the end of the calendar year. This power shall exist each year until the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife].

PRACTICE TIP

The "five or five" power above is included primarily for illustrative purposes, to provide a model for drafting such a provision when it is appropriate to include one. In the majority of cases, it may be better practice to eliminate this "5 or 5 power" from the Bypass Trust. The Bypass Trust is ordinarily intended to grow as much as possible, in order to allow the maximum amount possible to pass tax-free on the death of the settlor's spouse. Frequent exercise of this power by the surviving spouse will undercut this tax planning. Additionally, since the settlor's children are permissible sprinkling beneficiaries of this trust, the inclusion of such a power may be contrary to the settlor's basic dispositive intentions in many cases, since it allows the surviving spouse to deplete the Bypass Trust to the detriment of the settlor's children. Indeed, when the settlor's children are named as beneficiaries of the Bypass Trust, it is not uncommon for the surviving spouse not to be included as a beneficiary of the Bypass Trust at all. The latter situation most commonly occurs when the settlor or the settlor's spouse is quite wealthy and other assets will provide more than sufficient income for the surviving spouse. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

(c) On the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust for the benefit of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor in accordance with Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. If the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor all predecease the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

5.11. Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Sprinkling Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor, until the youngest then-living child of the settlor reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor, until the youngest then-living child of the settlor reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this trust, for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these distributions, the trustee may distribute or apply more to some beneficiaries than to others, and may make distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [No amount paid out or applied under this subparagraph (b) need thereafter be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust or The trustee _____ (shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,) deduct any amount so distributed to any beneficiary, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the amounts distributed to that beneficiary under (d), below.] All decisions of the trustee regarding distributions under this subparagraph, if any, shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) The trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may at any time or times prior to the time specified in this instrument for distribution of the trust property, make an early distribution of principal to any _____ [child of the settlor or beneficiary] if, in the trustee's opinion, there is a valid reason for making the distribution [and if the remaining principal and income will be adequate for the reasonable health, education, support, and maintenance of all of the beneficiaries]. The trustee shall deduct the early distribution, valued on the date that the distribution is made, without interest, from the share ultimately distributed to the _____ [child or beneficiary] or his or her issue. Early distributions to any [child or beneficiary] shall not exceed, in the aggregate, [if amount of distributions is to be limited to a specified fraction or percentage of the beneficiary's distributive share of the trust, add: _____ (fraction or percentage, e.g., 50 percent or one third) of] that portion of the trust that would be distributable to that particular _____ [child or beneficiary], after offsetting any prior early distributions and any loans or advances not repaid to the trustee, if the trust were to be terminated and its assets distributed on the date that the early distribution is made. The trustee, upon making any distribution in accordance with this subparagraph, shall give the beneficiary receiving the distribution written notice identifying the distribution as "an early distribution under Paragraph 5.05(c)."

(d) When there is no living child of the settlor under the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the children of the settlor then living, in equal shares, the balance of the trust property. If no child of the settlor survives to the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, but there are surviving issue of one or more children of the settlor on the death of the last child of the settlor, then on the death of the last surviving child of the settlor to die, the remaining trust estate shall be divided among the issue as provided in (e), below.

(e) If any of the children of the settlor are deceased at the time of the distribution provided for in (d), above, and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child if he or she had survived shall be divided among his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30 years] shall be distributed outright to that issue. The share of any issue who has not attained the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in (f), below.

(f) The share of any issue who is under the age specified for outright distribution at the time of any distribution made pursuant to (d), above, shall be retained in trust for that issue until he or she attains the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years. Until that issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of that issue as much of the income and principal of that issue's share of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of that issue. When that issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute the property outright to that issue. If that issue dies before reaching the age of _____ [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute the share of that issue outright among the issue of that issue (or, if there are none, among the issue of the nearest ancestor of that issue who is also an issue of the settlor and who has issue then surviving, or, if there are no such issue, among the heirs of the settlor), _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided that if any part of the share of that issue would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust or share is being administered under this instrument, that part shall instead be added to that trust or share and thereafter shall be administered according to its terms.

(g) If all the children of the settlor die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this paragraph, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness

5.12. Disclaimer Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Disclaimer Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], for life, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for _____ [his or her] _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) On the death of the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust for the benefit of the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor in accordance with Paragraph 5.11 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust for Children and Issue. If the children of the settlor and the surviving issue of any deceased children of the settlor all predecease the settlor's _____ [husband or wife], the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to _____ [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the California Mountain Lion Awareness League].

§ 70.220 Introductory Provision for Trust Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an introductory provision for a trust agreement. When used, it will form the first paragraph of the trust instrument.

[b] Comparison Between Declaration of Trust and Trust Agreement

An inter vivos trust instrument may take the form of either a declaration of trust or a trust agreement. A declaration of trust is a one-party instrument in which the trustee unilaterally declares that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the instrument. A trust agreement is a two-party instrument under which the settlor transfers property to the trustee and the trustee agrees to hold the property in trust under terms of the agreement. Either a declaration of trust or a trust agreement is legally sufficient to create an inter vivos trust, and either may be used when there are one or more settlors or one or more trustees. For introductory provisions for declarations of trust, see §§ 70.200[2], Paragraph 1.01, 70.201[2], Paragraph 1.01, 70.202[2], Paragraph 1.01, 70.203[2], Paragraph 1.01.

[c] Signature Requirements

A trust agreement must be signed by both the settlor and the trustee, while a declaration can be signed only by the trustee. In practice, however, this difference is largely illusory. It is common practice for the settlor as well as the trustee to sign a declaration of trust, in order to indicate that the settlor approves the terms of the declaration. When the settlor is also the trustee, only the settlor is required to sign a trust agreement, although the signature must be in the settlor's dual capacities as both settlor and trustee. For signature blocks for a trust agreement, see § 70.290[2].

Either a trust agreement or a declaration of trust, when properly drafted, will create a valid trust. Prior to 1993, the choice was largely a matter of individual preference. Attorneys who preferred the trust agreement format often did so on the ground that when a client is to act both as trustee and settlor, the agreement format requires the client to sign in both capacities and thus emphasizes for the client the distinction between the two roles. As discussed in § 70.11[3][b], however, the 1993 case of Estate of Heggstad [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433] has prompted many estate planners who preferred trust agreements to re-evaluate their preference.

In Heggstad, the court of appeal held that a parcel of real property that was described as a trust asset in a schedule attached to a trust declaration was trust property even though it was never formally conveyed to the trust. The court specifically referred to language in Prob. Code § 15200(a) that permits a trust to be created by a "declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee" [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 ; see Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ] . The court did not speculate on whether the result would have been the same if the trust in question had been created by a trust agreement rather than a declaration, but since the result under a declaration is clear, many California estate planners now recommend that revocable trusts be created by declarations rather than trust agreements. They do so in the belief that a trust declaration may provide a measure of additional protection for both the settlor and the attorney in case, for any reason, an item that was intended to be trust property never actually gets formally conveyed to the trust.

§ 70.230 Additions by Settlor(s) Only

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a trust provision that may be used to limit the right to add property to an inter vivos trust to the settlor or settlors of that trust. When used, this provision will be included in Article 2 of the trust instrument in the complete trusts in this chapter.

[b] Limiting Right to Settlers

Most revocable inter vivos trusts, including the complete forms in this chapter, permit the trustee of a revocable inter vivos trust to accept additions to the trust from any source. Sometimes, however, the settlor(s) may wish to limit the right to add property to a revocable trust to the settlor or settlors themselves. This provision will give effect to that intention.

PRACTICE TIP

It is unusual to find such a provision in a revocable trust. In irrevocable trusts, such provisions are more common, at least to the extent that they prohibit contributions from beneficiaries of the trust. In those cases, the intent may be to protect the beneficiaries from adverse income and estate tax consequences.

From time to time, the Trustee may accept additions to the trust, but only from the settlor[s] [optional: or a duly authorized agent or agents of (either or both of) the settlor(s)]. All such additions shall become a part of the trust estate and shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

This form is a trust provision that may be used to prohibit additional property from being added to the trust estate. When used, this provision will be included in Article 2 of the trust instrument in the complete trusts in this chapter.

[b] Additions to Trust

Trust instruments typically include provisions specifying whether the trustee is authorized to accept additions to the trust and, if so, from what source. In most cases, it is desirable to permit the trustee to accept additions to the trust, either from the settlor or settlors or from any source or sources without restriction [see § 70.12[4][c]]. In rare cases, the settlor may wish to prohibit additions. This form may be used to record those wishes.

PRACTICE TIP

Provisions such as this one are extremely rare. Outside of charitable remainder annuity trusts [see Ch. 74, Split-Interest Charitable Trusts ], where similar provisions are mandatory, one will rarely encounter such a provision. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

§ 70.240 Power of Revocation Is Personal to Settlor(s)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a trust provision stating that the right to revoke the trust is personal to the settlor (or settlors) and may not be exercised by any other person. When used, this provision will be included in Article 3 of the trust instrument in the complete trusts in this chapter.

[b] Exercise of Settlor's Powers by Others

Revocable inter vivos trust instruments frequently authorize designated third parties to exercise the settlor's rights for the settlor in the event that the settlor is unable to exercise those rights personally. When the settlor's estate plan includes a durable power of attorney for property management, the power to exercise the settlor's rights in the event of disability is frequently conferred on the attorney in fact named in the durable power of attorney; or, if there is no attorney in fact, on a conservator, after obtaining a court order [see § 70.12[5][h]]. Giving the attorney in fact this general authority to act on behalf of a disabled settlor may help to maintain the revocability of the trust while the settlor is disabled, and thereby avoid the trouble and expense of conservatorship proceedings [see § 70.12[5][h]].

[c] Limitation of Authority to Revoke Trust

Some settlors, while wanting to provide for exercise of their rights as described in [b], above, may be reluctant to grant authority to revoke the trust to anyone else, even an attorney in fact chosen by the settlor. If this is the case, the settlor may grant the attorney in fact authority to exercise all of the rights and powers that the settlor could personally exercise under the trust instrument, except the power to amend, revoke, or terminate the trust [see §§ 70.200[2], P 3.04 (optional language), 70.201[2], P 3.09 (optional language), 70.202[2], P 3.09 (optional language), 70.203[2], P 3.04 (optional language)]. A settlor who wants to make an even stronger statement on the issue of revocation by third parties may explicitly state that the right to revoke the trust is personal to the settlor and may not be exercised by any other person or persons in the settlor's behalf. This form may be used for that purpose.

Use of this form is not strictly necessary, since the general rule is that a trust may not be modified or revoked by an attorney in fact unless it is expressly permitted in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15401(c)]. However, clarification of the settlor's intentions is always desirable and will serve to apprise the trustee and any attorney in fact of the limitations on their authority.

§ 70.250 Special Gift From Two-Settlor Trust--Pecuniary Gift on First Death Only if Specified Settlor Dies First

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in a two-settlor trust to require the trustee to pay a specified sum of money to a named person on the death of the first settlor, but only if a specified settlor is the first settlor to die. When used in the complete trust forms in this chapter, this provision should appear at the beginning of Article 5, "Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor." It may be used in addition to, or in place of, Paragraph 5.01 in the forms in Sections 70.201[2] or 70.202[2].

[b] "Special Gifts" in General

The term "special gift," as used in this chapter, means a distribution of cash or property that the trustee is required to make out of the trust assets to someone other than the principal income or remainder beneficiaries of the trust. If all (or substantially all) of the settlor's estate is to be disposed of under a trust rather than a will, a special gift will serve many of the same purposes as a pecuniary or specific devise in a will.

A special gift usually will be made on a settlor's death. The beneficiary or beneficiaries usually will be persons or entities whom the settlor wishes to benefit, but who are not the principal beneficiaries of the trust. For example, beneficiaries may be favorite nephews or nieces, specific grandchildren, a class of relatives, friends, charitable institutions [see §§ 70.251-70.255], or a combination of these beneficiaries.

[c] Gifts Dependent on Order of Death of Settlers

The special gift provisions in the complete two-settlor trusts in this chapter require that a gift be made on the death of the first settlor, regardless of the order of death of the settlors [see §§ 70.201[2], P 5.01, 70.202[2], P 5.01]. In many cases, this kind of arrangement may not reflect the intentions of the settlors. For example, one settlor may want to give a sum to one of his or her relatives on that settlor's death, but not on the death of the other settlor.

This provision, in contrast to the special gift provisions in the complete forms in this chapter, requires the trustee to make the gift only if a designated settlor is the first settlor to die. This form also requires that the gift be made out of the deceased settlor's share of the assets.

[d] Drafting Considerations

If the settlor wants to name more than one recipient of special gifts, the amount and name should be stated for each recipient, e.g., "... the sum of $4,000 to Arthur R. White; the sum of $1,000 to each of the deceased settlor's nieces and nephews, and the sum of $500 to the San Diego County chapter of the California Cactus and Succulent Society." If more than two or three gifts are being made, it may be clearer if the provision is subdivided and each gift set out in a separate subdivision. An optional survivorship condition may be added if desired.

Special Gift From Two-Settlor Trust--Pecuniary Gift on First Death Only if Specified Settlor Dies First

[If gift is conditioned on survival, add appropriate alternative disposition, e.g., If _____ (name of beneficiary, e.g., Arthur R. White or a donee) does not survive the deceased settlor (add if desired: for _____ [e.g., 60] days), _____ (this gift or the gift to that donee) shall _____ (e.g., lapse or be distributed to William T. [1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used in a one-settlor trust to require the trustee to pay a specified sum of money to one or more charitable institutions on the death of the settlor. When used in the complete trust forms in this chapter, this provision should appear at the beginning of Article 5, "Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor." It may be used in addition to, or in place of, Paragraph 5.01 in the forms in Sections 70.200[2] or 70.203[2]. It includes language for an alternate disposition in the event that the initial devisee is unable to accept the contribution for any reason, or no longer qualifies as a charitable organization for federal estate tax purposes.

Before drafting any provision making a charitable gift, the attorney should determine the charity's correct legal name and verify that it is qualified to receive charitable devises under the Internal Revenue Code. For discussion, see Chapter 69, Charitable Dispositions .

For general discussion of special gifts, see Section 70.250[1]; see also Section 70.200[1][h].

§ 70.254 Special Gift From One-Settlor Trust--Gifts of Tangible Personal Property on Settlor's Death

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in a one-settlor trust to require the trustee to distribute one or more items of tangible personal property to a designated beneficiary on the settlor's death. When used in the complete trust forms in this chapter, this provision should appear at the beginning of Article 5, "Payments and Distributions After Death of Deceased Settlor." It may be used in addition to, or in place of, Paragraph 5.01 in the forms in Sections 70.200[2] or 70.203[2].

For general discussion of special gifts, see Section 70.250[1]; see also Section 70.200[1][h].

[b] Gifts of Tangible Personal Property From Revocable Trust

Most estate planners recommend against holding ordinary tangible personal property in trust because it is harder to manage and keep track of than intangibles such as securities, bank accounts, and real property. Instead, they advise clients to make specific gifts of such property by will. However, it is still a common practice for clients to transfer everything to their revocable trust and then make gifts from the trust that are analogous to specific gifts under a will. This practice makes more sense when the assets in question are valuable and probate avoidance is the client's primary consideration.

A danger in making this type of gift is that the asset in question will never be transferred to the trust, or that disputes may arise in the absence of clear documentation. When the client wants to transfer tangible personal property to a revocable trust, it is essential that the transfer be documented in writing.

[c] Disposition of Property Prior to Time of Gift

This type of provision must specify what will happen if the property in question is not in the trust at the time of the settlor's death. This alternative gives the drafter a choice of specifying either that (1) the gift will simply lapse in that situation; or (2) a cash gift will be made in the alternative.

[b] Contingency Relating to Order of Settlor's Deaths

Since this type of provision is normally used to dispose of items of personal property associated with a particular settlor, it is assumed that this type of gift will almost always be contingent on a particular settlor being the first settlor to die. In order to ensure that the disposition works as planned, the tangible personal property should be described in "Schedule A" as the separate (or quasi-community) property of the settlor on whose death the gift is to be made. If the property in question is community property, a transmutation must be made to make the gift work as planned.

§ 70.280 Simultaneous Death Clause Reversing Statutory Presumption--One-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a simultaneous death clause reversing the statutory presumption that a person to whom property is to be distributed on the death of another person will be presumed to have died before that other person [see Prob. Code § 220 and § 70.12[8][c]]. When used in the complete trust forms in this chapter, this form will be included in the article of the trust instrument titled "Concluding Provisions."

This form is designed for a trust created by one settlor. For a substantially identical form suitable for a trust instrument created by two settlors, see Section 70.281.

[b] Statutory Presumption

Probate Code Section 220 prescribes a rule for determining how property will be distributed or administered in so-called "simultaneous death" situations. Under that section, if title to or devolution of property depends on determining which of two persons died first, and it cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence which one actually was the first to die, the property of each person will be administered, distributed, or otherwise dealt with as if that person had survived the other. This rule, in effect, establishes a presumption that the person whose property is to be distributed survived the person to whom the property is to be distributed. It avoids double administration and taxation of property in the estates of persons who derive no actual benefit from or use of the property.

[c] Reversing Statutory Presumption

Under some circumstances, it may be advantageous to reverse the statutory presumption and treat the property of one of the persons as if that person had died first, so that the property will pass through the estate of the other decedent before it is distributed to the ultimate beneficiaries. This kind of treatment can be desirable when one of the spouses has a substantially larger estate than the other and the two estates can be "equalized" for estate tax purposes by distributing some of all of the estate of the spouse with the larger estate to the spouse with the smaller estate. For a more detailed discussion of the circumstances under which it can be advantageous to "equalize" estates by "reversing" the presumption established by Probate Code Section 220, see Section 70.12[8][c].

§ 70.290 Signature Block for Trust Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a signature block suitable for use in an inter vivos trust instrument that is drafted as a trust agreement rather than a declaration of trust. It should be used in conjunction with § 70.220[2], which contains the corresponding introductory language for a trust agreement. The complete trust forms in this chapter are drafted as declarations of trust rather than trust agreements. For discussion of the differences between a declaration of trust and a trust agreement, and the reasons why declarations of trust may be preferable under current law, see § 70.220[1]; see also § 70.11[3].

The minimum requirements for execution of an inter vivos trust are much less formal than those applicable to wills. There are no complex witness or signature requirements. Ordinarily the signature of the parties is all that is required.

When the settlors are also trustees, drafting practices with respect to the signatures of the parties vary. Some attorneys have the settlor(s) sign twice, once as settlor(s) and a second time as trustee(s). The rationale for this approach is that it emphasizes to the client the legal distinction between these two roles. Other attorneys prefer to have the settlor-trustee(s) sign only once, feeling that the duplicated signature is redundant. Ultimately the choice boils down to personal preference. This form illustrates the dual signature format. If desired, it may be modified to provide for a single signature as both settlors and trustees.

The signature blocks for corporate trustees provide space for two signatures of corporate representatives. Many corporate trustees insist on two signatures.

There is no legal requirement that a declaration of trust be acknowledged before a notary public [see Civ. Code § 1217 (unrecorded instrument valid as between parties and persons with knowledge of instrument); see also Civ. Code §§ 1180-1207(acknowledgment and proof of execution of instruments)]. However, acknowledgment or other certified proof of execution is necessary if the instrument is ever to be recorded [see Gov. Code § 27287; see also § 70.13[2]]. In addition, acknowledgment may help to authenticate the signatures of the parties. For these reasons, acknowledgment is recommended.

This chapter discusses the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056] and "marital deduction trusts"--that is, trusts that are specifically designed to qualify for the marital deduction. Both testamentary and inter vivos ("living") trusts may be marital deduction trusts. An inter vivos marital deduction trust may be created jointly by a husband and wife, or by one of the spouses as sole settlor.

This chapter explains the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], the unified credit [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505 (gift tax)], marital deduction trusts, bypass trusts, and "qualified domestic trusts" for noncitizens [see I.R.C. § 2056A]. It explains how the marital deduction and the unified credit may be used together to optimize estate tax savings in the combined estates of a married couple.

Complete marital deduction trusts are located in other chapters. Wills containing complete testamentary marital deduction trusts are located in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms . Complete inter vivos marital deduction trusts are located in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms . The forms in this chapter are designed to augment those complete forms, and to illustrate alternative drafting approaches.

For general coverage of basic estate planning principles, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning . For general coverage of testamentary trusts, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions , Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions , and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts, Administrative Provisions . CHAPTER 71 MARITAL DEDUCTION TRUST PROVISIONS

26-71 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 71.10

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 71.10 The Marital Deduction

The federal estate and gift tax laws allow a deduction for qualifying transfers from one spouse to the other [I.R.C. §§ 2056 (estate tax), 2523 (gift tax); see [3], below, for the basic rules regarding qualifying transfers]. In the case of the estate tax, the law allows a deduction from the gross taxable estate equal to the value of any property interest that passes from a decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse in a qualifying manner [I.R.C. § 2056(a)]. In the case of the gift tax, the law allows a deduction, in computing taxable gifts, during each calendar year, equal to the full value of any property interest transferred to the donor's spouse by a qualifying gift during that year [I.R.C. § 2523(a)]. These deductions are universally referred to, individually and collectively, as the "marital deduction."

The purpose of the marital deduction is to treat a husband and wife as a single unit for computing estate taxation. Any assets not taxed in a decedent's estate are taxable in the surviving spouse's estate under I.R.C. § 2044 [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1297 fn. 1].

Since 1981, the marital deduction has been "unlimited" [see [2], below]. That is, it has not been capped by any dollar amount or percentage. The unlimited marital deduction allows a husband and wife to transfer any amount of property between themselves without incurring any gift or estate tax liability. In its present unlimited form, the marital deduction reflects the policy of Congress that transfers of property between a husband and wife should be free of transfer taxes.

[2] Pre-1982 Law

The marital deduction was first enacted as part of the Revenue Act of 1948. Its original purpose was to equalize the estate and gift tax treatment of property owned by married persons in common law and community property states. In community property states, property acquired during marriage is owned by the spouses in equal shares and, when one spouse dies, one half of the community property is included in the deceased spouse's estate. In common law states, property acquired during marriage is owned by the spouse in whose name the property is titled. When such a spouse dies, all of the property is subject to inclusion in the deceased spouse's estate.

To equalize this disparity, the original marital deduction permitted the deduction of up to one half of the "adjusted gross estate" on the death of the deceased spouse. The "adjusted gross estate" was determined by first valuing the decedent's gross estate and then deducting the value of any community property included in that estate. Thus, the marital deduction afforded little or no benefit to residents of community property states.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 enhanced the marital deduction by permitting the deduction of one half of the gross estate or $250,000, whichever was greater. The effect of this change was to permit full deduction of transfers to a spouse up to $250,000, and one-half over $250,000.

In 1981, the $250,000 limit was abolished for the estates of all decedents dying after December 31, 1981. The 1981 change resulted in the current unlimited marital deduction. This deduction provides a substantial benefit to all married persons, including those who reside in community property states. The discussion in this chapter is all based on the law applicable to decedents dying after December 31, 1981.

[3] Requirements

[a] Estate Tax

Under current law, a transfer of property from a deceased person to the deceased person's spouse will qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction if all of the following requirements are satisfied:

- The deceased person is survived by his or her spouse [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(a)-1(b)(i)];
- With limited exceptions, the surviving spouse is a citizen of the United States [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(1)]; see I.R.C. § 2056A (qualified domestic trust) and [5][b], below];
- The property "passes" to the surviving spouse, either by will, operation of law, disclaimer, inter vivos trust, or contract [I.R.C. § 2056(a), (c); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-1];
- The value of the property is included in the deceased spouse's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2056(a)]; and
- The property does not pass in the form of a nondeductible "terminable interest" [I.R.C. § 2056(a), (b)]; see [4], below].

[b] Gift Tax

A transfer of property from a living person to that person's spouse will qualify for the federal gift tax marital deduction if all of the following requirements are satisfied [I.R.C. § 2523(a), (b)]:

- The gift is completed during the calendar year for which the deduction is sought;
- The donee is the spouse of the donor at the time the gift is made; and
- The gift does not take the form of a nondeductible "terminable interest" [see [4], below].

[4] Terminable Interest Rule

[a] General Rule

A transfer will not qualify for the marital deduction for either estate or gift tax purposes if property passes or is transferred in the form of a nondeductible "terminable interest" [I.R.C. §§ 2056(a), (b) (estate tax), 2523(a), (b) (gift tax)]. For purposes of this rule, a "terminable interest" is generally an interest that will terminate or fail on the lapse of time or the occurrence or nonoccurrence of some contingency [I.R.C. §§ 2056(b), 2523(b); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b)]. A terminable interest is nondeductible if another interest in the same property passes from the deceased spouse to some other person for less than an adequate and full consideration and, on termination or failure of the surviving spouse's interest, the other person (or the other person's heirs) may possess or enjoy any part of the property [I.R.C. §§ 2056(b), 2523(b); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(c)].

Life estates, estates for years, and annuities are all terminable interests [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b)]. Copyrights and patents are also terminable interests, since they terminate on the lapse of time [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b)]. However, bonds, notes, or similar contractual obligations, the discharge of which would not have the effect of an annuity or term for years, are not terminable interests [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b)].

Whether an interest fails to qualify for the marital deduction because it is a terminable interest is determined by reference to the property interest that actually passed from the decedent. Subsequent conversions of the property are immaterial. For example, if a decedent bequeaths his or her estate to his or her spouse for life with a remainder to their children, the interest that passes to the spouse is a nondeductible, terminable interest, even if the spouse agrees with the children to take a fractional share of the estate in fee in place of the life interest, sells the life estate for cash, or acquires the children's remainder interest by purchase or gift [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(e)(3)].

No marital deduction is allowed for a property interest that the decedent directs his or her executor or trustee to convert after the decedent's death into a terminable interest for his or her surviving spouse [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(f)].

The terminable interest rule is subject to important exceptions [see [b]-[e], below]. Understanding these exceptions, and making proper use of them in wills and trusts, is the one of the most important functions of the estate planner.

[b] Interest Conditioned on Survival for Limited Time

An interest passing to a spouse is not nondeductible merely because it will terminate if the surviving spouse dies within six months after the deceased spouse's death, or as a result of a common disaster that also results in the deceased spouse's death, providing the spouse does not in fact die under those conditions [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-1(d)(1), 20.2056(b)-3]. This exception permits gifts and devises to a spouse to be conditioned on survival for up to six months. For further discussion of survivorship conditions in wills and trusts, see CALIFORNIA WILLS AND TRUSTS, Ch. 24, Devises--General Considerations, § 24.03[6], and CALIFORNIA WILLS AND TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, § 112.06[4] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Life Estate Plus Power of Appointment

A lifetime interest in property that passes to a surviving spouse is not a nondeductible terminable interest if the surviving spouse is given a general power of appointment over the property in addition to the right to receive all of the income from the property for life [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. A power of appointment is a general power of appointment for this purpose if it can be exercised in favor of the surviving spouse and/or the surviving spouse's estate, whether or not it is also exercisable in favor of others [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see Civ. Code § 1381.2(a) (definition of "general" power of appointment)]. This exception to the terminable interest rule has given rise to one of the most popular forms of marital deduction trusts, the so-called "lifetime income/power of appointment trust," which is discussed in detail in § 71.13[5].

[d] Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP)

A lifetime interest in property that passes to a surviving spouse is not a nondeductible terminable interest if [I.R.C. §

2056(b)(7)]:

- The surviving spouse is given the right to receive all of the income from the property, payable at least annually;
- No person has a power to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the surviving spouse during the surviving spouse's lifetime; and
- The deceased spouse's executor elects to treat the property on the deceased spouse's estate tax return as "qualified terminable interest property."

This exception to the terminable interest rule has given rise to another widely used type of marital deduction trust, the so-called "QTIP trust." For a detailed discussion of QTIP trusts, see § 71.13[4].

[e] Life Estate Plus Charitable Remainder

A lifetime interest in property that passes to a surviving spouse in trust is not a nondeductible terminable interest if the surviving spouse is the only beneficiary who is not a charitable beneficiary or an ESOP beneficiary and the remainder interest passes to a charity in the form of a charitable remainder trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(8); see I.R.C. §§ 170(c) ("charitable contribution" defined), 664 (charitable remainder annuity trusts and unitrusts)]. The surviving spouse's interest need not be an interest for life to qualify for the marital deduction; however, for purposes of I.R.C. § 664, an annuity or unitrust interest payable to a spouse for a term of years cannot be payable for a term that exceeds 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(a)(2)]. The marital deduction is allowed even if the transfer to the surviving spouse is conditioned on the spouse's payment of state death taxes, if any, attributable to the qualified charitable remainder trust [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(a)(3)].

If an interest in property qualifies for a marital deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(8), no election may be made with respect to the property under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) (QTIP election) [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(a)(1)]. However, in the case of a charitable remainder trust when the decedent's spouse is not the only noncharitable beneficiary, e.g., when the noncharitable interest is payable to the spouse for life and then to another individual for life, the qualification of the interest as qualified terminable interest property is determined solely under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) and not under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(8) [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(b)].

For more detailed discussion of charitable remainder trusts, see Ch. 74, Split-Interest Charitable Trusts. For discussion of planning and drafting options for marital deduction trusts having a charitable remainder beneficiary, see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, § 112.05[6] (Matthew Bender).

[5] Transfers to Noncitizen Spouses

[a] Marital Deduction Generally Unavailable

The marital deduction generally is available only for transfers of property to United States citizens. If the spouse of a transferor or decedent is not a United States citizen, transfers of property to the spouse will not qualify for the marital deduction [I.R.C. §§ 2056(d)(1) (estate tax), 2523(i)(1) (gift tax)].

However, the Internal Revenue Code contains special provisions designed to compensate for the loss of the deduction in these circumstances. First, a significantly greater annual exclusion is allowed for gifts to a non-citizen spouse [see I.R.C. § 2523(i) (base annual exclusion amount is $100,000, with upward adjustments for inflation for gifts made in calendar years after 1998)]. Second, if estate taxes are paid in the estate of the deceased spouse on property that passes to a non-citizen spouse, a credit will be allowed in the estate of the non-citizen spouse for the amount of the taxes [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(3); see I.R.C. § 2013 (credit for death taxes paid on previous transfers)]. This credit is available regardless of the length of time that has elapsed between the deaths of the two spouses.

[b] Exceptions

Notwithstanding the general rule discussed in [a], above, there are two circumstances under which transfers to noncitizen spouses are eligible for the marital deduction. First, the deduction will be available if the noncitizen spouse becomes a United States citizen before the date on which the estate tax return is filed in the deceased spouse's estate [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(4)]. However, the non-citizen spouse must have been a resident of the United States at all times after the deceased spouse's death and before becoming a citizen [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(4)]. This exception will likely help only persons who began the naturalization process before the death of the deceased spouse.

Second, the deduction will be available if the property is transferred to the non-citizen spouse in the form of a "qualified domestic trust," commonly called a "QDOT" [I.R.C. §§ 2056(d)(2)(A), 2056A]. The requirements for QDOTs are detailed and specific, and are designed to ensure that the noncitizen spouse cannot remove assets from the trust with the idea of taking them out of the country to avoid taxation. In many cases, creation of a QDOT may be the only practical alternative to substantial tax liability when one of the spouses is a noncitizen. The QDOT requirements are discussed in § 71.13[7].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-71 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 71.11

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 71.11 Marital Deduction Planning

[1] Coordination of Tax and Nontax Goals

Both tax and nontax goals should be kept in mind whenever an estate is planned, a will is drafted, or a trust is established. Although tax-saving goals may play an important role in determining how a client's estate should be disposed of, they should always be balanced against nontax considerations. If tax goals are inconsistent with the client's nontax goals, the relative importance of the two should be considered carefully. The ideal estate plan will coordinate tax and nontax considerations in a manner that will give effect to the client's wishes in the least expensive manner possible.

[2] Threshold Estate Value for Marital Deduction Planning

If the combined value of a married couple's two estates does not exceed the amount necessary to generate estate taxes, tax goals ordinarily will play no role in planning their estates. No tax will be due if the combined value of the two estates does not exceed the "applicable exclusion amount" that is available in the year of the second spouse's death [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] (exclusion amount is $675,000 for decedents dying in 2001, $1 million for decedents dying in 2002 and 2003, $1.5 million for decedents dying in 2004 and 2005, $2 million for decedents dying in 2006, 2007, and 2008, and $3.5 million for decedents dying in 2009), and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]], provided the couple has not made any taxable gifts during their lifetimes [see Ch. 60A, Gifts , for discussion of the federal gift tax]. If the combined value of their estates is less than that amount, the two estates will be fully protected by the unified credit against estate and gift taxes [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505]. If the combined value of the two estates exceeds the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the second spouse's death, however, there is a potential for estate tax liability. When this appears to be a possibility, tax-saving opportunities should be evaluated and considered in developing the client's estate plan.

In determining whether tax planning is necessary, the possibility that the combined value of the clients' estates will grow before the second spouse dies must be considered. The increasing estate tax unified credit [I.R.C. § 2010(c)] and scheduled repeal of the estate tax must also be taken into account [I.R.C. § 2210(a); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A for a detailed discussion regarding the estate tax repeal]. Many clients consult their lawyers only infrequently regarding estate planning matters. If there is a reasonable likelihood that the clients' combined estates will eventually exceed the amount that can be sheltered by the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the second spouse's death, it will be prudent to develop an estate plan in advance to accommodate the possibility.

It is usually impossible, of course, to predict with any degree of certainty the exact year in which the surviving spouse's death will occur. The increase in the "applicable credit amount" described above may be enough to wholly or partially offset any anticipated appreciation in the value of many small or moderately-sized estates during the phase-in period. However, the practitioner should not automatically assume that this will be the case. Unanticipated inflation or appreciation of assets, among other factors, may wholly or partially negate the effect of the increase in the "applicable credit amount." Therefore, if the value of the combined estates is close to the amount of the "applicable credit amount" available at the time the estate plan is being developed, or there appears to be any possibility of a significant increase in the future (such as by inheritance, for example), prudence strongly suggests that attention be given to tax planning.

Avoiding estate planning because of the scheduled repeal of the estate tax for decedents dying after 2009 [see I.R.C. § 2210(a)] is also unwise. This is because, under a sunset provision of the 2001 legislation, the repeal of the estate tax does not apply to estates of decedents dying, gifts made, or generation-skipping transfers, after December 31, 2010 [Pub. Law 107-16, § 901]. Thus, unless the provision repealing the estate tax is re-enacted before 2010, the estate tax law that was in effect before enactment of the 2001 legislation (including the 55 percent maximum estate tax rate) will once again apply after 2010 [see Pub. Law 107-16, § 901; I.R.C. § 2001, before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16]. Most commentators feel that significant changes will be made to the estate tax law before 2010. For additional discussion of the repeal of the estate tax, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A.

PRACTICE TIP:

When the combined estates of a married couple currently are less than the "applicable exclusion amount" that is likely to be available in the year of the second spouse's death [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)], but it appears that growth may cause the total value to exceed that amount by the death of the surviving spouse, flexibility is required. If the documents mandate a plan that would make sense only if tax planning were important, then failure of the estates to grow to more than the "applicable exclusion amount" could result in the creation of an impractical plan that is cumbersome and expensive to administer. Indeed, this could also be the case when the amount of taxes being faced is so small in contrast to the administrative burdens imposed that one would ordinarily prefer to pay the tax and utilize a plan that is simpler to administer. Conversely, ignoring the possibility of the future need for tax planning could be disastrous, and could result in a malpractice claim against the estate planner.

In these circumstances, the estate planner should give careful consideration to disclaimer planning. This will allow the surviving spouse (and the fiduciaries appointed by the deceased spouse) to engage in postmortem tax planning that will take into account the situation as it actually exists at the death of the first spouse to die. This could occur decades after the estate planning documents were drafted. For discussion of disclaimer trusts and their role in estate planning, see § 71.16. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[3] Coordination of Marital Deduction and Unified Credit

[a] General Principles

Due to the unlimited marital deduction [see § 71.10[1]], when one spouse dies it is possible to avoid paying any estate tax simply by transferring all the deceased spouse's property to the surviving spouse in a manner that qualifies for the marital deduction. This will protect the surviving spouse by giving the survivor the full benefit of the decedent's property without any corresponding tax burden, and, in the case of an outright distribution, without any restrictions whatsoever on the survivor's use of the assets. However, such a transfer often will increase the tax burden in the estate of the surviving spouse. This means that a smaller portion of the couple's total estate ultimately will pass to their children, issue, or other beneficiaries. For an illustration of this principle, see the example in [b], below.

The goal of many estate plans is to minimize overall combined tax liability in the estates of both spouses. This goal is accomplished by coordinating the marital deduction with the "applicable exclusion amounts" available in the estates of both spouses to shelter as much property as possible from taxation on the surviving spouse's death. If the deceased spouse does not transfer all his or her property to the surviving spouse in a manner that qualifies for the marital deduction, but instead transfers enough of that property to the surviving spouse in a manner that takes full advantage of the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the deceased spouse's death [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]], a significant tax saving may be achieved. The example in [b], below, illustrates the advantages of this type of planning.

PRACTICE TIP:

In fact, in order to fully minimize taxes (or at least have the best chance of doing so), the estate planner traditionally has wanted to create a plan that would tend to equalize the size of each spouse's taxable estate. In this way, each spouse's estate would take advantage of the lowest available estate tax brackets, and each estate would end up in the same marginal bracket (or, at least, would be only one marginal bracket apart). However, in many cases this would require that some estate tax be paid at the first death. In other words, the surviving spouse would not have all of the couple's assets available to himself or herself, because some of those assets would be used to pay estate taxes. Thus, while this sort of plan may result in the lowest total estate tax bill, it is usually quite difficult to convince clients of the wisdom of such a plan. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

With the gradually increasing estate tax unified credit (which increases from $675,000 for decedents dying in 2001 to $3.5 million for decedent dying in 2009) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)], and the scheduled repeal of the estate tax for decedents dying after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2210(a); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A, for a detailed discussion], equalizing the value of estates of spouses may be counter-productive. The best result in any given case, unfortunately, may depend on the particular year the spouses die, and planning around date-of-death events cannot be done with any likelihood of accuracy.

A transfer of property will take full advantage of the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the deceased spouse's death if it is transferred outright to the children or other ultimate beneficiaries, or if the property is placed in a trust with those persons as remainder beneficiaries. A trust that accomplishes this goal is known as a "bypass" (or "credit shelter") trust, and may be structured to give the surviving spouse the right to receive all of the trust income (and even some of the trust principal) during his or her lifetime while requiring that the remainder be distributed to other beneficiaries on the death of the surviving spouse. If the bypass trust is properly planned and drafted, no part of the trust assets will be included in the estate of the surviving spouse for estate tax purposes. For more detailed discussion of bypass trusts, see § 71.14.

[b] Example Illustrating Tax Savings

The advantages of coordinating the marital deduction and unified credit can best be illustrated by an example. For purposes of this example, assume that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have a combined estate valued at $3,000,000, all of which is community property. Assume further that Mr. Wilson dies before Mrs. Wilson.

If Mr. Wilson leaves all of his property to Mrs. Wilson in a manner that qualifies for the marital deduction, no estate tax will be due in the estate of Mr. Wilson. However, estate tax will be due in the estate of Mrs. Wilson. Assuming that the value of the combined estates does not change between the two deaths, than if Mrs. Wilson dies in 2003, $3,000,000 will be included in her estate. Assuming that the "applicable exclusion amount" is then $1 million [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]], $ 1 million worth of property will be sheltered from taxation and the remaining $ 2 million will be subject to estate tax. The tax on this estate would be $945,000 [see I.R.C. §§ 2001(c), 2010].

If, however, Mr. Wilson leaves only $500,000 to Mrs. Wilson in a manner that qualifies for the marital deduction, and if he places the remaining $1 million in his estate in a bypass trust, then when Mrs. Wilson dies only $2 million will be included in her estate (again assuming no change in the value of the property between the two deaths). Of this $2 million, $1 million will be sheltered from estate tax under the "applicable exclusion amount" available in Mrs. Wilson's estate and $1 million will actually be subject to estate tax. Mrs. Wilson's estate would generate an estate tax of $445,000 [see I.R.C. § 2001(c)]. The bypass trust would have saved $500,000 in estate taxes in the combined estates of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

[4] Practical Considerations

As noted in [1], above, the development of an estate plan for a specific client requires balancing that client's dispositive wishes with the potential tax liability. In the context of marital deduction planning, married persons often want to leave everything to one another, with their children and/or grandchildren receiving whatever is left over. The simplest method to effect such a plan is simply to leave everything outright to the surviving spouse. However, as indicated in [3][b], above, this approach may cause a greater portion of the surviving settlor's estate to be consumed in taxes than would be the case if more rigorous tax planning measures were implemented. With the gradually increasing estate tax unified credit (which increases from $675,000 for decedents dying in 2001 to $3.5 million for decedent dying in 2009) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)], and the scheduled repeal of the estate tax for decedents dying after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2210(a); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12A, for a detailed discussion], however, leaving everything to a healthy surviving spouse may yield the best tax result, at least for estates that do not exceed the applicable exclusion amount.

Conversely, the use of a bypass trust (or other planning equivalent) to achieve tax savings requires that the surviving spouse give up a degree of control over a portion of the couple's assets, in order to assure that those assets will not be included in the survivor's estate. Although the remaining control that the surviving spouse can still exercise is substantial, it is not absolute [for discussion of permissible extent of the surviving spouse's control over a bypass trust, see § 71.14[2]]. Thus, in many cases, a key aspect of the planning process will entail balancing the desire to give the survivor absolute control over the trust assets against the need to impose limits on that control for tax planning purposes. It is probably safe to say that in the majority of cases, the limitations that must be imposed for tax purposes will not be a significant impediment to the survivor's reasonable day-to-day use of the assets. However, in some cases clients may express a strong preference to "keep it simple," or simply be unconcerned about what happens after their deaths as long as they have unrestricted powers over their property during their lifetimes. In these situations, a simple marital deduction gift of all the decedent's property to the survivor may be the only alternative.

The size of the estate is the key variable that should be considered. If the estate is barely over the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]], which represents the threshold for potential estate tax liability [see [2], above], the actual dollar savings that can be achieved by the type of coordinated planning discussed in [3], above, may be minimal, and the client may not deem it important enough to merit a complicated plan involving a bypass trust. As the size of the estate increases, however, the potential tax savings also increase, and the value of coordinated marital deduction planning increases as well.

PRACTICE TIP:

One must always consider the expenses and other deductions that may serve to bring an estate below (or barely above) the applicable exclusion amount. If potential deductions are not considered, it is possible for the planner to suggest a plan that, in the actual circumstances, may prove more complicated (and more difficult and expensive to administer) than is necessary or appropriate. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[1] In General

The example in § 71.11[2][b] illustrates that in order to achieve the tax savings available through coordination of the marital deduction and the unified credit, it may be necessary to divide a decedent's estate into a portion that is intended to qualify for the marital deduction, and a second portion that is intended to pass under the decedent's unified credit (in other words, to the bypass trust or outright to some beneficiary or beneficiaries other than the surviving spouse). In this chapter, these two portions are referred to as the "marital deduction share" and the "nonmarital share," respectively.

The marital deduction share may either be given outright to the surviving spouse or placed in a marital deduction trust [ see § 71.13]. The nonmarital share may either be given outright to persons other than the surviving spouse, or may be placed in a "bypass" ("credit shelter") trust that provides lifetime benefits to the surviving spouse and/or other persons and a remainder interest in favor of persons other than the surviving spouse [ see § 71.14]. In the testamentary trust context, a typical "two-trust" marital deduction estate plan calls for the creation of a marital deduction trust and a bypass trust [see, e.g., the forms in §§ 61.213[2], 61.214[2]].

[2] Division of Revocable Trust

When a married person, or two married persons as joint settlors, create a revocable trust, there is no need for an immediate allocation of trust assets to marital and nonmarital shares. That need arises only on the death of the settlor, or, in the case of a two-settlor trust, on the death of the first settlor to die. Thus, revocable marital deduction trusts typically establish only a single trust until the death of the settlor (or first settlor, in the case of a two-settlor trust), and contain provisions specifying the manner in which the trust assets will be divided and allocated on the settlor's (or first settlor's) death.

If the trust was created by one married settlor acting alone, the trust will be divided into marital and nonmarital shares on the settlor's death (assuming the settlor's spouse survives the settlor). The division typically results in the creation of a marital deduction trust and a bypass trust under an arrangement similar to that used in a testamentary trust. For an example of a complete trust containing these features, see the form in § 70.203[2] in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms.

If the trust was created by two married settlors acting jointly, a more complex division is required. In addition to the marital and nonmarital shares, a third share may be necessary to accommodate the survivor's portion of any community property held in the trust, as well as the survivor's interest in any of his or her own separate and quasi-community property held in the trust. This share is referred to in this chapter as the "survivor's share," and is usually retained in a "survivor's trust" over which the survivor retains broad powers, including a continuing power of revocation [ see § 71.15]. Thus, on the death of the first spouse, a revocable trust created by joint settlors typically is divided into at least three trusts: a survivor's trust, a marital deduction trust, and a bypass trust. When a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is used, the marital deduction assets can be combined with the survivor's assets under some circumstances [ see § 71.15[4]].

[3] Marital Deduction Formulas

[a] Advantage to Use of Formulas

Estates can be divided into marital and nonmarital shares in various ways. For example, the client can simply leave some specific assets to his or her surviving spouse and other property to other beneficiaries. Alternatively, the client can assign arbitrary dollar values to the two shares; providing, for example, that $600,000 worth of property (or $625,000, or $650,000, or any other fixed amount) will be left in such a way that it will escape taxation in the estate of the surviving spouse and the balance of the property will be left to the surviving spouse, either outright or in trust.

These approaches are inflexible, however, and often will not achieve the best tax results. It is usually better to provide for the division of the estate according to a formula. Formulas of this kind are commonly described as "marital deduction formulas." A properly drafted formula clause will allocate the client's property between the marital and nonmarital shares in a manner that will provide maximum flexibility and achieve the most favorable tax treatment consistent with the client's other estate planning goals.

Marital deduction formulas are generally classified as "pecuniary" formulas [ see [b], below ] or "fractional" formulas [ see [c], below ].

[b] Pecuniary Formula

A pecuniary formula clause allocates assets to the marital or nonmarital share, up to a dollar amount determined by the formula. Commonly-used language, which has been adopted for the pecuniary formula clauses in this publication, requires funding up to "the minimum amount necessary to eliminate federal estate tax at the death of the deceased settlor" [ see the forms in §§ 71.200-71.203 (inter vivos trusts), 71.210, 71.211 (testamentary trusts)]. The clause can allocate the formula amount to either the marital deduction share (a "pecuniary marital deduction formula") [ see §§ 71.200, 71.201 (inter vivos trusts), 71.210 (testamentary trusts)] or the nonmarital share (a "pecuniary bypass formula") [ see §§ 71.202, 71.203 (inter vivos trusts), 71.211 (testamentary trusts)]. If the pecuniary amount is allocated to the marital deduction share, the rest of the property will be allocated to the nonmarital deduction share. Conversely, if the pecuniary amount is allocated to the nonmarital deduction share, the residue will be allocated to the marital deduction share.

Pecuniary formula clauses enjoy wide popularity among estate planners. They avoid the administrative headaches commonly encountered when individual assets are divided between the two shares according to a fractional formula clause [ see [c], below ]. They also give the executor or trustee discretion to select the specific assets that will be used to fund the respective shares (subject to limitations designed to promote fairness in the allocation [ see Rev. Proc. 64-19, 1964-1 C.B. 682 ]). After the client's death, the executor or trustee can determine which assets are most suitable for allocation to the two shares. The executor or trustee can also decide whether it would be advantageous to allocate assets with a good potential for future appreciation to the marital deduction share or the nonmarital deduction share. Overall estate tax liability will often be reduced if assets with a good potential for future appreciation are allocated to the nonmarital deduction share, since this share will escape estate taxation when the surviving spouse dies while the marital deduction share will be subject to estate taxation at that time. For additional discussion, see §§ 71.200[1][g], 71.220[1][b] (valuation issues); see also CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, § 112.03[6] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Fractional Formula

A fractional formula clause divides each asset subject to the formula into fractional shares, and specifies that the marital deduction share will consist of the smallest fractional share of the assets necessary to eliminate estate taxes in the client's estate (or reduce those taxes to the maximum extent possible) [ see §§ 71.204, 71.205 (inter vivos trusts), 71.212 (testamentary trusts)]. Because each share receives a fractional interest in each asset, fractional formula clauses do not create the funding or valuation problems that can arise when estates are divided according to pecuniary formula clauses. Both the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share receive interests in the same assets, and no beneficiary can claim that another beneficiary got "better" assets. However, fractional formula clauses require the different beneficiaries to become co-owners of each asset, and do not give the executor or trustee any discretion to determine which assets should be allocated to each share. This can cause difficulties in administration. For this reason, fractional formula clauses are used less frequently than pecuniary formula clauses.

[1] In General

Any trust that is designed to qualify for the marital deduction may be described as a "marital deduction trust." A marital deduction trust may be either an inter vivos trust [ see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trusts ] or a testamentary trust [ see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions , Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions , Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions ; see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms ]. Although a gift does not have to be made in trust to qualify for the marital deduction [ see § 71.10[3] (marital deduction requirements)], trusts are flexible and adaptable devices and are very widely used as the vehicles for making marital deduction gifts.

When a marital deduction gift is made in trust, it may accomplish other goals besides qualifying for the marital deduction. A trust permits the settlor to maintain control over the trust property by specifying the terms and conditions under which the trust will be administered and the trust property will be distributed. A trust also permits the settlor to divide the benefits of the trust property among two or more generations of beneficiaries. Trusts also give the beneficiaries the benefits of property management. If the surviving spouse cannot or does not wish to personally manage the trust property, some other person (or even a professional trustee such as a bank or trust company) can be selected to do so for the surviving spouse. This will be particularly desirable if the surviving spouse is disabled or aged. For additional discussion of the uses and advantages of trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[3], [4].

[2] Formula Versus Nonformula Trusts

A marital deduction trust may simply provide that all assets will be held in trust for the surviving spouse on the death of the first spouse, or it may divide the trust assets into marital and nonmarital shares by means of a formula [ see § 71.12[3] for discussion of marital deduction formulas]. A marital deduction trust that does not use a formula is often referred to as a "nonformula trust." Nonformula trusts are often used when the size of the estate is not substantial enough to generate significant estate tax liability, or when the spouses are willing to incur additional taxes in the survivor's estate as a tradeoff for giving the surviving spouse a greater degree of control over the trust assets during his or her lifetime. For additional discussion of these planning considerations, see § 71.11[4]. For a complete nonformula marital deduction trust, see the form in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.201[2].

In contrast, a "formula" marital deduction trust uses a marital deduction formula to divide the trust assets into marital and nonmarital shares on the death of the first settlor [for additional discussion of marital deduction formulas, see § 71.12[3]]. Formula marital deduction trusts generally are the most effective vehicles for reducing the overall federal estate tax in the estates of both spouses [see § 71.12[3][b] for an example of the tax savings that can be achieved by use of formula]. For examples of complete marital deduction formula trusts, see the forms in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, §§ 70.202[2] (trust created by joint settlors), 70.203[2] (trust created by sole married settlor).

[3] Effect of Terminable Interest Requirements

A life interest in a decedent's spouse is a "terminable interest" for purposes of the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(g), Ex. 1; see also § 71.10[4]]. Thus, a marital deduction trust that provides for a life interest in the surviving spouse and a remainder in favor of someone else will not qualify for the marital deduction unless it qualifies as one of the types of "terminable interests" for which a marital deduction is specifically allowed [see § 71.10[4]]. Four general types of marital deduction trusts that comply with those requirements are widely used by estate planners. Those types are discussed in [4] through [7], below.

[4] Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust

Although property passing from a decedent to a surviving spouse generally qualifies for a marital deduction from the federal estate tax under I.R.C. § 2056(a), terminable interests passing to the surviving spouse are not deductible unless they qualify for an exception under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1)]. Because the marital deduction is "strictly construed and applied," every condition for the exception must be met [see Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1298 fn. 2].

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust if it meets all of the following requirements [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]:

- The surviving spouse has the right to receive all of the income from the trust for life [see Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-7(d), 20.2056(b)-5(f) (income requirements for QTIP trusts); see also Estate of Whiting, T.C. Memo. 2004-68 (estate tax marital deduction for assets passing to marital deduction trust was permitted although trust document authorized trustee to withhold any otherwise required distributions to beneficiary if trustee determined that beneficiary was disabled because of age, illness, or other cause; because trust document as a whole did not permit trustee to withhold income distributions, marital trust qualified for deduction); Estate of Charles N. Aronson, T.C. Memo. 2003-189 (surviving spouse's interest in testamentary trust did not qualify for estate tax marital deduction as QTIP when will unambiguously stated that spouse was to receive only as much income from trust as she needed during her lifetime; it did not designate spouse as life beneficiary of trust or sole income beneficiary for life); I.R.S. Technical Advice Memorandum 200505022 (property that passes to QTIP trust does not qualify for estate tax marital deduction if will provides that distributions to surviving spouse are limited to specific purposes subject to trustee's approval; this interest is not unqualified right to receive all trust income); I.R.S. Technical Advice Memorandum 200444023 (trust does not qualify for marital deduction when extent to which trust income is to be paid to surviving spouse is within trustee's discretion); I.R.S. Technical Advice Memorandum 200339003 (trust for benefit of spouse that is funded, in part, with stock that has never paid dividends may still qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as QTIP)];
- The income is payable to the surviving spouse annually or at more frequent intervals;

- No person other than the surviving spouse has an interest in the trust principal during the surviving spouse's lifetime;
- No person has a power to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the surviving spouse except at or after the surviving spouse's death [see I.R.S. Technical Advice Memorandum, 200234017 (surviving spouse does not have qualifying income interest for life in trust for marital deduction purposes if spouse has power during life or at death to appoint trust income and principal to children or more remote descendants)]; and
- The executor or trustee makes an election on the estate tax return to qualify the trust property as QTIP property [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(b) (QTIP election requirements)].

Language in a marital deduction trust providing that if the income payable to the surviving spouse exceeded the amount the trustee deemed necessary for the surviving spouse's needs, best interests, and welfare, the trustee could accumulate the excess amount, was held to be sufficiently broad to entitle the surviving spouse "to all the income from the property for life" under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii) [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1298]. However, other language, such as "necessary or proper to provide for the surviving spouse's care, maintenance, and support" or "for the surviving spouse's usual and customary standard of living," does not comply with I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) because reformation of the instrument creating the interest would be required to grant the QTIP deduction [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1298-1299 (trust that gives surviving children discretion to distribute income to provide for surviving spouse's "health, education, and support" is insufficient for QTIP purposes)]. Such language in the trust instrument will make the surviving spouse's life estate in the trust too restricted to qualify for the QTIP election even if the surviving spouse is the sole trustee, because it is possible that the surviving spouse will not remain as trustee until his or her death [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1300-1302 (possibility, however remote, that surviving spouse might resign or become incapacitated prevents provision naming surviving spouse as trustee from automatically qualifying otherwise deficient trust for marital deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7))].

When a decedent chooses to limit the degree of control the surviving spouse will have over the income from terminable interest property, the decedent also precludes the possibility that his or her estate may claim a QTIP deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1299]. A marital deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) is available only if the decedent gives the surviving spouse complete control over the income from a property for life. If the surviving spouse's interest in the property income is limited and, therefore, cannot be equated with virtual ownership, the estate may not claim a marital deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1299]. A surviving spouse's complete control of trust income sufficient to qualify for the marital deduction is not defeated by allowances for trust administration provided in the statute and regulations [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1299 fn. 6].

In determining whether an interest that passes in a trust to a surviving spouse qualifies for a QTIP deduction under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7), a court first looks to state law to determine the nature and extent of the property interest granted to the surviving spouse, then to federal law to determine whether these property rights are ultimately subject to taxation [United States v. Craft (2002) 535 U.S. 274, 278, 122 S. Ct. 1414, 152 L.Ed.2d 437; Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1299].

An income interest for a term of years, or a life estate subject to termination on the occurrence of a specified event (e.g., remarriage), is not a qualifying income interest for life [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(3)]. An income interest in a trust does not fail to constitute a qualifying income interest for life merely because the trustee has the power to distribute principal to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(6)].

The QTIP trust is the most widely used type of marital deduction trust. It gives the surviving spouse a high degree of enjoyment and use of the trust property, while permitting the settlor(s) to determine in advance who will receive the property on the surviving spouse's death. This can be particularly desirable if one or both of the spouses have children by previous marriages and wish to ensure that those children will receive the trust property after the death of the surviving spouse.

Further, when it comes time to elect to qualify the trust property as QTIP property, the executor or trustee may make a partial QTIP election [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(b)]. The option to make a partial election provides a great deal of flexibility in funding the trust after the deceased spouse's death.

A QTIP trust will not qualify for the marital deduction, however, unless the election is actually made. An inadvertent failure to make the election may disqualify the entire trust from the marital deduction. The QTIP election, once made, is irrevocable [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(v); see Letter Rul. 200323010 (miscalculation in value of property for which QTIP election was made on estate tax return did not preclude marital deduction for full value of property that would actually fund QTIP trust)].

For further discussion of QTIP trusts, and a sample set of dispositive provisions for a QTIP trust, see § 71.230.

[5] Lifetime Income Plus Power of Appointment Trust

Although property passing from a decedent to a surviving spouse generally qualifies for a marital deduction from the federal estate tax under I.R.C. § 2056(a), life estates passing to the surviving spouse are not deductible unless they qualify for an exception under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1)]. Because the marital deduction is "strictly construed and applied," every condition for the exception must be met [see Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1298 fn. 2].

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust if it meets all of the following requirements [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(a)]:

- The surviving spouse has the right to receive all of the income from the trust (or all the income from a "specific portion" of the trust) for life;
- The income is payable to the surviving spouse annually or at more frequent intervals;
- The surviving spouse has a general power of appointment over the trust assets (that is, the power to appoint the assets to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate, whether or not there is also a power to appoint the assets in favor of others); and
- No person other than the surviving spouse has any power to appoint any part of the assets to any person other than the surviving spouse.

The power to appoint the trust property on the death of the surviving spouse [see P (3), above] must be exercisable by the surviving spouse alone [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. The power must also be "exercisable in all events" [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(a)(4)]. This means that it cannot be subject to limitations such as remarriage [see Johnson v. Commissioner (1977) 36 T.C.M. (CCH) 539].

If either the right to income or the power of appointment passing to the surviving spouse pertains to only a "specific portion" of a property interest passing from the decedent, the marital deduction is allowed only to the extent that the rights in the surviving spouse meet all of the conditions described above [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(b)]. While the rights over the income and the power must coexist as to the same interest in property, there is no requirement that the rights over the income or the power as to the interest must be in the same proportion [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(b)].

However, if the rights over income extend over a smaller share of the property interest than the share with respect to which the power of appointment requirements are satisfied, then the deductible interest will be limited to the smaller share. Similarly, if the power of appointment extends to a smaller portion of the property interest than the portion over which the income rights pertain, the deductible interest cannot exceed the value of the portion to which the power of appointment applies [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(b)]. For example, if the decedent leaves to the surviving spouse the right to receive annually all of the income from a particular property interest, but a power of appointment as to only half of that interest, then only half of the property interest is treated as a deductible interest [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(b)].

If a trust is created during the decedent's lifetime, it is immaterial whether or not the interest passing in the trust satisfies the conditions for the marital deduction before the decedent's death [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(6)]. If the trust may be terminated during the life of the surviving spouse, under his or her exercise of a power of appointment or by distribution of the principal to him or her, the interest passing in trust satisfies the condition that the spouse be entitled to receive all of the income, as long as the surviving spouse is entitled to the income until the trust terminates or has the right, exercisable in all events, to have the principal distributed to him or her at any time during his or her life [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(6)].

An interest passing in trust fails to satisfy the requirement that the surviving spouse be entitled to all of the income, to the extent that: (1) the income is required to be accumulated in whole or in part, or may be accumulated in the discretion of any person other than the surviving spouse; (2) the consent of any person other than the surviving spouse is required as a condition precedent to distribution of the income; or (3) any person other than the surviving spouse has the power to alter the terms of the trust so as to deprive the spouse of his or her right to the income [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(7)]. An interest passing in trust will not fail to satisfy the requirement that the spouse be entitled to all of the income merely because its terms provide that the surviving spouse's right to the income is not subject to assignment, alienation, pledge, attachment, or creditors' claims [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056-5(f)(7)].

A decedent's estate was not entitled to a marital deduction for the property passing to a trust when language in the trust instrument directing the trustee to consider the surviving spouse's "accustomed manner of living" in making income distributions was a significant restriction that prevented the surviving spouse from having the requisite command over the income. In addition, the surviving spouse did not possess a general power of appointment over the trust property for purposes of I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) because the trust instrument provided that principal could only be invaded for the surviving spouse's health, support, and maintenance [ Estate of Ralph H. Davis, T.C. Memo. 2003-55 ; see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(8)].

Lifetime income/power of appointment trusts were the standard form of marital deduction trust before the advent of QTIP trusts, and these trusts remain in common use. Although most experienced planners prefer QTIP trusts because of the greater postmortem planing flexibility they offer, clients sometimes prefer lifetime income/power of appointment trusts because they give the surviving spouse a freer hand in disposing of the trust assets on his or her death. In a two-settlor revocable trust, the same effect is frequently accomplished by combining the marital deduction share with the survivor's trust [ see § 71.15[4]].

For further discussion of lifetime income/power of appointment trusts, and a sample set of dispositive provisions, see § 71.231.

[6] Estate Trust

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as an "estate trust" if all of the beneficial interests in the trust (both income and remainder) are left to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate [see Commissioner v. Estate of Ellis (3d Cir. [T.C.] 1958) 252 F.2d 109, 111-115 ; Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)]. The surviving spouse need not receive all of the income from the property, as long as the remainder is distributed to the surviving spouse's estate. Thus, an estate trust can give the trustee discretion to determine when and how much income should be paid to the surviving spouse.

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as an estate trust in any one of the following circumstances [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)(1)(i)-(iii)]:

- If the trust income is paid to the surviving spouse for life, and on the surviving spouse's death the trust assets are distributed to the surviving spouse's executor or administrator;
- If the trust income is paid to the surviving spouse for a period of years, after which the trust assets are distributed to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate; or
- The trust income is accumulated for a term of years or the surviving spouse's lifetime, and the augmented fund is paid to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate.

Most estate trusts call for income payments to the spouse for life, with remainder to the surviving spouse's executor or estate.

Estate trusts are relatively simple to draft. However, the trust assets will be subject to probate administration on the death of the surviving spouse. Further, the deceased spouse will have no control over the ultimate disposition of the assets, since they will pass on the surviving spouse's death as provided in the surviving spouse's will or, in the absence of a will, according to the laws of intestate succession. Estate trusts are inflexible arrangements and are only rarely used in modern estate planning.

For further discussion of estate trusts, and a sample trust remainder provision creating an estate trust, see § 71.232.

[7] Qualified Domestic Trust (QDOT)

[a] In General

Transfers of property to a spouse who is not a United States citizen generally do not qualify for the marital deduction [ see § 71.10[5]]. This rule, with one important exception, extends to transfers in trust. If a deceased spouse dies after November 10, 1988, and the surviving spouse is not a United States citizen, a trust will not qualify for the marital deduction unless it is a "qualified domestic trust" (commonly called a "QDOT") that meets all of the requirements of I.R.C. § 2056A [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(1), (2); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-1(a) (effective date)]. The QDOT requirements are extremely important when one of the spouses is a noncitizen inasmuch as in many cases the creation of a QDOT will be the only option by which the spouses can avail themselves of the marital deduction [ see § 71.10[5]].

I.R.C. § 2056A imposes a special tax on any distribution of principal made from a QDOT before the death of the surviving spouse, and on any property remaining in the trust on the date of the surviving spouse's death [I.R.C. § 2056A(b)(1)]. The tax is imposed at the same rate as the estate tax [I.R.C. § 2056A(b)(2)]. To make sure that the tax is collected, I.R.C. § 2056A provides that the governing instrument of a QDOT must require that at least one trustee be a domestic corporation or an individual citizen of the United States and that no principal be distributed from the trust unless the domestic corporation or individual citizen has the right to withhold the tax from the distribution [I.R.C. § 2056A(a)(1)]. The domestic corporation or individual citizen is referred to in the regulations as the "U.S. Trustee" [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(c)].

In order for a trust to qualify as a QDOT, the deceased settlor's executor must make an election to have the trust treated as a QDOT [I.R.C. § 2056A(a)(3)].

[b] Required Trust Provisions

The Internal Revenue Code specifies two basic requirements for the trust instrument of a QDOT. First, the trust instrument must (except as provided in Treasury Regulations) require that at least one trustee of the trust be an individual citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation [I.R.C. § 2056A(a)(1)(A)]. Second, the trust instrument must provide that no distribution, other than a distribution of income, may be paid from the trust unless a trustee who is an individual citizen of the United States or domestic corporation has the right to withhold from that distribution the tax imposed by I.R.C. § 2056A on that distribution [I.R.C. § 2056A(a)(1)(B)]. The Secretary of the Treasury is given broad authority to prescribe additional regulations to ensure that the tax imposed by I.R.C. § 2056A is collected [I.R.C. § 2056A(a)(2)].

The Treasury Regulations substantially expand upon the basic Internal Revenue Code requirements. The regulations provide that specific provisions be included in the governing instrument of a QDOT. The required provisions vary depending on whether the fair market value of the trust assets determined as of the date of the decedent spouse's death (or the alternate valuation date if applicable) is greater or less than $ 2 million. If the fair market value exceeds $2 million (determined without reduction for any indebtedness with respect to the assets) the governing instrument of the QDOT must require one of the following:

- That during the entire term of the QDOT at least one U.S. Trustee be a bank as defined in I.R.C. § 581; or, alternatively, that at least one trustee be a United States branch of a foreign bank and that a U.S. Trustee act as a cotrustee with the foreign bank trustee [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(i)(A)].
- That the U.S. Trustee furnish the Internal Revenue Service with a bond in an amount equal to 65 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets (without regard to any indebtedness on the assets) as of the date of the decedent spouse's death, or the alternate valuation date if applicable [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(i)(B)]. The bond must be filed with the decedent spouse's estate tax return and be in a form prescribed by the regulations [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(i)(B)(2), (4)].
- That the U.S. Trustee furnish an irrevocable letter of credit issued by a bank as defined in I.R.C. § 581, or issued by a foreign bank and confirmed by a bank as defined in I.R.C. § 581, in an amount equal to 65 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets (determined without regard to any indebtedness on the assets) as of the date of the decedent spouse's death, or the alternate valuation date if applicable [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(i)(C)]. The letter of credit, like the bond, must be filed with the decedent spouse's estate tax return and be in a form prescribed by the regulations [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(i)(C)(2), (5)].

If the fair market value is $2 million or less (again determined without reduction for any indebtedness with respect to the assets), the governing instrument must either meet the governing instrument requirements of a trust with assets of more than $2 million (described above) or require that no more than 35 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets consist of real property located outside the United States [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(ii)].

In many cases, it will be difficult at the time the governing instrument is drafted to determine whether the trust will or will not meet the $2 million threshold at the time of the deceased spouse's death. Accordingly, the regulations permit the governing instrument to state the requirements in the alternative and to leave the determination as to which requirements will actually apply to be determined at the date of death (or alternate valuation date, if applicable) [see Requirements to Ensure Collection of Section 2056A Estate Tax, 60 Fed. Reg. 43555 (August 22, 1995)].

[c] Exclusion for Principal Residence

The deceased spouse's executor may elect to exclude up to $600,000 in value attributable to real property owned directly by the QDOT that is used by the surviving spouse as the spouse's principal residence and that passes, or is treated as passing, to the QDOT for purposes of the marital deduction [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(iv)(A)]. This exclusion may be made for the purpose of determining whether the $2 million threshold amount has been reached or for determining the amount of the bond or letter of credit that may be used to satisfy the requirements for a QDOT with assets in excess of $2 million [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(iv)(A), (B)]. However, it may not be made for purposes of determining whether more than 35 percent of the QDOT consists of foreign real property [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(d)(1)(iv)(C)].

[d] Other Marital Deduction Requirements

The QDOT is a type of marital deduction trust and, as such, it must meet the other requirements of the marital deduction. Accordingly, the Treasury Regulations provide that, in addition to the special requirements of I.R.C. § 2056A, a QDOT trust must qualify for the marital deduction as one of the following [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2(b)]:

- A QTIP trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) and discussion in [4], above];
- A lifetime income plus power of appointment trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) and discussion in [5], above];
- An estate trust [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(c)-2(b)(1)(i) and discussion in [6], above]; or
- A charitable remainder trust of which the surviving spouse is the only noncharitable beneficiary [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(8) and discussion in CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, § 112.05[6] (Matthew Bender)].

[e] Reformation of Governing instrument

If a trust would qualify for the marital deduction but for the fact that its governing instrument does not meet all of the governing instrument requirements of a QDOT, the instrument will be deemed to meet those requirements if it is reformed or amended either in accordance with the instrument itself, or the deceased spouse's will, or in a judicial proceeding [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-4(a)(1)]. A reformation or amendment in accordance with the terms of the will or trust instrument must be completed by the time prescribed (including any extensions) for filing the deceased spouse's estate tax return [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-4(a)(1)]. Judicial reformation must be commenced within that time [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-4(a)(2)].

It is always good practice when drafting a will or trust instrument that sets up a QDOT to give the executor or trustee power to amend and reform the terms of the trust instrument whenever necessary to comply with the requirements of a QDOT [ see § 71.222[2]].

CHAPTER 71 MARITAL DEDUCTION TRUST PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 71.14 Bypass Trusts

[1] In General

A "bypass" trust is a trust that is designed to qualify for the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b] in the estate of the surviving spouse. Bypass trusts are also known as "credit shelter trusts," "exemption trusts," "credit trusts," or "nonmarital trusts."

Although bypass trusts do not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, they are very frequently used in conjunction with marital deduction trusts and play a critically important role in estate planning [see discussion in § 71.11[3][b]]. Bypass trusts are designed to shelter the "applicable exclusion amount" from taxation on the first spouse's death, provide benefits to the surviving spouse (or other beneficiaries, if desired) for life, and on the death of the surviving spouse (or other beneficiaries), distribute the trust assets among remainder beneficiaries, usually the settlor's children. If a bypass trust is properly planned and drafted, the surviving spouse will be able to receive substantial benefits from the trust, and the trust assets will not be included in the survivor's estate when he or she dies. A typical bypass trust will provide income to the surviving spouse for life, limited access to the trust principal, and distribution of the remaining trust assets, either outright or in trust, to the children and issue of the settlor(s) on the death of the surviving spouse.

Bypass trusts are the single most important exception to the rule that revocable inter vivos trusts and testamentary trusts are "tax-neutral," because an outright gift to either the surviving spouse or the deceased spouse's children will not achieve a comparable result [for discussion of the concept that revocable trusts are "tax-neutral," and bypass trusts as an exception to this general principle, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[3][d]]. The deceased settlor could, of course, achieve the same tax treatment for the property simply by giving it to his or her children outright, but that would deprive the surviving spouse of any rights to use or enjoy the property. A bypass trust allows the deceased settlor both to give his or her spouse significant rights to use and enjoy the trust property and to allow the property to escape taxation when the spouse dies.

Although it is most common to name the surviving spouse as sole life beneficiary of a bypass trust, other beneficiaries may be designated if desired. For example, some bypass trusts are drafted to make the surviving spouse and the deceased spouse's children beneficiaries of the bypass trust, often under a sprinkling arrangement. Or, if the surviving spouse has sufficient assets to maintain himself or herself without recourse to the bypass trust, the bypass trust may be set up to provide income and principal for the deceased spouse's children or other beneficiaries, rather than the surviving spouse.

There are a number of potential income and estate tax pitfalls in drafting bypass trusts [see [2][a], below], and distribution provisions must be given careful consideration. Careless drafting can result in the inclusion of the trust assets in the surviving spouse's estate, thereby completely defeating the purpose of the trust.

[2] Limitations on Rights of Surviving Spouse

[a] Tax Issues

Many married couples want the surviving spouse to have absolute control over the bypass trust during his or her lifetime. To that end, clients commonly want the surviving spouse to be both the trustee of the bypass trust and a beneficiary of that trust. The danger for the attorney is that in attempting to accommodate the clients' wishes, the surviving spouse may inadvertently be granted powers in excess of those permitted by the tax laws, with the result that the surviving settlor will be deemed to be the owner of the assets for income tax purposes, estate tax purposes, or both.

Two basic tax problems arise when a spouse is named as trustee of the bypass trust:

- (1) A trustee who has the power, exercisable solely by himself or herself, to vest income or principal of any portion of the trust in himself or herself, is treated as the owner of that portion of the trust and is taxed on the income from that portion of the trust, whether or not that income is actually paid to the trustee [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)]. Thus, if there are other beneficiaries of the trust besides the surviving spouse, and the surviving spouse has a "sprinkling" power over the trust assets [for discussion of "sprinkling" powers, see ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.210[1][d]], the trust income may will be taxed to the surviving settlor even if he or she distributes the income to the other trust beneficiaries.
- (2) A trustee/beneficiary who has an unrestricted power to appoint any portion of the trust assets to himself or herself is deemed to have a general power of appointment over the trust assets, and those assets will be included in the trustee's estate [I.R.C. § 2041] unless appropriate precautions are taken.

[b] Solutions to Income Tax Issues

The simplest solutions to the potential income tax problem noted in [a], above, are:

- (1) Make the surviving settlor the sole income beneficiary of the bypass trust;
- (2) If there are to be other beneficiaries, do not give the surviving settlor a "sprinkling" power over the trust income, and instead provide for mandatory income payments to those beneficiaries in equal shares;
or
- (3) If the sprinkling power is essential, name someone other than the surviving spouse as trustee.

If none of these alternatives is acceptable, the only remaining option to avoid the income tax problem is to provide that any distributions of income to the surviving settlor can be made only with the consent of another person, either a co-trustee or a "special trustee" appointed specifically for that purpose [see I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The estate planner should also bear in mind that in some cases, it may actually be advantageous to have all of the income of a bypass trust with a "sprinkling" provision taxed to the surviving spouse. Suppose, for example, that the surviving spouse is wealthy, with more than enough income to provide comfortably for himself or herself. In such a case, the surviving spouse may be concerned about transferring as much of his or her estate as possible to his or her children with the least amount of tax. As trustee of the bypass trust, he or she could exercise the sprinkling power to distribute all the current income to his or her children. Nevertheless, all the income will be taxed to the surviving spouse. The children will receive all the income free of tax, and the surviving spouse's estate will be reduced by the amount of the income tax, thus lowering the eventual estate tax bite. Notice that if the bypass trust required that all of the income be paid currently to the children, the children would receive only the net amount of income after the payment of income tax, and the surviving spouse would have a larger estate subject to estate tax. Thus, in such circumstances, the income tax "problems" described above could actually provide a net tax benefit for the family when considered as a whole. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[c] Solutions to Estate Tax Issues

The simplest way to address the estate tax problems discussed in [a], above, is to name someone other than the surviving spouse as trustee of the bypass trust. If this alternative is unacceptable, the problems may be addressed by either:

- (1) Limiting the trustee's power to distribute trust principal by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)]; see [3], below; see also discussion of "ascertainable standards" in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, §§ 70.12[6][c], 70.200[1][i] and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.51[4];
- (2) Providing that the trustee may distribute trust assets to the surviving settlor only with the concurrence of another person who has a substantial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise of the power (i.e., another trust beneficiary) [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)]; or
- (3) Appointing a "special trustee" to make all distributions of principal to the surviving settlor.

[d] Powers That Can Safely Be Granted to Surviving Spouse

With careful drafting, it is possible to give the surviving spouse the beneficial enjoyment of the bypass trust during his or her lifetime while still avoiding the tax problems noted in [a], above. These two goals can be achieved if the bypass trust cannot be revoked by the surviving spouse, if the surviving spouse's rights to receive income and principal are properly limited, and if the trust principal will be distributed to other beneficiaries (that is, surviving children or grandchildren) on the surviving spouse's death.

The surviving spouse's lifetime interest in the bypass trust may include the following rights without destroying the tax-saving goals of the trust:

- (1) The right to receive all of the income from the trust at least annually [see [b], above, regarding the tax issues that can arise in connection with "sprinkling" powers];
- (2) The right to receive trust principal pursuant to an "ascertainable standard" relating to the surviving spouse's health, education, support, or maintenance [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)]; see also discussion in [3], below]; and

(3) The right to receive the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the value of the trust principal each year [see also discussion in [4], below].

The right to receive all of the income from a trust does not cause the trust assets to be included in the taxable estate of a trust beneficiary, so this right can safely be conferred on the surviving spouse without endangering the tax-saving goals of the trust.

[3] Right to Invade Principal

The right to invade the principal of a trust will cause the trust assets to be included in the gross taxable estate of the person who holds the power if the power is a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. A power is a "general power of appointment" if the person who holds it can exercise it in his or her own favor, in favor of his or her estate, in favor of his or her creditors, or in favor of the creditors of his or her estate [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)].

A power that would otherwise be a general power of appointment will not be so classified if the power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the holder's "health, education, support, or maintenance" [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)]; Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. Thus it is permissible to give the surviving spouse the right to receive principal of the bypass trust pursuant to an "ascertainable standard."

[4] Five or Five Power

The surviving spouse may also be given the right to withdraw the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the current value of the trust each year. A power of this kind is commonly described as a "five or five power" and may safely be held by a beneficiary without causing the trust principal to be included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)]; Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3)]. However, the IRS takes the position that the surviving spouse will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the surviving spouse holds a "five or five" power [Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8142061 ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8326074 ; see I.R.C. § 678 (income tax consequences of invasion power)]. Before deciding to include a "five or five" power in the bypass trust, the attorney and the settlor should balance the greater access to trust principal that the power would give the surviving spouse against the adverse income tax consequences of the power. For general discussion of "five or five" powers and a sample trust provision conferring such a power, see Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, Section 70.203 [1][k], [2].

PRACTICE TIP:

It should be borne in mind that granting the surviving settlor a five or five power over the bypass trust also can distort the estate plan. From the deceased spouse's perspective, the bypass trust's principal should only be tapped as a last resort; indeed, many revocable trusts specifically provide that the bypass trust principal may (or should) be invaded only after the principal of all other trusts created under the instrument has been exhausted. Such a provision is intended, in part, to give some assurance to each spouse that should he or she die first, the maximum portion possible of the assets he or she leaves will pass to his or her intended beneficiaries, regardless of any later changes that may be made by the surviving spouse as to any trusts (such as a survivor's trust) that remain revocable. At the same time, such a provision protects both spouse' tax plan. The bypass trust's assets will pass free of death tax at the surviving spouse's death. Thus, it is advantageous to allow as much growth as possible to occur in this trust. If the surviving spouse regularly exercises a five or five power he or she may hold over the bypass trust, then the tax plan intended by the instrument will be compromised, even if the compromise is inadvertent. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 71.15 Survivor's Trusts

[1] Nature of Trust

When married persons jointly create a revocable inter vivos trust, that trust typically will contain community property of the settlors, and may also contain separate property or quasi-community property of one or both settlors. When the first settlor dies, one-half of the community property and quasi-community property in the trust belongs to the surviving settlor by operation of law [Prob. Code §§ 100(a), 101(a)], unless the spouses have agreed to a non-pro-rata division of the property [see Prob. Code §§ 100(b), 101(b)]. Since this property, as well as any trust property that is the separate property of the surviving settlor, belongs to the surviving settlor outright, the surviving settlor will want to be able to deal with (and dispose of) that portion of the trust property as he or she sees fit. To accommodate the statutory property rights of the surviving settlor, it is necessary to separate the survivor's share of the trust assets from the deceased settlor's share of the assets, and place the survivor's assets into a separate trust or share. This share is referred to as a "survivor's trust."

When a survivor's trust is needed, it will be carved out of the trust when the trust assets are divided on the death of the first settlor [see § 70.12 for a discussion of the division of a revocable trust; see also [3], below].

Since the survivor's trust will contain property that the surviving spouse owned before the death of the deceased spouse, and since the death of the deceased spouse will have no effect on the surviving spouse's ownership rights in the trust, the survivor's trust will be fully revocable (and amendable) by the surviving spouse during the survivor's lifetime. Retention of the right to revoke the trust will, of course, require that the trust assets be included in the estate of the surviving spouse for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2038]. However, unless these assets were sold or otherwise disposed of by the surviving spouse during his or her lifetime, they would be included in his or her estate in any event.

[3] Payments and Distributions

The surviving spouse typically will have the right to receive all of the income from the survivor's trust, or as much of the income as the surviving spouse may demand of the trustee. The surviving spouse will also have broad rights to invade the trust principal. Principal may be invaded on demand; or, if the settlors prefer, the trustee may be given broad discretion to make principal distributions to the surviving spouse.

On the death of the surviving spouse, it is common to provide that the assets will pass to the person or persons designated by the surviving spouse, or, if the survivor fails to appoint the property to anyone, to specified persons. The trust provisions in this publication provide that unappointed property in the survivor's trust will pass under the provisions applicable to the bypass trust [ see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.202[2], P 5.07(d)].

[4] Pooling Survivor's Assets and Assets Qualifying for Marital Deduction

If any part of the trust assets belonging to the deceased settlor are intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under the rules applicable to lifetime income/power of appointment trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see also §§ 71.13[5], 71.231[1]], the marital deduction assets may be pooled with the surviving settlor's assets in the survivor's trust. Some estate planners prefer this kind of drafting approach because it results in a more streamlined trust instrument. However, the limitation on this approach is that the marital deduction assets must be made subject to the same terms and conditions of the survivor's share, including the absolute power to revoke the trust and do anything the survivor wants with the trust assets [ see [2], above]. This degree of control exceeds even that commonly granted to the surviving settlor in a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [ see § 71.13[5]]. For this reason, as well as the fact that the remainder beneficiaries of the marital deduction share may be different than those of the survivor's share, pooling marital deduction assets with the survivor's assets will be impractical in many cases.

When a QTIP trust is used, it is totally impractical to pool the marital deduction trust assets and the survivor's assets, because the limitations associated with QTIP trusts [ see § 71.13[4]] are completely incompatible with the surviving spouse's broad powers over the survivor's share. When a QTIP trust is used, it is always necessary to create separate survivor's and marital deduction trusts.

When the survivor's assets and marital deduction assets are to be combined in a single trust, a so-called "two-way split" (survivor's trust and bypass trust) will occur on the death of the first settlor. When the survivor's share and the marital deduction assets are to be held separately, a so-called "three-way split" (survivor's trust, marital deduction trust, and bypass trust) will occur instead [ see §§ 71.201[1][b], 71.231[1][f]].

CHAPTER 71 MARITAL DEDUCTION TRUST PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-71 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 71.16

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 71.16 Disclaimer Trusts

[1] In General

A "disclaimer trust" is a trust that is designed to be funded with any property that the surviving spouse disclaims after the death of the deceased spouse. Disclaimer trusts may be useful estate planning devices after the death of the first spouse. If property that the surviving spouse would otherwise be entitled to receive (either outright or in trust) upon the death of the deceased spouse is effectively disclaimed under rules set forth in the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. § 2518; Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2518-1-25.2518-3], the property may be removed from the surviving spouse's estate for estate tax purposes and transferred to another trust, which may accomplish many of the same purposes as the bypass trust.

[2] "Qualified" Disclaimers

[a] Definition

The Probate Code defines a "disclaimer" as any document that declines, refuses, renounces, or disclaims an interest that would otherwise be taken by a beneficiary [Prob. Code § 265]. The Internal Revenue Code defines a "qualified disclaimer" as an irrevocable and unqualified refusal by a person to accept an interest in property [I.R.C. § 2518(b)]. If an interest in property is subject to a qualified disclaimer, the interest will be treated for federal gift and estate tax purposes as if it had never been transferred to the disclaiming party [I.R.C. § 2518(a)].

[b] Requirements

A disclaimer is a "qualified disclaimer" for federal tax purposes if it meets all of the following requirements [see I.R.C. § 2518(b); see also Prob. Code §§ 260-295 (California disclaimer requirements)]:

- The disclaimer is in writing.
- The disclaimer is received by the transferor, the transferor's legal representative, or the holder of legal title to the interest which is to be disclaimed not later than nine months after the later of (1) the transfer creating the interest and (2) the disclaiming party's twenty-first birthday.

- The disclaimer is received before the disclaiming party has accepted the interest or any of its benefits. Acts constituting acceptance include using the property or the interest in the property; accepting dividends, interest, or rents from the property; directing others to act with respect to the property or interest in the property; or exercising a power of appointment over the property [Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(d)(1)]. Making claims of ownership of a future interest in a trust on loan applications constitutes acceptance because it is an action that produces some immediately tangible benefit [ Cassel v. Kolb (9th Cir. 2003) 321 F.3d 868]. If a transferee who disclaims an interest in property is also a fiduciary, actions taken in the exercise of fiduciary powers to preserve or maintain the disclaimed property are not treated as an acceptance of that property [Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(d)(2)]; see Letter Rul. 200406038 (individual's disclaimer of interest in limited liability company was qualified disclaimer, even though in her fiduciary capacity, she also executed amendment to LLC agreement)].

- As a result of the disclaimer, the interest passes without any direction on the part of the disclaiming party to some other person.

The person who makes the disclaimer cannot designate the person or persons who will take the disclaimed property. Any express or implied agreement that the disclaimed interest may be given or devised by the person making the disclaimer will disqualify the disclaimer [Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(e)(1), (2)]; see Letter Rul. 200420007 (disclaimer was qualified even though property would pass to charitable foundation of which transferee was a director, when actions would be taken to prevent transferee from having any say over administration of property by foundation). This rule means that in order to make use of the estate planning advantages of disclaimers, the will or trust instrument must specify who will take any disclaimed property, or provide a permissible mechanism, such as a disclaimer trust, for determining who the takers will be.

The rule that the party making the disclaimer cannot direct the disposition of the disclaimed interest generally extends to powers of appointment. In the case of a disclaimer made by a surviving spouse, the disclaimer will be disqualified if the surviving spouse retains the right to direct the beneficial enjoyment of the disclaimed property, whether as trustee or otherwise, unless the power is limited by an ascertainable standard [Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(e)(2)]; see Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(e)(5) Example 5]. This means, as a practical matter, that if the will or trust creates a disclaimer trust into which any property disclaimed by the surviving spouse will pass, the surviving spouse may be given the power to distribute income, principal, or both from the trust during his or her lifetime, as long as the power is limited by an ascertainable standard. However, the requirement that any power be limited to an ascertainable standard effectively precludes the surviving spouse from holding a power of appointment--regardless of whether the power is general or special--to dispose of the remaining assets of the disclaimer trust on his or her death [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(e)(5) Example 5]. Similar rules apply in the case of a disclaimer made by a beneficiary other than the surviving spouse, except that unlike a power held by the surviving spouse, it appears that a power subject to an ascertainable standard may be held only in a fiduciary capacity (for example, as trustee) [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-2(e)(1)(i), (5) Examples 11, 12]. The practical point is that a disclaimer trust should not give the disclaiming beneficiary the power to dispose of the trust assets on the beneficiary's death.

For further discussion of "qualified disclaimers," see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 22, Property Devised by Will (Matthew Bender).

[3] Uses

Disclaimer trusts have a variety of uses. In appropriate cases, they may be employed to utilize the exclusion amount of the first spouse to die, to qualify an otherwise unqualified devise or trust for the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], to reduce or eliminate the marital deduction, or to avoid the unfavorable tax consequences of trustee powers. Any trust, including a standard marital deduction trust plan that calls for the creation of a marital deduction trust [ see § 71.13] and a bypass trust [ see § 71.14], may also provide for a disclaimer trust to receive and administer any property that the surviving spouse chooses to disclaim after the death of the deceased spouse.

EXAMPLE:

Assume, for example, that Mr. Brown makes a will in which he leaves all of his property to his wife, Mrs. Brown. Assume further that Mr. Brown dies in 2004, when the "applicable exclusion amount" available in his estate is $1,500,000 [ see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]]. Mr. Brown's will provides that if Mrs. Brown disclaims any of the property, the disclaimed property will pass into a "disclaimer trust." Assume further that when Mr. Brown dies, his estate is valued for federal tax purposes at $3,000,000. Although all of this property would be sheltered from estate tax in Mr. Brown's estate by virtue of the marital deduction [ see I.R.C. § 2056], any remaining property in excess of the applicable exclusion amount in effect at the time of Mrs. Brown's death [ see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] would be subject to estate taxation in Mrs. Brown's estate on her death. The exact amount Mrs. Brown will want to disclaim to avoid estate taxes on her own estate will depend on the year she dies, which usually cannot be anticipated. This may in any case depend on her age, health, and financial needs. Whatever property she does disclaim will then pass to the disclaimer trust and be sheltered from estate taxation when Mrs. Brown dies.

Often, the surviving spouse will disclaim the applicable exclusion amount available in the deceased spouse's estate--in the example given, $1,500,000--in order to maximize the value of the disclaimer trust on the death of the surviving spouse. In this example (assuming that Mr. Brown has not made any other dispositions of property that would use up any portion of the applicable exclusion amount available to his estate), if Mrs. Brown disclaims $1,500,000 on her husband's death, that amount would pass to the disclaimer trust and be free of estate taxation on her death. The actual amount of tax savings achieved will depend on the applicable exclusion amount and maximum tax rates that are in effect in the year in which Mrs. Brown dies [ see I.R.C. § 2001(c); see also Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.13[4][b], [5]]. In many cases the amount of savings can be very substantial.

A disclaimer trust also may make it possible to defer the final decision about the amount of the property included in the marital deduction trust until after the first spouse dies. This will be desirable if there is any likelihood that the overall value of the surviving spouse's estate will change substantially after the first spouse dies.

In some cases a disclaimer may be used to qualify a trust that would not otherwise qualify for the marital deduction. For example, a testamentary trust from which the testator's surviving spouse is to receive all of the income for life, but which also gives the trustee the power to invade the trust corpus for the support of the testator's daughter during the life of the surviving spouse, would not qualify for the marital deduction as a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust because of the power given to the trustee [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(II)]. However, if the daughter were to disclaim the right to receive the corpus, the trust would qualify for the deduction, assuming all of the other requirements of a qualified disclaimer were met [ Treas. Reg. § 25.2518-3(d), Example 11].

Because of the flexibility provided by disclaimer trusts, some experienced estate planners recommend including a disclaimer trust in any will or trust instrument as a matter of course, even when it is not anticipated that the surviving spouse will want to disclaim any property. Unanticipated events may cause the financial considerations of the parties to change. If, for example, they "win the lottery," inherit a large sum of money, or are awarded a large personal injury judgment, the flexibility provided by a disclaimer trust may suddenly become very important. The complete marital deduction trusts in this publication all contain disclaimer trusts [ see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, §§ 70.201, PP 5.06, 5.07 (nonformula trust), 70.202, P 5.11 (formula trust--two settlors), 70.203, P 5.12 (formula trust--one settlor)]. If the disclaimer trust is not needed, it simply will never become operative.

[1] In General

Because the marital deduction contains numerous pitfalls for the unwary, California has enacted a series of provisions [Prob. Code §§ 21500-21526] designed to guard against inadvertent loss of the marital deduction through improper or incomplete drafting. These provisions, which apply unless the trust instrument expressly or by necessary implication make them inapplicable [Prob. Code § 21502(a)], are designed to assure that certain terms and conditions commonly found in trusts are interpreted in such a way as to avoid some of these pitfalls, and to assure minimum federal estate tax liability. A settlor or testator may expressly incorporate these provisions into a trust instrument if desired [Prob. Code § 21502(b)].

The rules discussed in this section are inapplicable to estate trusts [Prob. Code § 21521].

[2] Construction of Marital Deduction Gifts

The basic rule specified in these statutes is that marital deduction gifts (i.e., gifts intended to qualify for the federal estate or gift tax marital deduction [Prob. Code § 21520]) will be construed to comply with the marital deduction provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Prob. Code § 21522]. A marital deduction gift may be satisfied only with property that qualifies for the marital deduction [Prob. Code § 21522(c)], and the trustee may not take any action or have any power that impairs the deduction as applied to the marital deduction gift [Prob. Code § 21522(b)]. In addition, the following specific rules apply to the construction of marital deduction gifts:

- The transferor's spouse will be deemed to be the only beneficiary of the trust during his or her lifetime [Prob. Code § 21524(a)].
- The transferor's spouse will be deemed to be entitled to all of the income from the marital deduction trust, not less frequently than annually, for life [Prob. Code § 21524(b)]; see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(g) (local law taken into account in determining whether or not QTIP income requirements are satisfied)].

- The transferor's spouse has the right to require that the trustee make unproductive property productive, or convert it into productive property within a reasonable time [Prob. Code § 21524(c)].
- Any income in a QTIP trust that is accrued but unpaid at the time of the surviving spouse's death will pass to the surviving spouse's estate unless the trust provides for a different disposition that qualifies for the marital deduction [Prob. Code § 21524(d)].
- Any survivorship condition applicable to the transferor's spouse that exceeds or might exceed six months will be limited to six months as applied to the marital deduction gift [Prob. Code § 21525(a)]; see Prob. Code § 21525(b) (rule for simultaneous death clauses)].

Prob. Code § 21522 will not be applied to "reform" an instrument to enable it to qualify for the marital deduction absent evidence that the testator intended the interest to qualify for the deduction [Davis v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 2005) 394 F.3d 1294, 1300-1301] .

[3] Application to Estate Tax Formulas

When a will or trust contains a formula intended to eliminate federal estate tax, the California statutes provide that the formula will be applied to eliminate or reduce the federal estate tax to the maximum extent possible [Prob. Code § 21503(a)]. If the formula refers to a maximum fraction or amount that will not result in estate tax, it will be construed to refer to the maximum fraction or amount that will not result in or increase federal estate tax [Prob. Code § 21503(b)].

[4] Drafting Considerations

Although the California marital deduction statutes may provide some margin of safety to attorneys, they are not and should not be a substitute for proper drafting. These provisions are essentially designed to remedy drafting errors found in marital deduction trusts. A properly drafted marital deduction trust should contain provisions that effectively do the same things as the statute, and the existence of the statute does not negate the desirability of including such provisions. Moreover, issues may arise regarding whether the trust terms that differ from these statutes "expressly or by necessary implication" make the statutes inapplicable [see Prob. Code § 21502(a)]. Accordingly, attorneys are cautioned not to place exclusive reliance on these statutes to cure poor drafting.

§ 71.100 Facts

NOTE:

For a guide to the initial client interview regarding an estate planning matter, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning Guide. The guide appearing below highlights some of the specific facts that are necessary to advise a client regarding the suitability of establishing a marital deduction trust.

The determinations in this Transaction Guide contain numerous references to "client and spouse." Although it may sound obvious, the attorney should bear in mind that when he or she prepares a trust for two spouses, both of the spouses are clients and the attorney owes equal duties to each of them. Conflicts of interest can arise in this context that will make representation of both spouses unwise or ethically impermissible. For determinations relating to the existence of a conflict of interest, see § 60.110 in Ch. 60, Estate Planning; see also CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender). In any situation involving representation of both spouses, the attorney must be alert for actual or potential conflict of interest situations [ see Ch. 60, Estate Planning § 60.110].

1. Client's name, address, telephone number, date of birth, and occupation.
2. Name, address, telephone number, date of birth, and occupation of client's spouse.
3. Information regarding any prior marriages of client and spouse.
4. Names and birth dates of all children and issue of client and spouse; and, if any children are not of client's current marriage, identity of other parent.

5. Identity of persons other than spouse for whom client wishes to provide, such as the following:
  - a. Children, grandchildren, and other relatives.
  - b. Other individuals.
  - c. Charities.
6. Physical and mental health of:
  - a. Client.
  - b. Spouse.
  - c. Children.
  - d. Other beneficiaries.
7. Value of all assets in which client and spouse hold ownership interest, including property held:
  - a. As separate property of client and/or spouse.
  - b. As community property of client and spouse.
  - c. In joint tenancy with spouse or other persons.
  - d. In tenancy in common with spouse or other persons.
  - e. In trust.
  - f. As donee of power of appointment.
8. Relative financial status of client's children and other proposed beneficiaries.
9. Likelihood that client's property will appreciate or depreciate after death.
10. Lifetime plans and needs of client and spouse, including:
  - a. Anticipated retirement age.
  - b. Basic living expenses, including food, housing, clothing, and transportation.
  - c. Known or anticipated medical expenses.
  - d. Expenses of special retirement plans, including travel and hobbies.

§ 71.110 Suitability of Marital Deduction Trust

NOTE:

This guide focuses on matters specific to marital deduction trusts. For general estate planning considerations, see the Transaction Guide to Ch. 60, Estate Planning. For general considerations relating to testamentary trusts, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B: Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. For inter vivos trusts, see the Transaction Guide to Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms.

1. Determine reasons why client wants to create trust.

NOTE:

The client's purpose for creating a trust will determine whether or not a trust is the most suitable estate planning device, the type of trust to be created, and the provisions that will be included in the trust instrument.

- a. To provide professional management of trust assets.
- b. To avoid probate of trust assets.
- c. To provide for spouse both before and after client's death.
- d. To insure that trust estate passes to client's children or other beneficiaries on death of surviving spouse.

- e. To protect surviving spouse from client's own potential mismanagement of trust property.
- f. To protect surviving spouse from spouse's potential mismanagement of trust property.
- g. To minimize estate taxes in estate of first spouse to die.
- h. To minimize total estate taxes on the estates of both spouses.

2. Determine whether value of combined estates of client and client's spouse is such that substantial estate tax savings may be realized by:

a. Sheltering all or part of combined estates from estate taxation under unified credits available in estates of client and client's spouse.

(1) Are combined estates likely to be worth less than the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the surviving spouse's death?

NOTE:

The unified credit is one of the key provisions of the estate and gift tax law [see I.R.C. §§ 2010 (estate tax), 2505 (gift tax)]. To determine the amount of property in a particular estate that can be sheltered from taxation under the unified credit, it is necessary to determine the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the estate. The amount of property that can be sheltered by the estate tax unified credit varies and depends on the year of death. The amount is $675,000 for decedents dying in 2001, $1 million for decedents dying in 2002 and 2003, $1.5 million for decedents dying in 2004 and 2005, $2 million for decedents dying in 2006, 2007, and 2008, and $3.5 million for decedents dying in 2009 [I.R.C. § 2010(c)]. The gift tax unified credit is $675,000 for gifts made in 2001, and $1 million for all years thereafter [I.R.C. §§ 2101(c), 2505(a)(1)]. Planning around the estate tax unified credit to some degree involves the typically impossible task of guessing when a client will die [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]]. If the combined estates of the client and the client's spouse are likely to be worth less than the "applicable exclusion amount" at the time of the second spouse's death, all of the property can be sheltered from taxation under the unified credit and no special steps need be taken to shelter more property.

(2) Are combined estates likely to be worth more than the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the year of the surviving spouse's death?

NOTE:

If the combined estates of the client and the client's spouse are likely to be worth more than the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b)] available in the estate of the second spouse to die, the unified credit will not shelter all of the property from estate taxation when the second spouse dies and the unified credit available in the first spouse's estate should also be used. This can be done by creating a "bypass trust" that will escape taxation in the second spouse's estate. See discussion in §§ 71.11 and 71.14.

b. Sheltering all or part of combined estates from estate taxation under marital deduction.

NOTE:

All of the property in the first spouse's estate can be sheltered from estate taxation by simply transferring it to the surviving spouse in a way that will qualify for the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056]. The marital deduction is unlimited in amount. However, no marital deduction is available in the estate of the second spouse. If the first spouse to die creates a "bypass trust," the assets of the trust will not be subject to taxation in the estate of the second spouse. See discussion in §§ 71.11 and 71.14.

3. Determine whether trust is undesirable or unnecessary because:

- a. Cost of establishing and administering trust is prohibitive for client's purposes.
- b. Client has no need of trust form of ownership apart from estate tax savings.
- c. Property may be removed from client's estate by irrevocable inter vivos trust [ see Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts ] and lifetime gifts [ see Ch. 60A, Gifts ].
- d. Property that would form trust estate can be devised to spouse outright.

NOTE:

An outright devise to the surviving spouse will qualify for the marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056]. Since the marital deduction is unlimited in amount, all of the estate of the deceased spouse can be sheltered from estate taxation if all of the estate is devised outright to the surviving spouse. However, estate taxes may be owed when the surviving spouse dies if the combined estates are valued in excess of the applicable exclusion amount [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] and if a "bypass trust" is not created when the deceased spouse dies. See discussion in §§ 71.11[2] and 71.14[1]; see also Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[3][d].

§ 71.111 Basic Features of Marital Deduction and Bypass Trusts

NOTE:

This section assumes that the client has decided to establish a marital deduction trust.

1. Determine whether client should establish inter vivos or testamentary trust.

NOTE:

For general discussion of the advantages of revocable inter vivos trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[3], [4].

a. Does client wish to obtain following benefits of revocable inter vivos trust:

(1) Probate avoidance?

NOTE:

Revocable inter vivos trusts are widely used to avoid probate. Testamentary trusts, in contrast, are subject to probate administration in the same way as outright devises. For a discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of probate administration, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[3][a], [4][b]; see also Ch. 60, Estate Planning .

(2) Lifetime property management?

NOTE:

Since revocable inter vivos trusts come into existence during the lifetimes of their settlors, they can be used to obtain property management while the settlors are still alive. Testamentary trusts do not come into existence until after the settlor (testator) has died, and cannot be used to obtain lifetime property management. For discussion, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[2][b].

(3) Property management in the event of disability?

NOTE:

If the client becomes disabled or otherwise unable to manage his or her own property, the trustee (or successor trustee, if the client was the initial trustee) may manage the property for the client. A revocable inter vivos trust may thus avoid the necessity of appointing a conservator. For discussion, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.10[2][b].

b. Does client wish to obtain following benefits of testamentary trust:

(1) Marital deduction and bypass trust provisions that will become effective after client's death?

(2) Avoidance of expense and inconvenience of establishing inter vivos trust while client is still living?

NOTE:

When a revocable inter vivos trust is established, property must be transferred to the trustee while the settlor is still living, or the benefits of the trust will be lost. This involves expense and inconvenience which is not necessary in the case of a testamentary trust.

(3) Judicial supervision of client's estate by probate court after client's death?

NOTE:

Assets that are devised to a testamentary trust are subject to probate administration. Probate estates are subject to close judicial scrutiny designed to make sure that the property is properly conserved, debts are properly paid, and the property is distributed to the proper person or persons. For further discussion of probate administration, see Ch. 65, Executors. The assets of a revocable inter vivos trust are not subject to probate administration, either during the client's lifetime or after the client's death, although the court may be petitioned to make orders in case of disputes.

2. If client prefers inter vivos trust over testamentary trust [see P 1, above], determine how many trusts will have to be drafted:

NOTE:

When the client and his or her spouse own community property and wish to create a revocable trust, it is necessary as a practical matter for them to act as joint settlors [see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.202[1][b]], for discussion of the impracticality of creating a trust for the community property interest of only one settlor]. If either the client or spouse also wants to put separate property in trust, the attorney must decide whether to create a separate trust for the separate property of each spouse or to combine the separate property with the community property in a so-called "mixed property" trust. Although some estate planners do not like mixed property trusts because of problems with tracing separate and community assets and limiting the rights of the spouses in each other's separate property, mixed property trusts nevertheless are commonly drafted. For additional discussion, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.11[4].

- a. Trust for community property of client and spouse;
- b. Separate trusts for separate property of each spouse; or
- c. One "mixed property trust" containing both separate and community property of client and spouse.

3. Determine whether to draft formula or nonformula trust [ see §§ 71.11[4], 71.13[2]].

- a. Will use of marital deduction formula significantly reduce combined estate tax liability of client and spouse?

NOTE:

See § 71.110, P 2, for determinations relating to the tax liability of the estate. As the combined value of the client's estates climbs above the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] that is likely to be available in the estate of the second spouse to die, the amount of tax savings that can be achieved by a marital deduction formula usually increases accordingly.

- b. Are client and spouse willing to give up a measure of control over their assets in return for tax savings generated by use of formula clause.

NOTE:

When a marital deduction formula clause is used, the surviving spouse must give up absolute control over the assets of the bypass trust in order to achieve the desired tax savings [see discussion in § 71.14[2]]. Although the surviving spouse may still exercise a substantial degree of control over those assets [ see § 71.14[4][d]], some clients may not want to give up anything during their lifetimes, even if it increases estate tax liability after the survivor's death. As a practical matter, the attorney should explain to such a client the probable amount of actual tax savings, based on the size of the client's estate, and suggest that the client weigh that saving against any inconvenience that a bypass trust may cause the surviving spouse.

4. If client selects formula marital deduction trust, decide:

- a. What type of marital deduction formula to use; either:

(1) Pecuniary marital deduction formula [ see §§ 71.12[3][b], 71.200[1][c] for discussion];

(2) Pecuniary bypass formula [ see §§ 71.12[3][b], 71.200[1][c], [d], 71.203[1][b] for discussion]; or

(3) Fractional formula [ see §§ 71.12[3][c], 71.200[1][c], 71.204[1][b] for discussion].

- b. What kind of marital deduction trust should be prepared:

(1) Qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [ see §§ 71.13[4], 71.230; see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)];

NOTE:

Most experienced estate planners recommend that QTIP trusts be used whenever possible, due to the postmortem flexibility they offer [ see § 71.13[4]]. QTIP trusts are the only real option when the client wants to be certain that the trust assets will be disposed of in the manner preferred by the client after the death of the surviving settlor. Thus, when animosity may exist between the surviving spouse and the remainder beneficiaries (such as when there are children from a prior marriage), a QTIP is the only option that will provide the degree of security desired by the client.

(2) Lifetime income/power of appointment trust [ see §§ 71.13[5], 71.231; see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]; or

NOTE:

Lifetime income/power of appointment trusts are less popular among estate planners than QTIP trusts because they do not offer the same degree of postmortem planning flexibility. However, clients who are unwilling to restrict the surviving settlor's control over the trust assets sometimes feel strongly about using them.

(3) Estate trust [ see §§ 71.13[6], 71.232].

NOTE:

Estate trusts are rarely used in modern estate planning.

c. If client and spouse will be joint settlors [ see P 1, above], and elect to create lifetime income/power of appointment trust [ see (b), above], determine whether assets qualifying for marital deduction will be either:

(1) Placed in a separate marital deduction trust (a "three-trust split"); or

NOTE:

The attorney must determine whether the trust will provide for a "two-trust split" or a "three-trust split" on the death of the first spouse. If the powers of the surviving settlor over the assets qualifying for the marital deduction are to be more limited than his or her powers over her own assets in the trust, creation of a separate marital deduction trust is necessary. If, however, the survivor's powers over the survivor's assets and the marital deduction assets are to be coextensive, it is simpler to combine the survivor's assets with the marital deduction trust assets in a single trust that qualifies as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust. For additional discussion, see §§ 71.15[4], 71.201[1][b], 71.231[1][f].

When a QTIP trust is selected, there is no comparable issue. A "three-trust split" (survivor's trust, QTIP trust, and bypass trust) is for all intents and purposes mandatory.

(2) Combined with survivor's assets in a survivor's trust the terms of which qualify for the marital deduction (a "two-trust split").

§ 71.112 Payments and Distributions from Trusts

1. For inter vivos trust, determine what provisions trust should include for payment of income and distribution of principal while both spouses are living.

NOTE:

While both spouses are living, a revocable inter vivos trust generally gives the spouses the maximum rights to use the income and principal of the trust. The trust will remain fully revocable as long as both spouses are alive. See Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, for further discussion and sample provisions. Of course, no benefits will be payable from a testamentary trust, since a testamentary trust does not come into existence until the testator dies.

2. Determine what provisions trust should include for payment of income and distribution of principal after death of first spouse.

NOTE:

On the death of the first spouse, the trust will generally be divided into marital deduction and nonmarital shares. In the case of a two-settlor revocable trust, a survivor's share will also be created.

a. From survivor's trust, if any:

NOTE:

For an example of a complete set of provisions for a survivor's trust, see Chapter 70,

Complete Revocable Trust Forms, Section 70.202 [2], Paragraph 5.07. If assets qualifying for the marital deduction will be pooled with the survivor's assets in the survivor's trust [ see § 71.111[4][c]], the payment and distribution provisions of the bypass trust must also conform to the requirements for a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [ see (b), below].

- (1) All income, or as much income as surviving spouse demands, to surviving spouse;
- (2) As much principal as surviving spouse demands, to surviving spouse;
- (3) Trustee's right to invade principal for benefit of surviving spouse (in event of surviving spouse's incapacity or otherwise);
- (4) Revocability by surviving spouse at any time;
- (5) On survivor's death, payment of remaining trust balance either:
  - (a) To persons designated by surviving spouse under general power of appointment;
  - (b) To specifically identified persons or beneficiaries; or
  - (c) In manner specified in bypass trust.

b. From marital deduction trust:

- (1) All income to surviving spouse for life, payable annually or at more frequent intervals.

NOTE:

This requirement is mandatory for both QTIP trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(I); see also Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-7(d), 20.2056(b)-5(f) (income requirements for QTIP trusts)] and lifetime income/power of appointment trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (income requirements for lifetime income/power of appointment trusts)].

- (2) No person has power to appoint any portion of assets to anyone other than surviving spouse.

NOTE:

This requirement is also mandatory for both QTIP trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(II)] and lifetime income/power of appointment trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)].

- (3) Distributions of principal, either:

NOTE:

Neither a QTIP trust nor a lifetime income/power of appointment trust is required to distribute principal to the surviving spouse. However, it is a common practice to permit such distributions to ensure that the surviving spouse will have enough money to live comfortably and meet any unanticipated contingencies that exceed the amount of income generated by the trust. The power to distribute principal to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse ordinarily will not jeopardize the marital deduction [ see Treas. Reg. §§

20.2056(b)-5(j) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(6) (QTIP trusts)].

(a) As requested by surviving spouse; or

(b) At trustee's discretion pursuant to standard specified in trust instrument.

NOTE:

The standard specified in the trust instrument may be either an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, and maintenance of the surviving spouse [ see § 71.14[3]; see also discussion of "ascertainable standards" in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms , §§ 70.12[6][d], 70.200[1][i] and Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions , § 64.51[4]], or a broader standard such as "comfort, welfare, and happiness."

(4) Disposition of trust assets on death of surviving settlor:

(a) For QTIP trust, payment to person or persons designated by settlor(s) or testator in trust instrument.

NOTE:

With a QTIP trust, the settlor or testator has the power to designate the ultimate recipients of the trust property in the trust instrument. The QTIP provision in this chapter provides that on the death of the surviving settlor, the QTIP trust assets will be added to the bypass trust and disposed of as part of that trust [ see § 71.230 [2]]. An alternate pattern of distribution may be substituted if desired.

(b) For lifetime income/power of appointment trust, to person or persons (if any) designated by surviving spouse pursuant to general power of appointment.

NOTE:

This requirement is mandatory for lifetime income/power of appointment trusts [ see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. The provision in this chapter states that if the surviving settlor fails to appoint the property, it will pass in the manner specified in the bypass trust [ see § 71.231[2]].

(c) For estate trust, to surviving spouse's executor or estate [ see § 71.232[2]].

c. From bypass trust: [ see § 71.121]

NOTE:

Bypass provisions must be planned carefully to avoid creating income tax problems or inadvertently causing the trust assets to be included in the surviving settlor's estate. Before deciding on the pattern of payments and distributions from the bypass, the drafter should refer to Section 71.14 [2], which discusses the potential tax pitfalls, how to avoid those pitfalls, and powers that can safely be granted to the surviving spouse when he or she acts as trustee of the bypass trust.

(1) Income payments.

(2) Principal distributions, if any.

(3) Ultimate distribution of assets and termination of trust.

NOTE:

The basic decision of whether to create a revocable inter vivos trust or a testamentary trust should be made before this Drafting Guide is read. For discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of testamentary trusts and revocable inter vivos trusts, see Volume 11, Ch. 60, Estate Planning. See also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, and Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms.

There are as many potential variations among the terms of marital deduction trusts as there are clients who create them, and a complete guide to all the possible variations in marital deduction trust terms is beyond the scope of this publication. The complete forms in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, illustrate standard patterns of distribution for the most common types of marital deduction trusts typically prepared for clients. The forms in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, perform a similar function with respect to wills. The provisions in this chapter illustrate basic types of additional and alternative provisions that can be used to modify the complete forms. Other provisions common to all trusts are illustrated in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. Many of the provisions in those chapters can be adapted to inter vivos trusts.

For a more complete set of individual will and trust provisions, as well as sample complete forms illustrating distribution patterns in addition to those that appear in Chapter 70, the reader should refer to Matthew Bender's specialty publication, CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS FORMS, Vols. 1-3.

§ 71.120 Drafting Guide for Marital Deduction (and Survivor's) Trusts

1. Select appropriate complete trust form to use as pattern:

- a. For two-settlor nonformula revocable trust, use form in Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.201[2].
- b. For two-settlor formula revocable trust, use form in Chapter 70, § 70.202[2].
- c. For one-settlor formula revocable trust, use form in Chapter 70, § 70.203[2].
- d. For testamentary trust, use form in Chapter 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.210.

2. For formula marital deduction trust, select appropriate formula clause, as follows:

NOTE:

A formula clause requires that the estate or trust be divided into marital deduction and nonmarital shares. For general discussion of formula clauses, see § 71.12[3].

a. For inter vivos trust:

NOTE:

The complete trust forms in Chapter 70 [§§ 70.202 [2], 70.203 [2]] already incorporate pecuniary marital deduction formulas. They need to be modified only if another type of formula is desired.

(1) To divide one-settlor trust according to pecuniary marital deduction formula, select form in Section 71.200[2].

(2) To divide one-settlor trust according to pecuniary bypass formula, select form in Section 71.202[2].

(3) To divide one-settlor trust according to fractional formula, select form in Section 71.204[2].

(4) To divide two-settlor trust according to pecuniary marital deduction formula, select form in Section 71.201[2].

(5) To divide two-settlor trust according to pecuniary bypass formula, select form in Section 71.203[2].

(6) To divide two-settlor trust according to fractional formula, select form in Section 71.205[2].

b. For testamentary trust:

(1) To divide estate according to pecuniary marital deduction formula, select form in Section 71.210[2].

(2) To divide estate according to pecuniary bypass formula, select form in Section 71.222[2].

(3) To divide estate according to fractional formula, select form in Section 71.212[2].

3. If pecuniary formula clause was selected in (2), above, include provision for allocation and valuation of assets [ see § 71.220[2]].

4. Include general qualifying provision for marital deduction share [ see § 71.221[2]].

5. For two-settlor trusts, draft survivor's trust [ see § 71.15; for model complete survivor's trust, see Ch. 70, § 70.202[2], P 5.07].

NOTE:

A survivor's trust contains the separate, quasi-community, and community property of the surviving spouse and therefore should grant the surviving spouse virtually absolute powers over the trust assets, including the power of revocation. For general discussion of survivor's trusts, see Section 71.15. If the survivor's trust will also contain the marital deduction assets, the terms of the survivor's trust must qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [see (6)(b), below]. For discussion, see Sections 71.15 [4], 71.201[1][b], 71.231[1][f].

6. Select distribution provisions for marital deduction trust as follows:

NOTE:

The complete trust forms in Chapter 70 [§§ 70.202 [2], 70.203[2]] are set up as QTIP trusts. They need to be modified only if they are to be converted to a lifetime income/power of appointment trust or an estate trust.

a. For qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, use form in Section 71.230[2].

- b. For lifetime income/power of appointment trust, use form in Section 71.231[2].
  - c. For estate trust, use form in Section 71.232[2].
7. For qualified domestic trust (QDOT) [see discussion in § 71.13[7], add qualification provision in Section 71.222[2]].

§ 71.121 Drafting Guide for Bypass Trusts

NOTE:

When both a marital deduction trust and a bypass trust are created, one formula clause will direct the division of the trust or estate into survivor's (when applicable), marital deduction, and nonmarital shares. The marital deduction share will be held under the terms of the marital deduction trust, and the nonmarital share will be held under the terms of the bypass trust. It is not necessary to select a separate formula clause for the creation of a bypass trust.

1. Select appropriate complete trust form to use as pattern:

a. For two-settlor revocable trust, use form in Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, Section 70.202[2].

b. For one-settlor revocable trust, use form in Chapter 70, Section 70.203[2].

c. For testamentary trust, use form in Chapter 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.210.

2. Modify sample form as necessary to effect distribution pattern desired by client.

NOTE:

A wide degree of latitude is permitted in drafting the distribution for bypass trusts. However, limits must be observed, or the trust assets will be subject to estate taxation when the surviving spouse dies and the tax-saving goals of the trust will not be achieved [ see § 71.14[2]-[4]].

a. Income provisions, either:

(1) All income to surviving spouse for life;

(2) Income payments to surviving spouse pursuant to "ascertainable standard" [ see Ch. 70, § 70.202[2], P 5.09(a)];

(3) Income payments "sprinkled" among surviving spouse and issue pursuant to "ascertainable standard" [ see Ch. 70, § 70.203[2], P 5.10(a)]; or

(4) Income payments to persons other than surviving spouse.

b. "Five or five" power [ see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2); see discussion in § 71.14[4]] permitting spouse to withdraw limited amounts of trust principal [ see Ch. 70, §§ 70.202[2], P 5.09(b), 70.203[2], P 5.10(b)].

c. Discretionary payments of principal to surviving spouse and/or other trust beneficiaries pursuant to ascertainable standard [ see Ch. 70, §§ 70.202[2], P 5.09(a), 70.203[2], P 5.10(a)].

d. Treatment of bypass trust assets on death of surviving spouse:

(1) Outright distribution to named persons.

(2) Division into separate shares for children and issue, with retention in trust for beneficiaries under specified ages [ see Ch. 70, §§ 70.202[2], PP 5.09(c)-(f), 5.10, 70.203 [2], PP 5.10(c)-(f), 5.11].

(3) Retention in "family pot" trust for issue of settlor(s) or testator [ see Ch. 70, §§ 70.212[2] (two-settlor trust), 70.211[2] (one-settlor trust)].

3. Conform terms of disclaimer trust in sample form to reflect any modifications to bypass trust made pursuant to Paragraph 2, above.

NOTE:

The complete marital deduction trust forms in Chapter 70 all contain disclaimer trusts [ see Ch. 70, §§ 70.202[2], P 5.11; 70.203[2], P 5.12]. As discussed in the comments to those forms and in Section 71.16, the inclusion of a disclaimer trust is highly recommended. The terms of the disclaimer trust ordinarily will parallel those of the bypass trust, since the disclaimer trust, like the bypass trust, exists primarily to divert property that would otherwise be taxed in the estate of the surviving spouse.

§ 71.200 Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula for One-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary marital deduction formula clause for a one-settlor inter vivos trust. It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into marital deduction and nonmarital shares, and to fix the value of the marital deduction share in a pecuniary amount. The division will be made upon the settlor's death, but only if the settlor is survived by his or her spouse. For a general discussion of marital deduction formulas and their use in estate planning, see § 71.12.

This form is essentially identical to the one incorporated into the complete trust form in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.203[2]. For discussion of the use of that form, see § 70.203[1]. For a comparable formula for use in a revocable trust created by a husband and wife as joint settlors, see § 71.201[2].

When this form is used, the trust drafter must also include in the trust instrument the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of trust assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause [for discussion, see [g], below].

[b] Formula Clauses

A formula clause divides an estate (or trust) into shares according to a formula. In the case of a marital deduction trust created by one settlor, the formula typically divides the assets of the trust or estate into a marital deduction share and a nonmarital share. The marital deduction share is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], and the nonmarital share is designed to take advantage of the unified credit by sheltering the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] in the estate of the first spouse to die and "bypassing" the estate of the surviving spouse.

[c] Pecuniary and Fractional Formulas

Pecuniary formulas assign a dollar value to one of the shares, and fund the other share with the residue of the estate or trust. A pecuniary formula permits the trustee or other fiduciary to select the actual assets with which the respective shares will be funded. In contrast, fractional formulas require that a specified fraction of each estate asset be assigned to the respective shares.

Pecuniary formula clauses are the most popular marital deduction formula clauses. They offer a wide degree of funding flexibility and avoid administrative headaches associated with fractional formula clauses. For a discussion of fractional formula clauses, see § 71.204[1].

[d] Marital Deduction Formulas and Bypass Formulas

A pecuniary formula may fix the value of either the marital deduction share or the nonmarital share. When the formula is used to fix the value of the marital deduction share, the remaining assets subject to the formula are allocated to the nonmarital share. This type of formula is referred to in this publication as a "pecuniary marital deduction formula," and is illustrated in the form in this section. Conversely, when the formula is used to fix the value of the nonmarital share, the remaining assets are allocated to the marital deduction share. The latter type of formula is referred to in this publication as a "pecuniary bypass formula" and is illustrated in the forms in §§ 71.202[2] (one-settlor trust) and 71.203[2] (two-settlor trust).

The practical difference between these two kinds of formulas is in the treatment of appreciated assets. Assets in the trust or estate may appreciate or depreciate in value after the death of the first spouse but before the two shares actually have been funded. Under a pecuniary marital deduction formula, the appreciation or depreciation will be allocated to the nonmarital share. Conversely, under a pecuniary bypass formula, the appreciation or depreciation will be transferred to the marital deduction share.

In recent history, assets have tended to appreciate more often than they have depreciated. Since the assets of the nonmarital share will not be subject to estate taxation on the death of the surviving spouse, while the assets of the marital deduction share will be taxed in the survivor's estate, many estate planners prefer to fund the marital deduction share by the pecuniary formula and to transfer the potential for appreciation to the nonmarital share, where it will be sheltered from estate taxation when the surviving spouse dies. This feature accounts for the popularity of pecuniary marital deduction formula clauses. For further discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Selection of a pecuniary marital deduction formula over a pecuniary bypass formula is not as simple as making an "educated guess" about whether assets are likely to appreciate or depreciate between the date of death and the date of funding the respective trusts. While the formula looks at estate tax values (ordinarily date of death values) in determining the pecuniary amount, the pecuniary amount is usually funded using date of distribution values [see [g], below]. If an asset funding the pecuniary share (whether it is the marital deduction share or the bypass share) has appreciated between those two dates, a capital gains tax is assessed on the amount of the appreciation. Thus, many estate planners determine whether to define the marital deduction amount or the bypass amount as the pecuniary share based on the size of the estate. If the estate is very large, so that the marital deduction share will be larger than the bypass share, a pecuniary bypass formula would be selected. Conversely, if the estate is too large to be completely sheltered by the "applicable exclusion amount" available in the estate of the surviving spouse, but not too large to be completely sheltered by the sum of the two "applicable exclusion amounts" available in the estates of the two spouses, the planner might choose a pecuniary marital deduction formula. In either case, exposure to the capital gains tax would have been minimized. Commentary by Albert G.

[e] Formula Amount

The formula clause in this form sets the value of the marital deduction share at the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at the death of the settlor. It also specifies other factors that must be taken into account in determining this amount, such as the value of any other property that passes or has passed to the surviving spouse and that qualifies for the marital deduction, the unified credit available in the estate of the deceased spouse [see I.R.C. § 2010], and all other estate tax deductions and credits. Note that the credit for state death taxes [I.R.C. § 2011], referred to in subsection (a)(4) of this form, is repealed for decedents dying after 2004 [I.R.C. § 2011(f)].

[f] Pick and Choose Clauses

Pecuniary formula clauses that permit the executor or trustee to select the assets with which the marital deduction share is to be funded are commonly called "pick and choose" or "flexible funding" clauses. This type of clause permits the executor or trustee to allocate assets with a good potential for appreciation to the nonmarital share (bypass trust), where they will escape taxation on the death of the surviving spouse. The ultimate decision as to which assets to allocate to the two shares may be deferred until after the death of the deceased spouse, when the advisability of allocating particular assets to one share or the other will be more readily apparent. For this reason, a "pick and choose" clause can introduce valuable flexibility into the estate plan. Most pecuniary formula clauses, including those used in the forms in this publication, are "pick and choose" clauses.

[g] Valuation Issues

Under a pecuniary formula clause, the size of the pecuniary gift is determined based on final estate tax values of the property in the estate. For purposes of a decedent's federal estate tax return, property is valued at its value on the date of the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 2031(a)]. The executor may elect instead, however, to have property valued at the earlier of (1) the date of distribution, or (2) six months after the date of the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 2032(a)]. This latter date is referred to as the "alternate valuation date." If elected, the alternate valuation date must be used to value each and every asset in the decedent's estate [I.R.C. § 2032(a); Treas. Reg. § 20.2032-1(b)(1) (partial election not permitted)].

Once the amount of the pecuniary gift has been determined in the manner specified above, the individual assets must be valued for purposes of satisfying the pecuniary gift. This form gives the attorney the option of requiring that either date of death values or date of distribution values will be used in making this latter determination. If the will or trust instrument is silent on this point, the Probate Code provides that date of distribution values will be used [Prob. Code § 21120(a)].

If date of death values are used, there is a possibility that the values assigned to the each asset might not reflect the economic realities at the time the trust is actually funded. To address this problem, the IRS has promulgated two tests, known as the "fairly representative" and "minimum worth" tests [see Rev. Proc. 64-19, 1964-1 C.B. 682]. When date of death values are used, the will or trust instrument must direct the trustee or executor to comply with one or the other of these tests [see Rev. Proc. 64-19, 1964-1 C.B. 682].

To address these issues, the forms in this publication contain a separate provision dealing with valuation of assets for marital deduction purposes. This form appears in § 71.220[2]. That form must be included in any marital deduction trust in which any of the pecuniary formula clauses contained in this publication are used. For additional discussion of valuation issues, and the various valuation options available to the trust drafter, see the discussion in § 71.220[1].

Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula for One-Settlor Trust

Division of Trust Estate If Settlor Is Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], on the death of the settlor, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into two shares, hereafter referred to as the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of assets having a value equal to the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at the death of the settlor, taking into account the following:

(1) The net value of all other property that passes or has passed to the settlor's

_____ [husband or wife] under this trust instrument, the will of the settlor, or otherwise and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. For purposes of this subparagraph, any qualified disclaimer made by the settlor's

_____ [husband or wife] shall be disregarded, and any property that will qualify as qualified terminable interest property under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) if the requisite election is made shall be considered to be qualified terminable interest property, regardless of whether the election is made;

(2) All federal estate tax deductions and exclusions actually allowed, other than the marital deduction;

(3) The applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to the estate of the settlor;

(4) The credit for state death taxes available to the estate of the settlor, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and

(5) Any other allowable credits available to the estate of the settlor (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of the settlor's death), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify this gift from receiving the marital deduction.

(b) The Marital Deduction Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust] as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

(c) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Marital Deduction Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(d) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

§ 71.201 Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula for Two-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary marital deduction formula clause for a two-settlor inter vivos trust. It is similar to the form in § 71.200, but has been adapted for use in a marital deduction trust created by joint settlors, as opposed to a sole settlor. For an illustration of the use of this provision in a complete marital deduction trust, see Paragraph 5.04 of the form in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, § 70.202[2].

For general information about marital deduction formula clauses, and pecuniary marital deduction formula clauses in particular, see § 71.200[1]. The commentary in that section is important and should be reviewed before this form is used.

When this form is used, the trust drafter must also include in the trust instrument the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of trust assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause [for discussion, see §§ 71.200[1][g], 71.220[1]].

[b] Division of Trust Estate on Death of First Joint Settlor

In a two-settlor trust, as in a one-settlor trust, the trust estate is divided into separate trusts or shares on the death of the first spouse. However, the division of a two-settlor trust is more complicated than for a one-settlor trust. A two-settlor trust contains, in addition to the assets of the deceased settlor, the surviving spouse's share of any community property in the trust. It may also contain separate property and quasi-community property of the surviving settlor.

This form segregates the assets owned by the surviving settlor into a separate share, referred to as the survivor's share, and places that share in a "survivor's trust." For discussion of this division, see §§ 71.12[2], 71.15. The survivor's trust typically will remain revocable by the surviving spouse during his or her lifetime.

After the survivor's share has been established, the remaining trust assets are segregated into a marital share and a nonmarital share, in much the same manner as described in § 71.200[1][b] with respect to a one-settlor trust. The trust drafter has two options with respect to the marital share. The marital share may be either (1) combined with the survivor's share as part of the survivor's trust; or (2) placed in a separate marital deduction trust. Option 1--combination with the survivor's share--can be exercised only if (1) the survivor's trust is set up in a manner that will qualify it as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust for marital deduction purposes [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see also §§ 71.13[5], 71.15[4], 71.231[1] for discussion]; and (2) the settlors are willing to give the survivor powers over the marital deduction property equal to those that the survivor may exercise over his or her own assets in the trust, including the power of revocation. If the marital deduction trust will be a qualified terminable interest (QTIP) trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7); see §§ 71.13[4], 71.230[1] for discussion], or if the survivor's powers over the marital deduction trust assets are to be more restricted than his or her powers over the survivor's trust, then Option 2--separate treatment for the survivor's share and the marital deduction share--must be exercised [ see § 70.202 [2], P 5.03, for an illustration of the use of this option in a complete form creating a QTIP trust].

The nonmarital share must remain segregated from the other trust assets in any case, to avoid inclusion in the surviving settlor's estate. The form in this section assumes, as is usually the case, that the nonmarital share will be placed in a bypass trust [for additional discussion of bypass trusts, see § 71.14]. Thus, depending on which of the two options noted in the preceding paragraph is selected, this form will divide the trust either into two trusts (a "two-trust split") or three trusts (a "three-trust split"). The form in § 70.202[2] in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, illustrates a three-trust split. For a complete trust instrument illustrating a two-trust split, see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS FORMS, Division 1, Complete Inter Vivos Trusts, Trust 32 (Matthew Bender).

For additional discussion, see § 71.231[1][f]; see also CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, § 112.03[5][b] (Matthew Bender).

Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula for Two-Settlor Trust

Division of Trust Estate After Death of Deceased Settlor. On the death of the deceased settlor, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into three shares, hereafter referred to as the Survivor's Share, the Marital Deduction Share, and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Survivor's Share shall consist of the portion of the trust estate consisting of the surviving settlor's one-half interest in the settlors' community property, the surviving settlor's one-half interest in the deceased settlor's quasi-community property, and all of the surviving settlor's separate property and quasi-community property.

(b) The Survivor's Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Survivor's Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

(c) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of assets (excluding assets included in the Survivor's Share) having a value equal to the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at the death of the deceased settlor, taking into account the following:

- (1) The net value of all other property that passes or has passed to the surviving settlor under this trust instrument, the will of the deceased settlor, or otherwise and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. For purposes of this subsection, any qualified disclaimer made by the surviving settlor shall be disregarded, and any property that will qualify as qualified terminable interest property under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) if the requisite election is made shall be considered to be qualified terminable interest property, regardless of whether the election is made;

(2) All federal estate tax deductions and exclusions actually allowed other than the marital deduction;

(3) The applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to the estate of the deceased settlor;

(4) The credit for state death taxes available to the estate of the deceased settlor, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and

(5) Any other allowable credits available to the estate of the deceased settlor (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of death of the deceased settlor), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify this gift from receiving the marital deduction.

(d) The Marital Deduction Share shall be _____ [for an outright devise: distributed outright to the surviving settlor or, to establish a marital deduction trust: held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the _____ (Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust) as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument or, to combine marital deduction share with survivor's share in survivor's trust: added to the Survivor's Trust established in subparagraph (b), above].

(e) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Survivor's Share or the Marital Deduction Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(f) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

§ 71.202 Pecuniary Bypass Formula for One-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary bypass formula clause for a one-settlor inter vivos trust. It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into marital deduction and nonmarital shares, and to fix the value of the nonmarital share in a pecuniary amount. The division will be made upon the settlor's death, but only if the settlor is survived by his or her spouse.

For a general discussion of marital deduction formulas and their use in estate planning, see § 71.12. For general information on pecuniary formula clauses in general, and the distinctions between a pecuniary bypass formula and a pecuniary marital deduction formula, see § 71.200[1].

When this form is used, the trust drafter must also include in the trust instrument the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of trust assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause [for discussion, see §§ 71.200[1][g], 71.220[1]].

[b] Pecuniary Bypass Formulas

A pecuniary formula may be used to fix the value of either the marital deduction share or the nonmarital share. This form fixes the value of the nonmarital share and allocates the balance of the trust assets to the marital deduction share.

A formula that fixes the value of the nonmarital share will have the effect of allocating post-death appreciation or depreciation of trust assets to the marital deduction share. Thus, post-death appreciation will not be taxed in the deceased spouse's estate due to the availability of the unlimited marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], but any such appreciation in the assets allocated to the marital deduction share will be subject to tax in the surviving spouse's estate when the surviving spouse dies. In contrast, a pecuniary marital deduction formula clause, which fixes the value of the marital deduction share, will shift that appreciation and depreciation into the nonmarital share. Since the nonmarital share is not subject to estate taxation when the surviving spouse dies, and since in recent history assets have tended to appreciate more often than they have depreciated, pecuniary marital deduction formula clauses are more widely used than pecuniary nonmarital formula clauses [see also the Practice Tip in § 71.200[1][d]].

Pecuniary Bypass Formula for One-Settlor Trust

Division of Trust Estate If Settlor Is Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], on the death of the settlor, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into two shares, hereafter referred to as the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of the largest amount, if any, of property that can pass free of federal estate tax by reason of (1) the applicable exclusion amount available to the settlor's estate; (2) the credit for state death taxes available to the settlor's estate, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and (3) any other allowable credits or exclusions available to the settlor's estate (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of the settlor's death), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify the Marital Deduction Share from receiving the marital deduction. Any qualified disclaimer made by the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] shall be disregarded in determining this amount. [Optional: The amount of this pecuniary gift may be affected by a number of considerations, including but not limited to the following:

(1) The net value of all property that passes or has passed to the settlor's

_____ (wife or husband) under this instrument, the will of the settlor, or otherwise, and that qualifies for federal estate tax purposes and that does not qualify for the federal estate tax marital or charitable deduction;

(2) The value of all property disposed of by the settlor that constitutes "adjusted taxable gifts"; and

(3) All charges to principal that are deductible under Internal Revenue Code Section 2053 but that are not deducted in computing the federal estate tax liability for the gross estate of the settlor. Because of the foregoing factors it is possible that no property will pass to the Nonmarital Share.]

(b) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

(c) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Nonmarital Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(d) The Marital Deduction Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust] as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

§ 71.203 Pecuniary Bypass Formula for Two-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary bypass formula clause for a two-settlor inter vivos trust. It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into survivor's, marital deduction, and nonmarital shares, and to fix the value of the nonmarital share in a pecuniary amount. The division will be made upon the death of the first settlor.

When this form is used, the trust drafter must also include in the trust instrument the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of trust assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause [for discussion, see §§ 71.200[1][g], 71.220[1]].

[b] Pecuniary Bypass Formulas

The pecuniary bypass formula in this form is essentially the same as the form in § 71.202[2], adapted to a two-settlor trust. Pecuniary bypass formulas are not used as widely as pecuniary marital deduction formulas. For discussion of pecuniary bypass formulas, see § 71.202[1]. For additional discussion of the use of marital deduction formulas, and related issues, see § 71.200[1].

[c] Division of Trust Estate Into Shares

This form divides the trust estate into the same three shares (survivor's share, marital deduction share, and nonmarital share) as the pecuniary marital deduction formula in § 71.201[2]. Like the latter form, this form permits the settlors to establish three separate trusts (survivor's trust, marital deduction trust, and bypass trust), or, in the alternative, to combine the survivor's share and marital deduction share into a single trust, resulting in the creation of a total of two trusts (survivor's trust qualifying for marital deduction, and bypass trust). For discussion of these alternative approaches, see § 71.201[1][b].

(b) The Survivor's Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Survivor's Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

(c) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of the largest amount, if any, of property (excluding assets included in the Survivor's Share) that can pass free of federal estate tax by reason of (1) the applicable exclusion amount available to the estate of the deceased settlor; (2) the credit for state death taxes available to the estate of the deceased settlor, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and (3) any other allowable credits or exclusions available to the estate of the deceased settlor (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of death of the deceased settlor), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify the Marital Deduction Share from receiving the marital deduction. § 71.204 Fractional Formula for One-Settlor Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a fractional formula clause for a one-settlor trust. It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into a marital deduction share and a nonmarital share, and to determine the value of the marital deduction share according to a fractional formula. The division will be made upon the settlor's death, but only if the settlor is survived by his or her spouse. For a fractional formula clause suitable for use in a two-settlor trust, see § 71.205[2].

[b] Fractional Formula

When a fractional formula clause is used, a fractional share of each trust asset will be allocated to the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share. The fractional share that is allocated to the marital deduction share is typically stated as the smallest fractional share of the residuary assets necessary to eliminate estate taxes in the client's estate, or to reduce those taxes to the maximum extent possible.

The funding and valuation problems that arise when pecuniary formula clauses are used do not arise when fractional formulas are used. It is not necessary for the executor or trustee to allocate particular assets to the marital deduction and nonmarital shares, since each asset is divided between the two shares. Since fractional formula clauses require the different beneficiaries to become co-owners of each assets, however, administrative difficulties can arise. For this reason, fractional formula clauses are used less frequently than pecuniary formula clauses, although some estate planners prefer them. For further discussion of fractional formula clauses, see § 71.12[3][c]. For a comparison between pecuniary formula clauses and fractional formula clauses, and discussion of pecuniary formula clauses, see § 71.200[1].

Division of Trust Estate If Settlor Is Survived by _____ [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], on the death of the settlor, the trustee shall divide the trust estate into two shares, hereafter referred to as the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share.

(a) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of the smallest fractional share of the trust estate that, when added to the total value for federal estate tax purposes of all other interests in property that pass or have passed from the settlor to the settlor's _____ [wife or husband], that qualify for the marital deduction, and that are includible in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes, will entirely eliminate (or reduce to the maximum possible extent) any federal estate tax payable at the settlor's death, after taking into account:

(1) All available deductions and exclusions taken in determining the estate tax payable by reason of the death of the settlor's death; and

(2) The applicable exclusion amount and the state death tax credit (but only to the extent that use of the state death tax credit does not increase the state death taxes payable or the federal death taxes payable in any event, without reference to the availability of that credit), but no other credits.

Any property or interest in property with respect to which a credit for foreign death taxes is allowed for federal estate tax purposes shall not be allocated to the Marital Deduction Share unless the other property of the settlor's estate is insufficient to fund fully the Marital Deduction Share.

(b) It is the settlor's intent that assets qualifying for the federal estate tax marital deduction shall be allocated to the Marital Deduction Share only to the extent that such an allocation will reduce the federal estate tax otherwise payable by reason of the settlor's death. The executor shall allocate the assets as between the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata basis. Any assets allocated in kind shall be valued for purposes of allocation at their values on the date or dates of distribution.

(c) The Marital Deduction Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust] as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

(d) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of all assets not allocated to the Marital Deduction Share under the formula specified in this paragraph.

(e) The Nonmarital Share shall be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of the Bypass Trust as set forth in Paragraph _____ of this instrument.

[a] Use of Form

This form is a fractional formula clause for a two-settlor inter vivos trust. It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into survivor's, marital deduction, and nonmarital shares, and to determine the value of the marital deduction share according to a fractional formula. The division will be made upon the death of the first settlor to die.

§ 71.210 Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula Devise and Residuary Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary marital deduction formula for use in a will. It may be used to make a marital deduction devise (either outright or in trust), and a residuary devise that will not qualify for the marital deduction and will be placed in a bypass trust. In effect, it will divide the testator's estate into marital deduction and nonmarital shares, with the value of the marital deduction share being determined by a pecuniary formula. For a discussion of pecuniary formulas, their use in marital deduction estate planning, and their operation see § 71.200[1].

This disposition will take effect only if the testator's spouse survives the testator. An alternative residuary disposition must be included in the will to deal with the possibility that the testator's spouse will predecease the testator.

When this form is used, the will drafter must also include in the will the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause.

[b] Pecuniary Formula Clauses in Wills

Although a pecuniary formula in a will ultimately achieves a result similar to that of a comparable formula in an inter vivos trust, the formula is stated in a somewhat different format in a will, due to the differences between wills and inter vivos trust instruments. In an inter vivos trust, the formula clause simply divides the trust assets into the appropriate shares (marital deduction share and nonmarital share, as well as survivor's share in the case of a two-settlor trust). In a will, a pecuniary formula clause makes a general pecuniary devise and allocates that devise either to the marital deduction share, as in this form (a "pecuniary marital deduction formula"), or to the nonmarital share, as in the form in § 70.211[2] (a "pecuniary bypass formula"). Other will provisions may make specific or pecuniary devises to named persons, as in any other will. The residuary clause of the will then allocates the remaining assets to the other share. When a pecuniary marital deduction formula clause such as this form is used, the residuary devise of the will allocates the balance of the testator's property to the nonmarital (bypass) share. Conversely, when a pecuniary bypass formula is used, the residuary clause allocates the balance of the testator's property to the marital deduction share. For complete wills containing a pecuniary marital deduction formula, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, §§ 61.213[2], 61.214[2].

Pecuniary marital deduction formulas are probably the most frequently used marital deduction formulas, because they permit post-death appreciation in the assets of the estate to be allocated to the nonmarital share, which will escape taxation on the death of the surviving spouse [see the Practice Tip in § 71.200[1][d] for discussion of considerations in selecting a pecuniary formula]. For discussion, see § 71.200[1]. For a pecuniary bypass formula, see § 71.211[2].

Pecuniary Marital Deduction Formula Devise and Residuary Clause

[Insert in article of will that makes particular devises:]

Marital Deduction Gift. If my _____ [wife or husband] survives me [specify survivorship period if desired, e.g., for _____ (e.g., six months)], I give a pecuniary gift (referred to as the "marital deduction gift"), in the amount determined in this paragraph, _____ [for an outright devise: outright to _____ (him or her) or, to establish a marital deduction trust: to the trustee, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms set forth in Article ____ applicable to the _____ (Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust)]. The marital deduction gift shall be the minimum amount necessary to eliminate (or reduce to the maximum extent possible) any federal estate tax at my death, taking into account the following:

(a) The net value of all other property that passes or has passed to my _____ [wife or husband] under this will or otherwise and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. For purposes of this subparagraph of the will, any qualified disclaimer made by my _____ [wife or husband] shall be disregarded, and any property that will qualify as qualified terminable interest property under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) if my executor makes the requisite election shall be considered to be qualified terminable interest property, regardless of whether the election is made;

(b) All federal estate tax deductions and exclusions actually allowed other than the marital deduction;

(c) The applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to my estate;

(d) The credit for state death taxes available to my estate, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and

(e) Any other allowable credits available to my estate (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of my death), but only to the extent that those credits do not disqualify this gift from receiving the marital deduction.

If my _____ [wife or husband] does not survive me [specify survivorship period if desired, e.g., for _____ (e.g., six months)], this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

[Insert as residuary clause of will:]

Disposition of Residue. If my _____ [wife or husband] survives me _____ [if desired, add survivorship period not to exceed six months, e.g., for six months], I give the residue of my estate (referred to as the "bypass gift") to the trustee, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms set forth in Paragraph _____ applicable to the Bypass Trust.

§ 71.211 Pecuniary Bypass Formula Devise and Residuary Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a pecuniary bypass formula for use in a will. It may be used to make a nonmarital devise (that is, a devise that does not qualify for the marital deduction) in trust, and a residuary devise (either outright or in trust) that will qualify for the marital deduction. In effect, it will divide the testator's estate into marital deduction and nonmarital shares, with the value of the nonmarital share being determined by a pecuniary formula. For a discussion of pecuniary formulas, their use in marital deduction estate planning, and their operation, see § 71.200[1].

In this form, the nonmarital devise is described as the "bypass gift." This is because the nonmarital share is customarily held in a "bypass trust" that will be sheltered from estate taxation when the surviving spouse dies. For a general discussion of bypass trusts, see § 71.14.

This disposition will take effect only if the testator's spouse survives the testator. An alternative residuary disposition must be included to deal with the possibility that the testator's spouse will predecease the testator.

When this form is used, the will drafter must also include in the will the form in § 71.220[2], relating to valuation of assets for purposes of the pecuniary formula clause.

[b] Use of Pecuniary Bypass Formula In Will

A pecuniary formula may be used to fix the value of either the marital deduction share or the nonmarital share. When the formula is used to fix the value of the marital deduction share, as in the form in § 71.210[2] (a "pecuniary marital deduction formula"), the residue is allocated to the nonmarital share. Conversely, when the formula is used to fix the value of the nonmarital share, as in this form (a "pecuniary bypass formula"), the residue is allocated to the marital deduction share. For additional discussion of the operation of pecuniary formula clauses in wills, see § 71.210[1][b].

Pecuniary marital deduction formulas [ see § 71.210[2]] are more commonly used than pecuniary bypass formulas because they allocate any post-death appreciation in the assets of the estate to the nonmarital share, which will escape taxation on the death of the surviving spouse. For discussion, see § 71.200[1][b]-[d] [see the Practice Tip in § 71.200[1][d] for discussion of considerations in selecting a pecuniary formula].

[Insert in article of will that makes particular devises:]

Bypass Gift. If my _____ [wife or husband] survives me _____ [if desired, add survivorship period not to exceed six months, e.g., for six months], I give a pecuniary gift (referred to as the "bypass gift"), in the amount determined in this paragraph, to the trustee, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms set forth in Article _____ applicable to the Bypass Trust. The bypass gift shall be the largest amount, if any, of property that can pass free of federal estate tax by reason of (1) the applicable exclusion amount, as specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2010, available to my estate; (2) the credit for state death taxes available to my estate, to the extent that the use of that credit does not result in or increase any death tax payable to any state; and (3) any other allowable credits or exclusions available to my estate (except the credit for tax on prior transfers from a "transferor," as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2013, who dies within two years after the date of my death), but only to the extent that those credits or exclusions do not disqualify the marital deduction gift from receiving the marital deduction. Any qualified disclaimer made by my _____ [wife or husband] shall be disregarded in determining this amount. [Optional: The amount of this pecuniary gift may be affected by a number of considerations, including but not limited to the following:

(a) The net value of all property disposed of by this will or otherwise that is included in my gross estate for federal estate tax purposes and that does not qualify for the federal estate tax marital or charitable deduction;

(b) The value of all property disposed of by me that constitutes "adjusted taxable gifts"; and

(c) All charges to principal that are deductible under Internal Revenue Code Section 2053 but that are not deducted in computing the federal estate tax liability for my gross estate.

Because of the foregoing factors it is possible that no property will pass pursuant to this provision.] If my _____ [wife or husband] does not survive me [specify survivorship period if desired, e.g., for _____ (e.g., six months)], this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

[Insert as residuary clause of will:]

Disposition of Residue. § 71.212 Fractional Formula Residuary Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a fractional formula residuary clause for a will. It requires the executor to divide the residue of the estate into a marital deduction share and a nonmarital share, and to determine the value of the marital deduction share according to a fractional formula. The marital deduction share may be given to the testator's surviving spouse either outright or in trust, while the nonmarital share is typically placed in a "bypass" trust designed to escape taxation on the death of the testator's surviving spouse [see discussion of bypass trusts in § 71.14].

This form may be used as an alternative to the pecuniary formula clauses illustrated in §§ 71.210[2] (pecuniary marital deduction formula) and 71.211[2] (pecuniary bypass formula).

This disposition will take effect only if the testator's spouse survives the testator. An alternative residuary disposition must be included to deal with the possibility that the testator's spouse will predecease the testator.

[b] Fractional Formula in Will

When a fractional formula is used to divide an estate into marital deduction and nonmarital shares, the respective shares will receive a fractional interest in each and every asset in the residue of the estate. The fractional share that is allocated to the marital deduction share typically is stated as the smallest fractional share of the residuary assets necessary to eliminate estate taxes in the client's estate, or to reduce those taxes to the maximum extent possible. All the rest of the residuary assets are allocated to the nonmarital share.

The funding and valuation problems that arise when pecuniary formula clauses are used do not arise when fractional formulas are used. It is not necessary for the executor to allocate particular assets to the marital deduction and nonmarital shares, since each asset is divided between the two shares. Since fractional formula clauses require the different beneficiaries to become co-owners of each asset, however, administrative difficulties can arise. For this reason, fractional formula clauses are used less frequently than pecuniary formula clauses.

For further discussion of fractional formula clauses, see §§ 71.12[3][c] and 71.204[1][b].

[2] Form

Disposition of Residue. If my _____ [wife or husband] survives me _____ [if desired, add survivorship period not to exceed six months, e.g., for six months], I give the residue of my estate as follows:

(a) The executor shall divide the residue of my estate into two shares, which are hereafter referred to as the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share.

(b) The Marital Deduction Share shall consist of the smallest fractional share of the residue of my estate that, when added to the total value for federal estate tax purposes of all other interests in property that pass or have passed from me to or in trust for my _____ [husband or wife], and that are includible in my gross estate for federal estate tax purposes and qualify for the marital deduction, will entirely eliminate (or reduce to the maximum possible extent) any federal estate tax payable at my death, after taking into account (1) all available deductions and exclusions taken in determining the estate tax payable by reason of my death; (2) the applicable exclusion amount and the state death tax credit (but only to the extent that use of the state death tax credit does not increase the state death taxes payable or the federal death taxes payable in any event, without reference to the availability of that credit), but no other credits; and (3) the net value of all other property, whether given under this will or otherwise, that passes at the time of my death, or has passed before my death, to or in trust for my _____ [husband or wife], that is included in my gross estate, and that qualifies for the federal estate tax marital deduction. Any property or interest in property with respect to which a credit for foreign death taxes is allowed for federal estate tax purposes shall not be allocated to the Marital Deduction Share unless the other property of my estate is insufficient to fund fully the Marital Deduction Share.

(c) It is my intent that assets qualifying for the federal estate tax marital deduction shall be allocated to the Marital Deduction Share only to the extent that such an allocation will reduce the federal estate tax otherwise payable by reason of my death. The executor shall allocate the assets as between the Marital Deduction Share and the Nonmarital Share in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata basis. Any assets allocated in kind shall be valued for purposes of allocation at their values on the date or dates of distribution.

(d) I give the Marital Deduction Share _____ [for an outright devise: outright to my _____ (husband or wife) or, to establish a marital deduction trust: to the trustee, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms set forth in Article _____ applicable to the _____ (Power of Appointment Trust or Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust)].

(e) The Nonmarital Share shall consist of that portion of the residue of my estate that is not included in the Marital Deduction Share under the formula set forth in this paragraph.

(f) I give the Nonmarital Share to the trustee, to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms set forth in Article _____ applicable to the Bypass Trust.

§ 71.220 Allocation and Valuation of Assets Under Pecuniary Formula

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form should be used in any will or trust instrument containing a pecuniary formula clause, to specify how assets are to be allocated between the marital and nonmarital shares, and how assets are to be valued for purposes of that allocation. It should be included whenever the trust instrument contains either a pecuniary marital deduction formula [see forms in §§ 71.200[2], 71.201[2] (inter vivos trusts), 71.210[2] (testamentary trust)] or a pecuniary bypass formula [see forms in §§ 71.202[2], 71.203[2] (inter vivos trusts), 71.211[2] (testamentary trust)]. This form should not be used with a fractional formula clause [ see §§ 71.204[2], 71.205[2] (inter vivos trusts), 71.212[2] (testamentary trust)]. The form language is drafted for use in either an inter vivos trust or a testamentary trust.

[b] Allocation and Valuation Under Pecuniary Formula Clause

When a pecuniary formula clause is used to divide a trust estate, the executor or trustee will have to decide what assets to allocate to the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share, and what values to assign to the assets when they are allocated.

For federal estate tax purposes, assets are usually valued at their value on the date of the decedent's death [I.R.C. § 2031(a)]. However, the executor may elect to value property at the date on which the property is actually distributed or the date six months after the decedent's death, whichever is earlier [I.R.C. § 2032(a)(1), (2)]. In drafting a trust instrument, the attorney should specify whether "date of death" values or "date of distribution" values should be used in allocating assets between the marital deduction share and the nonmarital share. This form permits the drafter to select either date of death values or date of distribution values for the purpose of allocating assets to the respective shares created by the pecuniary formula clause.

[c] Date of Distribution Values

Valuation of assets as of the date of distribution ordinarily will promote the greatest fairness, since the two trusts will receive assets that are fairly valued at the time of allocation. However, date-of-distribution valuation may raise income tax issues. When an appreciated or depreciated asset is transferred in satisfaction of a pecuniary bequest, income tax gain or loss may be realized. For income tax purposes, the basis of an asset received from a deceased person ordinarily is the fair market value of the asset at the time of the deceased person's death [I.R.C. § 1014(a)(1)]; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, for a detailed discussion]. If the fair market value of the asset exceeds its basis and the asset is transferred to satisfy a gift in a specific dollar amount (that is, a pecuniary gift), the difference between the fair market value and the basis will be recognized as gain [Treas. Reg. § 1.661(a)-2(f)(1)]. Conversely, if the fair market value of the asset is less than its basis and the asset is transferred to satisfy a gift in a specific dollar amount (that is, a pecuniary gift), a loss will be recognized [Treas. Reg. § 1.661(a)-2(f)(1)].

[d] Date of Death Values

Recognition of gain and loss will be avoided if the assets are valued as of the date of the decedent's death [see I.R.C. § 1014; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, for a detailed discussion]. However, when date of death valuation is used, a danger exists that the assets actually allocated to the two trusts might not affect economic reality.

Assets in a trust or estate may fluctuate in value between the date of death and the date of distribution. Although this fluctuation in value usually will not be substantial, in large estates even minor fluctuations in value can have a significant financial impact. In such a case, there may be a disparity between the value of the two shares for estate tax purposes and the value of the assets actually received by the two trusts. Under these circumstances, there is a potential for the use of date of death values as a device to transfer post-death appreciation to the nonmarital share (where it will escape taxation on the surviving spouse's death) rather than the marital deduction share, thereby in effect underfunding the marital deduction share.

To limit the potential for abuse in connection with the use of date of death values, the IRS has established rules governing date of death valuation. These rules, contained in Revenue Procedure 64-19 [Rev. Proc. 64-19, 1964-1 C.B. 682], require that when date of death valuation is used, either (1) distributions must fairly reflect the appreciation and depreciation in estate or trust assets during administration (or, in the case of a living trust, during the time between the settlor's death and funding of the marital deduction share)--the so-called "fairly representative" test; or (2) the marital deduction share must be funded to an amount at least equal to the marital deduction actually taken on the federal income tax return--the so-called "minimum worth" test. When date of death values are used, this form gives the drafter the option of selecting either test. While the minimum worth test appears to give the greatest flexibility because it merely establishes a floor for the marital deduction share, thereby permitting the executor or trustee to divert appreciated property to the exempt portion once the floor amount of the marital deduction share has been satisfied, the executor or trustee nevertheless must adhere to basic principles of fairness in allocating assets. The Probate Code requires trustees to deal with trust beneficiaries impartially [Prob. Code § 16003] and to exercise discretion reasonably and not in an arbitrary manner [Prob. Code § 16080].

[2] Form*Allocation and Valuation of Assets Under Pecuniary Formula

Allocation and Valuation of Assets. In allocating assets between the marital deduction _____ [for a testamentary trust: gift or, for an inter vivos trust: share] and the bypass _____ [gift or share], the _____ [for a testamentary trust: executor or, for an inter vivos trust: trustee] shall allocate the trust assets that qualify for the marital deduction between the marital deduction _____ [gift or share] and the nonmarital _____ [gift or share] in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not; subject, however, to the following:

(a) Only assets that qualify for the marital deduction shall be allocated to the marital deduction _____ [gift or share].

(b) Assets allocated in kind shall be _____ [to use date of distribution values: valued for purposes of allocation on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "minimum worth" test: deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, but in no event shall the date of distribution values be less than the amount of the marital deduction or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes under "fairly representative" test: deemed to satisfy the marital deduction amount on the basis of their values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided, however, that the _____ (executor or trustee) shall act impartially, consistent with equitable principles requiring impartiality among beneficiaries, in allocating assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction _____ (gift or share), so that any distribution of assets in satisfaction of the marital deduction _____ (gift or share) shall be made of assets, including cash, fairly representative of appreciation or depreciation in the value of all property thus available for distribution].

(c) The trustee shall not allocate assets that qualify for the foreign death tax credit to the marital deduction _____ (gift or share) unless all other assets or interests available for allocation have been so allocated.

§ 71.221 Intention That Marital Deduction Share Qualify for Marital Deduction

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision stating that the marital deduction share is intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction and that the trustee may not take any action or exercise any power that may impair the deduction, except as otherwise provided in the instrument with respect to the QTIP election [see [b], below].

This form may be used in any instrument that creates a trust, whether the instrument is inter vivos or testamentary, and regardless of whether the trust is created by one settlor or two.

This form is in the nature of a "saving" clause, since a properly drafted marital deduction trust should not permit the trustee to take any actions that are incompatible with the marital deduction. However, it may prove valuable in the event that some aspect of a broad grant of powers to the trustee is later deemed to be incompatible with the marital deduction, or in the event that the tax laws governing the marital deduction change.

[b] Exception for QTIP Election

This form includes optional language that should be added if the instrument creates a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. When a QTIP trust is used, the executor will have to decide whether or not to elect to have all or part of the QTIP trust assets qualify for the marital deduction [ see §§ 71.10[4][d], 71.13 [4]]. In some cases, it may be desirable not to make a QTIP election, or to make only a partial QTIP election. This form should not tie the executor's hands and require that a QTIP election be made; or that the election, if made, must be made with respect to all of the eligible assets. The optional language will permit the executor to exercise discretion in making or not making a QTIP election.

[2] Form*Intention That Marital Deduction Share Qualify for Marital Deduction

It is _____ [for testamentary trust: my or for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlors'] intention that the marital deduction share shall qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, and this _____ [instrument or will] shall be construed accordingly. [If QTIP election is contemplated, add: Except as otherwise provided in this _____ (will or instrument) with respect to the QTIP election,] [N]o fiduciary shall take any action or exercise any power that may impair the federal estate tax marital deduction.

§ 71.222 Qualification Provision for Qualified Domestic Trust (QDOT)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to convert a marital deduction trust into a qualified domestic trust (QDOT) [see I.R.C. §§ 2056(d)(1), (2), 2056A]. It is designed to be inserted in the trust instrument of a QTIP trust [see I.R.C. § 1056(b)(7)] and discussion in § 71.13[4] or a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] and discussion in § 71.13[5] when the trust would not otherwise qualify for the marital deduction because the surviving spouse is not a citizen of the United States [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(1), (2)].

[b] Marital Deduction When Spouse is Noncitizen

If the deceased spouse dies after November 10, 1988, and the surviving spouse is not a citizen of the United States, a trust will not qualify for the marital deduction unless it is a QDOT that meets all of the requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 2056A [I.R.C. § 2056(d)(1), (2); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-1(a) (effective date)]. The Treasury Regulations mandate specific provisions that must be included in the governing instrument of a QDOT [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 20.2056A-2T(d)]. These provisions vary depending on whether the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of the deceased spouse's death is greater or less than $ 2 million. Since it will often be difficult to determine in advance whether the trust will meet the $ 2 million threshold, this provision states the requirements in the alternative and leaves the final determination as to which requirements will actually apply to be determined at the date of death (or alternate valuation date, if applicable) [see Requirements to Ensure Collection of Section 2056A Estate Tax, 60 Fed. Reg. 43555 (1995)]. If the drafter believes that there is no realistic chance that the trust assets will exceed $2 million, or that the trust assets will be less than that amount, one or the other set of requirements may be eliminated. However, in the interest of caution it is recommended that both sets of alternative requirements ordinarily be retained in the instrument. For further discussion of the required trust provisions, see § 71.13[7][b].

[c] Power to Amend or Reform Trust Instrument

This provision gives the trustee (in the case of an inter vivos trust) or the executor (in the case of a testamentary trust) power to amend or reform the trust instrument whenever necessary to comply with the requirements of Internal Revenue Code Section 2056A. This power is authorized by the regulations and will provide some assurance that the trust will always meet the QDOT requirements [see discussion in § 71.13[7][d].

[2] Form*Qualification Provision for Qualified Domestic Trust (QDOT)

If, on _____ [for testamentary trust: my death or for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor], _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] is not a citizen of the United States, it is _____ [my or the settlor's or the settlors'] intention that the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] created by this instrument shall qualify as a "Qualified Domestic Trust" ("QDOT") under the provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 2056A, as amended, if qualification as a QDOT is required for the assets of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction. In that case, the following provisions shall apply to the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] as long as and to the extent that they are required for it to qualify as a QDOT:

(a) The _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] shall at all times have at least one trustee (called the U.S. Trustee) who is an individual citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation.

(b) If at any time any noncitizen of the United States, or a foreign corporation, is designated to become the sole trustee under the provisions of the trust, then that person or entity shall not serve as sole trustee, but shall serve as cotrustee along with the person or entity designated as the successor trustee under the terms of the trust, if that successor trustee would be a U.S. Trustee. If either (1) this _____ [will or instrument] makes no provision for a successor trustee; (2) the designated successor trustee would not be a U.S. Trustee, or (3) all nominations for successor trustee have been exhausted, then _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] or any other person or entity shall petition the court to appoint a U.S. Trustee to serve as cotrustee along with the noncitizen or foreign corporation cotrustee. If _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] was to have become the sole trustee but for the provisions of this section, and if _____ [he or she or he or she] becomes a citizen of the United States after appointment of another trustee pursuant to this subsection, then after providing written notice to that other cotrustee, _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor], if _____ [he or she or he or she] so chooses, may remove the other cotrustee and become sole trustee.

(c) No distribution (other than a distribution of income) may be made from the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] unless the U.S. Trustee has the right to withhold from that distribution the tax imposed by Internal Revenue Code Section 2056A on that distribution. The U.S. Trustee is hereby granted the power to withhold that tax from any such distribution.

(d) If the fair market value of the assets of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust], determined without reduction for any indebtedness with respect to the assets, as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, exceeds $2 million as of the date of _____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor], or the alternate valuation date if applicable, the trust shall during its entire term meet at least one of the requirements listed in (1) through (3), below. _____ [For testamentary trust: My or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: The settlor's or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: The deceased settlor's] executor, as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2203, shall determine which of the three requirements shall actually apply at the date of _____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor], or the alternate valuation date if applicable:

(1) The trust shall have at least one acting trustee that is a bank as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 581, or a United States branch of a foreign bank, provided that if one trustee is a United States branch of a foreign bank, a U.S. Trustee must act as a cotrustee with the foreign bank trustee during the entire term of the trust;

(2) The U.S. Trustee must furnish a bond in favor of the Internal Revenue Service in an amount equal to 65 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets (without regard to any indebtedness thereon) as of the date of

_____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor] (or the alternate valuation date if applicable), as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes and as further adjusted to account for the value of any real property wherever situated (and related furnishings) owned directly by the trust that is used by

_____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's

_____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] as

_____ [his or her or his or her] principal residence; or

(3) The U.S. Trustee must furnish an irrevocable letter of credit issued by a bank as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 581, by a United States branch of a foreign bank, or issued by a foreign bank and confirmed by a bank as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 581, in an amount equal to 65 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets (without regard to any indebtedness thereon) as of the date of

_____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor] (or the alternate valuation date if applicable), as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes and as further adjusted to account for the value of any real property wherever situated (and related furnishings) owned directly by the trust that is used by

_____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's

_____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] as

_____ [his or her or his or her] principal residence.

(e) If the fair market value of the assets of the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust], determined without reduction for any indebtedness with respect to the assets, as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, is $ 2 million or less as of the date of _____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor], or the alternate valuation date if applicable, the trust shall during its entire term meet the requirements listed in either (d)(1), (d)(2), or (d)(3), above, or, in the alternative, no more than 35 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets, determined annually on the last date of the taxable year of the trust (or on the last day of the calendar year if the trust does not have a taxable year), may consist of real property located outside the United States. _____ [For testamentary trust: My or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: The settlor's or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: The deceased settlor's] executor, as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2203, shall determine which of these four requirements shall actually apply at the date of _____ [for testamentary trust: my death or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's death or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the death of the deceased settlor], or the alternate valuation date if applicable.

(f) _____ [For testamentary trust: My executor or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: The settlor's executor or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: The deceased settlor's executor], as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2203, is authorized to make the election to qualify the _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] as a QDOT in the manner prescribed by law. [If the marital deduction trust is a QTIP trust, add: However, this subsection shall not be construed as affecting the executor's power to make or not to make an estate QTIP election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) with respect to some or all of the amount that may qualify for the marital deduction.]

(g) The _____ [Power of Appointment Trust or QTIP Trust] shall meet all requirements prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury by regulations from time to time to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by Internal Revenue Code Section 2056A. _____ [for testamentary trust: My executor or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: The settlor's executor or, for two-settlor inter vivos trust: The deceased settlor's executor], as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2203, is authorized to amend and reform the terms of this instrument whenever necessary to comply with those regulations or otherwise to assure that the trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a QDOT under applicable law.

(h) This section shall not apply if, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(d)(4), (1) _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] becomes a citizen of the United States before the day on which the federal estate tax return is filed, and (2) _____ [my _____ (husband or wife) or the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or the surviving settlor] is a resident of the United States at all times after the date of _____ [my or the settlor's or the deceased settlor's] death and before becoming a citizen of the United States.

§ 71.230 Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to provide for income payments and principal distributions from a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. This form may be used in any will or inter vivos trust instrument that creates a QTIP trust. For a general discussion of QTIP trusts, see § 71.13[4]. For sample complete trust forms that include QTIP trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, §§ 70.202[2], P 5.08 (two-settlor trust), 70.203[2], P 5.09 (one-settlor trust). For more detailed coverage of the role of QTIP trusts in estate planning, see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, §§ 112.05[2], 112.09[2] (Matthew Bender).

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a QTIP trust only if the surviving spouse has the right to receive all of the income from the trust for life, and only if the income is payable to the spouse annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7); see Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (income requirements for QTIP trusts)].

Income payments to the surviving spouse need not commence immediately after the first spouse's death. A delay is permitted if it is related to the administration of the estate and the administration is not prolonged unreasonably [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(9); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application to QTIP trusts)]. While the estate is being administered, the executor may have discretion to allocate some of the expenses of administration to the income of the marital deduction property, and if the discretion is exercised in a reasonable manner the marital deduction will not be impaired. However, administration expenses must not be allocated to the income of the marital deduction trust in such a way that the allocation constitutes a "material limitation" on the surviving spouse's right to the income. The regulations provide that, in determining the value of the interest in property passing to the surviving spouse, account must be taken of the effect of any "material limitations" on the surviving spouse's right to income from the property [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-4(a)].

EXAMPLE:

Assume that property is devised in trust for the benefit of the surviving spouse but that the income from the property from the date of the decedent's death until the distribution of the property to the trustee is to be used to pay expenses incurred in the administration of the estate.

In this case, the regulations provide that the surviving spouse's right to the income from the trust property is subject to a "material limitation" and the amount of the marital deduction must be reduced [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-4(a)].

It is not always easy, however, to determine when the payment of administration expenses out of the income of the marital deduction trust will constitute a "material limitation." In Commissioner v. Estate of Hubert (1997), [Commissioner v. Estate of Hubert (1997) 520 U.S. 93, 117 S. Ct. 1124, 137 L. Ed. 2d 235.] the United States Supreme Court considered the issue without settling it. In Estate of Hubert, the decedent's $30 million estate was divided in about equal shares between a marital deduction trust and a charitable trust. Each trust was valued at about $14 million, while administration expenses amounted to $2 million. Income received during administration was $6 million. The estate paid about $1,500,000 of the expenses from income and the rest from principal. The Internal Revenue Service challenged the allocation, arguing that it subjected the income rights of the surviving spouse to a "material limitation" and required a dollar-for-dollar reduction in the marital and charitable deductions. The Supreme Court affirmed the Tax Court's opinion that no reduction was required [Commissioner v. Estate of Hubert (1997) 520 U.S. 93, 117 S. Ct. 1124, 137 L. Ed. 2d 235, 251]. Although it found that under the facts of the case the allocation of $1,500,000 of expenses to $6 million of income did not constitute a "material limitation" on the right to the income, it could not muster a majority opinion to explain why [Commissioner v. Estate of Hubert (1997) 520 U.S. 93, 117 S. Ct. 1124, 137 L. Ed. 2d 235 (plurality opinion by Kennedy, J., joined by Rehnquist, Ch. J., and Stevens and Ginsburg, JJ; concurring opinion by O'Connor, J., joined by Souter and Thomas, JJ.; dissenting opinion by Scalia, J., joined by Breyer, J.)]. Estate of Hubert demonstrates the need for care in allocating administration expenses to the income of a marital deduction trust, although it provides no clear guidelines as to how that care should be exercised. However, an allocation will probably not run afoul of the "material limitation" rule if normal expenses of an on-going nature are charged to income. It is important to note that the executor in Estate of Hubert did not charge all administrative expenses to income. Similar discretion is advised, at least until further clarification of this issue is provided.

This form is designed to give the surviving spouse a qualifying lifetime income interest in the QTIP trust. For further discussion, see §§ 71.10[4][d] and 71.13[4].

[c] Principal

The rules relating to QTIP trusts neither require nor prohibit principal distributions to the surviving spouse [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. An income interest in a trust will not be disqualified from the marital deduction solely because the trustee has the power to distribute principal to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse. The fact that property distributed to the surviving spouse may subsequently be distributed by the spouse to another person does not violate the QTIP requirements unless the surviving spouse is legally bound to transfer the distributed property to another person without full and adequate consideration [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(6)].

Since the assets of the trust will be subject to estate tax in the surviving spouse's estate in any event [I.R.C. § 2044(b)(1)(A)], it is not necessary to limit the surviving spouse's right to principal distributions to an "ascertainable standard" relating to the surviving spouse's "health, education, support, or maintenance." However, it may be desirable to limit the right to do so. If the QTIP election is not made, or if only a partial QTIP election is made, it may be desirable to exclude all or part of the trust assets from the surviving spouse's estate, and this will be possible only if the surviving spouse's right to receive principal is limited to an "ascertainable standard" [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. Moreover, in some situations it may be necessary to restrict the surviving spouse's rights over the trust principal to preserve the trust principal for the ultimate beneficiaries. This may be particularly important, for example, when the spouse is a second spouse and animosity exists between the spouse and the decedent's children from a former marriage.

A QTIP trust must not authorize the distribution of principal to any person other than the surviving spouse during the surviving spouse's lifetime [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(II)].

[d] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Language

Subparagraph (c) of this form contains optional language permitting the trustee to divide the QTIP trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. This language is designed to permit the trustee to take advantage of the so-called "reverse QTIP election" that is available under the generation-skipping transfer tax. In basic terms, this election allows the trustee to make the QTIP election for federal estate and gift tax purposes while effectively ignoring that election for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. This is accomplished by making an election to opt out of a previously made QTIP election when determining the identity of the transferor for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2652(a)(3)]. Without the reverse QTIP election, the inclusion of property in the recipient spouse's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes (under the QTIP election) would cause the recipient spouse to be treated as the transferor of the property for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2652(a)(1)].

Unlike the QTIP election itself, with respect to which partial elections are permitted [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-(7)(b)(2)(i)], the reverse QTIP election may be made only for all of the property in a QTIP trust [I.R.C. § 2652(a)(3); Treas. Reg. § 26.2652-2(a)]. However, under the general rules permitting trusts to be divided for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, a trust may be split into several trusts for purposes of taking advantage of the reverse QTIP election [see Treas. Reg. §§ 26.2652-2(a), 26.2654-1(c)(2)]. Thus, if there is any possibility that it will be advantageous to reverse only a portion of a QTIP election for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, consideration must be given at the planning and drafting stages to allow for division of the marital deduction QTIP trust. The optional language in subparagraph (c) of the form permits such a division.

For additional discussion of the reverse QTIP election, see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies, §§ 113.04[2][b], 113.11[3][d] (Matthew Bender). For a general discussion of the operation of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.16; see also § 70.12[6][j] in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms.

[2] Form

Qualified Terminable Interest Property (QTIP) Trust

QTIP Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the QTIP Trust as follows:

(a) If the executor has elected that the trust qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section), the trustee shall thereafter administer the trust in a manner that will not invalidate the election or disqualify the property in which _____ [for testamentary trust: my _____ (husband or wife) or for one-settlor trust: the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) or for two-settlor trust: the surviving settlor] has a qualifying income interest for life. Any provision of this instrument that could be deemed to invalidate the qualification under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) shall be disregarded.

(b) If an election is made under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section) to qualify some but not all of the property allocated to the QTIP Trust for the federal estate tax marital deduction, the QTIP Trust shall be divided into two separate trusts pursuant to the terms of the election. The division shall be based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of the division. One of the trusts shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has been made and shall be designated as the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The other trust shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has not been made and shall be designated as the Nonqualifying QTIP Trust. The Nonqualifying QTIP Trust shall be subject to all of the rights, interests, powers, and other terms prescribed for the Qualifying QTIP Trust. If a partial election is made and the trust is divided into two separate trusts, the terms "trust," "marital deduction trust," and "QTIP Trust," as used in this paragraph and elsewhere in this instrument, shall be construed in a manner consistent with the provisions of this subparagraph of the trust instrument.

(c) It is _____ [for testamentary trust: my or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlors'] intent that the executor of _____ (for testamentary trust: my or for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the deceased settlor's) estate shall notify the trustee in writing if the executor intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (hereafter referred to as "the estate tax election") and also intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) (or any equivalent successor section) to have the estate tax election disregarded for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes with respect to some but not all of the property in the QTIP Trust. Upon receipt of written notification, the trustee shall divide the QTIP Trust into two separate trusts, to be known as the Exempt QTIP Trust and the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust, in accordance with Paragraph _____ of this instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts. Property allocated to the Exempt QTIP Trust must be fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation of all QTIP Trust property. It is _____ [for testamentary trust: my or, for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlors'] intent that the executor shall then actually make the election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) with respect to the Exempt QTIP Trust and not the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust. If a partial estate tax election is to be made, then this subparagraph, if applicable at all, shall apply only with respect to the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with the provisions of this subparagraph. Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed as being inconsistent with Paragraph _____ of this instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts, which shall apply to the QTIP trust without regard to the application of the remainder of this subparagraph.]

(d) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [for testamentary trust: my _____ (wife or husband) or for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the surviving settlor], so long as the _____ [he or she or he or she] lives, the entire net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] and the trustee, but not less often than annually. [Optional: In determining the net income of the trust distributable to _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor), the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income for the trust to qualify for the marital deduction under the federal estate tax law, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that marital deduction, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this instrument or any applicable provisions of state law. Assuming the trust has qualified under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7), then any grant of rights, powers, discretion, and authority to the trustee in any provision of this instrument or any statute relating thereto shall not be effective if and to the extent that the provision or statute, if effective, would disqualify, for federal estate tax purposes, the marital deduction trust held under this paragraph. It is _____ (my or the settlor's or the settlors') intention that _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor), as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during _____ (his or her or his or her) lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accords to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall not exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is not in accord with this intention. It is also _____ (my or the settlor's or the settlors') intention that the trust produce for _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor) during _____ (his or her or his or her) lifetime the income, or that _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor) shall have the benefit of the trust property, consistent with the value of the trust property and with its preservation.]

(e) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], for life, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary, when added to the income payments from this instrument, for _____ [his or her or his or her] _____ [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(f) On the death of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may pay the taxes, debts, and expenses arising on _____ [his or her or his or her] death, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses. Any payments made under this Paragraph _____ [may be made out of income or principal (or partly from each) of the QTIP Trust or shall be made first out of the income or principal of the QTIP Trust, and then out of the income or principal of the Bypass Trust to the extent that the QTIP Trust is insufficient for that purpose.]

(g) Upon the death of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], the net income of the trust then accrued but uncollected and all net income remaining in the hands of the trustee shall be distributed to _____ [his or her or his or her] estate. The trust principal shall be dealt with as set forth below in this paragraph.

(h) The trustee shall determine from the personal representative of the estate of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] the amount of the federal estate tax allocable to the property of the trust by reason of Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A and shall set aside a portion of the trust principal for the purpose of paying that tax upon written demand of the personal representative.

(i) Upon the death of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], the trustee shall distribute the balance of the principal of the QTIP Trust (or all of the QTIP Trust principal, if the personal representative of the estate of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] does not in due course make written demand), _____ [if generation-skipping transfer tax consequences are not a concern: to the Bypass Trust created in this instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph _____ applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Bypass Trust unless this instrument and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 71 MARITAL DEDUCTION TRUST PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 C. Payment and Distribution Provisions

26-71 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 71.231

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 71.231 Lifetime Income/Power of Appointment Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form creates a trust that will qualify for the marital deduction as a "lifetime income/power of appointment" trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. It may be used in any will or inter vivos instrument that will create a lifetime income/power of appointment trust. When used to convert the complete one-settlor trust instrument in § 70.203[2] in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, from a QTIP trust into a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, it will replace Paragraph 5.09 of that form. When used to convert the complete two-settlor trust instrument in § 70.202[2] in Chapter 70 from a QTIP trust into a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, it will replace Paragraph 5.08 of that form. If a so-called "two-way split" instead of a "three-way split" is made, then this form will replace Paragraph 5.07 (the survivor's trust) as well as Paragraph 5.08 of the form in § 70.202[2] [see [f], below, for discussion].

For a general discussion of power of appointment trusts, see § 71.13[5].

[b] Income Requirements

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust only if the surviving spouse has the right to receive all of the income from the trust (or from a "specific portion" of the trust) for life, and only if the income is payable to the spouse annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. This form is designed to give the surviving spouse a qualifying lifetime income interest in the lifetime income/power of appointment trust. For further discussion, see §§ 71.10[4][c], 71.13[5].

Income payments to the surviving spouse need not commence immediately after the first spouse's death. A delay is permitted if it is related to the administration of the estate and the administration is not prolonged unreasonably [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(9); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application to QTIP trusts)]. Further, the executor may have discretion to allocate some of the expenses of administration to the income of the marital deduction property. However, this allocation must not be made in such a way that the income is deemed to be subject to "material limitations" [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-4(a); see also Commissioner v. Estate of Hubert (1997) 520 U.S. 93, 117 S. Ct. 1124, 137 L. Ed. 2d 235]. For discussion, see § 71.230[1][b].

[c] Distributions of Principal

A lifetime income/power of appointment trust almost always provides for principal distributions to the surviving spouse. This may be done without jeopardizing the marital deduction [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(j)]. Since the surviving spouse will have a general power of appointment over the trust assets, the assets will be included in the surviving spouse's estate for estate tax purposes in any event [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)]. Thus, there is no need, at least for tax reasons, to limit the spouse's right to receive principal to an "ascertainable standard" relating to the surviving spouse's "health, education, support, or maintenance" [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. Therefore, it is generally appropriate to give the surviving spouse an unlimited right to invade the trust assets during the surviving spouse's lifetime. Accordingly, this form grants the surviving spouse an unlimited right to demand trust principal. If desired, however, this right may be restricted or limited with a view toward preserving the trust principal for the remainder beneficiaries. In the latter case, it may make sense to limit invasion rights by an "ascertainable standard."

In addition to the unlimited right to request distributions of principal, this form also contains standard invasion language permitting the trustee to pay principal in accordance with an ascertainable standard. This language might seem redundant in light of the surviving spouse's unlimited right to invade principal, but it ensures that the trustee will be able to pay principal to or for the surviving spouse to meet basic needs if the surviving spouse becomes incapacitated and is unable to make requests for trust principal to meet his or her needs.

[d] Power of Appointment Requirement

A trust will qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust only if the surviving spouse is given a general power of appointment over the trust assets [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. A power of appointment is a general power of appointment for this purpose if it can be exercised in favor of the surviving spouse, the surviving spouse's estate, or either, whether or not it is also exercisable in favor of others [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see Civ. Code § 1381.2(a) (definition of general power of appointment)]. This form grants the surviving spouse the required power of appointment.

[e] Planning Considerations

Most experienced estate planners prefer to use QTIP trusts [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)] instead of lifetime income/power of appointment trusts. As discussed in Section 71.13[4], QTIP trusts provide significantly greater postmortem tax planning flexibility. They also permit the deceased spouse to exercise a greater amount of control over the ultimate disposition of the trust assets since, in contrast to a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, there is no need to give the surviving spouse a general power of appointment over QTIP trust assets [see [b]-[d], above] for a discussion of the power of appointment requirements]. However, clients who want the surviving spouse to have the broadest possible control over the trust assets will sometimes insist on the use of a lifetime income/power of appointment trust.

The complete formula marital deduction trusts in Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, illustrate QTIP trusts because, as indicated above, QTIPs are generally preferred and recommended by experienced estate planners [see §§ 70.202[2], 70.203[2]]. However, those forms may be converted into lifetime income/power of appointment trusts by the use of this form [see [a], above]. For examples of complete lifetime income/power of appointment trust forms, see CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS FORMS, Division 1, Complete Inter Vivos Trusts, Trusts 21 (one-settlor trust), 31 (two-settlor trust/three-way split), and 32 (two-settlor trust/two-way split).

[f] Drafting Options in Two-Settlor Inter Vivos Trusts

When a married couple, as joint settlors, create an inter vivos marital deduction formula trust, the provisions in this chapter, and the trust instruments in Chapter 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, typically will require a division of the trust assets into a survivor's share, a marital deduction share, and a nonmarital (bypass) share, on the death of the first settlor to die [ see §§ 71.201[2], 71.203[2], 71.205 [2] (formula clauses for two-settlor trusts); see also §§ 70.202[2], 70.203[2] (complete forms)]. When the marital deduction share is to qualify as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust, it may either be placed in a separate marital deduction trust (a so-called "three-way split," since it results in the creation of three trusts) or combined with the survivor's assets in the survivor's share (a "two-way split"). If a "three-way split" is used, the trust will contain a survivor's trust, a marital deduction trust, and a bypass trust. Conversely, if a two-way split is used, the trust will contain only a survivor's trust (which includes both the survivor's assets and the assets qualifying for the marital deduction) and a bypass trust. For additional discussion, see Section 71.201[1][b]; see also Section 71.12[2].

A three-way split must be made if the assets qualifying for the marital deduction will be treated differently from the survivor's assets--for example, by denying the survivor a right of revocation over the marital deduction assets, or restricting the survivor's right to receive principal during his or her lifetime. Otherwise, a two-way split simplifies the trust instrument. If a two-way split is used, the trust will be named the Survivor's Trust; otherwise, it will be called the "Power of Appointment Trust."

Lifetime Income/Power of Appointment Trust

Power of Appointment [or, for a two-settlor trust that makes a "two-trust split" on the death of the first settlor: Survivor's] Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Power of Appointment [or Survivor's] Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [for testamentary trust: my _____ (wife or husband) or for one-settlor inter vivos trust: the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or for two-settlor inter vivos trust: the surviving settlor], so long as the _____ [he or she or he or she] lives, the entire net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] and the trustee, but not less often than annually. [Optional: In determining the net income of the trust distributable to _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor), the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income for the trust to qualify for the marital deduction under the federal estate tax law, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that marital deduction, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this instrument or any applicable provisions of state law. It is _____ (my or the settlor's or the settlors') intention that _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor), as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during _____ (his or her or his or her) lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall not exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is not in accord with this intention. It is also _____ (my or the settlor's or the settlors') intention that the trust produce for _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor) during _____ (his or her or his or her) lifetime the income, or that _____ (my _____ [wife or husband] or the settlor's _____ [wife or husband] or the surviving settlor) shall have the benefit of the trust property, that is consistent with the value of the trust property and with its

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] during _____ [his or her or his or her] lifetime, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the health, education, support, and maintenance of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subparagraph, if any, shall be within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) The trustee shall distribute to _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] during _____ [his or her or his or her] lifetime, such amounts from the principal of the trust, up to the whole thereof, as _____ [he or she or he or she] may request of the trustee in writing from time to time.

(d) On the death of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], and subject to any power of appointment exercised by _____ [him or her or him or her], the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may pay the taxes, debts, and expenses arising on _____ [his or her or his or her] death, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses. Any payments made under this Paragraph _____ [may be made out of income or principal (or partly from each) of the Power of Appointment (or Survivor's) Trust or shall be made first out of the income or principal of the Power of Appointment (or Survivor's) Trust, and then out of the income or principal of the Bypass Trust to the extent that the Power of Appointment (or Survivor's) Trust is insufficient for that purpose].

(e) On the death of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], the trustee shall distribute the trust property then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the estate of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], on such terms and conditions, either outright or in trust, or by creating further powers of appointment, as _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] shall appoint by _____ [his or her or his or her] valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. The trustee may rely upon any instrument admitted to probate as the last will of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] in carrying out the terms of the power of appointment and shall not be liable for any good-faith act in reliance upon that will, even if for any reason it is later determined to be invalid with respect to its purported exercise of this power of appointment. In the event the will of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] is not offered for probate, the trustee may make an independent determination with respect to the validity of the will and whether or not the will has effectively exercised this power of appointment. If the trustee receives no notice of the existence of a will of _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor] within six months after _____ [his or her or his or her] death, the trustee may distribute the trust assets and income as if this power of appointment had not been exercised and shall in that event be conclusively presumed to have acted in good faith, even if a valid will is thereafter discovered.

(f) If any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by _____ [my _____ (wife or husband) or the settlor's _____ (wife or husband) or the surviving settlor], that property, after any payment of taxes, debts, and expenses pursuant to the applicable provisions of this instrument, shall be distributed _____ [specify alternative disposition in the event that power of appointment is not exercised; provision may specify a separate pattern of distribution of may refer to the dispositive provisions of another trust created by the same instrument, e.g., (if generation-skipping transfer tax consequences are not a concern): to the Bypass Trust created in this instrument, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Paragraph _____ applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be considered to be part of the Bypass Trust unless this trust and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any power of appointment created by this instrument, whether expressly granted in this instrument or implied by law, may be released, disclaimed, or restricted in scope. Any such power may be released to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Civil Code Section 1388.2 and disclaimed to the extent and in the manner set forth in California Probate Code Sections 260-295, or any successor statutes in effect on the date of exercise of the release or disclaimer.

§ 71.232 Estate Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a trust provision that gives the remainder of a trust to the surviving spouse. It may be used in any will or trust instrument that will create a so-called "estate trust" designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction.

[b] Features of Estate Trust

An estate trust is one in which all beneficial interests (income and remainder) are held in favor of the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)]. Typically, the trust income is payable to the surviving spouse for life, and on the spouse's death the trust assets are distributed to the spouse's estate, where they will pass under the terms of his or her will. The surviving spouse's income interest may be for a term of years rather than for life, or the trust may provide for an accumulation of income and payment of the trust assets to the surviving spouse or the spouse's estate [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)(1)]. This feature of permitting accumulation of income is unique among marital deduction trusts, since all other types of marital deduction trusts require payment of all income to the surviving spouse at least annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5),(7)(B)(ii)(I)].

For further discussion of estate trusts, see Section 71.13 [6]; see also CALIFORNIA WILLS & TRUSTS, Chapter 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts, Section 112.05[5] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Disadvantages

Estate trusts are rarely used in modern estate planning. When an estate trust is used, the remainder will be subject to estate taxation in the estate of the surviving spouse, and it will also be subject to probate administration in the survivor's estate. Further, the surviving spouse will have the power of ultimate disposition of the remainder. It will pass according to the terms of the surviving spouse's will or, if there is no will, under the laws of intestate succession. Most estate planners find that QTIP trusts or power of appointment trusts are better suited to accomplish modern estate planning goals.

[d] Drafting

Notwithstanding their obvious deficiencies, estate trusts are relatively simple to draft. Unlike QTIP and power of appointment trusts, estate trusts need not provide for the payment of all of the income to the surviving spouse. However, the trust property, after termination of the income interest, must be payable to the spouse, the spouse's executor, or the spouse's estate [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(b)(1)]. Thus, it is possible to provide for almost any kind of income distributions to the surviving spouse from an estate trust, provided that the remainder is includible in the surviving spouse's estate.

This form provides only the qualifying remainder disposition. The drafter must include appropriate provisions for the payment or accumulation of income. Suitable income and principal provisions may be borrowed from the QTIP and lifetime income/power of appointment trust forms [ see §§ 71.230[2], 71.231 [2]], or adapted to meet the wishes of the client.

This chapter covers irrevocable inter vivos trusts. The Legal Background surveys federal and state law governing the planning, drafting, execution, and attestation of irrevocable inter vivos trusts. The Transaction Guide covers preliminary considerations that are critical to the proper planning of such a trust, and includes a drafting guide to the use of the complete trust forms in the chapter. The forms section includes complete irrevocable trust forms that have been chosen to illustrate basic irrevocable trust arrangements that are commonly used by estate planners.

An irrevocable trust is an important estate planning document and, when its use has been determined to be appropriate, should be planned and prepared as part of a comprehensive estate plan. Ch. 60, Estate Planning, is a general introduction to the subject of estate planning and a guide to the other estate planning chapters in this publication. It should be consulted before any other estate planning documents are prepared. Lifetime gifts and gift-giving strategies are covered in Ch. 60A, Gifts.

Due to space limitations, this chapter does not illustrate the thousands of possible alternative and optional provisions that can be included in an irrevocable trust. For a broad range of provisions that can be adapted for use in irrevocable trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, and Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions. Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, may also be consulted for alternative provisions that can be used, or modified for use, in inter vivos trusts. For an even wider range of alternative provisions, see Matthew Bender's specialty publication, California Wills & Trusts. Specific references to California Wills & Trusts are included in appropriate places in this chapter.

§ 72.10 Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trust--Nature and Uses

[1] In General

An irrevocable inter vivos trust is a trust that is created during the settlor's lifetime and over which the settlor retains no power of alteration, amendment, or revocation.

Although the typical revocable inter vivos trust [ see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms ] is drafted to become irrevocable at some point during its existence (typically on the death of the settlor), such a trust is not usually described as an irrevocable trust, because the reasons for creating it are different from the reasons for creating a trust that is irrevocable from its inception. Nevertheless, once a revocable trust becomes irrevocable, it is taxed under the same provisions of the Internal Revenue Code as a trust that was irrevocable from its inception. Thus, some of the tax rules discussed in this chapter may influence the drafting of revocable as well as irrevocable trusts.

For general coverage of revocable trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms .

Irrevocable inter vivos trusts are used for a variety of purposes, some tax-related and others unrelated to any tax considerations. All of these purposes, however, are based on the essential characteristic of the irrevocable inter vivos trust: its ability to remove property from the settlor's estate without permitting the beneficiaries to gain immediate control over the property.

This characteristic makes the irrevocable trust particularly useful as a gift substitute. The settlor may remove the trust property from his or her estate in much the same way that the property would be removed by an outright gift. The donee receives the use and enjoyment of the trust property, and the property is removed from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes. However, the donee does not gain management and control over the property, since it is held and managed by the trustee on the terms and conditions stated in the trust instrument.

PRACTICE TIP:

In order to obtain the removal of the trust property from the settlor's estate as described above, the settlor's rights to enjoy the property in any meaningful way must also be removed from the settlor. In the case of some of the trusts described in this chapter, the settlor's rights to enjoy the trust property do not cease immediately upon the creation of the trust. Rather, those rights terminate at some specified point later in the settlor's lifetime. In some of the strategies described in this chapter, a bit of a gamble is taken regarding just how long the settlor is likely to live; if the settlor dies before his or her rights to enjoy the trust property have terminated, the trust property will be included in his or her estate. The key point to remember is this: merely using an irrevocable trust does not cause the removal of the trust property from the settlor's taxable estate. Rather, it is the design and administration of the trust which will accomplish that goal. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.11

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 72.11 Income Tax Considerations

[1] In General

An irrevocable inter vivos trust can save income taxes during the settlor's lifetime. If the settlor does not retain certain prohibited interests in or powers over the trust property [see [2], below], the trust will be treated as a separate entity for income tax purposes and the trust income will be taxed at its own rates, rather than those of the settlor.

PRACTICE TIP:

It is important to observe, however, that the income tax rate brackets applicable to trusts are greatly compressed when compared to those applicable to individual taxpayers. That is, trusts hit the maximum federal income tax bracket very quickly (for example, in 1997 the maximum 39.6% federal income tax bracket began at only $8,100 of income). It is quite possible that the settlor personally will be in a lower marginal bracket than the trust, meaning that there would be an advantage to having the settlor, rather than the trust, pay tax on the "trust's" income. In fact, some of the strategies described in this chapter are designed to result in the settlor paying income tax on income which will be enjoyed by his or her children or others, under the income tax grantor trust rules. In this way, the value of a gift can be maximized while keeping down the gift tax value of the transfer and reducing the amount left in the settlor's estate. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[2] Prohibited Interests and Powers

[a] In General

If the settlor retains certain prohibited interests in or powers over the trust or the trust property, the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes and income from the trust property will be taxable to the settlor [I.R.C. § 671]. A person other than the settlor may also be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if that person holds a prohibited interest in or power over the trust and the person does not qualify as an "adverse party." For purposes of this rule, a person who has a substantial beneficial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise or nonexercise of a power that he or she holds is an "adverse party," while all other persons are "nonadverse parties" [I.R.C. § 672(a), (b)].

The prohibited interests and powers are set forth in the so-called "grantor trust rules" of I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussed in [b] through [f], below.

PRACTICE TIP:

It is crucial to distinguish between "ownership" of a trust or a portion of a trust for income tax purposes under the income tax grantor trust rules and the standards for inclusion of assets in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes. The standards vary, often more than is first apparent, and trust assets deemed "owned" by a settlor for income tax purposes frequently are not includable in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes. Planning with irrevocable trusts may include specific consideration of these different rules, with the goal of creating a so-called "defective trust," one whose income is taxable to the settlor but whose assets are not included in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[b] Reversionary Interests

Under I.R.C. § 673, the settlor will be treated as the owner of any portion of a trust in which the settlor has a reversionary interest in either the principal or the income if, as of the inception of that portion of the trust, the value of the interest exceeds 5 percent of the value of the portion [I.R.C. § 673(a)]. However, a settlor will not be treated as the owner under this rule if the reversionary interest takes effect only on the death of a lineal descendant of the settlor before the descendant reaches the age of 21 years [I.R.C. § 673(b)]. For further discussion of the income tax consequences of the retention of reversionary interests, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning, § 82.05[2] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Power to Control Beneficial Enjoyment

Under I.R.C. § 674, the settlor will be treated as the owner of a trust if beneficial enjoyment of the principal or income is subject to a power of disposition exercisable by the settlor, a "nonadverse party," or both, without the approval or consent of an "adverse party" [I.R.C. § 674(a); for definitions of "adverse party" and "nonadverse party," see I.R.C. § 672(a), (b) and discussion in [1], above]. Notwithstanding this rule, however, the following powers will not cause the settlor to be treated as the owner under I.R.C. § 674:

- A power to apply income to the support of a dependent (other than the settlor's spouse) whom the settlor is legally obligated to support, except to the extent that the income is actually used for that purpose [I.R.C. § 674(b)(1); see I.R.C. § 677(b)].
- A power that can only affect the beneficial enjoyment of the income for a period commencing after the occurrence of an event, so that the settlor would not be treated as the owner under I.R.C. § 673 if the power were a reversionary interest. However, the settlor may be treated as the owner after the occurrence of the event unless the power is relinquished [I.R.C. § 674(b)(2); see I.R.C. § 673].
- A power exercisable only by will, other than a power in the settlor to appoint the income when the income is or may be accumulated in the discretion of the settlor or a "nonadverse party," or both, without the approval or consent of an "adverse party" [I.R.C. § 674(b)(3); see I.R.C. § 672(a), (b)].
- A power to allocate principal or income among charitable beneficiaries [I.R.C. § 674(b)(4)].
- A power to distribute income or principal to or for a beneficiary, beneficiaries, or class of beneficiaries, provided that the power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" set forth in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 674(b)(5)(A), (d)]. A power is an "ascertainable standard" for this purpose if it is a clearly measurable standard under which the holder of a power is legally accountable [Treas. Reg. § 1.674(b)-1(b)(5)(i)]. A power to distribute principal for the "education, support, maintenance, or health" of the beneficiary, for the beneficiary's "reasonable support and comfort," or to enable the beneficiary to maintain his or her "accustomed standard of living," is limited by a "reasonably definite standard", while a power to distribute principal for the beneficiary's "pleasure, desire, or happiness" is not [Treas. Reg. § 1.674(b)-1(b)(5)(i)]. If the trust instrument provides that the determination of the trustee "shall be conclusive" with respect to the exercise or nonexercise of a power, the power is not limited by a "reasonably definite standard" [Treas. Reg. § 1.674(b)-1(b)(5)(i)].

- A power to distribute principal to or for any current income beneficiary, provided that the distribution must be chargeable against the proportionate share of principal held in trust for the payment of income to the beneficiary as if the principal constituted a separate trust [I.R.C. § 674(b)(5)(B)]. However, this does not include a power to add to the beneficiary, beneficiaries, or class of beneficiaries designated to receive the income or principal, except when such an action is to provide for afterborn or after-adopted children [I.R.C. § 674(b)(5)].

- A power to distribute or apply income to or for any current income beneficiary, or to accumulate income for the beneficiary, provided that any accumulated income must ultimately be payable to the beneficiary, the beneficiary's estate, the beneficiary's appointees, or persons named as alternate takers in default of appointment [I.R.C. § 674(b)(6)].

- A power to distribute or apply income, or to accumulate the income, during such time as the current income beneficiary is under the age of 21 years or under any legal disability [I.R.C. § 674(b)(7)].

For further discussion of the income tax consequences of retained powers to control beneficial enjoyment, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning, § 82.05[3] (Matthew Bender).

[d] Administrative Powers

Under I.R.C. § 675, the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust if the settlor or a "nonadverse party" [see I.R.C. § 672(a), (b) and discussion in [1], above] holds any of the following administrative powers over the trust and the power or powers can be exercised without the approval or consent of an "adverse party" [I.R.C. § 675]:

- The power to deal with the trust property, or income from the trust property, for less than an adequate consideration in money or money's worth [I.R.C. § 675(1)].

- The power to borrow the trust property or income from the trust property, directly or indirectly, without adequate interest or adequate security, except when a trustee who is not the settlor is authorized under a general lending power to make loans to any person without regard to interest or security [I.R.C. § 675(2)].

- The power to vote certain stock, to control certain investments of trust funds, or to reacquire the trust principal by substituting other property of equivalent value, if the power can be exercised in a nonfiduciary capacity without the approval or consent of any person in a fiduciary capacity [I.R.C. § 675(4)].

For further discussion of the income tax consequences of retained administrative powers, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning, § 82.05[4] (Matthew Bender).

[e] Power to Revoke

Under I.R.C. § 676, the settlor will be treated as the owner of any portion of a trust if the power to reconstitute title in the trust is exercisable by the settlor or a "nonadverse party," or both [I.R.C. § 676(a)]; for the meaning of "adverse party" and "nonadverse party," see I.R.C. § 672(a), (b) and discussion in [1], above. For further discussion of the income tax consequences of retained powers of revocation, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning, § 82.05[5] (Matthew Bender).

[f] Power to Distribute Income

Under I.R.C. § 677, the settlor will be treated as the owner of any portion of a trust whose income may be (1) distributed to the settlor or the settlor's spouse, (2) held or accumulated for future distribution to the settlor or the settlor's spouse, or (3) applied to the payment of life insurance premiums on certain policies on the life of the settlor or the settlor's spouse, without the approval or consent of any "adverse party" [for the meaning of "adverse party" and "nonadverse party," see I.R.C. § 672(a), (b) and discussion in [1], above]. For further discussion of the income tax consequences of retained powers to distribute income, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning, § 82.05[6] (Matthew Bender).

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.12

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 72.12 Estate Tax Considerations

[1] In General

An irrevocable inter vivos trust can save estate taxes on the settlor's death if the trust is structured so that it will remove the trust property from the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 2033, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2041; for definition of "gross estate," see I.R.C. § 2031 and discussion in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.13[1]]. If the settlor retains certain interests in or powers over the trust property at the time of death, the property will be included in the settlor's gross estate. Conversely, if the settlor does not retain any of these interests or powers, the property will not be included in the settlor's gross estate [for the prohibited interests and powers, see [2], below].

[2] Prohibited Interests and Powers

[a] Retained Life Estate

Under I.R.C. § 2036, the value of the settlor's gross estate will include the value of all property that the settlor transferred during his or her lifetime but as to which the settlor retained the right to enjoy the property or its income for the settlor's lifetime, or for any period that does not in fact end before the settlor's death [I.R.C. § 2036(a)].

The trust property will be included in the settlor's estate under this rule if the settlor retains possession of the property, the right to receive the income from the property, or the right, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property or its income [I.R.C. § 2036(a)]. The property will also be included if the trustee has the power to use the principal or income to satisfy one or more of the settlor's legal obligations, such as the obligation to support a child or a spouse [Treas. Reg. § 20.2036-1(b)(2)].

If the settlor retains an unrestricted power to remove the trustee and appoint the settlor as the successor trustee, the settlor will be deemed to have the powers of the trustee for purposes of this rule and, if the trustee has the power to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property or its income, the trustee's power will be attributed to the settlor and the trust property will also be included in the settlor's estate [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2036-1(b)(3)], 20.2038-1(a)]. If, however, the settlor retains the power to replace the trustee with an individual or corporate successor who is not "related or subordinate" to the settlor, the trustee's powers will not be attributed to the settlor for this purpose, and the property need not be included in the settlor's estate [ Rev. Rul. 95-58, 1995-2 C.B. 191 ; see I.R.C. § 672(c) ("related or subordinate party" defined)].

If the trust owns a life insurance policy on the settlor's life [see discussion in § 72.14], the trust income may be used to pay the policy premiums without causing the trust principal to be included in the settlor's estate under I.R.C. § 2036 [ Bennett v. United States (N.D. Ill. 1960) 185 F. Supp. 577, 585 ] .

For further discussion of the estate tax consequences of retaining a life estate in the trust property, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 2, Overview of Tax Laws Affecting the Disposition of Estates , § 2.06[2][c], Ch. 114, Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trusts , § 114.04[2][a], and Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

[b] Reversionary Interests

Under I.R.C. § 2037, the value of the settlor's gross estate will include the value of all property in which the settlor retained a reversionary interest if, immediately before the settlor's death, the reversionary interest was valued in excess of 5 percent of the value of the whole property and if possession or enjoyment of the property by others could be obtained only by surviving the settlor [I.R.C. § 2037(a)]. For this purpose, the term "reversionary interest" includes a possibility that the property transferred by the settlor may return to the settlor or the settlor's estate, and a possibility that the property transferred by the settlor may become subject to a power of disposition by the settlor [Treas. Reg. § 20.2037-1(c)(2)]. However, it does not include the possibility that the property may be received through inheritance [Treas. Reg. § 20.2037-1(c)(2)].

For further discussion of the estate tax consequences of retaining a reversionary interest, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 2, Overview of Tax Laws Affecting the Disposition of Estates , § 2.06[2][d]; Ch. 114, Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trusts , § 114.04[2][b]; and Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts , § 115.03[5] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Powers to Revoke or Amend

Under I.R.C. § 2038, the trust property will be included in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes if the settlor retains the power to alter, amend, revoke, or terminate the trust [I.R.C. § 2038(a)]. This rule does not require that the settlor have the power to recover the trust property; it is sufficient if the settlor has the power to change the enjoyment of the trust property through the exercise of a power to alter, amend, or terminate the trust.

If the power to alter or amend the trust is held by a third-party trustee, the power will be attributed to the settlor if the settlor retains the unrestricted power to remove the third party and appoint himself or herself as successor trustee [I.R.C. § 2038(a); Treas. Reg. § 20.2038-1(a)(3)]. The power will also be attributed to the settlor if the settlor retains the power to remove the trustee and appoint a successor who is "related or subordinate" to the settlor [ Rev. Rul. 95-58, 1995-2 C.B. 191 ]. However, the power will not be attributed to the settlor merely because the settlor has the power to replace the trustee with an individual or corporate successor who is not "related or subordinate" to the settlor [ Rev. Rul. 95-58, 1995-2 C.B. 191 ; see I.R.C. § 672(c) ("related or subordinate party" defined)].

[d] General Power of Appointment

If the settlor retains a general power of appointment over the trust property, the property will be included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes under I.R.C. § 2041 [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. For purposes of this rule, a power is a "general power of appointment" if it is exercisable in favor of the settlor, the settlor's estate, the settlor's creditors, or creditors of the settlor's estate [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1); see Prob. Code § 611(a) (general power of appointment)].

A power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the settlor's benefit is not a "general power of appointment" if it is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the settlor's health, education, support, or maintenance [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(B); see Prob. Code § 611(b)]. For language that properly subjects a power to an "ascertainable standard," see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2) and the discussion in § 72.11[2][c], above.

A general power of appointment held by a trustee may be attributed to the settlor if the settlor has the power to remove the trustee and appoint himself or herself as successor trustee [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1)]. If, for example, the trustee has the power to appoint the principal of the trust for the benefit of individuals including the trustee or successor trustee, and also gives the settlor the unrestricted power to remove the trustee and appoint a successor, the trustee's power of appointment will be attributed to the settlor [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1); see also Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2036-1(b)(3), 20.2038-1(a)]. The trustee's power will also be attributed to the settlor if the settlor has the power to replace the trustee with someone who is "related or subordinate" to the settlor [ Rev. Rul. 95-58, 1995-2 C.B. 191; see I.R.C. § 672(c) ("related or subordinate party" defined)].

For further discussion of the estate tax consequences of holding a general power of appointment, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 2, Overview of Tax Laws Affecting the Disposition of Estates, § 2.06[4]; Ch. 114, Irrevocable Inter Vivos Trusts, § 114.04[d]; Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.03[7] (Matthew Bender). For detailed discussion of powers of appointment and their classifications, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 31, Powers of Appointment (Matthew Bender).

[e] Incidents of Ownership in Life Insurance

If an irrevocable inter vivos trust holds a life insurance policy on the settlor's life, and if, at the time of death, the settlor possesses any "incidents of ownership" in the policy, the policy will be included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes under I.R.C. § 2042(2). The term "incidents of ownership" is not limited to ownership of a policy in a legal sense, but refers to the right of the insured or the insured's estate to the economic benefits of the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2)]. Thus it is broad enough to include the power to change the beneficiary, to surrender or cancel the policy, to assign the policy, to revoke an assignment of the policy, to pledge the policy for a loan, and to obtain a loan from the insurer against the surrender value of the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2)].

The power to do these things may result from the terms of the trust instrument, or merely from the terms of the insurance policy itself. In either case, the proceeds will be included in the insured's estate. In one case, for example, the insured was legally obligated by a prenuptial agreement to designate a trust as beneficiary of a life insurance policy. He made the required designation, but failed to notify the insurer that the policy proceeds were to be paid to the trust. Because the insured possessed all of the incidents of ownership at the time of death, the proceeds were includible in the insured's gross estate, despite the prenuptial agreement [ Puchner v. United States (E.D. Wis. 1967) 274 F. Supp. 704, 709-710 ]. In another case, the proceeds of a flight insurance policy were included in the insured's estate for estate tax purposes even though the insured had named his wife as beneficiary of the policy, allowed her to pay the premiums, and delivered the policy to her, because the policy provided that the beneficiary could be changed only by a written endorsement on the policy and the insured had not made the required endorsement [ Commissioner v. Noel (1965) 380 U.S. 678, 684, 85 S. Ct. 1238, 14 L. Ed. 2d 159 ].

A completed transfer by the settlor to an irrevocable trust of all "incidents of ownership" in a life insurance policy on the settlor's life will avoid inclusion of the insurance proceeds in the settlor's estate [I.R.C. § 2042(2)]. This is usually accomplished by completing the insurer's change of ownership and beneficiary designation forms, and designating the trust as both the owner and beneficiary of the policy. It is essential, however, to complete all of the required forms with care to make sure that all of the insurer's transfer requirements are met. If the settlor held any incidents of ownership in the policy prior to its transfer to the trust, then the policy proceeds will still be included in his or her estate if he or she dies within three years of the transfer of the incidents of ownership to the trust [I.R.C. §§ 2035(a), 2042].

For further discussion of the estate tax consequences of retaining "incidents of ownership" in a life insurance policy, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.03[2] (Matthew Bender).

[3] Life Insurance Payable to Insured's Estate

If an irrevocable inter vivos trust holds a life insurance policy on the settlor's life, and if any proceeds of the policy are receivable by the executor on the settlor's death, the amount received will be included in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes under I.R.C. § 2042(1). This will happen regardless of whether the estate or executor is specifically named as the beneficiary under the terms of the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(b)(1)]. If, for example, the proceeds are receivable by another beneficiary subject to a legally binding obligation to pay taxes, debts, or other obligations of the insured's estate, any portion of the proceeds used to pay those items will be deemed to be receivable by the executor and thus includible in the insured's estate [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(b)(1)]. Similarly, if the trust instrument requires the trustee to use the proceeds to pay taxes, debts, or other obligations of the settlor's estate, the proceeds will be included in the settlor's estate [ Pacific Nat'l Bank v. Commissioner (1939) 40 B.T.A. 128 ; Hooper v. Commissioner (1940) 41 B.T.A. 114 ] . If the trustee is authorized but not required to use the proceeds for that purpose, the proceeds are includible in the settlor's estate only to the extent that they are actually used for that purpose [ Old Colony Trust Co. v. Commissioner (1939) 39 B.T.A. 871 ; Wade v. Commissioner (1942) 47 B.T.A. 21 ] .

There is nothing in the Internal Revenue Code that includes life insurance proceeds in the gross estate of the insured merely because the trustee of a trust established by the insured has the power to lend the proceeds to the insured's estate with adequate security and at reasonable interest, or to purchase assets from the settlor's estate at their fair market value, even if after the proceeds are transferred to the executor the executor uses them to pay taxes, debts, or other expenses of the insured's estate [see I.R.C. § 2042].

PRACTICE TIP:

As will be seen, these rules form the core of irrevocable life insurance trust planning in many cases. Often, the idea is to obtain the use of life insurance proceeds in the settlor's estate indirectly through a loan or the receipt of funds used to purchase estate assets. In this way, the liquidity afforded by life insurance is available without subjecting the proceeds to estate tax in the deceased settlor's estate.
Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

For further discussion of the estate tax treatment of life insurance proceeds payable to the estate of the insured, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.03[1][a], [b] (Matthew Bender).

[4] Life Insurance Transferred Within Three Years of Death

[a] Life Insurance as Exception to General Rule

Property that a decedent transfers within three years of death generally is not included in the decedent's estate for federal estate tax purposes. However, this is not the case with life insurance policies. If a settlor transfers a life insurance policy to an irrevocable trust, and if the settlor dies within three years after making the transfer, the policy will be included in the settlor's estate if the policy would have been included in the settlor's estate under I.R.C. § 2042 if retained by the settlor [I.R.C. §§ 2035(a), 2042].

[b] Doctrine of Constructive Transfer

If the settlor was the original owner of the life insurance policy, and if the settlor dies within three years after the policy is transferred to the trust, the rule including the policy in the settlor's estate if the settlor dies within three years after the transfer clearly applies [see I.R.C. § 2042(2) and discussion of "incidents of ownership" in § 72.12[2][e]]. However, it is possible that inclusion may also be required if the settlor was not the original owner, but paid the premiums on the policy after it was transferred to the trust. In 1984, the Internal Revenue Service took the position that a policy originally issued to a third party and thereafter transferred to a trust will be included in the insured's estate if the insured paid premiums on the policy within three years of death. Under these circumstances, the IRS argued, the third party must be deemed the settlor's agent for purposes of transferring the policy to the trust, and the proceeds will be included in the settlor's estate under the doctrine of "constructive transfer" [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8509005 (Nov. 28, 1984) ]. Both the Sixth Circuit and Tenth Circuit Courts of Appeals have declined to apply the doctrine of "constructive transfer" when the only basis for doing so is that the settlor paid the premiums on the policy [see Estate of Leder v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. 1989) 893 F.2d 237, 242 ; Estate of Headrick v. C.I.R. (6th Cir. 1990) 918 F.2d 1263, 1268].

Notwithstanding these court decisions, a prudent attorney will take steps to avoid the possibility that the doctrine of "constructive transfer" might be invoked to include the policy when the settlor pays premiums within three years of death. This can be done by establishing the trust before the policy is applied for, by removing the settlor from the process of acquiring the policy to the greatest extent possible, by transferring sufficient funds to the trust to cover premiums on the policy well before the policy is acquired, and by making sure that funds transferred to the trust are not equal to the premiums on the policy. For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.03[3][b] (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

It is not at all clear that the IRS presently intends to make the "constructive trust" argument in the context of life insurance trusts. However, care is warranted, because insurance trusts are, at least occasionally, employed in situations which the IRS believes to be "abusive." In some situations, individuals are encouraged to establish charitable remainder trusts for tax rather than charitable reasons. In many of these cases, these individuals are also encouraged to establish irrevocable life insurance trusts as "wealth replacement" devices to make up the "loss" that would otherwise be incurred by the settlor's children regarding the charitable trust assets. The IRS is unhappy about the selling of charitable planned giving as a tax avoidance scheme, and can be expected to attack any element incorporated into any such plan on any basis available. Thus, particular caution should be exercised when an irrevocable life insurance trust is being established in conjunction with a charitable remainder trust. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.13

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 72.13 Gift Tax Considerations

[1] In General

An irrevocable inter vivos trust may also be used to avoid gift taxes or, when gift taxes cannot be avoided completely, minimize the impact of gift taxes on the settlor's estate plan. By taking advantage of the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503 and discussion in [2], below], and by structuring transfers to the trust so that the gift property is effectively removed from the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes [see discussion in § 72.12], irrevocable trusts may contribute to an effective overall estate plan.

[2] Annual Exclusion

[a] In General

An exclusion (called the "annual exclusion") is available for gifts made to each donee by each donor during a calendar year [I.R.C. § 2503(b)]. The amount of the annual gift tax exclusion, which is subject to annual adjustment for inflation, is $13,000 for calendar years 2009-2010 [ Rev. Proc. 2009-50, 2009-45 IRB 624 (2010Amount), Rev. Proc. 2008-66, 2008-45 IRB (2009 Amount)]. For gifts made between 2006-2008, the annual gift tax exclusion was $12,000 [Rev. Proc. 2006-53, 2006-48 IRB 996 (2007Amount), Rev. Proc. 2005-70, 2005-47 IRB 979 (2006 Amount)]. $11,000 for calendar years 2002 through 2005 [I.R.C. § 2503(b); Rev. Proc. 2004-71, 2004-50 I.R.B. 970 (2005 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2003-85 , § 3.26(1), 2003-49 I.R.B. 1184 (2004 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2002-70 , § 3.24(1), 2002-46 I.R.B. 845 (2003 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2001-59 , § 3.19(1), 2001-52 I.R.B. 623 (2002 exclusion amount)]. For gifts made before 2002, the annual gift tax exclusion was $10,000 [ Rev. Proc. 2001-13 , § 3.17, 2001-3 I.R.B. 337 ]. The amount of the annual exclusion can be effectively doubled if gifts are made by a husband and wife [see I.R.C. § 2513(a) (gift-splitting)].

If the gift is to the donor's spouse and the spouse is not a citizen of the United States, the amount of the exclusion is significantly greater [see I.R.C. § 2523(i) (base annual exclusion amount is $100,000, with upward adjustments for inflation for gifts made in calendar years after 1998)]. The amount of the annual exclusion for noncitizen spouses also is adjusted annually for inflation [I.R.C. § 2503(b)]. For gifts made in 2010, the amount of the exclusion is $134,000 [Rev. Proc. 2009-50, 2009-45 IRB 624 (2010 Amount)]. For gifts made in 2009, the amount of the exclusion is $133,000 [Rev. Proc. 2008-66, 2008-45 IRB 1107 (2009) Amount]. For gifts made in 2008, the amount of the exclusion is $128,000 [Rev. Proc. 2007-45, 2007-45 IRB 976 (2008) Amount]. For gifts made in 2007, the amount of the exclusion is $125,000 [Rev. Proc. 2006-53, 2006-48 IRB 996 (2007 Amount)]. For gifts made in 2006, the amount of the exclusion is $120,000 [Rev. Proc. 2005-70, 2005-47 IRB 979 (2006 Amount)]. For gifts made in 2005, the amount of the exclusion is $117,000 [I.R.C. §§ 2503(b), 2523(I); Rev. Proc. 2004-71, 2004-50 I.R.B. 970 ]. For gifts made in 2004, the amount of the exclusion is $114,000 [ Rev. Proc. 2003-85 , § 3.26(2), 2003-49 I.R.B. 1184 ]. For gifts made in 2003, the amount of the exclusion is $112,000 [ Rev. Proc. 2002-70 , § 3.24(2), 2002-46 I.R.B. 845 ]. For gifts made in 2002, the amount of the exclusion is $110,000 [ Rev. Proc. 2001-59 , § 3.19(2), 2001-52 I.R.B. 623 ].

[b] Completed Transfer

A transfer of property to an irrevocable trust will qualify for the annual exclusion only if the transfer is "complete" for gift tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2]. A transfer is complete for gift tax purposes if the donor gives up "dominion and control" over the transferred property and retains no right to change the disposition of the property, for the donor's own benefit or that of another [Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b)].

If, on the other hand, the donor reserves some power over the disposition of the property, the gift may be incomplete [Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b)]. Powers that will render a transfer incomplete for gift tax purposes include the power to revest beneficial title to the property in the donor, the power to name new beneficiaries, or the power to change the interests of the beneficiaries as between themselves, unless the power is limited by a fixed or "ascertainable standard" [Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(c); for discussion of "ascertainable standards," see § 72.11[2][c]].

For purposes of this rule, the donor will be deemed to have any power that is exercisable by the donor in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of the transferred property or its income [Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(e)].

[c] Present Interest Requirement

A lifetime transfer of property to an irrevocable trust will qualify for the annual exclusion only if it is a gift of a "present interest" in property [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)(1); Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3] or if it qualifies as a "minor's trust" under I.R.C. § 2503(c) [see discussion under [d], below]. A "present interest" is an unrestricted right to the immediate use, possession, or enjoyment of the trust property or its income [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(b)]. When a gift is made to a trust, the beneficiaries and not the trustee are the donees for gift tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-2(a); Helvering v. Hutchings (1941) 312 U.S. 393, 396, 61 S. Ct. 653, 85 L. Ed. 909]. Thus an interest in a trust is a "present interest" only when the beneficiaries have the right to the immediate use, possession, or enjoyment of the trust property or its income [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-2(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(b)].

A beneficiary will have a "present interest" in a trust if the beneficiary has the "immediate" right to receive income from the trust property [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(b) (unrestricted right to "immediate" use, possession, or enjoyment of property or income from property is a "present interest"). A right to receive income is "immediate" if the payments are to start immediately and are not to be postponed until some future date. However, the payments need not be made on the same date as the gift. It is sufficient if the payments are made at regular intervals of reasonable length. Annual distributions of income usually will qualify for this purpose [ Fondren v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (1945) 324 U.S. 18, 21, 65 S. Ct. 499, 89 L. Ed. 668]. A right to receive income is not "immediate" if the payments are postponed until some future date, if the income is to be accumulated for distribution at some future time, or if the right to receive the income depends on the discretion of the trustee [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(c)].

A beneficiary may also have a "present interest" in a trust if the beneficiary has the right to demand payments (or withdrawals) from the trust, or if the trust is a trust for a beneficiary under the age of 21 that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c). The right to demand payments (or withdrawals) from a trust is commonly called a "Crummey" power [see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82] and is discussed in § 72.14[4]. Trusts that meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) are discussed in [d], below.

[d] Minor's Trust Under I.R.C. § 2503(c)

A trust that does not qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(b)(1) because the beneficiary does not have a "present interest" in the trust [see discussion in [c], above] may qualify for the exclusion if it meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c). A transfer of property to an irrevocable trust will qualify for the exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(c) if the gift property and its income may be expended by or for the benefit of the donee before the donee reaches the age of 21 and will, to the extent not so expended, pass to the donee when the donee reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(1), (2)(A)]. If the donee dies before reaching 21, any undistributed portion of the gift property and income must be payable to the donee's estate, or as the donee may appoint under a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(B); see I.R.C. § 2514(c) ("general power of appointment" defined) and discussion in § 72.12[22][d]]. For a more detailed discussion of the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c), see § 72.15. For techniques for drafting a trust that meets those requirements, see § 72.210.

[3] Transferring Post-Gift Appreciation

If a lifetime transfer of property to an irrevocable trust is a "completed transfer" for gift tax purposes [see discussion in § 72.13[2][b]], the transfer will also remove any post-transfer appreciation on the property from the settlor's estate. This will be true whether the original transfer was subject to gift tax, sheltered from gift tax under the annual exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)] and discussion in [2], above, or applied against the settlor's unified transfer credit [see I.R.C. § 2505 and discussion in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.14[5]]. If the transferred property has a good potential for appreciation, this may result in considerable estate tax savings, even when the initial transfer is potentially subject to gift tax.

PRACTICE TIP:

There are, however, potential drawbacks in this circumstance. For capital gains purposes, property transferred by gift has basis in the hands of the donee equal to the basis it had in the hands of the donor [I.R.C. § 1015(a)]. Thus, if the donor transfers property with a low basis (and hence substantial built in capital gains), the donee will, upon disposition of the transferred property in a transaction subject to capital gains tax, be required to pay that tax on the gains inherent in the pre- and post-transfer appreciation of the property. On the other hand, property transferred at death and included in the estate of the transferor for estate tax purposes has as its basis in the hands of the donee the value finally established for the property for estate tax purposes in the donor's estate. Thus, built in capital gains tax liability is typically eliminated for transfers occurring at death [I.R.C. § 1014(a), effective for decedents dying before 2010 (I.R.C. § 1014(f)); a modified carryover basis rule applies generally for decedents dying after 2009 (I.R.C. § 1022)]. While capital gains tax rates are substantially lower than estate tax rates [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2), (h)], careful consideration of the results in a particular case must be given before advising a client to make a lifetime transfer simply to avoid estate tax on post-transfer appreciation. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

Transferring post-gift appreciation is one of the underlying goals of the grantor retained income trust (GRIT) and is discussed in detail in § 72.16.

[4] "Crummey" Powers

[a] In General

A "Crummey" power is a power given to the beneficiary of a trust to demand withdrawals from the trust during a specified period of time. The name derives from the landmark case of Crummey v. C.I.R. [ Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82 ], in which the Ninth Circuit sanctioned the use of current withdrawal powers to qualify gifts to such a trust for the annual gift tax exclusion.

In Crummey, the settlors established irrevocable inter vivos trusts for the benefit of their four children, one of whom was a minor. The trust instrument authorized the settlors to make additions to the trusts and authorized each child (or the child's guardian) to demand the withdrawal each year of a specified sum of money from the trust established for that child. The court held that the beneficiaries' power to demand the withdrawal of the gift property rendered the gifts "present interests" and thus qualified them for the annual exclusion [ Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82, 83 ].

[b] Use to Qualify Gift for Annual Exclusion

"Crummey" powers are typically used to qualify lifetime gifts to an irrevocable trust for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b); for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]]. A properly drafted "Crummey" power will qualify such a gift as a "present interest" [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3 and discussion in § 72.13[2][c]] even when the trust instrument does not require that the trust income be distributed to the beneficiary on a current basis. If the donor (normally the settlor) has made no other gifts to or for the benefit of the beneficiary in a particular year, he or she can give the trust an amount equal to the full annual exclusion amount, and the entire gift will be sheltered from gift tax under the annual exclusion.

PRACTICE TIP:

While a "Crummey" power can be used to qualify what would otherwise be a gift of a future interest for the annual gift tax exclusion, a trap may exist for "Crummey" gifts in the context of the federal generation-skipping transfer tax. Normally, gifts that qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion are assigned an inclusion ratio of zero for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, thus avoiding the imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [ I.R.C. § 2642(c)(1)]. However, in most cases in which the annual gift tax exclusion is made available through the use of a "Crummey" power, the general rule does not apply, and the transfer to the trust will constitute a "direct skip" subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax [ I.R.C. § 2642(c)(2)]. The generation-skipping transfer tax can be avoided either by allocating some of the transferor's GST exemption to the gift in trust [see I.R.C. §§ 2631 and 2632] or by allowing the beneficiary of the "Crummey" power to be the only trust beneficiary and to receive all of the property from the trust (or have some right or power which will cause the trust property to be included in the beneficiary's estate for estate tax purposes) [see I.R.C. § 2642(c)(2)]. Unfortunately, the former plan may be seen as "wasting" that portion of the GST exemption or otherwise not fit into the client's plan, and the latter approach is likely to cause some significant distortion of the underlying trust (which would rarely comply with the limits described above). In any event, awareness of these rules is important when the planner is advising the client and designing a trust that includes "Crummey" powers. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

Some settlors may be reluctant to confer "Crummey" powers on beneficiaries for fear that they will actually withdraw the gift property from the trust and thereby frustrate the purpose of the trust. This fear is rarely well based, however, for "Crummey" powers are infrequently exercised during the time specified in the powers and, by their own terms, typically lapse after a specified period of time so that future withdrawals cannot be made.

[c] Use in Life Insurance Trusts

Although "Crummey" powers may be used in any type of irrevocable inter vivos trust, they are most useful in irrevocable life insurance trusts, where they can make it possible for the settlor to make annual gifts to the trust to cover insurance premiums while sheltering the gifts from gift taxation under the annual exclusion. In a typical life insurance trust with a "Crummey" power, the settlor makes annual cash gifts to the trust. Although the "Crummey" power gives the beneficiary (or beneficiaries) the right to withdraw the gift during a specified period, the power is rarely exercised and the power lapses at the end of a specified period. After the power has lapsed, the gift becomes part of the trust principal and is used by the trustee to pay premiums on the life insurance policy (or policies) owned by the trust.

[d] Estate and Gift Tax Consequences of Lapse of Power

The lapse of a "Crummey" power has some potentially important tax consequences. Since a "Crummey" power is a general power of appointment [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1) (definition of "general power of appointment") and discussion in § 72.12[2][d]], and since the lapse of a general power of appointment is deemed a transfer for gift tax purposes under I.R.C. § 2514, the lapse of a "Crummey" power may be a taxable gift from the beneficiary who holds the power to the remainder beneficiaries of the trust [see I.R.C. § 2514(e)]. Further, since the lapse of a general power of appointment will cause property subject to the power to be included in the gross estate of the beneficiary who holds the power if the disposition would have caused the property to be included in the power holder's estate I.R.C. §§ 2035-2038, the lapse of a "Crummey" power will cause the property subject to the power to be included in the power holder's estate if, after the lapse, the power holder retains the right to receive income from the trust property [see I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (estate tax consequences of release of power by disposition of type that would cause inclusion of property under I.R.C. §§ 2035-2038 if it were transfer of property); see also I.R.C. § 2036 (estate tax consequences of transferring property and retaining right to income from property for life); I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2) (lapse of power as release of power)]. Under I.R.C. § 2036, if a person transfers property and after the transfer retains the right to receive the income from the property for life, the property is includible in the person's gross estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(1)].

In a life insurance trust, the beneficiary who holds the "Crummey" power typically has the right to receive income from the trust property (after the payment of insurance premiums). Thus the lapse of a "Crummey" power held by a beneficiary who has a lifetime income interest in the trust will cause the property subject to the power to be included in the beneficiary's gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2036(a)(1) (estate tax consequences of retention for life of possession or enjoyment of property); I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (when release of power of appointment requires inclusion of property in gross estate); I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2) (lapse of power as release)] unless some precautions are taken to avoid that result [see discussion in [e], below].

[e] Drafting to Avoid Consequences of Lapse

The unfavorable gift and estate tax consequences of the lapse of a "Crummey" power [see discussion in [d], above] can be avoided if the power is made within the so-called "five or five limit." Under I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2), the lapse of a power of appointment will not cause property subject to the power to be included in the gross estate of the power holder if the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the total value of the trust assets available to satisfy the power, determined on an annual basis. Under I.R.C. § 2514(e), the lapse of a general power of appointment will not be deemed a gift for gift tax purposes if the power is subject to the same limit of $5,000 or 5 percent. For this reason, many "Crummey" powers are routinely limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the total assets of the trust. This limit is often stated in terms of the governing provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. Thus the "Crummey" provisions in this publication contain optional language providing that the amount that the beneficiary can withdraw during any calendar year cannot exceed the amount that may from time to time be specified in I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2) as the maximum amount of property with respect to which the lapse of a general power of appointment will not be deemed a release of a general power of appointment [see § 72.200[2], Section 4.01(b); § 72.200[2], Section 4.01(b)]. If the "Crummey" power is also a "hanging" power, special alternative language is required [see discussion in [g], below].

Subjecting a "Crummey" power to the give or five limit may limit its usefulness. The amount of the annual gift tax exclusion, which is subject to annual adjustment for inflation, is $11,000 for calendar years 2002 through 2005 [I.R.C. § 2503(b); Rev. Proc. 2004-71, 2004-50 I.R.B. 970 (2005 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2003-85, § 3.26(1), 2003-49

I.R.B. 1184 (2004 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2002-70, § 3.24(1), 2002-46 I.R.B. 845 (2003 exclusion amount); Rev. Proc. 2001-59, § 3.19(1), 2001-52 I.R.B. 623 (2002 exclusion amount)]. For gifts made before 2002, the annual gift tax exclusion was $10,000 [ Rev. Proc. 2001-13, § 3.17, 2001-3 I.R.B. 337 ]. The value of the exclusion can be doubled if a husband and wife join to make gifts [see I.R.C. § 2513(a) (gift-splitting)]. However, the five or five limit will fully shelter an $11,000 gift from the unfavorable estate and gift tax consequences of lapse only if the total value of the trust property is $220,000 or more ($440,000 or more if the gift is valued at $22,000). When a trust owns a large amount of life insurance, gifts that fall within the five or five limit may not fully cover the large policy premiums [see, e.g., Estate of Leder v. C.I.R. (10th Cir. [T.C.] 1989) 893 F.2d 237, 238 (premiums on $1 million policy were $3,879.08 per month)]. If this is a problem, the attorney and the client should determine whether premiums on the insurance to be owned by the trust can be fully covered by annual gifts if the "Crummey" power is subject to a five or five limit. Since annual exclusions are available for all of the beneficiaries who hold "Crummey" powers, the more the beneficiaries the larger the potential shelter. In appropriate cases, the number of annual exclusions may be increased by adding grandchildren as beneficiaries [see Estate of Cristofani v. Commissioner (1991) 97 T.C. 74, 81-82 ]. If the total amount of all the annual exclusions will fully cover the premiums even when the "Crummey" power is subject to a five or five limit, the power can safely be drafted with that limit. If the premiums cannot be fully covered with a five or five limit, the attorney may consider combining a "Crummey" power with a testamentary power of appointment [see Prob. Code § 612(a) (testamentary power of appointment defined) and discussion in [f], below].

For further discussion of the lapse of "Crummey" powers and drafting techniques to avoid the consequences of lapse, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.07[4] (Matthew Bender).

[f] "Crummey" Power Combined with Testamentary Power of Appointment

The unfavorable gift tax consequences of the lapse of a "Crummey" power can be avoided by drafting the power so that a lapse will not constitute a completed transfer for gift tax purposes [see discussion in § 72.13[2][b]]. A transfer will not be complete for gift tax purposes if the transferor retains a testamentary power to appoint the remainder among his or her descendants [Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b); see Prob. Code § 612(a) (testamentary power of appointment is exercisable only by will)]. When a "Crummey" power lapses, the beneficiary who holds the power is considered the transferor for gift tax purposes. If the beneficiary retains the testamentary power to appoint the remainder among his or her descendants after the lapse, the lapse is not a transfer subject to gift tax and no gift tax liability will be incurred [Priv. Ltr. Ruls. 8825111 (Mar. 30, 1988), 8545076 (Aug. 14, 1985)]. When the beneficiary is given a testamentary power of appointment, the "Crummey" power need not be subject to the five or five limitation [see discussion in [e], above] in order to avoid the gift tax problems described in [c], above.

However, if the beneficiary's taxable estate does not exceed the "applicable exclusion amount" (unified credit) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] available in the beneficiary's estate, including this property in the beneficiary's estate will not result in any estate tax liability.

If the beneficiary survives the termination of the trust, any property that the beneficiary receives would be included in the beneficiary's gross estate in any case. However, a testamentary power of appointment should not be given if the beneficiary is the settlor's spouse, because the goal of the estate plan typically will be to bypass the spouse's estate. For this reason, it is generally preferable to make the "Crummey" power subject to a five or five limit when the spouse is the beneficiary who may exercise the power, or use a "hanging" power [see [g], below].

It is important to note that combining a "Crummey" power with a testamentary power of appointment is effective only to avoid the unfavorable gift tax consequences of a lapse of the power and will have no effect on the unfavorable estate tax consequences [see discussion in [d], above].

[g] "Hanging" Power

The unfavorable gift and estate tax consequences of the lapse of a "Crummey" power may be avoided in appropriate cases by providing that the power will not fully lapse each year, but will carry over to subsequent years. This type of power, called a "hanging power," typically will provide that if a beneficiary has the power to demand the withdrawal of principal exceeding the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the total value of the trust assets during a calendar year, the power to withdraw amounts in excess of $5,000 or 5 percent will not lapse at the end of that calendar year but will be carried over into subsequent years. Only the power to withdraw amounts up to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the total value of the trust assets will lapse each year. The remainder will "hang" over from year to year [for a form creating a hanging "Crummey" power, see California Wills Trusts, Alt. 4.850-3 (Matthew Bender)].

When gifts to a trust are designed to take maximum advantage of the annual exclusion and the amount that lapses at the end of the year is subject to a five or five limit, the amount subject to withdrawal typically will increase during the early years of the trust. If the beneficiaries do not exercise their withdrawal powers, however, the total value of the trust assets will also increase, and the value of the trust assets may eventually be sufficient to fully shelter the current gift amount under the five or five limit. If the trust continues to grow thereafter, amounts that lapse under the five or five limit will exceed the current gifts amount. The excess will then reduce the amounts that accumulated in previous years, and the total amount that "hangs" over will decrease.

"Hanging" Crummey powers are aggressive estate planning tools and should be used only when the client is willing to assume some risk in return for the potential tax saving advantages. For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.07[4][d] (Matthew Bender).

[h] Notice to Beneficiary

Although the opinion in the Crummey case [see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82] did not require that the beneficiaries be notified of their right to demand withdrawals from the trust, the IRS requires that the beneficiaries be notified of their withdrawal rights and given a reasonable opportunity to exercise them before they lapse.

In one case, the settlor created a trust on December 29, 1979. The trust instrument gave the beneficiary a power to demand the withdrawal of trust property and provided that the power would lapse if not exercised by the end of the year. The beneficiary was not advised of the existence of the power, and it lapsed at the end of the year. The IRS held that the annual exclusion was not available because the settlor had failed to communicate the existence of the power and had narrowly restricted the time for its exercise [ Rev. Rul. 81-7, 1981-1 C.B. 474 ].

In another case, the settlor created an irrevocable trust on December 29, 1981, with $50,000. The trust instrument gave the beneficiary the power to demand the withdrawal of the amount transferred to the trust or the annual exclusion amount, whichever was less. The trustee was required to give the beneficiary notice of the beneficiary's withdrawal power within 10 days of any transfer to the trust, and the power terminated 45 days after receiving written notice. The IRS held that the annual exclusion was available for 1981, even though the beneficiary's initial withdrawal right did not expire until 1982, since the beneficiary was given notice of the power and a reasonable time within which to exercise it. The fact that the withdrawal right expired in a year after the gift was made did not alter this result [ Rev. Rul. 83-108, 1983-2 C.B. 167 ].

Although no published ruling has yet required that the trust instrument require the trustee to notify the beneficiary when a gift is made to the trust, such a provision is recommended. Since the IRS seems to be more concerned about the conduct of the parties than the terms of the trust instrument [see Rev. Rul. 81-7, 1981-1 C.B. 474 ], failure to give notice may be fatal even when the instrument requires notice. For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.07[5] (Matthew Bender).

[i] Time Limit on Exercise of Power

The trust instrument should specify a time limit within which the beneficiary may exercise the "Crummey" power. This may be a specified number of days after notice of the existence of the power is given to the beneficiary [see discussion in [h], above], or before the end of the calendar year. However, the time limit must give the beneficiary a reasonable period of time within which to exercise the power. The IRS has approved time limits of the end of the calendar year [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 7826050 ], within three months after receipt of a written notice of the transfer to the trust [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8008040 ], within 60 days after the receipt of a written notice of transfer [ Priv. Ltr. Ruls. 7939061 , 7947066 , 8007080 , 8014078 ], and within 30 days after written notice of the transfer [ Priv. Ltr. Ruls. 8003152 , 8004172 , 8006048 , 8024084 , 8134135 ]. Specifying a firm date after which the power can no longer be exercised will give the trustee a certain date after which the gift funds can be used to pay premiums.

[j] Legal Incapacity of Beneficiary

If a trust instrument gives a beneficiary who is subject to a legal disability the power to require withdrawals from a trust, a question may arise as to whether the beneficiary's withdrawal power is real or merely illusory, and whether the beneficiary in fact has a "present interest" in the property subject to the power [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)(1) and discussion in § 72.13[2][c]].

The IRS has allowed a "Crummey" power to qualify as a "present interest" when the power is held by a minor, providing there is no impediment in the trust instrument or local law to the appointment of a guardian for the minor [ Rev. Rul. 73-405 ]. The IRS has also stated that a natural guardian may exercise the power on behalf of the minor, even if the natural guardian is the donor [ Tech. Adv. Mem. 7935006 (March 18, 1979) ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8022048 (March 4, 1980) ]. If three days are required to appoint a guardian for a minor, however, the IRS has stated that at least that much time must be allowed for the exercise of the withdrawal right [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 7922107 (March 5, 1979) ]. In any case, it is advisable for the trust instrument to expressly authorize the guardian to exercise the power of withdrawal in behalf of the minor [see Naumoff v. Commissioner (1983) 46 T.C.M. 852 ] .

[k] Agreement Not to Exercise Power

Regardless of the terms of the trust instrument, there should be no agreement among the parties that the "Crummey" power will not in fact be exercised. Any agreement of this kind may negate the terms of the instrument, render the power illusory, and make gifts to the trust ineligible for the annual exclusion [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(g)(2); Estate of Cook v. Commissioner (1970) 29 T.C.M. 298 ; Ellis v. United States (D.C. Md. 1968) 280 F. Supp. 786 ] .

[l] Gift-Splitting

When spouses elect to split a gift to an irrevocable trust [see I.R.C. § 2513 and discussion in § 72.13[2][a]], the amount that may be withdrawn under a "Crummey" power may be twice the amount that could be withdrawn if the gift were made by one spouse only. However, exercise of the power cannot be contingent on split-gift treatment, since the IRS has held that such a gift will not qualify as a "present interest" [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8022048 (March 4, 1980) ] .

Further, gift-splitting is not possible when a married person makes a gift to his or her spouse [see I.R.C. § 2513(a) (gift-splitting permitted when gift is made by one spouse to any person other than his or her spouse)], or when one spouse makes a gift of property in which that spouse has given the other spouse a general power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 25.2513-1(b)(3), (4)]. Since a "Crummey" power is a general power of appointment [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1) (definition of "general power of appointment") and discussion in § 72.12[2][d]], gift-splitting is not possible when a married person creates a trust in which the married person's spouse has a "Crummey" power. Gifts may properly be split, however, to the extent that beneficiaries other than the spouse hold "Crummey" powers.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.14AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman§ 72.14 Life Insurance Trust[1] In General

A life insurance trust is a trust that is created for the purpose of acquiring and owning a life insurance policy (or policies). Although any type of trust (revocable or irrevocable, inter vivos or testamentary) may own life insurance, the special ability of the irrevocable inter vivos trust to remove trust property from the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes [see discussion in § 72.12[1]] makes it peculiarly well-suited for life insurance ownership. A properly structured and administered irrevocable inter vivos trust can own a life insurance policy on the settlor's life and the policy will not be included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2031]. This can result in very substantial estate tax savings to the settlor's estate. Since irrevocable inter vivos trusts are so widely used to own insurance policies, the term "life insurance trust" should be understood in this chapter to refer to an irrevocable trust, unless otherwise qualified.

[2] Uses*[a] In General

Life insurance trusts are used for a variety of purposes. They can be used, for example, to increase the total value of the settlor's estate [see [b], below], to provide liquidity to the settlor's estate or heirs [see [c], below], or to provide a mechanism for centralized management and control of insurance proceeds after the settlor's death [see [d], below]. Because irrevocable inter vivos trusts are peculiarly well-suited to remove property from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see discussion in § 72.12[1]], they are often used to achieve tax savings by removing property from the settlor's gross estate. In the typical case, the creation of a life insurance trust will be motivated by multiple goals, some that are tax-specific and others that are unrelated to any tax-savings goal.

For further discussion of life insurance trusts and their creation, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[b] Increasing Estate

The proceeds of life insurance on the settlor's life may be a good source of capital with which income may be generated to meet long-term needs of the surviving spouse or other family members. Further, a properly structured and administered life insurance trust can be used to transmit insurance proceeds free of any estate tax obligations [see discussion in § 72.12].

[c] Liquidity

The life insurance trust is peculiarly well-suited to plan for liquidity needs after the settlor's death. Liquidity needs may result from various causes, such as the anticipated need for the payment of death taxes, expenses of administering the settlor's estate, or support for the settlor's surviving spouse or other family members. Without a ready source of cash with which to satisfy obligations of this kind, the settlor's estate may suffer in substantial ways. If, for example, there is insufficient cash in the settlor's estate to pay death taxes, it may be necessary to sell assets belonging to the estate, often at unfavorable prices and under unfavorable conditions.

[d] Centralized Management

Another advantage of a life insurance trust is that it may be used to subject all proceeds from insurance on the settlor's life to the same management and administrative procedures. The trustee may be the same person who is the executor of the settlor's estate, which can do much to make sure that a coordinated approach will be taken to administering all of the assets and properly resolving disputes among beneficiaries.

[3] Advantages of Trust Over Outright Gifts

Many of the same goals that can be achieved by a life insurance trust can also be achieved by making outright gifts to family members. For example, a client may make cash gifts to family members, who may then use the gift funds to purchase life insurance on the client's life. On the client's death, proceeds from the insurance may be used to provide for the family's long-term needs, without the expense and inconvenience normally associated with a trust.

However, other considerations may militate in favor of the creation of a trust. A trust not only provides a centralized mechanism for the conservation and administration of the insurance proceeds; it may also provide for the varying needs of several beneficiaries, such as the settlor's spouse, children, and even grandchildren.

PRACTICE TIP:

A life insurance trust allows avoidance of all transfer taxes, including generation-skipping transfer taxes, in a way which direct, outright gifts to family members for use in purchasing life insurance on the donor simply cannot achieve. Through proper allocation of the donor/insured's GST exemption as the life insurance trust is funded, a large fund -- perhaps well in excess of the donor/insured's $1 million GST exemption -- can be made entirely exempt from estate and generation-skipping transfer taxes as of the donor/insured's death, possibly benefitting many generations before any transfer tax is again imposed on the trust's assets. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

Most importantly, the trust can give the settlor some assurance that the goals for which the trust was created will in fact be achieved after his or her death. Because outright gifts must be made without "strings" [see discussion in § 72.10[2]], there is considerably less assurance that they will end up actually being used for the purposes intended by the client.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.15AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman§ 72.15 Trust for Minor Under I.R.C. § 2503(c)[1] In General

I.R.C. § 2503(c) provides the basis for a special trust that may be created for the benefit of a beneficiary who is under the age of 21. If the requirements of the section are met, property may be transferred to the trust and sheltered from gift taxation under the annual exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b) and discussion in § 72.13[2]] even though the beneficiary does not have the right to current distribution of either trust principal or income.

Although trusts that meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) are customarily described as "minors' trusts" [see heading to I.R.C. § 2503(c)], the section actually applies to all persons under the age of 21 years. In California, all persons who have reached the age of 18 are adults [see Fam. Code §§ 6500, 6501]. Thus, in California, I.R.C. § 2503(c) also applies to adults who are between 18 and 21 years of age.

[2] Uses

A trust that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) may be used to confer both future and current benefits on a beneficiary who is under the age of 21 years, while at the same time qualifying transfers to the trust for the annual exclusion. The trustee has discretion to make distributions to or for the beneficiary [see discussion in [3][b], below], and any property that is not so distributed must pass to the beneficiary when the beneficiary reaches 21 [see discussion in [3][c], below]. Thus the trust achieves the twin goals of allowing accumulations of income until the beneficiary reaches 21 and currently sheltering transfers to the trust from the gift tax under the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4].

[3] Requirements*[a] In General

A gift, either outright or in trust, will qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(c) if the gift property and its income may be expended by or for the benefit of the donee before the donee reaches age 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(1)]; see discussion in [b], below] and will, to the extent not so expended, pass to the donee when the donee reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A)]; see discussion in [c], below]. If the donee dies before reaching 21, any undistributed portion of the gift property and its income must be payable to the donee's estate, or as the donee may appoint under a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(B)]; see I.R.C. § 2514(c) (general power of appointment defined); see also discussion in [d], below].

PRACTICE TIP:

Notice that unlike most trusts funded with "Crummey" powers, minors' trusts do not run afoul of the rules under I.R.C. § 2642(c)(2), and thus will be exempt from generation-skipping transfer taxes.

Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[b] Trustee's Discretion

I.R.C. §§ 2503(c) does not require that principal or income actually be distributed to the beneficiary, but only that principal and income "may be expended" by or for the benefit of the beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(1)]. A discretionary power in the trustee to make principal or income payments to or for the beneficiary's benefit will thus suffice, providing that the trust instrument contains no "substantial restrictions" on the exercise of the trustee's discretion [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-4(b)].

The IRS has held that the trustee's discretion is not subject to "substantial restrictions" if the trust provisions, read as a whole, approximate the term "benefits" as used in I.R.C. § 2503(c) [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 750-752 ; Rev. Rul. 67-270, 1967-2 C.B. 349 ]. Under this test, a trust instrument that authorizes the trustee to pay as much of the income "as may be necessary for the education, comfort and support of the beneficiary" does not impose "substantial restrictions" [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 750-751 ; Rev. Rul. 67-270, 1967-2 C.B. 349 ]. However, a trust provision that limits the amounts of principal that the trustee may distribute to amounts "needed because of illness, infirmity or disability" [see Pettus v. Commissioner, (1970) 54 T.C. 112, 121-122 ], or that requires the trustee to consider "other resources available to the beneficiary" [ Rev. Rul. 69-345, 1969-1 C.B. 226 ], does impose substantial restrictions.

[c] Distribution of Property at Age 21

A trust will meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) if trust principal and income not previously distributed to the beneficiary "will ... pass to" the beneficiary when the beneficiary reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A)]. However, this language does not require that the property be held until the beneficiary reaches the age of 21. A distribution to the beneficiary before 21 will not adversely affect the annual gift tax exclusion [ Rev. Rul. 73-287, 1973-2 C.B. 321 ].

[d] Continuation of Trust After 21

Some settlors may be reluctant to permit the beneficiary to receive all of the undistributed principal and income when the beneficiary reaches 21. Although I.R.C. § 2503(c) states that a trust will meet its requirements if undistributed income "will ... pass" to the beneficiary when the beneficiary reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A)], it has been held that this provision does not require actual distribution to the beneficiary at 21, and that merely giving the beneficiary a right to terminate the trust on reaching 21 will suffice [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 752-753 ; Rev. Rul. 74-43, 1974-1 C.B. 285 ; see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-4(b)(2)]. The right to terminate the trust after the beneficiary reaches 21 may be a continuing right or a right exercisable for a specified period after the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 752-753 ; Rev. Rul. 74-43, 1974-1 C.B. 285 ; see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8507017, 8039023 ].

A trust that gives the beneficiary the right to terminate the trust during a specified period after the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday is sometimes called a "window trust." A trust created for the benefit of a beneficiary under the age of 21 but which continues after the beneficiary has reached 21 is sometimes called a Herr trust, after the case of C.I.R. v. Herr, in which the Third Circuit allowed an annual exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(c) even though the trust was to continue until the beneficiary reached the age of 30 [ Commissioner v. Herr (3d Cir. [T.C.] 1962) 303 F.2d 780 ]. The court reasoned that the right to receive income before the beneficiary reached 21 was separate from the right to receive income or principal after the beneficiary reached 21. Since the beneficiary had a qualifying right to receive income before reaching 21, gifts to the trust before the beneficiary reached 21 qualified for the annual exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(c), even though the trust continued after the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday. Herr makes it clear that the annual exclusion is available before the beneficiary reaches 21 when the trust continues thereafter.

If the beneficiary does not elect to terminate the trust at 21, the question arises whether gifts made to the trust after the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday will qualify for the annual exclusion. The gifts would qualify if the beneficiary had a "Crummey" withdrawal power [see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82 and discussion in § 72.13[4]] exercisable after reaching 21. The gifts would also qualify if the beneficiary was given an immediate right to receive all of the income of the trust on a current basis [see discussion in § 72.13[2][c]].

[e] Distribution of Property on Beneficiary's Death

If the beneficiary dies before reaching age 21, undistributed principal and income must be payable to the beneficiary's estate, or as the beneficiary may appoint under a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(B); see I.R.C. § 2514(c) (general power of appointment defined)]. This requirement may be satisfied by giving the beneficiary a testamentary power of appointment [ Rev. Rul. 75-351, 1975-2 C.B. 368 ]. A testamentary power of appointment is a power of appointment that is exercisable by will [Prob. Code § 612(a)]. In California, a will may be made by any person of sound mind over the age of 18 years [Prob. Code § 6100]. If the trust is to terminate when the beneficiary reaches 21, the beneficiary will thus have three years within which to exercise the testamentary power. In most cases, however, the beneficiary will not exercise the power. Thus, it is advisable to name a taker or takers in default. The annual exclusion will not be lost merely because the trust instrument designates takers in default [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-4(b)(3)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.16AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman§ 72.16 Grantor Retained Income Trust (GRIT)[1] In General

A grantor retained income trust (GRIT) is an irrevocable inter vivos trust in which the settlor retains a present interest for a term of years. At the end of the specified term, the trust terminates and the trust property passes to one or more remainder beneficiaries. The settlor's retained interest is usually an income interest, although it may also be a possessory interest, such as the right to use or retain possession of the property for the specified term.

At the time that a GRIT is created, the settlor makes an irrevocable transfer of the remainder interest in the trust property. This is a present transfer of a future interest in property and, as such, is usually classified as a taxable gift [I.R.C. § 2501(a)].

There are many different types and variations of GRITs, including the grantor retained annuity trust (GRAT) [see § 72.16[4]], the grantor retained unitrust (GRUT) [see § 72.16[5]], and the qualified personal residence trust (QPRT) [see §§ 72.16[6], 72.203]. Each of these trusts is subject to particular rules that must be carefully followed when the trusts are created, funded, and administered.

[2] Uses

GRITs are typically used to transfer property from one person (such as a parent) to another person or persons (such as a child or children) at a reduced transfer tax cost. When the trust is created, the settlor is deemed to have made a present gift of the remainder interest in the property. The tax is based on the value of the remainder interest, determined as of the time of creation of the trust, and this value is always less than the value of the whole property. On expiration of the specified term, the entire interest in the property passes to the remainder beneficiary or beneficiaries, typically without imposition of any additional transfer taxes.

If the settlor dies before expiration of the term, a part of the value of the property will be included in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes, since the gross estate includes the value of any property which the settlor has transferred (in trust or otherwise) while retaining the possession, use, or income for any period that does not in fact end before the settlor's death [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(1); see § 72.12[2][a]]. If the settlor does not die before expiration of the term, however, the entire value of the property will have been effectively removed from the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes.

The present transfer of the remainder interest will not qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)(1) and discussion in § 72.13[2]], since a remainder is a future interest and the annual exclusion is available only for present interests in property [I.R.C. § 2503(b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3; see discussion in § 72.13[2][c]]. However, payment of cash to satisfy the gift tax can be avoided if the settlor's unified credit is applied to the gift [see I.R.C. § 2505 (unified credit against gift tax) and discussion in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.14[5]]. If the value of the gift exceeds the "applicable exclusion amount" (unified credit) available in the year of the transfer [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]; see also I.R.C. § 2505(a)(1) ("applicable credit amount" for gift tax purposes)], or if the unused portion of the "applicable exclusion amount" is inadequate to completely shelter the transfer from gift tax, gift tax will have to be paid on the transfer at the time the transfer is made.

A properly planned and funded GRIT will make it possible for the settlor to ultimately transfer the value of the entire property to a designated remainder beneficiary or beneficiaries while paying gift tax on only part of that value. Since the trust is irrevocable, any post-transfer appreciation is also transferred to the remainder beneficiary or beneficiaries without tax [see discussion in § 72.13[3]]. In many cases, this will result in significant overall transfer tax savings, and likely overall tax savings even taking into account the impact of the capital gains tax. While the settlor must assume the risk that he or she may die before expiration of the specified term and thus subject his or her estate to some additional estate tax, this risk will often be acceptable when balanced against the potential tax savings to be derived from the arrangement.

PRACTICE TIP:

Even if the settlor dies before expiration of the term, he or she actually is no worse off from a transfer tax perspective than if he or she had not established the GRIT in the first place. This is because the calculation of the settlor's federal estate tax liability reduces the tax due by the amount of gift taxes previously paid on property included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes. While the trust assets, including any appreciation since the date of the transfer to the GRIT, will be included in the gross estate, the tax is calculated so as to effectively refund any gift tax paid and restore any portion of the unified credit applied at the time of the transfer to the GRIT. Still, there are expenses in establishing and administering the GRIT that must be considered, along with all of the emotional and other factors that may be weighed by a client in deciding whether to establish a GRIT. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[3] Valuation

[a] Valuation Under Basic Gift Tax Rules

When property is transferred to a GRIT, the value of the gift to the remainder beneficiaries is determined by first valuing the whole property and then subtracting the value of the interest retained by the settlor [Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2512-5, 25.2702-1(b)]. Under general gift tax valuation rules, the value of a retained interest is determined by referring to valuation tables published by the IRS [see Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2512-5, 25.2702-1 et seq.; Rev. 1989-1 C.B. 660, Notice 89-24]. The tables are contained in treasury regulations and in IRS Publications 1457 ("Actuarial Values, Book Aleph"), 1458 ("Actuarial Values, Book Beth"), and 1459 ("Actuarial Values, Book Gimel") [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2512-5(d)(4)], which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Under these tables, if the settlor's interest in the property is retained for a relatively long term of years, its value will be relatively high and the value of the remainder interest will be correspondingly low. Conversely, if the settlor's interest is retained for a relatively short term of years, its value will be relatively low and the value of the remainder interest will be correspondingly high. In either case, however, the value of the transferred interest as determined under traditional gift-tax valuation rules will be less than the value of the whole property, and the amount that is subject to gift tax will be less than the current value of the entire property [but see I.R.C. § 2702(a)(2)(A) and discussion in [b], below, for special valuation when remainder beneficiaries are family members].

[b] Valuation Under I.R.C. § 2702

Since 1990, valuation of the retained interest in a GRIT in which the remainder interest is transferred to members of the settlor's family has been subject to special rules set forth in I.R.C. § 2702. Under I.R.C. § 2702, the retained interest must be valued at zero if an individual transfers property in trust for the benefit of "a member of the transferor's family" and the individual or an "applicable family member" retains an interest in the trust [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(2)(A)]. For purposes of these rules, the term "member of the transferor's family" includes the settlor's spouse, the transferor's brothers and sisters, ancestors and lineal descendants of the transferor or the transferor's spouse, and spouses of any of the brothers, sisters, ancestors, or lineal descendants [I.R.C. § 2702(a); see I.R.C. § 2701(e)(1)]. The phrase "applicable family member" includes the transferor's spouse, ancestors of the transferor or the transferor's spouse, and the spouse of any such ancestor [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(1); see I.R.C. § 2701(e)(2)].

When the valuation rules of I.R.C. § 2702 are applicable and the retained interest in the trust is valued at zero, the value of the remainder interest is equal to the value of the whole property, and the whole value is subject to gift tax. This substantially reduces the advantage of the trust by requiring that the entire value of the property be subject to gift tax at the time the trust is established. When this happens, the only possible tax savings will result from any post-transfer appreciation of the trust property [see discussion in § 72.13[3]]. In some cases the potential for post-transfer appreciation may be great enough to make this an attractive possibility. This may be the case, for example, if the trust property is stock in a family-owned corporation that is expected to grow substantially in future years. In the usual case, however, post-transfer appreciation will not make up for the amount of unified credit consumed or gift tax paid at the inception of the trust.

[c] Exceptions to I.R.C. § 2702

The valuation rules of I.R.C. § 2702 [see [b], above] do not apply to trusts in which the retained interest is a "qualified interest" as defined in I.R.C. § 2702(b) [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3]. A "qualified interest" may be an annuity interest in a grantor retained annuity trust (or "GRAT"), a unitrust interest in a grantor retained unitrust (or "GRUT"), or a noncontingent remainder interest, if all the other interests in the trust are annuity interests in a GRAT or unitrust interests in a GRUT [I.R.C. § 2702(b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3(b)(1)(ii), (c)(1)(ii)]. "GRATs" are subject to special valuation rules discussed in [4], below. "GRUTs" are discussed in [5], below.

The valuation rules of I.R.C. § 2702 are similarly inapplicable when the trust property is a residence to be used as a personal residence by persons holding term interests in the trust [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(3)]. A personal residence trust (or "PRT") is subject to special rules that make it a relatively inflexible estate planning tool [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(a), (b)]. However, the Treasury has adopted somewhat more flexible rules for the so-called "qualified personal residence trust" or "QPRT" [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)]. This trust, sometimes called a "house GRIT," can be a useful tax-savings tool and is frequently encountered in estate planning practice. The rules governing the creation and administration of qualified personal residence trusts are discussed in [6], below.

Finally, the rules of I.R.C. § 2702 do not apply if the transfer is an "incomplete transfer" [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(3)(A)(i), (B)]. Whether an interest is "incomplete" is to be determined according to traditional gift tax rules. [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2].

[4] Grantor Retained Annuity Trust (GRAT)

[a] Nature and Purpose of GRAT

A grantor retained annuity trust (GRAT) is a type of GRIT in which the grantor (or any of the grantor's "applicable family members") [see I.R.C. § 2701(e)(2) and discussion in § 72.16[3][b]] retains the right to receive periodic payments in fixed dollar amounts for life or for a specified term of years [I.R.C. § 2702(b)(1)]. The periodic payments (or "annuity") must be received at least annually [I.R.C. § 2702(b)(1)]. A GRAT must be funded with cash or with income-producing property so that it can support the periodic payments.

A grantor may save transfer tax by setting up a GRAT. Under the GRAT, the grantor retains an annuity interest for a specified term. At the expiration of that term, the trust property passes to a child or other person named in the GRAT. Gift tax is payable, but only on the present value of the remainder interest, which is the value of the property transferred to the GRAT less the value of the retained annuity interest. However, if the retained annuity interest is not a "qualified interest" under I.R.C. § 2702 [see [b], below], then it is treated as having zero value, and gift tax is payable on the entire value of the property transferred to the GRAT.

Any post-transfer appreciation in the value of the trust property will escape transfer tax, but only if the grantor survives the trust term. If the grantor dies during the trust term, the trust property will be included in his or her gross estate under I.R.C. § 2036 [see [d], below]. In such an event, however, the consequences for the grantor are the same as if he or she had not set up a GRAT, except for setup and administration costs.

For a form for a GRAT, see § 72.221.

[b] "Qualified Interest"

If a trust qualifies as a GRAT, the interest retained by the grantor (or the grantor's "applicable family member") is a "qualified interest" for purposes of I.R.C. § 2702 and subject to special valuation rules set forth in I.R.C. § 7520 [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(2)(B), (b)(1)]. The valuation is made according to special IRS valuation tables and by assuming an interest rate of 120 percent of the federal midterm rate (rounded to the nearest two-tenths of one percent) for the month in which the valuation date falls. The applicable tables are in treasury regulations [see Treas. Reg. § 20.7520-1(c)(1)] and in IRS Publications 1457 ("Actuarial Values, Book Aleph"), 1458 ("Actuarial Values, Book Beth"), and 1459 ("Actuarial Values, Book Gimel") [see Treas. Reg. § 20.7520-1(c)(2)]. The federal midterm rate is the interest rate determined monthly by the Secretary of the Treasury for debt instruments with terms between three and nine years [I.R.C. § 1274(d)(1)]. Valuation of the retained interest in a GRAT is highly technical and complex.

A "qualified interest" for purposes of I.R.C. § 2702 is a qualified annuity interest, a qualified unitrust interest, or a qualified remainder interest [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-2(a)(5)], but for the settlor's power of revocation [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-2(a)(6)]. Payment of a qualified interest cannot be subject to any contingency other than the holder's survival until the commencement (or throughout the term) of the holder's interest, or the settlor's right to revoke the spouse's interest in the case of a revocable spousal interest [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3(d)(2)]. The term of the interest must also be fixed and ascertainable at the creation of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3(d)(4)]. A spouse's interest is a qualified interest if the term of the interest is fixed and ascertainable at the creation of the trust and the spouse's right to receive the annuity is contingent only on his or her survival and his or her spouse's power to revoke [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3(e), Example 8]. A spouse's interest is not a qualified interest, however, if his or her annuity is a contingent interest that is payable only if the settlor dies before the end of the trust term [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3(e), Example 9].

[c] Effect of Interest Rates

A GRAT can be a useful estate planning tool when interest rates are low and, because of those low interest rates, the settlor's retained annuity interest would be given a correspondingly high value. When the federal midterm rate is low, the retained annuity interest will be worth more than when the same rate is high, and the gift value of the remainder interest will be worth less. Thus, the trust property can be transferred to the settlor's family members at a lower transfer tax cost than would be the case when the federal midterm rate is high. Depending on the annuity amount retained by the settlor, this can result in significant transfer tax savings, especially if the assets in the GRAT produce a total return over the term of the GRAT that is higher than that assumed under the IRS tables. Conversely, a GRAT generally will be less useful when interest rates are high, because the gift tax cost of establishing the trust will be higher.

[d] Effect of Settlor's Death During Trust Term

Whether interest rates are high or low, however, the attorney and the settlor should always remember that the trust property will be included in the settlor's estate if the settlor dies before expiration of the trust term [see I.R.C. § 2036(a) (value of property included in decedent's estate if decedent retains income for any period which does not in fact end before death)] and that the entire value of the assets in the GRAT at the time of the settlor's death will be subject to estate tax [see I.R.C. § 2036(a)]. The estate planning value of a GRAT is thus dependent on fluctuating interest rates, on the growth in the trust assets over the term of the GRAT, and on the percentage of payout retained by the settlor [see Taylor, Of GRATs and GRUTs: Trusts Offer Benefits Linked to Interest Rates, 78 A.B.A. Jour. 95 (Oct. 1992)].

GRATs are sophisticated estate planning tools and should be used only by attorneys who are well-acquainted with their advantages and potential disadvantages.

[5] Grantor Retained Unitrust (GRUT)

A grantor retained unitrust (GRUT) is a type of GRIT in which the grantor (or any of the grantor's "applicable family members") [see I.R.C. § 2701(e)(2) and discussion in § 72.16[3][b]] retain the right to receive a fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust property for life or for a specified term of years (a "unitrust" interest) [I.R.C. § 2702(b)(1)]. Like an annuity interest in a GRAT [see discussion in [4], above], the unitrust interest in a GRUT must be paid at least annually [I.R.C. § 2702(b)(2)]. If a trust qualifies as a GRUT, the unitrust interest retained by the grantor (or the grantor's "applicable family member") is a "qualified interest" [see discussion in § 72.16[3][b]] for purposes of I.R.C. § 2702, and subject to special valuation under I.R.C. § 7520 [I.R.C. § 2702(a)(2)(B), (b)(2); see discussion in [4], above]. The value of the remainder interest in a GRUT is less significantly affected by interest rates than the value of the remainder interest in a GRAT [see Taylor, Of GRATs and GRUTs: Trusts Offer Benefits Linked to Interest Rates, 78 A.B.A.J. 95 (Oct. 1992)]. Therefore, the gift tax costs of establishing a GRUT will not vary greatly depending on the current level of interest rates. Instead, valuation is based on the percentage of payout that the settlor keeps. Thus, the usefulness of the GRUT as an estate planning tool depends on careful valuation of the retained and remainder interests in the trust. The risk that the settlor will die before expiration of the trust term and that the trust property will thus be included in the settlor's estate must also be carefully calculated [see I.R.C. § 2036(a) (value of property included in decedent's estate if decedent retains income for any period that does not in fact end before death); see also § 72.12[2][a]].

A unitrust interest in a GRUT affords the settlor some protection against inflation. This is because the amounts that the settlor will receive during the trust term are keyed to the value of the trust property and, if that value rises, the amount received by the settlor will also rise. If the trust property declines in value, however, the unitrust interest will also decline. If the trust property is not expected to appreciate in value, or if there is a possibility of depreciation during the trust term, a GRAT may be more advantageous to the settlor than a GRUT. A GRAT may also be expected to result in a lower overall transfer tax cost, as the gift tax due on the transfer of the remainder interest generally will be lower than that due on the transfer of the remainder interest in a GRUT. Of course, the relative savings that will be achieved in any specific case should be carefully calculated to make sure that these general statements hold true under the particular facts of that case.

GRUTs, like GRATs, are sophisticated estate planning tools and should be used only by estate planners who are familiar with their advantages and disadvantages.

[6] Qualified Personal Residence Trust (QPRT)

[a] In General

A qualified personal residence trust (or "QPRT") is a personal residence trust (or "PRT") that meets special requirements prescribed in the Treasury regulations [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)]. It is not subject to the special valuation rules of I.R.C. § 2702 [see § 72.16[3][b] for discussion] but is governed by the traditional rules of gift tax valuation [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(a); see § 72.16[3][a] for discussion]. Under the traditional rules, the retained interest is not valued at zero, but is determined by reference to the IRS gift tax valuation tables [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2512-5]. QPRTs are sometimes called "QPRGRITs," "house GRITs," or "personal residence GRITs."

A QPRT differs from an ordinary PRT in that it may sell the personal residence (or collect insurance proceeds if the residence is damaged or destroyed) and reinvest the proceeds in another personal residence within two years after the date of sale, or by the date of termination of the settlor's interest in the trust, whichever is earlier [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(C), (7)(ii), (iii)]. Unlike a PRT, a QPRT may purchase a residence with cash transferred to the trust and, after the residence has been purchased, may hold additional cash for the purpose of making mortgage payments or paying expenses on the residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)].

[b] Uses

The QPRT is the most popular GRIT used in current estate planning. It is used by settlors (typically parents) who wish to transfer personal residences to family members (typically children) at reduced transfer tax costs. The original transfer to a QPRT may be of a personal residence or cash with which a personal residence is to be purchased.

Once property has been transferred to a QPRT, the settlor is deemed to have made a transfer of the remainder interest in the trust property to the remainder beneficiaries. The value of the remainder interest is determined by subtracting the value of the interest retained by the settlor from the value of the entire property [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2512-5(a)(1)(i)]. The value of the remainder interest depends in large part on the trust term. If the term is relatively long, the value of the remainder is relatively low and the gift tax cost of transferring it to the remainder beneficiaries is correspondingly low. If the trust term is relatively short, the value of the remainder is relatively high and the gift tax cost of transferring it to the trust is correspondingly high.

If the settlor does not die within the specified trust term, the trust property will be distributed to the remainder beneficiaries without further gift or estate tax. If the settlor dies before the trust has terminated, however, the trust assets will be included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes because the settlor retained the use of the transferred property for a period that did not end before the settlor's death [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(1); see § 71.12[2][a]].

Although a relatively long trust term will result in a relatively low gift tax, it will also increase the risk that the settlor will die before termination of the trust and that the trust property will be included in the settlor's gross estate. In using a QPRT, it is thus necessary to balance the advantages of a reduced gift tax against the risk that the trust property will be included in the settlor's estate for gift tax purposes.

[c] Requirements

The IRS has developed a sample form for a QPRT (with one term holder) that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2702(a)(3)(A) and Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c) [see Rev. Proc. 2003-42, 2003-1 C.B. 993]. This form is illustrated in § 72.220.

An irrevocable trust should be planned and prepared as part of a comprehensive estate plan. Ch. 60, Estate Planning, is a general introduction to the subject of estate planning and a guide to other estate planning chapters in this publication. It should be consulted before any estate planning documents are prepared. Lifetime gifts and gift-giving strategies are covered in Ch. 60A, Gifts.

NOTE:

Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.200[2] contains a client interview checklist designed to be used by an estate planning attorney at the initial client interview. It includes questions designed to elicit all of the personal and financial information necessary to begin the preparation of an estate plan. It should also be used in connection with the preparation of an irrevocable trust.

§ 72.110 Suitability of Irrevocable Trust for Client's Purposes

1. Determine whether client wishes to permanently part with trust property.

NOTE:

An irrevocable trust, unlike a revocable trust, is not a tentative arrangement that can be changed, revised, or revoked at the client's option. When a client transfers property to an irrevocable trust, the client permanently parts with the property. If the trust is properly structured, the client will have no power to change, revise, or revoke the trust at some time in the future.

2. If client wishes to permanently part with trust property, determine whether outright gift would suit client's wishes and needs, considering following features of outright gifts:

NOTE:

An irrevocable inter vivos trust can be best understood as a gift substitute. When a client transfers property to an irrevocable trust, the client has permanently parted with the trust property and has permanently conferred benefits on the trust beneficiaries. If a client wishes to confer benefits on specified persons, that may be done simply by making gifts to those persons. Before any decision is made to create an irrevocable trust, the client should consider whether an outright gift or gifts might better meet the needs of the proposed beneficiaries while at the same time satisfying the client's own needs and wishes.

a. Donees will receive immediate economic benefits of gift property.

b. Client will permanently lose economic benefits of gift property and cannot reclaim it in future, even if client should later be in financial need.

c. Gift property will be removed from client's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

NOTE:

If an irrevocable trust is properly structured, the trust property will be removed from the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [for definition of "gross estate," see I.R.C. § 2031 and discussion in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.13[1]]. If, however, the settlor retains certain prohibited interests in and powers over the trust property [see I.R.C. §§ 2033, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2041], the trust property will be included in the settlor's gross estate, even though the trust is irrevocable. For discussion, see § 72.12.

d. Gift may be sheltered from gift tax under annual gift tax exclusion.

NOTE:

An exclusion (called the "annual exclusion") is available for gifts made to each donee by each donor during a calendar year [I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]. The amount of the exclusion can be effectively doubled if gifts are made by a husband and wife [see I.R.C. § 2513(a) (gift-splitting)]. If the gift is to the donor's spouse and the spouse is not a citizen of the United States, the amount of the exclusion is significantly greater [see I.R.C. § 2523(i)]; for discussion, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[5].

e. Client will no longer be liable for income tax on income produced by gift property, or have benefit of deductions or credits associated with gift property.

f. Costs of making gift will ordinary be minimal.

NOTE:

An attorney's assistance may be necessary to make certain gifts, and to prepare and file any gift tax returns required. However, many gifts can be made without legal assistance, particularly if they are completely sheltered from gift tax under the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. §§ 2503(b), 2513(a)]; Treas. Reg. § 25.2513-1; see also [d], above].

3. Determine whether irrevocable trust would suit client's needs and wishes, considering following facts:

a. Trust beneficiaries will receive economic benefits of trust property, but control of property will be in hands of trustee, subject to terms and conditions of trust instrument.

b. Economic consequences of creating irrevocable trust are effective when property is transferred to trustee, not (as in case of revocable trust) at some future time, such as client's death or death of client's spouse.

NOTE:

A revocable inter vivos trust may best be understood as a will substitute. While the settlor is living and competent, the settlor may change, revise, modify, or even revoke the trust. The trust does not become irrevocable until the settlor dies, after which time the trust property will be held, administered, and distributed as provided in the trust instrument. In contrast, an irrevocable trust (as that term is used in this chapter), is irrevocable from the outset. Whatever economic consequences are to flow from the trust will be determined at the time the trust is created and funded.

c. Since trust will be irrevocable, client cannot reassert possession of or control over trust property at some time in future.

d. If client should demonstrate financial need at future time, client cannot reclaim trust property to meet that need.

NOTE:

An irrevocable trust should be created only if the client is satisfied that he or she will not need the trust property at some time in the future. Property transferred to an irrevocable trust should be property that the client is reasonably satisfied that neither the client nor the client's spouse or children (if they are not to be beneficiaries of the trust) will ever need in the future.

e. Property transferred to trust will be removed from client's estate for federal estate tax purposes.

NOTE:

If an irrevocable trust is properly structured and administered, the trust property will be removed from the settlor's gross estate [see I.R.C. § 2031] for federal estate tax purposes. See the NOTE to P 2[c], above.

f. Unless trust is structured as "grantor trust", client will no longer be liable for income tax on income produced by trust property, or have benefit of deductions or credits associated with trust property.

NOTE:

A grantor trust is a trust in which the settlor holds certain powers or interests that, under I.R.C. §§ 671-679, require that the settlor be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes. When the settlor is treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes, all income, deductions, and credits are passed through the trust and reported on the settlor's individual income tax returns. If the trust is not a grantor trust, the trust and not the settlor is taxable on the income and entitled to the deductions and credits. For discussion, see § 72.200[1][c].

g. Client may make annual transfers to trust that are sheltered from gift tax if transfers meet "present interest" requirement of gift tax law for either of following reasons:

NOTE:

The annual gift tax exclusion is available only for gifts of "present interests" in property [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]. A "present interest" is an unrestricted right to the immediate use, possession, or enjoyment of property or the income from property [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(b)]. If the right to the use or possession of property is postponed, or if it depends on the satisfaction of some condition or the occurrence of some event, the annual exclusion is not available. For discussion, see § 72.13[2][c].

(1) Because beneficiaries of trust are given "Crummey" withdrawal rights.

NOTE:

The "present interest" requirement may be satisfied by giving the beneficiaries annual rights to demand payments (or withdrawals) from the trust. A right of this kind is commonly described as a "Crummey right" or "Crummey power" [see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82]. If the right is properly structured, the beneficiaries will be deemed to have "present interests" in annual transfers made to the trust and the transfers will qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. §§ 2503(b), 2513(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2513-1]. For discussion, see § 72.13[4].

(2) Because beneficiary of trust is minor and trust qualifies for annual gift-tax exclusion under I.R.C. § 2503(c).

NOTE:

Property may be transferred to a trust created for the benefit of a beneficiary who is under 21 years of age, and annual transfers to the trust may be sheltered from gift taxation under the annual exclusion if the trust meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c). These transfers may be sheltered from gift taxation even though the beneficiary does not have the right to current distribution of either trust principal or income. For discussion, see §§ 72.15 and 72.210.

h. Costs will be incurred in connection with both creation and maintenance of trust.

§ 72.111 Suitability of Life Insurance Trust for Client's Purposes

1. Determine whether client's estate would benefit from creation of life insurance trust, considering following facts:

- a. Life insurance will increase total value of client's estate [ see § 72.14[2][b]].
- b. Death benefits will provide liquidity to settlor's estate or heirs [ see § 72.14[2][b]] in form of cash that can be used to:
  - (1) Pay estate or other transfer taxes due after client's death.
  - (2) Provide support for client's spouse, children, grandchildren, or other family members on either short- or long-term basis.
  - (3) Replace decrease in value of client's estate attributable to transfer taxes due after client's death, costs of administration of client's probate estate, or similar costs.
- c. Trust will provide mechanism for centralized management and control of insurance proceeds after client's death [ see § 72.14[2][c]].
- d. Trust will give client some assurance that client's intentions will be carried out after client's death.

NOTE:

A trust must be used for the purposes and on the terms and conditions stated in the trust instrument. An outright gift, in contrast, must be made without "strings" and may or may not be used for the purposes intended by the donor [ see §§ 72.10[2], 72.14[3]].

e. Death benefits will not be included in client's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [ see § 72.12].

2. Determine whether benefits of trust would be justified in view of costs:

- a. Of creating and maintaining trust.
- b. Of acquiring and maintaining life insurance.

NOTE:

Premiums paid on the life insurance will be the principal cost of maintaining the trust. However, there may be other costs, such as trustee fees, bank charges, accounting fees, attorneys' fees, interest on any loans made against the cash value of the insurance, and similar items.

3. Determine whether costs of trust, including annual premiums on life insurance owned by trust, can be covered by annual gifts to trust [ see § 72.110, P 3(g)].

§ 72.112 Suitability of Minor's Trust Under I.R.C. § 2503(c) for Client's Purposes

1. Determine whether client wishes to make current gifts to beneficiary under 21 years of age.

NOTE:

Although trusts that meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) are customarily described as "minors' trusts" [see heading to I.R.C. § 2503(c)], the section actually applies to all persons under 21 years of age. In California, a person becomes an adult upon reaching the age of 18 [see Fam. Code §§ 6500, 6501]. Thus, in California, a trust may be created under I.R.C. § 2503(c) for adults who are 18 years of age but not yet 21, as well as for minors.

2. Determine whether client can afford to make substantial annual transfers to trust.

NOTE:

Annual transfers up to the full amount of the available annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]] may be sheltered from gift taxation if they are made to a trust that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) [see I.R.C. § 2503(b), (c); see also § 72.110, P 2(d) and discussion in § 72.15]. Although lesser amounts may also be transferred to the trust, the costs of creating and maintaining the trust will not usually be justified if the annual transfers to the trust are small.

3. Determine whether client would prefer to make annual transfers in trust rather than outright for one or more of following reasons:

a. Because client believes beneficiary should not be entrusted with management and control of transferred property on current basis.

b. Because client wishes trustee to make discretionary distributions of income and principal to beneficiary.

NOTE:

I.R.C. § 2503(c) does not require that principal or income actually be distributed to the beneficiary, but only that principal and income "may be expended" by or for the benefit of the beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(1)]. A discretionary power in the trustee to make principal or income payments to or for the beneficiary's benefit will thus meet the requirements of the section [see § 72.15[3][b]].

c. Because client wishes trust to continue after beneficiary reaches 21 years of age.

NOTE:

Although I.R.C. § 2503(c) states that a trust will meet its requirements if undistributed income "will ... pass" to the beneficiary when the beneficiary reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A)], it has been held that this provision does not require actual distribution to the beneficiary at 21 and that merely giving the beneficiary a right to terminate the trust on reaching 21 will suffice [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 752-753 ; Rev. Rul. 74-43, 1974-1 C.B. 285 ; see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-4(b)(2)]. If the beneficiary has a right to terminate the trust at age 21 but does not exercise the right, the trust may continue thereafter and transfers made to the trust before the beneficiary reaches 21 will still qualify for the annual exclusion [see Commissioner v. Herr (3d Cir. [T.C.] 1962) 303 F.2d 780 ; see also discussion in § 72.15[3][d]].

d. Because no adverse tax consequences would be suffered if beneficiary died before reaching 21 and trust property were included in beneficiary's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

NOTE:

If the beneficiary dies before reaching 21, any undistributed portion of the gift property and its income must be payable to the beneficiary's estate, or as the beneficiary may appoint under a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(B)]; see I.R.C. § 2514(c) (general power of appointment defined); see also discussion in § 72.15[3][a], [d]]. Ordinarily this will not present a problem, because the estates of most beneficiaries under 21 will be less than the "applicable exclusion amount" [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] and discussion in § 60.13[4] and no estate tax will be payable.

§ 72.113 Suitability of Qualified Personal Residence Trust (QPRT) for Client's Purposes

1. Determine whether client has personal residence that client intends to eventually transfer to specified beneficiaries, such as children.

NOTE:

The personal residence can be a principal residence or a second home [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(i), (c)(2)(i)]. Under the regulations, the definition of "principal residence" is to be determined under the rules of former I.R.C. § 1034 (repealed effective May 6, 1997) [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(2)(i)(A)]. Under the latter rules, a principal residence could consist of a dwelling house situated on real property, a condominium, an interest in a cooperative housing corporation, a houseboat, or a motor home [see I.R.C. § 1034(f); Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)(i); Rev. Rul. 64-31, 1964-1 C.B. 300]. I.R.C. § 1034 was repealed by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 [P.L. 105-34, § 312(b)]; however, it appears unlikely that this repeal was intended to have any impact on the types of interests that can qualify as a residence for QPRT purposes.

2. Determine whether client needs tax-saving strategies because combined values of estates of client and spouse are likely to exceed the "applicable exclusion amount" (unified credit) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] available in the year of the surviving spouse's death.

3. Determine whether client is willing to give up ownership of personal residence at end of trust term.

NOTE:

The client will have the right to use and occupy the personal residence during a specified period of time (the trust "term"), at the end of which ownership of the residence will pass to the remainder beneficiaries. By the terms of the trust, the client will be required to give up possession of the residence at the end of the term. The length of the term is usually determined by balancing the term holder's age and probable life expectancy against the tax savings that can be realized from reducing the value of the remainder interest by postponing distribution to the remainder beneficiaries for as long as possible. Since QPRTs are frequently drafted for elderly clients, the term is often ten years or less. For discussion, see § 72.220[1][d].

4. Determine whether potential transfer tax savings attributable to trust are justified in view of estimated costs of creating and maintaining trust, considering all of following:

a. Transfer of personal residence to trust will be treated for gift tax purposes as gift of remainder to remainder beneficiaries, with value of remainder determined by subtracting value of retained interest from value of entire property [Treas. Reg. § 25.2512-5(a), (d)].

b. If client dies before trust has terminated, trust property will be included in client's gross estate because client retained use of property for period that did not end before client's death [I.R.C. § 2036(a)].

c. If client does not die during trust term, property will be distributed to remainder beneficiaries without any other gift or estate tax [ see § 72.220[1][a]].

d. Remainder beneficiaries will not receive stepped-up basis on transfer, because basis of property received by gift is same as basis in hands of donor [I.R.C. § 1015(a)].

§ 72.120 Basic Trust Forms

NOTE:

The complete trust forms in this chapter have been chosen to illustrate basic irrevocable trust arrangements that will commonly be encountered in the attorney's office. Before drafting a trust instrument for a particular client, the attorney should examine each of these complete trusts and determine which one most nearly meets the client's needs. Any of the trust instruments may be modified as necessary to address a client's particular needs, wishes, or concerns. For trust provisions useful in modifying the complete trust forms in this chapter, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, and Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions; see also Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions.

1. Select trust instrument in § 72.200[2] (irrevocable life insurance trust) if client:
  - a. Is married.
  - b. Has young children.
  - c. Wishes to act as sole settlor in creating irrevocable life insurance trust to own one or more policies of life insurance on client's life, with death benefits payable to trustee on client's death.
  - d. Intends to make annual gifts to the trust out of client's separate property assets to cover the life insurance premiums.

e. Wishes to give spouse and children "Crummey" powers to withdraw annual gifts made to trust [ see § 72.110, P 3(g)(1); see also § 72.13[4]], but understands that if children do not exercise powers, gifts can be used to pay premiums on life insurance held by trust.

f. Wishes spouse to serve as trustee.

g. Intends trustee to receive death benefits of life insurance on client's death.

h. If spouse survives client, wishes death benefits to be held for benefit of surviving spouse during surviving spouse's lifetime.

i. On death of surviving spouse, wishes remaining trust property:

(1) To be held in sprinkling trust for benefit of any of children who are under a specified age (e.g., 25 years).

(2) When youngest child reaches specified age, to be distributed outright to children, either in lump sum or in installments.

2. Select trust instrument in § 72.201[2] (irrevocable life insurance trust) if there are two clients and clients:

a. Are married.

b. Have young children.

c. Wish to create a single irrevocable life insurance trust to own a policy or policies of life insurance providing for death benefits to be paid to trustee on death of second spouse to die (i.e., "second-to-die" life insurance).

NOTE:

Individual policies on the lives of each client can also be used in this type of arrangement.

d. Intend to make annual gifts to trust out of client's separate and/or community property assets to cover life insurance premiums.

e. Wish to give children "Crummey" powers to withdraw annual gifts made to trust [ see § 72.110, P 3(g)(1); see also § 72.13[4]] but understand that, if children do not exercise powers, gifts can be used to pay premiums on life insurance held by trust.

f. Understand that neither spouse will serve as trustee.

g. Intend trustee to receive death benefits of life insurance.

h. After death of second client to die, wish death benefits:

(1) To be held in sprinkling trust for benefit of any of children who are under a specified age (e.g., 25 years).

(2) When youngest child reaches the specified age, to be distributed outright to children, either in lump sum or in installments.

3. Select trust instrument in § 72.210[2] (irrevocable trust for benefit of minor under I.R.C. § 2503(c)) if clients:

- a. Are parents or grandparents.
- b. Wish to create trust for benefit of child or grandchild who is under 21 years of age [see NOTE in § 72.112, P 1].
- c. Are prepared to make substantial annual transfers to trust.
- d. Wish trustee to exercise discretion in making distributions of income and principal to beneficiary [see NOTE in § 72.112, P 3(b)].
- e. Wish trust to continue after beneficiary reaches 21 [see NOTE in § 72.112, P 3(c)].

NOTE:

This an optional feature of this type of minor's trust.

f. Are satisfied that no (or only limited) adverse tax consequences would be suffered if beneficiary died before reaching age 21 and trust property were included in beneficiary's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [see NOTE in § 72.112, P 3(d)].

4. Select trust in § 72.211[2](qualified personal residence trust, or QPRT) if client:

- a. Is parent.
- b. Has qualifying personal residence that he or she wishes to continue to use or occupy for period of years [see NOTE in § 72.113, P 1].
- c. Wishes to transfer personal residence to family members (usually children) at some time in future.
- d. Wishes to reduce overall tax burden on transfer by reserving right to use or occupy residence for period of years, at end of which ownership will pass to remainder beneficiaries (usually children).
- e. Understands that by transferring personal residence to trust and reserving use or occupancy for period of years ("trust term"):

(1) Original transfer will be treated as gift of remainder interest to remainder beneficiaries and be subject to gift tax [see § 72.113, P 4(a)].

(2) Property will be included in client's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes if client dies before end of trust term, because client will have retained use of property for period that did not end before his or her death [see I.R.C. § 2036(a); see also § 72.113, P 4(b)].

(2) Ownership of property will pass to remainder beneficiaries without further transfer tax if client does not die before end of trust term [see NOTE in § 72.113, P 3].

(3) Remainder beneficiaries will not receive stepped-up basis on transfer, because basis of property received by gift is same as basis in hands of donor [see I.R.C. § 1015(a); see also § 72.113, P 4(d)].

§ 72.200 Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust; One Settlor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an irrevocable inter vivos life insurance trust designed for use by one settlor. It is assumed that the settlor is married and has young children, that the life insurance premiums will be paid with separate property assets, and that the settlor's spouse will serve as trustee.

PRACTICE TIP:

Most California couples have only community property, not separate property. The drafter can fashion a simple transmutation agreement for situations where separate property is needed. For example, the agreement can provide that cash used to pay premiums on insurance (or contributed to a trust holding insurance) on the life of the husband will be deemed to be and transmuted to the husband's separate property. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

It is contemplated that the principal asset of this trust will consist of one or more policies of life insurance on the settlor's life. During the settlor's lifetime, the settlor will make annual gifts to the trust to cover the life insurance premiums. The children will have "Crummey" powers to withdraw the gifts during a specified period (if necessary, the spouse can also be given a "Crummey" power) [ see Section 4.01]. If they do not do so, the gifts will be used to cover the premiums. At the settlor's death, the trustee will receive the life insurance death benefits. If the settlor's spouse is surviving, the benefits will be held, administered, invested, and distributed for the surviving spouse's benefit [ see Section 4.03]. After the death of the spouse, the trust property will be held in a sprinkling trust for the benefit of any of the children who are under a specified age (e.g., 25 years) [ see Sections 4.04, 4.07]. When the youngest child reaches the specified age, the trust property will be distributed to the children, either in a lump sum or in installments [ see Section 4.07].

[b] Declaration of Trust Format

Two basic formats for trust instruments, called trust agreements and declarations of trust, are used by California attorneys to create inter vivos trusts. This trust uses the trust declaration format [ see Section 1.01].

When a trust is created by a trust agreement, the settlor and the trustee agree in writing that the settlor has transferred property to the trustee and that the trustee is holding the property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument. A settlor who is to serve as the original trustee will sign the agreement both as settlor and as trustee.

When a trust is created by a declaration of trust, the trustee declares in writing that the trustee is holding property as trustee under terms of the trust instrument. Although the settlor is not legally required to sign the declaration in his or her capacity as settlor, good practice requires that the settlor sign the declaration to indicate his or her approval of the terms of the trust. In any event, the settlor will have to sign the declaration if he or she is to serve as the original trustee, or one of the original co-trustees.

[c] Grantor Trust Rules

This trust has been designed as a "grantor" trust. A "grantor" trust is a trust in which the settlor holds certain powers or interests that, under the "grantor trust" rules of the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679], require that the settlor be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes. When the settlor is treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes, all income, deductions, and credits are passed through the trust and reported on the settlor's individual income tax returns.

Before the adoption of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, it was standard procedure to design a life insurance trust as a "grantor" trust, so the settlor could take any deductions for interest paid on loans against the policy. Although the personal interest deduction is no longer available, many life insurance trusts are still designed to qualify as "grantor" trusts so that the settlor will be able to deduct interest should the interest deduction ever be restored. Under the current law, there is neither an advantage nor a disadvantage in establishing a trust as a "grantor" trust. If the decision is made not to establish the trust as a "grantor" trust, some provisions of this trust must be modified as suggested in [d] through [f], below.

PRACTICE TIP:

Irrevocable life insurance trusts are often described as either "funded" or "unfunded." A funded life insurance trust holds, in addition to the life insurance policies, assets whose income can be used to pay the premiums on the policies. Most life insurance trusts are unfunded, and hold few if any assets other than the policies themselves. If the client wishes to establish a funded life insurance trust, the question of whether to make the trust a "grantor" trust takes on much more importance. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[d] Use of Income to Pay Premiums

Under the "grantor trust" rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in [c], above], the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the income may be used, without the consent of an "adverse party," to pay premiums on life insurance on the life of the settlor or the settlor's spouse [I.R.C. § 677(a)(3)]. An "adverse party" is a person who has a substantial beneficial interest in the trust that would be adversely affected by the exercise or non-exercise of a power that he or she possesses [I.R.C. § 672(a)], and the settlor's spouse might be considered an "adverse party" if he or she serves as trustee. However, Section 4.02 of this trust provides that premiums will be paid first with the net income of the trust and that trust principal will be used for this purpose only if the income is insufficient. This should insure that the trust will be treated as a "grantor" trust even if the spouse is deemed to be an "adverse party."

If a "non-grantor" trust is preferred, Section 4.02 should be modified to require the trustee to pay premiums out of principal and to accumulate all income and maintain it in a separate account. The trustee should also be forbidden to add accumulated income to principal. Provisions of this kind should avoid the application of I.R.C. § 677(a)(3), although no direct authority has been found that supports this result.

For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.05[2][b] (Matthew Bender).

[e] Control of Beneficial Enjoyment

Under the "grantor trust" rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in [c], above], the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the beneficial enjoyment of the trust income or principal is subject to a power of disposition exercisable by the settlor or a "nonadverse party," or both, without the approval or consent of an "adverse party" [I.R.C. § 674(c); for definition of "adverse party," see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in [d], above]. Sections 4.02, 4.04, and 4.10 of this trust give the trustee wide discretion to make distributions of income and principal to the settlor's spouse and children without the consent of any "adverse party" and should cause the trust to be considered a "grantor" trust for income tax purposes.

However, this rule is subject to important exceptions. Under I.R.C. § 674(b)(1), for example, certain powers to apply income to the support of a dependent will not require that the settlor be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes. Under I.R.C. § 674(c), a power that is exercisable by an "independent trustee" without the approval or consent of any other person will not require that the settlor be treated as the owner of the trust. A trustee who is not the settlor (or "grantor") and is not related to or subservient to the settlor's (or "grantor's") wishes is deemed to be an "independent" trustee for this purpose [I.R.C. § 674(c)]. Further, if a power to distribute, apportion, or accumulate income to or for a beneficiary or beneficiaries is exercisable by a trustee who is not the grantor or a spouse living with the grantor, and if the trustee can exercise the power without the approval or consent of any other person, the power will not require that the settlor be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the power is limited by a "reasonably definite external standard" set forth in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 674(d)].

If a "non-grantor" trust is preferred, an "independent trustee" may be appointed and given the power to make discretionary distributions of principal and income without the approval or consent of any other person. The trust may also qualify as a "non-grantor" trust if distributions are limited by a "reasonably definite external standard," which is presumably the same as the "ascertainable standard" relating to health, maintenance, support, and education described in I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A) [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2) and discussion in § 70.12[6][c]]. In theory, such a standard imposes a significant limitation on the ability of the trustee to make distributions to or for the benefit of the beneficiaries, but as a practical matter most types of distributions commonly made by a trustee will come within the parameters of what is permitted by an ascertainable standard.

The trust will also qualify as a "non-grantor" trust if an "adverse party" is appointed as trustee [see Treas. Reg. § 1.672(a)-1]. Although the settlor's spouse cannot receive any part of the income under I.R.C. § 677 without causing the trust to be a "grantor" trust, the spouse cannot qualify as an "adverse party" with respect to the income. Although one or more of the settlor's children may qualify as "adverse parties," a child will rarely be a good choice as trustee, both because children are often too young and inexperienced to properly carry out the duties of the trustee and because the selection of one child in preference to another could result in family rivalries or disputes that may impede the proper administration of the trust.

For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.05[2][c] (Matthew Bender).

[f] Administrative Powers

Under the "grantor trust" rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in [c], above], the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the settlor or a "nonadverse party" [see I.R.C. § 672(a) and discussion in [d], above] holds certain administrative powers over the trust. If the trust is designed to be a "nongrantor" trust, I.R.C. § 675 must be examined carefully to make sure that the trust instrument does not grant any of the prohibited powers to the trustee. For further discussion, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 115, Life Insurance Trusts, § 115.05[2][d] (Matthew Bender).

[g] Limitation on Settlor's Powers for Estate Tax Purposes

Section 3.02 of this trust provides that, notwithstanding any other provision of the trust instrument, the settlor will not have certain rights, powers, discretions, or "incidents of ownership" [see § 72.12[2][3]] in the trust or the trust property. The rights, powers, and interests described in that section, if retained by the settlor, would cause the trust property to be included in the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes under I.R.C. §§ 2036, 2038, 2041, or 2042. A provision of this kind should be included in every trust instrument when the trust is designed to remove the trust property from the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

[h] "Crummey" Powers

Section 4.01 of this trust gives the settlor's children the right to withdraw any gift made to the trust within 30 days after the gift is made, or 30 days after the children are given notice of the gift, whichever is later. The right is subject to terms and conditions that make it qualify as a "Crummey" power [see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82 and discussion in § 72.13[4]].

"Crummey" powers typically are used to qualify lifetime gifts to an irrevocable trust for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]. Properly drafted "Crummey" powers may serve a useful purpose in any type of irrevocable trust. However, they are most often associated with irrevocable life insurance trusts in which the settlor makes annual cash gifts to the trust in an amount sufficient to cover premiums on the life insurance owned by the trust, and the trust instrument gives the beneficiaries the right to withdraw the gifts during a specified period. The power to withdraw the gifts is rarely exercised--generally, such an exercise would run counter to the wishes of the settlor--and after the power lapses the trustee can use the gifts to pay the premiums.

The "Crummey" power in this form is subject to a "5 or 5" limitation [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)] to avoid potential unfavorable estate gift tax consequences [for discussion, see § 72.13[4][e]]. If the insurance premiums will be too high to make this approach work, it may be necessary to use a different approach such as a limited testamentary power of appointment [see § 72.13[4][f]] or a "hanging" power [see § 72.13[4][g]] to achieve the desired result.

For a more detailed discussion of "Crummey" powers and their use in irrevocable inter vivos trusts, see § 72.13[4].

[i] QTIP Trust

Section 4.03 of this trust provides that if the settlor's spouse survives the settlor and any part of the trust estate is includible in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes, the includible portion will be held for the benefit of the spouse in a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust. Section 4.05 sets forth the administrative and distributive provisions of the QTIP trust.

A QTIP trust is designed to qualify for the unlimited marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) and detailed discussion in § 71.13[4]]. Because of other provisions of this trust, it is not expected that any of the trust property will be included in the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes. Sections 4.03 and 4.05 are included in the instrument merely as a precaution to insure that, if any part of the trust property should be deemed to be a part of the settlor's taxable estate, it will qualify for the marital deduction and not result in any increase in the estate tax burden on the settlor's estate.

PRACTICE TIP:

The qualification of the surviving spouse's interest in the trust for the estate tax marital deduction is often more important than it may at first appear. It is not at all uncommon for an irrevocable life insurance trust to be funded with a policy that has already been issued at the time the trust is established. Typically, before the policy was put into the trust, it had been owned by the settlor in his or her name alone (although one must consider the possible community property rights of the non-insured spouse). Once the settlor transfers the policy to the trust, I.R.C. § 2035(d)(2) still makes the policy proceeds includible in the insured/settlor's estate should he or she die within three years after the transfer. In such cases, qualifying the trust for the estate tax marital deduction (when the surviving spouse will have an income interest) is a crucial safeguard. While the untimely death of the insured and the need to rely on the marital deduction will mean eventual inclusion of the trust in the surviving spouse's estate, failure to take even this precaution will result in potential immediate estate tax liability on the insurance proceeds. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

[j] Bypass Trust

Section 4.03 of this trust provides that if the settlor's spouse survives the settlor and any part of the trust estate is not includible in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes, the portion that is not includible in the settlor's gross estate will be held for the benefit of the spouse in a bypass trust. Section 4.06 sets forth the administrative and distributive provisions of the bypass trust.

Inclusion of a bypass trust in this kind of instrument is optional. Many trusts simply use one set of provision for the spouse that can qualify for the QTIP election if necessary. If only one set of provisions will work regardless of whether the trust is included in the settlor's gross estate, then the "dual" trust approach need not be used. The same true with respect to the "sprinkling trust" created in Section 4.07; inclusion of such provisions is not required.

A bypass trust is designed to provide lifetime benefits to a surviving spouse but to escape taxation in (or "bypass") the surviving spouse's estate on his or her death. A properly drafted bypass trust can confer substantial economic benefit on the surviving spouse while limiting the surviving spouse's interests in and powers over the trust in such a way that the surviving spouse will not be deemed the owner of the trust for federal estate tax purposes. On the surviving spouse's death, the trust can be distributed or held for remainder beneficiaries, such as the settlor's children. For a general discussion of bypass trusts, see § 61.212[1][f].

[k] Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts

Section 4.10 of this trust governs the administration of any trust created by the trust instrument in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2664]. It should be noted that the GST tax has been repealed effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2664]. Until then, however, it remains in effect. Section 4.10 is designed to give the settlor's executor flexibility to eliminate or minimize any generation-skipping transfer tax that would otherwise be due after the settlor's death.

Before discussing the details of Section 4.10, it is important to note that this section--which can be a key provision in revocable inter vivos or testamentary trusts--reflects only "catch up" planning at best in the context of an irrevocable insurance trust. In that context, if there are GST concerns, they should be addressed by the settlors at the time contributions are made to the trust. For example, if a settlor contributes $30,000 to the trust, subject to Crummey rights, the trustee pays the premium, and then the settlor dies, the trustee collects the proceeds of the policy (say $1,000,000). If the settlor had timely allocated GST exemption to the contribution, it would have taken only $30,000 of the settlor's exemption to make the entire trust exempt [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c), 2632]. On the other hand, if the settlor relies on the trustee and executor to coordinate the allocation of the exemption after the settlor's death, it will take the $1 million of the settlor's GST exemption to make the entire trust exempt [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c), 2632]. Clearly, therefore, if GST problems are anticipated, the exemption should be allocated a bit each year. This situation also may present a good leveraging opportunity to apply the exemption a bit at a time and intentionally create a multi-generational, long-lasting trust to take full advantage of the exemption.

Nevertheless, a provision such as Section 4.10 should still be included to provide a safety valve and permit flexibility in postmortem planning. Under Section 4.10, if the executor elects to allocate any portion of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c)] to any property in any trust to which Section 4.10 applies, that section requires or permits the executor to split the trust in question into two trusts, one (called the Exempt Trust, with an "inclusion ratio" of zero) which is exempt from the tax and the other (the Non-Exempt Trust, with an "inclusion ratio" of one) which is not. The trustee is then given discretion to make payments and distributions to "non-skip" beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 2613(b) ("non-skip person" defined)], such as children, from the non-exempt trust, and payments and distributions to beneficiaries who are "skip persons" [see I.R.C. § 1613(a) ("skip person" defined)], such as grandchildren, from the exempt trust. This will ensure optimal utilization of the settlor's GST exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c)].

A trust may be divided for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes if division is required by the trust instrument [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(i)], or if either local law or the governing instrument gives the trustee discretion to divide it [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(ii)]. When a trust is divided pursuant to the trustee's discretionary authority, however, the terms of each of the new trusts must provide for the same succession of interests and beneficiaries as are provided in the original trust, and the division must occur (or a reformation proceeding, if required, must be commenced) before the date prescribed for filing the federal estate tax return (including any extensions granted) for the estate of the transferor [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(ii)]. The new trusts may be funded on either a fractional or a pecuniary basis, but funding on a fractional basis is required unless the trust instrument specifically requires funding on a pecuniary basis [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(ii)(C)(1)]. If a trust is funded on a fractional basis, the separate trusts need not be funded with a pro rata portion of each asset held by the original trust, but the funding must be based on the fair market value of the assets on the date of funding or done in a manner that fairly reflects the net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets from the valuation date to the date of funding [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(ii)(C)(1)]. If the trust instrument requires pecuniary funding, the trustee must pay interest on the pecuniary amount unless it is set aside within 15 months after the date of death [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(1)(ii)(C)(2); see Treas. Reg. §§ 26.2642-2(b)(4)(i), (ii), 26.2654-1(a)(1)(ii)]. Further, if the pecuniary amount is payable in kind on the basis of value other than the date of distribution value of the assets, the assets must be allocated in a manner that fairly reflects net appreciation or depreciation in the assets from the valuation date to the date of payment [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(a)(1)(ii)(B)].

Dividing trusts in this way will make it easier to compute generation-skipping transfer taxes on distributions made from the new trusts. Following division of the trust, the executor or trustee will have discretion to allocate the transferor's GST exemption to the separate trusts [Treas. Reg. § 26.2654-1(b)(3)]. Discretionary invasions of principal can be made to children first from the non-exempt trust. Because the children will be non-skip persons, no generation-skipping transfer tax will be due as a result of these distributions. Meanwhile, the exempt trust will continue to grow for the benefit of future generations.

Furthermore, different investment objectives can be pursued for each trust. For example, growth-oriented investments may be pursued by the exempt trust, while income-oriented investments can be held in the non-exempt trust.

If the settlor's estate is so large that generation-skipping transfer taxes are unavoidable, mandatory division may be preferable to discretionary division. If, however, a division would create very small exempt trusts, discretionary division may be preferable, particularly if the trusts are designed to terminate in favor of a non-skip person when he or she reaches a specified age. Because the chance of actually incurring a generation-skipping transfer tax in these circumstances will be rather slight, the executor or trustee may prefer to administer a trust with an inclusion ratio between zero and one rather than administering two trusts, one of which is too small to be administratively convenient.

A provision giving an executor discretion to divide a trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes will generally give the executor greater flexibility than a provision requiring division for that purpose. When the executor is given discretion, however, there is a risk that the executor may through inadvertence or neglect fail to make a division that would be advantageous to the estate.

The generation-skipping transfer tax is complex and technical, and strategies for minimizing its impact on an estate require careful planning. For an extended discussion of the tax, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender). For further discussion of the comparative advantages and disadvantages of mandatory and discretionary division of trusts for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, see California Wills Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies, § 113.11[3][b].

[2] FORM

Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust; One Settlor

[Name of trust, if desired; e.g., JOHN DOUGLAS WHITE 1997 TRUST]

DECLARATION OF TRUST

Article 1: Creation of Trust

1.01. Parties. [Identify trustee, e.g., Catherine Archer White] (the "trustee") hereby declares that _____ [he or she] has received certain property (the "trust estate") from [identify settlor, e.g., John Douglas White of Los Angeles, California] (the "settlor"), and holds that property in trust to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Names of Trusts. The trusts created by this instrument shall be known collectively as the [set forth name of settlor and year in which established, e.g., John Douglas White 1997 Trust], and each separate trust created under this instrument shall be referred to by adding the name or designation of that separate trust as it appears in the appropriate section of this instrument.

1.03. Marital Status. The settlor is married to [name of spouse, e.g., Catherine Archer White], and all references in this trust instrument to the settlor's "[husband or wife]" are to [him or her].

1.04. Identification of Living Child[ren]. The settlor has [number] living _____ [child or children], whose name[s] and date[s] of birth [is or are] as follows:

_____ [e.g., Thomas John White, who was born on January 3, 1993]
 _____ Richard Douglas White, who was born on June 16, 1995]
 _____ Elizabeth Catherine White, who was born on August 1, 1997].

1.05. No Deceased Children. The settlor has no deceased children.

Article 2: Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All property subject to this instrument from time to time is referred to as the "trust estate" and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the property described in Schedule A, any other property that may be hereafter subject to this trust, and the income and proceeds attributable to all such property, in accordance with the provisions of this instrument.

2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source [except the settlor's spouse]. All such additions shall become a part of the trust estate and shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument. That additional property shall become part of the trust estate upon written acceptance of it by the trustee. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added. However, the titling of any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument, shall be deemed to be a transfer to this trust. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlor

3.01. Irrevocability of Trust. This trust is irrevocable. It may not be amended, revoked, or terminated, in whole or in part, except as otherwise specified in this instrument.

3.02. Limitation on Powers of Settlor. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the settlor shall not have:

(a) Any right to the possession or enjoyment of the principal or income of the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, or any right, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, to designate the persons who will possess or enjoy the principal or income of the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, as those terms are used in Internal Revenue Code Section 2036.

(b) Any right to vote (directly or indirectly) any shares of stock of a controlled corporation, as that term is defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2036(b)(2), that may be part of the trust estate.

(c) Any power or discretion in any capacity whatever, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, to alter, amend, revoke, or terminate the enjoyment of the trust estate, as those terms are used in Internal Revenue Code Section 2038.

(d) Any power that is exercisable in favor of the settlor, the settlor's estate, the settlor's creditors, or creditors of the settlor's estate, or any other power that would constitute a general power of appointment, as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2041.

(e) Any incidents of ownership, as that term is defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2042, as amended, in any insurance policy that is part of the trust estate.

(f) Any power or discretion that would cause the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, to be included in the gross estate of the settlor under any provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended.

Article 4: Payments and Distributions

4.01. Right to Withdraw Gifts. So long as the settlor is living, the settlor's living children shall have the right to withdraw any gift made to the trust in accordance with the following provisions:

(a) The trustee shall promptly give written notice to each of the settlor's children of each gift made to the trust.

(b) Each of the settlor's children who are then living may withdraw a fraction of the gift equal to one divided by the number of the settlor's children who are then living, or any portion of that fraction; provided, however that the aggregate amounts that each of the settlor's children may withdraw during any calendar year from the gifts to the trust from any one donor shall not exceed the amount which may from time to time be specified for gift tax exclusion in Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b), as amended, for gifts from one donor to one donee (the "annual exclusion amount") per person; and provided further that the aggregate amount that each of the settlor's children may withdraw during any calendar year from the gifts to the trust from all donors shall not exceed the amount that may from time to time be specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2041(b)(2), as amended, as the maximum amount of property with respect to which the lapse of a general power of appointment will not be deemed a release of a general power of appointment (the "non-taxable amount").

(c) The power of any person to withdraw a gift as specified in this section must be exercised, if at all, by electing to do so in an instrument in writing delivered to the trustee within 30 days after the later of (1) the date on which the gift is made, or (2) the date on which the person is given notice of the gift.

(d) The right of any person to withdraw a gift as specified in this section is noncumulative. If any person does not withdraw the full amount of the gift or gifts that the person is entitled to withdraw within the time limit specified for exercise of the right, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse and may not be exercised after the time limit specified.

(e) If any person who has a right to withdraw a gift as specified in this section is a minor or is otherwise subject to any legal incapacity, the trustee shall give the written notice required to be given as specified in this section to the guardian or conservator of that person, and the guardian or conservator may make the withdrawal on behalf of that person. Any property delivered to a guardian or conservator shall be held by the guardian or conservator for the benefit and use of that person.

4.02. Payment of Income During Settlor's Lifetime. While the settlor is living, the trustee shall apply so much of the net income of the trust, if any, remaining after the withdrawals provided in Section 4.01 as may be necessary to pay the premiums on any and all policies of life insurance on the settlor's life which are part of the trust estate. If the net income of the trust is insufficient for that purpose, the trustee may apply so much of the principal of the trust remaining after whose withdrawals as may be necessary to pay those premiums. During the lifetime of the settlor's [wife or husband], the trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's [wife or husband] as much of the net income of the trust remaining after those withdrawals and those income payments as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the health, education, support, and maintenance of the settlor's [wife or husband]. If the settlor survives the settlor's [wife or husband], the trustee shall, after the death of the settlor's [wife or husband], pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [designate alternate beneficiary or beneficiaries, e.g., the settlor's then-living children] _____ [specify period during which payments will be made, e.g., during their lifetimes or until _____ (specify condition upon which payment of all income will cease, e.g., the youngest child reaches the age of 25 years)], as much of the net income of the trust, if any, remaining after those withdrawals and those income payments as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the [to specify an "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. All payments made pursuant to this provision shall be made in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually. The trustee shall accumulate and add o principal any income not distributed.

4.03. Disposition of Trust Estate If Settlor Is Survived by [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], and upon the death of the settlor any part of the trust estate is includible in the gross estate of the settlor for federal estate tax purposes, then upon the death of the settlor the trustee shall hold, administer and distribute the part that is includible in the gross estate of the settlor for federal estate tax purposes as a single trust for the benefit of the settlor's [wife or husband] in accordance with Section 4.08 of this instrument applicable to the QTIP Trust. If the settlor is survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], and upon the death of the settlor any part of the trust estate is not includible in the gross estate of the settlor for federal estate tax purposes, then upon the death of the settlor the trustee shall hold, administer and distribute the part that is not includible in the gross estate of the settlor for federal estate tax purposes as a single trust for the benefit of the settlor's [wife or husband] in accordance with Section 4.09 of this instrument applicable to the Bypass Trust.

4.04. Disposition of Trust Estate If Settlor Is Not Survived by [Wife or Husband]. If the settlor is not survived by _____ [his wife or her husband], then on the death of the settlor the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust as a single trust for the benefit of the children of the settlor and the issue of any deceased children of the settlor in accordance with Section 4.10 of this instrument applicable to the Sprinkling Trust. If the children of the settlor all predecease the settlor without leaving issue who survive the settlor, the trustee shall distributed any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to [alternative disposition, e.g., the heirs of the settlor or the Los Angeles County chapter of the American Heart Association].

4.05. QTIP Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the QTIP Trust as follows:

(a) If the executor has elected that the trust qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction under Internal Revenue Code § 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section), the trustee shall thereafter administer the trust in a manner that will not invalidate the election or disqualify the property in which the settlor's [husband or wife] has a qualifying income interest for life. Any provisions of this trust that could be deemed to invalidate the qualification under Internal Revenue Code § 2056(b)(7) shall be disregarded.

(b) If an election is made under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (or any equivalent successor section) to qualify some but not all of the property allocated to the QTIP Trust for the federal estate tax marital deduction, the QTIP Trust shall be divided into two separate trusts pursuant to the terms of the election. The division shall be based on the fair market value of the trust assets at the time of the division. One of the trusts shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has been made and shall be designated as the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The other trust shall contain the share of the trust assets for which the election has not been made and shall be designated the Nonqualifying QTIP Trust. The Nonqualifying QTIP Trust shall be subject to all of the rights, interests, powers, and other terms prescribed for the Qualifying QTIP Trust. If a partial election is made and the trust is divided into two separate trusts, the terms "trust," "marital deduction trust," and "QTIP Trust," as used in this section and elsewhere in this trust instrument, shall be construed in a manner consistent with the provisions of this subsection of the trust instrument.

[Optional: (c) The executor of the settlor's estate shall notify the trustee in writing if the executor intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7) (hereafter referred to as "the estate tax election") and also intends to make an election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) (or any equivalent successor section) to have the estate tax election disregarded for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes with respect to some but not all of the property in the QTIP Trust. Upon receipt of written notification, the trustee shall divide the QTIP Trust into two separate trusts, to be known as the Exempt QTIP Trust and the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust, in accordance with Section 4.13 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts. Property allocated to the Exempt QTIP Trust must be fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation of all QTIP Trust property. The executor shall then actually make the election under Internal Revenue Code Section 2652(a)(3) with respect to the Exempt QTIP Trust and not the Non-Exempt QTIP Trust. If a partial estate tax election is to be made, then this subsection, if applicable at all, shall apply only with respect to the Qualifying QTIP Trust. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with the provisions of this subsection. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as being inconsistent with Section 4.13 of this trust instrument concerning the administration of generation-skipping trusts, which shall apply to the QTIP trust without regard to the application of the remainder of this subsection.

(d) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's [husband or wife], so long as the settlor's [husband or wife] lives, the entire net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the settlor's [husband or wife] and the trustee, but not less often than annually. [Optional: In determining the net income of the trust distributable to the settlor's _____ (husband or wife), the trustee shall include all income that must be considered as income in order for the trust to qualify for the marital deduction under the federal estate tax law, and shall make no deductions from gross income that would prevent the trust from qualifying for that marital deduction, notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this instrument or any applicable provisions of state law. Assuming the trust has qualified under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7), then any grant of rights, powers, discretion, and authority to the trustee in any provision of this instrument or any statute relating thereto shall not be effective if and to the extent that the provision or statute, if effective, would disqualify, for federal estate tax purposes, the marital deduction trust held under this section. It is the intention of the settlors that the settlor's _____ (husband or wife), as the beneficiary of a marital deduction trust, shall have substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust during _____ (his or her) lifetime that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust, and the trustee shall not exercise the trustee's discretion in a manner that is not in accord with this expressed intention. It is also the intention of the settlor that the trust produce for the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) during _____ (his or her) lifetime the income, or that the settlor's _____ (husband or wife) shall have the benefit of the trust property, that is consistent with the value of the trust property and with its preservation.]

(e) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's spouse, during _____ [his or her] lifetime, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary [, when added to the income payments from this trust,] for _____ [his or her or his or her] [to specify "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness]. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(f) On the death of the settlor's [husband or wife], the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, may pay the [taxes,] debts[, and expenses arising on _____ [his or her] death, unless the trustee determines that other adequate provisions have been made for payment of these expenses. Any payments made under this section [may be made out of income or principal (or partly from each) of the QTIP Trust or shall be made first out of the income or principal of the QTIP Trust, and then out of the income or principal of the Bypass Trust to the extent that the QTIP Trust is insufficient for that purpose].

(g) Upon the death of the settlor's [husband or wife], the net income of the trust then accrued but uncollected and all net income remaining in the hands of the trustee shall be distributed to the estate of the settlor's [husband or wife]. The trust principal shall be dealt with as set forth below in this section.

(h) The trustee shall determine from the personal representative of the estate of the settlor's [husband or wife] the amount of the federal estate tax allocable to the property of the trust by reason of Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A and shall set aside a portion of the trust principal for the purpose of paying that tax upon written demand of the personal representative.

(i) On the death of the settlor's [husband or wife], the trustee shall distribute the balance of the principal of the QTIP Trust (or all of the QTIP Trust principal, if the personal representative of the estate of the settlor's [husband or wife] does not in due course make written demand), _____ [if generation-skipping transfer taxes are not a concern: to the Bypass Trust, to be held, administered, and distributed as part of the Bypass Trust or to account for generation-skipping transfer tax consequences: in the manner specified in Section 4.09 applicable to the Bypass Trust. However, the property disposed of pursuant to this subsection shall not be considered to be a part of the Bypass Trust unless this trust and the Bypass Trust have the same inclusion ratios for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes].

4.06. Bypass Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Bypass Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's [husband or wife] all of the net income of the trust, in monthly or other convenient installments as agreed upon by the settlor's [husband or wife], but not less often than annually, for life.

(b) The trustee shall distribute to or apply for the benefit of the settlor's [husband or wife] for life, as much of the principal of the trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary [, when added to the income payments from this trust,] for _____[his or her] health, education, support, and maintenance. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(c) On the death of the settlor's [husband or wife], the trustee shall distribute the trust property then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person or persons appointed by the settlor's [husband or wife] from among _____[identify class of permissible appointees in a manner that will assure creation of a limited rather than a general power of appointment, e.g., the issue of the settlor then living or his issue then living or her issue then living]. The appointment shall be in the amounts or proportions, and on such terms and conditions, outright or in trust, or by creating further powers of appointment, as the settlor's [husband or wife] shall appoint by _____[his or her] valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. If any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by the settlor's [husband or wife], that property shall be retained or distributed by the trustee as follows:

(1) If any of the settlor's children are then living and under the age of [e.g., 25 years], the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the trust in accordance with the provisions of Section 4.10 of this instrument relating to the Sprinkling Trust; and

(2) If no children of the settlor are then living, the trustee shall distribute the trust in accordance with the provisions of Section 4.08 of this instrument.

4.07. Sprinkling Trust. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the Sprinkling Trust as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlor who are under the age of [e.g., 25 years], their names and identities to be determined as of the date of the settlor's death or the death of the settlor's spouse, whichever occurs last, until the youngest child reaches the age of [e.g., 25 years], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the [to specify "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments and distributions, the trustee may pay, distribute, or apply more to or for some beneficiaries than others, and may make payments or distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [No amount paid out or applied need thereafter be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust.] All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When the settlor's youngest child reaches the age of [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute among the children of the settlor then living, in equal shares, an amount from the trust principal equal to [fraction or percentage, e.g., one half or fifty percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made.

(c) If any of the children of the settlor are deceased at the time of distribution and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child had _____ [he or she or he or she] survived shall be divided among _____ [his or her or his or her] issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. [Optional: Any sum that would otherwise be distributed to a person who is a minor shall be retained in trust until _____ (specify event triggering distribution of balance of trust estate, e.g., the youngest child of the settlor(s) reaches the age of 30 years) and shall be distributed outright to the beneficiary at that time.]

(d) When the youngest child of the settlor reaches the age of [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the children of the settlor then living, in equal shares, the balance of the trust property. If any of the children of the settlor are deceased at the time of distribution and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child had _____ [he or she or he or she] survived shall be divided among [his or her or his or her] issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

(e) If all the children of the settlor die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this section, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to [alternative disposition, e.g., the Los Angeles County chapter of the American Heart Association or the heirs of the settlor].

4.08. Distribution of Remainder. If, at any time before full distribution of the trust estate, _____ [designate beneficiaries of trust, e.g., the settlor's wife and children or the settlor's children or the settlor's children or the settlor's issue or the beneficiaries designated in this instrument] are all deceased and no other disposition of the trust estate is directed by this instrument, all of the remaining portion of the trust estate shall then be distributed to _____ [specify pattern of distribution or distributee, e.g., the San Francisco Charitable Works Institute or the person or persons who are the settlor's heirs at law, in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247)].

4.09. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of any trust under this instrument and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act.

4.10. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this section apply to any trust under this instrument that is created upon the settlor's death and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by the settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this section applies, the trustee [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this section, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlor's intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subsection.

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this section, the trustee shall [for pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided]. [If preceding sentence provides for pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of the settlor's death, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this section, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects the net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the settlor's death to the date of payment).]

(c) Regardless of whether or not subsection (a) applies, if the amount of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor to a trust to which this section applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this section applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust terms to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(a) or any equivalent successor section) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust terms to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(b) or any equivalent successor section) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

[Optional: (e) If the trustee determines that the burdens of generation-skipping transfer taxes, income taxes, and death taxes on a Non-Exempt Trust, the settlor's estate, or the beneficiaries of that trust would be reduced, the trustee may petition the court to amend the trust to grant to one or more trust beneficiaries who are non-skip persons in a generation below the settlor a general testamentary power of appointment over all or a specified portion of that Non-Exempt Trust. Any power to amend the trust is within the discretion of the court, and the preceding sentence shall not be construed to give the trustee any power that the trustee does not already have under California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances, nor shall it be construed to limit the power of the trustee or any beneficiary under the California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances.]

(f) The purpose of this section is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and non-tax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlor's intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subsection are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(g) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument, any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this section.

(h) If, upon the death of the settlor's surviving spouse, (1) the settlor's surviving spouse is considered to be the transferor of any Non-Exempt Trust established by this instrument for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, and (2) the surviving spouse's executor allocates any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to the settlor's surviving spouse under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) (or any equivalent successor section) to that Non-Exempt Trust so that the entire trust then has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, that trust shall then be considered to be an Exempt Trust for purposes of this section of the trust instrument.

(i) In no event may the trustee exercise any power under this section in a manner that will impair the marital deduction.

Article 5: Trustee

5.01. Successor Trustee. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or co-trustees have been designated under any other provisions of this trust instrument, then [name(s) and description(s), e.g., Robert James White, who resides at 14000 Exposition Road, North Hollywood, California, or Double Eagle National Bank of Los Angeles, California, or Robert James White, who resides at 14000 Exposition Boulevard, North Hollywood, California, and Double Eagle National Bank of Los Angeles, California,] shall be successor [trustee or co-trustees]. If _____ [name(s) of successor trustee or co-trustees] [is or are all] unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or co-trustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g., Any individual trustee or co-trustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlor, unless no issue of the settlor is able and willing to serve.]

[Optional: 5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as co-trustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as co-trustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new co-trustee may be appointed by the court. If no new co-trustee is appointed, the remaining co-trustee or co-trustees shall have full power to act as trustee or co-trustees and to continue the trust administration.]

5.03. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

5.04. Bond. _____ [No bond or undertaking shall be required of any (optional: corporate) trustee named in or Bond shall be required of any trustee serving under] this instrument.

5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlor believes that a fee of $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

5.06. Custody of Life Insurance Policy. The trustee shall keep custody of any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that designates the trust as beneficiary.

5.07. Life Insurance Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to the other powers conferred on the trustee by law and by this instrument, have the power to do all of the following:

- (a) Purchase life insurance on the life of any person.
- (b) Exercise all incidents of ownership, options, benefits, rights, and privileges with respect to any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate.
- (c) Pay premiums, assessments, or other charges on any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that may designate the trust as beneficiary.
- (d) Borrow funds from the insurer in accordance with the terms of any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that may designate the trust as beneficiary, for the purpose of paying any premiums, assessments, or other charges.
- (e) Otherwise do anything necessary or proper to keep any such policy a binding contract of insurance.
- (f) Collect any and all sums payable under any life insurance policy or employee benefit plan, and exercise any of the allowable options for the payment of any such sums. The trustee shall collect any disability payments under any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the settlor specifically intends that the trustee retain and continue to hold any life insurance policy transferred to or secured by the trust at any time, without any obligation to diversify any such investment. The trustee shall not be liable to any beneficiary of this trust, the settlor, or any person or entity for the retention of any such life insurance policy, and no beneficiary shall have any right to recoupment or restoration of any loss suffered as the result of any such retention. As a specific limitation of the trustee's liability, the trustee is relieved of any obligation to evaluate the insurance investments annually or otherwise, or to evaluate the degree to which insurance and/or premiums are guaranteed, as well as the effect of company operations on product performance. The trustee has no responsibility to advise the settlor or beneficiaries of any perceived increased investment risk in the maintenance of any such life insurance policies. The trustee is relieved of any obligation to minimize exposure of the beneficiaries in the event of a perceived increase in investment risk attributable to the retention of any such insurance policies. The trustee shall not be liable for failure to maintain any insurance policy in force if the trust assets are insufficient to pay for premiums or assessments currently due on or in connection with that policy.

5.08. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

- (a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.
- (b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:
  - (1) General economic conditions.
  - (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.

- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

- (c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.
- (d) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.
- (e) In the trustee's discretion, lend money from the trust estate to the probate estate of the settlor, irrespective of whether the trustee and the executor may be the same person, provided that any such loan is adequately secured and bears a reasonable rate of interest.
- (f) In the trustee's discretion, use funds or credit of the trust estate to purchase property from the probate estate of the settlor at its fair market value as determined by the trustee in the trustee's discretion.
- (g) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estate of the settlor that are in the best interest of any trust created in this instrument.
- (h) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (i) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (j) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.

(k) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(l) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(m) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(n) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(o) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(p) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(q) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(r) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(s) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(t) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(u) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(v) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

5.09. Power to Combine Trust Assets. Each trust created under this trust instrument shall constitute a separate trust and be administered and accounted for accordingly; however, the assets of all of the trusts may be combined and held for the trust beneficiaries without physical division into separate trusts until time of distribution.

5.10. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below [specify amount, e.g., $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

5.11. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

5.12. Payments to Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

5.13. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

5.14. Trust Distributions Shall Not Discharge Obligations of Support. Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, no income or principal of the trust shall be used to discharge, in whole or in part, the legal obligation of any person to support or educate any beneficiary of this trust. In determining the legal obligation of any person to support and educate a beneficiary of this trust, the existence of this trust and the funds made available under it shall not be taken into account.

5.15. Limitation on Powers That Would Imperil Marital Deduction. Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, the trustee shall exercise power and discretion over any trust or trust share designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction only in a manner consistent with all statutory and regulatory requirements for the full allowance of the marital deduction for that trust or share.

5.16. Surviving Spouse's Power Over Bypass Trust Not to Constitute General Power of Appointment.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, at any time that the settlor's surviving spouse is serving as trustee of the Bypass Trust, any power or discretion exercisable by the settlor's surviving spouse with respect to that trust, whether granted by this trust instrument or conferred by law, insofar as that power or discretion may be exercisable to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of the settlor's surviving spouse, _____ [his or her] estate, _____ [his or her] creditors, or the creditors of _____ [his or her] estate, shall be exercisable only for _____ [his or her] health, education, support, and maintenance.

5.17. Limitations on Trustee's Powers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the powers of the trustee shall be subject to the following limitations:

(a) The trustee shall have no power or discretion with respect to any life insurance policy on the life of the trustee that constitutes an incident of ownership (as that term is used in Internal Revenue Code Section 2042, as amended) in that policy.

(b) The trustee shall have no power or discretion with respect to the distribution of income or principal to or for the trustee's benefit, or in satisfaction of the trustee's legal obligations.

(c) If the trustee would, but for this provision, have had any power or discretion described in (a) or (b), above, that power or discretion shall be exercised by the co-trustee, if any, and if there is no co-trustee, by the next-named successor trustee acting as special co-trustee. If the next-named successor trustee shall for any reason fail to qualify or cease to act as special co-trustee, the next-named successor trustee shall act as successor special co-trustee. If all named successor trustees shall for any reason fail to qualify or cease to act as special co-trustee, the trustee shall appoint a successor special co-trustee, other than the trustee so appointing. The responsibilities of the special co-trustee shall be limited to the exercise of powers and discretions under this section.

5.18. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by [if trust nominates co-trustees: the other trustee or trustees or, if trust nominates a successor trustee: the successor trustee].

5.19. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

6.01. Perpetuities Saving Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, every trust created by this instrument[, or by the exercise of any power of appointment created by this instrument,] shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of [designate measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlor's issue or the settlor's spouse and issue] who are alive at the creation of the trust. For purposes of this perpetuities saving clause, a trust shall be deemed to have been created on the date the trust becomes irrevocable or the date of the death of the settlor, whichever occurs first. If a trust is terminated under this section, the trustee shall distribute all of the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the proportion in which they are entitled (or eligible, in the case of discretionary payments) to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of the trust, the trustee shall distribute all of the trust property to the persons then entitled or eligible to receive income from the trust _____ [specify pattern of distribution, e.g., outright in a manner that, in the trustee's opinion, will give effect to the intent of the settlor in creating the trust, the trustee's decision to be final and incontestable by anyone or as a class, in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

6.02. Definitions of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the terms "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined or derived.

6.03. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the term "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

6.04. Definition of Incapacity. For purposes of this instrument, a person shall be deemed "incapacitated" if and for so long as a court of competent jurisdiction has made a finding to that effect, or a guardian or conservator of that person's estate or person duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction is serving, or upon certification by two physicians (licensed to practice under the laws of the state where the person is domiciled at the time of the certification) that the person is unable properly to care for himself or herself or for his or her property. The latter certification shall be made by each physician in a written declaration under penalty of perjury.

6.05. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

- (a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;
- (b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;
- (c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and
- (d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

6.06. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

6.07. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

6.08. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

6.09. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

6.10. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of the settlor that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor.

Article 7: Signature and Execution

7.01. Execution. The trustee hereby approves this instrument and accepts the trusts provided for in it, certifying that it correctly states the terms and conditions under which the trust estate is to be held, administered, and distributed.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Insurance Trusts

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.201

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 72.201 Irrevocable Life Insurance Trust; Married Settlers; "Second-to-Die" Life Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an irrevocable inter vivos life insurance trust designed for use by married settlers in connection with a "second-to-die" life insurance policy. It is assumed that the settlers have young children and that neither settlor will serve as trustee.

PRACTICE TIP:

Trusts of this type can also be prepared to hold individual policies on either or both of the settlers, perhaps in addition to "second-to-die" policies. The key element of this trust is that neither spouse can have any incidents of ownership in any policy in the trust, and thus neither can receive any benefits under the trust. When the combined values of several different policies, both individual and "second-to-die," are relatively low, use of a single trust might make sense. On the other hand, if the face amounts of both the individual and "second-to-die" policies are substantial enough, it probably makes sense to use two trusts (or three, if there are significant amounts of individual insurance on each spouse's life) in order to afford the surviving spouse the opportunity to receive lifetime benefits from the trust. If two trusts holding individual policies are to be established, care must be taken to avoid the reciprocal trust doctrine [ see United States v. Grace Estate, 395 U.S. 316 (1969), 395 U.S. 316, 89 S. Ct. 1730, 69-1 USTC P 12,609, 23 AFTR2d 69-1954 ; Exchange Bank & Trust Co. v. United States, Ct. Cl. Dec. 21,1981, 82-1 USTC P 13,444. ; but see Tobin v. Commissioner, 183 F.2d 919 (5th Cir. 1950), 50-2 USTC P 9397, 30 AFTR 822 ]. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

It is assumed that the principal asset of this trust will consist of a life insurance policy that provides for death benefits to be paid on the death of the second settlor to die. Until that time, the trustee will hold the policy and pay the premiums. The settlers' children are the income beneficiaries of the trust. Before the death of the second settlor, the settlers will make annual gifts to the trust to cover the life insurance premiums. The children will have "Crummey" powers to withdraw the gifts during a specified period [ see Section 4.01]. If they do not withdraw the gifts, however, they will be used to cover the premiums. At the death of the second settlor, the trustee will receive the life insurance death benefits. If any of the settlors' children are under a specified age (e.g., 25 years), the trustee will hold the proceeds in a sprinkling trust, with discretion to pay income and principal to the children [ see Section 4.03]. When the youngest child reaches the specified age, the trust property will be distributed to the children, either in a lump sum or in installments [ see Section 4.03].

[b] Declaration of Trust Format

Two basic formats for trust instruments, called trust agreements and declarations of trust, are used by California attorneys to create inter vivos trusts. This trust uses the trust declaration format [ see Section 1.01].

[c] Grantor Trust Rules

This trust has been designed as a "grantor" trust [ see § 72.200[1][c]]. Before the adoption of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, it was standard procedure to design a life insurance trust as a "grantor" trust, so the settlor could take any deductions for interest paid on loans against the policy. Although the personal interest deduction is no longer available, many life insurance trusts are still designed to qualify as "grantor" trusts so that the settlor will be able to deduct interest should the interest deduction ever be restored. Under the current law, there is neither an advantage nor a disadvantage in establishing a trust as a "grantor" trust. If the decision is made not to establish the trust as a "grantor" trust, some provisions of this trust must be modified. For general discussion of trusts that are designed to qualify as "grantor" trusts, specific provisions that will ensure that a trust qualifies in this way, and modifications that may be used to avoid such a qualification, see § 72.200[1][c]-[f].

[d] Limitation on Settlor's Powers for Estate Tax Purposes

Section 3.02 of this trust provides that notwithstanding any other provision of the trust instrument, the settlors will not have certain rights, powers, discretions, or "incidents of ownership" [ see § 72.12[2][3]] in the trust or the trust property. The rights, powers, and interests described in the section would, if retained by the settlors, cause the trust property to be included in the settlors' estates for federal estate tax purposes under I.R.C. §§ 2036, 2038, 2041, or 2042. This type of provision should be included in every trust instrument when the trust is designed to remove the trust property from the settlors' gross estates for federal estate tax purposes.

[e] "Crummey" Powers

Section 4.01 of this trust gives the settlors' children the right to withdraw any gift made to the trust within 30 days after the gift is made, or 30 days after the children are given notice of the gift, whichever is later. The right is subject to terms and conditions that make it qualify as a "Crummey" power [ see Crummey v. C.I.R. (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1968) 397 F.2d 82 and discussion in § 72.13[4]].

"Crummey" powers typically are used to qualify lifetime gifts to an irrevocable trust for the annual gift tax exclusion [ see I.R.C. § 2503(b); for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see § 72.13[2][a]; see also Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4]]. Properly drafted "Crummey" powers may serve a useful purpose in any type of irrevocable trust. However, they are most useful in irrevocable life insurance trusts under which the settlors make annual cash gifts to the trust in an amount sufficient to cover premiums on the life insurance owned by the trust, and the trust instrument gives the beneficiaries the power to withdraw the gifts during a specified period. The power to withdraw the gifts will rarely be exercised because such an exercise would be contrary to the settlors' intent and would frustrate the purpose of the trust. After the power lapses, the trustee can use the gifts to pay the premiums.

For a more detailed discussion of "Crummey" powers and their use in irrevocable inter vivos trusts, see § 72.13[4].

[f] Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts

Section 4.06 of this trust governs the administration of any trust created by the trust instrument in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2664]. Note that the GST tax has been repealed effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2664]. Until then, however, it remains in effect. As discussed in § 72.200[1][k], it is important to realize that Section 4.06, while potentially useful in providing post-mortem planning flexibility, reflects only "catchup" planning in the context of an irrevocable insurance trust. If there are GST concerns, they should be addressed by the settlors at the time contributions are made to the trust.

Section 4.06 is designed to give the settlors' executors flexibility to eliminate or minimize any generation-skipping transfer tax that otherwise would be due after the death of either settlor. If either executor elects to allocate any portion of either settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c)] to any trust property in any trust to which Section 4.06 applies, the section requires or permits the executor to split the trust in question into two trusts, one (called the Exempt Trust, and with an "inclusion ratio" of zero) which is exempt from the tax and the other (the Non-Exempt Trust, with an "inclusion ratio" between zero and one) which is not. The trustee is then given discretion to make payments and distributions to "non-skip" beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 2613(b) ("non-skip person" defined)], such as children, from the non-exempt trust, and payments and distributions to beneficiaries who are "skip persons" [see I.R.C. § 2613(a) ("skip person" defined)], such as grandchildren, from the exempt trust. This will ensure maximum utilization of the settlor's GST exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c)].

For general discussion of this provision and its use in an irrevocable inter vivos trust, see § 72.200[1][k]. For an extended discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

1.05. No Deceased Children. Neither settlor has any deceased children.

Article 2: Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All property subject to this instrument from time to time is referred to as the "trust estate" and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the property described in Schedule A, any other property that may be hereafter subject to this trust, and the income and proceeds attributable to all such property, in accordance with the provisions of this instrument.

2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. All such additions shall become a part of the trust estate and shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument. That additional property shall become part of the trust estate upon written acceptance of it by the trustee. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added. However, the titling of any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument, shall be deemed to be a transfer to this trust. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlers

3.01. Irrevocability of Trust. This trust is irrevocable. It may not be amended, revoked, or terminated, in whole or in part, except as otherwise specified in this instrument.

3.02. Limitation on Powers of Settlers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, neither settlor shall have:

(a) Any right to the possession or enjoyment of the principal or income of the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, or any right, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, to designate the persons who will possess or enjoy the principal or income of the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, as those terms are used in Internal Revenue Code Section 2036.

(b) Any right to vote (directly or indirectly) any shares of stock of a controlled corporation, as that term is defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2036(b)(2), that may be part of the trust estate.

(c) Any power or discretion in any capacity whatever, either alone or in conjunction with any other person, to alter, amend, revoke, or terminate the enjoyment of the trust estate, as those terms are used in Internal Revenue Code Section

(d) Any power that is exercisable in favor of the settlors, or either of them, the settlors' estates, the settlors' creditors, or creditors of the settlors' estates, or any other power that would constitute a general power of appointment, as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2041.

(e) Any incidents of ownership, as that term is defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2042, as amended, in any insurance policy that is part of the trust estate.

(f) Any power or discretion that would cause the trust estate, or any part of the trust estate, to be included in the gross estates of the settlors, or either of them, under any provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended.

Article 4: Payments and Distributions

4.01. Right to Withdraw Gifts. So long as either settlor is living, _____ [identify beneficiary or beneficiaries who will have withdrawal rights, e.g., the living children of the settlors (, or either of them),] shall have the right to withdraw any gift made to the trust in accordance with the following provisions:

(a) The trustee shall promptly give written notice to _____ [identify beneficiary or beneficiaries who will have withdrawal rights, e.g., the settlors' then-living children] of each gift made to the trust.

(b) Each of the settlors' children who are then living may withdraw a fraction of the gift equal to one divided by the number of the settlors' who are then living, or any portion of that fraction; provided, however, that the aggregate amounts that each of the settlor's children may withdraw during any calendar year from the gifts to the trust from any one donor shall not exceed the amount which may from time to time be specified for gift tax exclusion in Internal Revenue Code Section 2503(b), as amended, for gifts from one donor to one donee (the "annual exclusion amount") per person; and provided further that the aggregate amount that each of the settlor's children may withdraw during any calendar year from the gifts to the trust from all donors shall not exceed the amount that may from time to time be specified in Internal Revenue Code Section 2041(b)(2), as amended, as the maximum amount of property with respect to which the lapse of a general power of appointment will not be deemed a release of a general power of appointment (the "non-taxable amount").

(c) The power of any person to withdraw a gift as specified in this section must be exercised, if at all, by electing to do so in an instrument in writing delivered to the trustee within 30 days after the later of (1) the date on which the gift is made, or (2) the date on which the person is given notice of the gift.

(d) The right of any person to withdraw a gift as specified in this section is noncumulative. If any person does not withdraw the full amount of the gift or gifts that the person is entitled to withdraw within the time limit specified for exercise of the right, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse and may not be exercised after the time limit specified.

(e) If any person who has a right to withdraw a gift as specified in this section is a minor or is otherwise subject to any legal incapacity, the trustee shall give the written notice required to be given as specified in this section to the guardian or conservator of that person, and the guardian or conservator may make the withdrawal on behalf of that person. Any property delivered to a guardian or conservator shall be held by the guardian or conservator for the benefit and use of that person.

4.02. Payment of Income During Lifetimes of Settlers. So long as both settlors are living and, after the death of the deceased settlor, during the lifetime of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall apply so much of the income of the trust, if any, remaining after the withdrawal provided in Section 4.01 as may be necessary to pay the premiums on any and all policies of life insurance on the lives of the settlors which are part of the trust estate. If the remaining net income of the trust is insufficient for those payments, the trustee may apply so much of the principal of the trust remaining after those withdrawals as may be necessary to pay those premiums. The trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [designate income beneficiary or beneficiaries, e.g., the settlors' then-living children] _____ [specify period during which payments may be made, e.g., during their lifetimes or until _____ (specify condition on which payment of all income will cease, e.g., the youngest child reaches the age of 25 years)], as much of the net income of the trust, if any, remaining after those withdrawals and those income payments as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the [to specify "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments, the trustee may pay to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. All payments made pursuant to this provision shall be made in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

4.03. Disposition of Trust Estate on Death of Surviving Settlor. Upon the death of the surviving settlor, the trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the assets of the trust estate as follows:

(a) The trustee shall pay or distribute to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of the children of the settlors who are under the age of [e.g., 25 years], their names and identities to be determined as of the date of the death of surviving settlor, until the youngest child reaches the age of [e.g., 25 years], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, as much of the net income of the trust, and as much of the principal of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the [to specify "ascertainable standard": health, education, support, and maintenance or specify some other standard, e.g., comfort, welfare, and happiness] of each of them. In making these payments and distributions, the trustee may pay, distribute, or apply more to or for some beneficiaries than others, and may make payments or distributions to or for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [No amount paid out or applied need thereafter be repaid to the trustee or restored to the trust.] All decisions of the trustee regarding payments under this subsection, if any, are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone. The trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When the settlors' youngest child reaches the age of [e.g., 25] years, the trustee shall distribute among the children of the settlors then living, in equal shares, an amount from the trust principal equal to [fraction or percentage; e.g., one half or 50 percent] of the fair market value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the first day of the calendar month preceding the month in which the distribution is made.

(c) If any of the children of the settlors are deceased at the time of distribution and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child had _____ [he or she or he or she] survived shall be divided among _____ [his or her or his or her] issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. [Optional: Any sum that would otherwise be distributed to a person who is a minor shall be retained in trust until _____ (specify event triggering distribution of balance of trust estate, e.g., the youngest child of the settlors reaches the age of 30 years) and shall be distributed outright to the beneficiary at that time.]

(d) When the youngest child of the settlors reaches the age of [e.g., 30] years, the trustee shall distribute to the children of the settlors then living, in equal shares, the balance of the trust property. If any of the children of the settlors are deceased at the time of distribution and leave issue surviving, the share that would have been taken by that child had _____ [he or she or he or she] survived shall be divided among _____ [his or her or his or her] issue _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

(e) If all the children of the settlors die without surviving issue before the trust property has been distributed as provided in this section, the trustee shall distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to [alternative disposition, e.g., the Santa Clara County chapter of the American Red Cross or the heirs of the surviving settlor].

4.04. Distribution of Remainder If No Other Disposition Is Directed in Trust Instrument. If, at any time before full distribution of the trust estate, all of the children of the settlors are deceased and no other disposition of the trust estate is directed by this instrument, all of the remaining portion of the trust estate shall then be distributed to _____ [specify pattern of distribution or distributee, e.g., the settlor's issue _____] (in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ [240 or 246 or 247] or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation)].

4.05. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of any trust under this instrument and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act.

4.06. Administration of Generation-Skipping Trusts. The provisions of this section apply to any trust under this instrument that is created upon the death of either settlor and in which there is property that is or may become subject to the federal generation-skipping transfer tax:

(a) Upon written notification by either settlor's executor that the executor intends to allocate any part of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that is available to that settlor under Internal Revenue Code Section 2631(a) to some but not all of the property in any trust to which this section applies, the trustee [shall or may, in the trustee's discretion,] divide that trust into two separate trusts, to be designated as the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust. [If trustee has discretionary power to divide trusts: If the trustee elects to divide a trust in the manner provided in this section, the or, if division of trusts is mandatory rather than discretionary: The] Exempt Trust shall contain the share of the property of that trust equal in value to the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption that the executor intends to allocate to the trust. The Non-Exempt Trust shall contain the balance of the property of that trust. It is the settlors' intention that the executor then actually allocate the generation-skipping transfer tax exemption to the Exempt Trust and not to the Non-Exempt Trust so that the Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and the Non-Exempt Trust shall have an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes. The trustee shall not be liable for relying on the written instructions of the executor when acting in accordance with this subsection.

(b) In allocating assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust for purposes of this section, the trustee shall [for pecuniary allocation: allocate the trust assets between the Exempt Trust and Non-Exempt Trust in cash or in kind, or partly in each, on a pro rata or non pro rata basis, and in undivided interests or not or, for fractional allocation: allocate to each trust a fractional share of each and every substantial interest or right held by the trust being divided]. [If preceding sentence provides for pecuniary allocation, add: If the allocation is not made within 15 months from the date of death of the settlor whose exemption is being allocated, the trustee shall pay interest, at the legal rate, from the date of the settlor's death to the date of distribution. For purposes of allocation under this section, assets shall be valued at their values _____ (to use date of distribution values: on the date or dates of distribution or, to use valuation for estate tax purposes: as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes; provided that any assets allocated in kind shall be allocated between the Exempt Trust and the Non-Exempt Trust in a manner that fairly reflects the net appreciation or depreciation in the value of the assets in the trust being divided, measured from the date of the settlor's death to the date of payment).]

(c) Regardless of whether or not subsection (a) applies, if the amount of either settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption actually allocated by the executor to a trust to which this section applies is equal to the value of the property of that trust so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of zero for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, the entire trust shall be referred to as the Exempt Trust. On the other hand, if no part of the settlor's generation-skipping transfer tax exemption is actually allocated to the trust by the executor so that the entire trust has an inclusion ratio of one for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes (or if the settlor is not the transferor of that trust for generation-skipping transfer tax purposes), the entire trust shall be referred to as the Non-Exempt Trust.

(d) The trustee may, but is not required to, administer the trusts under this instrument to which this section applies in such a manner that distributions made during the trust terms to "skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(a) or any equivalent successor section) are made from Exempt Trusts, and distributions made during the trust terms to "non-skip persons" (as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 2613(b) or any equivalent successor section) are made from Non-Exempt trusts.

[Optional: (e) If the trustee determines that the burdens of generation-skipping transfer taxes, income taxes, and death taxes on a Non-Exempt Trust, either settlor's estate, or the beneficiaries of that trust would be reduced, the trustee may petition the court to amend the trust to grant to one or more trust beneficiaries who are non-skip persons in a generation below the settlor a general testamentary power of appointment over all or a specified portion of that Non-Exempt Trust. Any power to amend the trust is within the discretion of the court, and the preceding sentence shall not be construed to give the trustee any power that the trustee does not already have under California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances, nor shall it be construed to limit the power of the trustee or any beneficiary under the California trust law to petition the court under the appropriate circumstances.]

(f) The purpose of this section is to allow the trustee to administer the trusts so as to decrease the amount of generation-skipping transfer taxes owed on generation-skipping transfers from the trusts. The trustee shall balance that consideration against any other tax and non-tax considerations, and may disregard the generation-skipping transfer tax consequences to the extent that the trustee determines that doing so will allow the trustee to carry out the settlors' intentions in creating the trusts. All decisions of the trustee under this subsection are within the trustee's discretion and shall be final and incontestable by anyone.

(g) If, in the trustee's judgment, at any time after the execution of this trust instrument, any statute, regulation, court decision, or administrative ruling imposes different or additional requirements on the trust in connection with the generation-skipping transfer tax the trustee may petition the court to amend the terms of the trust to meet those requirements and achieve the purpose of this section.

Article 5: Trustee

5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or co-trustees have been designated under any other provisions of this trust instrument, then _____ [for a sole individual successor, name and description, e.g., Melissa B. Brown, who resides at _____ (address) or, for co-trustees, names and descriptions, e.g., Melissa B. Brown, who resides at _____ (address), and Richard R. Black, who resides at _____ (address), or any one or more of them or, for corporate trustee, name and description, e.g., Second State Bank, Los Angeles, California] shall be the successor [trustee or co-trustees]. If _____ [name(s) of successor trustee or co-trustees] [is or are all] unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or co-trustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g.: Any individual trustee or co-trustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlors, unless no issue of the settlors is able and willing to serve.]

5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as co-trustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as co-trustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new co-trustee may be appointed by the court. If no new co-trustee is appointed, the remaining co-trustee or co-trustees shall have full power to act as trustee or co-trustees and to continue the trust administration.

5.03. Definition of Trustee. Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

5.04. Bond. _____ [No bond or undertaking shall be required of any (optional: corporate) trustee named in or Bond shall be required of any trustee serving under] this instrument.

5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlors believe that a fee of $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

5.06. Custody of Life Insurance Policy. The trustee shall keep custody of any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that designates the trust as beneficiary.

5.07. Life Insurance Powers. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall have, in addition to the other powers conferred on the trustee by law and by this instrument, the power to do all of the following:

- (a) Purchase life insurance on the life of any person.
- (b) Exercise all incidents of ownership, options, benefits, rights, and privileges with respect to any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate.
- (c) Pay premiums, assessments, or other charges on any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that may designate the trust as beneficiary.
- (d) Borrow funds from the insurer in accordance with the terms of any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate or that may designate the trust as beneficiary, for the purpose of paying any premiums, assessments, or other charges.
- (e) Otherwise do anything necessary or proper to keep any such policy a binding contract of insurance.
- (f) Collect any and all sums payable under any life insurance policy or employee benefit plan, and exercise any of the allowable options for the payment of any such sums. The trustee shall collect any disability payments under any life insurance policy that is part of the trust estate. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the settlors specifically intend that the trustee retain and continue to hold any life insurance policy transferred to or secured by the trust at any time, without any obligation to diversify any such investment. The trustee shall not be liable to any beneficiary of this trust, the settlors, or any person or entity for the retention of any such life insurance policy, and no beneficiary shall have any right to recoupment or restoration of any loss suffered as the result of any such retention. As a specific limitation of the trustee's liability, the trustee is relieved of any obligation to evaluate the insurance investments annually or otherwise, or to evaluate the degree to which insurance and/or premiums are guaranteed, as well as the effect of company operations on product performance. The trustee has no responsibility to advise the settlor or beneficiaries of any perceived increased investment risk in the maintenance of any such life insurance policies. The trustee is relieved of any obligation to minimize exposure of the beneficiaries in the event of a perceived increase in investment risk attributable to the retention of any such insurance policies. The trustee shall not be liable for failure to maintain any insurance policy in force if the trust assets are insufficient to pay for premiums or assessments currently due on or in connection with that policy.

5.08. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall have all of the following powers, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlors in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.

(b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

(c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(d) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

(e) In the trustee's discretion, lend money from the trust estate to the probate estates of the settlors, irrespective of whether the trustee and the executor may be the same person, provided that any such loan is adequately secured and bears a reasonable rate of interest.

(f) In the trustee's discretion, use funds or credit of the trust estate to purchase property from the probate estates of the settlors at its fair market value as determined by the trustee in the trustee's discretion.

(g) Engage in any transactions with the personal representative of the estates of the settlors that are in the best interest of any trust created in this instrument.

(h) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.

(i) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.

(j) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.

(k) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(l) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(m) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlors, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(n) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(o) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(p) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(q) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(r) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(s) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(t) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(u) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(v) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

5.09. Power to Combine Trust Assets. Each trust created under this trust instrument shall constitute a separate trust and be administered and accounted for accordingly; however, the assets of all of the trusts may be combined and held for the trust beneficiaries without physical division into separate trusts until time of distribution.

5.10. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this trust instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust falls below [specify amount, e.g., $25,000], or becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

5.11. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

5.12. Payments to Legally Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, then the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

5.13. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

5.14. Trust Distributions Shall Not Discharge Obligations of Support. Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, no income or principal of the trust shall be used to discharge, in whole or in part, the legal obligation of any person to support or educate any beneficiary of this trust. In determining the legal obligation of any person to support and educate a beneficiary of this trust, the existence of this trust and the funds made available under it shall not be taken into account.

5.15. Limitations on Trustee's Powers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the powers of the trustee shall be subject to the following limitations:

(a) The trustee shall have no power or discretion with respect to any life insurance policy on the life of the trustee that constitutes an incident of ownership (as that term is used in Internal Revenue Code Section 2042, as amended) in that policy.

(b) The trustee shall have no power or discretion with respect to the distribution of income or principal to or for the trustee's benefit, or in satisfaction of the trustee's legal obligations.

(c) If the trustee would, but for this provision, have had any power or discretion described in (a) or (b), above, that power or discretion shall be exercised by the co-trustee, if any, and if there is no co-trustee, by the next-named successor trustee acting as special co-trustee. If the next-named successor trustee shall for any reason fail to qualify or cease to act as special co-trustee, the next-named successor trustee shall act as successor special co-trustee. If all named successor trustees shall for any reason fail to qualify or cease to act as special co-trustee, the trustee shall appoint a successor special co-trustee, other than the trustee so appointing. The responsibilities of the special co-trustee shall be limited to the exercise of powers and discretions under this section.

5.16. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by [if trust nominates co-trustees: the other trustee or trustees or, if trust nominates a successor trustee: the successor trustee].

5.17. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

6.01. Perpetuities Saving Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, every trust created by this instrument[, or by the exercise of any power of appointment created by this instrument,] shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of [designate measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlors and their issue] who are alive at the creation of the trust. For purposes of this perpetuities saving clause, a trust shall be deemed to have been created on the date the trust becomes irrevocable or the date of the death of the surviving settlor, whichever occurs first. If a trust is terminated under this section, the trustee shall distribute all of the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the proportion in which they are entitled (or eligible, in the case of discretionary payments) to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of the trust, the trustee shall distribute all of the trust property to the persons then entitled or eligible to receive income from the trust _____ [specify pattern of distribution, e.g., outright in a manner that, in the trustee's opinion, will give effect to the intent of the settlors in creating the trust, the trustee's decision to be final and incontestable by anyone or as a class, in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

6.02. "Deceased Settlor" and "Surviving Settlor." In this instrument, the first settlor to die is referred to as the "deceased settlor" and the other settlor is referred to as the "surviving settlor."

6.03. Definitions of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the terms "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined or derived.

6.04. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the term "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

6.05. Definition of Incapacity. For purposes of this instrument, a person shall be deemed "incapacitated" if and for so long as a court of competent jurisdiction has made a finding to that effect, or a guardian or conservator of that person's estate or person duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction is serving, or upon certification by two physicians (licensed to practice under the laws of the state where the person is domiciled at the time of the certification) that the person is unable properly to care for himself or herself or for his or her property. The latter certification shall be made by each physician in a written declaration under penalty of perjury.

6.06. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

- (a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;
- (b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;
- (c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and
- (d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

6.07. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

6.08. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

6.09. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

6.10. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

6.11. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of either or both settlors that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the settlor or settlors had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the settlor or settlors.

§ 72.210 Irrevocable Trust for Minor(s) [I.R.C. § 2503(c)]

[1] Comment

[a] Uses of Trust

This form is an irrevocable inter vivos trust for the benefit of one or more beneficiaries under the age of 21 years. The trust is designed to meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) and thus to qualify transfers to the trust for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b) and discussion in § 72.13[2][a]]. If the trust does not meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c), transfers to the trust may not meet the "present interest" requirements of the annual exclusion [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3 and discussion in § 72.13[2][c]]. Transfers to this trust may be made on an annual basis to maximize the benefits of the annual exclusion.

This type of trust ordinarily will be established by parents or grandparents who wish to transfer cash or other property to a trust for the benefit of their children or grandchildren. However, other relatives (and even unrelated persons) may also establish this kind of trust.

[b] Declaration of Trust Format

Two basic formats for trust instruments, called trust agreements and declarations of trust, are used by California attorneys to create inter vivos trusts. This trust uses the trust declaration format [see Section 1.01].

[c] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax

The generation-skipping transfer tax (GST) ordinarily will not be an obstacle to the creation of a trust under I.R.C. § 2503(c), even when the settlors are grandparents and the beneficiaries are their grandchildren. Transfers covered by the gift tax annual exclusion generally avoid the GST because they are assigned an inclusion ratio of zero [I.R.C. § 2642(c)(1), (3)(A)]. A transfer to a trust will be assigned an inclusion ratio of zero if (1) the trust is for the benefit of an individual, (2) no part of the principal or income may be distributed to anyone other than that individual during the individual's lifetime, and (3) if the individual dies before termination of the trust the assets will be includible in the individual's gross estate for federal tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2642(c)(2)]. I.R.C. § 2503(c) requires that, if the beneficiary dies before reaching the age of 21, the trust property must be payable to the beneficiary's estate or as the beneficiary may appoint under a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A); see I.R.C. § 2514(c) (general power of appointment defined)]. Property that is included in a decedent's estate, or that is subject to a general power of appointment held by the decedent, is includible in the decedent's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)]. Thus transfers of property to a trust that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 2503(c) will not be subject to the GST tax.

For an extended discussion of the tax, see California Wills Trusts, Ch.113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[d] Division of Trust Estate

This form may be used to create a trust for the benefit of one or several beneficiaries. If there is to be only one beneficiary, the entire trust will be held for the benefit of the one beneficiary [ see Section 4.01 of form (first alternative)]. If there are two or more beneficiaries, the trustee must divide the trust estate into separate trusts and hold one trust for the benefit of each beneficiary [ see Section 4.01 of form (second alternative)]. Division of the trust into separate trusts is essential if transfers to the trust are to qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion (and thereby also receive a generation-skipping transfer tax inclusion ration of zero). Since the trustee is given discretion over distributions of principal and income [ see Section 4.02 of form; see also I.R.C. § 2503(c) and discussion in § 72.15[3][b]], if the trust is not divided into separate trusts no single beneficiary would ever be assured of receiving any part of the income or principal and no beneficiary would have a present interest in the trust [Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-3(c), Example (3); for discussion of present interest requirement, see § 72.13[2][c]]. When the trust is properly divided into separate trusts, transfers to the trust will qualify for as many annual exclusions as there are beneficiaries.

[e] Termination of Trust

Although I.R.C. § 2503(c) states that a trust will meet its requirements if undistributed income "will ... pass" to the beneficiary when the beneficiary reaches 21 [I.R.C. § 2503(c)(2)(A)], the section does not require actual distribution to the beneficiary at 21. If the beneficiary has the right to terminate the trust on reaching 21, the requirements of the section are satisfied [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 752-753 ; Rev. Rul. 74-43, 1974-1 C.B. 285 ; see Treas. Reg. § 25.2503-4(b)(2)].

The right to terminate the trust may be exercisable during a specified period after the beneficiary reaches the age of 21 [ see Section 4.03 of form], or may be a continuing right exercisable after the beneficiary reaches that age [ Heidrich v. Commissioner, (1971) 55 T.C. 746, 752-753 ; Rev. Rul. 74-43, 1974-1 C.B. 285 ; see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8507017, 8039023 ]. In either case, the instrument should specify what will happen to the trust property if the beneficiary does not exercise the right to terminate the trust. Typically, the trustee will be required to distribute any remaining principal and income to the beneficiary at a specified age, or in installments at various ages [ see Section 4.03 of form]. The settlor has wide latitude in specifying what will happen to undistributed trust property if the beneficiary does not exercise the right to terminate the trust. The instrument may even require that the property be held in trust until the beneficiary's death.

[f] Selection of Trustee

The selection of the trustee for this trust will depend on whether the settlor wishes to remove the trust property from his or her estate for estate tax purposes. Most settlors will wish to do this, and will take precautions so that the trust property will not be included in their estates. Some settlors, however, may be unconcerned about removing the trust property from their estates. If, for example, it is not reasonably foreseeable that the value of the settlor's entire estate will exceed the "applicable exclusion amount" (unified credit) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]] available in the year of the settlor's death, the settlor may not wish to take any precautions to remove the property from his or her estate. Similarly, if the settlor is relatively young and the risk that he or she might die before the trust terminates is relatively slight, the risk may be acceptable under all of the circumstances.

A settlor who is not concerned about the possible inclusion of the trust property in his or her estate may safely serve as trustee. However, a settlor who is concerned about inclusion should not serve as trustee, because the trustee's discretion over distributions of principal and income [see Section 4.02 of form] is a power to designate the person or persons who will possess or enjoy the property or its income. If the settlor dies before the trust terminates, the power will require inclusion under I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2). This is the case even if the discretion is exercisable only in conjunction with another person, or only in conjunction with a person who has an adverse interest [Treas. Reg. § 20.2036-1(b)(3)].

If the settlor strongly wishes to manage the trust property as trustee, but also wishes to avoid inclusion of the trust property in his or her estate, discretion over distributions may be given to a special trustee, with the ordinary powers of management reserved to the settlor. The fact that someone other than the settlor has discretion over trust distributions will not cause the property to be included in the settlor's estate [Treas. Reg. § 20.2036-1(b)(3)].

[g] Successor Trustees

If the settlor wishes to remove the trust property from his or her estate for estate tax purposes [see discussion in [f], above], care should be taken in drafting the trust provisions relating to successor trustees. If the settlor retains an unrestricted power to remove the trustee and appoint himself or herself as successor, the settlor will be deemed to have the powers of the trustee for estate tax purposes. Since the trustee's discretion over distributions of principal and income amounts to the power to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property or its income, the trustee's power will be attributed to the settlor and the trust property will also be included in the settlor's estate if the settlor dies before the trust terminates [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2036-1(b)(3), 20.2038-1(a)]. If, however, the settlor retains the power to replace the trustee with an individual or corporate successor who is not "related or subordinate" to the settlor, the trustee's powers will not be attributed to the settlor for this purpose, and the property will not be included in the settlor's estate [Rev. Rul. 95-58, 1995-2 C.B. 191; see I.R.C. § 672(c) ("related or subordinate party" defined)].

Irrevocable Trust for Minor(s) [

[Name of trust, if desired, e.g., JOSEPH EDWARD GREEN 1998 TRUST]

DECLARATION OF TRUST

Article 1: Creation of Trust

1.01. Parties. [Identify trustee(s), e.g., William Henry Green, who resides at 400 Serra Lane, San Diego, California, or Double Eagle National Bank of San Diego, California, or William Henry Green, who resides at 400 Serra Lane, San Diego, California, and Double Eagle National Bank of San Diego, California,] (the "trustee[s]") hereby declare[s] that _____ [he has or she has or it has or they have] received certain property (the "trust estate") from _____ [identify settlor[s], e.g., Joseph Edward Green of San Diego, California,] (the "settlor[s]"), and hold[s] that property in trust to be held, administered, and distributed according to the terms of this instrument.

1.02. Name of Trust. The trust created by this instrument shall be known as the [specify, e.g., Joseph Edward Green 1998 Trust].

Article 2: Trust Estate

2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All of the property described in Schedule A, attached to this instrument, and any other property that may hereafter be subject to this trust, is referred to in this instrument as the "trust estate" and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the trustee may accept additions to this trust from any source. Any additions to the trust shall be made by designating in writing the property to be added. However, the titling of any account, deed, or similar asset in the name of the trustee, as trustee of this trust, or any alternate or successor trustee acting under this instrument, shall be deemed to be a transfer to this trust. Any designation by a third party, whether by will, deed, account title designation, or similar transfer, shall also be a transfer to the trust estate.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlers

3.01. Irrevocability of Trust. This trust is irrevocable. It may not be amended, revoked, or terminated, in whole or in part, except as specified in this instrument.

Article 4: Payments and Distributions

[If trust will have only one beneficiary, use the following:]

4.01. Beneficiary. This trust is created for the benefit of _____ [name of beneficiary], who was born on _____ [date] and is the _____ [specify, e.g., child or grandchild] of the settlor. The trust estate shall be held, administered, and distributed by the trustee for _____ [his or her] benefit as provided in this instrument.

[Or, if trust will have more than one beneficiary, use the following:]

4.01. Beneficiaries and Division of Trust Estate. The trustee shall immediately divide the trust estate into [number of beneficiaries, e.g., two] equal shares and shall set aside and allocate one share for the benefit of each of the following persons:

1. _____ [name of beneficiary], who was born on _____ [date], and who is the _____ [specify, e.g., child or grandchild] of the settlor.

2. _____ [name of beneficiary], who was born on _____ [date], and who is the _____ [specify, e.g., child or grandchild] of the settlor.

[Continue to list beneficiaries as needed]

Each of the shares so allocated shall be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust as provided in this instrument.

[Continue with the following:]

4.02. Payment of Income and Distribution of Principal Until Age 21. So long as [the beneficiary or a beneficiary for whose benefit a separate trust has been set aside] is under the age of 21 years, the income of the trust [if more than one beneficiary, add: set aside for that beneficiary] shall be added to principal, and the trustee may pay to or apply for the benefit of [the or that] beneficiary as much of the income and principal of [the or that] trust as the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, deems necessary or appropriate for [the or that] beneficiary's health, education, maintenance, support, comfort, welfare, and happiness. In determining the amount to be paid to or for the benefit of [the or that] beneficiary, the trustee is not required to consider [the or that] beneficiary's other income or resources.

4.03. Power to Terminate Trust at Age 21. [The beneficiary or Each beneficiary for whose benefit a separate trust has been set aside] shall have the power to terminate the trust [if more than one beneficiary, add: set aside for that beneficiary] by so electing in an instrument in writing delivered to the trustee within [specify time, e.g., 60 days] after [the or that] beneficiary has reached the age of 21 years. Upon receipt of a such an instrument, the trustee shall immediately distribute the entire undistributed balance of [the or that] trust to [the or that] beneficiary.

4.04. Payment of Income and Distribution of Principal After Age 21. If [the beneficiary or any beneficiary for whose benefit a separate trust has been set aside] does not exercise the power to terminate [the or that] trust upon reaching the age of 21 years, as specified above, [the or that] trust shall be retained by the trustee and held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of Section 4.02 of this instrument.

4.05. Distribution of Balance. When [the beneficiary or any beneficiary for whose benefit a separate trust has been set aside] reaches the age of [specify, e.g., 25 years], the trustee shall distribute [for single distribution: all of the undistributed balance or specify fraction for partial distribution, e.g., one half of the principal or one third of the principal] of the [the or that] trust [him or her or him or her], free of trust.

[Include the following only if first distribution was partial:]

When _____ [he or she or he or she] reaches the age of [specify, e.g., 30 years], the trustee shall distribute [for single distribution of balance: all of the undistributed balance or specify fraction for partial distribution, e.g., one half of the then-remaining principal] of [the or that] trust to [him or her or him or her], free of trust.

[Include the following only if the second distribution was partial:]

When _____ [he or she or he or she] reaches the age of [specify, e.g., 35 years], the trustee shall distribute all of the undistributed balance [the or that] trust to [him or her or him or her], free of trust.

4.06. Distribution In Case of Death Before Full Distribution. If [the beneficiary or any beneficiary for whose benefit a separate trust has been set aside] dies before reaching the age of 21 years, or before receiving full distribution of [the or that] trust, the trustee shall distribute all of the then-remaining balance of the [the or that] trust, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including [the or that] beneficiary's own estate, and on such terms and conditions, either outright or in trust, as [the or that] beneficiary shall appoint by _____ [his or her or his or her] valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. Any part of that balance not effectively appointed by [the or that] beneficiary in this manner shall be distributed, free of trust, to the then-living issue of the settlor(s) _____ [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. However, if any part of that balance would otherwise be distributed to a person for whose benefit a trust is then being administered under this instrument, that part shall instead be added to that trust and thereafter be administered according to its terms. If there is no issue of the settlor(s) then living and no other distribution of that balance is directed by this instrument, then all of that balance then remaining shall be distributed to _____ [specify distributee or distributees, e.g., the Regents of the University of California or the lawful issue of Martha R. Wilson _____] (in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ [240 or 246 or 247] or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation)].

4.07. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of any trust under this instrument and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income shall be governed by the provisions of the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing. The trustee in the trustee's discretion shall determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the California Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act.

4.08. Spendthrift Clause. The interests of the beneficiaries under this instrument are not transferable by voluntary or involuntary assignment or by operation of law, and shall be free from the claims of creditors and from attachment, execution, bankruptcy, and other legal process, to the maximum extent permitted by law.

Article 5: Trustee

5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or co-trustees have been designated under any other provisions of this trust instrument, then _____ [for a sole individual successor, name and description, e.g., Melissa B. Brown, who resides at _____ (address) or, for co-trustees, names and descriptions, e.g., Melissa B. Brown, who resides at _____ (address), and Richard R. Black, who resides at _____ (address), or any one or more of them or, for corporate trustee, name and description, e.g., Second State Bank, Los Angeles, California] shall be the successor [trustee or co-trustees]. If _____ [name(s) of successor trustee or co-trustees] [is or are all] unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or co-trustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g.: Any individual trustee or co-trustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlors, unless no issue of the settlors is able and willing to serve.]

5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as co-trustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as co-trustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new co-trustee may be appointed by the court. If no new co-trustee is appointed, the remaining co-trustee or co-trustees shall have full power to act as trustee or co-trustees and to continue the trust administration.

5.03. Definition of Trustee. Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or co-trustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

5.04. Bond. _____ [No bond or undertaking shall be required of any (optional: corporate) trustee named in or Bond shall be required of any trustee serving under] this instrument.

5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlor(s) believe(s) that $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

5.06. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trust[s] created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, have the power to do all of the following:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor[s] in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.

(b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

(c) Retain or acquire unproductive or underproductive property.

(d) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(e) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

- (f) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (g) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (h) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (i) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.
- (j) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.
- (k) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]
- (l) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.
- (m) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.
- (n) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.
- (o) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.
- (p) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(q) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(r) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(s) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(t) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

5.07. Power to Combine Trust Assets. Each trust created under this trust instrument shall constitute a separate trust and be administered and accounted for accordingly; however, the assets of all of the trusts may be combined and held for the trust beneficiaries without physical division into separate trusts until time of distribution.

5.08. Early Termination of Trusts. The trustee shall have the power, in the trustee's discretion, to terminate any trust created under this instrument whenever the fair market value of the trust becomes so small in relation to the costs of administration as to make continuing administration uneconomical. Upon termination, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiaries in proportion to their shares of the income. If no fixed amount of income is payable to specific beneficiaries, the trustee shall distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income in equal shares to those beneficiaries who would then be entitled to income payments from the trust.

5.09. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

5.10. Payments to Legally Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, then the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

5.11. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

5.12. Trust Distributions May Not Discharge Obligations of Support. Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, no income or principal of the trust shall be used to discharge, in whole or in part, the legal obligation of any person to support or educate any beneficiary of this trust. In determining the legal obligation of any person to support and educate a beneficiary of this trust, the existence of this trust and the funds made available under it shall not be taken into account.

5.13. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. Any trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by the successor trustee.

5.14. Written Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event upon which the right to payments from any trust may depend, the trustee shall incur no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

5.15. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

6.01. Perpetuities Saving Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, every trust created by this instrument[, or by the exercise of any power of appointment created by this instrument,] shall terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of [designate measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlor's issue or the settlors and their issue] who are alive at the creation of the trust. For purposes of this perpetuities saving clause, a trust shall be deemed to have been created on the date the trust becomes irrevocable or the date of the death of the [for two-settlor trust: surviving] settlor, whichever occurs first. If a trust is terminated under this section, the trustee shall distribute all of the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the proportion in which they are entitled (or eligible, in the case of discretionary payments) to receive income immediately before the termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of the trust, the trustee shall distribute all of the trust property to the persons then entitled or eligible to receive income from the trust _____ [specify pattern of distribution, e.g., outright in a manner that, in the trustee's opinion, will give effect to the intent of the settlor(s) in creating the trust, the trustee's decision to be final and incontestable by anyone or as a class, in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether all of such persons are members of the same generation].

6.02. Definitions of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the terms "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined or derived.

6.03. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the term "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

6.04. Definition of Incapacity. For purposes of this instrument, a person shall be deemed "incapacitated" if and for so long as a court of competent jurisdiction has made a finding to that effect, or a guardian or conservator of that person's estate or person duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction is serving, or upon certification by two physicians (licensed to practice under the laws of the state where the person is domiciled at the time of the certification) that the person is unable properly to care for himself or herself or for his or her property. The latter certification shall be made by each physician in a written declaration under penalty of perjury.

6.05. Definition of Education. As used in this instrument, the term "education" refers to the following:

- (a) Education at public or private elementary, junior high, middle, or high schools, including boarding schools;
- (b) Undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate study in any field, whether or not of a professional character, in colleges, universities, or other institutions of higher learning;
- (c) Specialized formal or informal training in music, the stage, the handicrafts, or the arts, whether by private instruction or otherwise; and
- (d) Formal or informal vocational or technical training, whether through programs or institutions devoted solely to vocational or technical training, or otherwise.

6.06. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context permits.

6.07. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

6.08. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

6.09. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

6.10. Gifts to "Heirs." For any gift to heirs of [the settlor or either or both settlors] that is made in this instrument, those heirs shall be determined as if the [settlor or] settlor[s] had died intestate at the time for distribution prescribed in this instrument, and the identity and shares of those heirs shall be determined according to the California laws of succession that concern separate property not acquired from a previously deceased spouse and that are in effect at the death of the [settlor or] settlor[s].

§ 72.220 Qualified Personal Residence Trust (QPRT)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete qualified personal residence trust (QPRT). It is based on the sample form issued by the IRS for a qualified personal residence trust (QPRT) [see Rev. Proc. 2003-42, 2003-1 C.B. 993]. It satisfies all of the requirements for a QPRT under I.R.C. § 2702(a)(3)(A) and Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c). It is designed for a QPRT with one transferor for a term equal to the lesser of the life of the term holder or a term of years.

The IRS will recognize a trust as meeting all of the QPRT requirements if (1) the trust instrument is substantially similar to the sample declaration or properly integrates one or more of the sample alternate provisions into a document that is substantially similar to the sample declaration; and (2) the trust operates in a manner that is consistent with the terms of the trust instrument and is a valid trust under applicable local law. A trust instrument that contains substantive provisions in addition to those provided in the sample declaration (other than properly integrated alternate provisions or provisions necessary to establish a valid trust under applicable local law), or that omits any of the provisions of the sample declaration, will not necessarily be disqualified, but it will not be automatically assured of qualification [Rev. Proc. 2003-42, 2003-1 C.B. 993, § 3]. This form follows the language of the sample form almost exactly, with minor nonsubstantive deviations to conform to the style and format of the other forms in this publication.

For a trust to qualify as a QPRT, the governing instrument must contain all of the provisions required under the regulations, and these provisions, by their terms, must continue in effect during the existence of any term interest in the trust [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(1)].

[b] Basic Tax Treatment

For gift tax purposes, the original transfer of the residence to the QPRT will be treated as a gift of the remainder to the remainder beneficiaries. The value of the remainder will be determined by first determining the fair market value of the entire property and then subtracting the value of the retained interest [Treas. Reg. § 25.2512-5(a), (d)].

If the settlor dies before the trust has terminated, the trust property will be included in the settlor's gross estate because the settlor retained the use of the property for a period that did not end before the settlor's death [I.R.C. § 2036(a)]. If the settlor does not die during the trust term, however, the property will be distributed to the remainder beneficiaries without any other gift or estate tax. However, the beneficiaries will not receive a stepped-up basis on the transfer, because the basis of property that is received by gift is the same as the basis in the hands of the donor [I.R.C. § 1015(a)].

For additional discussion of the use of qualified personal residence trusts, see § 72.16[6]; see also California Wills Trusts, Ch. 114, Irrevocable Trusts, § 114.10[7] (Matthew Bender).

[c] Term Interest

A QPRT will give a specified person or persons (called the "term holder" or "term holders" in the Treasury regulations) the right to use and occupy the personal residence during a specified period of time, generally called the "term" or the "trust term." The interest of the specified person or persons during the "term" is described in the regulations as the "term interest" [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(1)].

The "term" may be the lifetime of a designated person or, if there are two term holders, their lifetimes. It is more usual, however, for the term to be stated as a specific number of years, in order to avoid inclusion of the trust property in the settlor's gross estate. When a term is specified, its length should be determined by balancing the term holder's age and probable life expectancy against the tax savings that can be realized from reducing the value of the remainder interest by postponing distribution to the remainder beneficiaries for as long as possible. Since QPRTs are frequently drafted for elderly term holders/clients, the term is often 10 years or less.

If the term is a specified number of years, the trust instrument typically will provide that the term will expire earlier if the term holder dies before expiration of the specified number of years [see Section 2.03 of form]. Such a provision recognizes that the tax-saving purposes of the trust will be frustrated by an early death. Since the gross estate of a decedent will include property that the decedent had the right to use or enjoy at the time of death [see I.R.C. § 2036(a) and discussion in § 72.12[2][a]], most settlors (who are typically the term holders) will wish to control the disposition of the residence if they die before the expiration of the term of years. This can be done by specifying in the trust instrument that the property will be distributed to the settlor's (or surviving settlor's) estate if the settlor (or surviving settlor) dies before expiration of the term of years [see Section 2.03 of form]. Such a provision, in effect, creates a reversion. As discussed in [k], below, a reversion is desirable because it reduces the value of the remainder interest and the amount of gift tax that will have to be paid on the transfer.

Potential generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax consequences under I.R.C. § 2601 on termination of the trust by reason of the settlor's death during the QPRT term should also be considered. The settlor may prefer to design the dispositive provisions to avoid any GST transfer in the event of his or her death during the term because, under I.R.C. § 2642(f), no allocation of a GST exemption can be made until the end of the QPRT term.

The trust instrument must require that any income of the trust be distributed to the term holder at least annually until the term interest expires [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(3); see Section 2.02(c) of form]. It must also prohibit "distributions of corpus" to any beneficiary other than the settlor before expiration of the term interest [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(4); see Section 2.02(h) of form].

As discussed in [e], below, most estate planners prefer to use two separate QPRTs when the residence is a community property asset. However, if a husband and wife join to transfer their interests in a residence to the same trust, the instrument must prohibit any person other than one of the spouses from holding a term interest in the trust concurrently with the other spouse [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(2)(iv)].

The trust instrument must prohibit commutation (prepayment) of the term holder's interest [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(6)]; see Section 2.02(g) of form].

[d] Personal Residence

A QPRT can hold only one personal residence, and that residence must be used as the personal residence of the term holder, who ordinarily is the settlor [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(1), (c)(7)(i)]. However, a personal residence can be either a principal residence or a second home [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(i), (c)(2)(i)]. The trust can also hold a fractional interest in the settlor's principal residence or second home [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(i)(C), (c)(2)(i)(C)]. Under the regulations, the definition of "principal residence" is to be determined under the rules of former I.R.C. § 1034 (repealed effective May 6, 1997) [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(2)(i)(A)]. Under the latter rules, a principal residence could consist of a dwelling house situated on real property, a condominium, an interest in a cooperative housing corporation, a houseboat, or a motor home [see I.R.C. § 1034(f); Treas. Reg. § 1.1034-1(c)(3)(i); Rev. Rul. 64-31, 1964-1 C.B. 300]. I.R.C. § 1034 was repealed by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 [P.L. 105-34, § 312(b)]; however, it appears unlikely that this repeal was intended to have any impact on the types of interests that can qualify as a residence for QPRT purposes.

During the term of the trust, the residence cannot be occupied by any person other than the term holder or the term holder's spouse or dependents, and it must be available for the term holder's use at all times. During the term of the trust, the residence must be used primarily as a residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(1), (c)(2)(iii)].

A personal residence may include appurtenant structures used for residential purposes and a reasonable amount of adjacent land, but it cannot include any personal property in the residence (such as household furniture or furnishings) [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(ii)]. The residence may be improved after the trust is created. However, all improvements must meet the requirements of a personal residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(B)]. Section 2.01(c) of the form is an optional provision that permits the trustee to accept additions of cash to the trust for specified purposes. A provision in the trust instrument that permits these additions is not required in order to qualify the trust as a QPRT [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(A)].

[e] Interests of Spouses in Same Residence

Spouses who hold interests (including community property interests) in the same residence and who wish to establish a QPRT may transfer their interests to the same trust, or establish separate QPRTs for their respective interests [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(iv), (c)(2)(i)(c), (iv)]. If the spouses transfer their respective interests to the same trust, the trust instrument must prohibit any person other than one of the spouses from holding a term interest in the trust concurrently with the other spouse [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(iv), (c)(2)(iv)]. When spouses join in transferring their interests in the same residence to a single trust, each spouse will be deemed to have made a gift of his or her interest in the residence. On completion of the transfer, the spouses' community property interests in the residence will cease, since they cannot retain interests (community or otherwise) in property they have given away.

Many estate planners prefer to create separate QPRTs when married persons wish to contribute their personal residence to a QPRT. The Treasury regulations provide that a QPRT may be funded with an undivided fractional interest in an otherwise qualifying personal residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(2)(i)(c)] and also provide that spouses may contribute a fractional portion of their interests in the same residence to a QPRT [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b)(2)(iv), (c)(2)(iv)]. When separate QPRTs are created, each trust will be funded with an undivided one-half interest in the residence. Each trust will provide for a reversion [see discussion in [k], below] on the settlor's death. If the first spouse to die dies before expiration of the term of years specified in that spouse's trust, the trust estate will be subject to the payment of any estate taxes that may be due in that spouse's estate under I.R.C. § 2036(a) [see discussion in § 72.12[2][a]]. The trust estate can then be disposed of either under terms of the deceased spouse's will, or as provided in a revocable inter vivos trust created by the deceased spouse.

Failure to provide for a reversion on the death of each spouse could have very unfavorable estate tax consequences. This is the case whether the spouses establish separate trusts or join to establish a single trust. The deceased spouse's interest in the residence would be taxable in the deceased spouse's gross estate under I.R.C. § 2036(a) even though the property had passed beyond the control of the deceased spouse's estate and collection of the estate taxes would be problematic. Further, the deceased spouse's interest in the residence would not qualify for the marital deduction, since it would be subject to termination on expiration of the specified term of years and would violate the "terminable interest rule." Under that rule, the marital deduction is not available for any interest in property that is subject to termination or failure on the lapse of time, the occurrence of an event or contingency, or the failure of occurrence of some contingency or event [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1)].

If the deceased spouse's interest is brought back under terms of a reversion, however, the interest can be transferred to the surviving spouse either under the deceased spouse's will or under a revocable inter vivos trust. If the interest is transferred by either method, it would not have to be subject to termination on expiration of the term of years and could qualify for the marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056(a)]. The surviving spouse would then be able to put the first spouse's half of the property into the survivor's own QPRT.

[f] Holding Cash

The trust instrument must generally prohibit the trust from holding any assets other than the one personal residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(i); see Section 2.01(b) of form]. However, it can permit the settlor to initially transfer cash to the trust to cover the purchase of the residence if the purchase is made within three months after the trust is created and the trustee has previously entered into a contract to purchase the residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(A)(1)(iii); see Section 2.01(c) of form]. It also can authorize the settlor to add cash to the trust to cover mortgage payments, expenses, or improvements, provided the expenses are already incurred or the improvements are to be paid for by the trust within six months after the addition is made [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(A)(1)(i), (ii); see Section 2.01(c) of form].

If the instrument permits the trustee to hold cash for any of the authorized purposes, it must require the trustee to determine at least quarterly what amounts are held by the trust for the payment of expenses and to immediately distribute any amounts in excess of the permitted amounts to the settlor [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(A)(2); see Section 2.02(c) of form].

[g] Sale of Residence

The trust instrument may permit the sale of the residence (except as set forth in Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9), discussed below); the proceeds of the sale must be held in a separate account [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(C); see Section 2.02(f) of form]. If the instrument permits this, however, it must also provide that the trust will cease to be a QPRT if the proceeds of the sale have not been used to acquire a new residence within two years after the date of sale [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(ii); see Section 2.04(a)(2) of form]. If the trust term expires before a new residence has been acquired, the trust will cease to be a QPRT when the term expires [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(ii)].

Under Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9), added effective December 23, 1997, and applicable to trusts created after May 16, 1996 [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-7], the trust instrument must prohibit the trust from selling or transferring the personal residence, directly or indirectly, to the settlor, the settlor's spouse, or an entity controlled by the settlor or the settlor's spouse during the retained term interest of the trust, or at any time after the retained term interest that the trust is a grantor trust [for rules governing grantor trusts, see I.R.C. §§ 671-678 and discussion in § 72.11[2][a]]. For a provision complying with this regulation, see Section 2.02(e) of the form.

A sale or transfer to another grantor trust of the settlor or the settlor's spouse is considered a sale or transfer to the settlor or the settlor's spouse. However, a distribution for no consideration, on or after the expiration of the retained term interest, to another grantor trust of the settlor or the settlor's spouse pursuant to the express terms of the trust will not be considered a sale or transfer to the settlor or the settlor's spouse if the other grantor trust prohibits the sale or transfer of the property to the settlor, the settlor's spouse, or an entity controlled by the settlor or the settlor's spouse [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9)].

If the settlor dies before the expiration of the retained interest, Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9) does not apply to the distribution for no consideration of the residence to any person, including the settlor's estate, pursuant to the express terms of the trust, or pursuant to the exercise of a power retained by the settlor under the terms of the trust. Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9) also is inapplicable to an outright distribution for no consideration of the residence to the settlor's spouse after the expiration of the retained trust term pursuant to the express terms of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(9)].

This amendment was motivated by IRS concern that a QPRT might be used, not to transfer the personal residence to younger members of the settlor's family, but to transfer other assets to future generations through a so-called "bait and switch" transaction. In such a transaction, the settlor places the residence in trust with the intention of purchasing it from the trust just before the expiration of the retained term; after the settlor purchases the residence, the remainder beneficiaries receive the proceeds of the sale rather than the residence itself. The IRS believes that this does not comport with Congress's intention in permitting the creation of a QPRT [Proposed Rules, Fed. Reg., April 16, 1996, pp. 16623-16625].

A trust that does not comply with one or more of the requirements imposed by Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(b) or (c) will nevertheless be treated as satisfying those requirements if it is modified to comply with the requirements. Modification must be by judicial reformation, or nonjudicial reformation if effective under state law [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(a)(2)]. For trusts created before January 1, 1997, the reformation of the trust to comply with the requirements of the amended regulation must have been commenced within 90 days after December 23, 1997, and completed within a reasonable time after commencement. For trusts created after December 31, 1996, reformation must be commenced within 90 days after the due date (including extensions) for filing the gift tax return reporting the transfer of the residence under I.R.C. § 6075 and completed within a reasonable time after commencement; if reformation is not completed by the due date, the settlor or settlor's spouse must attach a statement to the gift tax return stating that the reformation has been commenced or will be commenced within the 90-day period [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(a)(2)].

[h] Destruction of or Damage to Residence

The trust instrument must provide that the trust will cease to be a QPRT if the residence ceases to be used or held for use as a personal residence of the term holder [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(i); see Section 2.04(a) of form]. A residence is held for use as a personal residence of the term holder as long as it is not occupied by any other person (other than the term holder's spouse or dependent) and is available at all times for use by the term holder as a personal residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(i)]. If the residence is destroyed or so damaged that it can no longer be used as a personal residence, the trust will cease to be a QPRT unless the residence is replaced or repaired, or a new residence is acquired, within two years [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(iii); see Section 2.04(a)(3) of form].

The trust instrument may permit the trust to hold one or more insurance policies on the residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(D); see Section 2.01(b) of form]. The instrument may also permit the trust to hold any insurance proceeds payable as a result of damage to or destruction of the residence in a separate account [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(5)(ii)(D); see Section 2.02(f) of form]. If the instrument permits the trust to hold insurance proceeds, it must also provide that the trust will cease to be a qualified personal residence trust if the proceeds have not been used to replace or repair the residence within two years after the date of sale [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(ii); see Section

2.04(a)(3) of form]. If the trust term expires before the residence has been replaced or repaired, the trust will cease to be a qualified personal residence trust when the term expires [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(7)(ii)].

[i] Disposition of Proceeds Following Failure to Repair or Replace Residence

If the trust ceases to be a qualified personal residence trust because the residence has been sold and a new residence has not been acquired within the required two-year period, or if it ceases to be a qualified personal residence trust because the residence has been destroyed and not replaced within the two-year period, the trust instrument must provide for the disposition of the remaining trust estate (which in the usual case will be the proceeds of the sale or the insurance proceeds, as the case may be). This can be done in one of three ways [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(8)]:

- By providing that the trust estate will be distributed outright to the term holder (usually the settlor).
- By providing that the trust will be converted to a qualified annuity trust [see Treas. Reg. §§ 25.2702-3, 25.2702-5(c)(8)(ii); see Article III of form for terms of qualified annuity trust].
- By giving the trustee discretion to either distribute the trust estate outright to the term holder or convert it to a qualified annuity trust.

A trust instrument will comply with the regulations if it gives the settlor the right to require the trustee to acquire a new residence if the first residence has been sold, or to replace the first residence if it has been destroyed, and if it further provides that if a new residence is not purchased or a destroyed residence is not replaced within two years, the remaining trust estate will be disposed of in one of the three ways described above [see Section 2.04 of form].

It is possible to convert part of the trust estate to a qualified annuity trust and reinvest the rest in a new residence [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(8)(ii)(C)(3)]. This may be done if, after the first residence is sold or destroyed, the settlor decides to replace it with a less expensive residence, or one which is acquired by use of less than all of the insurance proceeds. If the assets are converted to a qualified annuity trust, the right to receive the annuity must begin on the date the residence is sold, damaged, or destroyed [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(8)(ii)(B); see Section 3.02 of form]. However, the trust instrument may authorize the trustee to defer the annuity payments until 30 days after the assets are converted to a qualified annuity trust if the deferred payments bear interest from the date of sale, damage, or destruction [Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(8)(ii)(B); see Section 3.04 of form].

[j] Remainder

The trust instrument should identify the person or persons who will receive the trust estate on expiration of the term interest [see discussion of term interest in [c], above]. The trust estate may be distributed to any person or persons, whether they are individuals, classes of persons, or trusts. The interest that is distributed on the expiration of the trust term is properly described as the "remainder" or the "remainder interest," and the persons who will receive the interest are the "remainder beneficiaries."

A remainder provision may adopt any of a wide variety of distributive options. For example, it may provide that the remainder will be distributed to one named beneficiary, or that it will be divided in equal shares among two or more beneficiaries [see Section 2.03 of form]. When the remainder is to be divided among two or more beneficiaries, those beneficiaries may be identified by name, or by membership in a class.

In most cases, the remainder interest will be distributed outright. A qualified personal residence trust will not usually require that the residence be held in trust beyond the expiration of the trust term. However, the trust instrument may require that the share of a beneficiary be held in trust if the beneficiary is under a specified age (for example, 21 years) at the time of distribution.

[k] Reversion

Neither the Internal Revenue Code nor the Treasury Regulations require that the trust instrument of a QPRT include a reversion in the settlor. It is good practice, however, to include a reversion, and QPRTs almost always do so. Since the trust property will be included in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes if the settlor dies before expiration of the trust term [see I.R.C. § 2036(a) and discussion in § 72.12[2][a]], the property should be brought back under the control of the settlor's personal representative or trustee where it can be made available for payment of the estate taxes. If the trust instrument provides that the trust will terminate if the settlor dies before expiration of the specified term of years [see Section 2.03 of form], and if it further provides that in that eventuality the trust estate must be distributed to the settlor's estate, the trust property can be available for the payment of estate taxes on the settlor's death. Inclusion of a reversion also reduces the value of the remainder interest, thereby reducing the amount of gift tax that must be paid on the initial transaction. In some cases, the savings can be dramatic and will increase the overall appeal of the QPRT as a tax-saving device.

[l] Eligibility for Exclusion of Gain From Sale of Principal Residence

Since the trust instrument must require that any income of the trust be distributed to the settlor at least once a year [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-5(c)(3) and discussion in [c], above], a QPRT is a "grantor trust" for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 (grantors and others treated as substantial owners)] and the settlor will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 677 (income for benefit of grantor)]. Thus, the settlor may elect to take advantage of the $250,000 exclusion ($500,000 for most married couples) of gain on the sale of a principal residence [I.R.C. § 121; see I.R.C. § 671 (trust income, deductions, and credits attributable to grantors and others as substantial owners)].

[m] Effect on Property Tax

The property tax benefits of Proposition 13 [see Cal. Const., art. XIII A, § 1] will not be lost when the taxpayer's "principal residence" is transferred through the medium of a trust to the transferor's children [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(a)(1); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(c)(9)] ("transfer" includes transfer through medium of inter vivos or testamentary trust).

If the residence is not the taxpayer's "principal residence," the benefits of Proposition 13 will nevertheless be preserved if the transfer is to the children and the "full cash value" (determined for property tax purposes) [see Cal. Const., art. XIII A, § 2 ("full cash value" defined)] does not exceed $1,000,000 (the property tax base on the first $1 million in value will still be preserved) [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(a)(2)].

The original transfer of a personal residence to a QPRT does not require any reassessment of taxes under Proposition 13. Under Rev. & Tax. Code § 62, no "change in ownership" will have occurred for Proposition 13 purposes as long as the settlor retains the right to use and occupy the residence [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d), (e)]. If the original trust term [see discussion in [d], above] does not exceed 12 years, a reversion to the settlor [see discussion in [l], above] within that time will not cause a reassessment [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d)]. Further, if the remainder beneficiaries are the settlor's children and the residence is the settlor's principal residence, no reassessment will be required when the trust terminates and the residence is distributed to the children [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(a)(1), (c)(7)].

If the residence is not the settlor's principal residence, the transfer on termination of the trust will also be free of reassessment up to the first $1,000,000 in value [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1(a)(2), (c)(7)].

[n] Use of Residence on Termination of Trust

The settlor may be required to leave the personal residence when it is distributed to the remainder beneficiaries.

However, the remainder beneficiaries may also permit the settlor to remain in the residence if the settlor pays rent for its use. Some planners believe that this kind of rental arrangement may be desirable because it will result in further transfers of assets from the settlor to the remainder beneficiaries, and these transfers will be free of gift or estate tax (although subject to income tax in the hands of the remainder beneficiaries).

It may be risky, however, to enter into a lease arrangement before the end of the original trust term. Although the IRS, in a private letter ruling, has allowed a settlor, before expiration of the QPRT term, to enter into a lease arrangement to take effect upon expiration of the term [see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 9249014], in the absence of stronger authority there is still concern among estate planners that such a lease could defeat the purposes of the trust. It is a familiar principle of tax law that the substance of a transaction controls over its form. Further, under the so-called "sham transaction" rule, courts have long refused to recognize transaction that are entered into solely to gain a tax advantage. If, before the residence is transferred to the trust, there is any arrangement, whether formal or informal, that the settlor will not in fact lose the use of the residence on expiration of the trust term, but will have some right to remain in the residence beyond that time, it is possible that the trust might not be recognized as a QPRT and the advantages of the trust could be totally lost.

[2] FORM

Qualified Personal Residence Trust (QPRT)

[Name of trust, if desired; e.g., CHRISTOPHER EDWARD BROWN PERSONAL RESIDENCE TRUST]

DECLARATION OF TRUST

This trust agreement is made this ____ day of _____, by and between _____ (hereinafter "the Transferor"), and _____ as the trustee (hereinafter "the Trustee"), hereby creating the _____ Trust.

ARTICLE I. RETAINED INTEREST AND IRREVOCABILITY

1.01. Retained Interest. The Transferor intends by this Instrument to establish a qualified personal residence trust within the meaning of Revenue Procedure 2003-42, Internal Revenue Code § 2702(a)(3)(A), and § 25.2702-5(c) of the Treasury Gift Tax Regulations (hereinafter "the Treasury regulations"). Accordingly, the Transferor retains no right, title, or interest in any trust asset except as specifically provided in this trust instrument. Any provision of this instrument that would disqualify the trust as a qualified personal residence trust at any time shall be void to the extent necessary to avoid such a disqualification. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the Trustee shall take no action that would jeopardize the trust's status as a qualified personal interest trust.

1.02. Irrevocable. This trust is irrevocable and therefore may not be modified, amended, or revoked by the Transferor or any other person. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, however, the Trustee shall have the power, acting alone, to amend the trust to the extent provided in § 25.2702-5(a)(2) of the Treasury regulations (or any subsequent regulation or statute) in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies as a qualified personal residence trust for purposes of Internal Revenue Code § 2702(a)(3)(A) and § 25.2702-5(c) of the Treasury regulations (including with respect to the grantor retained annuity trust ("GRAT") administered under Article III, the qualification of the annuity interest under Internal Revenue Code § 2702(b)(1) and § 25.2702-3 of the Treasury regulations).

ARTICLE II. QUALIFIED PERSONAL RESIDENCE TRUST

2.01. Funding of the Qualified Personal Residence Trust ("QPRT").

[If transferor currently owns residence that will constitute trust corpus:]

(a) Residence. The Transferor transfers and assigns to the Trustee all of the transferor's interests in and rights to certain real property, including all improvements thereon and appurtenances thereto, known as _____ [legal description and/or address]. This property, or any property acquired as a replacement, will hereinafter be referred to as the "Residence." The Trustee accepts the Residence and agrees to hold, manage, and distribute the Residence and any other trust property under the terms set forth in this instrument.

[Or, if transferor does not currently own residence that will constitute trust corpus:]

(a) Cash for Purchase of Residence. The Transferor transfers $_____ to the Trustee and confirms that the Transferor intends to transfer to the Trustee additional cash in an amount sufficient to allow the Trustee to purchase a residence to be used as a personal residence of the Transferor. The Trustee accepts that amount, agrees to hold it in a separate account, and agrees to use it and any additional cash contributed under (c)(4), below, to purchase, within 3 months after the date on which this trust is created, such a residence (hereinafter referred to as "the Residence"). The Trustee agrees to hold, manage, and distribute the Residence and any other trust property under the terms set forth in this instrument.

[Continue with the following]

(b) Assets of the Trust. Except as provided in Sections 2.01(c), 2.02(f), and 2.04 of this Article II, the Trustee is prohibited from holding, at any time during the term of the QPRT, any property other than (1) an interest in one (and only one) Residence that meets the requirements of a personal residence of the Transferor as set forth in § 25.2702-5(c)(2) of the Treasury regulations, and (2) policies of insurance on the Residence.

[If transferor currently owns residence that will constitute trust corpus:]

(c) Additions to QPRT. From time to time, the Trustee may accept an addition of cash to the QPRT in an amount which, when added to any cash already held, does not exceed the amount reasonably required for: (1) the payment of QPRT expenses (including, without limitation, mortgage payments) already incurred or reasonably expected to be paid by the trust within 6 months after the date the addition is made; (2) the cost of improvements to the Residence to be paid by the trust within 6 months after the date the addition is made; and (3) the purchase by the trust of a replacement Residence within 3 months after the date the addition is made, provided that no addition may be made, or held by the Trustee, for the purchase of a replacement Residence unless the Trustee has, prior to receipt of the addition, entered into a contract to purchase that Residence. The Trustee shall hold the additions of cash received in accordance with this subsection (c) in a separate account.

[Or, if transferor does not currently own residence that will constitute trust corpus:]

(c) Additions to QPRT. From time to time, the Trustee may accept an addition of cash to the QPRT in an amount which, when added to any cash already held, does not exceed the amount reasonably required for: (1) the payment of QPRT expenses (including, without limitation, mortgage payments) already incurred or reasonably expected to be paid by the trust within 6 months after the date the addition is made; (2) the cost of improvements to the Residence to be paid by the trust within 6 months after the date the addition is made; (3) the purchase by the trust of a replacement Residence within 3 months after the date the addition is made, provided that no addition may be made, or held by the Trustee, for this purpose unless the Trustee has, prior to receipt of the addition, entered into a contract to purchase that Residence; and (4) the purchase by the trust of the initial Residence within 3 months of the date the trust is created, provided that no addition may be made, or held by the Trustee, for the purchase of the initial Residence unless the trustee has, prior to receipt of the addition, entered into a contract to purchase that Residence. The Trustee shall hold the additions of cash received in accordance with this subsection (c) in a separate account.

2.02. Administration of Trust.

(a) Use and Management of Residence. The Trustee shall hold and maintain the Residence as a personal residence of the Transferor during the period beginning on the date of creation of the trust and continuing through the date of termination of the trust (hereinafter "the term of the QPRT"). During the term of the QPRT, the Transferor shall have the exclusive rent-free use, possession, and enjoyment of the Residence.

(b) Payment of Expenses. The Transferor shall be responsible for the payment of all costs associated with the Residence, including, but not limited to, mortgage payments, property taxes, utilities, repairs, maintenance, and insurance. The Trustee's responsibility for the maintenance of the Residence and for other costs associated with the Residence is limited to the extent of any trust income and additions of cash for that purpose received by the Trustee in accordance with this Article II. If the Trustee has insufficient funds to pay these costs and expenses, the Trustee shall notify the Transferor, who shall be responsible for the unpaid balance of these costs and expenses. In addition, the Trustee from time to time may make improvements to the Residence, but the Trustee's authority and responsibility to do so is limited to the extent of any trust income, insurance proceeds, and additions of cash for that purpose received by the Trustee in accordance with this Article.

(c) Distributions of Cash to Transferor. Any net income of the QPRT shall be distributed to the Transferor, not less frequently than annually. In addition, the Trustee shall determine, not less frequently than quarterly, whether the cash held by the QPRT exceeds the amount permitted to be held by the Trustee and shall immediately distribute the excess, if any, to the Transferor. Within 30 days of the date of termination of the QPRT, the Trustee shall distribute outright to the Transferor (or to the estate of the Transferor, as the case may be), any amounts held by the QPRT pursuant to Section 2.01(c) of this Article II that are not used to pay QPRT expenses due and payable on the date of termination (including expenses directly related to the termination of the QPRT).

(d) Reinvestment of Trust Assets. Except as provided in Section 2.02(e) of this Article II, the Trustee may sell the Residence from time to time upon terms and conditions the Trustee deems appropriate. The Trustee may disburse from time to time any or all of the amounts described in Section 2.01(a) and (c), above, and in Section 2.02(e), below, including all income and capital gains thereon, as the Trustee deems appropriate for the purchase or construction of a replacement Residence to be owned by the trust or for the reconstruction or repair of the Residence. These disbursements shall be made, and any reconstruction and repairs shall be completed, within the time periods necessary to allow this trust to continue to qualify as a QPRT, but the Trustee shall not be held liable for any failure in this regard unless the Trustee has acted (or failed to act) through willful default or gross negligence.

(e) Prohibition on Sale of Residence to Transferor or Related Parties. The Trustee is prohibited from selling or transferring (as defined in § 25.2702-5(c)(9) of the Treasury regulations) the Residence, directly or indirectly, to the Transferor, the Transferor's spouse, or an entity controlled by the Transferor or the Transferor's spouse during the retained term interest of the QPRT, or at any time after the termination of the retained term interest in the QPRT while the trust is treated as owned in whole or in part by the Transferor or the Transferor's spouse under Internal Revenue Code §§ 671-678.

(f) Receipt of Proceeds With Respect to Residence. If the Residence is sold, the Trustee shall hold the proceeds of the sale (along with any income accrued thereon) in a separate account. If the Residence is damaged, destroyed, or involuntarily converted within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code § 1033, the Trustee shall hold any proceeds payable as a result thereof (consisting either of insurance proceeds in the case of damage or destruction to the Residence or the proceeds payable on involuntary conversion) in a separate account. The proceeds (and any interest thereon) so received shall be held, administered, and distributed by the Trustee as provided in this Article II.

(g) Commutation of Interests. The Transferor's interest in the QPRT may not be sold, commuted, or prepaid by any person.

(h) Prohibited Distributions. Except to the extent provided in Section 2.04, the Trustee may not make any distribution of income or principal from the QPRT to or for the benefit of any person other than the Transferor prior to the termination of the QPRT.

2.03. Termination of Trust. The trust's date of termination shall be the earlier of _____[date], or the date of the Transferor's death. Except as otherwise provided in Section 2.04, the Trustee shall distribute the trust property at the end of the term of the QPRT as provided in this Section 2.03. If the date of termination is _____[date], the Trustee shall distribute all of the property of the trust (other than any amounts due the Transferor pursuant to this trust instrument) to [designate transferees and, if more than one, specify shares]. If the date of termination is the earlier death of the Transferor, the Trustee shall distribute all trust property (other than any amounts due the Transferor's estate pursuant to this trust instrument) to [designate transferees and, if more than one, specify shares].

2.04. Cessation of Qualification as a Personal Residence Trust.

(a) Cessation Date.

(1) The trust shall cease to be a QPRT on the date on which the Residence ceases to be used or held for use as a personal residence of the Transferor within the meaning of § 25.2702-5(c)(7) of the Treasury regulations (other than for reasons described in (2) and (3), below).

(2) In the event of a sale of the Residence, the trust shall cease to be a QPRT on the first to occur of the following: (i) the date which is 2 years after the date of sale; (ii) the date of termination as determined in Section 2.03; or (iii) the date on which a replacement residence is acquired by the Trustee. If the first to occur is the acquisition of a replacement Residence by the Trustee, then the QPRT shall continue with respect to that replacement Residence, and the trust shall cease to be a QPRT only to the extent of any sale proceeds then held by the Trustee and not used for the purchase of the replacement residence.

(3) If the residence is damaged or destroyed, thus making it unusable as a personal residence, the trust shall cease to be a QPRT on the first to occur of the following dates: (i) the date that is 2 years after the date of damage or destruction; (ii) the date of termination as determined in Section 2.03; or (iii) replacement of or repairs to the Residence are completed or a new Residence is acquired by the Trustee. If the first to occur is the completion of the replacement or repair (or the acquisition of a new Residence), then the QPRT shall continue with respect to the repaired Residence or the new Residence, and the trust shall cease to be a QPRT only to the extent of any insurance proceeds then held by the Trustee and not used for the replacement or repair of the Residence (or the purchase of the new Residence).

(b) Distribution on Cessation. Within 30 days after the date on which the trust ceases to be a QPRT with respect to any of its assets, and after satisfying the provisions of Section 2.04(c) of this Article II, the Trustee shall distribute the trust assets with respect to which the trust has ceased to qualify as a QPRT to a separate share of this trust to be referred to and administered as a GRAT in accordance with Article III, below. That GRAT shall continue until the date of termination as defined in Section 2.03.

(c) Multiple GRATs. Because it may be possible to have more than one cessation of qualification during the term of the QPRT, the Trustee shall create and fund a separate GRAT for each cessation and each GRAT shall be administered as a separate share of the trust in accordance with Article III.

ARTICLE III. GRANTOR RETAINED ANNUITY TRUST

3.01. Separate Share. Each GRAT administered as a separate share under this Article III (each of which is referred to as "the GRAT" with regard to that separate share) is intended to provide for the payment of a qualified annuity interest as defined in § 25.2702-2 of the Treasury regulations for the benefit of the Transferor. No amount shall be paid before the termination of this trust other than to or for the Transferor's benefit.

3.02. Right to Receive Annuity. In each taxable year of the GRAT, beginning with the year that begins on the cessation date (as defined below), the Trustee shall pay to the Transferor an annuity, the amount of which shall be determined in accordance with Section 3.05. The right of the Transferor to receive the annuity amount begins on the cessation date.

3.03. Cessation Date. The cessation date is the date on which the Residence ceases to be used or held for use as a personal residence of the Transferor, the date of sale of the Residence, or the date of damage to or destruction of the Residence that renders the Residence unusable as a residence, as the case may be.

3.04. Payment of Annuity. The annuity amount shall be paid in equal [monthly or quarterly or semi-annual or annual] installments. The annuity amount shall be paid first from the net income of the GRAT and, to the extent net income is not sufficient, from principal. The Trustee may defer payment of any annuity amount otherwise payable after the cessation date until the date that is 30 days after the date that the assets are converted to a GRAT as provided in this trust instrument. Any deferred payment of the annuity amount shall bear interest for the period of deferral, compounded annually, at a rate not less than the rate prescribed in Internal Revenue Code § 7520 in effect on the cessation date. The Trustee shall reduce the aggregate deferred annuity payments by the amount of income actually distributed to the Transferor during the deferral period.

3.05. Computation of Annuity Amount. The amount of the annuity payable to the Transferor shall be determined as follows:

(a) If, on the date that any property of the trust is converted from the QPRT to a GRAT (hereinafter the "conversion date"), the assets of the trust do not include a Residence used or held for use as a personal residence of the Transferor, the annuity shall be the amount determined by dividing the lesser of (1) the value of the interest retained by the Transferor (as of the date of the original transfer, or (2) the value of all the trust assets (as of the conversion date), by the annuity factor determined for the original term of the Transferor's interest and at the rate used in valuing the retained interest at the time of the original transfer to the QPRT.

(b) If, on the conversion date, the assets of the trust include a Residence used or held for use as a personal residence of the Transferor, the annuity shall be the amount determined under (a), above, multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the excess of the fair market value of the assets of the trust on the conversion date over the fair market value of the assets as to which the trust continues as a QPRT, and the denominator of the fraction is the fair market value of the trust assets on the conversion date.

(c) In computing the annuity amount for any second or subsequent GRAT to be administered under this Article III, the Trustee shall make appropriate adjustments to the formulas above in this Section 3.05 that are consistent with the applicable provisions of the Code and the regulations thereunder, and with the Transferor's intent to maintain qualification of each of the trust shares hereunder as a QPRT or a GRAT.

(d) If there is an error in the determination of the annuity amount, then, within a reasonable period after the error is discovered, the difference between the annuity amount payable and the amounts actually paid shall be paid to or for the use of the Transferor by the Trustee in the event of an underpayment, or shall be repaid by the Transferor to the Trustee in the event of an overpayment.

3.06. Proration. Notwithstanding the preceding Sections of this Article III, in determining the annuity amount for a short taxable year, the Trustee shall prorate the annuity amount on a daily basis. In determining the annuity amount for the taxable year of the termination of the GRAT, the Trustee shall prorate the annuity amount for the final period of the annuity interest on a daily basis.

3.07. Additional Contributions Prohibited. No additional contributions shall be made to the GRAT after its creation.

3.08. Termination of GRAT. The GRAT shall continue through the date of termination of the QPRT, as defined in Section 2.03 of Article II, and shall then terminate. On termination of the GRAT, the Trustee shall distribute all of the trust property in the manner described in Section 2.03 as if the GRAT property had been part of the QPRT disposed of under that provision.

3.09. No Commutation. The Transferor's interest in the annuity amount may not be sold, commuted, or prepaid by any person.

ARTICLE IV. GENERAL PROVISIONS

4.01. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

4.02. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

4.03. Taxable Year. The taxable year of the trust shall be the calendar year.

4.04. Governing Law. The operation of the trust shall be governed by the laws of the state of California. The Trustee, however, shall not have or exercise any power or discretion granted under applicable law that would prevent: (1) the QPRT administered under Article II from meeting the requirements for a qualified personal residence trust under Internal Revenue Code § 2702(a)(3)(A) and § 25.2702-5(c) of the Treasury regulations; or (2) the Transferor's interest in any GRAT administered under Article II from meeting the requirements for a qualified annuity interest under § 25.2702-3 of the Treasury regulations.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 72 IRREVOCABLE TRUSTS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Grantor Retained Income Trusts

26-72 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 72.221

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 72.221 Grantor Retained Annuity Trust (GRAT)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete grantor retained annuity trust (GRAT). It is designed to be used by a settlor to make a gift, usually to one or more family members, of cash of income-producing property in which the settlor (or an appropriate family member) retains an annuity interest; that is, the right to receive periodic payments in fixed dollar amounts for life or for a specified term of years. The interest retained by the settlor or family member is a "qualified interest" for purposes of I.R.C. § 2702 [ see § 72.16[4]], making the interest subject to special valuation under I.R.C. § 7520. The trust prohibits the payment of the annuity interest by a note, other debt instrument, option, or similar financial arrangement as required by Treas. Reg. § 25.2702-3.

This trust does not allow contributions or additions to the trust estate after the settlor's initial contribution. It is recommended that a separate GRAT be established with the subsequent contributions.

[b] Significance of GRAT as Estate Planning Tool

The value of the GRAT as an estate planning tool depends on fluctuating interest rates, the growth of the value of the trust assets over the term of the GRAT, and the percentage payout retained by the settlor. When interest rates are low, the settlor's retained interest has a correspondingly high value, and results in a lower transfer tax cost than when interest rates are high. Using a properly drafted GRAT, the settlor can make a transfer of the trust assets to the remainder beneficiaries at a future time, while retaining a present interest in the property and paying gift tax on only a portion of the property's actual value. Because the trust is irrevocable, any post-transfer appreciation is removed from the settlor's estate.

However, the gift to the remainder beneficiaries does not qualify for the annual gift exclusion because it is a future interest. Payment of cash to satisfy the gift tax can be avoided if the "applicable credit amount" of the settlor's unified credit is applied to the gift. If the value of the gift exceeds the applicable exclusion amount (or, if the unused portion of the applicable credit amount is inadequate to completely shelter the transfer from gift tax), gift tax must be paid on the transfer at the time the transfer is made. However, assuming the settlor does not die during the trust term, the trust assets, as well as any appreciation on the property after the trust is funded, have been effectively removed from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes.

If the settlor dies before the trust terminates, the trust assets will be included in the settlor's gross estate under I.R.C. § 2036(a), because the settlor retained income for a period that did not end before death. If the settlor dies after the trust term, the trust assets will be distributed to the remainder beneficiaries without further transfer tax, but the remainder beneficiaries will not receive a stepped-up basis on the transfer.

[c] Provision for Reversion of Trust Assets

Under this trust, the settlor will retain an annuity interest in the trust assets for a specified term of years. At the end of that time, if the settlor is alive, the property will be distributed to specified remainder beneficiaries, typically the settlor's children. It provides an optional provision for reversion of the assets transferred to the trust if the settlor dies before the trust term expires, and an alternative for distribution of the trust assets by power of appointment exercised in the settlor's will (including to the settlor's estate) if the settlor dies before the trust term expires.

The purpose of including a reversion is to make the trust assets available for payment of the estate taxes, because all or some portion of the assets transferred to the trust will be taxable in the settlor's estate if the settlor dies before the trust term expires. It is also designed to reduce the value of the remainder interest and therefore the amount of gift tax that will have to be paid on the transaction.

If the reversion alternative providing a general testamentary power of appointment is used, default provisions making an alternative disposition of the trust assets in the event the power is not exercised should also be included.

[d] Establishing Separate GRATs for Spouses

This trust is designed for use by a sole settlor. However, married persons may also contribute their interests in the assets to be transferred to the GRAT. When this is done, it is preferable for each spouse to establish a separate GRAT and to fund the separate GRAT with that spouse's undivided one-half interest in the trust assets.

It is simpler and more straightforward to draft a GRAT with a sole settlor than one with joint settlors, and there are no substantial planning disadvantages to separate trusts. Separate GRATs will be necessary, in fact, if the spouses are not the same age, because the calculation of each respective gift will be different. While some married persons may express a preference for a joint instrument, this preference can usually be overcome by explaining the advantages of separate instruments.

If the deceased spouse's interest is brought back under the terms of a reversion, that interest can then be transferred to the surviving spouse under the deceased spouse's will or a revocable inter vivos trust. If the interest is transferred by either method, it will qualify for the marital deduction, and the surviving spouse will then be able to put the deceased spouse's half of the assets into the survivor's GRAT.

[e] Funding GRAT

A GRAT must be funded with cash, income-producing property, or other assets that can easily be distributed to the grantor to support the annuity. For example, shares of stock can easily be distributed to the grantor, while an undivided interest in real estate is more cumbersome to value and distribute. Because the GRAT is a grantor trust, no realization of income will occur on the distribution of appreciated property to the grantor to satisfy the annuity payment. The GRAT must provide that the required annuity payments cannot be made by a note, other debt instrument, option, or similar financial arrangement

[f] Naming Settlor as Trustee

There is no legal prohibition or tax disadvantage to naming the settlor as the trustee of a GRAT. However, some attorneys believe that if someone other than the settlor is appointed as the trustee, the settlor is more likely to appreciate the irrevocable character of the trust and to understand that, by transferring assets to the trust, he or she is surrendering ownership and control of the assets.

The remainder beneficiaries of a GRAT will often be the settlor's adult children. When this is the case, and the settlor is not named as the trustee, one of the children will often be a good choice to serve as the trustee.

[2] FORM

Grantor Retained Annuity Trust (GRAT)

[ Name of trust, if desired, e.g., JOHN K. SMITH ANNUITY TRUST ]

TRUST AGREEMENT

Article 1: Creation of Trust

Section 1.01. Parties. This trust agreement is made by [identify settlor, e.g., John K. Smith of Smalltown, California], as settlor, and [identify trustee, e.g., Arthur J. Smith, of Smalltown, California], as trustee. The settlor hereby transfers and assigns to the trustee certain assets (the "trust estate"), in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

Section 1.02. Name of Trust. The name of the trust created by this instrument is the [name of trust, e.g., John K. Smith Annuity Trust].

Section 1.03. Purpose of Trust. The settlor intends by this instrument to create a trust that qualifies as a "grantor retained annuity trust" within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 2702(b)(1) and the regulations issued thereunder, as they may be amended from time to time, and the provisions of this instrument must be interpreted to carry out that intention. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, any power granted to the trustee, the exercise of which might cause the trust not to satisfy those requirements or which would jeopardize the trust's status as a grantor retained annuity trust, must be deemed not to exist. Any provisions of this instrument that would disqualify the trust as a grantor retained annuity trust are void to the extent necessary to avoid such a disqualification.

Section 1.04. Effective Date. This instrument is effective on the date the settlor signs it, and transfers and delivers to the trustee the property described in Schedule A that is attached to this instrument and by this reference made a part of this instrument.

Article 2: Trust Estate

Section 2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All assets subject to this instrument from time to time are referred to as the "trust estate," and must be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

Section 2.02. Trust Assets. The trustee must hold, administer, and distribute the property described in Schedule A, and the income and proceeds attributable to this property, in accordance with the provisions of this instrument.

2.03. Additions to Trust Prohibited. The trustee may not accept any additions to the trust.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlor

Section 3.01. Trust Irrevocable; Limited Power of Amendment by Trustee. The trust is irrevocable. However, the trustee has the power, acting alone, to amend the trust in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies and continues to qualify as a grantor retained annuity trust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 2702(b) and the regulations issued thereunder, as they may be amended from time to time.

Article 4: Distribution of Income and Principal

[If annuity amount is based on percentage of fair market value of trust property, use the following:]

Section 4.01. Payment of Annuity Amount. Until the settlor's interest in the trust is terminated as provided in Section 4.08, the trustee must pay to or for the benefit of the settlor each taxable year of the trust an "annuity amount" equal to [specify percentage] percent of the initial net fair market value of the property transferred to the trustee on the establishment of the trust. The trustee must pay the annuity amount in cash or in kind, or partly in each. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount must be added to the principal. Issuance of a note, other debt instrument, option, or other similar financial arrangement, directly or indirectly, in satisfaction of the annuity amount does not constitute payment of the annuity amount.

[Or, if annuity amount is fixed dollar amount, use the following:]

Section 4.01. Payment of Annuity Amount. Until the settlor's interest in the trust is terminated as provided in Section 4.08, the trustee must pay to or for the benefit of the settlor each taxable year of the trust an "annuity amount" equal to [$specify fixed dollar amount]. The trustee must pay the annuity amount in cash or in kind, or partly in each. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount must be added to the principal. Issuance of a note, other debt instrument, option, or other similar financial arrangement, directly or indirectly, in satisfaction of the annuity amount does not constitute payment of the annuity amount.

[Continue with the following:]

Section 4.02. Frequency of Installment Payments. The trustee [may or must] pay the annuity amount in [monthly or quarterly] or more frequently installments, but in no event less frequently than annually. The trustee may make any December quarterly payment of the annuity amount after the close of the taxable year, as long as the payment is made no later than the date by which the trustee is required to file the federal income tax return of the trust for the taxable year without regard to extensions.

Section 4.03. Payment of Annuity Amounts in Short Years. In the case of a short taxable year, which is for a period of less than 12 months, the annuity amount must be determined by multiplying the annuity amount by a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of days in the taxable year of the trust, and the denominator of which is 365 (or 366 if February 29 is a day included in the subject taxable year of the trust).

Section 4.04. Valuation of Trust Property. In computing the net fair market value of the trust assets, all of the trust's assets and liabilities as of the date of computation must be taken into account without regard to whether particular items are taken into account in determining the income or the principal of the trust. All determinations of net fair market value must be made exclusively by the trustee. The trustee's decision, reached in good faith, is final and binding on all persons interested in the trust. If the net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, the trustee must, in the case of undervaluation, pay to, or in the case of overvaluation, collect from the recipient, or the personal representative of the recipient, an amount equal to the difference between the amount the trustee would have paid if the correct value had been used and the amount the trustee actually paid. Each adjustment must be made within a reasonable period after final determination of the value.

Section 4.05. No Distributions Other Than to Settlor. Notwithstanding any state law existing or enacted after the date the settlor signs this instrument, no distributions of the trust may be made to or for the benefit of any person other than the settlor during the period of the settlor's interest in the trust as specified in Section 4.08. However, an amount is not deemed distributed to or for the benefit of any person other than the settlor if the amount is transferred for full and adequate consideration, used to pay expenses properly chargeable to the trust estate, or distributed to an applicable family member.

Section 4.06. No Commutations. Commutation (prepayment) of the settlor's interest is prohibited.

Section 4.07. Reimbursement of Settlor for Income Tax Liability. The trustee must reimburse the settlor for the excess of the settlor's personal income tax liability over the settlor's personal income tax liability computed as if the trust were not a grantor trust.

Section 4.08. Termination of Settlor's Interest in Trust. The settlor's interest in the trust terminates on the date that is [number of years, e.g., 10] years after the effective date of this instrument, or on the settlor's death, whichever occurs first.

[If trust estate will revert to settlor's estate on settlor's death, use the following:]

Section 4.09. Reversion. If the settlor's interest in the trust terminates on the settlor's death, as provided in Section 4.08, the trustee must distribute all of the trust estate then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the settlor's estate.

[Or, if trust estate will be distributed to persons appointed in settlor's will on settlor's death, use the following:]

Section 4.09. Reversion. If the settlor's interest in the trust terminates on the settlor's death, as provided in Section 4.08, the trustee must distribute all of the trust estate then remaining, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the settlor's estate, that the settlor appoints by the settlor's valid last will specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. The trustee may rely on any instrument admitted to probate as the settlor's last will in carrying out the terms of this power of appointment and is not liable for any good-faith act in reliance on that will, even if for any reason it is later determined to be invalid with respect to its purported exercise of this power of appointment. If probate is not otherwise required or instituted, the trustee may rely on any will that on its face appears to be the last validly exercised will of the settlor. If the trustee does not receive notice of the existence of a will of the settlor within [number, e.g., six] months after the settlor's death, the trustee may distribute the trust assets and income as if this power of appointment had not been exercised and, in this event, is conclusively presumed to have acted in good faith, even if a valid will is later discovered. Any property subject to this power of appointment that is not effectively appointed by the settlor must be distributed to _____ [identify revocable living trust, e.g., the John k. Smith, Revocable Trust, dated March 31, 2004], as it may be amended, if that trust is then in existence; and, if it is not then in existence, to the settlor's issue [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

[Continue with the following:]

[If remainder interest is to be divided in equal shares and distributed to beneficiaries outright, use the following:]

Section 4.10. Remainder.

(a) _____ [If trust provides for reversion of trust assets to settlor's estate on settlor's death before end of trust term, insert: If the settlor's interest in the trust terminates on the date that is _____ (number of years, e.g., 10) years after the date of execution of this instrument as provided in Section 4.08 or, if trust does not provide for reversion of trust assets to settlor's estate on settlor's death before end of trust term, insert: When the settlor's interest in the trust terminates as provided in Section 4.08], the trustee must divide the trust property into as many shares of equal market value as are necessary to create one share for each of the following persons who is then living, or who is not then living but leaves issue then living: [names, e.g., John K. Smith II, Susan Smith Wheelwright, and Norman Smith].

(b) Each share created for a person named in subsection (a) who is then living must be distributed outright to that person.

(c) Each share created for a person named in subsection (a) who is not then living but who leaves issue then living must be divided among those issue [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. The share of each issue who has attained the age of [number of years, e.g., 21] years must be distributed outright to that issue. The share of each issue who has not yet attained this age must be held, administered, and distributed in a separate trust for that issue.

(d) If there are no living persons who may take the trust property under this section, the trustee must distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to [specify alternative disposition, e.g., the settlor's heirs or the Marin County chapter of the Anonymous Artists of America].

[Or, if remainder interest is to be distributed to one named beneficiary outright, use the following:]

Section 4.10. Remainder.

(a) _____ [If trust provides for reversion of trust assets to settlor's estate on settlor's death before end of trust term, insert: If the settlor's interest in the trust terminates on the date that is _____ (number of years, e.g., 10) years after the date of execution of this instrument as provided in Section 4.08 or, if trust does not provide for reversion of trust assets to settlor's estate on settlor's death before end of trust term, insert: When the settlor's interest in the trust terminates as provided in Section 4.08], the trustee must distribute the assets of the trust outright to [name, e.g., Susan Smith Wheelwright].

(b) If [name, e.g., Susan Smith Wheelwright] is not then living, the assets of the trust must be divided among the issue of [name, e.g., Susan Smith Wheelwright] [in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) or in equal shares regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. (d) If there are no living persons who may take the trust property under this section, the trustee must distribute any undistributed balance of the trust property outright to [specify alternative disposition, e.g., the settlor's heirs or the Marin County chapter of the Anonymous Artists of America].

[Continue with the following:]

Section 4.11. Trustee's Power to Determine Income and Principal. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this instrument, the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and income of any trust under this instrument and the apportionment and allocation of receipts, expenses, and other charges between principal and income are governed by the provisions of the Uniform Principal and Income Act (Probate Code Section 16320 et seq.). The trustee has the discretion to determine any matter not provided for either in this instrument or in the Act.

Section 4.12. Spendthrift Clause. The interests of the beneficiaries under this instrument are not transferable by voluntary or involuntary assignment, or by operation of law. These interests are free from the claims of creditors and from attachment, execution, bankruptcy, and other legal process, to the maximum extent permitted by law.

Article 5: Trustee

Section 5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, the following, in order of priority indicated, shall be trustee: [indicate name and address of each successor trustee, e.g., first, Alexander W. Smeed, who resides at 123 First Avenue, Smalltown, California; then Bank of Berkeley, West Oakland Branch].

Section 5.02. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" is deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee, and includes alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

Section 5.03. Waiver of Bond. No bond or undertaking may be required of any individual who serves as a trustee under this instrument.

Section 5.04. Resignation of Trustee. Any trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, as least [specify number of days, e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the settlor, if living, to any other trustee then acting, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor trustee. A resignation is effective on written acceptance of the trust by the successor trustee.

Section 5.05. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trusts created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee has all of the following powers, in addition to all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, as long as the trustee considers this retention is in the trust's best interests or in furtherance of the settlor's goals in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act (Probate Code Section 16045 et seq.).

(b) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the share or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(c) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purposes, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the trust term; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the trust term, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

(d) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.

(e) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.

(f) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing part walls or buildings, erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.

(g) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any trust assets or interest therein.

(h) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including, but not limited to, attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustee in the management of the trusts created under this instrument, and compensate them from the trust property.

(i) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations; deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of these powers.

(j) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(k) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, including one acting as trustee under this instrument, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the trust term, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure payment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(l) Secure and maintain, at the trust's expense, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability to third persons.

(m) Enforce any obligation owed to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as property at any sale under that instrument.

(n) Pay or contest any claim against the trust, and release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust, or compromise or settle any such claim, in whole or in part.

(o) At trust expense, prosecute and defend actions, claims, or proceedings for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents the trustee deems advisable.

Section 5.06. Trustee's Good Faith Actions Binding. Every action taken in good faith by the trustee is conclusive and binding on all persons interested in the property of the trust.

Section 5.07. No Power to Terminate Trust. Notwithstanding the powers granted to the trustee in this instrument, the trustee does not have the power to terminate the trust before the termination of the settlor's interest in the trust as provided in Section 4.08.

Section 5.08. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this instrument must be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

Section 5.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument does not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trusts.

Section 5.10. Notice to Trustee. Until the trustee receives written notice of any death or other event on which the right to payments from the trust may depend, the trustee incurs no liability for disbursements made in good faith to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event.

Section 5.11. Duty to Account. The trustee must render accounts at least annually, at the termination of the trust, and on a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

Section 6.01. Perpetuities Savings Clause. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, every trust created by this instrument must terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the last survivor of [designate measuring life or lives, e.g., the settlor's spouse and issue] who are alive at the creation of the trust. If the trust is terminated under this section, the trustee must distribute all of the principal and undistributed income of the trust to the income beneficiaries of the trust in the proportion in which they are entitled to receive income immediately before the termination.

Section 6.02. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and must be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

Section 6.03. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision must be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

Section 6.04. Taxable Year. The taxable year of the trust is the calendar year.

Section 6.05. Governing Law. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, are governed by the laws of the state of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary. However, in any conflict with Internal Revenue Code Section 2702(b)(1), the treasury regulations promulgated thereunder, or any other federal legislative or regulatory requirements for the qualification of this trust as a grantor retained annuity trust, those laws shall govern.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 73 FUNDING A REVOCABLE TRUST

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

Scope

Margaret Johnson* Hazel Langen** Reviewed by James V. Quillinann*** Scope

This chapter is a practical guide to the initial start-up and funding of revocable inter vivos trusts. It discusses the importance of funding, the issues that arise in funding the trust, and the mechanics of transferring various types of assets from the settlor(s) to the trust. The transaction guide provides a step-by-step guide to transferring particular types of assets to a trust. The forms include deeds and other documents to be used to transfer title from the settlors to the trust.

This chapter focuses on the initial funding of the living trust. It does not deal with issues of trust division and asset allocation that arise on the death of a settlor, nor with postmortem planning issues involving marital deduction trusts. However, many of the forms in this chapter may be used or adapted for postmortem transfers.

The creation of inter vivos trusts is discussed in Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms . Basic estate planning considerations are discussed in Ch. 60, Estate Planning .

§ 73.10 The Trust Administration Process

[1] Importance

Current trends in California estate planning reflect a significant shift from the use of wills to the use of the revocable inter vivos ("living") trust as the primary estate planning device. The reasons for this shift--primarily probate avoidance, continuity of administration, and tax flexibility--are discussed in Ch. 60, Estate Planning, and Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms. As a result of this shift, the procedures for starting up and administering inter vivos trusts have taken on an increasingly greater importance in the typical estate planning practice.

The successful implementation of a living trust does not end with execution of the trust instrument. In fact, execution of the trust instrument marks the beginning, rather than the end, of the trust administration process [see [2], below]. Attorneys who prepare living trusts need to be familiar with these procedures so they can help their clients get their trusts "up and running" after the trust instrument itself has been prepared and executed.

[2] Contrasted With Probate Administration

The drafting and execution of a will is a relatively simple procedure and, in the majority of cases, the testator is not required to take any ancillary steps with respect to his or her assets. After execution of the will, it remains essentially dormant until the settlor's death, at which point the judicially-supervised process of estate administration and distribution begins.

In contrast, the administration of a trust is an ongoing process that involves appreciably more time and effort during the lifetime of the settlor. After a trust instrument is executed, steps must be taken to permit the trust to function as an independent entity, and the assets that will be held in the trust must be transferred to the trust. Thereafter, the trustee must manage the trust assets, make investment decisions, and distribute income and principal to the beneficiaries, in accordance with the trust instrument [see Prob. Code §§ 16000-16465 (statutory provisions governing trust administration)].

In contrast to the administration of an estate after the death of a testator, a trust normally operates essentially outside the judicial system. The powers and duties of trustees are spelled out in some detail in the Trust Law [see Prob. Code §§ 16000-16249 (powers and duties of trustees)]. The Probate Code grants the superior court jurisdiction over the internal affairs of trusts [see Prob. Code §§ 17000-17006] and authorizes trustees and beneficiaries to petition the court to determine matters with respect to the existence or internal affairs of a trust [see Prob. Code § 17200]. Nevertheless, unless someone concerned with the trust takes affirmative steps to involve a court, the administration of a trust proceeds on its own without court involvement, much in the same manner as the day-to-day affairs of a corporation or partnership.

§ 73.11 Roles of Attorney and Client

[1] Settlers as Trustees

When joint settlers create an inter vivos trust, they usually will name themselves as trustees and continue to serve in that capacity until one of them dies or becomes incapacitated. For purposes of discussing the start-up procedures of the trust, this chapter generally assumes that the settlers will serve as trustees at the inception of the trust. The settlor/trustees continue to be referred to in this chapter as the "settlor(s)," except when discussing matters solely relating to their capacity as trustees.

[2] Attorney's Role

The degree to which the attorney will be required to participate in the start-up process will be determined to a great extent by the wishes and sophistication of the settlers, and the trustee, if the trustee is someone other than the settlor(s).

Many steps in the trust start-up process do not inherently require the participation of an attorney. For example, the creation of new bank accounts in the name of the trust, and the transfer of assets in existing bank accounts to the new trust accounts can easily be performed by a nonlawyer without any special experience or expertise. Similarly, retitling motor vehicles, boats, and similar assets is within most people's ability. On the other hand, attorney participation in a conveyance of real property is ordinarily advisable, since an attorney will ordinarily prepare, or supervise the preparation of, a deed conveying real property to a trust [for discussion of conveyances of real property to a trust, see § 73.13]. In between there is a "gray area" encompassing such assets as securities, mutual funds, and other investments. Some clients may have sufficient skill and experience to make these transfers, while others will not.

Transferring assets to a trust can be time-consuming. If the settlers have numerous and/or diverse assets, the attorney should caution them that having an attorney perform all the start-up procedures will be expensive. To the extent that the settlers are able to perform start-up procedures themselves, they may be able to save some cost as well as gain practical experience in the operation of the trust. In some cases, however, this approach may be impractical and the attorney may have to do virtually everything for the settlers to get the trust up and running.

[3] Involving the Settlor

Involving the settlors in the start-up and funding process is especially important when the settlors are also acting as trustees. This approach allows the settlor to learn first hand how the trust works, and to learn about the practical application of the theory behind a trust to particular assets.

The settlor-trustee who participates in the initial transfer of assets will also be better prepared when other assets are added to the trust. At the very least, such a settlor-trustee will recognize the importance of properly adding an asset to the trust, and will know when it is important to contact an attorney about an addition. At best, such a settlor-trustee will be able to accomplish future additions to the trust without needlessly involving the attorney.

[4] Documentation and Follow-Up

One of the greatest dangers to a well-conceived estate plan is that the client will fail to take the steps necessary to implement it. Failure to fund the trust or to transfer particular assets to it can defeat the tax or dispositive goals of the estate plan. Failure to transfer assets, or to clearly document asset transfers, can also lead to litigation over the ultimate disposition of the property, especially when the beneficiaries under the settlor's will are not the same, or do not take in the same proportions, as the beneficiaries under the trust. Thus, it is important that the attorney not only draft the trust instrument, but also that he or she take the follow up steps to assure that the trust is fully funded.

If the settlor rather than the attorney is to be responsible for transferring particular assets to the trust, the attorney should make sure that the client understands the importance of doing so, and that there is no misunderstanding between the settlor and the attorney as to who is responsible for taking the particular steps. Thus, the attorney should send the settlor a set of written instructions specifically noting assets that the attorney will not be handling and stating that the settlor is responsible for taking the necessary steps to transfer those assets to the trust.

Follow-up is also important, to make sure that the settlor has actually done what he or she needs to do. The attorney should schedule a review with the settlor approximately 60 days after the date the trust is executed. This allows enough time for the transfer of most, if not all, of the assets.

Once all assets that were intended to be held in the trust have been transferred to the trust, the attorney's involvement in the initial implementation of the trust will end. If any asset has not been transferred, the attorney should take appropriate steps to have that asset transferred to the trust.

CHAPTER 73 FUNDING A REVOCABLE TRUST
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 73.12

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

§ 73.12 Formalities of Asset Transfer

[1] Importance

The trustee has no legal authority to administer assets that have not been transferred to the trust. If there is an assumption that the assets are not in trust, a court-supervised probate administration of those assets may be required on the death of the settlor. The focus of the funding process, therefore, should be to clearly document the asset transfer, so that there will be absolutely no question after the settlor's death that the asset is in fact held by the trust. Accordingly, any formalities required to effect a transfer of the asset should be followed. The formalities that should be observed for particular types of assets are discussed in detail in the remainder of this chapter.

[2] Assets Listed In Trust But Not Formally Transferred to Trust

Trust instruments commonly list the assets that will initially be held in the trust, either in the trust instrument itself or, more commonly, in a schedule attached to the trust instrument. In some cases, the act of listing an asset in the trust instrument may be sufficient, by itself, to transfer the asset to the trust.

In Estate of Heggstad [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 ], a settlor created a revocable inter vivos trust by a trust declaration. A list of the initial trust property, described in the declaration as Schedule A, was attached to the declaration and incorporated in it. Schedule A included a description of the settlor's personal residence by its street address, and as a partnership interest rather than a cotenancy. The settlor never formally transferred the residence to the trust by deed or otherwise. After the settlor's death, a dispute arose between the successor trustee and the heirs of the settlor's estate as to whether the residence had been effectively transferred to the trust or still remained subject to disposition as part of the probate estate. In holding that the property was part of the trust, the court specifically referred to language in Prob. Code § 15200(a) that permits a trust to be created by a "declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee." The court held that Schedule A was part of the settlor's "declaration" and that since it included a description of the settlor's personal residence, it was effective to make the residence subject to the trust even though the residence had never been formally conveyed to the trust [ Estate of Heggstad (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947-951, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 ]. In a similar case, the court held that simply listing the settlors' residence as a trust asset on a schedule attached to the trust declaration was sufficient to transfer the property to a trust, and that it was not necessary to record a deed from the settlors to the trust or to the trustees, or to record the trust [ Estate of Powell (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1443, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 ] .

Heggstad and Powell appear to stand for the proposition that a trust declaration by a settlor-trustee is legally effective to transfer property specifically described in the declaration to the trust, even when that property is not formally transferred by deed or other conveyance. This provides an important safety valve for settlors who neglect to take standard follow-up steps to implement an inter vivos trust. It is important to emphasize, however, that Heggstad and Powell should be viewed only as a safety valve, and do not eliminate the need to formally document the transfer of assets to the trust. Attorneys who rely on the declaration alone to transfer title run the risk of creating substantial headaches after the settlor's death, and conceivably put themselves at risk for malpractice liability if anything goes wrong later. One practical problem is simply getting transfer agents, title companies, and other third parties to accept assets as trust assets without a formal transfer document.

Still another problem with relying on a listing in the trust schedule is that the scope of Heggstad and Powell is uncertain. The cases may not be applicable to all situations involving assets not formally transferred to a trust. For example, the courts in Heggstad and Powell did not speculate on whether the result would have been the same if the trusts in question had been created by a trust agreement rather than by a declaration [for discussion of the distinction between trust agreements and trust declarations, and the effect of Heggstad on the use of these instruments, see §§ 70.11[3], 70.200[1][c]]. Questions also exist as to whether Heggstad and Powell apply to assets in other states or assets held in certificate form. Litigation may be the only way to resolve Heggstad and Powell issues. And, of course, Heggstad and Powell are wholly inapplicable to a declaration by a trustee other than the settlor. There is no reason to put the trust and trustees to this needless risk and expense, and for this reason estate planners universally recommend formally documenting asset transfers.

[3] Transmutation

[a] In General

Care must be taken when a revocable trust instrument is drafted, and again when the revocable trust is funded, to make sure that any transmutations of property from separate property to community property, or from community property to separate property, intended by married persons are properly documented. Any transmutation of property made by spouses on or after January 1, 1985, is invalid unless made in writing by an "express declaration" that is made, joined in, consented to, or accepted by the spouse whose interest in the property is adversely affected [Fam. Code § 852(a), (d); for law applicable before Jan. 1, 1985, see discussion in § 60.12[5][c]]. Gifts between spouses of clothing, jewelry, and other tangible items of a personal nature, and of a value that is not substantial under the circumstances of the marriage, are not covered by this requirement [Fam. Code § 852(c)]. However, all other property, both real and personal, is subject to this requirement [Fam. Code § 852(a)].

[b] Holding in *Estate of MacDonald

In Estate of MacDonald, the California Supreme Court held that to satisfy the statutory requirement of an "express declaration," a writing must expressly state that the characterization or ownership of the property is being changed [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 273, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ; In re Marriage of Starkman (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 659, 663-665, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 639 (clause in trust agreement providing that property transferred to trust is community property unless transferor spouse identifies it as separate property was insufficient to transmute husband's separate property, which he failed to identify as separate property, to community property)]. Use of extrinsic evidence to prove that the writing effected a transmutation is precluded [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 264, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ] . There is no requirement that the word "transmutation," or any other particular term, be used in the declaration, although the words "transmutation," "community property," or "separate property" might be used in particular cases [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ]. The declaration may simply state that the spouse whose interest is adversely affected "gives" to the other spouse "any interest" he or she may have in the property affected [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ].

There is no exception from the "express declaration" requirement for partial performance of an agreement to transmute property [ In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1096, 1100, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471, 116 P.3d 1152 ]. Fam. Code § 852(a) is stated in the negative--that is, an agreement to change the character of marital property, is not valid unless it is in writing, contains an express declaration by which the transmutation is made, and is accepted in some fashion by the adversely affected spouse--as though all intendments weigh against finding compliance with the requirements for transmutation in the usual case. Furthermore, no exception to the requirement of an "express" written declaration appears in Fam. Code § 852(a). The California Supreme Court has concluded that these features suggest the legislature envisioned a standard for transmutions from which married couples could not freely depart [ In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1096, 1104, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471, 116 P.3d 1152 ]. The writing requirement of Fam. Code § 852(a) cannot be satisfied when there is no writing at all about the subject property, and when a transmutation would have to be inferred from acts surrounding the parties' purported agreement [ In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1096, 1107, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471, 116 P.3d 1152 ].

The Supreme Court's holding in Estate of MacDonald is of critical importance for estate planning attorneys. Many estate plans for married persons involve at least some rearrangement of the form in which the spouses hold title to their property. This rearrangement need not take the dramatic form of retitling the deed to the spouses' family home. It may consist of such seemingly innocuous actions as designating beneficiaries for pension plans, 401(k) accounts, IRAs, Keogh plans, annuity plans, and life insurance policies [for discussion of these kinds of retirement benefits, see § 73.27]. In Estate of MacDonald, for example, the transmutation consisted of changing the designated beneficiaries under an IRA account held by the husband so that his revocable trust was designated as the beneficiary. It was conceded that the IRA was community property. The wife simply signed a card provided by the trustee of the IRA consenting to the new beneficiary designation. The husband's children by a former marriage were the principal beneficiaries of his revocable trust. The Supreme Court held that the wife's signature on the card did not meet the statutory requirements of an "express declaration" and thus was invalid as an attempted transmutation. After the wife's death, she was held to still hold a community property interest in the IRA and it formed a part of her probate estate [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 266-267, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ].

In In re Marriage of Starkman, the court held that a clause in a trust agreement, which provided that the property transferred to the trust was community property unless the transferor spouse identified it as separate property, was insufficient to create a transmutation to community property of the husband's separate property which he transferred to the trust and did not identify as separate property [ In re Marriage of Starkman (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 659, 663-665, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 639 ]. Neither this provision, nor any other provision of the trust agreement, unambiguously established that the husband was effecting a change of ownership of his separate property by transferring it to the trust without designating it as his separate property. A transmutation might have been held to occur if the trust agreement had provided that any property a spouse transferred to the trust "becomes" or is "changed into" community property or if the trust agreement had provided that a purpose of the trust was to effect the transmutation of the parties' separate estates to community property [ In re Marriage of Starkman (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 659, 665, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 639 ].

If any aspect of an estate plan has the effect of depriving either spouse of property rights by changing the characterization of property from separate to community or community to separate, care must be taken to observe the transmutation requirements enunciated in Estate of MacDonald. The holding in this case has several implications. First, it makes clear that an oral transmutation of property, if made on or after January 1, 1985, is invalid and unenforceable [see Fam. Code § 852(e)]. Any transmutation made after that date must, at the minimum, be made in writing [Fam. Code § 852; Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ]. Second, any deed or other instrument reciting that married persons hold title to real property in "joint tenancy" (or in some other form of holding property that is inconsistent with community property) does not meet the requirements for a transmutation agreement because it is not "made, joined in, consented to, or accepted by the spouse whose interest in the property is adversely affected" within the requirements of MacDonald [see Fam. Code § 852(a)]. Third, the language of any writing that is claimed to transmute property is not an "express declaration" unless it "contains language which expressly states that the characterization or ownership of the property is being changed" [ Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ] .

It is important to keep in mind, however, that a rearrangement of property owned by spouses will not always have the effect of a transmutation. In Estate of Peterson, the Court of Appeal drew a distinction between an intent to transmute property, which is subject to the MacDonald requirements, and an intent merely to transfer property without probate when one of the spouses dies, which is not subject to MacDonald [see Estate of Petersen (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1742, 1750, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449 ; see also Prob. Code § 5022(a) (consent of spouse to nonprobate transfer not a transmutation of spouse's interest in the property)]. For a discussion of that case, and the distinctions between transmutations and nonprobate transfers, see § 60.12[5][c].

[c] Codicil as Transmutation Agreement

One way of meeting the transmutation requirements set forth in Estate of MacDonald [see Fam. Code § 852(a); see also Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 272, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 , and discussion in [b], above] is for spouses to execute codicils containing an "express declaration" that meets the MacDonald test. If either spouse has any interest in a life insurance policy or retirement plan that the other spouse wishes to transfer to some person other than the surviving spouse while the surviving spouse is still living, the codicil of the first spouse to die can simply give the surviving spouse any interest in the policy or retirement plan the first spouse may have at the time of death. The court in MacDonald held that words by which one spouse "gives" the other spouse any interest the first spouse may have in a particular account or asset will meet the statutory requirements of an "express declaration" [see Fam. Code § 852(a); Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262, 273, 272 Cal. Rptr. 153, 794 P.2d 911 ] . For a codicil that will accomplish this purpose, see § 62.05.

 CHAPTER 73 FUNDING A REVOCABLE TRUST
 PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 73.13

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

§ 73.13 Real Property

[1] Conveyance by Deed

Real property includes land, and generally whatever is affixed to land, incidental or appurtenant to land, or immovable by law [see Civ. Code § 658]. Real property title is conveyed to a trust by recording a deed transferring title from the settlor or settlors to the trustee [see Civ. Code § 1092 (statutory form for grant deed)]. Either a quitclaim deed [see [2], below] or a grant deed [see [3], below] will suffice to transfer California real property to an inter vivos trust.

Real property conveyances are discussed in detail in Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording. The discussion in this section briefly highlights the relevant considerations for the convenience of the reader.

The granting parties should sign the deed before a notary public. Although acknowledgment is not essential to the validity of a deed [see Civ. Code § 1091], it is a prerequisite to recording [Gov. Code § 27287]. The deed must include a declaration of the amount of tax due, signed by the grantor or the grantor's agent [Rev. & Tax Code § 11933; see Rev. & Tax Code § 11911]. The assessor's parcel number (APN) must be indicated on the deed [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 11911.1]. An address where the deed can be returned following recordation must also be provided [Gov. Code § 27321.5].

Consideration is not an essential requirement of the instrument [Civ. Code § 1040; Freeman v. LaMorte (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 670, 673, 307 P.2d 734].

[2] Quitclaim Deed

A quitclaim deed has no implied warranty of title. A quitclaim deed uses the words, "quitclaim, release and remise" as opposed to "grant and convey," which is the language found in all other deeds. Therefore, the quitclaim deed implies only that the grantor releases to the grantee whatever interest he or she has in the property at the time of execution, without any implied warranty [ Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v. Roemer (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 613, 91 Cal. Rptr. 112; Southern Pac. Co. v. Dore (1917) 34 Cal. App. 521, 168 P. 147]. The quitclaim deed is designed to eliminate concern over potential clouds on title by conveying to the grantee only whatever estate the grantor actually possesses in the property.

[3] Grant Deed

The grant deed is the method most commonly used to convey fee title to real property. The grant deed uses the term "grant" as the operative word of conveyance [see Civ. Code §§ 1092, 1113] and has two implied warranties [Civ. Code § 1113]:

- First, that before the execution of the conveyance, the grantor has not conveyed the same estate, or any right, title, or interest therein to any person other than the grantee; and
- Second, that the estate conveyed is, at the time of the execution of the conveyance, free from encumbrances done, made or suffered by the grantor, or any person claiming under the grantor.

A grant deed also conveys to the grantee all after-acquired title of the grantor. This means that if the grantor's title was defective or something less than the grantor purported to convey, and the grantor acquires a more perfect title after the conveyance to the grantee, then the additional interest passes automatically to the grantee under the original deed [Civ. Code § 1106].

[4] Trust Transfer Deed

"Trust transfer deeds" are special deed forms developed by some title companies for use in transferring real property to an inter vivos trust. The trust transfer deed is a form of grant deed and, as such, contains the same implied warranties as any other grant deed [see [3], above]. The trust transfer deed can be used to transfer title to real property into a revocable inter vivos trust, or to make a variety of other trust-related conveyances, including transfers from a trustee to a successor holding title to trust assets.

[5] Warranty Deed

A warranty deed contains express covenants, typically including a covenant of warranty, a covenant for quiet possession or enjoyment, a covenant of seisin, a covenant of right to convey, a covenant against encumbrances, and a covenant for further assurance. Warranty deeds are seldom used in California, because buyers rely on title insurance for protection against loss resulting from title problems. For further discussion of warranty deeds, see "Warranty Deeds" in the Legal Background to Ch. 27, Deeds and Conveyancing; see also California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 80, Deeds and Transfer of Title (Matthew Bender).

[6] Deed Requirements

Deeds must be in writing and signed by the grantor in order to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, which requires that any transfer of an interest in real property (with a few minor exceptions) must be in writing and signed by the parties who are to be bound by the transfer [Civ. Code § 1091]. A grantor may sign by making his or her mark, but a signature by mark usually must be accompanied by the signatures of witnesses who can attest to the grantor's execution of the deed [see Civ. Code § 14].

The deed should identify the trust as the grantee by specifying the name(s) of the trustees, the name of the trust, and the date of execution of the trust instrument. Like other deeds, a deed conveying property to a trustee must be notarized and recorded in the county where the property is located [Civ. Code §§ 1169, 1170]. For more detailed discussion of the content and requirements relating to deeds, see Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording .

[7] Loans on Real Property

[a] Existing Loans

Before any real property is transferred to a trust, the attorney should determine whether the transfer will have any effect on any existing loans on the real property. A review of the loan documents to determine the effect of title insurance and due-on-sale or transfer clauses is recommended.

The Garn-St. Germain Depository Institution Act of 1982 prohibits lenders from enforcing due-on-sale clauses when residential real property is transferred into an inter vivos trust in which the borrower is and remains the beneficiary and occupant, unless the borrower refuses to provide the lender with reasonable means acceptable to the lender by which the lender will be assured of timely notice of any subsequent transfer of the beneficial interest or change in occupancy [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)]. However, the protection afforded by these authorities does not extend to the transfer of commercial real property to an inter vivos trust.

Title insurance is discussed in Ch. 26A, Title Insurance. Due-on-sale clauses and other related encumbrances are discussed in greater detail in § 25A.41.

[b] Ability to Refinance Loan

The clients should be advised that some lenders will not finance or refinance a real estate loan in the name of the trustees. If the clients intend to take out loans against the property in the future, or to refinance an existing loan, it may be necessary to prepare a deed to transfer title back to the settlors as individuals until the financing is approved.

[8] New Acquisitions

When settlors acquire any new real estate assets (including ranch property and time-share interests) after creation of the trust, they should be advised to title the deed in the trust name. Settlors should also be so advised at the time the trust is executed.

[9] Property Contaminated With Hazardous Waste

Federal environmental laws applicable to trustees include the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA) [42 U.S.C. §§ 9601-9675], which imposes strict liability for investigation and cleanup of hazardous waste sites. CERCLA does not differentiate between persons who own contaminated property on their own behalf and those who hold contaminated property in a fiduciary capacity [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)]. Therefore, although the issue is not fully settled, and various complex issues may exist, there is a possibility that the trustee may be liable, under certain circumstances, for cleanup costs from personal assets as well as assets of the trust estate [see City of Phoenix, Arizona v. Garbage Services Co. (D. Ariz. 1993) 827 F. Supp. 600 ; but see 57 Fed. Reg. 18344, 18349 (EPA staff comments relating to trustee liability)].

Another danger is that the assets of a trust containing contaminated real property may be depleted if the trust itself is liable for the cleanup costs [see 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a) (present owners liable for cleanup costs)]. Cleanup costs may be substantial and might conceivably exceed the value of the property itself. For this reason, it is important that the settlors attempt to determine whether real property is contaminated before transferring that property to a trust. If real property is in fact contaminated, it may be unsuitable as a trust asset.

CERCLA liability is discussed in greater detail in Ch. 33, Contamination Considerations in Real Property Transactions, § 33.10. Other statutes creating potential liability are also discussed in Ch. 33.

[10] Real Property Tax Issues

Before transferring real property to a trust, the attorney should review applicable state laws regarding real property transfers that constitute a "change in ownership" for purposes of any applicable real property taxes.

In California, as a general rule, the transfer of real property results in a reassessment of the real property for property tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 50, 110.1(a)(2)(A); see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 60 ("change in ownership" defined), 61 (transfers specifically included in definition of "change in ownership"); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(a) (transfer by trustor or any other person of real property into trust is change in ownership of property at time of transfer)].

However, certain transfers of real property are exempt from reassessment [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 62 (transfers excluded from statutory definition of "change in ownership"), 63 ("change of ownership" does not include transfers between spouses), 63.1(a)(1) ("change in ownership" does not include transfers between parents and children)]. The following transfers in trust do not constitute changes in ownership:

- The transfer of real property by the trustor to an irrevocable trust in which the trustor is the sole present beneficiary of the trust [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(1)(A)]. However, a change in ownership of trust property occurs to the extent that persons other than the trustor are or become present beneficiaries of the trust unless otherwise excluded from change in ownership. If the trustee of an irrevocable trust has total discretion ("sprinkle power") to distribute trust income or property to a number of potential beneficiaries, the real property in the trust is subject to change in ownership because the trustee could potentially distribute it to a non-excludable beneficiary, unless all potential beneficiaries have an available exclusion from change in ownership [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(1)(A)].
- The transfer of real property or ownership interests in a legal entity holding interests in real property by the trustor to an irrevocable trust in which the trustor retains the reversion and the beneficial interest of any person other than the trustor does not exceed 12 years in duration [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(1)(B)].
- The transfer of an ownership interest in a legal entity holding an interest in real property by the trustor into an irrevocable trust in which the trustor is the sole present beneficiary or to a trust in which the trustor retains the reversion. However, a change in ownership of the real property held by the legal entity occurs if Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 61(j), 64(c), or 64(d) applies because the change in ownership laws governing interests in legal entities apply regardless of whether these interests are held by a trust [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(1)(C)].
- The transfer of real property or an ownership interest in a legal entity holding an interest in real property by the trustor to a trust that is revocable by the trustor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(2)]. A change in ownership occurs, however, at the time a revocable trust becomes irrevocable, unless the trustor remains or becomes the sole present beneficiary or unless otherwise excluded from change in ownership [Rev. & Tax. Code § 61(h); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(2)].
- The transfer is one to which the interspousal exclusion applies [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(3)]. The interspousal exclusion applies to any interspousal transfer, including transfers to a trustee for the beneficial use of a spouse, or the surviving spouse of a deceased transferor, or by a trustee of such a trust to the spouse of the trustor, and transfers that take effect on the death of a spouse [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63(a), (b)]. A change in ownership of trust property occurs, however, to the extent that persons other than the trustor's spouse are or become present beneficiaries of the trust, unless otherwise excluded from change in ownership [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(3)].
- The transfer is to a trustee for the beneficial use of a registered domestic partner, or the surviving registered domestic partner of a deceased transferor, or by a trustee of such a trust to the registered domestic partner of the trustor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(p)(1) (this exclusion commences with lien date for 2006-07 fiscal year)].

- The transfer is one to which the parent-child or grandparent-grandchild exclusion applies and for which a timely claim has been made as required by law [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1]. A change in ownership of trust property occurs, however, to the extent that persons for whom the parent-child or grandparent-grandchild exclusion is not applicable are or become present beneficiaries of the trust, unless otherwise excluded from change in ownership [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(4)].
- The transfer is to a trust that results in the proportional interests of the beneficiaries in the property remaining the same before and after the transfer [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(5)].
- The transfer is from one trust to another and meets the requirements of one of the transfers described, above [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(b)(6)].

The termination of a trust, or portion of a trust, generally constitutes a change in ownership at the time of termination [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(c)]. However, the following terminations do not constitute changes in ownership:

- A termination that results in the distribution of trust property according to the terms of the trust to a person or entity that received a present interest (either use of or income from the property) when the trust was created, when it became irrevocable, or at some other time. A change in ownership occurs, however, when the remainder or reversionary interest becomes possessory if the holder of that interest is a person or entity other than the present beneficiary, unless otherwise excluded from a change in ownership [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(1)].
- A termination that results from the trustor's exercise of a power of revocation and the property is transferred by the trustee back to the trustor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(2)].
- The trust term did not exceed 12 years in duration and, on termination, the property reverts to the trustor [Rev. & Tax. Code § 62(d); 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(3)].
- The termination results in a transfer to which the interspousal exclusion applies [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(4)].
- The termination results in a transfer to which the parent-child or grandparent-grandchild exclusion applies, and for which a timely claim has been filed as required by law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 63.1; 18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(5)].
- The termination results in the transfer to the beneficiaries who receive the same proportional interests in the property that they held before the termination of the trust [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(6)].
- The termination results in the transfer from one trust to another and meets the requirements of one of the terminations described above [18 Cal. Code Reg. § 462.160(d)(7)].

If the settlors own real property located outside California, it is important to contact a qualified local attorney in the relevant state to find out what effect, if any, the proposed transfer would have on the taxation of that property.

§ 73.14 Oil and Gas

[1] Types of Oil and Gas Interests Transferable to Trust

[a] In General

Interests in oil, gas, and minerals may be held in a limited partnership, a royalty trust, or outright. There are five types of oil and gas interests that may be transferred to a revocable trust:

- Mineral leases.
- Working interests.
- Operating interests.
- Overriding royalty interests.
- Production payments.

These interests are discussed briefly in the remainder of this section. For more detailed discussion of oil, gas, and mineral interests, see Ch. 36, Oil and Gas Rights and Leases, Part A and Ch. 36A, Mining Claims, Timber Interests, and Water Rights.

[b] Mineral Leases

Mineral leases are considered real property in some states and personal property in others. Property subject to an unexpired mineral lease is subject to the lease even if it has not produced or has ceased to produce.

The maximum permissible term of a mineral lease, as well as the customs and practices with respect to the terms of such leases, vary from state to state. The maximum permissible duration of an oil, gas, or mineral lease in California is 99 years. After that time the lease becomes unenforceable even if the term specified in the lease has not expired or the condition that would cause termination of the lease has not yet occurred [Civ. Code § 718f]. The owner of real property subject to an unrecorded mineral right may bring an action to terminate the right if the right has remained dormant for 20 years or more and the owner of the mineral right has not recorded a notice of intent to preserve the right during that time [Civ. Code §§ 883.210, 883.220(c), 883.230; see Civ. Code §§ 883.210-883.270].

In California, there is no requirement that a mineral lease be recorded, but recordation is recommended to protect the holder's interest [see Civ. Code §§ 1213 (recordation of conveyances), 1215 ("conveyance" includes all instruments creating or alienating any interest in real property), 1219 (recordation of oil and gas leases)]. The client(s) can convey title to a mineral lease to a revocable trust by recording a mineral deed [see § 75.231] or an oil and gas lease [see § 75.210]. A mineral deed covers mineral interests only. When recorded in California, it must be recorded in the county where the real property is located, in the same manner as other instruments affecting real property [Civ. Code § 1169]. A grant deed [see Civ. Code § 1092] can be used if the mineral interest is in California. Recording requirements in other states should be verified with local counsel in those states.

[c] Working or Operating Interests

A "working interest" is a fee interest in land under which the owner has the right to drill for, develop, and produce oil and gas [Pub. Res. Code § 3316.11]. A working interest is deemed to be vested in the owner even if his or her right to drill or produce is delegated to some other person under an operating arrangement or some other type of agreement [Pub. Res. Code § 3316.11]. A "working interest" is also sometimes called an "operating interest."

A working interest may be transferred through an assignment of an oil and gas lease [see § 73.234].

[d] Overriding Royalty Interest

For oil and gas purposes, the term "royalty" generally refers to a fractional interest in the oil and gas produced from a particular piece of land. A royalty may be "created" either by reservation when an oil and gas lease is entered into or by grant to a third person [ La Laguna Ranch Co. v. Dodge (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 132, 135, 114 P.2d 351 ]. The term "overriding royalty" is customarily used to describe a fractional interest in the lessee's share of all of the oil and gas produced under an oil and gas lease [ La Laguna Ranch Co. v. Dodge (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 132, 135, 114 P.2d 351 ]. It is in addition to the share of oil and gas produced from the land that is reserved for the land owner [Meeker v. Ambassador Oil Co. (10th Cir. [Okla.] 1962) 308 F.2d 875, 882] and must be created by the oil lessee from his or her share, after payment of the landowner's oil royalty [ La Laguna Ranch Co. v. Dodge (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 132, 135, 114 P.2d 351 ]. For further discussion of overriding royalties, see § 36.09A[1][c].

The lessee under an oil and gas lease may create an overriding royalty by grant when he or she transfers a fractional part of his or her interest to a third person [ La Laguna Ranch Co. v. Dodge (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 132, 135, 114 P.2d 351 ]. An assignment of an overriding interest should be used to transfer title to an overriding royalty interest [see § 73.233].

[e] Production Payment

A production payment is similar to a working interest. A bonus payment is made to the owner(s) for a specified amount of time (such as 3 years) to hold the lease in case the well is not being produced. The type of assignment that the settlors will execute to transfer title to a revocable trust will depend on what kind of interest is being held; i.e., mineral interest, overriding interest, or working interest. The conveyance deed should coincide with the type of oil and gas interest.

[f] Ratification of Oil & Gas Lease

A ratification of an oil and gas lease [see § 73.235] is used to ratify a previously negotiated lease and is used in estates when the previous party is deceased.

[2] Tax Considerations

I.R.C. § 613A eliminated percentage depletion for most oil and gas interests [see I.R.C. § 613A(a)]. However, cost depletion is still available to independent producers and royalty owners. Cost depletion for independent producers and royalty owners is limited to 15 percent of gross income from the property, but may not exceed 65 percent of taxable income [I.R.C. § 613A(c)]. Cost depletion is similar to depreciation and is allowed under Treas. Reg. § 1.611-2(a)(1) [see also I.R.C. §§ 611, 612; Treas. Reg. § 1.612-1 (basis for cost depletion)]. The transfer of "proven" oil and gas interests to a grantor trust will not nullify the right to percentage depletion for independent producers and royalty owners [see I.R.C. § 671 (income, deductions, and credits attributable to property of grantor trust are included in computing taxable income of grantor)].

§ 73.15 Restrictions on Transfer of Securities

[1] Transfer Restrictions

The transfer of certain stock, including almost all stock in privately held corporations, may be restricted by federal or California securities regulations. Transfer of such stock may also be subject to restrictions imposed by shareholders' agreements and buy-sell agreements. Depending on the circumstances, any or all of these restrictions may make it impossible or unwise to transfer the stock to a trust.

Restrictions on the transfer of corporate securities are discussed in detail in Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues . Buy-sell agreements are discussed in detail in Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements .

[2] Restrictive Legends

Any restrictions must be set forth by legend on the face of the stock certificate, or on the back of the certificate with incorporating language on the face of the certificate [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.1]. By carefully reading the stock certificate, the attorney will be able to determine whether it is subject to any restrictions.

PRACTICE TIP:

When the new certificates are reissued titled to the trustee, the secretary of the corporation will issue the new certificate(s) with the same legend.

§ 73.16 Federal Securities Act of 1933

[1] Definition of "Security"

Section 2(1) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 defines the term "security" to mean[15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(1)]:

[A]ny note, stock, treasury stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, certificate of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement, collateral-trust certificate, preorganization certificate or subscription, transferable share, investment contract, voting-trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security, fractional undivided interest in oil, gas, and other mineral rights, any put, call, straddle, option or privilege on any security, certificate of deposit, or group or index of securities (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof), or any put, call, straddle, option or privilege entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currency, or in general, any interest or instrument commonly known as a "security," or any certificate of interest or participation in temporary or interim certificate for, receipt for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase any of the foregoing.

It is evident that the statutory definition quoted above is very broad. In addition, the statutory definition of "security" has been further expanded by case law [see Securities & Exch. Com. v. Howey Co. (1946) 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244]. As a rule of thumb, the attorney should assume that anything common sense would suggest is a security probably is one, and then some. If the attorney sees any possibility that an asset might legally constitute a security, the question should be researched. A share of stock will almost always be a security. For additional discussion regarding what constitutes a security, see Marsh & Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws, Ch. 5, Problems Relating to Special Types of Issuers Securities (Matthew Bender).

[2] Registration

Section 5 of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 requires that securities be registered before any offer or sale is made [15 U.S.C. § 77f]. There are many exemptions from the registration requirement, however, and most privately held companies that issue stock find an exemption that allows them to offer stock without registration.

Non-issuer shareholders who have acquired stock directly or indirectly from the issuer, or from an affiliate of the issuer, in a transaction or chain of transactions not involving any public offering, are subject to resale limitations, i.e., restrictions on selling or transferring the stock [17 C.F.R. § 230.144(a)(3)(i)].

Section 4(1) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 provides that the registration provisions of Section 5 "shall not apply to ... transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer" [15 U.S.C. § 77d(1)]. Thus, the transfer from the individual settlors into their revocable trust is exempt.

PRACTICE TIP:

In the context of whether an apparent non-issuer stock sale is exempt, frequent references to SEC Rule 144 [17 C.F.R. § 230.144] will be encountered. Rule 144 provides a "safe harbor" for non-issuers who want to transfer stock with assurance that they are in compliance with exemption requirements. A transfer into one's own revocable trust does not require recourse to Rule 144, since such a transfer does not constitute a "sale" [Securities Act, § 2(3), 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(3)]. However, securities transferred to the trustee of the client's revocable trust are subject to the same restrictions pursuant to Rule 144 that existed for the settlor. Furthermore, if the client's securities are not allowed to be sold for two years pursuant to Rule 144, the transfer to the client's revocable trust does not require the statutory period to begin anew, and the securities will be deemed to have been acquired when they were acquired by the settlor [17 C.F.R. § 230.144(d)(3)(vi)].

§ 73.17 California Securities Law of 1968

[1] California Definition of "Security"

At the state level, California securities are regulated by the California Securities Law of 1968 [see Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.]. California has adopted a very broad definition of security that is similar to that set out under federal law [see Corp. Code § 25019]. Like federal law, the statutory definition has been further expanded by California case law, and in fact has been expanded even more broadly than has the federal definition [see Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 811, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906]. For more detailed discussion of the California definition, see Ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues; see also Marsh & Volk, Practice Under the California Securities Laws, Ch. 5, Problems Relating to Special Types of Issuers Securities (Matthew Bender).

[2] Qualification of Securities in California

California securities law requires that all securities offered or sold in California be "qualified" (the California equivalent of registration) unless they are exempt from qualification [Corp. Code §§ 25100-25105]. It is illegal to offer or sell in California any security that is not qualified or exempted [Corp. Code §§ 25110, 25120, 25130].

[3] Exemption for Transfer to Revocable Trust

Like the Federal Securities Act of 1933 [see discussion in § 73.16[2]], California securities law provides many exemptions from the requirement of qualification. Corp. Code § 25104(a), which parallels Section (4)(1) of the Federal Securities Act [15 U.S.C. § 77d(1)], exempts non-issuer resale of securities. The specific language of Corp. Code § 25104(a) exempts "[a]ny offer or sale of a security by the bona fide owner thereof for his or her own account," as long as it is sold without advertising and not through a broker-dealer in a public offering.

Most non-publicly traded stock has been issued under exemptions provided by Corp. Code § 25102(f) or (h), or by permit. Securities issued under the Corp. Code § 25102(h) exemption generally require the prior written consent of the California Commissioner of Corporations [Corp. Code § 25133]. However, an exception to this requirement is made for transfers into a settlor's revocable living trust [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.141.11(b)(4) (exception for transfers to trustee for account of transferor or transferor's ancestors, descendants, or spouse), (6)(exception for transfers by way of gift or donation)].

§ 73.18 Shareholders Agreements

Pre-existing shareholders' agreements may have restrictions against transfer of the stock without shareholder approval. In particular, any buy-sell agreements, transfer restrictions, voting agreements, or other similar provisions, must be complied with before the transfer. Thus, the attorney should first review any shareholders' agreement to be certain that the transfer is permitted, and if not, to obtain required consent of all other owners as necessary.

PRACTICE TIP:

If the legend on the face of the certificate does not describe the precise terms of the restriction, the attorney, paralegal, or trustee should contact the issuing company and request the terms of the restriction before transfer.

§ 73.19 Stock Options

[1] In General

An option is a contract under which a corporation grants a person or other corporation the right to buy a certain amount of the first corporation's securities (usually common shares) at a fixed price within a specified period of time [Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness, § 135.01(1) (Matthew Bender)]. The most common use of options to purchase shares is in connection with employee stock option plans [Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 7, Issuance of Shares and Indebtedness, § 135.01(1) (Matthew Bender)]. Generally, some percentage of the total number of option shares becomes exercisable at different points in time, e.g., 20 percent per year for five years, but in no case later than 10 years [I.R.C. § 422(b)(3)]. If the stock appreciates between the time of the agreement and the purchase, the employee can purchase at the bargain price.

[2] Incentive Stock Options

The employee enjoys favorable tax treatment if the stock option plan set up by the employer meets the statutory definition of an Incentive Stock Option (ISO), sometimes also referred to as a "statutory stock option," as defined in I.R.C. § 422.

Incentive stock option status, along with the favorable tax treatment, can be lost if the conditions required by I.R.C. § 422 are not met. One of the statutory conditions that must be met is that the option, by its terms, may not be transferred by the grantee "otherwise than by will or the laws of descent and distribution," and, during the grantee's lifetime, may be exercisable only by the grantee [I.R.C. § 422(b)(5)].

Because of the statutory restrictions noted above, incentive stock options generally should not be transferred to a revocable trust. It may be advisable, however, to assign to the trustee or successor trustee the right to exercise the option after the death of the settlor. The trustee can exercise the option in his or her capacity as trustee.

§ 73.20 Partnership Interests

[1] In General

A partnership is an association formed by two or more persons to carry on a business as co-owners for profit [see Corp. Code § 16101(9)]; see also Civ. Code § 684].

California law recognizes two basic types of partnerships, general partnerships [see Corp. Code § 16100 et seq. (Uniform Partnership Act of 1994)] and limited partnerships [see Corp. Code §§ 15900 et seq. (Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008), 15611 (CRLPA, repealed January 1, 2010)]; see also Corp. Code §§ 15912.04, 15912.06 (operative date of ULPA '08 and limited application of former limited partnership acts prior to January 1, 2010)]. In general partnerships, the partners have equal rights to control and manage the partnership business [see Corp. Code § 16301], and they are jointly and severally liable for the partnerships debts [see Corp. Code § 16306]. In limited partnerships, the general partners have all of the rights of management and control of the partnership business and are personally liable for the partnership debts [see Corp. Code §§ 15904.04, 15904.06 (ULPA '08), 15643 (CRPLA)], while the limited partners do not participate in the management and control of the business and generally are not liable for partnership debts beyond the amounts of their capital contributions [Corp. Code §§ 15903.03(a) (ULPA '08), 15632(a) (CRLPA)].

A limited liability partnership is a type of general partnership that is engaged in the practice of law, accountancy, or architecture, and that has complied with the applicable registration formalities and limited the extent of its liability to creditors [see Corp. Code §§ 16951-16962 (Uniform Partnership Act of 1994)]. For detailed coverage of limited liability partnerships, see Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

[2] Governing Law

In California, all general partnerships are now governed by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94) [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq. regardless of when they were formed [see Corp. Code § 16111(a), (b)]. For additional discussion of the transition to the UPA '94, and discussion of partnership law in general, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships, Part A.

As for limited partnerships, before January 1, 2010 the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA '08) [Corp. Code § 15900 et seq.] governs only (1) limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008, and (2) with certain exceptions, limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008 that elect to be subject to that act [Corp. Code § 15912.06(a)]. On and after January 1, 2010, ULPA '08 governs all limited partnerships [Corp. Code § 15912.06(b)]. For additional discussion of the transition to the ULPA '08 and discussion of limited partnership law in general, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[3] Limited Partnerships

Under the CRLPA, an interest in a limited partnership may be assigned in whole or in part [Corp. Code § 15672(a)]; for form, see § 73.260]. Unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise, however, an assignment of a limited partnership interest does not entitle the assignee to become a limited partner; it merely gives the assignee the right to receive, to the extent assigned, the distributions and allocations of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit to which the assignor would have been entitled [Corp. Code § 15672(a)]. However, the assignee may become a partner if the partnership agreement so provides or if all of the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15674(a)]. On becoming a limited partner, the assignee is entitled to exercise all of the rights and obligated to perform all of the obligations of the original limited partner [Corp. Code § 15674(b)].

Under the ULPA '08, the only interest of a partner that is transferable is the partner's transferable interest; that interest is personal property [Corp. Code § 15907.01]. "Transferable interest" means a partner's right to receive distributions [Corp. Code § 15901.02(a-k)]. A transfer, in whole or in part, of a partner's transferable interest: (1) is permissible; (2) does not by itself cause the partner's dissociation or a dissolution and winding up of the limited partnership's activities; and (3) does not, as against the other partners or the partnership, entitle the transferee to participate in the management or conduct of the partnership's activities, to require access to information concerning the partnership's transactions except as otherwise described below, or to inspect or copy the required information or the partnership's other records or to exercise any other rights or powers of a partner interest [Corp. Code § 15907.02(a)]. A transferee has a right to receive, in accordance with the transfer, distributions to which the transferor would otherwise be entitled [Corp. Code § 15907.02(b)]. However, a transferee of a partnership interest may become a limited partner if and to the extent that the partnership agreement provides, or all general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15907.02(h)]. A transferee that becomes a partner with respect to a transferable interest is liable for the transferor's obligations under Corp. Code §§ 15905.02 and 15905.09, but is not obligated for liabilities unknown to the transferee at the time the transferee became a partner [Corp. Code § 15907.02(g)].

If a limited partnership interest is transferable, the settlor should give the general partner written instructions. The letter should specify the trust's name and tax identification number and the trustee's name and address. The general partner may also ask to be shown some of the pages of the trust (e.g., the first page, the page containing the name and effective date of the trust, and the page or pages showing the signatures of the settlors). If the partnership is small and has a limited number of partners, the managing partner will often accept the settlor's word that the trust has been created and will not insist on seeing the trust pages. However, it is good practice to observe formalities in matters of this kind, as proper documentation of the transfer of partnership interests is always important.

If a certificate of limited partnership interest has been issued to the settlor [see Corp. Code § 15638 (CRLPA)], the general partner may also require that the original certificate be returned. The general partner will often request that the settlor execute an assignment of the limited partnership interest on a form supplied by the general partner.

It may also be necessary to formally amend the limited partnership agreement to admit the new partner to the partnership. This may be necessary, for example, if the assigning partner's name appears in the agreement. Under these circumstances, it may be desirable to substitute the name of the new partner for that of the old partner.

Although California does not require that the limited partnership certificate be amended when the limited partner's interest is transferred [see Corp. Code §§ 15622(b), 15631 (CRLPA); Corp. Code § 15902.02 (ULPA '08)], other states may impose such a requirement. In such a case, the transfer may be delayed until the partner's attorney has amended the certificate. This may be necessary to assure that the transfer does not violate applicable securities laws and would not result in a termination of the partnership for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 708(b)(1)(B) (partnership terminated if more than 50 percent of total interest in capital and profits sold or exchanged within 12-month period)]. The general partner will often charge a fee for the review and preparation of documentation by the partnership's counsel.

[4] General Partnerships

If a partner attempts to transfer his or her interest in a general partnership to a trust without first obtaining the consent of the other partners, the trust will not automatically become a partner. Instead, it becomes the assigning partner's assignee and, as such, is entitled to the assigning partner's share of the profits, losses, and distributions of the partnership [Corp. Code § 16502].

If the partnership is a partnership "at will" (a partnership in which the partners have not agreed to remain partners for a definite period of time or until the completion of a particular undertaking, but only as long as they wish to continue the association) [see Corp. Code § 16101(11)], the other partners may dissociate themselves and wind up the partnership business at any time [see Corp. Code §§ 16601(1), 16801(1)]. Even if the partnership is organized for a definite term, a partner may be expelled from the partnership, either in accordance with the terms of the partnership agreement or, when particular circumstances permit, by unanimous vote of the other partners or order of a court [see Corp. Code § 16601(35)]. In any case, the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 explicitly provides that a person may become a partner only with the consent of all of the partners [Corp. Code § 16401(i)].

General partnership agreements normally contain terms that prevent a partner from transferring his or her interest without first complying with procedures specified in the partnership agreement. These procedures can significantly restrict the transferability of a general partnership interest. For this reason it is essential to ascertain the terms of the agreement before attempting to transfer any general partnership interest to the trust.

A trust that becomes a general partner will become jointly and severally liable for the partnership debts [see Corp. Code § 16306]. For this reason, it is important to investigate the potential liabilities of the partnership before assigning any interest in the partnership to the trust.

PRACTICE TIP:

The trust will have unlimited liability for debts of a general partnership and limited liability and generally no management control over a limited partnership.

The successful transfer of a partnership interest generally requires an abundance of written documentation in the form of transfer documents, consents from other partners, and an amendment to the partnership agreement.

Special requirements apply to the transfer of a general partnership interest in a limited partnership [see Corp. Code §§ 15641 (admission of additional general partners), 15674(a), 15674(d) (assignment of general partner's interest; removal by limited partners)].

[5] Tax Considerations

If a grantor trust [see I.R.C. §§ 672-677 and discussion in § 60.15[3][b]] is a partner, the grantor is treated for income tax purposes as the owner of the partnership interest [see Rev. Rul. 77-402, 1977-2 C.B. 222]. If the partnership elects under I.R.C. § 754 to adjust the basis of partnership property on a partner's death, the partnership interest is allowed a basis adjustment under I.R.C. § 743 [see Rev. Rul. 79-84, 1979-1 C.B. 223].

It is generally unwise for a settlor to transfer an investment purchased as a tax shelter to the settlor's revocable trust. A typical tax shelter generates early losses followed by deferred recognition of gain. The transfer of a tax shelter to a revocable trust creates a deferred gain that will not be covered by a cash recognition out of that tax shelter.

CHAPTER 73 FUNDING A REVOCABLE TRUST
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 73.21

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

§ 73.21 Small Business Corporations

[1] In General

Under I.R.C. § 1244, a small business corporation is one in which the aggregate amount of money and other property received by the corporation for stock as a contribution to capital and as paid-in surplus does not exceed $1 million [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(3)(A)]. For purposes of determining the value of a small business corporation, the amount taken into account with respect to any property other than money is the amount equal to the adjusted basis to the corporation of that property for determining gain, reduced by any liability to which the property was subject or that was assumed by the corporation [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(3)(B)]. The preceding determination must be made as of the time the property was received by the corporation [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(3)(B)].

[2] Section 1244 Stock

The term "section 1244 stock" means stock of a domestic corporation if [I.R.C. § 1244(c)(1)]:

- At the time the stock was issued, the corporation was a small business corporation;
- The stock issued was by the corporation for money or other property (other than stock and securities); and
- The corporation, during the period of its five most recent taxable years ending before the date the loss on such stock was sustained, derived more than 50 percent of its aggregate gross receipts from sources other than royalties, rents, dividends, interests, annuities, and sales or exchanges of stocks or securities.

[3] Tax Implications

I.R.C. § 1244(a) allows an individual to treat up to $50,000 of loss on section 1244 stock ($100,000 in the case of a married couple filing a joint return) as ordinary loss rather than a loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset [I.R.C. § 1244(a), (b)]. In order to claim a deduction under I.R.C. § 1244, the individual or partnership sustaining the loss must have continuously held the stock from the date of issuance [Treas. Reg. § 1.1244(a)-1(b)(2)].

However, a trust or estate is not entitled to ordinary loss treatment under I.R.C. § 1244, regardless of how the stock is acquired [I.R.C. § 1244 (d)(4) (for purposes of I.R.C. § 1244, "individual" does not include a trust or estate); Treas. Reg. § 1.1244(a)-1(b)]. Thus stock issued under I.R.C. § 1244 should not be transferred into a revocable trust.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 73.22

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

§ 73.22 S Corporations

[1] In General

An S corporation is a small business corporation that has elected to be taxed as a partnership rather than a corporation under Subchapter S of Chapter 1 of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. §§ 1361-1379]. The chief characteristic of an S corporation is that its income or loss is not recognized by the corporation but flows through to the individual members in the same manner as a partnership [I.R.C. § 1366(b)].

To qualify for taxation under Subchapter S, a corporation must have no more than 100 shareholders [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 2004; for earlier tax years, the corporation must have no more than 75 shareholders). All of the shareholders (except for estates and certain qualifying trusts and associations described below) must be individuals [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(B)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997; for earlier tax years, the shareholders must all be individuals, except for estates and certain qualifying trusts), and none of the shareholders can be nonresident aliens [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(C)]. The corporation cannot have more than one class of stock [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(D)].

[2] Grantor Trust as Shareholder

If a citizen or resident of the United States is treated as owner of all of the trust under the grantor trust rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 and discussion in § 60.15[3][b]], the trust may properly hold the stock during the owner's lifetime [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(i)] and for two years thereafter [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(ii)] (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996), and the deemed owner or the deemed owner's estate will be treated as the shareholder [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(i), (ii)].

[3] Termination of Status by Shareholder

A shareholder can terminate a Subchapter S election [see I.R.C. § 1362(a)] only by formal revocation [I.R.C. § 1362(d)(1)(A)]. Further, an election may be revoked only if shareholders holding more than one-half of the shares of stock of the corporation on the day on which the revocation is made consent to the revocation [I.R.C. § 1362(d)(1)(B)].

[4] Qualified Subchapter S Corporation Trust (QSST)

A Qualified Subchapter S Trust (QSST) is a trust that distributes all of its income to one person who is a citizen or resident of the United States [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(B)]. A substantially separate and independent share of a trust may also qualify as a QSST if it distributes all of its income to one person who is a citizen or resident of the United States [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(B); see I.R.C. § 663(c) (separate shares treated as separate trusts)].

The terms of a QSST must require, among other things, that there will be only one income beneficiary during the current income beneficiary's lifetime [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(A)]. During the current beneficiary's lifetime, the trust will not cease to qualify as a QSST merely because there may be multiple beneficiaries after the current beneficiary's death [see I.R.C. § 1361(d)(3)(A)].

The beneficiary or legal representative, not the trustee, must elect to have the trust treated as a QSST [I.R.C. § 1361(d)(1), (2)].

[5] Electing Small Business Trust

In tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, an Electing Small Business Trust (ESBT) may also hold stock in an S corporation [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(A)(v) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996); I.R.C. § 1361(e) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996); for discussion of Subchapter S corporation, see [4], above].

The rules for ESBTs vary according to the applicable tax year. For tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, and before January 1, 1998, a trust qualified as an ESBT if it did not have as a beneficiary any person other than an individual, an estate, or a qualified charitable beneficiary, which held a contingent interest and was not a potential current beneficiary [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(i) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996, and before January 1, 1998); see I.R.C. § 170(c)(25) (qualified charitable beneficiaries, other than governmental organizations)]. For tax years beginning after December 31, 1997, a trust will qualify as an ESBT if it does not have as a beneficiary any person other than an individual, an estate, or a qualified charitable beneficiary or, if they hold only contingent interests and are not potential current beneficiaries, state governments, or U.S. possessions, or any of their political subdivisions, or the United States or the District of Columbia [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(i) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1997); see I.R.C. § 170(c)(15) (qualified charitable beneficiaries)]. In all cases, the trust will qualify as an ESBT only if no interest in the trust was acquired by purchase and the trustee makes the necessary election [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(A)(ii), (iii); see I.R.C. § 1361(e)(3) (election)]. An ESBT may not be a QSST for which there is a current election or a trust that is exempt from income taxation [I.R.C. § 1361(e)(1)(B); for discussion of QSST, see [4], above]. If a trust qualifies as an ESBT, each potential current beneficiary will be treated as a shareholder of the S corporation [I.R.C. § 1361(c)(2)(B)(v) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996)].

[6] Transfer of S Corporation Stock

Because the rules relating to S corporations, QSSTs, and ESBTs are technical and complex, any transfer of S corporation stock should be planned with care. Any transfer that will cause the corporation to lose its S status should be avoided. For example, stock in an S corporation should not be transferred to a trust with more than one beneficiary if the effect of the transfer would be to raise the number of shareholders to more than 75 [I.R.C. § 1361(b)(1)(A) (applicable to tax years beginning after December 31, 1996; for earlier tax years, the corporation must have no more than 35 shareholders)]. If an S corporation's status has been terminated, it cannot make another election for five years, unless the I.R.S. consents [I.R.C. § 1362(g)]. However, a termination may be disregarded if the circumstances leading to it were inadvertent, if steps are taken to cure it within a reasonable time, and if the corporation and its shareholders agree to make any adjustments that may be required for the period of termination [I.R.C. § 1362(f)].

§ 73.23 Sole Proprietorship

A sole proprietorship is a form of business in which a natural person directly owns the assets used in the business and directly owes the liabilities of the business [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 2, Choice of Form of Doing Business, § 22.02 (Matthew Bender)]. A sole proprietorship is transferred to the trust when the settlor executes and delivers a bill of sale for the sole proprietorship to the trustee [Civ. Code §§ 1053, 1054, 1055; Com. Code § 2401(3)].

Although a sole proprietorship may not involve all, or even a major proportion, of the owner's personal assets, all of those assets are subject to the risks of the business, unless recourse to them is limited by agreement [see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 2, Choice of Form of Doing Business, § 22.02 (Matthew Bender)]. When a trust becomes the ownership of a sole proprietorship, creditors may have recourse to other trust assets to satisfy the debts of the business. The potential dangers of this liability should be investigated before a sole proprietorship is transferred to the trust.

If a sole proprietorship leases property for the conduct of its business, arrangements should be made for an assignment of that lease to the trust.

§ 73.24 Professional Practice

A business that requires a professional license may be owned and operated only by a licensed professional. Thus, a sole proprietorship owned by a licensed person, or shares in a corporation that is qualified to render professional services, may only be transferred to a licensed person, or to a corporation qualified to render those services [Corp. Code § 13407].

When spouses have joined to create a trust and they wish to contribute stock in a professional corporation to the trust, they may properly do so, providing at least one of them is properly licensed. According to a Legal Opinion issued by the California Department of Consumer Affairs, shares in a professional corporation may be transferred to a revocable trust created by the spouses if all of the following requirements are met [Legal Opinion, 79-5 (Feb. 16, 1979), Cal. Dept. Consumer Affairs]:

- The interest of the nonlicensed spouse in the stock of the corporation does not exceed that spouse's one-half community property interest.
- If the licensed spouse dies before the nonlicensed spouse, the shares must be sold and the proceeds distributed according to the terms of the trust.
- On the death of the nonlicensed spouse, any nonlicensed beneficiary is entitled only to a beneficial interest in the proceeds from the sale of the shares.
- The trustee, who must be a licensed person, must have exclusive control and powers relating to the shares of the professional corporation.

The opinion suggests that the last two requirements actually be stated in the trust agreement.

PRACTICE TIP:

In order to avoid a violation of Corp. Code § 13407, most professional corporations will have a buy-out agreement with the shareholders. It may be advisable to contact the corporation within the six month period following the date of death of the licensed shareholder.

§ 73.25 Bonds

[1] In General

A bond is a written promise, given in return for money or its equivalent, to pay a fixed sum of money, plus interest in a stated amount, at a future time or times. If a bond is given by a business corporation, it is described as a "corporate" bond; if it is given by a city, town, county, state, or territorial division of a state, it is described as a "municipal" bond.

[2] Bearer Bond Held in Book Entry

Most municipal bonds are not registered, but are issued in bearer form, with proceeds payable to the holder. When a bond is in bearer form, a certificate is issued, but it does not show title. If bearer bonds are held in a brokerage account, no certificate will be issued.

Since bearer bonds are negotiable instruments, the certificates should be placed in a safe-deposit box registered in the trustee's name. The trustee should never commingle trust assets with personal assets.

[3] U.S. Savings Bonds

A United States saving bond is a certificate of debt by which the federal government promises to pay the holder a stated amount of interest for a stated time and to repay the loan on the expiration date. Bonds in Series E and H were issued until 1980. Series EE and HH have been issued since 1980.

All transfers of U.S. savings bonds are handled by the Federal Reserve Board in Kansas City, Missouri. A stockbroker may act as an intermediary in facilitating the transfer of a bond.

A U.S. savings bond can be transferred to a revocable trust for the benefit of the grantor without causing accrued interest on the bond to be taxed to the grantor at the time of transfer [ Ltr. Rul. 7826024 (Mar. 28, 1978) ]. On the grantor's death, interest can be reported on the grantor's last income tax return, as if it were owned outright by the deceased grantor [I.R.C. § 454(a)].

[4] Treasury Securities

The United States Treasury Department issues three types of marketable securities, which are denominated as bills, notes, and bonds. They are direct obligations of the United States government. They are originally issued through public auctions. After issue, however, they may be bought or sold in the secondary market at prevailing market prices.

The principal distinction between bills, notes, and bonds is the length of time (or term) they are outstanding. Treasury bills are short-term obligations issued within a term of one year or less. Notes have a term of a least one year but not more than 10 years. Treasury bonds have a term of more than 10 years.

Treasury notes and bonds bear a stated interest rate that is payable semi-annually. Treasury bills, in contrast, are sold at a discount from par, which is the amount the holder will be paid at maturity. This discount represents the interest on the bill.

PRACTICE TIP:

Treasury Bonds are sold by the Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City, MO, or may be purchased through local banks. Treasury bonds are sold in denominations as low as $1,000.

§ 73.26 Tangible Personal Property

[1] Registered Items

Some items of tangible personal property are registered with specific government agencies. These items typically will bear an identification number, and title will be evidenced by a certificate of ownership or similar document. The most common examples of this type of personal property are motor vehicles, boats, and trailers. The rules of the governing agency will determine the proper procedure for transferring this kind of tangible personal property. Before making any effort to transfer such an item to the trust, the attorney should determine the agency rules and comply with them.

If the settlor is financing the purchase of an item of tangible personal property (such as an automobile), the settlor will appear as the registered owner on the title registration, and the lender will appear as the legal owner [see Veh. Code §§ 4450, 4453(a), 6302]. The settlor cannot transfer full legal title to the trust without the permission of the legal owner [see Veh. Code §§ 5600(a) (transfer of vehicle invalid unless statutory transfer requirements satisfied), 5751 (on transfer of vehicle by registered owner, both registered and legal owner must sign certificate of ownership)]. It is essential, therefore, to obtain the permission of the lender before the transfer can be made.

Even when it is legally possible to do so, it is often unwise to transfer a vehicle registered with the California Department of Motor Vehicles to a trust unless it has unusual or special value. Transferring title to a motor vehicle after the death of the owner can usually be accomplished without serious legal complications. The DMV has forms that may be used to transfer a vehicle without probate when the estate is of an appropriately small size.

[2] Unregistered Items

Most items of tangible personal property are not registered with governmental agencies. For this kind of property there is ordinarily no formal record of ownership. Although a writing is not required to transfer most items of tangible personal property [see Civ. Code § 1052], if the settlor wishes to transfer a particular item of tangible personal property to the trust some written record of the transfer should be made. This is especially true if it is likely that a question may arise after the settlor's death as to whether the property was owned by the settlor individually or by the trust. Unregistered tangible personal property can be transferred to the trust by the simple means of an assignment executed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee [see Com. Code § 2401(2); Civ. Code § 1054].

§ 73.27 Retirement Benefits

[1] Qualified Plans

A qualified retirement plan is a trust created or organized in the United States that forms part of a stock, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of the employer's employees and their beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 401(a)]. Contributions may be made to the trust by the employer, by the employees, or by both the employer and the employees. The trust must meet specific statutory requirements in order to be classified as a qualified plan [see I.R.C. § 401].

[2] Qualified Annuity Plan

A qualified annuity plan is an employer plan that purchases retirement annuities for employees, the cost of which is tax deductible to the employer, and which meets the applicable requirements of I.R.C. § 401(a)(2).

An annuity must have a designated beneficiary and owner. If the trust was created by a single person, it should be named as the primary beneficiary of the annuity to receive all benefits under the plan. Non-spousal beneficiaries may not roll over benefits received after the employee's death [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9)].

It is generally desirable for a married settlor to designate his or her spouse as the primary beneficiary under an annuity plan, as this will permit the surviving spouse to roll the benefit over to another qualified plan (such as an IRA) and thereby spread income tax liability for the benefits over the surviving spouse's lifetime [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9)]. A revocable trust generally will not qualify for rollover treatment [I.R.C. § 402(c)].

Despite the advantages of rollover treatment, there can be disadvantages to designating the surviving spouse as the beneficiary under an annuity plan.

First, if the settlor has children by a former marriage, the settlor will often wish to confer some (or all) of the annuity benefits on the children. If the settlor wishes to divide the benefits between the surviving spouse and the children by the former marriage, a trust will often be the most convenient way in which to do this.

Second, if the surviving spouse has little or no ability to handle money, it will often be desirable to confer the benefits on a trustee who can manage them for the benefit of the spouse and any other beneficiaries the settlor may choose to name.

Third, if all of the benefits under the plan are payable to the surviving spouse, there is a danger that the marital deduction could be overfunded. When the marital deduction is overfunded, some of the estate tax benefits of the "applicable credit amount" (unified credit) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b] available in the settlor's estate will be lost.

It is important to keep in mind, however, that the surviving spouse can be deprived of annuity benefits only if he or she waives those rights in writing [see I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(11), 417(a)]. Waivers of the right to receive annuity benefits are subject to stringent requirements that must be strictly satisfied before any effort to confer the benefits on some person other than the surviving spouse will be effective [see I.R.C. § 417(a)].

[3] Individual Retirement Account (IRA)

[a] Traditional IRAs

An Individual Retirement Account (IRA) is a trust that is created or organized in the United States for the exclusive benefit of an individual (or the individual's beneficiaries) and that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 408. The trustee is a bank or other person who demonstrates the ability to administer the trust consistent with the applicable requirements [I.R.C. § 408(a)(2), (h)]. If the participant dies before the money or other property held in the IRA has been distributed, it will be paid to the designated beneficiary or beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 408(a)].

For taxable years beginning before 2002, an individual generally may make deductible contributions to a traditional IRA up to the lesser of $2,000 or the individual's compensation. The maximum annual dollar contribution limit for traditional IRA contributions is $3,000 for 2002 through 2004, $4,000 for 2005 through 2007, and $5,000 for 2008. After 2008, the limit is adjusted annually for inflation in $500 increments [I.R.C. § 219(b)(5)(A), (C)]. In the case of a married couple, deductible IRA contributions of up to the above amounts can be made for each spouse (including, for example, a homemaker who does not work outside the home), if the combined compensation of both spouses is at least equal to the contributed amount [I.R.C. § 219(c)].

Individuals who have attained age 50 may make additional catch-up IRA contributions. The otherwise maximum contribution limit (before application of the AGI phase-out limits) for an individual who has attained age 50 before the end of the taxable year is increased by $500 for 2002 through 2005, and $1,000 for 2006 and thereafter [I.R.C. § 219(b)(5)(B)].

The above contribution deduction limits are reduced if either the individual or the individual's spouse is an active participant in an employer-sponsored retirement plan. In that case, the dollar limit is phased out for taxpayers with adjusted gross income over specified levels for the taxable year [I.R.C. § 219(g)].

Money or other property held in an IRA generally is exempt from income taxation while it is held in the IRA [I.R.C. § 408(e)(1)]. However, collectibles such as works of art, rugs, antiques, precious metals or gems, stamps, coins, and similar items are not exempt from taxation in an IRA and should not be contributed to such an account [I.R.C. § 408(m)].

Withdrawals or distributions from an IRA generally are included in the gross income of the payee or distributee [I.R.C. § 408(d)], unless they are taken out in the form of a rollover [I.R.C. § 408(d)(3)]. When money or other property is rolled over, it is contributed to another IRA or qualified account, in which it becomes eligible for the same income tax-deferral benefits as in the original IRA. Distributions from an IRA after 2001 may generally be rolled over into a qualified plan, Section 403(b) annuity, or governmental Section 457 plan [I.R.C. § 408(d)(3)]. Nondeductible contributions to an IRA, however, cannot be rolled over from an IRA into a qualified plan, Section 403(b) annuity, or Section 457 plan. In the case of a distribution from a traditional IRA that is rolled over into an eligible rollover plan that is not an IRA, the distribution is attributed first to amounts other than after-tax contributions [I.R.C. § 408(d)(3)(A)(ii)]. Tax-free rollovers can result in substantial income tax savings.

Rollover treatment generally is not available for withdrawals or distributions from an IRA if the designated beneficiary acquired the account by reason of the participant's death [I.R.C. § 408(d)(3)(C)]. If the designated beneficiary was the participant's surviving spouse, however, rollover treatment is available [I.R.C. §§ 402(c)(9), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II)]; see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 200532060 (to extent amounts standing in surviving spouse's IRA are timely rolled over to IRA set up by decedent and maintained in decedent's name, rolled over amounts are not included in taxpayer's gross income for year in which distributed); Priv. Ltr. Rul. 200526023 (proceeds from IRA distributed to decedent's estate and then paid to surviving spouse as sole beneficiary of estate is not inherited IRA with respect to surviving spouse)]. Since naming a revocable trust as the beneficiary of an IRA is not the same as designating the surviving spouse as the beneficiary of the account, rollover treatment is not available when the trust is the beneficiary [I.R.C. §§ 402(c)(9), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II)].

A beneficiary's disclaimer of a beneficial interest in a decedent's IRA is a qualified disclaimer under I.R.C. § 2518 (if all of the requirements of that section are met), even though, before making the disclaimer, the beneficiary receives the required minimum distribution for the year of the decedent's death from the IRA. The beneficiary may make a qualified disclaimer with respect to all or a portion of the balance of the IRA, other than the income attributable to the required minimum distribution that the beneficiary received, as long as at the time the disclaimer is made, the disclaimed amount and the income attributable to that amount are paid to the successor beneficiary entitled to receive the disclaimed amount or are segregated in a separate account [ Rev. Rul. 2005-36, 2005-26 I.R.B. 1368 ].

[b] Roth IRAs

The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 [Pub. L. No. 105-34] established a new type of IRA [see I.R.C. §§ 408A, 4973(f)]; see also I.R.C. §§ 219(c)(1)(B), 408(i)], called a "Roth IRA" [I.R.C. § 408A]. To be treated as a Roth IRA, the account must be so designated when established [I.R.C. § 408A(b)].

Roth IRAs generally are treated in the same manner as traditional IRAs [I.R.C. § 408A(a)]. However, there are income limits on the use of Roth IRAs [see I.R.C. § 408A(c)(3)]. Unlike traditional IRAs, contributions to a Roth IRA are not deductible [I.R.C. § 408A(c)(1)]. The maximum yearly contributions to traditional and Roth IRAs combined for taxable years beginning before 2002, is the lesser of $2,000 or the individual's compensation. For taxable years beginning in 2002 through 2004, the dollar limit is $3,000, for 2005 through 2007 the dollar limit is $4,000, for 2008 the dollar limit is $5,000, and after 2008, the dollar limit is adjusted annually for inflation in $500 increments [I.R.C. § 408A(c)(2), (3)(A)]; see I.R.C. § 219(b)(1), (5)(A), (C)], not counting rollover contributions that meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 408(d)(3) [see I.R.C. § 408A(e)]. Contributions to a Simplified Employee Pension Plan (see below) are not taken into account for purposes of calculating the maximum dollar limit [I.R.C. § 408A(f)]. Unlike traditional IRAs, taxpayers may contribute to a Roth IRA after age 70 [I.R.C. § 408A(c)(4)]. Like traditional IRAs, excess contributions to a Roth IRA are subject to a six percent tax [see I.R.C. § 4973(f)].

The mandatory distribution rules that apply to traditional IRAs [see I.R.C. § 408(a)(6), (b)(3)] do not apply to Roth IRAs [I.R.C. § 408A(c)(5)]. A qualified distribution from a Roth IRA is not includible in the taxpayer's gross income [I.R.C. § 408A(d)(1)(A)]. Thus, earnings in a Roth IRA may grow tax-free, rather than tax-deferred, as long as the account meets specified requirements on distribution [for the requirements, see I.R.C. § 408A(d)(2)].

Individuals with an adjusted gross income of less than $100,000 may convert a traditional IRA into a Roth IRA [see

I.R.C. § 408A(c)(3)(B) (setting forth special rules for calculating adjusted gross income for purposes of determining eligibility for conversion to Roth IRA)]. Effective January 1, 2010, individuals may convert a traditional IRA into a Roth IRA regardless of their adjusted gross income [P.L. 109-222, § 512(a), (c), 120 Stat. 365 (repealing current version of I.R.C. § 403(c)(3)(B) containing the $100,000 limitation, and renumbering balance of subsection)].

[c] Deemed IRAs Under Qualified Employer Plans

If a qualified employer plan permits employees to make voluntary employee contributions to a separate account or annuity that (1) is established under the plan, and (2) meets the requirements applicable to either traditional IRAs or Roth IRAs, then the separate account or annuity is deemed a traditional IRA or a Roth IRA, as applicable, for all federal tax purposes [I.R.C. § 408(q)(1), effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 2002]. For example, the reporting requirements applicable to IRAs apply. The deemed IRA and contributions to it are not subject to the Code rules pertaining to the eligible retirement plan. In addition, the deemed IRA and contributions to it are not taken into account in applying such rules to any other contributions under the plan [I.R.C. § 408(q)(1)]. The deemed IRA, and contributions to it are subject to the exclusive benefit and fiduciary rules of ERISA to the extent otherwise applicable to the plan, and are not subject to the ERISA reporting and disclosure, participation, vesting, funding, and enforcement requirements applicable to the eligible retirement plan [29 U.S.C. § 1003(c) (ERISA § 4(c))].

A qualified employer plan that allows separate accounts or annuities of employees to be deemed traditional IRAs or Roth IRAs for tax purposes does not violate any Code requirements by doing so [I.R.C. § 408(q)(2)]. For this purpose, a qualified employer plan includes a qualified plan [see I.R.C. § 401(a)], Section 403(b) annuity, or an eligible deferred compensation governmental plan [I.R.C. § 408(q)(3)(A); see I.R.C. § 457(b)].

[4] 401(k) Plan

A trust created or organized in the United States that forms part of a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan and that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 401(k) is described as a "401(k) plan." Under a typical 401(k) plan, the employee authorizes deductions to be made from his or her pay and contributed to the plan, and the employer makes matching contributions on the employee's behalf [see I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(A)]. The contributions made by the employer are held in the plan until the employee's death, disability, or severance from employment, or until the employee reaches the age of 59½ years, whichever occurs first [I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(B)]; effective for distributions after December 31, 2001; for distributions before 2002, a condition of "separation from service" was used in lieu of "severance from employment" (I.R.C. § 401(k)(2)(A)(I), before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16)]. A 401(k) plan that meets all of the applicable requirements is classified as a "qualified plan" for purposes of the federal income tax law [I.R.C. § 401(a), (k)(1)].

If the settlor is a married person, the surviving spouse generally should be named as the primary beneficiary of the 401(k) plan. Favorable income tax treatment is generally available to the surviving spouse because the surviving spouse has the right to roll any distribution from a 401(k) plan over to another qualified plan, such as an IRA [I.R.C. § 402(c)]. Rollover treatment generally is not available when a trust is the beneficiary [I.R.C. §§ 402(c)(9), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II)].

An employee who terminates employment before death may elect to roll over a 401(k) plan to an IRA [I.R.C. § 402(c)]. After rollover to an IRA, the assets formerly held in the 401(k) plan will be subject to the same rules that apply to other IRAs [see [3], above].

[5] Keogh Plan

A trust created or organized in the United States that forms part of a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan and that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 401(c) is described as a "Keogh Plan" or "HR 10 Plan." A Keogh Plan generally is a plan in which a self-employed individual, or a partner who owns more than 10 percent of either the capital or the profit interest in a partnership, contributes part of his or her earned income to the plan [I.R.C. § 401(c)]. Withdrawals and distributions from Keogh Plans are subject to rules similar to those that apply to withdrawals and distributions from IRAs and 401(k) plans [I.R.C. § 401(a), (c); see [3] and [4], above]. A Keogh Plan that meets all of the applicable requirements is also classified as a "qualified plan" for purposes of the federal income tax law [I.R.C. § 401(a), (c)].

[6] Simplified Employee Pension Plan (SEP)

A simplified employee pension plan (SEP) is an IRA that is established by an employer, to which the employer makes contributions, and that meets minimum coverage and nondiscrimination requirements set forth in I.R.C. § 408(k). Under a SEP, the employee may elect a salary reduction arrangement under which the employer makes payments directly to the employee in cash [I.R.C. § 408(k)]. For rules applicable to IRAs, see discussion in [3], above.

[7] Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP)

A trust created or organized in the United States that is designed primarily to invest in employer securities and that meets the requirements of I.R.C. § 409 is described as an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) [I.R.C. §§ 401(a), 409(a)]. Benefits under an ESOP generally are provided in the form of securities of the employer, although they may also be paid in cash [I.R.C. § 409(h)].

If the settlor is a married person, it is often advisable to name the surviving spouse as the primary beneficiary under an ESOP. The advantages of doing this are as follows:

- In most cases, the benefit paid to the surviving spouse will qualify for the marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056].
- Benefits paid to a surviving spouse will qualify for rollover treatment [I.R.C. § 402(c)(9)] and this can produce significant income tax savings. Rollover treatment generally is not available when a trust is the beneficiary [I.R.C. §§ 402(c)(9), 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)(II)].
- The surviving spouse can disclaim all or part of the benefit, which may be advantageous if proper disclaimer planning has been done [see Prob. Code §§ 260-295; I.R.C. § 2518].
- The surviving spouse can lessen the income tax impact of a distribution from an ESOP by electing five-year or 10-year averaging and capital gains treatment, when they are available [I.R.C. § 402(e)(4)(B)].

It is not always advantageous, however, to name the surviving spouse as primary beneficiary of an ESOP plan. The possible disadvantages of doing this are as follows:

- There is a possibility that the marital deduction may be overfunded, with a consequent loss of some of the estate tax benefits of the of the "applicable credit amount" (unified credit) [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)] (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b] available in the settlor's estate.
- If the settlor has children by a former marriage, he or she may wish to confer some or all of the benefits of the ESOP on those children, and a trust will often be the only practical vehicle for doing this.
- If the surviving spouse lacks the ability to manage money wisely, it may be preferable to transfer the ESOP benefits to a trustee so that the trustee can manage them for the benefit of the spouse and any other beneficiaries.

Even when it is desirable to transfer the benefits to a trust rather than to name the surviving spouse as the beneficiary, it may not be possible to do so. The surviving spouse can be deprived of ESOP benefits only if he or she waives those rights in writing [see I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(11), 417(a)]. Waivers of the right to receive benefits are subject to stringent requirements that must be strictly satisfied before any effort to confer the benefits on some person other than the surviving spouse will be effective [see I.R.C. § 417(a)].

§ 73.28 Life Insurance

[1] In General

Life insurance is a contract under which one person (customarily called the "insurer"), for a stipulated consideration (customarily called the "premium"), agrees to pay a second person (customarily called the "beneficiary") a stipulated sum of money on the death of a third person (customarily called the "insured") [California Insurance Law Practice, Ch. 20, Nature and Types of Life Insurance, § 20.02[1] (Matthew Bender); see Ins. Code § 101].

For estate tax purposes, the value of a decedent's estate includes the proceeds of any life insurance policy on the decedent's life that are receivable by the decedent's executor [I.R.C. § 2042(1)]. The value of the estate also includes the proceeds of any life insurance policy on the decedent's life that are not receivable by the executor but in which the decedent possessed, at the time of death, any "incidents of ownership," exercisable or in conjunction with any person [I.R.C. § 2042(2)]. An "incident of ownership" is a power or right to change the beneficiary of the policy, surrender or cancel the policy, assign the policy, revoke an assignment of the policy, pledge the policy for a loan, or obtain a loan from the insurer against the surrender value of the policy [Treas. Reg. § 20.2042-1(c)(2)].

[2] As Trust Asset

Irrevocable inter vivos trusts are frequently used to acquire and own life insurance policies during the lifetime of the settlor and, after the settlor's death, to receive and hold the death benefits for the benefit of designated beneficiaries. An irrevocable inter vivos trust is particularly suited for this purpose because, if it is properly planned and executed, the trust assets will be removed from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes. This may result in significant estate tax savings, and also provide valuable liquidity after the settlor's death. Because irrevocable inter vivos trusts are so often used to own, acquire, and manage the death benefits of life insurance policies, the term "insurance trust" (or "life insurance trust") is widely understood to mean an irrevocable (and not revocable) inter vivos trust that is specially created and funded to accomplish these purposes. For general coverage of life insurance trusts, see Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts .

Although irrevocable inter vivos trusts are particularly well-suited to own and administer the benefits of life insurance, a revocable inter vivos trust may also be made the beneficiary of a life insurance contract. The death benefits of a life insurance policy may be paid to any kind of trust, including a revocable inter vivos trust [Prob. Code §§ 6300, 6321]. Irrevocability may be desirable when the settlor wishes to remove the insurance policy from his or her estate for federal estate tax purposes. In many cases, however, removal of the insurance policy from the estate is not strictly necessary; further, the settlor may be unable to afford to part on a permanent basis with the money needed to fund the premiums of a life insurance policy. If the death benefits of the policy are substantial, the premiums may also be substantial, and not every settlor will be able to afford the luxury of permanently removing them from his or her estate. Making a revocable inter vivos trust the beneficiary of death benefits may make more sense, particularly when the settlor's overall estate is modest and the premiums are not beyond the settlor's means.

When the death benefits of life insurance are payable to a revocable trust, several advantages may result. First, the insurance proceeds will be held with other trust assets for the benefit of the beneficiary or beneficiaries and administered, invested, and distributed according to a single, coherent plan. Second, the death benefits will provide the settlor's tax estate with a valuable measure of liquidity, providing the cash necessary to pay administrative expenses, debts, and taxes. If the revocable trust is properly planned and executed, it may also be divided upon the settlor's death into marital deduction and bypass trusts that will help to maximize estate tax savings, again according to a coherent and unified plan. For general coverage of marital deduction trusts and trust planning, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

§ 73.29 Installment Obligations

An installment obligation is a debt that is payable at different successive periods according as agreed upon between the debtor (or obligor) and the creditor (or obligee). A promissory note is one form of an installment obligation.

An installment obligation may properly be transferred to a revocable trust. When this is done, the transfer does not constitute an accelerated disposition for tax purposes [ Rev. Rul. 81-98, 1981-1 C.B. 40 ; Rev. Rul. 74-613 , ]. A transfer of an installment obligation back to the grantor is also permissible and does not constitute an accelerated disposition [ Rev. Rul. 76-100, 1976-1 CB 123 ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8011060 (Dec. 30, 1979) ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8001045 (Oct. 10, 1979) ; Priv. Ltr. Rul. 7943063 (July 26, 1979) ]. If the note is still held by the trust after the settlor's death, then no disposition occurs. However, a disposition may occur if the note is distributed outright to a trust beneficiary [I.R.C. §453 (e)(6)(C); Rev. Rul. 76-100, 1976-1 C.B. 123 ; Rev. Rul. 55-159, 1955-1 C.B. 391 ].

§ 73.30 Liquid Assets

Cash held in bank accounts, savings and loan associations, brokerage accounts, certificates of deposit, money market accounts, savings and loans associations, brokerage cash accounts, credit union accounts, and the equivalent, are generally described as liquid assets. Liquid assets are proper assets for contribution to revocable trusts. Substantial balances of cash are often transferred to revocable inter vivos trusts for the purpose of avoiding probate and providing trust liquidity. Smaller balances, however, are often held outside the trust, if for no other reason than that they are likely to be needed by the settlor in the day-to-day transaction of his or her business and will be more readily accessible if they are held in the settlor's individual name rather than in the trust.

It may not be necessary to transfer title of the client's checking accounts which are used for normal household and living expenses to the revocable trust. If the client maintains more than $5,000 in a household checking account, it may be advantageous to transfer the account into the revocable trust to later avoid probate in case other assets are discovered at the time of the client's death which would result in the entire estate outside of trust exceeding the $100,000 exclusion under Prob. Code § 13100. Assets valued at less than $100,000 and assets held in joint tenancy title can be collected under the affidavit procedure provided in Prob. Code § 13101. All other liquid asset accounts should be transferred to the client's revocable trust.

§ 73.31 Motor Vehicles

It is often unnecessary to transfer title to the settlor's motor vehicles to the trust. If, after the settlor's death, the total value of all assets owned outside the trust does not exceed $100,000, those assets may be transferred by the affidavit method without the necessity for probate administration [see Prob. Code § 13100 and discussion in § 73.30]. Further, the Vehicle Code contains several provisions providing for the simple transfer without probate proceedings of the title to motor vehicles after the death of an owner.

First, if the owner of a vehicle registered under the Vehicle Code dies and leaves no other property requiring probate, the person or persons entitled to the vehicle may obtain a transfer of title by simply presenting the appropriate registration and a declaration under penalty of perjury to the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV). The declaration must show the date and place of the owner's death, and must state the following [Veh. Code § 5910(b)(2)]:

- That the owner left no other property necessitating probate;
- That no probate proceeding has been or is now being conducted in California;
- That the declarant is entitled to the vehicle under the will or the laws of intestate succession;
- That no person has a superior right to the vehicle;
- That there are no unsecured creditors or, if there are, that their claims have been paid in full or otherwise discharged.

The DMV may also require that the declarant produce a death certificate and the names and addresses of any other heirs or beneficiaries [Veh. Code § 5910(b)(3), (4)]. This simple transfer procedure is available regardless of the value of the vehicle [Veh. Code § 5910(a)].

Second, if a motor vehicle is registered in the names of two or more co-owners in the alternative, with the word "or" between their names, upon the death of either co-owner the deceased co-owner's interest will pass to the surviving co-owner or co-owners as if the title or interest in the vehicle was held in joint tenancy, unless a contrary intention is set forth in writing on the application for registration [Veh. Code § 4150.5(a)].

Third, title to a motor vehicle may also be registered in "beneficiary form," with a direction to transfer ownership to a designated beneficiary on the owner's death [see Veh. Code § 4150.7(a)]. The certificate of ownership must include, after the owner's name, the words "transfer on death to" or "TOD" followed by the name of the beneficiary [Veh. Code § 4150.7(b)]. As long as the owner is living, the signature or consent of the beneficiary is not required for any transaction relating to the vehicle [Veh. Code § 4150.7(c)]. After the owner's death, the surviving beneficiary may secure a transfer of ownership by presenting the certificate of ownership to the DMV together with a declaration under penalty of perjury stating the date and place of the owner's death and that the declarant is entitled to the vehicle as the designated beneficiary [Veh. Code § 5910.5(e)]. The DMV may also require that the declarant produce a certificate of death [Veh. Code § 5910.5(e)(3)].

In addition to automobiles and trucks, various types of vehicles are subject to registration under the Vehicle Code and the simple transfer procedures just described. These include trailers [see Veh. Code § 4000(a)(1)], motorcycles [see Veh. Code § 38012(b)(1)], snowmobiles [see Veh. Code § 38012(b)(2)], sand or dune buggies [see Veh. Code § 38012(b)(3)], "house cars" [see Veh. Code § 362], certain mobilehomes [see Veh. Code § 396], and certain trailer coaches [see Veh. Code § 5352, 5353].

If the client owns a motor vehicle that has unusual value, or that the client has purchased for the purpose of investment, it may make sense under the circumstances to transfer title to that vehicle to the revocable trust.

§ 73.32 Vessels

If the client owns a boat or other vessel, it will often be unnecessary to transfer its title to the revocable trust. Registration and transfer of title to vessels is subject to many of the same rules that apply to motor vehicles registered with the DMV [see discussion in § 73.31]. The Vehicle Code contains numerous provisions relating to the registration of so-called "undocumented vessels," that is, vessels that do not have marine documents issued by the United States Bureau of Customs or any successor agency [see Veh. Code §§ 9840 et seq.; see also Veh. Code § 9840(g)]. For example, Veh. Code § 9852.5 contains provisions under which title to an undocumented vessel held by co-owners may be transferred to the surviving co-owner, and Veh. Code § 9852.7 contains similar provisions permitting the transfer of title when title to the undocumented vessel is held in "beneficiary form." Further, if the total value of all assets that the client owns outside the trust does not exceed $100,000, those assets may be simply transferred after the client's death by the affidavit method without the necessity for probate administration [see Prob. Code § 13101 and discussion in § 73.30].

§ 73.33 Manufactured Homes, Mobilehomes, and Floating Homes

It will often be unnecessary to transfer title to a manufactured home, mobilehome, floating home, or similar home to a revocable trust. Homes of this kind are subject to registration with the California Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) [see Health & Safety Code §§ 18000 et seq.] and subject to special transfer provisions administered by that agency [see Health & Safety Code § 18098 et seq.]. Provisions of the Health and Safety Code permit title to manufactured homes, mobilehomes, and floating homes to be transferred after the death of the owner without probate proceedings. These provisions are substantially similar to the Vehicle Code provisions that permit title to motor vehicles to be transferred without probate proceedings after the death of an owner [see discussion in § 73.31]. For example, any person who has succeeded to ownership of a manufactured home, mobilehome, or floating home under the owner's will or the laws of intestate succession may, at least 40 days after the death of the owner, submit a declaration under penalty of perjury showing his or her right to the property, and the Department will promptly effectuate the transfer [see Health & Safety Code § 18102(a)]. A similar provision permits the simple transfer of ownership when title to the home was held in "beneficiary form" [see Health & Safety Code § 18102.2(a)].

Notwithstanding these provisions, transfer of title to the trust may be desirable or necessary in various circumstances. If, for example, the manufactured home, mobile home, floating home, or other item has a substantial value and the settlor wishes it to be held with other trust assets and managed and distributed for the benefit of the trust beneficiaries, it should obviously be transferred to the trust. If the home is permanently affixed to a foundation, however, it is considered real property and is not subject to transfer under the Health and Safety Code provisions [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 5805]. A home of this type must be treated in the same manner as other real property.

§ 73.35 Safe Deposit Boxes

Whether the client should transfer assets held in a safe deposit box to the revocable trust will depend on the nature and value of those assets. It usually is not difficult to obtain access to a safe deposit box after the death of the owner. If the owner of box is deceased, any person who has a key to the box may obtain access to it before probate proceedings have begun by providing the financial institution in which the box is located with proof of the owner's death and reasonable proof of the identity of the person seeking access [Prob. Code § 331(b)]. The person may inspect and inventory the contents of the box under the supervision of an employee of the financial institution and remove any wills, trust instruments, or burial instructions found in it [Prob. Code § 331(d)]. However, the financial institution must photocopy any documents removed from the box, and it may charge the person seeking access for the cost of the photocopies [Prob. Code § 331(d)].

A settlor should never commingle trust property with non-trust assets. If the settlor wishes to store important trust documents (or tangible personal property belonging to the trust) in a safe deposit box, a separate box should be obtained for this purpose. Documents and tangible personal property belonging to the settlor personally should be stored in the settlor's personal safe deposit box.

§ 73.36 Patents and Trademarks

A patent is an invention or discovery of a new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement of such an invention or discovery [see 35 U.S.C. § 101]. A trademark is a word, name, symbol, or device (or any combination of these things) that a person is using or intends to use in commerce to identify and distinguish his or her goods from those manufactured or sold by others [15 U.S.C. § 1127]. A trademark that is used to identify and distinguish services as opposed to products is known as a service mark [15 U.S.C. § 1127].

Both patents and trademarks are subject to registration under federal statutes. Trademarks are governed by Chapter 22 of Title 15 of the United States Code [15 U.S.C. §§ 1051 et seq.], while patents are governed by Title 35 of the same code [35 U.S.C. §§ 1 et seq.]. Responsibility for administering these statutes is vested in the United States Patent and Trademark Office in Washington, D.C.

There is no legal requirement that a patent or trademark be registered. However, registration confers certain protections upon the patent or trademark holder and is advisable in many circumstances.

Legal documents evidencing ownership of a patent or trademark, together with any pending patent or trademark applications and any royalties received or to be received from the use of either of these rights, may be transferred to a revocable trust. The Patent and Trademark Office will accept for recordation almost any form of legal documentation evidencing a change of ownership from an individual to a revocable trust. Assignments are handled by the Assignment Branch of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, Washington, D.C. 20231. General information regarding assignments of U.S. patents and trademarks may be obtained by calling 703-308-9723.

If the estate planning attorney's experience in patent and trademark matters is limited, he or she should consult a specialist. Under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, an attorney who does not have sufficient skill and knowledge to competently perform the services that a client requests has a duty to acquire the necessary skill and knowledge before the services are performed, or associate or consult another attorney who is reasonably believed to be competent [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(B)]. Further, an attorney must refer a client to a specialist, or recommend the assistance of a specialist, if a reasonably skillful and careful practitioner would do so under similar circumstances [ Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714].

PRACTICE TIP:

The procedures discussed in this section pertain only to U.S. patents and trademarks. They do not cover foreign patents and trademarks.

§ 73.37 Copyrights

[1] In General

A single system of protection for copyrights was established in the United States by the Federal Copyright Act of 1976 [see 17 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.]. This Act abolished the former system under which unpublished works were protected by the common law and published works were protected by statutory law. Under the 1976 Act, copyright protection is extended to any original work of authorship as soon as it is fixed in a tangible medium of expression from which it can be perceived, reproduced, or otherwise communicated, either directly or with the aid of a machine or device [see 17 U.S.C. § 102(a)]. Copyright protection is available for original works that are fixed in any tangible medium of expression, whether known now or later developed [17 U.S.C. § 102(a)]. Works of authorship that are protected under the 1976 Act include literary, musical, dramatic, graphic, pictorial, architectural, audiovisual, choreographic, and sculptural works, as well as motion pictures, sound recordings, and pantomimes [17 U.S.C. § 102(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

A copyright does not include titles, slogans and symbols. Titles, slogans and symbols are matters of trademark law.

[2] Duration

Before the enactment of the Federal Copyright Act of 1976, statutory copyright protection was granted for an initial term of 28 years and could be renewed for an additional 28 years. Under the Act of 1976, if a work was created on or after January 1, 1978, copyright protection is available from the date of creation and for 70 years after the death of the author [see 17 U.S.C. § 302(a)]. If the work was created jointly by two or more authors who did not work for hire, copyright protection is available for the lifetime of the last surviving author plus 70 years [17 U.S.C. § 302(b)]. Any copyright that was existing in its first term on January 1, 1978, continues for 28 years from the date it was originally secured [17 U.S.C. § 304(a)(1)(A)].

[3] Notice of Copyright

Before January 1, 1978, a notice of copyright had to be placed on a published work to secure the protection of the copyright law. Under the Federal Copyright Act of 1976, there is no requirement that a notice be placed on the published work, but a notice may give the copyright holder additional protection in the event of an infringement suit. If it is proven that the defendant in the infringement suit had access to the published work, and if the work included a copyright notice in the form and position required by statute [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 401(b), (c) (visually perceptible copies), 402(b),(c) (phonorecords)], the defendant generally cannot rely on the defense of innocent infringement in mitigation of actual or statutory damages [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 401(d) (visually perceptible copies), 402(d) (phonorecords); but see 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(2) (statutory damages against nonprofit educational institution, library, archives, or public broadcaster as remitted if infringer believed fair use doctrine applied)].

NOTE:

Counsel should have obtained detailed information about the clients' assets in connection with planning and drafting the trust instrument and other estate planning documents. For a list of the basic facts that should be obtained during that process, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning. The form in § 60.200 is a client interview checklist that can be used to assemble the necessary information. See also Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, for general discussion of information that will be needed during the planning process. For another client questionnaire, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Div. IX, Miscellaneous Estate Planning Documents, Miscellaneous Document 5 (Matthew Bender).

When an attorney prepares a trust for a husband and wife, both spouses are clients and the attorney owes an equal duty to each of them. A conflict of interest can arise that may make representation of both spouses unwise or unethical [see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.110; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 4, Ethical Consideration and Professional Responsibility (Matthew Bender)]. For a sample conflict of interest disclosure for dual representation, see California Wills & Trusts Forms, Div. IX, Miscellaneous Estate Planning Documents, Miscellaneous Document 1 (Matthew Bender).

§ 73.110 Identifying Assets to Be Transferred to Trust

1. Review list of client's assets supplied by client.

2. For each asset, determine whether asset:

a. Will be transferred to trust;

b. Will be held outside trust, or

NOTE:

Some assets may either be unsuitable as trust assets because they are difficult to manage within the framework of a trust, because there are legal or contractual restrictions that prohibit or limit the settlors' ability to transfer them to the trust, or because the transfer would have undesirable tax consequences. The Legal Background to this chapter discusses considerations relating to specific assets. Additional information relevant to this topic may be found in the Legal Background to Ch. 60, Estate Planning. For additional discussion, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Devices, Ch. 94, Trust Property, and Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender).

c. Requires a designation of beneficiary.

3. Determine whether there are any legal or contractual restrictions on transferring property to trust, such as:

a. Buy-sell agreements affecting disposition of partnership interests or stock in closely-held corporations [ see § 73.18; buy-sell agreements are discussed in detail in ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements ].

b. Transfer restrictions on closely-held securities [ see § 73.15[1]; transfer restrictions are discussed in detail in ch. 6, Securities Regulation Issues ].

c. Limitations of disposition of property imposed by agreements between settlor and a former spouse, including:

(1) Premarital agreements.

(2) Postmarital agreements.

(3) Marital settlement agreements incident to dissolution of former marriage.

4. Determine whether any preliminary transmutations of property will be necessary before trust is funded.

NOTE:

The most common situation in which a transmutation is advisable is the case of joint tenancy real property held by the settlors. It is generally regarded as inadvisable to transfer joint tenancy property directly to a trust. For a general discussion of joint tenancy interests in estate planning, see § 60.12[5]; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Devices, § 3.06[1][b], and Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender).

§ 73.111 Mechanics of Transferring Assets to Trust

1. Review procedures for transferring each of settlors' assets to trust.

NOTE:

The Procedural Guide describes the steps necessary to transfer specific types of assets to an inter vivos trust. Before beginning the funding process, the attorney should review the steps necessary to transfer each asset to become familiar with the steps involved.

2. For each asset, determine whether attorney or settlors will be responsible for taking steps necessary to make transfer.

NOTE:

This determination should be made in consultation with the settlors and after the attorney has made his or her own determination as to whether the settlors will be able to understand and perform the necessary steps, as well as the likelihood that they will actually do so [ see § 73.11[4]]. Failure to fund a trust in accordance with the estate plan can be a disaster for all involved (including the attorney) and can lead to unnecessary and expensive litigation.

a. Will settlors be able to understand and execute the necessary procedures?

b. Are settlors willing to do so?

c. If settlors want attorney to "do all the work," do settlors understand that this will increase trust start-up costs?

d. What is likelihood that settlors will fail to take the necessary steps even if they express a wish or willingness to do so?

§ 73.120 Preliminary Procedures

1. Discuss funding process prospectively with settlors and make certain that settlors understand:
  - a. Importance of funding trust and consequences of failure to do so.
  - b. Respective responsibilities of attorney and settlors relative to procedures to be taken to transfer each asset to trust.
  - c. Exact steps that must be taken to perform each transfer or step that will be responsibility of settlor.
2. Confirm respective responsibilities of parties in written memorandum to settlors.

NOTE:

Confirmation of the parties' respective responsibilities serves a dual purpose. First, it obviously protects the attorney from a potential malpractice claim based on failure to fund the trust. Second, it gives the settlors a written record that they may use as a reference source and checklist to make sure they are doing everything they need to do. To achieve both these purposes, the memorandum should be detailed and specific.

1. Review due-on-sale clause in deed of trust, if any, and if concern exists over possible effect of clause, write mortgage lender [see § 73.200] to:

NOTE:

Many deeds of trust contain due-on-sale clauses. For a discussion of the enforceability of these clauses, see § 73.13[7][a].

- a. Obtain lender's approval of change of title.
  - b. Verify that settlors' obligations under existing loan provisions will remain the same.
2. Obtain and review deed to determine how title is held, legal description, and assessor's parcel number.
  3. If title is held in joint tenancy, convert property to community property by preparing either:

NOTE:

Transfer of joint tenancy property to a trust severs the joint tenancy. Most experienced attorneys recommend transmuting joint tenancy property to community property before conveying it to a revocable trust. For discussion of estate planning issues that arise in connection with joint tenancy property, see § 60.12[5]; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 3, Selecting the Proper Estate Planning Devices, § 3.06[1][b], and Ch. 140, Implementing and Funding the Inter Vivos Trust (Matthew Bender).

a. Deed conveying property from parties as joint tenants to parties as community property, or

b. Transmutation agreement converting property from joint tenancy property to community property.

NOTE:

For discussion of the statutes governing transmutation agreements, and transmutation agreement forms, see Ch. 112, Posnuptial Agreements, § 112.15; see also California Wills & Trusts Forms, Div. IX, Miscellaneous Estate Planning Documents, Miscellaneous Documents 30 and 31 (Matthew Bender).

4. Prepare appropriate deed.

a. Determine type of deed [ see § 73.13[1]-[6]; see also Ch. 27, Deeds and Recording ], either:

(1) Grant deed [ see § 73.212]; or

NOTE:

§ 73.212 is a trust transfer deed that has the same effect as a grant deed.

(2) Quitclaim deed.

b. Make sure deed conforms to recorder's specifications.

c. Title should read as follows:

_____ [name(s) of trustee(s), e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], as Trustees, or their successors in interest, under the _____ [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], DATED _____.

5. Have all transferors execute deed before a notary public [ see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].

6. Prepare and obtain transferee's signature on Preliminary Change of Ownership form [§ 73.213]

NOTE:

Only one signature is required.

7. Record deed.

a. Forward original and one copy of executed deed, together with Preliminary Change of Ownership form, to county recorder's office of county where real property is situated, and request recordation of deed.

NOTE:

The recorder's office is required to forward the Preliminary Change of Ownership form to the county assessor's office.

b. Submit check for appropriate fee to recorder's office.

NOTE:

Recording fees vary from county to county. Check with the recorder's office for the appropriate fee.

c. Provide stamped, self-addressed return envelope, and request county recorder to return an endorsed recorded copy of deed.

NOTE:

The recorder's office will return the original deed after the microfilming has been completed. This process may take as long as four to six weeks.

1. Determine type of ownership in time-share interest:

NOTE:

The owner receives either an actual fee interest in the subject property, which is referred to as a "time-share estate" or an "interval ownership," or a mere right to use the property, which is referred to as a "time-share use." For additional discussion of time-share interests, see Ch. 33A, Time-Share Projects .

a. Time-Share Estate.

NOTE:

A "time-share estate" is a right of occupancy in a time-share project which is coupled with an estate in the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.5(b)].

b. Time-Share Use.

NOTE:

A "time-share use" is a licensed or contractual or membership right of occupancy in a time-share project which is not coupled with an estate in the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.5(c)].

2. Contact administrative offices where settlor purchased the time-share interest to determine what documentation is required to transfer title to client's revocable trust.

3. Review title documentation that was recorded when time-share interest was initially purchased (condominium conveyance for time-share unit or certificate of membership) and verify:

- a. How title of ownership is held.
- b. Legal description of settlor's unit.
- c. Assessor's parcel number, if any.
- d. The common address.

4. If property in question is located in California, follow steps specified in § 73.121 to convey title to trust.

NOTE:

The steps are the same as those for transferring title to residential real property.

5. If interest is located outside California,

a. Determine what agency handles the recordation of deeds in state and county in which real property is situated.

NOTE:

The attorney should review the recording stamp on the old deed, or determine the area code and check with the information operator for a telephone number of the recording agency for the appropriate state and county.

b. Telephone recording agency in county where real property is located and determine:

- (1) What documentation is required.

NOTE:

Some states require an assessor questionnaire comparable to the Preliminary Change of Ownership form required by the county assessor in California.

- (2) Amount of recording fees.

- (3) Amount of time typically required to process recording request and return executed copy of deed.

c. Request that recording agency forward all required forms to attorney's office, or ascertain whether a California deed is acceptable.

d. Prepare appropriate instrument transferring title, either:

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title.

- (1) Deed [ see § 73.212]; or

- (2) Assignment of time-share interest for time-share ownership outside California [ see § 73.220].

e. If time-share-interest is located in State of Hawaii:

(1) Prepare Exemption from Conveyance Tax, Form P-64B (Rev. 1991) [ see § 73.221], and

(2) Submit exemption form along with deed when deed is submitted for recordation.

f. Prepare other documentation, if necessary.

g. Have all transferors execute deed before a notary public [ see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].

h. Record deed.

(1) Forward original and one copy of executed deed or assignment, together with any other necessary documentation, to recording agency in county where interest is situated, and request recordation.

(2) Submit check for appropriate fee.

(3) Provide stamped, self-addressed return envelope, and request agency to return an endorsed recorded copy of deed or assignment.

i. Follow up with the recorder's office if original deed has not been returned within six to eight weeks.

§ 73.126 Foreign Time-Share Ownership Interests

1. Verify whether or not settlor can record title in country where time-share interest is situated.

NOTE:

Some foreign countries prohibit United States citizens from owning a fee simple or equivalent interest in time-share ownerships.

2. Review settlors' time-share condominium conveyance documents to determine:

- a. Whether title has been recorded in settlors' names as individuals, and
- b. Whether time-share ownership interest can be transferred to settlors' revocable trust.

NOTE:

If the deed prohibits or restricts transfer of the time-share interest, see Paragraph 9, below.

3. Contact the time-share development where settlors purchased time-share interest to determine what agency handles recordation of legal documents in area where property is located.

NOTE:

If the attorney is unable to contact the time-share development, it may be worthwhile to directly contact an agency comparable to a county recorder's office, or contact a title company in the area where the client's time-share interest is situated.

4. Request that agency forward any necessary legal documentation, or ascertain whether or not a deed in the form of a United States deed will suffice.

5. Prepare appropriate deed [ see § 73.212] or other form of documentation.

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title in an instrument comparable to a United States deed.

6. Have all transferors execute deed before a notary public [ see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].

7. If required, submit pertinent pages from settlors' revocable trust agreement, e.g.;

- a. Full copy or abstract.
- b. First page.
- c. Pertinent pages pertaining to trustee powers and duties.
- d. Signature pages of settlors and trustee.
- e. Page containing all-purpose notary acknowledgment.

8. Forward all required documentation to appropriate agency for recordation, together with any required fee.

9. If transfer of interest is prohibited by deed:

- a. Prepare form for assignment of foreign time-share interest outside United States [ see § 73.207].

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title.

- b. Have all transferors execute deed before a notary public [ see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].

  5. Contact county recorder or county clerk in state and county where oil and gas interest is located to determine fee for recordation.
  6. Inquire whether it is necessary to prepare and submit a preliminary change of ownership form to county recorder or county clerk.
  7. Send original of appropriate deed or assignment to county recorder or county clerk for recordation with required fee and any other documentation:
    - a. Provide a stamped self-addressed envelope, and return an endorsed, recorded copy of deed or assignment to attorney's office pending return of original deed or assignment.
    - b. Provide a second stamped self-addressed return envelope and request that county recorder return original deed or assignment when recordation process has been completed.
  8. Send copy of endorsed recorded mineral deed to managing company.

NOTE:

Once the change of title is in effect, the managing company must change its books/records to reflect the change.

9. Obtain amended division order by instructing paying company to prepare and return an amended division order.
10. Provide settlors' social security numbers and have settlors sign amended division order as trustees.
11. Return amended division order to managing company with letter instructing company to change its records to reflect ownership by settlors' revocable trust.

NOTE:

The letter should indicate that the company's records reflect the form of title noted in § 73.121, P (4)(c).

12. Instruct managing company to:
  - a. Initiate pay status to settlors' revocable trust for royalty payments, and
  - b. Forward the royalty payments to settlors as trustees.

2. For a limited partnership interest, review Beneficiary's Share, of Income, Deductions, Credits, etc., (IRC Form 1040, Schedule K-1) to determine identity of general partner.
3. Review partnership agreement to determine whether transfer to a revocable trust is an authorized assignment.
4. If a settlor is member of partnership that is engaged in professional practice (e.g., law or medical partnership) in which each partner is licensed member of profession, review discussion in § 73.24 and advise settlors how to proceed.

NOTE:

The client's interest cannot be transferred to a revocable trust unless certain conditions are complied with [ see § 73.24].

5. Review partnership agreement to determine who must consent to transfer.
6. If review of partnership agreement reveals that an amendment is necessary before settlor's interest can be transferred to revocable trust:
  - a. Contact general partners and ascertain whether they will accept an amendment prepared by attorney's office on behalf of settlor.

- b. If so, prepare amendment of limited partnership agreement and assignment, assumption and consent [see form in § 73.260].
- c. Have settlor who owns partnership interest execute document before a notary public [see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].
- d. Forward amendment to general partner for review and signature.
- e. Request that general partner return an executed copy of amendment to attorney's office.

7. If transfer to revocable trust is not prohibited (and no amendment of partnership agreement is required):

- a. Obtain and forward settlor's original certificate of ownership to general partners.
- b. Provide social security number of settlor.

NOTE:

If the settlors are married, generally one social security number is sufficient.

- c. Prepare an assignment of partnership interest with consent [see form in § 73.260].
- d. Have settlor who owns partnership interest execute document before a notary public [see § 73.201 (acknowledgment)].
- e. Submit pertinent articles of trust agreement, including pages that identify trust name, trustee powers, signatures, and notary public signature.
- f. Submit transfer fee, if required.
- g. Request that general partners:
  - (1) Review and sign consent.
  - (2) Return assignment of interest form along with signed consent.
  - (3) Reissue certificate of limited partnership interest in revocable trust name.

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title.

h. Forward reissued certificate of ownership to settlors for safekeeping, or determine if settlors want attorney's office to retain original assignments and consent for safekeeping.

8. Advise general partner to file certificate of amendment to certificate of limited partnership with Secretary of State if transfer to trust (or any other event) results in any of the following:

- a. Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15622(b), repealed January 1, 2010]):
  - (1) Change in limited partner's name.

- (2) Change in street address of principal executive office.
- (3) Change in address of general partner.
- (4) Change in address of partner's agent for service of process (unless corporate agent is designated).
- (5) Appointment of new agent for service of process.
- (6) Admission of general partner.
- (7) Cessation of general partner to be general partner.
- (8) Discovery by any of general partners of any false or erroneous material statement contained in original certificate or any prior amendment.

b. Under ULPA '08 (Corp. Code § 15903.02(b), operative January 1, 2008):

NOTE:

C. Procedural Guide to Transferring Specific Assets to Trust

26-73 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 73.135

AUTHOR: Margaret Johnson Hazel Lange Reviewed by James V. Quillinan

§ 73.135 Sole Proprietorship

1. Consider whether business will continue after death of proprietor, and whether trustee has sufficient expertise to continue business.

NOTE:

Holding a sole proprietorship in the trust name may not be preferable from the settlors' perspective. Other business entities may better serve the settlors in a trust context. For more detailed discussion of the estate planning issues presented by business interests, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 29, Devises of Business Interests, § 29.02 (Matthew Bender).

If the successor trustee nominated in the trust instrument does not have the necessary expertise to continue the business after the proprietor's death, it may be necessary to appoint a special trustee to operate the business. If the attorney concludes that appointment of a special trustee is necessary, and the trust instrument does not already provide for one, it may be necessary to amend the trust instrument to provide for appointment of a special trustee. For provisions governing the appointment of a special trustee, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions ; see also California Wills & Trusts Forms, Div. II, Individual Inter Vivos Trust Provisions, Part 5, Trustee, Alts. 5.40-1, 5.40-2 (Matthew Bender).

2. Review assets and liabilities of business to determine whether assets are sufficient to cover known or contingent liabilities of business.

NOTE:

If the business has significant actual or potential liabilities, it may be inadvisable to transfer it to a trust. On a settlor's death, assets held in a revocable trust will be subject to creditors' claims if the assets of the probate estate are insufficient to cover those claims [Prob. Code § 19001(a)]. However, creditors' claims can be cut off by the filing a trustee's notice to creditors [Prob. Code § 19003], in which case creditors have a limited time within which to make any claims against the trust assets [see Prob. Code § 19100(a)]; for discussion of the procedure for filing claims against assets of a revocable trust, see California Probate Practice, Ch. 12A, Claims Against Decedent's Revocable Trust (Matthew Bender)]. Thus, if the business is not transferred to the trust, and the trustee's notice procedure is used, there is only a limited period during which creditors' claims can be asserted after the proprietor's death. After that period has expired, creditors of the business can no longer assert claims against the trust assets. On the other hand, if the business is placed in the trust, the trust's potential liability for creditors' claims will continue throughout the duration of the time the business remains in the trust.

3. If decision is made to transfer sole proprietorship to trust, prepare and have settlors execute assignment of sole proprietorship [see form in § 73.261].
4. Consider use of fictitious business name for business after assets and liabilities have been transferred to trust to facilitate lifetime operations of business, under proprietor's individual name or a name sufficient to identify business as a separate and distinct asset of trust.

§ 73.136 Interest in Professional Practice

1. Determine whether transfer of interest to trust is permissible.

NOTE:

If a settlor is an owner of or a partner in a professional practice, or a stockholder in a professional corporation, the settlor's interest cannot be transferred to a revocable trust unless certain conditions are met [see Corp. Code § 13407; see also discussion in § 73.24]. These conditions may make transfer of such an interest to a trust impossible or unwise. Moreover, most professional partnerships and corporations have buy-sell agreements in place. The remaining steps apply only in those few instances in which the attorney determines that a transfer is legally possible and appropriate.

2. Cancel certificates for previously issued shares in professional corporation and place canceled certificates under appropriate section in corporation's corporate minute book.

3. Reissue new certificates for number of shares previously issued in name of revocable trust.

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title.

4. Indicate cancellation and reissue of shares on corporate ledger kept in corporate minute book.

5. Place reissued certificates in safekeeping or advise settlors to place certificates in his or her safe deposit box.

NOTE:

Presently, there is no requirement to notify the Secretary of State of the transfer to the client's revocable trust.

§ 73.137 Corporate Bonds

1. Determine whether to:

a. Retain stockbroker's services [see P 2]; or

NOTE:

If the settlors intend to buy and sell securities in future, they should be advised to open a brokerage account in the name of the trust.

b. Deal directly with transfer agent [see P 3].

NOTE:

If the settlors only wish to transfer existing corporate bonds, and no future transactions are anticipated, the settlors should be advised to handle the transfer through a transfer agent.

2. If stockbroker is engaged in connection with transfer, advise settlor to arrange appointment with brokerage firm to complete application to open brokerage account in name of trust.

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title to be used for the account.

3. If transfer will be made through transfer agent directly, determine who transfer agent is.

NOTE:

To obtain this information, the attorney should check with a local brokerage firm or consult Standard &

Poor's Guide at a local library.

4. Ask settlors to assemble and deliver all original corporate bonds to attorney's office.

5. Complete stock assignment separate from certificate [see form in § 73.250].

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title to be used for the new title on the certificate or stock power.

6. Have each bond holder execute assignment and/or power for each transfer before:

a. Bank or trust company officer, or

b. Member firm of nationally recognized security exchange authorized to make signature or medallion guarantee.

7. Prepare letter of instructions to brokerage firm and/or transfer agent [see § 73.251] and obtain signature of each bond holder.

8. Mail original bond certificate, assignment and/or power, and letter of instructions to transfer agent or brokerage firm.

9. Use registered or certified mail with return receipt requested.

10. Mark calendar to expect receipt of reissued certificate within a month to six weeks.

11. Upon receipt of reissued bond certificates instruct settlors to place reissued certificates in safekeeping (preferably in safe deposit box).

§ 73.140 United States Savings Bonds

NOTE:

All transfers of United States Savings Bonds are handled by the Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City, MO. The client's stockbroker may act as an intermediary and provide this service.

1. Contact settlors' bank or Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City, MO., (800) 333-2919 or (816) 881-2409, and obtain appropriate form to transfer savings bonds to revocable trust [see Request for Reissue of United States Savings Bonds/Notes in Name of Trustee of Personal Trust Estate, form PD 1851, reproduced in § 73.270].

2. Have all owners sign on reverse side of Form PD 1851 to transfer U.S. Savings Bonds Series E and EE and Series H and HH.

NOTE:

The client's signature is not required on the reverse side of the bonds themselves, since the bonds are not being liquidated.

a. Have settlors sign before appropriate officer from a bank, savings and loan or credit union authorized to give signature guarantee.

NOTE:

The Federal Reserve Bank WILL NOT accept a stockbroker's signature guarantee or medallion guarantee.

b. Arrange for appropriate signatures of named POD beneficiary:

(1) For Series E or Series H bonds, POD beneficiary must sign on reverse side of Form PD 1851 to approve transfer to revocable trust.

(2) For Series EE and HH bonds, named POD beneficiary's signature is not required on Form PD 1851 to transfer Series EE or Series HH bonds to revocable trust.

3. Prepare letter of instructions [see form in § 73.251] to Federal Reserve Bank to transfer settlors' U.S. Savings bonds to trust.

NOTE:

See § 73.121, P (4)(c), for the proper form of title.

4. Mail Form PD 1851, original savings bonds, and letter of instructions, by registered or certified mail with return receipt requested, to Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City, MO., at following address:

§ 73.148 Installment Obligations

1. Review installment obligation held by settlor(s) to determine whether said obligation is:

- a. Unsecured; or
- b. Secured by deed of trust or other security.

2. If installment obligation is unsecured, settlors should assign obligation to revocable trust to indicate intent to fund revocable trust with obligation:

- a. Prepare assignment of promissory note [see form in § 73.290].
- b. Arrange for settlors to sign assignment in front of a notary public.
- c. Present assignment to debtor and ask debtor to sign acknowledgment:
  - (1) Recognizing assignment; and
  - (2) Indicating that future payments will be made to trustees in following form:

_____ [name(s) of trustee(s), e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], as Trustees under the terms of the _____ [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], DATED _____.

d. Have settlors date and endorse original promissory note on reverse side; following language is recommended:

As a conveyance without consideration to change the manner in which the interest of the parties is held, we, _____ [name(s) of settlor(s)] assign to _____ [name(s) of trustee(s)], as Trustees of the _____ [name of trust], dated _____, all right, title and interest in this promissory note for $ _____ [amount of note], dated _____, and signed by _____ [name(s) of payor(s)].

_____ [signature(s) of settlor(s)/assignor(s)]

e. Attach assignment of promissory note to client's original promissory note, once assignment has been completed and debtor has acknowledged assignment.

f. Instruct settlors to retain original promissory note and assignment in safekeeping.

3. If promissory note is secured, settlors should prepare and record assignment of deed of trust to revocable trust:

a. Obtain form for assignment of deed of trust from any title company, or prepare own form [see form in § 73.291].

b. Have settlors execute assignment of deed of trust before a notary public.

c. Complete preliminary change of ownership form [see form in § 73.213].

d. Record assignment of deed of trust in county where settlor's real property is located.

e. Mail original preliminary change of ownership form with assignment of deed of trust to county recorder, and instruct Recorder to forward preliminary change of ownership form to the county assessor.

f. Mail a copy of assignment of deed of trust to debtor when assignment of deed of trust has been recorded and returned.

g. Attach assignment of deed of trust to original deed of trust to indicate progression of title.

h. Instruct settlors to retain original promissory note and assignment of deed of trust in safekeeping.

1. Collect all passbooks and most recent statements to determine:
  - a. Names, addresses, and telephone numbers of financial institutions.
  - b. Account numbers.
  - c. How title is held.
  - d. Approximate value of each account.
  - e. Whether any accounts have automatic deposits.
2. Request new signature cards from each financial institution, and complete for each account holder, showing title in following form:

VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON, Trustees of THE LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST,

DATED _____.

3. Have settlors execute cards and arrange to personally deliver the new signature cards to financial institutions.

NOTE:

The banks will have their own documentation and procedures and will insist that those procedures be followed.

4. If it is inconvenient for settlors to personally deliver new signature cards to financial institution, prepare letter of instructions [see form in § 73.300].
5. Instruct settlors to review future statements to confirm transfer to trust.

1. Comply with State Board of Equalization procedures to obtain use tax clearance and thereby avoid a transfer tax.

a. Contact nearest State Board of Equalization office and obtain Vehicle/Vessel Use Tax Information, Form BT-106 [see form in § 73.320].

b. Complete Form BT-106.

c. Assemble following documentation required by State Board of Equalization to issue use tax clearance:

(1) Certificate of ownership ("pink slip").

NOTE:

The original is preferred, but a copy may suffice.

(2) Current registration, if available.

NOTE:

The original is preferred, but a copy may suffice.

(3) Trustee Certificate with pertinent articles of revocable trust; i.e., face page, trust powers, signature, and notary pages.

(4) Provide name of lien holder, if any.

d. Arrange to have documents delivered to nearest State Board of Equalization office (see locations below):

250 South Second Street
San Jose, CA 95113-2706
(408) 277-1231

NOTE:

The State Board of Equalization maintains an 800 number at 1-800-400-7115. The mailing addresses of the local offices sometimes differs from the physical location of an office. Call ahead of time to check.

The Board will review the forms and pertinent articles of the revocable trust, and determine whether the transfer is exempt. If the clerk finds that the transfer is exempt, the clerk will approve the application and issue the appropriate tax clearance for the client's vehicle or vessel.

2. Check to determine that Board of Equalization has returned copy of Form BT-106 [see P 1, above] along with a Use Tax Clearance; either Form BT-111 (internal form) for gasoline vehicles and diesel vehicles under 7,000 lbs, or Form BT-1138 (internal form) for diesel vehicles over 7,000 lbs.

3. Have settlors present in person or mail Form BT-106 and Form BT-111 or Form BT-1138 (whichever is appropriate [see P 2, above]) to nearest office of Department of Motor Vehicles.

4. Arrange for registered owner(s) to sign off on line 1 on face of Certificate of Ownership as follows:

- a. For sole ownership, only signature of sole owner is required.
- b. For joint ownership (when "or" appears between the names), only one signature is required.
- c. If "and" appears between names, both signatures are required.

5. Complete new registered owner information, with settlors' current address, on reverse side of Certificate of Ownership ("pink slip") to transfer title to trustee; form of title should read as follows:

_____ [name(s) of trustee(s), e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], Trustee[s], or successor(s) of the _____ [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], DATED _____.

6. Submit check for transfer fee made payable to Department of Motor Vehicles.

NOTE:

The attorney should check with the Department of Motor Vehicles to determine the current amount of the fee.

7. Mark calendar four to six weeks ahead to ascertain whether settlors received new certificate.

§ 73.200 Trustee's Certification of Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a certification of trust that meets the requirements of Prob. Code § 18100.5. It contains all of the information that third parties typically will need to know before they deal with the trust or cooperate with the trustee in carrying out a transaction that affects the trust or trust property. The form does not contain any of the dispositive provisions of the trust, which the settlor, beneficiaries, and trustee ordinarily will wish to keep private and confidential.

After a trust has been established, the trustee may be required from time to time to prove his or her authority to act with respect to the trust assets. Third parties such as banks, title companies, brokers, and transfer agents will require evidence of the trustee's authority and powers before they will deal with the trustee. This evidence can be provided by supplying a copy of the trust instrument, but providing a complete copy of the trust instrument may compromise portions of the trust, such as its dispositive provisions, that the settlor and beneficiaries would prefer to keep confidential. Trustees traditionally have attempted to preserve the privacy of trusts while still satisfying third parties as to their authority and powers by supplying an abstract of the trust instrument or selected pages from the instrument.

This form offers another solution to this problem. While it contains all of the information set forth in a typical abstract of trust, it also confers on third parties dealing with the trustee a measure of protection against liability claims that might otherwise be asserted against them. When a third party relies in good faith on a certification of trust that meets the requirements of Prob. Code § 18100.5, the third party will be protected from claims that may be asserted by beneficiaries or other parties who are damaged by the third party's acts [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(f)]. This may provide a valuable inducement for third parties who might otherwise be reluctant to deal with the trustee or the trust property.

[b] Features of Form--In General

This form includes space for providing all of information that is permitted to be included in a certification of trust under Prob. Code § 18100.5(b). It also includes all of the information required to be included in the certification under that section [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(c)]. However, the form may be adapted to include other information that is required or seems appropriate under the circumstances.

[c] Trustee Powers

The list of trustee powers set forth in this form should be derived from the list of trustee powers in the trust instrument. In most cases, it will be possible simply to copy the list from the instrument to this form. In the alternative, the relevant pages of the trust document may be copied and appended to the certification. Which of these two approaches is used may be simply a matter of the attorney's convenience. The statute permits third parties to require the trustee offering the certification to provide "copies" of excerpts from the original trust documents, any amendments to these documents, and any other documents that designate, evidence, or pertain to the succession of the trustee or confer on the trustee the power to act in the pending transaction, or both [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(e)], so it may be advisable to include the actual copies of those portions of the instrument in lieu of merely restating them in the instrument itself, to foreclose potential objections from nitpicking third parties. Under no circumstances, however, should the certification contain the trust's dispositive provisions [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(d)], nor may a third party require the submission of the entire instrument in lieu of the certification [Prob. Code § 18100.5(e), (h); see [f], below.]

[d] Description of Real Property

The space provided in this form for identifying the trust property may be used to include a legal description of real property held by the trust. It may be useful to include a legal description if it is contemplated that the certification will be recorded. A legal description may help to convince the recorder that the certification is an instrument that "affects" the title to or possession of real property and that is entitled to recordation under Gov. Code § 27280(a).

[e] Signature and Attestation

This form must be signed by the trustee [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(a), (c)]. If there are co-trustees, it must be signed by all of the currently acting co-trustees. All of the signatures on the form must be acknowledged [see Prob. Code § 18100.5(c)]. This form also includes an optional declaration under penalty of perjury. While this declaration is not required, it has the same force and effect as an affidavit, and makes the certification of trust admissible as evidence in any subsequent litigation.

[f] Reliance by Third Parties; Copies of Relevant Statutes

This form includes a statement that third parties are entitled to rely on the certification in dealing with the trust. This statement paraphrases the contents of Prob. Code § 18100.5(f). The statement also contains a warning to third parties regarding Prob. Code § 18100.5(h), which imposes liability on third parties for bad faith refusal to accept a certification in lieu of the trust documents (except as permitted by law; see [c], above). These statements are not specifically required or authorized by Prob. Code § 18100.5; however, they merely restate the legal effects of a certification under that section. They are included to provide trustees and attorneys with a measure of leverage against third parties who may be unfamiliar with the law governing trust certifications and/or insisting on rigidly adhering to institutional requirements that are inconsistent with Prob. Code § 18100.5. To bolster that leverage and as an aid to all concerned, a copy of Prob. Code § 18100.5 is also included at the end of the form.

[g] Recording Certification of Trust

The certification of trust signed by the currently acting trustee may be recorded in the office of the county recorder in the county where all or a portion of the real property held in the trust is located [Prob. Code § 18100.5(c)]. Any person may record a certification of trust that relates to an interest in real property in the office of the county recorder in the county where all or a portion of the property is located. The recorded certification is a public record of the real property. A certification of trust need not be recorded in conjunction with the recordation of a transfer of title of real property involving a trust [Prob. Code § 18100.5(i)].

[h] Recording Affidavit of Change of Trustee

When title to an interest in real property is affected by a change of trustee, the successor trustee may execute and record in the county where the property is located an affidavit of change of trustee. The affidavit must include the legal description of the property, the name of the former trustee(s), and the name of the successor trustee(s). It may also include excerpts from the original trust documents, any amendments to these documents, and any other documents that evidence or pertain to the succession of the successor trustee(s) [Prob. Code § 18105]. The affidavit is subject to all statutory requirements for recorded documents [Prob. Code § 18106(a)].

The recorded affidavit must be indexed in the index of grantors and grantees. For purposes of the index entry, the person who has been succeeded as trustee is deemed the grantor [Prob. Code § 18106(b)]. The recorded affidavit is prima facie evidence of the change of trustee insofar as it identifies an interest in real property located in the county, title to which is affected by the change. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence [Prob. Code § 18107].

Any person whose interest is, or may be, affected by the recordation of an affidavit of change of trustee may require the successor trustee to provide copies of excerpts from the original trust documents, any amendments to these documents, and any other documents that evidence or pertain to the succession of the successor trustee(s). The entire trust, any amendments to the trust, or the dispositive provisions of the trust need not be provided [Prob. Code § 18108].

[Attach copies of text of Prob. Code § 18100.5, as follows:]

TEXT OF CALIFORNIA PROBATE CODE SECTION 18100.5

§ 18100.5. (a) The trustee may present a certification of trust to any person in lieu of providing a copy of the trust instrument to establish the existence or terms of the trust. A certification of trust may be executed by the trustee voluntarily or at the request of the person with whom the trustee is dealing.

(b) The certification of trust may confirm the following facts or contain the following information:

- (1) The existence of the trust and date of execution of the trust instrument.
- (2) The identity of the settlor or settlors and the currently acting trustee or trustees of the trust.
- (3) The powers of the trustee.
- (4) The revocability or irrevocability of the trust and the identity of any person holding any power to revoke the trust.
- (5) When there are multiple trustees, the signature authority of the trustees, indicating whether all or less than all of the currently acting trustees are required to sign in order to exercise various powers of the trustee.
- (6) The trust identification number, whether a social security number or an employer identification number.
- (7) The manner in which title to trust assets should be taken.
- (8) The legal description of any interest in real property held in the trust.

(c) The certification shall contain a statement that the trust has not been revoked, modified, or amended in any manner which would cause the representations contained in the certification of trust to be incorrect and shall contain a statement that it is being signed by all of the currently acting trustees of the trust. The certification shall be in the form of an acknowledged declaration signed by all currently acting trustees of the trust. The certification signed by the currently acting trustee may be recorded in the office of the county recorder in the county where all or a portion of the real property is located.

(d) The certification of trust may, but is not required to, include excerpts from the original trust documents, any amendments thereto, and any other documents evidencing or pertaining to the succession or successor trustees. The certification of trust shall not be required to contain the dispositive provisions of the trust which set forth the distribution of the trust estate.

(e) A person whose interest is, or may be, affected by the certification of trust may require that the trustee offering or recording the certification of trust provide copies of those excerpts from the original trust documents, any amendments thereto, and any other documents which designate, evidence, or pertain to the succession of the trustee or confer upon the trustee the power to act in the pending transaction, or both. Nothing in this section is intended to require or imply an obligation to provide the dispositive provisions of the trust or the entire trust and amendments thereto.

(f) A person who acts in reliance upon a certification of trust without actual knowledge that the representations contained therein are incorrect is not liable to any person for so acting. A person who does not have actual knowledge that the facts contained in the certification of trust are incorrect may assume without inquiry the existence of the facts contained in the certification of trust. Actual knowledge shall not be inferred solely from the fact that a copy of all or part of the trust instrument is held by the person relying upon the trust certification. Any transaction, and any lien created thereby, entered into by the trustee and a person acting in reliance upon a certification of trust shall be enforceable against the trust assets. However, if the person has actual knowledge that the trustee is acting outside the scope of the trust, then the transaction is not enforceable against the trust assets. Nothing contained herein shall limit the rights of the beneficiaries of the trust against the trustee.

(g) A person's failure to demand a certification of trust does not affect the protection provided that person by Section 18100, and no inference as to whether that person has acted in good faith may be drawn from the failure to demand a certification of trust. Nothing in this section is intended to create an implication that a person is liable for acting in reliance upon a certification of trust under circumstances where the requirements of this section are not satisfied.

(h) Except when requested by a beneficiary or in the context of litigation concerning a trust and subject to the provisions of subdivision (e), any person making a demand for the trust documents in addition to a certification of trust to prove facts set forth in the certification of trust acceptable to the third party shall be liable for damages, including attorney's fees, incurred as a result of the refusal to accept the certification of trust in lieu of the requested documents if the court determines that the person acted in bad faith in requesting the trust documents.

(i) Any person may record a certification of trust that relates to an interest in real property in the office of the county recorder in any county in which all or a portion of the real property is located. The county recorder shall impose any fee prescribed by law for recording that document sufficient to cover all costs incurred by the county in recording the document. The recorded certification of trust shall be a public record of the real property involved. This subdivision does not create a requirement to record a certification of trust in conjunction with the recordation of a transfer of title of real property involving a trust.

§ 73.210 Letter to Residential Mortgage Holder

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter that can be used to inform a mortgage holder that the settlors have established a revocable inter vivos grantor trust and that there has been no sale or change in occupancy of the property. This letter can also be used to apprise the lender of the settlors' rights under the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982, which prohibits lenders from enforcing due-on-sale clauses upon a transfer into an inter vivos trust in which the borrower is and remains the beneficiary and occupant, unless the borrower refuses to provide the lender with reasonable means acceptable to the lender by which the lender will be assured of timely notice of any subsequent transfer of the beneficial interest or change in occupancy [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)].

[b] Lender's Consent

Generally, the lender's consent is not required to transfer real property into a inter vivos trust [see 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)] and discussion in [a], above]. However, settlors may want to obtain the lender's approval of the change of title and verify that the settlors' agreement under the existing loan agreement will remain the same.

Dear Mortgage Holder:

This office represents _____ [name(s) of settlor(s)] who [is or are] the borrower[s] on the above loan.

Our client[s] would like to transfer title of the real property covered by that loan to _____ [his or her or their] inter vivos grantor trust in order to avoid probate at the time of _____ [his or her or their] death[s]. This trust can be amended or revoked by our client[s] at any time. Please advise this office if you require a copy of the trust instrument.

The proposed transfer does not result in any change of beneficial ownership of the property but merely a change in the manner in which our client[s] hold[s] title. The transfer is only a change in title to gain the maximum deduction for federal estate tax purposes. We do not believe that your consent is necessary, pursuant to Section 541(d)(8) of the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982, which states that lenders may not exercise their option on a due-on-sale clause upon a transfer to an inter vivos grantor trust in which the borrowers are and remain the beneficiaries. Furthermore, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, at 12 C.F.R. Section 591.5(b)(1)(vi), prohibits lenders from enforcing due-on-sale clauses upon "a transfer into an inter vivos trust in which the borrower is and remains the beneficiary and continues to occupy the subject real property."

On behalf of our client[s], we request that you approve this transfer in title without fee. Please sign the enclosed copy of this letter to indicate your approval of the change of title and your agreement that this change will not in anyway affect the terms of the above-stated loan. Please return the enclosed copy of this letter in the stamped self-addressed envelope provided.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

§ 73.213 Preliminary Change of Ownership Report

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a printed form for a Preliminary Change of Ownership Report. It may be obtained from any county assessor or county recorder in California, and must be used to satisfy county assessor and county recorder requirements on certain real property transfers that are exempt by law from reassessment [Rev. & Tax Code § 63.1]. Filing the preliminary change of ownership report provides the information to substantiate that the conveyance is to a revocable trust, does not constitute a "change in ownership," and is not subject to reassessment of real property taxes under Rev. and Tax. Code § 62(d)(2). For more detailed discussion of the preliminary change of ownership report, see § 23.203.

The original Preliminary Change of Ownership Report must be submitted with the original document of conveyance to the county recorder's office. The county recorder is responsible for sending the Preliminary Change of Ownership Report form to the county assessor's office.

[b] Failure to File

Failure to submit the Preliminary Change of Ownership Report to the recorder's office with the document of conveyance will result in the county recorder returning the document unrecorded and imposing an additional $20.00 fee.

§ 73.220 Assignment of Time-Share Interest (Outside California)

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form identifies the settlor's interest in a time-share outside of California and assigns it to the settlor's revocable inter vivos grantor trust. For discussion, see §§ 73.125, 73.126.

[2] FORM

Assignment of Time-Share Interest (Outside California)

THIS ASSIGNMENT is made by [name(s), e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], hereafter referred to as "Assignor[s]," to [name(s), e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], Trustees (or any successor in interest) of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____, hereafter referred to as "Assignee[s]."

RECITALS

1. Assignor[s] own[s] a [e.g., 4/51] interest in that time-share project known as [name of project, e.g., "PACIFIC GROVE INN"], hereafter referred to as "TIME-SHARE USE" or "TIME-SHARE ESTATE," located in _____ [location, e.g, the City of Kailua-Kona, County of Kona, State of Hawaii], more particularly described as follows:

2. Assignor[s] created a revocable inter vivos trust, and, under the terms of that trust, assignor[s] retained all beneficial interest in any real or personal property thereafter transferred to that trust.

3. Assignor[s] now wish[es] to assign that interest in the "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate" to Assignee[s], and Assignee[s] wish[es] to accept that assignment on the terms and conditions of this Assignment.

NOW, therefore, the parties agree as follows:

1. Assignor[s] hereby assign[s] all of _____ [his or her or their] interest in that "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate" to Assignee[s] as Trustee[s] of [name of trust, e.g., the LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____.

2. Assignee[s] accept[s] the foregoing assignment and adopt[s] the terms and provisions of the Time-Share Agreement for the "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate."

3. This Assignment may be executed in several counterparts each of which shall be deemed an original, and those counterparts shall constitute but one instrument, which may be sufficiently evidenced by any one counterpart.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have executed this Assignment on _____ [date].

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is used to report the conveyance of a real property interest that is specifically exempted from the Hawaii Conveyance Tax Law. It is the Hawaii equivalent to the Preliminary Change of Ownership Report [ see § 73.213], which is used in California to satisfy county assessors and county recorders. This form is included in this publication because many California residents have time-share or other interests in Hawaii. Form P-64B should be clipped to the document that is being recorded and mailed to the Bureau of Conveyances or Land Court in Hawaii.

[b] When to File

Form P-64B should be filed within 90 days after the transaction date. The transaction date is the date the document was executed, or the date of the last acknowledgment, whichever is later.

§ 73.222 Assignment of Foreign Time-Share Interest (Outside United States)

[1] Comment--Use of Form

If the settlor owns a time-share interest outside the United States and that interest is not of record title, this form can be used to assign the interest to the revocable trust. The time-share interest should be listed on the appropriate trust schedule, and this assignment should be placed with the settlor's original estate planning documents.

[2] FORM

Assignment of Foreign Time-Share Interest (Outside United States)

THIS ASSIGNMENT is made by [names, e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], hereafter referred to as "Assignor[s]," to [names, e.g., VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON], Trustees (or any successor in interest) of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____, hereafter referred to as "Assignee[s]."

RECITALS

1. Assignor[s] [have or has] a [e.g., 1/51] interest in that time-share project known as [name of project, e.g., "PACIFIC SHORES NATURE INN"], hereafter referred to as "TIME-SHARE USE" or "TIME-SHARE ESTATE," located in the City of _____, [S tate, district, or province, e.g., Province of British Columbia], Country of _____, more particularly described as follows:

[insert legal description]

2. Assignor[s] created a revocable inter vivos trust, and, under the terms of that trust, assignor[s] retained all beneficial interest in any real or personal property thereafter transferred to that trust.

3. Assignor[s] now wish[es] to assign that interest in the "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate" to Assignee[s], and Assignee[s] wish[es] to accept that assignment on the terms and conditions of this Assignment.

NOW, therefore, the parties agree as follows:

1. Assignor[s] hereby assign[s] all of _____ [his or her or their] interest in that "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate" to Assignee[s] as Trustee[s] of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____.

2. Assignee[s] accept[s] the foregoing assignment and adopt[s] the terms and provisions of the Time-Share Agreement for the "Time-Share Use" or "Time-Share Estate."

3. This Assignment may be executed in several counterparts each of which shall be deemed an original, and those counterparts shall constitute but one instrument, which may be sufficiently evidenced by any one counterpart.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have executed this Assignment on _____ [date].

§ 73.230 Grant Deed (Mineral Interest)

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a grant deed [see Civ. Code § 1092]. It may be used to convey title to a mineral interest located in California [see discussion in § 73.14[1][b]].

In a grant deed, the term "grant" is the operative word of transfer [see Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v. Roemer (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 613, 618, 91 Cal. Rptr. 112]. Although a grant deed may convey any type of estate in real property [Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v. Roemer (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 613, 618, 91 Cal. Rptr. 112], it is presumed to transfer a fee simple title unless it appears from the deed that a lesser estate was intended [Civ. Code § 1105; see American Enterprise, Inc. v. Van Winkle (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 210, 220, 246 P.2d 935]. A grant deed that passes a fee simple title also transfers any interest in the property acquired by the grantor after the date of the deed [Civ. Code § 1106; Schwenn v. Kaye (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 949, 952, 202 Cal. Rptr. 374].

The effect of this deed will be identical to the mineral deed in § 73.231. That deed is a printed form and may be easier to use when available. Mineral deeds can be obtained through some local stationery stores, or ordered from Burkhart's Bank and Legal Supply, Tulsa, Oklahoma (telephone 800-736-0146).

§ 73.231 Mineral Deed

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a mineral deed that may be used to transfer the oil, gas, and other minerals under described real property to the trustee of a revocable trust. Since the operative words in the deed are "grant, bargain, sell, convey, transfer, assign and deliver," this deed qualifies as a grant deed [see Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v. Roemer (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 613, 618, 91 Cal. Rptr. 112 and discussion in § 73.230[1]]. Printed forms for mineral deeds may be purchased in some stationery stores, or ordered from Burkhart's Bank and Legal Supply, Tulsa, Oklahoma (800-736-0146). It may also be possible to obtain a printed form of mineral deed from the managing company for oil and gas interest.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form gives the successor trustee the right to exercise an employee stock option plan held by a settlor after the employee settlor's death. The form assumes that the employee settlor is also serving as a trustee of the trust. It should be signed by the employee settlor.

[2] FORM

Assignment of Right to Exercise Stock Option Plan After Death of Settlor

ASSIGNMENT

THIS ASSIGNMENT is made by [name of settlor holding right to exercise plan, e.g., VERNAL LANGJON], hereafter referred to as "Assignor."

1. Assignor currently holds the right to exercise an option to purchase the stock of [name of company, e.g., ABC Industries, Inc.], under the terms of an employee stock option plan _____ [name or description of plan, e.g., known as the ABC Industries Employee Stock Option Plan dated July 3, 1996]. [A copy of that option is attached to this instrument.]

2. Assignor currently is serving as a [co-]trustee of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____, which was created by Assignor [for a two-settlor spouse, add: and _____ (name of spouse, e.g., Marzel Langjon)] on _____ [date]. Under the terms of that trust, Assignor [and _____ (name of spouse, e.g., Marzel Langjon)] retained all beneficial interest in any real or personal property thereafter transferred to that trust.

3. Assignor hereby assigns to the successor trustee or co-trustees of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____, the right to exercise the above-described stock option plan after Assignor's death. This assignment is effective immediately.

4. This assignment is accepted by [name(s) of settlor(s)/trustee(s), e.g., Vernal Langjon and Marzel Langjon] as trustee[s] of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____, on behalf of all successor trustees or cotrustees of that trust, and shall be exercisable by any trustee of co-trustee then serving.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have executed this Assignment on _____[date].

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to transfer the settlor's interest in a limited partnership to the revocable trust. It is drafted so that the general partner, or both the general and limited partners, will consent. If the partnership agreement does not expressly authorize the transfer of partnership interests, transferee may become a limited partner only if all general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [see Corp. Code § 15907.02(h) (ULPA '08); Corp. Code § 15674(a) (CRLPA)].

In most situations, all general partners are required to consent to the transfer of limited partnership interests. In some partnerships, however, the partnership agreement may give the general partner sole authority to consent. When that is the case, only the signature of the general partner will be required.

[b] Consent

Transferee of a limited partnership interest may become a limited partner if the partnership agreement so provides, or if all of the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15907.02(h) (ULPA '08); Corp. Code §§ 15631(a)(2), 15674(a) (CRLPA)]. If the limited partnership is large and has many limited partners, it will often be impractical to obtain the written consent of all of the partners. In this situation, the limited partnership agreement should provide some other mechanism for expressing consent. The agreement may, for example, authorize transfers to be made without the necessity of first obtaining consent, or authorize the general partner acting alone to consent to assignments. Alternatively, it may require the consent of a specified percentage in interest of the limited partners and permit the general partner to sign on the limited partners' behalf when such a percentage has been obtained.

If the limited partnership agreement has no provisions of this kind, however, the consent of all of the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners must be obtained. In the absence of such consent, the trustee will not become a member of the partnership, but will merely acquire the right to receive the distributions to which the settlor would have been entitled [Corp. Code § 15907.02(b) (ULPA '08); Corp. Code § 15672(a) (CRLPA)]. Note, however, that only that the "consent" of partners be obtained. The Corporations Code does not explicitly require that this "consent" be written. If the limited partners express their consent orally, the general partner could presumably sign this form in their behalf, even if the partnership agreement did not specifically authorize such a procedure. Obviously, however, good practice requires that consent should be in writing whenever possible.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a declaration of trust ownership. It is used to transfer household furniture, furnishings, tangible personal property, and other items that have no record of ownership. Using this form will substantiate the settlors' intent, confirm trust ownership on later sale, and may help eliminate the necessity of a court supervised administration following the death of a settlor.

DECLARATION OF TRUST OWNERSHIP

The undersigned hereby declare[s] that, as Trustee[s] of the [name of trust, e.g., LANGJON FAMILY REVOCABLE TRUST], dated _____ ("the Trust"), and pursuant to Section _____ of the [Declaration of Trust or Trust Agreement] that created the Trust, the undersigned [is or are] now holding and will continue to hold, solely and exclusively for and on behalf of the Trust, the following:

All jewelry, clothing, household furniture and furnishings, personal automobiles, country club memberships, and other tangible articles of a personal nature belonging to the Settlor[s] of the Trust, or the _____ [Settlor's or Settlor's] interest in any such property which now or at any time after the date of this instrument is normally kept at the _____ [Settlor's or Settlor's] place of residence.

The undersigned hereby further affirm[s] and declare[s] that, from and after the date of this declaration:

1. All properties described above will be held by the undersigned solely and exclusively for and on behalf of the Trust as true owner.
2. Except to the extent of beneficial interests provided to the undersigned under the terms and provisions of the _____ [Declaration of Trust or Trust Agreement] that created the Trust (as now written or as amended in the future), the undersigned _____ [has or have] and shall have no personal interest in any of the properties described above.
3. All liabilities that relate in any way to the acquisition of, or that are a lien upon, any of the properties governed by this declaration shall be borne by the Trust which, pursuant to this declaration, owns those properties.

This declaration of exclusive trust ownership and waiver of interest is intended to be and shall be binding on the heirs, administrators, executors, and assigns of the undersigned, and shall be revocable only by a written instrument executed by one or more of the Trustees of the Trust then serving, with all of the same formalities that accompanied the execution of this instrument.

This declaration revokes all previous declarations of ownership, if any, with respect to any and all properties governed by this declaration, heretofore executed by the undersigned.

[I or We] declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing and all information herein, including any accompanying statements or documents, are true, correct, and complete to the best of [my or our] knowledge and belief.

§ 73.333 Letter to Sailboat Mortgage Holder

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a letter informing the holder of a mortgage on a sailboat that the settlor has established a revocable trust and that the mortgage holder's approval is required by the State Board of Equalization to facilitate the issuance of a use tax clearance. It should be accompanied by a copy of the form in § 73.332[2].

After the mortgagee consents and returns the original application, the attorneys should retain the original to send to the Coast Guard and provide the State Board of Equalization with a copy, along with the Form BT-106 [ see § 73.320].

Re: Name of Boat: _____

Official No.: _____

Loan No.: _____

Dear Mortgage Holder:

This office represents _____ [ name(s) of settlor(s) ] who [ is or are ] the borrower(s) on the above-named loan.

My clients desire to transfer title to the above-referenced sailboat from to _____ [his or her or their] name[s] as [an] individual[s] to _____ [his or her or their] revocable trust.

Title will read: _____ [specify, e.g., "VERNAL LANGJON and MARZEL LANGJON, TRUSTEES OR THEIR SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST UNDER THE TERMS OF THE VERNAL LANGJON AND MARZEL LANGJON FAMILY TRUST, DATED _____"].

Please note that title to all of my [client's or clients'] other assets, including those assets to which you would look for payment in the event of default on the loan, are being transferred into _____ [his or her or their] revocable trust. Under the terms of the trust, the trustee[s] [is or are] authorized to maintain and pay the loan, and the trustee[s] hereby agree[s] to pay the loan.

Before the State Board of Equalization will issue a tax clearance, your approval of the transfer is required.

Enclosed is a form from the Coast Guard entitled "Application, Consent, and Approval for Withdrawal of Application for Documentation or Exchange of Certificate of Documentation," CG 4593, which has been signed by my clients. After you have reviewed your file, please consent to the transfer in the space designated at the bottom of the form and return the original form to this office in the stamped self-addressed envelope provided.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. If I can provide you with any additional information to facilitate your approval, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely, _____ [signature of attorney]

This chapter covers split-interest charitable trusts. The drafting of these trusts is controlled primarily by federal tax law. The federal income, estate, and gift tax laws and regulations set forth specific requirements for gifts in trust to charitable organizations. This chapter explains the requirements that must be satisfied in order to obtain full tax benefits, and illustrates different types of trust instruments that qualify under the federal tax laws and regulations.

In drafting any charitable trust for a client, the overall estate planning ramifications must be considered. For general estate planning coverage, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning. Charitable contributions in general are covered in Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions. Ch. 69 contains a detailed discussion of the federal income, gift, and estate tax charitable deductions, which are discussed in this chapter only insofar as they directly relate to the content of split-interest charitable trusts.

§ 74.10 Nature and Purpose of Split-Interest Charitable Trusts

[1] Nature and Types

A split-interest charitable trust is essentially a trust containing an income interest and a remainder interest, one of which is held by one or more noncharitable beneficiaries and the other of which is held by one or more charitable organizations, and conforming to the charitable deduction requirements of the federal tax laws [see [2], below]. There are two basic types of split-interest charitable trusts:

- The "charitable remainder trust," in which one or more individuals have life income interests and, on the death of the last income beneficiary, the remainder passes to one or more charitable organizations.
- The "charitable lead trust," in which one or more charitable organizations are given an income interest in the trust property for a specified period and, on termination of that period, the remainder or reversionary interest passes to one or more noncharitable remainder beneficiaries.

Each of these basic types of split-interest charitable trusts is further divided into subcategories. The various subtypes and their distinguishing features are discussed elsewhere in this chapter.

[2] Tax Purpose

Split-interest charitable trusts, as used in modern estate planning, are essentially driven by federal tax law. The primary purpose of all split-interest charitable trusts is to allow the donor to make a charitable contribution of property that will qualify for the various federal tax deductions for charitable contributions, while at the same time retaining either the current or future use of the trust property for the donor or another non-charitable beneficiary. However, to qualify for a charitable deduction for the contribution of a trust interest to a charity, the trust must be in a specifically defined form that meets the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code and the applicable regulations for these types of trusts.

The federal requirements are detailed, specific, and limiting. Prior to 1969, the value of the interest given to the charity was computed and an income, estate, or gift tax charitable deduction, as appropriate, was allowed for that value. Since the Tax Reform Act of 1969, split-interest trusts have had to meet stringent requirements to obtain a charitable deduction for the interest given to the charity. For example, if a split-interest trust provides that the income of the trust is payable to the settlor for life and the remainder is given to a qualified charitable organization, there is a gift to the charitable organization of the present value of the remainder interest. The value of the remainder transferred to the qualified charitable beneficiary will qualify for an income tax charitable deduction [see I.R.C. § 170]. However, if the trust is not in the prescribed form, neither an income nor a gift tax charitable deduction is available [see I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2), 2522(c)(2)].

The federal income, gift, and estate tax charitable deductions are discussed in detail in Ch. 69, Charitable Deductions. The basic features of the deductions are not repeated in this chapter, which instead focusses on the requirements of the deduction specifically applicable to split-interest charitable trusts. Readers should consult Ch. 69 for information on qualifying organizations, the maximum amount of the deductions, and similar general issues.

§ 74.11 Charitable Remainder Trusts

[1] Basic Features and Requirements

Although the Internal Revenue Code does not provide a general definition of a charitable remainder trust, the Treasury Regulations define a charitable remainder trust as "a trust which provides for a specified distribution, at least annually, to one or more beneficiaries, at least one of which is not a charity, for life or for a term of years, with an irrevocable remainder interest to be held for the benefit of, or paid over to, charity" [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(1)(i)]. If there is only one income beneficiary, that beneficiary must not be a qualified charitable beneficiary; if there are two or more income beneficiaries, at least one of the beneficiaries must not be a qualified charitable beneficiary [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A), (2)(A)]. If the income interest is for a term of years, it must not be more than 20 years [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A), (2)(A)].

[2] Types

To qualify for charitable deductions, contributions of remainder interests in trust to a charity must be to one of the following [see I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2), 2055(e)(2), 2522(c)(2)]:

- A "charitable remainder annuity trust." A charitable remainder annuity trust basically pays a fixed annual sum (e.g., $50,000 a year, subject to applicable percentage limitations) to the income beneficiary for life or for a specified term of years. Both the amount of the annuity and the term are subject to specific limitations. The distribution must be a "sum certain" which is not less than 5 or more than 50 percent of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-1(a)(1)(i), 1.664-2(a)(1)(i), (a)(2)(i)]. Charitable remainder annuity trusts are discussed in § 74.12.
- A "charitable remainder unitrust." A charitable remainder unitrust basically pays fixed a percentage of the value of the trust assets (e.g., 10 percent) to the income beneficiary annually for life or for a specified term of years. Both the percentage and the term are subject to specific limitations. The fixed percentage must be not less than 5 or more than 50 percent of the net fair market value of the trust assets, determined annually [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-1(a)(1)(i), 1.664-3(a)(1)(i), (a)(2)(i)].

Charitable remainder unitrusts are discussed in § 74.13.

- A "pooled income fund." A pooled income fund differs significantly in structure and function from the other two types of charitable remainder trusts discussed above. Pooled income funds are basically trusts created by charitable organizations to allow individual donors to "pool" contributions in a single fund administered by a common trustee. Pooled income funds are discussed in § 74.14.

For transfers in trust made after July 28, 1997, the Internal Revenue Code requires that the value of the remainder interest in a charitable remainder trust, whether an annuity trust or a unitrust, be at least 10 percent of the initial net fair market value of all property placed in the trust as determined under I.R.C. § 7520 [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(D), (2)(D)], as added by Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 1089(b)(1); see Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 1089(b)(6)(B)].

To qualify as a charitable remainder trust, a trust must be either a charitable remainder annuity trust "in every respect" or a charitable remainder unitrust "in every respect" [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(2)]. Thus, a hybrid trust that incorporates features of both types of remainder trusts will not qualify for the charitable deduction [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 170].

[3] Valuation of Charitable Remainder Interests

[a] Ten-Percent Rule

For transfers in trust made after July 28, 1997, the Internal Revenue Code requires that the value of the remainder interest in a charitable remainder trust, whether an annuity trust or a unitrust, be at least 10 percent of the initial net fair market value of all property placed in the trust as determined under I.R.C. § 7520 [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(D), (2)(D)], as added by Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 1089(b)(1); see Pub. L. No. 105-34, § 1089(b)(6)(B)]. I.R.C. § 7520 provides that the value of any annuity, any interest for life or a term of years, or any remainder or reversionary interest, must be determined under the IRS valuation tables [see I.R.C. § 7520(a)(1)], and by using an interest rate (rounded to the nearest two-tenths of one percent) equal to 120 percent of the Federal midterm rate in effect under I.R.C. § 1274(d)(1) for the month in which the valuation date falls [I.R.C. § 7520(a)(2)]. In other words, the determination of the value of the charitable remainder is based on the actuarial values produced by considering the payout rate chosen and the value of the trust assets and prevailing market interest rates at the beginning of the trust term. Although obvious, it is worth repeating that the actual length of time that the trust ultimately endures, or the amounts actually paid out to the beneficiaries over the term of the trust, are irrelevant to this determination.

PRACTICE TIP:

While it may seem that this 10 percent remainder test will be easy to satisfy, the drafter should bear in mind that it presents a very tangible trap for the unwary. If the annuity or unitrust amount is relatively high, if the noncharitable beneficiary or beneficiaries are relatively young, or if there is some seemingly innocuous combination of these two factors, it can be quite easy to create a charitable remainder trust worth less than 10 percent of the initial value of the trust property. Great care must be taken to accurately determine the value of the charitable remainder during the process of designing the trust. Commentary by Albert G. Handelman.

To illustrate an extreme example of the problem raised in the practice tip above, consider the result if a young married couple with a long life expectancy were to establish a charitable remainder trust for the benefit of themselves and their minor child for their consecutive lives, and provide for an annual payout amounting to, say, 20 percent of the value of the trust assets at the inception of the trust. It is clear in this situation that from an actuarial point of view, there is unlikely to be anything left over for the charity, and the trust therefore would fail to qualify under the 10 percent rule. However, the problem can arise in circumstances that are considerably less obvious than this example. If the actual annual payout, computed on a percentage basis, exceeds the interest rate determined under I.R.C. § 7520(a)(2), the actuarial calculations will treat the trust assets as depleting annually. If the trust continues long enough, or the payout percentage is high enough, the value of the remainder interest may fall below 10 percent. Because of this danger, it is absolutely essential that the attorney, after determining from the client(s) what kind of annual payout is desired, calculate the value of the resulting charitable interest before the trust becomes effective.

[b] Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust

The value of a remainder interest in a charitable remainder annuity trust for the purpose of income, gift, and estate tax charitable deductions is determined under Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2 [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(b)(2), 20.2055-2(f)(2), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)]. Under this regulation, the value of the remainder interest is determined by subtracting the present value of the annuity income interest of the noncharitable beneficiary from the net fair market value of the property placed in trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(c)]. The value of the annuity interest is calculated under Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-7T(d) (valuation dates after April 30, 1999) or Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-7A(a)-(f) (valuation dates before May 1, 2009).

[c] Charitable Remainder Unitrust

The value of a remainder interest in a charitable remainder unitrust for the purpose of income, gift, and estate tax charitable deductions is determined under Treas. Reg. § 1.664-4 [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(b)(2), 20.2055-2(f)(2), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)]. The procedure for calculating the present value of a remainder interest in a charitable remainder unitrust is set forth in Treas. Reg. § 1.664-4. This regulation provides detailed instructions and tables for this calculation.

[d] Pooled Income Fund

The value of a remainder interest in a pooled income fund for the purpose of income, gift, and estate charitable deductions is determined under Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6 [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(b)(2), 20.2055-2(f)(2)(i), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)]. The present value of the remainder interest is calculated under Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6A(f) (valuation dates after April 30, 1999) or Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6A(a)-(e) (valuation dates before May 1, 1999). The present value of the remainder interest is calculated based on the life contingencies contained in Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-7A(f)(4), 20.2031-7T or 20.2031-7A and discounted at the highest yearly rate of return of the pooled income fund for the previous three years [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6A(f), 1.642(c)-6T(d), 1.642(c)-6T(e)].

[4] Who May Be A Grantor

Because neither the Internal Revenue Code nor the regulations contain any limitations or restrictions on the transferor, the grantor can presumably be any person or persons. The Internal Revenue Code defines "person" to include an individual, trust, estate, partnership, association, company, or corporation [I.R.C. § 7701(a)(1)]. However, the appropriate source of a transfer to a charitable trust may depend on the availability and value of the applicable charitable deductions [ see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions ].

[5] Trust Property

Any money or other property may be transferred to a charitable remainder trust. However, with respect to tangible personal property, there is no income tax deduction if the grantor or related parties (as defined in I.R.C. § 267(b) or 707(b)) are named as income beneficiaries [I.R.C. § 170(a)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(d)]. In addition, mortgaged property may cause unrelated business income to the trust under I.R.C. § 511 or 514, realization of gain to the donor under I.R.C. § 1011, and penalties for self-dealing under I.R.C. § 4941. The transfer of mortgaged property, when the donor is liable for the indebtedness and when the charitable remainder trust may make payments on the indebtedness, will cause the trust to fail to qualify due to treatment as a grantor trust [see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 9015049 ].

[6] Who May Be A Trustee

Generally, the trustee can be any person, including the donor, who often prefers to retain the power to administer the trust assets in himself or herself or in a relative. Although retention of certain powers as trustee normally would cause the trust assets to be included with the donor's own assets for tax purposes [ see Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts, § 72.12[2] ], there is nothing in the Internal Revenue Code or regulations prohibiting the donor from acting as the trustee of a charitable remainder trust [ see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 7730015 ]. For example, a trust in which the donor retained the right to remove the trustee and name himself trustee qualified as a charitable remainder trust [ Rev. Rul. 77-285, 1977-2 C.B. 213 ]. However, in a trust in which the donor had the power to affect the beneficial enjoyment of the income distributions, the donor was considered the owner of the trust [ Rev. Rul. 77-285, 1977-2 C.B. 213 ]. In such a case, or when the trust includes hard-to-value property such as closely held stock and real estate, an independent trustee is needed [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8648048 ]. In any event, administration of a charitable trust can become complex, so use of a professional trustee's services is always worthy of consideration.

[7] Permissible Income Beneficiaries

Charitable remainder trust income must be paid to "one or more persons" [ see I.R.C. § 7701(a)(1) ("person" defined)], at least one of which is not a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), for a term of years not exceeding 20 years, or in the case of individuals, for a term of years not exceeding 20 years or for the life or lives of that individual or those individuals [ I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A), (2)(A) ]. To qualify for payments for life, the individual recipient must be living at the time the trust is created [ I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A), (2)(A) ].

A "person" may be an individual, a trust, an estate, a partnership, an association, a company, or a corporation [ I.R.C. § 7701(a)(1) ]. However, a charitable remainder trust is not a proper vehicle to provide for the maintenance of a pet after the owner has died, because the pet is not a "person" for tax law purposes [ Rev. Rul. 78-105, 1978-1 C.B. 295 ].

Because the Internal Revenue Code requires individual recipients of unitrust and annuity amounts to be living at the date of trust creation, a qualified charitable remainder trust cannot provide for payments of amounts to a named class of individuals unless all the individuals in the class are alive and ascertainable at the time the trust is created [ Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(3)(i), 1.664-3(a)(3)(i) ]. However, all individuals in a class need not be alive and ascertainable at the time a trust is created when the period for which the annuity or unitrust amount is payable to the class consists solely of a term of years [ Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(3)(i), 1.664-3(a)(3)(i) ].

[8] Permissible Remainder Beneficiaries

Upon termination of the required payments to the income beneficiaries of a charitable remainder annuity trust or unitrust, the remainder interest in the trust must be transferred to or for the use of one or more qualified charitable organizations as described in I.R.C. § 170(c) [ I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(C), (2)(C) ]. However, the donor should be cautioned that some I.R.C. § 170(c) organizations do not qualify for the 50 percent income tax charitable deduction, the gift tax charitable deduction, or the estate tax charitable deduction [ see Rev. Rul. 77-385, 1977-2 C.B. 331 ; for discussion, see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions ]. With respect to income taxes, the drafter of a charitable remainder trust should use good judgment in preparing the trust instrument. Trust forms commonly require the trustee to distribute assets to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) if the designated charity named by the donor fails to qualify at time of distribution. However, to assure the higher income tax percentage limitation when the donor intends the remainder to be received by a public charity, the drafter should consider requiring that the organization selected as alternate remainder beneficiary also qualify under I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A).

[9] Trust Investments

Under the regulations, the governing instrument of a charitable remainder trust cannot contain a provision restricting the trustee from "investing the trust assets in a manner which could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets" [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(3)]. Thus, when there are "trust provisions" allowing the donor to dictate the trust's investment policies, no charitable deduction for income, gift, or estate tax purposes will be allowed. The Internal Revenue Service has hinted that "trust provisions" may include language other than that in the trust document itself [see Rev. Rul. 60-370, 1960-2 C.B. 203].

[10] Trust Creation Date

The trust must meet the definition of, and function exclusively as, a charitable remainder trust from its creation [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)]. For the purposes of I.R.C. § 664 and accompanying regulations, a trust is considered to be created at the earliest time that neither the grantor of the trust nor any other person is treated as the owner of the entire trust under the tax rules that normally determine whether grantors or others are treated as owners of a trust [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 (grantors treated as owners)], but is not considered to be created before the time property is first transferred to the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)].

Under an exception to the general rule, a testamentary charitable remainder trust is deemed created at the date of the decedent's death, even though the trust will not be funded until the end of a reasonable period of administration and settlement [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5)(i)]. To qualify under the exception, a trust must be obligated to pay the annuity or unitrust amount as of the date of the decedent's death, but actual payment may be deferred or estimated payments may be made to the beneficiaries [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5)(i); see Rev. Rul. 92-57, 1992-2 C.B. 123 (method of computing deferred payment)]. The rules set forth in Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5) should be followed closely when deferring or estimating payments. Interest, calculated in accordance with that regulation and I.R.C. § 7520, must be applied.

To create an effective testamentary charitable remainder trust, the governing instrument of the trust must contain mandatory language providing that the obligation to pay the annuity or unitrust amount begins at the date of the decedent's death [Rev. Rul. 80-123, 1980-1 C.B. 205; see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5)(i); see also Rev. Rul. 92-57, 1992-2 C.B. 123 (alternate method for computing deferred payments for testamentary charitable remainder unitrusts)]. The governing instrument should also provide for corrective payments should there be underpayment or overpayment of the annuity or unitrust amount [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii), 1.664-3(a)(1)(iii)].

[11] Power to Alter Amount of Payments

An individual's power to alter the amounts paid to beneficiaries of a trust could cause that individual to be deemed the owner of a trust or part of a trust, even though the individual is not directly a beneficiary of the trust [see I.R.C. § 674(a)]. Consequently, if any person has the power to alter the amount paid to any named person other than a charitable organization listed in I.R.C. § 170(c), the trust will not qualify as a charitable remainder annuity trust or charitable remainder unitrust if the power to alter causes the person to be treated as the owner of the trust or any portion of it [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(3)(ii), 1.664-3(a)(1)(ii)].

However, a trustee of a trust may be given the power to apportion or "sprinkle" trust income among beneficiaries or within a class of beneficiaries. A sprinkling power that is solely exercisable by an independent trustee or trustees, none of whom is the grantor and no more than half of whom are related or subordinate parties who are subservient to the wishes of the grantor, does not disqualify a charitable remainder annuity trust or unitrust [I.R.C. § 674(c)]. Nonetheless, disqualification can result from a grantor's power to replace an independent trustee who has sprinkling powers with anyone including himself or herself [Rev. Rul. 77-285, 1977-2 C.B. 213].

Unique to the charitable remainder annuity trust is the inability to provide for a fixed percentage payout that is to be increased on the happening of some event. For example, a trust cannot provide for one percentage payout during the donor's life and an increased percentage payout subsequent to the donor's death. Nor can a trust provide for one percentage payout to the first beneficiary for life and then an increased percentage payout to a successor beneficiary for life [ Rev. Rul. 80-104, 1980-1 C.B. 135 ].

Proposed regulations would permit a so-called "flip" unitrust (or "FLIP-CRUT") that would begin as "net income with makeup" unitrust and later "flip" to a standard unitrust. [Prop. Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(c)]. If adopted, these regulations would provide some additional planning flexibility in cases in which the trust assets consist primarily of unmarketable assets that might otherwise have to be sold in order to meet the trust's payout requirements. For discussion, see § 74.13[2][c].

[12] Trust Payments Only to Beneficiaries

No amount other than the annuity or unitrust amount or payments to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) may be paid from the trust, unless the amount is transferred for full and adequate consideration. The trust may not be invaded, altered, amended, or revoked for the beneficial use of a person other than an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c). However, two exceptions apply. First, the grantor may retain the power exercisable only by will to revoke or terminate the interest of any recipient other than an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c). Second, the governing instrument may provide that any amount (other than the annuity or unitrust amount) must, or may in the discretion of the trustee, be paid to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(4), 1.664-3(a)(4)].

[13] Certain Contingencies Permitted

The governing instrument may contain a "qualified contingency," which is any trust provision requiring that, on the happening of a contingency, the annuity or unitrust payments will terminate earlier than those payments would otherwise terminate under the trust [I.R.C. § 664(f)(3)]. For purposes of determining the amount of the charitable contribution, the qualified contingency is disregarded [I.R.C. § 664(f)(2)].

[14] Spouse's Elective Share

In general, no amount other than the sum certain (for an annuity trust) or the fixed percentage (for a unitrust) may be paid from the trust to or for the use of any person other than a qualified charitable organization [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(B), (2)(B); see I.R.C. § 664(d)(3)]. Thus, a trust cannot qualify as a charitable remainder annuity trust under I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(B) or as a charitable remainder unitrust under I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(B) if the trust's assets may be used to satisfy a spouse's right of election to take against the settlor's will. However, a safe harbor provision is available for CRATs and CRUTs, created on or after June 28, 2005, that are subject to a spouse's right of election. Without the safe harbor provision, the mere possibility that the trust assets could be used to satisfy the spouse's elective share would disqualify the trust from its inception. The safe harbor provision prevents a trust from being disqualified by treating it as qualified from its creation if the spouse irrevocably waives the right of election with respect to the assets of the trust [see Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. ].

The waiver must be valid under state law, in writing and signed and dated by the spouse, and effected within six months after the due date of the Split Interest Trust Information Return. If the spouse is named in the trust as a recipient of the annuity or unitrust payments from the trust, he or she is not required to waive the right to those payments. The trustee must be given a copy of the waiver and must keep the copy in the official records of the trust [ Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. ].

§ 74.12 Special Features of Charitable Remainder Annuity Trusts

[1] Definition and General Requirements

The technical definition of a charitable remainder annuity trust is a trust in which a stated amount (which must be at least 5 percent but not more than 50 percent of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets) is paid to the income beneficiary, not less often than annually, for the life or lives of the beneficiaries or a term of years not in excess of 20 years, and the remainder is transferred to a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)]. For example, a trust with assets valued at $100,000 must pay to the income beneficiary at least $5,000 per year for the life of the beneficiary or a term of years, and then transfer the remainder to a qualified charity. A complete charitable remainder annuity trust is illustrated in § 74.200[2]. By using a charitable remainder annuity trust, a donor can transfer property to a trust, provide an annuity for a term of years or for the life or lives of an individual or individuals, and deduct as a charitable contribution the present value of the remainder interest that will eventually pass to a qualified charitable organization.

The basic requirements and considerations applicable to charitable remainder trusts in general, which are discussed in § 74.11, apply to charitable remainder annuity trusts. The remainder of this section discusses characteristics and issues specifically applicable only to charitable remainder trusts.

[2] Payment of "Sum Certain"

[a] Basic Requirements

A feature peculiar to the charitable remainder annuity trust is that it must pay a "sum certain," which is not less than 5 or more than 50 percent of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in the trust, to at least one noncharitable beneficiary [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1), (a)(2)]. The regulations define a "sum certain" as "a stated dollar amount which is the same either as to each recipient or as to the total amount payable for each year" [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(ii)]. For example, a charitable remainder annuity trust could provide for an amount that is the same each year to recipient A until A's death, and concurrently for an amount that is the same each year to recipient

B until B's death (the amount to A may be different from the amount to B). Or a trust could provide for an amount to recipient A and recipient B for their joint lives and then to the survivor for life [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(ii)]. However, the minimum 5 percent payout requirement must be met throughout the terms of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(ii)].

The annuity or annuities paid by a charitable remainder annuity trust need not be expressed as a stated dollar amount to qualify as a sum certain. The amounts may be expressed as a fraction or percentage of the initial net fair market value of the property passing in trust as that value is finally determined for federal tax purposes. Thus, if H's will provides for a transfer of one half of H's residuary estate to a charitable remainder annuity trust that is required to pay W for life an annuity equal to 5 percent (or any other fixed percentage between 5 and 50 percent) of the initial net fair market value of the interest passing in trust as finally determined for federal tax purposes, the sum certain requirement is met [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii)].

[b] Dollar-Amount Annuities

When the annual payment to a recipient is expressed as a dollar amount [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(ii) (definition of sum certain)], that amount ultimately may prove to be less than 5 percent of the initial net fair market value of the property transferred to the trust [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A) (sum certain must be at least 5 and not more than 50 percent of fair market value of initial trust property)], such as when the value of the property as finally determined for federal tax purposes is greater than the initial fair market value of the assets transferred to the trust. The failure to meet the 5 percent payout requirement could defeat the income and gift tax charitable deduction or the estate tax charitable deduction.

The regulations, however, provide a limited exception to the 5 percent payout requirement that can save the charitable deduction in certain cases. This exception applies only to an inter vivos trust that fails to provide for payment of the minimum 5 percent annuity amount [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(2)(iii)]. To qualify for the exception, the grantor of the trust must have underestimated in good faith the initial net fair market value of the trust property [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(2)(iii)]. In such a case, the 5 percent payout requirement is deemed to have been met if the grantor consents to accept an amount equal to 20 times the annuity as the fair market value of the trust property in determining the charitable deduction [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(2)(iii)]. However, the regulations are silent on relief for any testamentary trust that fails to meet the 5 percent requirement.

[c] Fraction or Percentage Annuities

In contrast to dollar-amount annuities, when annuities are expressed as a fraction or percentage of the initial net fair market value of the property transferred in trust, the trust cannot fail to meet the 5 percent minimum payout requirement, unless the specified fraction or percentage is less than 5 percent. Thus, fraction or percentage annuities, in contrast to the dollar-amount annuity arrangement, cannot result in disqualification of a trust due to a subsequent redetermination of the initial fair market value of trust property.

On the other hand, redetermination of property value could cause another problem in those cases in which the annual payment of a trust is determined by a fraction or percentage of the initial net fair market value of trust property. If that value is later changed, payments made to beneficiaries before the change will be more or less than the amount that should have been paid. Such overpayments or underpayments would violate the requirement that the payments be a sum certain, resulting in the disqualification of the trust as a charitable remainder annuity trust. Therefore, the governing instrument of the trust must provide for corrective payments in the case of underpayments or overpayments caused by an incorrect valuation of the initial net fair market value of the trust property to avoid the possibility of disqualification [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii)].

Such a provision must require that the trust pay to the recipient (in the case of an undervaluation of property), or be repaid by the recipient (in the case of an overvaluation of property), an amount equal to the difference between the amount that the trust should have paid, based on the correct value, and the amount that was actually paid [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii)]. Under the regulations, these corrective payments must be made within a reasonable time after the final determination of the initial net fair market value of the property [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iii)].

It is advisable, therefore, to express the required sum certain as a fraction or percentage and not as a dollar amount, especially when the property transferred is difficult to value. An alternative solution for the grantor who wishes to guarantee a minimum dollar amount to the beneficiary is to express the annuity as the greater of the dollar amount or a percentage not less than 5 and not more than 50 percent of the initial net fair market value of the property [see Rev. Rul. 72-395, 1972-2 C.B. 340].

[3] Period of Payment

The period during which a charitable remainder annuity trust must pay the sum certain annuity begins with the first tax year of the annuity trust and continues either for the life of a named individual (or lives of named individuals) or for a term that does not exceed 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. A lifetime annuity payable to an individual must be based solely on that individual's life and not measured by the life of another individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)].

However, the donor should not attempt to define the payment period of an annuity by combining an individual's life (or individuals' lives) with a term of years, unless it is not possible for the payment period to extend beyond the lives of the recipients in being at the time the trust was created or 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. Otherwise, this will result in an impermissible period causing disqualification as a charitable remainder annuity trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. For example, payment of an annuity to recipient A for A's life and then to recipient B for a term of years will disqualify a trust, because it is theoretically possible for the payment period to exceed either the lives of the recipients living at the creation of the trust or a term not in excess of 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. On the other hand, it is permissible to provide for the payment of an annuity to recipient A for A's life and then to recipient B for the shorter of either B's life or a term not exceeding 20 years, if both recipients are living at the time the trust is created [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)].

The regulations also provide that the following annuity arrangements will satisfy the requirements of both the 5 percent minimum/50 percent maximum payout [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A) (sum certain must be at least 5 and not more than 50 percent of fair market value of initial trust property)] and the period of payment [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(ii)]:

- An amount equal to at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust to A and B for their joint lives and then to the survivor for his or her life;
- An amount equal to at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust to A for life or for a term of years not longer than 20 years, whichever is longer (or shorter);
- An amount equal to at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust to A for a term of years not longer than 20 years and then to B for life, provided B was living at the date the trust was created;
- An amount to A for his or her life and concurrently an amount to B for his or her life (the amount to each recipient to terminate at death) if the amount given to each individual is not less than 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust; or
- An amount to A for his or her life and concurrently an equal amount to B for his or her life, and at the death of the first to die, the trust to distribute one half of the current value of its assets to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), if the total of the amounts given to A and B is not less than 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of the initial net fair market value of the property placed in trust.

[4] Additional Contributions

The regulations provide that a trust is not a charitable remainder annuity trust unless its governing instrument prohibits any additional contributions to the trust after the initial contribution [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(b)]. However, since it is not always possible to fund a testamentary charitable remainder annuity trust with one payment, the regulations also provide that all property passing to such a trust by reason of the death of the grantor will be considered one contribution [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(b)].

[5] Short Tax Year

All charitable remainder annuity trusts must report on a calendar-year basis for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986 [I.R.C. § 644]. Thus, most trusts will have an initial tax year of less than 12 months. The regulations require the governing instrument of the trust to provide a proration formula for determining the amount of the annuity payable to the recipient for the short year, based on the number of days in the taxable year of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iv)(a)].

[6] Final Tax Year

The governing instrument of a charitable remainder annuity trust must provide for prorating the annuity amount for the final tax return of the trust. Unlike the proration for a short tax year, however, the annuity amount for the final tax year is based not on the number of days in the tax year, but rather on the number of days that the recipient of the annuity had lived during the final tax year, although the trust's final tax year typically extends beyond the date of the recipient's death [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(iv)(b)]. Alternatively, the governing instrument can provide that annuity payments are to terminate with the regular payment next preceding the recipient's death [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. In any case, failure to provide for proration of the annuity amount during the final tax year will result in disqualification of the trust [ Rev. Rul. 79-428, 1979-2 C.B. 253 ].

[7] Payment of Annuity

A qualified charitable remainder annuity trust must pay a sum certain annuity at least annually [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)]. The regulations provide that, under the circumstances described below, the annuity can be paid after the close of the taxable year provided it is paid within a reasonable time, typically not beyond the time for filing the trust's tax return for the year (including extensions) [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)]. Otherwise, by implication from Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i), failure to pay the annuity by the end of the trust's taxable year may cause the trust to be engaged in self-dealing [see I.R.C. § 4941], to have unrelated debt-financed income subject to tax [see I.R.C. § 514], to have received an additional contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(b)], or to have failed to exclusively function as a charitable remainder trust [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)].

A trust will not be deemed to have engaged in self-dealing [see I.R.C. § 4941], to have unrelated debt-financed income [see I.R.C. § 514], to have received an additional contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)], or to have ceased to function exclusively as a charitable remainder trust [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)] merely because the annuity amount is paid after the close of the taxable year, if the payment is made within a reasonable time and if the entire annuity amount in the recipient's hands is characterized only as ordinary income, capital gain, or other income, except to the extent it is characterized as corpus because the trust pays the annuity amount by distributing any of the following [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(a)]:

- Property that it owned at the end of the taxable year to pay the annuity amount, if the trustee elected to treat any income generated by the distribution as occurring on the last day of the taxable year in which the annuity amount was due;

- Cash that was contributed to the trust (with respect to which a charitable deduction was allowable); or
- Cash received as a return of basis in any asset that was contributed to the trust (with respect to which a charitable deduction was allowable) and that was sold by the trust during the year for which the annuity amount is due.

These rules apply to taxable years ending after April 18, 1997, except that the second and third items immediately above apply only to distributions made after January 4, 2001 [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(e)]. However, a trust created before December 10, 1998 will not be deemed to have engaged in self-dealing [see I.R.C. § 4941] to have unrelated debt-financed income [see I.R.C. § 514], to have received an additional contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)], or to have ceased to function exclusively as a charitable remainder trust [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)] merely because the annuity amount is paid after the close of the taxable year, if the payment is made within a reasonable time and if the annuity amount is 15 percent or less of the initial net fair market value of the trust property [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(b)].

Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i) was motivated by the belief that some trustees of charitable remainder trusts attempted to abuse prior regulations permitting payment within a reasonable time after the close of the taxable year under all circumstances. Since the charitable remainder annuity trust form in this publication requires that the annuity amount be paid at the end of each quarter [see § 74.200[2], Section 4.01], it will meet the requirement of the regulation.

[8] Safe Harbor for Trusts Subject to Spouse's Right of Election

A safe harbor procedure is available for charitable remainder annuity trusts that are created during the grantor's life and are subject to a right of election by the grantor's spouse to take against the grantor's will. The mere possibility that the trust assets could be used to satisfy the spouse's right of election may disqualify the trust from its inception. However, the safe harbor prevents the trust from being disqualified by treating it as qualified from its creation if the spouse irrevocably waives the right of election with respect to the assets of the trust [Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. 909].

The spouse must irrevocably waive the right of election to the extent necessary to ensure that no part of the trust (other than the annuity interest of which the spouse is the named recipient under the trust) may be used to satisfy the elective share. The spouse must execute a written waiver that is valid under applicable state law, date and sign the waiver, and deliver a copy to the trustee of the charitable remainder annuity trust. If the trust was created on or after June 28, 2005, the waiver must be executed on or before the date that is six months after the due date of Form 5227 (Split-Interest Trust Information Return) for the year in which the last of the following occurs [Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. 909, § 3]:

- The creation of the trust.
- The date of the grantor's marriage to the surviving spouse.
- The date the grantor first becomes domiciled or resident in a jurisdiction that provides a right of election.
- The effective date of the applicable state law that creates such a right.

CHAPTER 74 SPLIT-INTEREST CHARITABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-74 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 74.13

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.13 Special Features of Charitable Remainder Unitrusts

[1] Definition and General Requirements

The technical definition of a charitable remainder unitrust is a trust in which the income interest paid to the income beneficiary is a fixed percentage (which must be at least 5 percent but not more than 50 percent) of the net fair market value of the trust assets, valued annually, and paid at least on an annual basis either for the life of the beneficiary or a term of years not exceeding 20 [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)]. For example, a trust with assets initially valued at $100,000 can provide that 5 percent of the value of the trust assets, valued annually, will be paid to the income beneficiary for life, with the remainder transferred to a qualified charitable organization. In the second year if the value of the trust assets appreciates to $150,000, then the amount paid to the income beneficiary will be $7,500, an increase from the $5,000 which was required for the first year.

Like the charitable remainder annuity trust, the charitable remainder unitrust is an important deferred giving tool. The use of a unitrust allows a donor to provide a variable annuity payable for a term of years or for the life or lives of an individual or individuals, and to obtain a deduction for the present value of the remainder interest that ultimately will pass to a qualified charitable organization [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)].

In contrast to the charitable remainder annuity trust, a charitable remainder unitrust must pay a fixed percentage, which is not less than 5 or more than 50 percent, of the net fair market value of its assets to one or more beneficiaries, at least one of which is not a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) and, in the case of an individual beneficiary, who is living at the time the unitrust is created [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. Payment of the fixed percentage amount must be made at least annually, and thus the unitrust assets must be valued at least annually [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. Payment of the fixed percentage amount must be made either for a term of years not to exceed 20 years, or in the case of an individual, for the life or lives of those beneficiaries [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. When payments of the fixed percentage amounts terminate, the remainder of the unitrust either must be transferred to or for the use of a qualified charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), or must be retained by the unitrust for a charitable use [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(C)].

[2] Fixed Percentage

[a] In General

The unitrust amount paid by a charitable remainder unitrust, with respect to all beneficiaries taken together, ordinarily must be a fixed percentage, which is not less than 5 or more than 50 percent, of the net fair market value of the trust's assets, valued annually [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(2)(i)]. Thus, a unitrust pays a variable amount to the income beneficiaries, rather than the "sum certain" paid by an annuity trust.

[b] Definition of Fixed Percentage

The fixed percentage that a unitrust must distribute each year to the income beneficiaries may be expressed either as a fraction or as a percentage, and must be payable each year in the period of payment [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(ii)]. A percentage is fixed if the percentage is the same either as to each recipient or as to the total percentage payable each year of that period [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(ii)]. For example, a provision for a fixed percentage that is the same every year to A until A's death and a concurrent fixed percentage that is the same every year to B until B's death, the fixed percentage to each recipient terminating at death, would satisfy this rule [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(ii)]. Additionally, a provision for a fixed percentage to A and B for their joint lives and then to the survivor would satisfy the rule [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(ii)].

[c] Income Exception

I.R.C. § 664(d)(3) provides for an exception to the payment of the unitrust amount. To qualify under this exception, the trust instrument must require that income be paid in one of two ways [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(b); see I.R.C. § 664(d)(3)]. The trust may provide that the trustee must pay trust income to the recipient, if that amount is smaller than the unitrust amount in any taxable year. Alternatively, the trust may provide that the trustee must pay to the recipient the trust income, if that is smaller than the percentage payment, and must also pay income in excess of the unitrust amount if prior years' aggregate trust income payments were less than the amount that would have resulted from the fixed percentage payments [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(b)]. The difference between the two amounts is often called the "deficiency amount."

Under prior regulations, once the income-exception method of calculating the unitrust amount was elected, those payments became mandatory. However, under the current regulations, applicable to trusts created on or after December 10, 1998, an income-exception charitable remainder unitrust may include a conversion provision that permits a one-time conversion to a fixed-percentage unitrust, provided the event triggering the conversion is outside the control of the trustee or any person [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(c)]. (A triggering event based on the sale of unmarketable assets, or on a marriage, divorce, death or birth will not be considered within the control of the trustee or any person [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(d)]). Such a trust is sometimes referred to as a "flip-unitrust" or a "FLIP-NIMCRUT." If a charitable remainder unitrust created before December 10, 1998, allows a conversion from one method of calculating the unitrust amount to another but does not comply with the new regulations, it may be reformed to use the initial method of computing the unitrust amount throughout the term of the trust [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)(2)]. If the legal proceeding to reform the trust is commenced prior by June 8, 1999, an income-exception unitrust can be reformed to add a conversion provisions that complies with the new regulations [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)(3)], or a unitrust which allows a conversion from one method of calculating the unitrust amount to another can retain that conversion provision if the trust is reformed to comply with the new regulations [I.R.C. § 664(d)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)(3)].

[d] Reduction of the Unitrust Amount

Although a charitable remainder unitrust must continue to meet the 5 percent minimum payout requirement [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A) (sum certain must be at least 5 and not more than 50 percent of fair market value of initial trust property)] to qualify as a unitrust, the trust will not fail when it provides for a reduction of the fixed percentage payable upon the death of a recipient or the expiration of a term of years, as long as the following conditions are met [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)(3)].

1.664-3(a)(2)(ii)]:

- A distribution is made to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) at the death of the recipient or the expiration of the term of years, and
- The total of the percentage payable after distribution to the qualified charitable organization is not less than 5 percent.

[3] Period of Payment

The period during which the fixed percentage unitrust amount must be paid by a charitable remainder unitrust begins with the first tax year of the unitrust and continues either for the life of a named individual (or lives of named individuals) or for a term that does not exceed 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(i)]. A lifetime unitrust amount payable to an individual must be based solely on that individual's life and not measured by the life of another individual [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(i)].

However, the donor should not attempt to define the payment period of a unitrust amount by combining an individual's life (or individuals' lives) with a term of years, unless it is not possible for the payment period to extend beyond the lives of the recipients in being at the time the trust was created [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(i)]. Otherwise, this will result in an impermissible period causing disqualification as a charitable remainder unitrust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(i)].

The regulations also provide that the following unitrust arrangements will satisfy the requirements of both the 5 percent minimum/50 percent maximum payout [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)] (sum certain must be at least 5 and not more than 50 percent of fair market value of initial trust property) and the period of payment [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(ii)]:

- A fixed percentage of at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, to A and B for their joint lives and then to the survivor for his or her life;
- A fixed percentage of at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, to A for life or for a term of years not longer than 20 years, whichever is longer (or shorter);
- A fixed percentage of at least 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, to A for a term of years not longer than 20 years and then to B for life, provided B was living at the date of creation of the trust;
- A fixed percentage to A for his or her life and concurrently a fixed percentage to B for his or her life (the amount to each recipient to terminate at death) if the amount given to each individual is not less than 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent; or
- A fixed percentage to A for his or her life and concurrently an equal percentage to B for his or her life, and at the death of the first to die, the trust to distribute one half of the value of its assets at that time to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), if the total of the percentages is not less than 5 percent, but not more than 50 percent, for the entire relevant period.

[4] Additional Contributions

Additional contributions to a charitable remainder unitrust are permitted only if the trust instrument provides for them and provides for both valuation of the property at the time of contribution and determination of the prorated unitrust amount based on the values. Otherwise, the trust instrument must prohibit additional contributions [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(b)].

[5] Short Tax Year

All charitable remainder unitrusts must report on a calendar year basis [I.R.C. § 644]. Thus, most trusts will have an initial tax year of less than 12 months. The regulations require that the governing instruments of the trust provide a proration formula for determining the unitrust amount payable to the recipient for the short year [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(v)(a)(1)]. Additionally, the governing instrument of a unitrust must also provide that if no valuation date occurs before the end of the short tax year, the unitrust assets are to be valued as of the last day of the short tax year [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(v)(a)(3)].

[6] Determining Amount of Payment

An annual valuation of all trust assets is required in order to determine the unitrust amount [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. All assets and liabilities are taken into account, without regard to whether particular items are taken into account in determining the income of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(iv)]. The net fair market value may be determined by one valuation date or by taking an average of the values on more than one date, provided the same dates and methods are used each year. If a unitrust's governing instrument fails to specify the date or dates on which the trust assets are to be valued each year, the trustee must select the valuation date or dates and disclose the selection on the unitrust's first tax return [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(iv)].

If a charitable remainder trust holds "unmarketable assets" (i.e., assets that are not cash, cash equivalents, or other assets that can be readily sold or exchanged for cash or cash equivalents) and the trustee is the settlor, a noncharitable beneficiary, the settlor's spouse or a party who is related or subordinate to the settlor or the noncharitable beneficiary [see I.R.C. § 672(c) ("related or subordinate party" defined)], the trustee must use a current qualified appraisal to value those assets [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(7)]. However, this requirement does not apply to a trustee who is not the settlor, a noncharitable beneficiary, or a related or subordinate party. The settlor, a noncharitable beneficiary, or a related or subordinate party may properly serve as the sole trustee of the trust if the trustee uses a current qualified appraisal from a qualified appraiser to compute the fair market value of the trust's "unmarketable assets" [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(7)].

When the net fair market value is incorrectly determined, the governing instrument must provide that the unitrust is to pay to the recipient, in the case of an undervaluation of assets, or to receive from the recipient, in the case of an overvaluation of assets, the difference between the correct amount and the amount paid [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(iii)]. In addition, corrective payments must be made within a reasonable period after the final determination of the correct values [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(iii)].

[7] Time of Payment

The issues discussed in § 74.12[7] regarding payments from a charitable remainder annuity trust after the trust's year-end also apply to payments after year-end from a fixed percentage charitable remainder unitrust. A fixed percentage charitable remainder unitrust will not be deemed to have engaged in self-dealing [see I.R.C. § 4941], to have unrelated debt-financed income [see I.R.C. § 514], to have received an additional contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)], or to have ceased to function exclusively as a charitable remainder trust [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)] merely because the unitrust amount is paid after the close of the taxable year if the payment is made within a reasonable time and if the entire annuity amount in the recipient's hands is characterized only as ordinary income, capital gain, or other income, except to the extent it is characterized as corpus because the trust pays the annuity amount by distributing any of the following [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(a)]:

- Property that it owned at the end of the taxable year to pay the annuity amount, if the trustee elected to treat any income generated by the distribution as occurring on the last day of the taxable year in which the annuity amount was due;

- Cash that was contributed to the trust (with respect to which a charitable deduction was allowable);
or
- Cash received as a return of basis in any asset that was contributed to the trust (with respect to which a charitable deduction was allowable) and that was sold by the trust during the year for which the annuity amount is due.

These rules apply to taxable years ending after April 18, 1997, except that the second and third items immediately above apply only to distributions made after January 4, 2001 [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(e)]. However, a trust created before December 10, 1998 will not be deemed to have engaged in self-dealing [see I.R.C. § 4941] to have unrelated debt-financed income [see I.R.C. § 514], to have received an additional contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(f)], or to have ceased to function exclusively as a charitable remainder trust [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(4)] merely because the annuity amount is paid after the close of the taxable year, if the payment is made within a reasonable time and if the annuity amount is 15 percent or less of the initial net fair market value of the trust property [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(b)].

[8] Safe Harbor for Trusts Subject to Spouse's Right of Election

A safe harbor procedure is available for charitable remainder unitrusts that are created during the grantor's life and are subject to a right of election by the grantor's spouse to take against the grantor's will. The mere possibility that the trust assets could be used to satisfy the spouse's right of election may disqualify the trust from its inception. However, the safe harbor prevents the trust from being disqualified by treating it as qualified from its creation if the spouse irrevocably waives the right of election with respect to the assets of the trust [ Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. 909 ].

The spouse must irrevocably waive the right of election to the extent necessary to ensure that no part of the trust (other than the unitrust interest of which the spouse is the named recipient under the trust) may be used to satisfy the elective share. The spouse must execute a waiver, in writing that is valid under applicable state law, date and sign the waiver, and deliver a copy to the trustee of the charitable remainder unitrust. If the trust was created on or after June 28, 2005, the waiver must be executed on or before the date that is six months after the due date of Form 5227 (Split-Interest Trust Information Return) for the year in which the last of the following occurs [ Rev. Proc. 2005-24, 2005-16 I.R.B. 909 , § 3]:

- The creation of the trust.
- The date of the grantor's marriage to the surviving spouse.
- The date the grantor first becomes domiciled or resident in a jurisdiction that provides a right of election.
- The effective date of the applicable state law that creates such a right.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 74 SPLIT-INTEREST CHARITABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-74 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 74.14

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.14 Pooled Income Funds

[1] Nature and Description

A pooled income fund is a split-interest trust established by a qualified charitable organization, rather than by an individual donor. Individual private donors contribute property to the trust, retain a lifetime income interest in the contributed property, and obtain a charitable deduction based on the value of the remainder interest in the contributed property, which will pass to the charity on the individual donor's or life beneficiary's death. [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)]. Gifts to a pooled income fund generally qualify for the charitable deductions for income-tax [see I.R.C. § 170], gift-tax [see I.R.C. § 2522], and estate-tax [see I.R.C. § 2055] purposes.

Thus, a pooled income fund basically is a common trust fund operated by a qualified charitable organization. The property transferred by each donor to a pooled income fund is commingled with property transferred by other donors to the pooled income fund and managed, as trustee, by the charitable organization operating the fund [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(B)].

The principal distinction between a pooled income fund and an ordinary common trust fund operated by a community chest corporation or a corporation sole [see Corp. Code §§ 10000-10015] is that the remainder interest in all property transferred to a pooled income fund must be irrevocably given to the charitable organization operating the fund [see I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)]. The distinction between property donated in fee to a charitable organization and property donated to a pooled income fund is that the donor of property to a pooled income fund retains an income interest in the property transferred to the fund for the life of one or more beneficiaries living at the time of the transfer [see I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)].

[2] Planning Considerations

Pooled income funds offer several advantages. First, they offer investment diversification without the necessity of first converting assets and thereby incurring potential liability for capital gains [see I.R.C. § 642(c)(3),(5)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(a)(3), (b)(3)]. A donor who transfers assets to a pooled income fund is in effect exchanging those assets for a share of the pool's diversified assets without thereby realizing any capital gain. Second, a pooled income fund offers professional management at a relatively modest cost, an advantage that may be particularly attractive when the assets transferred to the fund by the donor are not large and the costs of establishing a separate trust would be prohibitive. Third, pooled income funds permit donors to safeguard their principal against erosion during the lifetime of the income beneficiary, since such a fund can only distribute income and cannot invade principal for the benefit of the lifetime income beneficiary [see I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A), (F); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(1), (2)].

On the other hand, pooled income funds are limited in securing tax-exempt income for the beneficiary, since they can neither receive nor invest in tax-exempt securities [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(C); see [6], below]. Additionally, the beneficiary cannot receive realized capital gain, since any such gain must be set aside for the charitable remainder beneficiary [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(a)(3)]. Further, the income interest must be a lifetime interest and not merely an interest for a term of years [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)]. Finally, the remainder interest must be paid to or for the use of a charitable organization to which contributions qualifying for the 50 percent income tax deduction may be made (and only if the organization is qualified under I.R.C. § 509(a)(1) [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)]; for organizations to which contributions qualifying for the 50 percent income tax deduction may be made, see I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A); see also in Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions ].

[3] Income Interest

[a] General Requirements

Pooled income funds are the recipients of remainder interests in property in which other persons have lifetime income interests. The donor can retain or create an income interest in the property for the donor's own life, or for the life or lives of another person or persons [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(1), (2)]. However, the term of any income beneficiary's interest must be measured by the beneficiary's own life. It cannot be measured in years [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)], and it cannot be measured by the life of another person [ Rev. Rul. 79-61, 1979-1 C.B. 220 ].

Although the donor need not be an individual [see [c], below], a donor who is not an individual cannot retain an income interest in its own favor [ Rev. Rul. 85-69 ]. A pet cannot be the income beneficiary of a pooled income fund [ Rev. Rul. 78-105 ].

[b] Income Interest in Favor of Class

The beneficiaries may be the members of a class [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)]. However, all of the members of the class must be alive and ascertainable at the time the property is transferred to the fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)].

[c] Income Interest in Favor of Private Trust or Pooled Income Fund Itself

A private trust in which an individual has a lifetime income interest may be named as the income beneficiary of a pooled income fund [ Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8020025 ; see Priv. Ltr. Ruls. 8727056 , 8727057 ]. Similarly, the pooled income fund itself may be one of the income beneficiaries. However, the donor will not get a charitable deduction for the present value of the income interest when the fund is one of the income beneficiaries [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)]. If the donor does not wish to retain the full income interest from the donated property, he or she may give a portion of the property to the charity outright, and then transfer a remainder interest in the rest of the property to the fund, thereby realizing the maximum tax benefits.

[d] Concurrent and Consecutive Income Interests

When there are two or more income beneficiaries, the beneficiaries may receive the income concurrently, consecutively, or both concurrently and consecutively [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)]. However, each beneficiary must receive income for each year for which the beneficiary is entitled to receive income measured by the rate of return earned by the trust for the year [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(F); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(7)]. The governing instrument of the fund must direct the trustee to distribute income currently or within the first 65 days following the close of the taxable year [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(7)]. It must also provide that the income interest of any income beneficiary will either terminate with the last regular payment made before death or be prorated to the date of death [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(7)].

[4] Remainder Interest

The remainder interest must be irrevocably transferred to the fund [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(A)]. It cannot be a contingent remainder [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(1)].

Once the income interest terminates, the fund's trustee must sever from the fund an amount equal to the value of the remainder interest in the property upon which the income interest is based [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(8)]. The value of the remainder interest may be either (1) its value as of the determination date next succeeding the termination of the income interest, or (2) its value as of the date on which the last regular payment was made before the death of the beneficiary, if the income interest is terminated on that payment date [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(8)]. The governing instrument must provide whether the severed amount will be either paid to, or retained for the use of, the charity [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(8)].

[5] Commingling of Property

The property that a donor transfers to the pooled income fund must be commingled, and invested or reinvested, with property transferred to the trust by other donors. Further, the governing instrument must require this kind of commingling [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(3); see § 74.230[2]].

Other property held by the charity cannot be commingled with the fund's property [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(3)]. However, a public charity can maintain more than one pooled income fund as long as the maintenance of multiple funds does not allow a group to manipulate the fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(3)]. In addition, a pooled income fund may invest a portion of its properties jointly with other properties that are held by the charity but that are not part of the fund, as long as records are maintained that identify the portion of the investment owned by the fund and the income attributable to that portion [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(3)].

[6] Prohibition Against Holding Exempt Securities

Property transferred to the pooled income fund cannot include any securities that are exempt from income tax, and the fund may not invest in any such securities [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(C); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(4)]. The governing instrument of the fund must contain specific prohibitions against accepting or investing in exempt securities [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(4)].

[7] Exclusivity of Fund

Pooled income funds are subject to a requirement of exclusivity. That is, a pooled income fund can only include amounts from transfers that meet the requirements for pooled income funds [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(D)]. Conversely, a pooled income fund cannot include amounts from transfers that do not meet those requirements [see I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(D)].

[8] Maintenance of Fund

A pooled income fund must be maintained by the organization to which the remainder interest is contributed, and neither a donor nor an income beneficiary of the fund can serve as the trustee [I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)(E); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(5)]. The requirement of maintenance will be satisfied if the public charity exercises control directly or indirectly [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(5)]. For example, the requirement of control ordinarily will be met if the public charity has the power to remove the trustee or trustees of the fund and to designate a new trustee or trustees [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(5)]. Further, a national organization may maintain a pooled income fund in which one or more local organizations are recipients of the remainder interests [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(5); see also Rev. Rul. 92-107, 1992-2 C.B. 120; Rev. Rul. 92-108, 1992-2 C.B. 127]. Although a donor or income beneficiary is prohibited from serving as a trustee of the fund, a donor or income beneficiary may serve as a trustee, officer, or director of the public charity without jeopardizing the fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(6)].

[9] Tax Treatment for Donor

[a] Income Tax

Generally, the amount of the deduction resulting from the transfer of property to a pooled income fund is the fair market value of the transferred property less the present value of the income interest retained by the donor [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6(a)(1), (2)]. The present value of the life income interest is computed on the basis of the life expectancy or expectancies of the income beneficiary or beneficiaries as well as the rate of return earned by the fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6(b)]. The rate of return is equal to the highest yearly rate of return of the fund for the three taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year in which the transfer of property is made [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6(b); see also Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6(b) (determining present value if fund has been in existence less than three years)].

The income tax regulations provide actuarial tables of valuation factors to determine the present value of the remainder interest of the transferred property to a fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6A; 1.642(c)-6T(d); 1.642(c)-6T(e) (for valuation dates after April 30, 1999); Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-6A(a)-(e) (for valuation dates before May 1, 1999)].

[b] Gift Tax

The gift tax consequences of a transfer of property to a pooled income fund are determined by a number of factors, such as whether the income interest is to be measured by the life of just one beneficiary, or more than one, whether the donor, the donor's spouse, or some other person is the income beneficiary, and whether the donor will hold a power to revoke the income interest of another income beneficiary.

If the donor retains a lifetime income interest, and there are no other income beneficiaries, the gift of the remainder interest qualifies for the gift tax charitable deduction [I.R.C. § 2522(c)(2)(A)].

If the donor's spouse is the sole income beneficiary, the gift of the charitable remainder interest also qualifies for the gift tax charitable deduction [see I.R.C. § 2522(c)(2)(A)]. However, to avoid gift tax on the transfer of the income interest to the spouse, an election must be made to have the entire property transferred to the fund treated as qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) [I.R.C. § 2523(f)(1)].

If the donor transfers an income interest to someone other than the spouse, the gift of the remainder interest qualifies for the gift tax charitable deduction [I.R.C. § 2522(c)(2)(A)], and the transfer of the income interest to the income beneficiary is a taxable gift [I.R.C. § 2511(a)] qualifying for the annual gift tax exclusion [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]; for discussion of the annual exclusion and the applicable exclusion amounts, which are adjusted annually for inflation, see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.32[4].

If the income interest is created for successive lives, the gift tax consequences may differ. For example, if the donor and spouse are respectively the primary and survivor beneficiaries of the income interest in a charitable remainder trust, the gift of the remainder interest and the donor's retained life income interest have no gift tax consequences. However, a spouse's income interest can qualify for the gift tax marital deduction only through election to treat the property transferred to the fund as qualified terminable interest property [I.R.C. § 2523(f)(1)], and only if the spouse is the only income beneficiary of the fund [I.R.C. § 2523(f)(2)(B)]. That is, if the spouse's income interest is preceded or succeeded by another's interest, the property cannot qualify for the election, and no gift tax marital deduction is available. Further, the annual gift tax exclusion is not available, since the spouse's survivor interest is a future interest rather than a present interest [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)].

If the donor is the primary beneficiary of the income interest and a person other than the donor's spouse is the survivor beneficiary, the survivor beneficiary's interest constitutes a taxable gift if it is irrevocable [I.R.C. § 2511(a); Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(b)].

If the donor's spouse is the primary beneficiary and another person is the survivor beneficiary, both gifts to the noncharitable beneficiaries are taxable gifts [I.R.C. § 2511(a)], and the gift to the spouse qualifies for the annual exclusion [I.R.C. § 2503(b)] but does not qualify for the marital deduction because the spouse is not the sole beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2523(f)(2)(B)]. Finally, if individuals other than the donor and spouse are named as both the primary and surviving beneficiaries of the income interest, both gifts to the noncharitable beneficiaries are taxable gifts [I.R.C. § 2511(a)]. The gift to the primary beneficiary is a gift of a present interest against which the annual exclusion may be used, but the exclusion does not apply to the gift to the survivor beneficiary since it is a gift of a future interest [see I.R.C. § 2503(b)]. For gifts made after 2009, except as provided in regulations, a transfer to a trust will be treated as a taxable gift, unless the trust is treated as wholly owned by the donor or the donor's spouse under the grantor trust provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 2511(c); see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 (grantor trust provisions)].

However, it cannot always be assumed that the gifts are irrevocable. If the donor reserves the right to revoke a beneficiary's interest, the gift will be incomplete [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(4), 1.664-3(a)(4)]. However, the right to revoke can be exercised only by will since, if the right to revoke is exercisable other than by will, the pooled income fund will be disqualified [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)].

[c] Estate Tax

NOTE

REGARDING ESTATE TAX REPEAL: The federal estate tax has been repealed, effective for decedents dying after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2210(a)]. Until then, however, it remains in effect. Furthermore, under a sunset provision of the 2001 legislation that enacted the repeal, the repeal of the estate tax does not apply to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 2010 [Pub. Law 107-16, § 901]. Thus, unless the current provision repealing the estate tax is re-enacted before 2010, the estate tax law in effect before enactment of the 2001 legislation (including the 55 percent maximum estate tax rate) will once again apply after 2010 [see Pub. Law 107-16, § 901; I.R.C. § 2001, before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16]. Most commentators feel that significant changes will be made to the estate tax law before 2010. For additional discussion, see § 60.12A.

The estate tax treatment of a transfer of property to a pooled income fund also depends on several factors, such as whether the income interest is to be measured by the life of just one beneficiary, or more than one, and whether the donor, the donor's spouse, or some other person is the income beneficiary [see Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)].

If the donor is the lifetime income beneficiary, all or a part of the value of the trust assets must be included in the donor's gross estate [I.R.C. § 2036(a)]. If the donor's spouse is irrevocably named as the lifetime income beneficiary, no part of the trust's assets is includable in the donor's estate, and the lifetime gift to the spouse qualifies for the marital deduction and is not considered in determining the estate tax due on the donor's estate [I.R.C. § 2523(f)(1)]. If the lifetime income beneficiary is someone other than the donor or the donor's spouse, no part of the trust's assets is ever includable in the donor's gross estate, but the amount of the lifetime gift is considered in determining the estate tax [I.R.C. § 2001(b)(1)], reduced by any previous gift tax paid [I.R.C. § 2001(b)(2); see also I.R.C. § 2001(d)].

In all cases, if the donor dies within three years of the date of the transfer to the pooled income fund, the value of the estate is increased by the amount of the gift tax paid on the lifetime noncharitable transfer [I.R.C. § 2035(b)]. This tax, with other gift taxes paid, is allowed as a credit against the estate tax due under the unified transfer tax system.

If the donor is the primary beneficiary of a two-life arrangement and possesses at death the power to revoke the survivor beneficiary's interest, the full value of the trust's assets will be includable in the donor's gross estate [I.R.C. § 2036(a)]. However, if the donor's will revokes the rights of the survivor beneficiary, the estate will receive a charitable deduction for the full value of the assets that pass outright to the charitable beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2055(a)]. Otherwise, the estate is entitled to a charitable deduction only for the value of the remainder interest that passes to the charitable remainder beneficiary upon the death of the survivor beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2055(e)(2)(A)]. If the survivor is the donor's spouse, the estate is allowed a marital deduction by electing to have the fund property treated as qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(A); see also discussion in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ]. In that case, there is no charitable deduction, since the entire value of the pooled income fund units is removed from the donor's taxable estate through the marital deduction [ see § 30.03[3][c]].

In any case, if the survivor beneficiary predeceases the donor, the value of the trust's assets must be included in the estate of the donor [I.R.C. § 2036(a)], but the same amount is allowed as an estate tax charitable deduction [I.R.C. § 2055(a)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 74 SPLIT-INTEREST CHARITABLE TRUSTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

26-74 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 74.15

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.15 Charitable Lead Trusts

[1] General Characteristics

A charitable lead trust is an irrevocable trust that provides for an income interest in favor of a qualifying charitable organization and a succeeding interest (which may be either a reversion or a remainder) in favor of the settlor or other designated beneficiaries. Like charitable remainder trusts and pooled income funds, charitable lead trusts are used to give property to charity and to obtain tax benefits in the form of an income tax [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)], estate tax [see I.R.C. § 2055(e)(2)(B)], or gift tax [see I.R.C. § 2522(c)(2)(B)] charitable deduction. Because the noncharitable interest created under a charitable lead trust cannot be enjoyed until some time in the future, a charitable lead trust is best suited for a donor who has substantial assets and can afford to forgo income from or use of the trust assets, either permanently or for a period of years (or, in the case of a nongrantor trust [see [2], below], a donor who will leave substantial interests in other assets to family members or other noncharitable beneficiaries, who can therefore afford to wait for the charitable interest to terminate).

While the concept of the charitable lead trust is simple on the surface, the statutory requirements to qualify a charitable lead trust for the charitable deduction are quite complex, and failure to satisfy all of the requirements may result in loss of the deduction. Rules governing charitable lead trusts are found in three sets of treasury regulations, one relating to the income tax charitable deduction [see Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i), (ii)], a second relating to the estate tax charitable deduction [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi), (vii)], and a third relating to the gift tax charitable deduction [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi), (vii)]. With certain exceptions, these sets of regulations are identical.

In order for a charitable deduction to be allowed, the income interest must be either [see I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(B), 2055(e)(2)(B), 2522(c)(2)(B)]:

- A guaranteed annuity [see [3], below]; or
- A fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust assets, determined yearly and paid annually, also known as a unitrust interest [see [4], below].

[2] Grantor and Nongrantor Trusts

Charitable lead trusts can be either "grantor" or "nongrantor" trusts. In a grantor charitable lead trust, the donor retains the right to receive the trust assets after the termination of the charitable income interest. In the law of future interests, this interest is classified as a reversion [see Civ. Code § 768]. Under the grantor income tax rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679], a donor who retains a reversionary interest in a trust that, at inception, is worth more than five percent of the value of the whole trust is treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 673(a)]. When the donor is treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes, the income of the trust is included in the donor's income for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 671]. Since the income is to be paid to a charitable beneficiary, however, the donor obtains an initial income tax charitable deduction equal to the present value of the income interest passing to charity [I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)].

In a nongrantor charitable lead trust, the donor irrevocably transfers the entire property to the trust, specifying that the income interest is to be paid to a charity and, upon termination of the income interest, the trust property is to be distributed to family members or others. The property is not distributed to the donor upon termination of the income interest. In the law of future interests, the interests of the family members or others are remainders [Civ. Code § 769]. Since the donor is not treated as the owner of the trust property for income tax purposes, no lifetime income tax charitable deduction is available to the donor for the income interest payable to charity [I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)]. However, a gift tax charitable deduction is available for the present value of the income interest transferred to charity [I.R.C. § 2522]. Although the transfer of the remainder interest to family members or others would potentially be subject to gift tax, the value of the deductible income interest would reduce the value of the taxable remainder interest and thus reduce the overall gift tax cost of the transfer. If the trust is testamentary and the transfer is made on the donor's death, the overall estate tax costs of the transfer will be reduced by the value of the deductible income interest passing to charity [see I.R.C. § 2055 (estate tax charitable deduction)].

[3] Charitable Lead Annuity Trust

A charitable lead annuity trust is a trust in which a "determinable amount" [see Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A) (definition of "determinable amount")] will be paid to a qualified charitable beneficiary for a term of years, or for the life or lives of one or more persons living at the time the trust is created [I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(B), 2055(e)(2)(B), 2522(c)(2)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. For this purpose, only one or more of the following individuals may be used as measuring lives: the donor, the donor's spouse, and an individual who, with regard to all remainder beneficiaries (other than qualifying charitable organizations), is either a lineal ancestor or the spouse of a lineal ancestor of those beneficiaries. A trust satisfies this requirement if there is less than a 15 percent probability that individuals who are not lineal descendants will receive any trust corpus. This probability must be computed, based on the applicable table in Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-7, at the time property is transferred to the trust, taking into account the interests of all primary and contingent remainder beneficiaries who are living at that time. An interest payable for a specified term of years can qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest even if the governing instrument contains a savings clause intended to ensure compliance with a rule against perpetuities. The savings clause must utilize a period for vesting of 21 years after the deaths of measuring lives who are selected to maximize, rather than limit, the term of the trust [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(a), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(a)]. If a transfer is made on or after April 4, 2000, that uses an individual other than one permitted, the interest may be reformed to satisfy the rule [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(e)]. On termination of the income interest, the trust property can be distributed to the grantor in the form of a reversion, or to another designated beneficiary in the form of a remainder.

There is no requirement that any minimum amount be paid, but to obtain a charitable income tax deduction, the donor must be taxable on the trust income during the term that the trust distributes assets to the charity [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)]. For example, a trust that has assets valued at $100,000 and which pays $2,000 per year to a qualified charitable organization for a period of eight years with the remainder reverting to the settlor will qualify for a charitable income and gift tax deduction for the value of the income interest given to the charity [ see §§ 74.210, 74.211].

[4] Charitable Lead Unitrust

A charitable lead trust with a unitrust income interest is a trust in which a fixed percentage of the value of the trust's assets, determined annually, is paid at least on an annual basis to a qualified charitable beneficiary for a term of years, or for the life or lives of an individual or individuals living at the time the trust is created [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(A)]. For this purpose, only one or more of the following individuals may be used as measuring lives: the donor, the donor's spouse, and an individual who, with respect to all remainder beneficiaries (other than qualifying charitable organizations), is either a lineal ancestor or the spouse of a lineal ancestor of those beneficiaries. A trust satisfies this requirement if there is less than a 15 percent probability that individuals who are not lineal descendants will receive any trust corpus. This probability must be computed, based on the applicable table in Treas. Reg. § 20.2031-7, at the time property is transferred to the trust, taking into account the interests of all primary and contingent remainder beneficiaries who are living at that time. An interest payable for a specified term of years can qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest even if the governing instrument contains a savings clause intended to ensure compliance with a rule against perpetuities. The savings clause must utilize a period for vesting of 21 years after the deaths of measuring lives who are selected to maximize, rather than limit, the term of the trust [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(a), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(a)]. If a transfer is made on or after April 4, 2000, that uses an individual other than one permitted, the interest may be reformed to satisfy the rule [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(e)]. After the termination of the unitrust interest, the property can return to the grantor or be distributed to remainder beneficiaries [see I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(B), 2055(e)(2)(B), 2522(c)(2)(B)].

Like the guaranteed annuity income interest, there is no minimum amount that must be paid, but the donor must be taxable on the trust income during the term that the trust distributes assets to the charity in order to obtain an income tax charitable deduction [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)]. For example, a trust that requires that six percent of the value of its assets, valued annually, be paid to a qualified charitable organization for a period of eight years with the remainder reverting to the settlor will qualify for a charitable income and gift tax deduction for the value of the income interest given to the charity [ see § 74.220]. Unlike the annuity trust, however, the unitrust does not guarantee that a fixed amount will be paid to the charity each year.

When a unitrust is created during the donor's lifetime, additional contributions can be made to the trust and additional gift tax deductions (and, possibly, additional income tax deductions) will be allowed. However, the annual valuation of the trust property required for a unitrust can be burdensome.

[5] Trust Property

[a] In General

Property contributed to a charitable lead trust should yield sufficient income to meet the income requirements of the trust instrument, whether they be an annual guaranteed annuity or a unitrust amount. There is no provision permitting the trustee of a charitable lead unitrust to pay the lesser of the stated payment amount or the actual trust net income, as there is in the case of a charitable remainder unitrust [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(3)(A)]. If the property contributed to a charitable lead trust does not yield enough income to meet the income distribution requirements of the trust, the trustee may be forced to borrow funds, sell assets, or distribute a portion of the principal.

[b] Tax-Exempt Securities

Tax-exempt securities may be transferred to a charitable lead trust, and the trust may invest in tax-exempt securities. Holding tax-exempt securities in a grantor charitable lead trust may be advantageous from a tax standpoint, since the donor receives an immediate income tax deduction for the present value of the income interest contributed to charity [

I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)] while the income generated by the trust (and reportable by the donor) is tax- exempt [see Priv. Ltr. Rul. 8427022 ].

However, the value of fixed income securities (including tax-exempt securities) varies as interest rates fluctuate. If prevailing rates rise, the value of the securities will fall, and if rates decline, the value of the securities will rise. If tax-exempt securities are contributed to a unitrust (as opposed to an annuity trust), the annual unitrust amount that must be paid to the charitable beneficiary will increase or decrease as interest rates change. However, the securities will continue to generate only a fixed amount of income. If interest rates fall, the trust may not have enough income to make the unitrust payments; and if rates rise the trust may have excessive income for that purpose.

[c] Appreciated Property

A significant tax advantage may be gained by transferring appreciated property to a trust that is exempt from income tax. After the property has been transferred to the trust, the trustee can sell it and reinvest the proceeds without incurring a capital gain tax. A charitable remainder trust is a tax-exempt trust for this purpose [see I.R.C. § 664(c)]. However, a charitable lead trust is not exempt from income tax. If appreciated property is contributed to a charitable lead trust, any gain on the subsequent sale of the property will be taxed to the grantor (if the trust is a grantor trust) or to the trust (if the trust is a nongrantor trust). For this reason, it is generally inappropriate to fund a charitable lead trust with appreciated property that the settlor wishes to be sold. However, a charitable lead trust may be funded with appreciated property that the donor does not wish to be sold. Property of this kind may be particularly appropriate if it generates enough income to meet the annuity or unitrust payments and it is expected that the property will continue to appreciate in the future.

The income tax effects of such a transfer on the remainder beneficiaries should be considered. If the remainder beneficiaries sell appreciated property after it has been contributed to the trust, the beneficiaries will realize capital gains to the extent that the adjusted sales price exceeds the donor's basis in the property [see I.R.C. § 1015 (basis of property acquired by gift same in hands of donee as in hands of donor)]. If, on the other hand, the property is devised to the beneficiaries by will or otherwise transferred on the donor's death, the beneficiaries will receive a stepped-up basis in the property [see I.R.C. § 1014 (basis of property acquired from decedent is fair market value at date of death)]; for decedents dying after 2009, a modified carryover basis rule generally applies, so a step-up basis does not apply (I.R.C. § 1022); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning , for a more detailed discussion] and the capital gains tax will be proportionately lower.

[6] Trustee

[a] Basic Considerations

Any person or corporation that has the capacity to enter into contracts and hold title to property generally may act as a trustee. The choice is usually made among an individual (such as the grantor or a remainder beneficiary), a corporate trustee (such as a bank or trust company), or the charitable beneficiary. Careful selection of the trustee is crucial, because poor trusteeship can seriously affect the financial benefits of the trust for both the charitable beneficiary and any remainder beneficiaries.

Many factors should be considered when a trustee is selected. If the value of the trust property is modest, it may not be practical to pay a substantial corporate trustee fee. If the trust is complex, however, a corporate trustee may be preferable to an individual, because of its greater administrative capabilities, investment experience, and continuity. In some cases, the trust may be best served by the use of multiple trustees. This may be the case, for example, if the trust instrument gives the trustee discretion to allocate income among two or more charitable beneficiaries.

[b] Settlor

There are no rules prohibiting the settlor (or grantor) from serving as the trustee of a charitable lead trust. If the trust is to be a nongrantor trust, however, the trustee should not be given powers that would render the trustee the owner of the trust for income tax purposes under the grantor trust tax rules [see I.R.C. §§ 671-679 (grantor trust rules); see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts § 72.11[2]]. The settlor can safely act as the trustee of a nongrantor trust if the trustee possesses only routine administrative powers over the trust property. If the trustee has the power to make discretionary distributions of trust property or income, however, or to designate the income or remainder beneficiaries of the trust, the settlor cannot safely act as the trustee without adverse income and estate tax consequences [see I.R.C. §§ 674 (grantor deemed owner of trust for income tax purposes if grantor retains power to control beneficial enjoyment of trust), 2036(a)(2) (trust property included in grantor's estate when grantor retains power to designate persons who will possess or enjoy property or income from property), 2038(a)(1) (trust property included in grantor's estate if grantor retains power of revocation over trust)].

[c] Beneficiary

There are no rules prohibiting an individual beneficiary from serving as trustee or cotrustee of a charitable lead trust. In appropriate cases, a beneficiary's interest in the trust or familiarity with the trust assets may make the beneficiary a good choice for trustee. However, a beneficiary should be selected as trustee only if the beneficiary is reliable, has good business judgment, and will not be subject to conflicts of interest. If there are two or more beneficiaries, selecting one of the beneficiaries to serve as trustee may be inadvisable, since such a trustee would be subject to conflicts of interest in the discharge of his or her duties. In circumstances of this kind, it will often be preferable to select a disinterested individual or a corporate fiduciary to serve as trustee, or as cotrustee with a beneficiary.

[7] Income Beneficiaries

[a] Charitable Organizations

A charitable lead trust must have at least one income beneficiary that qualifies as a charitable organization. The charitable organization must be one of the organizations described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c) (income tax charitable deduction), 2055(a) (estate tax charitable deduction), and 2522(a) (gift tax charitable deduction). Although there is a slight difference in the wording of I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a), an organization that qualifies under one of these sections ordinarily will qualify under the other sections as well. IRS Publication No. 78 is a Cumulative List of Organizations Described in I.R.C. § 170(c). To determine whether a particular organization qualifies as a charitable organization, an attorney may consult Publication No. 78, or directly contact the organization in question and request a copy of its tax-exempt determination letter.

The trust instrument should make some provision for the possibility that the named organization may lose its tax-exempt status. This may be done by providing that if, during the term of the trust, the designated charitable organization is not an organization of the type described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a) and 2522(a), the trustee will have discretion to pay the amount to another organization or organizations of that type. Giving the trustee authority to pay the amount to another organization or organizations when the designated charitable organization loses its tax-exempt status will not result in adverse income or estate tax consequences, even when the settlor is the trustee, although it will preserve the charitable deduction. The retention by the settlor of a power to determine the beneficial enjoyment of the income will not cause the settlor to be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes if the income is irrevocably payable for a purpose specified in I.R.C. § 170(c) [I.R.C. § 674(b)(4)]. The income is still irrevocably payable for a purpose specified in I.R.C. § 170(c) when the trustee has the power to designate an alternative beneficiary to receive payments if and when the designated charitable beneficiary loses its tax-exempt status. Although the estate tax provisions of the Internal Revenue Code do not address this issue, it is doubtful that the retention by the settlor of a power of this kind would result in the inclusion of the trust corpus in the settlor's gross estate for estate tax purposes under either I.R.C. § 2036 or I.R.C. § 2038.

There is no authority addressing whether the trust instrument may list several charitable beneficiaries and grant the trustee the power to "sprinkle" the annuity or unitrust amount among them. If the settlor (grantor) is trustee, however, that power would cause the trust to be includible in the settlor's estate for estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2)], although it would not render the trust a grantor trust [see I.R.C. § 674(b)(4)].

[b] Private Individuals

An income interest generally will not qualify as a guaranteed annuity or unitrust interest if an amount may be paid by the trust for a private purpose before the expiration of all charitable interests [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(E), (ii)(D), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(f), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(f)]. For purposes of this rule, amounts paid for full and adequate consideration, such as trustee fees, are not considered to be paid for private purposes [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(E), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(f), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(f)].

There are two exceptions to this general rule. First, an amount may be paid for private purposes from a segregated group of assets devoted solely to the private purpose [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(E), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(f), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(f)]. This exception applies only if (1) the obligation to pay the charitable interest begins on the date the trust is created; (2) the private interest does not precede the charitable interest; and (3) the trust does not provide any preference or priority with respect to the private interest [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(E), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(f), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(f)]. A trust that provides for payments of this kind is essentially treated as two trusts, a charitable lead trust and a noncharitable trust.

Second, an amount may be paid for a private purpose if the trust instrument provides that a guaranteed annuity or unitrust interest will be paid for both the private purpose and the charitable purpose [ Estate of Boeshore v. Commissioner (1982) 78 T.C. 523, 531-532, acq., 1987-1 C.B. 1 ]. This exception was addressed by the Tax Court in Estate of Boeshore v. Commissioner [ Estate of Boeshore v. Commissioner (1982) 78 T.C. 523, acq., 1987-1 C.B. 1 ]. The trust in question (a testamentary trust) provided for a unitrust interest payable first to an individual, then to both individuals and charities. Because a private interest was payable simultaneously with the charitable interest, both being stated as percentages of the whole fund, the IRS denied an estate tax charitable deduction. The court noted that such a payout sequence was not necessarily abusive, and held the applicable regulation [Treas. Reg. § 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vii)(e)] invalid [ Estate of Boeshore v. Commissioner (1982) 78 T.C. 523, acq., 1987-1 C.B. 1 ]. Presumably, the court's reasoning should apply to income and gift tax deductions as well as estate tax deductions.

[8] Income Interest

[a] General Requirements

The charitable beneficiary's right to receive the annuity or unitrust interest under a charitable lead trust must be irrevocable, and the payments to that beneficiary must be made at least annually [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A), (ii)(A)]. An income interest will qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest only if it is such an interest "in every respect" [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(B)]. Conversely, an income interest will qualify as a unitrust interest only if it is a unitrust interest "in every respect" [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(B)]. An interest will not qualify if it combines characteristics of these two types of interests. If, for example, the income interest is the right to receive an annual payment equal to the lesser of a sum certain or a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets, the interest will not qualify as either a guaranteed annuity interest or a unitrust interest, since it does not fully satisfy the requirements of either type of interest [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(B), (ii)(B)].

[b] Term

A trust will qualify as a charitable lead trust if the guaranteed annuity or unitrust interest is payable (1) for a specified term, (2) for the life or lives of an individual or individuals, each of whom is living and ascertainable at the date of transfer, or (3) for the life of a specified individual living at the date of the transfer plus a term of years [Treas. Reg. §

1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A), (ii)(A)]. The IRS has also ruled that the term may be the lesser of a term of years or the lives of individuals plus a term of years [ Rev. Rul. 85-49, 1985-1 C.B. 330 (guaranteed annuity interest)]. Unlike charitable remainder trusts, which are restricted to terms not exceeding 20 years [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(a)(5)(i), 1.664-3(a)(5)(i)], there is no rule limiting the number of years for which a charitable lead trust can be established. Thus, a charitable lead trust that is established for a term of years can be established for any period the donor chooses, as long as the term does not violate the applicable rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231 (Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities)].

[c] Valuation

The present value of the annuity or unitrust interest in a charitable lead trust qualifies for a gift [see I.R.C. § 2522(a)] or estate [see I.R.C. § 2055(a)] tax charitable deduction, and in the case of a grantor lead trust, an income tax charitable deduction [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B), (3)]. The present value of a unitrust interest is an amount equal to the fair market value of the transferred property less the present value of all interests in the transferred property other than the unitrust interest [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(3)(ii), 20.2055-2(f)(2)(v), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)(v)]. The present value of a guaranteed annuity interest is the present value at the date of contribution of the annuity payments payable to the charitable recipient [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(3)(i), 20.2055-2(f)(2)(iv), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)(iv)].

For transfers made after April 30, 1989, the valuation of the annuity or unitrust interest is governed by I.R.C. § 7520, which requires that the value be determined using tables provided by the IRS and an interest rate based upon the "Applicable Federal Rate." The Applicable Federal Rate is an interest rate determined by the IRS and published on a monthly basis in accordance with authority conferred by I.R.C. § 1274(d). It has three components, denominated the Federal short-term rate, the Federal mid-term rate, and the Federal long-term rate [see I.R.C. § 1274(d)(1)]. These rates are published in monthly IRS notices. Guidance in determining values is provided by IRS 1989-1 C.B. 660, Notice 89-24; see Treas. Reg. § 20.7520-4 (transitional rule permitting transferors to rely on Notice 89-24 in valuing interests having valuation date after April 30, 1989, and before June 10, 1994)]. Regulations provide additional valuation guidelines for interests transferred after April 30, 1989 [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.7520-1, 20.7520-1-20.7520-4]. Computer software products designed to facilitate the valuation are also used by many practitioners.

If the value of an interest as determined under the IRS tables exceeds the amount that the charity will actually receive, the deductible amount will be limited to the amount the charity will actually receive [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(3)(iii), 20.2055-2(f)(2)(v), 25.2522(c)-3(d)(2)(v)].

Before the income interest can be valued, the property transferred to the trust must be valued. The degree to which this valuation is troublesome depends upon the type of property transferred. Publicly-traded stock is relatively simple to value, while partnership interests are generally quite difficult to value. If the trustee of a lead unitrust intends to retain transferred assets, the transfer of a "hard-to-value" asset may prove troublesome, as the trust assets must be valued annually.

[9] Payout

Unlike charitable remainder trusts, charitable lead trusts are not subject to minimum payout requirements. Instead, the donor may choose any guaranteed annuity or fixed payout percentage [I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(B), 2055(e)(2)(B), 2522(c)(2)(B)]. Of course, it is necessary to consider what payout the trust investments can actually support in order to preserve trust principal for distribution after the termination of the annuity interest to the donor or the designated remainder beneficiaries.

[10] Remainder or Reversionary Interest

After the termination of the annuity or unitrust interest, the trust principal may be distributed to the settlor (grantor) in the form of a reversion, or to family members or others in the form of a remainder, in accordance with the trust terms [see I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(B), 2055(e)(2)(B), 2522(c)(2)(B)]. There is no limit on the number of remainder beneficiaries that may be designated. However, all remainder beneficiaries must be living and ascertainable on the date the trust is created [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A), (ii)(A)].

§ 74.16 Special Features of Charitable Lead Annuity Trusts

[1] Determinable Amount

A charitable lead annuity trust must pay a "determinable amount" periodically, but not less often than annually [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. An amount is determinable if the exact amount that must be paid under the conditions specified in the trust instrument can be ascertained as of the date of the transfer [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. The exact amount may be a specified sum or a fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust assets ascertained as of the date of transfer [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. There is no requirement that any minimum amount be paid.

The annuity amount must be paid regardless of the value of the trust property or the amount of income generated by the trust. The amount may be changed by a specific amount at the end of a term or the life of an individual, but it may not be redetermined by reference to a fluctuating index such as the cost of living index [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. For example, the trust could provide for the payment of $10,000 per year for 10 years, followed by $15,000 per year for the next 10 years.

[2] Excess Income

Income earned by the trust in excess of the guaranteed annuity payment may be either retained by the trust for eventual distribution to the grantor or remainder beneficiaries, or distributed currently to the charitable beneficiary. In either case, the amount of the initial income, gift, or estate tax charitable deduction is limited to the fair market value of the guaranteed annuity interest computed with respect to the sum certain or the stated percentage of the trust's assets [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(C), (3), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vi)(d), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(d)]. If the trust is a grantor trust [ see § 74.15[2]; see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts § 72.11[2]], however, the grantor is permitted an annual income tax charitable deduction for amounts paid by the trust to a charitable organization in excess of the guaranteed annuity amount [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(d)(2)(ii)]

[3] Additional Contributions

There are no rules prohibiting additional contributions to charitable lead trusts, as there are in the case of charitable remainder trusts [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(b), 1.664-3(b)]. However, it is unclear whether additional contributions to a charitable lead annuity trust will generate additional income, gift, or estate tax charitable deductions, since the annuity payment must be "determinable" at the "date of transfer" [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(i)(A)]. Neither the Code nor the Regulations address the question of whether the "date of transfer" for this purpose is the initial transfer date, or date of the creation of the trust, or the later date of an additional contribution. Additional contributions may be helpful when the income of the trust would otherwise be insufficient to pay the guaranteed annuity amount.

§ 74.17 Special Features of Charitable Lead Unitrusts

[1] Fixed Percentage

A charitable lead unitrust must pay, at least annually, a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets, determined annually [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(A)]. In determining the net fair market value of the trust property, all assets and liabilities of the trust must be taken into account, regardless of whether they are also taken into account in determining the income of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(A)]. The net fair market value may be determined on any one date during the trust's taxable year, or by taking the average of valuations made on more than one date during the year, providing that the same valuation date or dates and valuation methods are used each year [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(A)]. If the trust instrument does not specify the valuation date or dates, the trustee must select the date or dates on the first fiduciary income tax return (Form 1041) that the trust is required to file [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(A)].

[2] Excess Income

Income earned by the trust in excess of the unitrust amount may be retained by the trust for eventual distribution to the grantor or the remainder beneficiaries, or may be distributed to the charitable beneficiary on a current basis. In either case, the amount of the initial income, gift, or estate tax charitable deduction is limited to the fair market value of the guaranteed unitrust interest computed with respect to the fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust's assets [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-6(c)(2)(ii)(C), (3), 20.2055-2(e)(2)(vii)(d), 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vii)(d)]. If the trust is a grantor trust [ see § 74.15[2]; see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts § 72.11[2]], however, the grantor is permitted an annual income tax charitable deduction for amounts paid by the trust to a charitable organization in excess of the unitrust amount [Treas. Reg. § 1.170A-6(d)(2)(ii)]. Note that if the trust pays excess income to a charity, the charitable deduction will be less than if the excess income were accumulated since, when income is accumulated, the value of the trust principal increases and the present value of the unitrust amount determined with reference to the principal also increases [ Rev. Rul. 78-183, 1978-1 C.B. 302 ].

[3] Additional Contributions

Additional contributions to a charitable lead unitrust appear to be permissible as long as the governing instrument so provides. In Private Letter Ruling 8043077, the IRS approved a lead unitrust that permitted additional contributions and ruled that additional gift tax deductions would be available.

§ 74.18 Private Foundation Rules Applicable to Split-Interest Trusts

[1] Applicability of Requirements

Charitable remainder trusts and charitable lead trusts are split-interest trusts within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code if they have noncharitable and charitable interests and either an income, estate, or gift charitable deduction is granted for the charitable interests [I.R.C. § 4947(a)(2)]. As split-interest trusts, they are subject to certain taxes and requirements applicable to private foundations [I.R.C. § 4947(a)(2)].

Under I.R.C. § 4947(a)(2), split-interest trusts are generally subject to the following statutory provisions applicable to private foundations:

- I.R.C. § 507 relating to termination of private foundation status [see Treas. Reg. § 53.4947-1(e)] (applicable only in limited situations).
- I.R.C. § 4941, which imposes a tax on acts of self-dealing by private foundations [see discussion in [3], below].
- I.R.C. § 4943, which imposes a tax on excess business holdings by private foundations [see discussion in [4], below].
- I.R.C. § 4944, which imposes a tax on jeopardy investments by private foundations [see discussion in [5], below].
- I.R.C. § 4945, which imposes a tax on taxable expenditures by private foundations [see discussion in [6], below].
- I.R.C. § 508(e), which requires that the governing trust instrument prohibit the activities noted in Items 2 through 5, above, which are subject to tax [see discussion in [2], below].

[2] Governing Instrument Requirements

[a] Required Provisions

Charitable deductions (whether income tax deductions, gift tax deductions, or estate tax deductions) are not allowed for gifts to charitable trusts that fail to meet the "governing instrument" requirements of I.R.C. § 508(e)(1) [I.R.C. § 508(d)(2)]. Generally, the governing instrument must include provisions requiring the trust to distribute income in accordance with I.R.C. § 4942 and prohibiting the trust from engaging in acts of self-dealing [I.R.C. § 4941(d); see [3], below], from retaining excess business holdings [I.R.C. § 4943(c); see [4], below], from making investments in a manner subjecting the foundation to tax [I.R.C. § 4944; see [5], below], and from making taxable expenditures [I.R.C. § 4945(d); see [6], below]. However, as noted in [4], and [5], below, I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3) provides that the excess business holdings rules of I.R.C. § 4943 and the investment rules of I.R.C. § 4944 are inapplicable to trusts described in [1], above.

[b] State Statutes Satisfying Requirements

The requirements of I.R.C. § 508(e) relating to provisions of the trust instrument are deemed satisfied if state statutes prohibit the trusts from engaging in the activities forbidden by that section [Treas. Reg. § 1.508-3(d)]. In California, the trustees of charitable trusts, private foundations, and split-interest trusts are subject to Prob. Code §§ 16100-16105, which generally require the trustee to distribute trust income in a time and manner that will not subject the trust property to tax under I.R.C. § 4942 [Prob. Code § 16101] and forbid the trustee from engaging in any acts that would violate the private foundation rules [Prob. Code §§ 16102, 16103]. The California statutory provisions are deemed to be contained in the governing instrument of charitable trusts, private foundations, and split-interest trusts subject to California law [Prob. Code § 16104]. Many other states have enacted similar statutes [see Rev. Rul. 75-38, 1975-1 C.B. 161 for a list of states that have enacted similar statutory provisions]. Even when the state law automatically makes the private foundation rules applicable to charitable trusts, however, it is good practice to include provisions in the trust explicitly requiring the trustee to abide by the rules. This will clearly apprise the trustee and all other persons interested in the trust that the private foundation rules apply to the trust and must be complied with.

[3] Self-Dealing

Subject to certain exceptions, the following self-dealing transactions are prohibited between a "disqualified person" and a split-interest charitable trust [I.R.C. § 4941(d); for definition of "disqualified person," see I.R.C. § 4946(a) and discussion in Ch. 61, Will Drafting & Complete Will Forms § 61.15[3]]:

- The sale, exchange, or lease of property, including the assumption of a mortgage by the trust.
- The lending of money or other extension of credit, excluding a loan to the trust that is interest-free and used exclusively for exempt purposes.
- The furnishing of goods, services, or facilities, unless they are furnished to the trust without charge and are used exclusively for exempt purposes, or are not made available to the trustee on a more favorable basis than to the general public.
- The payment of compensation, unless the payment is necessary to carry out the exempt purpose of the trust and is not excessive.
- The transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a disqualified person of the income or assets of the trust.

- The payment of money or property to a government official.

A disqualified person who participates in any of these acts of self-dealing may be liable for initial (and possibly additional) taxes [see I.R.C. § 4941(a), (b)]. A participating trustee may also be liable [see I.R.C. § 4941(a), (b)].

[4] Excess Business Holdings

The excess business holdings rules are complex. These rules generally provide that a split-interest charitable trust cannot hold more than 20 percent of the voting stock in any business enterprise, less the percentage of the voting stock owned by all disqualified persons [I.R.C. § 4943(c)(2)(A)]; for definition of "disqualified person," see I.R.C. § 4946(a)]. This 20-percent limit is increased to 35 percent if effective control of the corporation is held by outside third parties [I.R.C. § 4943(c)(2)(B)].

If a trust has excess business holdings as a result of a gift or devise, there is a five-year grace period during which the trust or disqualified person may dispose of the property without violating the excess business holdings rules [I.R.C. § 4943(c)(6)(A)]. If there is an unusually large or complex gift or devise, an additional five-year period may be granted to dispose of the excess business holdings [I.R.C. § 4943(c)(7)].

Charitable remainder trusts for which an income, estate, or gift charitable deduction is granted and that have solely noncharitable income beneficiaries are not subject to the taxes on excess business holdings and need not include prohibitions against those activities in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.508-3(e)(2)]. Charitable lead trusts whose income beneficiaries are solely charitable and whose aggregate income, estate, or gift charitable deductions do not exceed 60 percent of the fair market value of all assets in the trust also are not subject to the taxes on excess business holdings, and need not include prohibitions against such activities in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.508-3(e)(2)].

The excess business holding rules can be troublesome for charitable lead trusts, since these trusts are often used to pass valuable assets (such as closely held stock) to family members. Structuring a charitable lead trust so that the actuarial value of the charitable interest in the lead trust is less than 60 percent of the value of all the interests in the trust will limit the charitable deduction. The requirement that all of the income interest must be paid to a charitable organization is presumably satisfied via the guaranteed annuity or unitrust interest.

[5] Investments Jeopardizing Charitable Purpose

If a split-interest charitable trust makes an investment that jeopardizes any of the trust's exempt purposes, a tax equal to 5 percent of the amount invested in the taxable period will be imposed on the trust, and possibly also on the trustee [I.R.C. § 4944(a)]. Investments that may jeopardize the trust's exempt purposes include such things as trading in securities on margin, trading in commodity futures, investing in working interests in oil and gas wells, purchasing "puts," "calls," and "straddles," purchasing warrants, and short-selling [see Treas. Reg. § 53.4944-1(a)(2)]. If the investment is not corrected, additional taxes may be imposed [I.R.C. § 4944(b)].

The same exceptions that apply to the excess business holding rules [see [4], above] also applies to the jeopardy investment rules. Charitable remainder trusts for which an income, estate, or gift charitable deduction is granted and that have solely noncharitable income beneficiaries are not subject to the taxes on jeopardy investments and need not include prohibitions against those activities in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)(B); Treas. Reg. § 1.508-3(e)(2)]. Charitable lead trusts whose income beneficiaries are solely charitable and whose aggregate income, estate, or gift charitable deductions do not exceed 60 percent of the fair market value of all assets in the trust also are not subject to the taxes on jeopardy investments, and need not include prohibitions against such activities in the trust instrument [I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.508-3(e)(2)].

[6] Taxable Expenditures

A penalty tax will be imposed on a split-interest charitable trust (and possibly on the trustee) if the trustee makes certain "taxable expenditures" [I.R.C. § 4945(a)]. For this purpose, the term "taxable expenditures" generally includes the following:

- Any amount paid or incurred by the trust to influence legislation, to influence the outcome of a specific public election, or to carry on a voter registration drive [I.R.C. § 4945(d)(1), (2)].
- Any amount paid or incurred as a grant to an individual for travel or study, or as a grant to any organization that is not a "public charity" organization or exempt operating foundation [I.R.C. § 4945(d)(3), (4); see I.R.C. §§ 509(a), 4940(d)(2)].
- Any other amount paid or incurred for any purpose other than a religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purpose, or to foster amateur sports competition or to prevent cruelty to children or animals [I.R.C. § 4945(d)(5); see I.R.C. § [0-9]70(c)(2)(B)].

If a taxable expenditure has been made and it is not corrected within the taxable period, additional taxes may be imposed [I.R.C. § 4945(b)].

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman§ 74.19 Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Consequences of Split-Interest Trusts*[1] Charitable Remainder Trusts and Pooled Income Funds

The gift of the income interest of a charitable remainder annuity or unitrust may have generation-skipping transfer tax implications [I.R.C. § 2601 et seq.; see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1), (2)]. Similarly, if the settlor makes a gift of the income interest when transferring the remainder to a pooled income fund, that gift may have generation-skipping transfer tax consequences [I.R.C. § 2601 et seq.; see I.R.C. § 642(c)(5)]. The generation-skipping transfer tax applies to both income and principal distributions. In general, whenever a trust distribution of income or principal is made to a beneficiary who is assigned to a generation that is two or more below that of the settlor [see I.R.C. § 2651], the distribution is subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611, 2612(a), (b)]. For example, if the settlor creates a charitable remainder annuity trust, providing that his or her children and grandchildren receive 5 percent of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets for 12 years and that a designated charity receive the remainder interest, distributions of income or principal passing directly to the grandchildren constitute taxable distributions [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611, 2612(b)]. For further discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see the Legal Background to Ch. 60, Estate Planning. For a detailed discussion of the tax, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[2] Charitable Lead Trusts

The gift of a remainder interest in a charitable lead trust may have generation-skipping transfer tax consequences [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B); see also I.R.C. § 2601 et seq.]. If the remainder interest is in trust, trust distributions of either income or principal to beneficiaries who are assigned to generations that are two or more below that of the settlor [see I.R.C. § 2651] are subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611, 2612(a), (b)]. If all the remainder beneficiaries are skip persons (two or more generations below the settlor's generation [see I.R.C. § 2613(a)]), the expiration of the charitable interest constitutes a taxable termination [see I.R.C. § 2612(a)]. However, if a least one of the remainder beneficiaries is not a skip person, the expiration of the charitable interest is not a taxable termination, but subsequent distributions to skip persons are taxable distributions [see I.R.C. § 2612(b)]. If the remainder passes outright, transfers to beneficiaries assigned to generations that are two or more below that of the settlor are taxable distributions [see I.R.C. § 2612(b)].

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.20 Federal Income Taxation of Charitable Trusts and Beneficiaries

[1] Remainder Trusts

Charitable remainder trusts that qualify under I.R.C. § 664 are specifically exempted from income tax liability [I.R.C. § 664(c)]. However, if a charitable remainder trust has unrelated business taxable income within the meaning of I.R.C. § 512 during the year, then all of its income during that year is subject to income tax [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(c)].

The donor of appreciated property to a charitable remainder trust does not recognize gain or loss on the transfer, and the trust takes the donor's basis [see Rev. Rul. 55-275, 1955-1 C.B. 295 ; Rev. Rul. 60-370, 1960-2 C.B. 203].

The income beneficiaries of charitable remainder trusts are taxable according to the characteristics of the trust distribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5)(iii)]. Distributions are treated first as ordinary income to the extent of the trust's ordinary income for the year and prior undistributed ordinary income; second, as capital gain to the extent of capital gain for the year and prior undistributed capital gain; third, as other income to the extent of such other income for the year and prior undistributed other income; and fourth, as a distribution of trust corpus [I.R.C. § 664(b)]. Within the ordinary income and capital gains categories, income is treated as distributed from the classes of income in that category beginning with the class that is subject to the highest income tax rate and ending with the class that is subject to the lowest income tax rate [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(d)(1)(ii)]. The determination of the character of amount distributed (or deemed distributed) at any time during the trust's tax year is made as of the end of that tax year. The tax rates to be used in computing the tax on the distribution are those that apply in the year in which the distribution is required to be made to the classes of income deemed to make up the distribution, not the tax rates that apply to those classes of income in the year the trust receives the income [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(d)(1)(ii)(a)]. A loss in one of the categories of distribution may offset prior undistributed amounts in that category, but it cannot be used to offset gains in other categories [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(d)(1)(ii)]. For each tax year that current and undistributed gains and losses within each class are netted to determine the net gain or loss for that class, the classes of capital gains and losses may then be netted against each other in a specified order [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(d)(1)(iv)]. Notice that these rules may result in deferral, but not elimination of tax on a capital gain if the trust sells low-basis, high-value assets, contrary to popular notions that contributions of such assets to charitable remainder trusts prevent complete avoidance of the tax.

[2] Pooled Income Funds

A qualifying pooled income fund and its beneficiaries are taxable under Part I of Subchapter J of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to the taxation of trusts and beneficiaries [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(a)(2)]. The pooled income fund is subject to taxation to the extent that its income is not distributed to its beneficiaries. Like charitable remainder trusts, donors do not recognize gain or loss on property transferred to the fund, and I.R.C. § 644 is inapplicable [see I.R.C. § 644(b)]; Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(a)(3)].

[3] Lead Trusts

A charitable lead trust, like a pooled income fund, is taxable under Part I of Subchapter J of the Internal Revenue Code. The income beneficiary is a charitable organization that will not be subject to income tax on the trust distributions. If the donor receives an income tax charitable deduction for the lead interest, the donor will be taxable on the trust income throughout the trust term [see I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B)]. If the donor does not retain a reversionary interest in the trust property, the trust is taxable on income that is not distributed [see I.R.C. §§ 641, 642(c), 675]. Payments to the charitable income beneficiary must be treated as charitable deductions under I.R.C. § 642(c), rather than as distribution deductions under I.R.C. § 661 [Treas. Reg. § 1.663(a)-2].

§ 74.21 Coordination of Marital Deduction and Charitable Deduction

[1] Eligibility of Income Interest for Marital Deduction

It is not uncommon for a settlor to create a charitable remainder trust with the settlor's spouse as an income beneficiary. In this situation, the income interest to the surviving spouse will qualify for the federal estate and gift tax marital deductions, notwithstanding the fact that the interests are terminable interests, for which the marital deduction generally is unavailable [I.R.C. §§ 2056(b)(8) (estate tax), 2523(g) (gift tax); see I.R.C. §§ 2056(b), 2523(b) (general disallowance of deduction for terminable interests)]. In order for the income interest to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction, however, the surviving spouse must be the only beneficiary of a qualified charitable remainder trust who is not a charitable beneficiary or an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) [I.R.C. §§ 2056(b)(8) (estate tax), 2523(g) (gift tax)].

The IRS regulations provide that the interest held by a sole noncharitable beneficiary of a qualified charitable remainder trust is ineligible for the QTIP election [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(a)(1)]. The surviving spouse's interest need not be an interest for life, but under the rules applicable to charitable remainder trusts an interest payable for a specified term cannot be payable for a term in excess of 20 years [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-8(a)(2); I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A), (2)(A)].

[2] QTIP Trust As Alternative to Charitable Remainder Trust

As an alternative to qualified charitable remainder trust, the drafter may simply prepare a standard QTIP trust with a remainder to charity. When this is done, the entire value of the QTIP property is eligible for the QTIP election, as with any other QTIP trust, and may pass to the trust tax free if the executor so elects [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7]. When the surviving spouse dies, any remaining assets of the QTIP trust are included in his or her taxable estate [I.R.C. § 2044(a),(b)(1)(A)]. However, the trust assets are treated as property passing from the deceased spouse to the charity [I.R.C. § 2044(c)], and therefore qualify for the charitable deduction, assuming all other applicable requirements have been met [Treas. Reg. § 20.2044-1(b); see I.R.C. § 2055(a) (charitable deduction available for all qualifying transfers made by decedent)]. Some attorneys prefer this drafting alternative to the creation of a qualifying charitable remainder trust, simply because they are familiar with the QTIP requirements and would prefer to deal with them rather than the more detailed and less frequently encountered regulations dealing with charitable remainder trusts. A second (and better) reason for this preference is greater flexibility in the administration of the QTIP trust for the survivor's benefit: unlike a charitable remainder trust [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(B), (2)(B) (no amount other than annuity or unitrust amount may be payable to life beneficiary)], the survivor may invade the principal of a QTIP trust if the trust instrument permits such invasions.

For detailed discussion of the federal estate tax marital deduction and QTIP trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions. For illustrative QTIP trusts (for noncharitable remainder beneficiaries), see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, §§ 70.202[2], 70.203[2].

§ 74.22 California Law Governing Interpretation of Charitable Remainder Annuity Trusts, Unitrusts, and Charitable Lead Trusts

[1] Purpose and Application

Prob. Code §§ 21540 and 21541 are designed to reduce the possibility that the estate tax charitable deduction will be lost by inadvertent inclusion of inappropriate provisions in instruments creating charitable remainder unitrusts, charitable remainder annuity trusts, or charitable lead trusts. These sections apply broadly to wills, trusts, deeds, and other writings that designate beneficiaries or make donative transfers of property [see Prob. Code § 21540 (rules applicable to "instrument"); see also Prob. Code § 45 ("instrument" means will, trust, deed, or other writing that designates beneficiary or makes donative transfer)].

[2] Construction of Instruments in Conformity With Internal Revenue Code

Prob. Code § 21540 provides that if an instrument indicates the transferor's intention to comply with the Internal Revenue Code requirements for a charitable remainder unitrust or annuity trust (as defined in I.R.C. § 664), the provisions of the instrument (including any power, duty, or discretionary authority given to a fiduciary in the instrument) must be construed to comply with the charitable deduction provisions of I.R.C. § 2055 or I.R.C. § 2522 and the charitable remainder trust provisions of I.R.C. § 664 in order to conform to that intent [Prob. Code § 21540]. Prob. Code § 21541 makes the same provision for instruments that indicate the transferor's intention to comply with the requirements for a charitable lead trust as described in I.R.C. § 170(f)(2)(B) and I.R.C. § 2522(c)(2).

[3] Other Requirements

Under both Prob. Code §§ 21540 and 21541, the trustee is forbidden to take any action or have any power that impairs the charitable deduction [Prob. Code §§ 21540, 21541]. Prob. Code § 21540 states that the provisions of the instrument may be augmented in any manner consistent with I.R.C. §§ 2055(e) or 2522(c) on a petition provided for in Prob. Code § 17200. Prob. Code § 21541 provides that the provisions of the instrument may be augmented in any manner consistent with the intent to comply with the requirements for a charitable lead trust on a petition provided for in Prob.

Code § 17200 [see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(15) (petition to amend or conform instrument to qualify for charitable estate tax deduction)]. If a petition under Prob. Code § 17200 relates to a charitable trust subject to the jurisdiction of the Attorney General, notice of the time and place of the hearing on the petition must be given to that officer, unless the Attorney General has waived notice [Prob. Code § 17203(a)(3)]. In one case, the amendment of the provisions of a charitable trust regarding appointment of successor trustees was found to be improper under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution because potential successor trustees under the trust as written were not notified of the proceeding to amend the trust [ Estate of Sigourney v. American Psychoanalytic Ass'n (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 593, 603-604, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 274] .

§ 74.23 Drafting Split-Interest Charitable Trusts

[1] Charitable Remainder Trusts

[a] Sample IRS Forms

The IRS has promulgated sample forms that incorporate the statutory and regulatory requirements applicable to charitable remainder trusts. Revenue Procedures 2005-52 through 2005-59 [ Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-53, 2005-34 I.R.B. 339 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-54, 2005-34 I.R.B. 353 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-55, 2005-34 I.R.B. 367 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-56, 2005-34 I.R.B. 383 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-57, 2005-34 I.R.B. 292 ; 2005-58, 2005-34 I.R.B. 402 ; Rev. Proc. 2005-59, 2005-34 I.R.B. 412 ] contain sample forms for charitable remainder unitrusts. Revenue Procedures 2003-53 through 2003-60 [ Rev. Proc. 2003-54, 2003-31 I.R.B. 236 ; Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242 ; Rev. Proc. 2003-56, 2003-31 I.R.B. 249 ; Rev. Proc. 2003-57, 2003-31 I.R.B. 257 ; Rev. Proc. 2003-58, 2003-31 I.R.B. 262 ; Rev. Proc. 2003-59, 2003-31 I.R.B. 268 ] contain sample forms for charitable remainder annuity trusts. The sample forms include both testamentary and inter vivos trusts. If the trust provisions in a charitable remainder trust are "substantially similar" to those in the sample forms, the IRS will recognize the trust as satisfying the applicable requirements for split interest charitable trusts. Documents will be considered "substantially similar" if the wording is varied to "comport with local law and practice as necessary to create trusts, define legal relationships, pass property by bequest, provide for the appointment of alternative and successor trustees, or designate alternative charitable remaindermen." A trust that contains additional substantive provisions, or that omits any of the provisions in the sample forms, will not necessarily be disqualified, but neither will it be assured of qualification under these Revenue Procedures.

[b] Effect on Drafting Practices

To assure that split-interest charitable trusts will qualify for their intended purpose, the standard drafting practice among estate planners ordinarily is to deviate as little as possible from the standard language of the sample trusts, consistent with state law and the needs of the client. This means that the provisions in the sample agreements are usually incorporated essentially verbatim. However, since the sample agreements do not contain other provisions that are commonly incorporated into trust agreements in California, such as standard trustee powers, spendthrift clauses, and definitional provisions, it is common practice to incorporate these provisions into the trust agreement to the extent they are not inconsistent with the IRS-mandated requirements.

[2] Pooled Income Funds

The Internal Revenue Service has also published sample forms for declarations of trust creating pooled income funds, and instruments transferring property to pooled income funds [see Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712 ; see also Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96 ; Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182 ; Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159]. According to the IRS, these sample declarations of trust and instruments of transfer meet all of the applicable requirements for a pooled income fund under I.R.C. § 642(c)(5), and if the charity responsible for the creation and maintenance of the pooled income fund makes reference in the trust instrument of the fund to Rev. Proc. 88-53, and adopts substantially similar documents, the IRS will recognize the trust documents as satisfying all of the applicable requirements of I.R.C. § 642(c)(5) and the applicable regulations. As a practical matter, therefore, pooled income funds usually track the IRS forms with as few deviations as possible, consistent with the structure and purpose of the trust. The IRS sample forms and requirements for pooled income fund trust declarations and transfer instruments, are discussed in greater detail in §§ 74.230 and 74.231, respectively. The pooled income fund forms in this chapter closely track the sample IRS forms [see §§ 74.230-74.233].

Pooled income fund transfer instruments frequently are prepared by the charitable institution associated with the fund.

[3] Charitable Lead Trusts

The IRS has not issued prototype forms for charitable lead trusts as it has for charitable remainder trusts and pooled income funds [see [1], [2], above]. Thus, the attorney must draft his or her own forms to create charitable lead trusts. However, many of the provisions that are used in charitable remainder trusts are also suitable for inclusion in charitable lead trusts. The complete charitable lead trust forms in this publication make use of those provisions, while providing specially drafted provisions to accommodate the particular needs of the charitable lead trust format [see §§ 74.210, 74.211]. For additional discussion, see the comments to those forms [see §§ 74.210[1] (charitable lead annuity trust), 74.211[1] (charitable lead unitrust)].

§ 74.102 Basic Features of Trust Arrangement

1. Determine whether charitable organization to which client wishes to make gift qualifies for desired tax deductions.

NOTE:

Definitions of charitable organizations that qualify for estate, gift, and income tax charitable deductions are not identical [compare I.R.C. §§ 170(b)(1)(A), 2055(a), 2522(a)]. For detailed discussion, see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions .

2. Determine type and value of property client wishes to contribute.

3. Ascertain whether any of that property is encumbered.

4. Determine how income payments will be determined, either:

a. Payment of fixed annual sum ("sum certain") to income beneficiary (an "annuity trust") [ see §§ 74.200 (charitable remainder annuity trust) 74.210 (charitable lead annuity trust)];
or

b. Payment of fixed annual percentage of trust assets to income beneficiary (a "unitrust") [ see §§ 74.201 (charitable remainder unitrust) 74.211 (charitable lead unitrust)].

5. Determine whether client is willing to have corporate trustee or wishes to act as trustee.

a. If grantor wishes to name himself or herself trustee, do not give grantor any power that would cause trustee to be treated as owner of trust [ Rev. Rul. 77-285, 1977-2 C.B. 213 ].

NOTE:

For discussion of the "grantor trust" rules, see Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts, § 72.11[2].

b. If trustee is granted power to sprinkle guaranteed annuity or unitrust amount among several beneficiaries, name independent trustee and do not give grantor power to name himself or herself trustee [ Rev. Rul. 77-73, 1977-1 C.B. 175 ].

6. Determine management and investment powers that should be given to trustee.

NOTE:

A trust is not a charitable remainder trust if the provisions of the trust instrument restrict the trustee from investing the trust assets in a manner that could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(3); see Rev. Rul. 73-610, 1973-2 C.B. 213 ].

NOTE:

For additional information on the procedural steps involved in creating trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms, and Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts.

1. Draft trust instrument, using appropriate model form and modifying instrument for particular client desires or needs:

NOTE:

The IRS has promulgated sample forms for charitable remainder annuity trusts and charitable remainder unitrusts. As discussed in greater detail in §§ 74.23[1], 74.200[1], and 74.201[1], the usual practice among attorneys drafting these trusts is to make as few changes as possible in the sample IRS forms, consistent with the nature and goals of the trust.

a. For a charitable remainder trust:

(1) For a charitable remainder annuity trust with a fractional or percentage annuity, use form in § 74.200[2].

(2) For a charitable remainder unitrust with a fractional or percentage annuity, use form in § 74.201[2].

b. For a charitable lead trust:

NOTE:

The IRS has not promulgated sample forms for charitable lead trusts.

(1) For a charitable lead annuity trust, use form in § 74.210[2].

(2) For a charitable lead unitrust, use form in § 74.211[2].

c. For a contribution to a pooled income fund:

(1) Examine fund's governing instrument and verify that it complies with applicable IRS requirements [ see § 74.230[2]].

NOTE:

The trust instrument for a pooled income fund is usually drafted by or on behalf of the charitable institution associated with the fund. Before advising a prospective donor to make a contribution to the fund, the donor's attorney should verify that the fund is operating in accordance with applicable IRS requirements, to ensure that the donor's contribution will actually qualify for the desired charitable deduction. The IRS has promulgated a sample declaration of trust for pooled income funds. The form in § 74.230 illustrates the sample IRS form. That form and the accompanying discussion may be used as a guide in reviewing pooled income fund instruments.

(2) Prepare or complete instrument of transfer [ see § 74.230[2]].

NOTE:

Pooled income funds may provide their own standard forms for transfer instruments. Before completing such a form, the attorney should verify that it meets the applicable IRS requirements. The IRS has promulgated sample forms for transfer instruments [ see §§ 74.231[2]-74.233[2]], which are illustrated in this chapter and may be used as a guide in reviewing transfer instruments. If the fund does not provide its own transfer instrument forms, the attorney should prepare one, using the appropriate form below.

(a) For an income interest for one life, use form in § 74.231[2]

(b) For an income interest spanning two lives, with the interests running consecutively, use form in § 74.232[2].

(c) For an income interest spanning two lives, with the interests running both concurrently and consecutively, see § 74.233[2].

2. Prepare other documents necessary to transfer trust property into trust.

NOTE:

For discussion and forms relating to trust funding, see Ch. 73, Funding a Revocable Trust . Although charitable trusts are irrevocable, the asset transfer process is essentially identical to that described in Ch. 73.

3. Have client execute necessary documents.

§ 74.200 Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a charitable remainder annuity trust (CRAT). The form may be used to create either an inter vivos or a testamentary trust. It is based on the following sample forms for CRATs, which have been issued by the Internal Revenue Service:

- An inter vivos charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments for one measuring life [ Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230 ].
- An inter vivos charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments for term of years [ Rev. Proc. 2003-54, 2003-31 I.R.B. 236 ].
- An inter vivos charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments payable consecutively for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242 ].
- An inter vivos charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments payable concurrently and consecutively for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2003-56, 2003-31 I.R.B. 249 ].
- A testamentary charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments for one measuring life [ Rev. Proc. 2003-57, 2003-31 I.R.B. 257 ].
- A testamentary charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments for term of years [ Rev. Proc. 2003-58, 2003-31 I.R.B. 262 ].

- A testamentary charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments payable consecutively for two measuring lives. Rev. Proc. 2003-59, 2003-31 I.R.B. 268.
- A testamentary charitable remainder annuity trust providing for annuity payments payable concurrently and consecutively for two measuring lives. Rev. Proc. 2003-60, 2003-31 I.R.B. 274.

The sample forms satisfy all of the requirements for a CRAT under I.R.C. § 664(d)(1) and Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2. They supersede previous sample forms issued by the IRS [see Rev. Proc. 89-21, 1989-1 C.B. 842; Rev. Proc. 90-32, 1990-1 C.B. 546].

The IRS will recognize that a trust meets all of the requirements for a CRAT if (1) the trust instrument is substantially similar to the appropriate sample declaration of trust or properly integrates one or more of the alternate provisions [see [b], below] into a document that is substantially similar to the sample declaration, and (2) the trust operates in a manner that is consistent with the terms of the trust instrument and is a valid trust under applicable local law. A trust instrument that contains substantive provisions in addition to those provided in the sample declaration (other than properly integrated alternate provisions or provisions necessary to establish a valid trust under applicable local law that are not inconsistent with applicable federal tax requirements), or that omits any of the provisions in the sample declaration, will not necessarily be disqualified, but the trust will not be assured of automatic qualification under these Revenue Procedures [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 3]. This form follows the language of the sample forms almost exactly, with minor nonsubstantive deviations to conform to the style and format of the other forms in this publication.

To assure that split-interest charitable trusts will qualify for their intended purpose, the standard drafting practice among estate planners ordinarily is to deviate as little as possible from the standard language of the sample trusts, consistent with state law and the needs of the client. This means that the provisions in the sample agreements are usually incorporated essentially verbatim. However, since the sample agreements do not contain other provisions that are commonly incorporated into trust agreements in California, such as standard trustee powers, spendthrift clauses, definitional provisions, and the like, it is common practice to incorporate these provisions into the trust agreement to the extent they are not inconsistent with the IRS-mandated requirements.

[b] Alternate Provisions

The Revenue Procedures also set forth alternate provisions that may be integrated into the sample declaration of trust. These alternate provisions relate to [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 6]:

- The statement of the annuity amount as a specific dollar amount.
- Payment of a portion of the annuity amount to an I.R.C. § 170(c) charitable organization.
- An I.R.C. § 664(f)(3) "qualified contingency."
- Restriction of the charitable remainder beneficiary to a "public charity."
- The donor's retained right to substitute the designated charitable remainder beneficiary.
- A power of appointment to designate the charitable remainder beneficiary.

[c] Trustee Provisions

The trust instrument may designate alternate or successor trustees. It may also contain other administrative provisions relating to the trustee's duties and powers, as long as the provisions do not conflict with the rules governing CRATs under I.R.C. § 664 and the regulations under that statute [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 5.01(4)].

Any qualified and suitable person, natural or corporate, may serve as the trustee. In appropriate circumstances, either the donor or the annuity recipient may serve as the trustee. If, however, it is desirable to remove the trust assets from the donor's estate for federal estate tax purposes, the donor should not serve as the trustee, or the trust instrument should be carefully examined for any power that might cause the trust assets to be included in the donor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

A donor who wishes to nominate co-trustees may do so.

[d] Donor Provisions

The donor of an inter vivos trust may be an individual or a husband and wife. Appropriate adjustments should be made to the introductory paragraph of the trust instrument if a husband and wife are the donors. Terms such as "grantor" or "settlor" may be substituted in the trust instrument for "donor" [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 5.01(5)].

[e] Payment of Annuity Amount

[i] Permissible Recipients

For a CRAT with an annuity period based on the life of one individual, the annuity amount must generally be paid to that individual who must be living at the time the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 5.02(1) (inter vivos trusts); Rev. Proc. 2003-57, 2003-31 I.R.B. 257, § 5.02(1) (testamentary trusts)].

For a CRAT having an annuity period consisting of a term of years, the annuity amount generally must be paid to a named person or persons, and if the annuity amount is to be paid to an individual or individuals, all must be living at the time the trust is created. The annuity amount be payable to the estate or heirs of a named recipient who dies before the expiration of the term of years. It may also be payable to members of a named class and all members of the class need not be living or ascertainable when the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2003-54, 2003-31 I.R.B. 236, § 5.02(2) (inter vivos trusts); Rev. Proc. 2003-58, 2003-31 I.R.B. 262, § 5.02(2) (testamentary trusts)]. If the annuity amount is payable to more than one person, the trust instrument should describe each person's interest [ Rev. Proc. 2003-54, 2003-31 I.R.B. 236, § 5.02(3) (inter vivos trusts); Rev. Proc. 2003-58, 2003-31 I.R.B. 262, § 5.02(3) (testamentary trusts)]. For a provision apportioning the annuity amount among members of a named class in the trustee's discretion, see Rev. Proc. 2003-54, 2003-31 I.R.B. 236, § 6.03.

For a CRAT with an annuity period based on the lives of two individuals, the annuity amount must generally be paid to those individuals and both must be living at the time the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242, § 5.02(1); Rev. Proc. 2003-56, 2003-31 I.R.B. 249, § 5.02(1); Rev. Proc. 2003-59, 2003-31 I.R.B. 268, § 5.02(1); Rev. Proc. 2003-60, 2003-31 I.R.B. 274, § 5.02(10)].

An organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) may receive part, but not all, of the annuity amount [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(3)(i)]. If a gift tax charitable deduction and an estate tax charitable deduction are sought for the present value of the annuity interest passing to a charitable organization, the trust instrument must specify the portion of each annuity payment that is payable to the noncharitable recipient and to the charitable organization. The trust instrument must also contain a means for selecting an alternative qualified charitable organization if the designated organization is not a qualified organization at the time any annuity amount is to be paid to it. Finally, the trust instrument must contain prohibitions against investments that jeopardize the exempt purpose of the trust for purposes of I.R.C. § 4944, and against retaining any excess business holdings for purposes of I.R.C. § 4943 [see Rev. Proc.

2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230 , § 6.02(1)]. For alternate provisions that may be used in such a case, see 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, Rev. Proc. 2003-53 , § 6.02(2).

[ii] Percentage Requirements

The sum certain annuity amount must be at least 5 percent and not more than 50 percent of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A)]. In addition, the value of the charitable remainder interest must be at least 10 percent of the initial net fair market value of all property placed in the trust [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(D)].

As an alternative to stating the annuity amount as a fraction or percentage of the initial net fair market value of the trust assets, the annuity amount may be stated as a specific dollar amount, within the percentage limitations [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(ii), (iii)]. In such event, the second alternative version of the first sentence of the paragraph in the trust instrument entitled "Payment of Annuity Amount" should be used, and the last sentence of that paragraph should be deleted [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230 , § 6.01(2)].

[iii] Payment of Annuity Amount in Installments

The paragraph the trust instrument entitled "Payment of Annuity Amount" specifies that the annuity amount is to be paid in equal quarterly installments at the end of each quarter. However, the trust instrument may specify that the annuity amount is to be paid to the recipient annually, or in equal or unequal installments throughout the year [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)]. The amount of the charitable deduction is affected by the frequency of payment, by whether the installments are equal or unequal, and by whether each installment is payable at the beginning or at the end of the period [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-2(c), 20.2031-7(d)(2)(iv)].

[iv] Payment of Annuity Amount by Close of Taxable Year

Generally, the annuity amount for any taxable year must be paid before the close of the taxable year for which the amount is due, but under specified circumstances the amount may be paid within a reasonable time after the close of the taxable year [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(1)(i)(a)].

A CRAT created by a testamentary transfer may defer payment of the annuity amount until the end of the taxable year in which it is completely funded [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(5)(i)]. Paragraph 2 of the trust instrument provides for such a deferral.

[v] Early Distributions to Charity

The trust instrument may provide that an amount other than the annuity must be paid (or may be paid in the trustee's discretion) to a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c). If such a distribution is made in kind, the adjusted basis of the distributed property must be fairly representative of the adjusted basis of the property available for distribution on the distribution date [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(4)].

[vi] Qualified Contingency

Payment of the annuity amount may terminate on the earlier of the occurrence of a qualified contingency or the recipient's death [I.R.C. § 664(f)(3)]. The amount of the charitable deduction is determined without regard to a qualified contingency [I.R.C. § 664(f)(2)].

[f] Proration of Annuity Amount

As an alternative to prorating the annuity amount in the taxable year of the recipient's death, payment of the annuity amount may terminate with the last regular payment preceding the recipient's death, but the fact that the recipient may not receive the last payment may not be taken into account in determining the present value of the remainder interest [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)]. When this treatment is desired, the second alternative version of the second sentence of Paragraph 3 in the trust instrument should be used [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 6.04(2)].

The fact that the recipient may not receive the last payment may not be taken into account when determining the present value of the remainder interest [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)].

[g] Distribution to Charity

Any named charitable remainder beneficiary must be an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) at the time of the transfer to the CRAT [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(C)]. It must also be an organization described in I.R.C. § 2522(a) to qualify for the gift tax charitable deduction, and an organization described in I.R.C. § 2055(a) to qualify for the estate tax charitable deduction [see Rev. Rul. 77-385, 1977-2 C.B. 331]. The trust instrument may restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to an organization described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a), but grant to the trustee or other person the power to designate the actual charitable remainder beneficiary [see Rev. Rul. 76-7]. For an alternate provision that may be used in such a case, see 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, Rev. Proc. 2003-53, § 6.07(2).

The trust instrument must provide a means for selecting an alternative charitable remainder beneficiary in the event the designated organization is not qualified at the time any payments are to be made to it from the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(6)(iv)]. The remainder interest may pass to more than one charitable organization, as long as each organization is described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(6)(i)].

The donor may retain the right to substitute another charitable remainder beneficiary for the charitable remainder beneficiary named in the trust instrument [see Rev. Rul. 76-8, 1976-1 C.B. 179]. However, the retention of this right will cause the gift of the remainder interest to be incomplete for gift tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(c); Rev. Rul. 77-275]. To retain the right to substitute the charitable remainder beneficiary, the optional language illustrated in the text should be added to Paragraph 4 of the trust instrument after the first sentence [see 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, Rev. Proc. 2003-53, § 6.06(2)].

[h] Restricting Charitable Remainder Beneficiary to Public Charity

The amount of the donor's income tax charitable deduction is more limited for gifts to certain private foundations than for gifts to other charitable organizations. To avoid these more restrictive limitations, a donor of an inter vivos CRAT may wish to restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to an organization that is described in I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A), as well as I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a). To restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to a public charity, the phrase "an organization described in §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) of the Code" in the trust instrument should be replaced with the phrase "an organization described in §§ 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) of the Code" [see Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230, § 6.05].

[i] Prohibited Transactions

Payment of the annuity amount to the recipient is not considered an act of self-dealing or a taxable expenditure within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 4941(d) and 4945(d), as modified by I.R.C. § 4947(a)(2)(A). Prohibitions against investments that jeopardize the exempt purpose of the trust for purposes of I.R.C. § 4944, and against retaining any excess business holdings for purposes of I.R.C. § 4943, are required if the trust provides for payment of part of an annuity amount to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), and gift and estate tax charitable deductions are sought for this interest [see I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)].

[j] Payment of Federal Estate Taxes and State Death Taxes

An inter vivos CRAT providing for annuity payments payable consecutively (or concurrently and consecutively) for two measuring lives must contain a special provision regarding payment of estate and state death taxes [ Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242 , §§ 4, 5.03; Rev. Proc. 2003-56, 2003-31 I.R.B. 249 , §§ 4, 5.03]. This provision, which appears as an optional provision in this form, should be included in the trust instrument as Paragraph 3, and the subsequent paragraphs renumbered accordingly.

[k] Right to Revoke Interest of Successor Recipient

In an inter vivos CRAT providing for annuity payments payable consecutively (or concurrently and consecutively) for two measuring lives, the donor may retain the right to revoke or terminate the interest of the noncharitable recipient. This right is exercisable only by the donor's will [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(4)]. The retention of this right may have gift and estate tax consequences, and affects the value of the transferred annuity interests. It may also cause a portion of the trust to be included in the donor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [ Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242 , § 6.04(1); Rev. Proc. 2003-56, 2003-31 I.R.B. 249 , § 6.04(1)].

To retain the right to revoke the noncharitable recipient's interest by the donor's will, the donor should be designated as a recipient in the paragraph in the trust instrument entitled "Payment of Annuity Amount," and the second alternative version of the second sentence of that paragraph in this should be used [ Rev. Proc. 2003-55, 2003-31 I.R.B. 242 , § 6.04(2); Rev. Proc. 2003-56, I.R.C. 2003-31, 249 , § 6.04(2)].

[2] FORM

Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust

[Name of trust, if desired; e.g., JOHN Q. SMITH CHARITABLE REMAINDER ANNUITY TRUST]
TRUST AGREEMENT

[If the trust is an inter vivos trust:]

On this _____ day of _____, I, _____ (hereinafter "the Donor"), desiring to establish a charitable remainder annuity trust, within the meaning of [specify appropriate Revenue Procedure, e.g., Revenue Procedure 2003-53 ] and I.R.C. § 664(d)(1), hereby enter into this trust agreement with _____ as the initial trustee (hereinafter "the Trustee"). This trust shall be known as the _____ Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust.

1. Funding of Trust. The Donor hereby transfers and irrevocably assigns, on the above date, to the Trustee, the property described in Schedule A, and the Trustee accepts the property and agrees to hold, manage, and distribute the property under the terms set forth in this trust instrument.

2. Payment of Annuity Amount. In each taxable year of the trust during the annuity period, the Trustee shall pay to [specify recipient], _____ [(hereinafter "the Recipient" or (hereinafter "the Initial Recipient")) until the Initial Recipient's death, and thereafter to _____ (hereinafter "the Successor Recipient") (subject to any proration in paragraph 3) or and to _____ (hereinafter "the Recipients") in equal shares during their lifetimes], an annuity amount equal to [number no less than 5 and no more than 50] percent of the initial net fair market value of all property transferred to the trust, valued as of the above date (that is, the date of the transfer) [Add if annuity payments are payable concurrently and consecutively for two measuring lives:, and upon the death of one (hereinafter "the Predeceasing Recipient"), the Trustee shall pay the entire annuity amount (subject to any proration in paragraph 3) to the survivor (hereinafter "the Survivor Recipient")]. [Add if annuity payments are payable for a term of years: The annuity period is a term of _____ (a number not more than 20, as provided by Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i)) years.]

[Either:]

The first day of the annuity period shall be the date the property is transferred to the trust and the last day of the annuity period shall be _____ [the date of the Recipient's death or the day preceding the _____ anniversary of that date or the date of death of the survivor of the Initial Recipient and the Successor Recipient or the date of the Survivor Recipient's death].

[Or, to retain right to revoke noncharitable recipient's interest by the donor's will, designate donor as a recipient above, and include the following (see [1][g], above):]

The Donor hereby expressly reserves the power, exercisable only by the Donor's last will and testament, to revoke and terminate the interest of [noncharitable recipient] under this trust. The first day of the annuity period shall be the date the property is transferred to the trust and the last day of the annuity period shall be the date of the death of the Survivor Recipient, or on the earlier death of the Donor if the power to revoke the interest of [noncharitable recipient] is exercised.

[Continue with the following:]

The annuity amount shall be paid in equal quarterly installments at the end of each calendar quarter from income, and to the extent income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount shall be added to principal. If the initial net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, then within a reasonable period after the value is finally determined for federal tax purposes, the Trustee shall pay to the [Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or Successor Recipient or Recipients] (in the case of an undervaluation) or receive from the [Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or Successor Recipient or Recipients] (in the case of an overvaluation) an amount equal to the difference between the annuity amount(s) properly payable and the annuity amount(s) actually paid.

[Include the following provision only in an inter vivos CRAT providing for annuity payments payable consecutively (or consecutively and concurrently), and renumber remainder of provisions in trust accordingly:]

3. Payment of Federal Estate Taxes and State Death Taxes. The lifetime annuity interest of the [Successor or Survivor] Recipient will [take or continue in] effect upon the death of the [Initial or Predeceasing] Recipient only if the [Successor or Survivor] Recipient furnishes the funds for payment of any federal estate taxes and state death taxes for which the Trustee may be liable upon the death of the [Initial or Predeceasing] Recipient. If the funds are not furnished by the [Successor or Survivor] Recipient, the annuity period shall terminate on the death of the [Initial or Predeceasing] Recipient, notwithstanding any other provision in this instrument to the contrary.

[Or, if the trust is a testamentary trust, omit all the preceding provisions and begin as follows:]

I give [specify property] to my Trustee in trust to be administered under this provision. I intend this gift to establish a charitable remainder annuity trust, within the meaning of specify appropriate Revenue Procedure (see [1, above); e.g., Revenue Procedure 2003-57] and I.R.C. § 664(d)(1). The trust shall be known as the _____ Charitable Remainder Annuity Trust and I hereby designate _____ as the initial trustee (hereinafter "the Trustee").

1. Payment of Annuity Amount.

[If annuity amount is to be a fractional or percentage share, use:]

In each taxable year of the trust during the annuity period, the Trustee shall pay to [specify recipient], _____ [hereinafter "the Recipient"] or (hereinafter "the Initial Recipient") until the Initial Recipient's death, and thereafter to _____ (hereinafter "the Successor Recipient") (subject to any proration in Paragraph 3) or and to _____ (hereinafter "the Recipients") in equal shares during their lifetimes], an annuity amount equal to [a number no less than 5 and no more than 50] percent of the initial net fair market value of all property passing to this trust as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes [Add if annuity payments are payable concurrently and consecutively for two measuring lives: and upon the death of one (hereinafter "the Predeceasing Recipient"), the Trustee shall pay the entire annuity amount (subject to any proration in paragraph 3) to the survivor (hereinafter "the Survivor Recipient")]. [Add if annuity payments are payable for a term of years: The annuity period is a term of _____ (number not more than 20, as provided by Treas. Reg. § 1.664-2(a)(5)(i) ) years.]

[Or, if annuity is to be stated as a specific dollar amount, use:]

In each taxable year of the trust during the annuity period, the Trustee shall pay to [specify recipient] (hereinafter "the Recipient") an annuity amount equal to _____ [stated dollar amount].

[Continue with the following:]

The first day of the annuity period shall be the date of my death and the last day of the annuity period shall be _____ [the date of the Recipient's death or the day preceding the _____ anniversary of that date or the date of the death of the survivor of the Initial Recipient and the Successor Recipient or the date of the Survivor Recipient's death]. The annuity amount shall be paid in equal quarterly installments at the end of each calendar quarter from income, and to the extent income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount shall be added to principal. [If annuity amount is to be a fractional or percentage share (see above), add: If the initial net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, then within a reasonable period after the value is finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, the Trustee shall pay to the _____ (Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or Successor Recipient or Recipients) (in the case of an undervaluation) or receive from the _____ (Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or Successor Recipient or Recipients) (in the case of an overvaluation) an amount equal to the difference between the annuity amount(s) properly payable and the annuity amount(s) actually paid.]

2. Deferral Provision. The obligation to pay the annuity amount shall commence with the date of my death, but payment of the annuity amount may be deferred from this date until the end of the taxable year in which the trust is completely funded. Within a reasonable time after the end of the taxable year in which the trust is completely funded, the Trustee must pay to the [Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or the Successor Recipient or Recipients] (in the case of an underpayment) or receive from the [Recipient or Initial Recipient and/or the Successor Recipient or Recipients] (in the case of an overpayment) the difference between any annuity amounts actually paid, plus interest, and the annuity amounts actually paid, plus interest. The interest shall be computed for any period at the rate of interest, compounded annually, that the federal income tax regulations under § 664 of the Code prescribe for this computation.

[Continue with the following for both inter vivos and testamentary trusts:]

3. Proration of Annuity Amount. The Trustee shall prorate the annuity amount on a daily basis for any short taxable year. [Add if annuity payments are payable consecutively for two measuring lives: If the Successor Recipient survives the Initial Recipient, the Trustee shall prorate on a daily basis the next regular annuity payment due after the death of the Initial Recipient between the estate of the Initial Recipient and the Successor Recipient.] [Add if annuity payments are payable concurrently and consecutively for two measuring lives: Upon the death of the Predeceasing Recipient, the Trustee shall prorate on a daily basis the Predeceasing Recipient's share of the next regular annuity payment between the estate of the Predeceasing Recipient and the Survivor Recipient.]

[If annuity amount will be prorated in the taxable year of the recipient's death, add the following:]

In the taxable year of the trust during which the annuity period ends, the Trustee shall prorate the annuity amount on a daily basis for the number of days of the annuity period in that taxable year.

[Or, if payment of the amount will terminate with the last regular payment preceding the recipient's death, add the following:]

In the taxable year of the trust during which the annuity period ends, the obligation of the Trustee to pay the annuity amount shall terminate with the regular quarterly installment next preceding the death of the Recipient.

[Continue with the following:]

4. Distribution to Charity. At the termination of the annuity period, the Trustee shall distribute all of the then principal and income of the trust (other than any amount due the [Recipient or Recipients] or _____ [the Recipient's estate or their estates] under the provisions above) to [specify designated remainder beneficiary] (hereinafter "the Charitable Organization").

[If donor will retain the right to substitute another charitable remainder beneficiary for the one named in the trust, add:]

The Donor reserves the right to designate, at any time and from time to time, in lieu of the Charitable Organization identified above, one or more organizations described in Internal Revenue Code §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) as the charitable remainderman and shall make any such designation by giving written notice to the Trustee.

[Continue with the following:]

If the Charitable Organization is not an organization described in Internal Revenue Code §§ [for an inter vivos CRAT: 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) or, for a testamentary CRAT: 107(c) and 2055(a)] at the time when any principal or income of the trust is to be distributed to it, then the Trustee shall distribute the then principal and income to one or more organizations described in Internal Revenue Code §§ [for an inter vivos CRAT: 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) or, for a testamentary CRAT: 107(c) and 2055(a)] as the Trustee shall select, and in the proportions as the Trustee shall decide, in the Trustee's sole discretion.

5. Additional Contributions. No additional contributions shall be made to the trust after the initial contribution. [Add for testamentary CRAT: The initial contribution, however, shall be deemed to consist of all property passing to the trust by reason of my death.]

6. Prohibited Transactions. The Trustee shall not engage in any act of self-dealing within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code § 4941(d), as modified by Internal Revenue Code § 4947(a)(2)(A), and shall not made any taxable expenditures within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code § 4945(d), as modified by Internal Revenue Code § 4947(a)(2)(A).

7. Spendthrift Clause. The interests of the beneficiaries under this instrument are not transferable by voluntary or involuntary assignment, or by operation of law. These interests are free from the claims of creditors and from attachment, execution, bankruptcy, and other legal process, to the maximum extent permitted by law.

8. Successor Trustees. If the office of Trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, the following, in order of priority indicated, shall be Trustee: [indicate name and address of each successor trustee, e.g., first, Alexander W. Smeed, who resides at 123 First Avenue, Smalltown, California; then Bank of Berkeley, West Oakland Branch].

9. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the Trustee" is deemed a reference to whoever is serving as Trustee, and includes alternate or successor trustees or co-trustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

10. Waiver of Bond. No bond or undertaking may be required of any individual who serves as Trustee under this instrument.

11. Resignation of Trustee. Any Trustee may resign at any time, without giving a reason for the resignation, by giving written notice, as least [specify number of days, e.g., 30 days] before the time the resignation is to take effect, to the Donor, if living, to any other Trustee then acting, to all living trust beneficiaries known to the Trustee (or, in the case of a minor beneficiary, to the parent or guardian of that beneficiary), and to the successor Trustee. A resignation is effective on written acceptance of the trust by the successor Trustee.

12. Trustee's Good Faith Actions Binding. Every action taken in good faith by the Trustee is conclusive and binding on all persons interested in the property of the trust.

13. Duty to Account. The Trustee must render accounts at least annually, at the termination of the trust, and on a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

14. Taxable Year. The taxable year of the trust shall be the calendar year.

15. Governing Law. The operation of the trust shall be governed by the laws of the State of California. However, the Trustee is prohibited from exercising any power or discretion granted under said laws that would be inconsistent with the qualification of the trust as a charitable remainder annuity trust under Internal Revenue Code § 664(d)(1) and the corresponding regulations.

16. Limited Power of Amendment. This trust is irrevocable. However, the Trustee shall have the power, acting alone, to amend the trust from time to time in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies and continues to qualify as a charitable remainder annuity trust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code § 664(d)(1).

17. Investment of Trust Assets. Nothing in this trust instrument shall be construed to restrict the Trustee from investing the trust assets in a manner that could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets.

Executed on [month, day], [year], at [city or town, and state, in which trust agreement is signed, e.g., Smalltown, California].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 74 SPLIT-INTEREST CHARITABLE TRUSTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Charitable Remainder Trusts

26-74 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 74.201

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.201 Charitable Remainder Unitrust; One Non-Charitable Recipient

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an inter vivos charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT) providing for unitrust payments to one individual. The unitrust amount is a fixed percentage of the annual value of the trust assets. This form is derived from the 2005 sample IRS form that appears in Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, with the addition of administrative provisions as discussed in [c], below.

[b] Sample IRS Forms

The Internal Revenue Service has promulgated a number of sample forms for charitable remainder unitrusts. In addition to the IRS sample on which this form is based, the IRS also has promulgated the following sample CRUT forms, which due to space limitations are not reproduced in this publication:

- An inter vivos charitable remainder unitrust for a term of years [ Rev. Proc. 2005-53, 2005-34 I.R.B. 339 ].
- An inter vivos charitable remainder unitrust with consecutive interests for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2005-54, 2005-34 I.R.B. 353 ].
- An inter vivos charitable remainder unitrust with concurrent and consecutive interests for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2005-55, 2005-34 I.R.B. 367 ].
- A testamentary charitable remainder unitrust for one measuring life [ Rev. Proc. 2005-56, 2005-34 I.R.B. 383 ].

- A testamentary charitable remainder unitrust for a term of years [ Rev. Proc. 2005-57, 2005-34 I.R.B. 392 ].
- A testamentary charitable remainder unitrust with consecutive interests for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2005-58, 2005-34 I.R.B. 402 ].
- A testamentary charitable remainder unitrust with concurrent and consecutive interests for two measuring lives [ Rev. Proc. 2005-59, 2005-34 I.R.B. 412 ].

These sample forms satisfy all of the requirements for a CRUT under I.R.C. § 664(d)(2), (3) and Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3. The 2005 versions supersede previous sample forms issued by the IRS [see Rev. Proc. 89-20, 1989-1 C.B. 841; Rev. Proc. 90-30, 1990-1 C.B. 534; Rev. Proc. 90-31, 1990-1 C.B. 539].

The IRS will recognize that a trust meets all of the requirements for a CRUT if [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 3]:

- The trust instrument is substantially similar to the appropriate sample declaration of trust or properly integrates one or more of the alternate provisions [see [b], below] into a document that is substantially similar to the sample declaration; and
- The trust operates in a manner that is consistent with the terms of the trust instrument and is a valid trust under applicable local law.

A trust instrument that contains substantive provisions in addition to those provided in the sample declaration (other than properly integrated alternate provisions or provisions necessary to establish a valid trust under applicable local law that are not inconsistent with applicable federal tax requirements), or that omits any of the provisions in the sample declaration, will not necessarily be disqualified, but the trust will not be assured of automatic qualification under these revenue procedures [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 3]. The relevant provisions in this form follow the language of the sample forms almost exactly, with minor nonsubstantive deviations to conform to the style and format of the other forms in this publication.

[c] Drafting Practices

To assure that split-interest charitable trusts will qualify for their intended purpose, the standard drafting practice among estate planners ordinarily is to deviate as little as possible from the standard language of the sample trusts, consistent with state law and the needs of the client. This means that the provisions in the sample agreements usually are incorporated essentially verbatim. However, since the sample agreements do not contain other provisions that are commonly incorporated into trust agreements in California, such as standard trustee powers, spendthrift clauses, definitional provisions, and the like, it is common practice to incorporate these provisions into the trust agreement to the extent they are not inconsistent with the IRS-mandated requirements.

Rev. Proc. 2005-52 specifically states that alternate or successor trustees may be designated in the trust instrument. In addition, the revenue procedure states that the trust may contain other administrative provisions relating to the trustee's duties and powers, as long as those provisions do not conflict with the rules governing charitable trusts under I.R.C. § 664 and its implementing regulations [ Rev. Proc. 2005-52, § 5.01, Paragraph 4]. Accordingly, this form contains additional provisions for the nomination of alternate and successor trustees [ see Sections 5.01, 5.02 of form], trustee powers [ see Section 5.06 of form], and other administrative provisions that are commonly found in California trusts. The revenue ruling also clarifies that terms such as "grantor" or "settlor" may be substituted for "donor," and this has been done in this form in accordance with the publisher's general format. In addition, the numbering scheme used in the IRS provisions has been changed to reflect the publisher's general format for trust forms, and to provide a complete, fully integrated trust document. These latter changes are cosmetic rather than substantive and have no effect on the content of the provisions derived from the IRS sample form.

PRACTICE TIP:

To assist users of this form in identifying the source of the provisions in this form, each provision and alternative is preceded by bracketed language identifying the source of that provision. IRS sample provisions are identified to the original section and paragraph numbers in Rev. Proc. 2005-52 in which they appear. When more than one section of the revenue procedure sets out language for a particular provision, the first reference is to the section of the revenue procedure that sets out the basic text of the provision, followed by references to any other secondary sections that provide alternative or additional language. Administrative and other provisions added by the publisher are labeled as "additional provisions." This method of identification enables the user to reference the source of every provision in this form, and to modify the form without inadvertently eliminating any of the IRS provisions.

[d] Alternate Provisions

The revenue procedures containing the IRS sample forms also contain various alternate provisions that may be integrated into the basic trust form. These alternate provisions relate to the following [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 6]:

- Payment of a portion of the unitrust amount to an I.R.C. § 170(c) charitable organization [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.01].
- Provisions under which payment of the unitrust amount may terminate upon the earlier of the occurrence of a "qualified contingency" or the death of the recipient [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.02; I.R.C. § 664(f)(3)].
- Termination of the obligation to pay the unitrust amount with the last regular payment preceding the recipient's death, as an alternative to prorating the unitrust amount in the year of the recipient's death [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.03].
- Restriction of the charitable remainder beneficiary to a "public charity"[see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.04].
- Reservation of a retained right in the donor to substitute the designated charitable remainder beneficiary [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.05]. Note, however, that the retention of this right will cause the gift to be incomplete for gift tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(c); Rev. Rul. 77-275, 1977-2 C.B. 346].
- Inclusion of a power of appointment allowing the recipient to designate the charitable remainder beneficiary [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, § 6.06].
- Use of the net income method or the net income with make-up method for calculating the unitrust amount, or combining one of these methods with the fixed percentage method for calculating the unitrust amount [see Rev. Proc. § 2005-52, §§ 6.06, 6.07, 6.08].

PRACTICE TIP:

All of the alternative language noted above is illustrated in this form, with notations as to the IRS source provision and directions as to when the alternate language should be used.

When a series of alternate versions of a particular type of provision appears in the text, the first alternative is the basic version that appears in the IRS sample form, and the subsequent variations are alternative versions that may be substituted in appropriate cases. Care must be taken to ensure that the proper combination of alternatives is used, so to avoid inadvertent inclusion of inconsistent versions of different provisions. Therefore, particular attention should be paid to the italicized directions explaining when each alternative version should be used.

[e] Trustee

Any qualified and suitable person, natural or corporate, may serve as the trustee. In appropriate circumstances, either the settlor or the unitrust recipient may serve as trustee. If, however, it is desirable to remove the trust assets from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes, the settlor should not serve as trustee, or the trust instrument should be carefully examined for any power that might cause the trust assets to be included in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes. See Ch. 60, Estate Planning, for a general overview of tax laws affecting the disposition of estates; see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts, for a general discussion of the estate tax ramifications of irrevocable inter vivos trusts.

[f] Donor Provisions

The donor of an inter vivos trust may be an individual or a husband and wife. Appropriate adjustments should be made to the introductory paragraph of the trust instrument if a husband and wife are the donors. Terms such as "grantor" or "settlor" may be substituted in the trust instrument for "donor" [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 5.01(5)]. This form uses "settlor" in accordance with the publisher's general format.

Only a donor or a donor's estate may make an additional contribution to the trust [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 5.05(1)].

[g] Payment of Unitrust Amount

[i] Permissible Recipients

For a CRUT with a unitrust period based on the life of one individual, the unitrust amount generally must be paid to that individual, who must be living at the time the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 5.02(1) (inter vivos trusts)]. The unitrust amount may be paid to a trust for the benefit of an individual who is financially disabled under some circumstances [see Rev. Rul. 2002-20, 2002-1 C.B. 794].

For a CRUT having a term-of-years unitrust period, the unitrust amount generally must be paid to a named person or persons, and if the unitrust amount is to be paid to an individual or individuals, all must be living at the time the trust is created. The unitrust amount may be payable to the estate or heirs of a named recipient who dies before the expiration of the term of years. It also may be payable to members of a named class and all members of the class need not be living or ascertainable when the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2005-53, 2005-34 I.R.B. 339, § 5.02(2)]. If the unitrust amount is payable to more than one person, the trust instrument should describe each person's interest [ Rev. Proc. 2005-53, 2005-34 I.R.B. 339, § 5.02(3) (inter vivos trusts)]. For a provision apportioning the unitrust amount among members of a named class in the trustee's discretion, see  Rev. Proc. 2005-53, 2005-34 I.R.B. 339, § 6.02. Note that this form is designed for a charitable remainder unitrust providing payments to only one individual. For other fact contexts, the appropriate sample IRS forms listed in [b], above, should be used as drafting models.

For a CRUT with a unitrust period based on the lives of two individuals, the unitrust amount generally must be paid to those individuals and both must be living when the trust is created [ Rev. Proc. 2005-54, 2005-34 I.R.B. 353, § 5.02(1);  Rev. Proc. 2005-55, 2005-34 I.R.B. 367, § 5.02(1);  Rev. Proc. 2005-58, 2005-34 I.R.B. 402, § 5.02(1);  Rev.

Proc. 2005-59, 2005-34 I.R.C. 412, § 5.02(1)].

An organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) (qualified charitable and nonprofit organizations) may receive part, but not all, of any unitrust amount [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(3)(i)]. If a gift tax charitable deduction and an estate tax charitable deduction are sought for the present value of the unitrust interest passing to a charitable organization, the trust instrument must specify the portion of each unitrust payment that is payable to the noncharitable recipient and to the charitable organization. The trust instrument also must contain a means for selecting an alternative qualified charitable organization if the designated organization is not a qualified organization at the time any unitrust amount is to be paid to it [ see Section 4.01 (second alternative provision) of form]. Finally, the trust instrument must contain prohibitions against investments that jeopardize the exempt purpose of the trust for purposes of I.R.C. § 4944, and against retaining any excess business holdings for purposes of I.R.C. § 4943 [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, § 6.01(1); see also optional language in Section 5.11 of form].

If payment of part of the unitrust amount to a charitable organization is desired, Section 4.01 of this form should be replaced with the alternative provision set forth in § 6.01(2)(a) of Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 [ see Section 4.01 (second alternative provision) of form]. Language changes also should be made to the first alternative version of Section 4.03, as indicated in the form, and Section 5.11 of the form also should be modified as indicated in that provision.

[ii] Percentage Requirements

The fixed percentage unitrust amount must be at least 5 percent and not more than 50 percent of the annual net fair market value of the trust assets [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. In addition, with respect to each contribution of property to the trust, the value of the charitable remainder interest must be at least 10 percent of the net fair market value of the contributed property as of the date of its contribution to the trust [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(D)]. An additional contribution to an existing CRUT that does not satisfy the 10 percent test is treated as a transfer to a separate trust [I.R.C. § 664(d)(4)].

The first alternative and second alternative versions of Section 4.01 calculate the unitrust amount under the fixed percentage method, which bases the calculation on a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued annually. The revenue procedures specify alternate provisions that may be substituted to use the net income method for calculating the unitrust amount [ see Section 4.01 (third alternative)], the net income with make-up method for calculating the unitrust amount [ see Section 4.01 (fourth alternative)], or a combination of methods for calculating the unitrust amount [ see Section 4.01 (fifth and sixth alternatives); Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, §§ 6.07-6.09]. When any of these alternative provisions are used, the corresponding alternate versions of Sections 4.02 and 4.04 must also be included.

[iii] Payment of Unitrust Amount in Installments

This trust instrument specifies that the unitrust amount is to be paid in equal quarterly installments at the end of each quarter. However, the trust instrument also may specify that the unitrust amount is to be paid to the recipient annually, or in equal or unequal installments throughout the year [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)]. The amount of the charitable deduction is affected by the frequency of payment, by whether the installments are equal or unequal, and by whether each installment is payable at the beginning or end of the period [see Treas. Reg. §§ 1.664-3(c), 1.664-4].

[iv] Payment of Unitrust Amount by Close of Taxable Year

Generally, the unitrust amount for any taxable year, if computed under the fixed percentage method, must be paid before the close of the taxable year for which the amount is due, but under specified circumstances the amount may be paid within a reasonable time after the close of the taxable year [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(i)(g), (k)].

[v] Early Distributions to Charity

The trust instrument may provide that an amount other than the unitrust amount must be paid (or may be paid in the trustee's discretion) to a charitable organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c). If such a distribution is made in kind, the adjusted basis of the distributed property must be fairly representative of the adjusted basis of the property available for distribution on the distribution date [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(4)].

[vi] Qualified Contingency

Payment of the unitrust amount may terminate on the earlier of the occurrence of a qualified contingency or the recipient's death (or the expiration of the term of years unitrust period) [I.R.C. § 664(f)(3)]. The amount of the charitable deduction, however, is determined without regard to the qualified contingency [I.R.C. § 664(f)(2)]. An optional provision for termination on the occurrence of a qualified contingency is included in the first and second alternatives in Section 4.01 of this form.

[h] Proration of Unitrust Amount

The first alternative of Section 4.02 of the form specifies that the unitrust amount must be prorated on a daily basis. As an alternative to prorating the unitrust amount in the taxable year of the recipient's death, payment of the unitrust amount may terminate with the last regular payment preceding the recipient's death, but the fact that the recipient may not receive the last payment may not be taken into account in determining the present value of the remainder interest [ see Section 4.02 (second alternative provision); Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(5)(i); see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 , § 6.03(2)].

Section 4.04 of this form provides a formula for determining the unitrust amount in each year in which an additional contribution is made to the CRUT. If an additional contribution is made in a short taxable year or in the taxable year of the recipient's death, the unitrust amount computed under Section 4.04 must be prorated under Section 4.02.

[i] Distribution to Charity

Any named charitable remainder beneficiary must be an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c) at the time of the transfer to the CRUT [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(C)]. It must also be an organization described in I.R.C. § 2522(a) to qualify for the gift tax charitable deduction, and an organization described in I.R.C. § 2055(a) to qualify for the estate tax charitable deduction [see Rev. Rul. 77-385, 1977-2 C.B. 331 ]. If it is determined that an estate tax charitable deduction will not be necessary, all references to I.R.C. § 2055(a) in the trust instrument may be deleted. The trust instrument may restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to an organization described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a), but grant to the trustee or other person the power to designate the actual charitable remainder beneficiary [see Rev. Rul. 76-7, 1976-1 C.B. 179 ]. The second alternative version of Section 4.03 of this form may be used to grant such a power of appointment.

The trust instrument must provide a means for selecting an alternative charitable remainder beneficiary in the event the designated organization is not qualified at the time any payments are to be made to it from the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(6)(iv)]. This requirement is satisfied in Section 4.03 of the trust instrument by conferring the power on the trustee to designate an alternative charitable remainder beneficiary. The remainder interest may pass to more than one charitable organization, as long as each organization is described in I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(6)(i)].

The donor may retain the right to substitute another charitable remainder beneficiary for the charitable remainder beneficiary named in the trust instrument [see Rev. Rul. 76-8, 1976-1 C.B. 179 ]. However, the retention of this right will cause the gift of the remainder interest to be incomplete for gift tax purposes [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2511-2(c); Rev. Rul. 77-275 ]. To retain the right to substitute the charitable remainder beneficiary, the optional language illustrated in the text should be added to the first version of Section 4.03 of this form [see 2005-34 I.R.B. 326, Rev. Proc. 2005-52 , § 6.05(2)].

[j] Restricting Charitable Remainder Beneficiary to Public Charity

The amount of the donor's income tax charitable deduction is more limited for gifts to certain private foundations than for gifts to other charitable organizations. To avoid these more restrictive limitations, a donor of an inter vivos CRUT may wish to restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to an organization that is described in I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A), as well as I.R.C. §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a). To restrict the charitable remainder beneficiary to a public charity, the phrase "an organization described in §§ 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) of the Code" in the trust instrument should be replaced with the phrase "an organization described in §§ 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a) of the Code" [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 , § 6.04(2)]. The appropriate optional references to I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A) have been included throughout the form.

[k] Valuation of Assets

The trust instrument specifies that the net fair market value of the trust assets is to be determined as of the first day of each taxable year of the trust. However, the value may be determined on any date during the trust's taxable year, or by taking the average of valuations made on more than one date during the taxable year, as long as the same valuation date and methods are used each year. If the trust instrument does not specify a valuation date, the trustee must select a date and indicate the selection on the first Form 5227 (Split-Interest Trust Information Return) that the trust must file [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(iv)].

If the valuation date is a date other than the first day of each taxable year of the trust, it may be necessary to modify the provisions of the trust instrument regarding the following [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(1)(v), (b); see also Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 , § 5.05(4)]:

- The timing of the payment of the unitrust amount.
- The proration of the unitrust amount in a short taxable year and the last taxable year of the unitrust period.
- Additional contributions.

If the CRUT is funded with unmarketable assets, the net fair market value of the assets must be determined by an independent trustee [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-1(a)(7)(iii)], or by a current "qualified appraisal" from a "qualified appraiser" [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.170A-13(c)(3), (5), 1.664-1(a)(7)]. If there are multiple trustees, any co-trustee may value the trust's unmarketable assets. An unmarketable asset that is valued in one year by an independent trustee may be valued in a successive year by a qualified appraiser; and, within a single year, some unmarketable assets may be valued by a qualified appraiser, while others are valued by an independent trustee [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326 , § 5.07].

[l] Prohibiting Additional Contributions

Section 4.04 of the form provides rules for determining the unitrust amount that is payable in a year in which an additional contribution is made to the trust. The trust instrument instead may prohibit contributions to the trust after the initial contribution [see Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(b)]. If additional contributions are not permitted, Section 2.02 should be deleted, all references to the unitrust amount computed under Section 4.04 must be removed, and Section 4.05 also should be deleted.

[m] Prohibited Transactions

Payment of the unitrust amount to the recipient is not considered an act of self-dealing or a taxable expenditure within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 4941(d) and 4945(d), as modified by I.R.C. § 4947(a)(2)(A). Prohibitions against investments that jeopardize the exempt purpose of the trust for purposes of I.R.C. § 4944, and against retaining any excess business holdings for purposes of I.R.C. § 4943, are required if the trust provides for payment of part of a unitrust amount to an organization described in I.R.C. § 170(c), and gift and estate tax charitable deductions are sought for this interest [see I.R.C. § 4947(b)(3)].

[n] Payment of Federal Estate Taxes and State Death Taxes

An inter vivos CRUT providing for unitrust payments payable consecutively (or concurrently and consecutively) for two measuring lives must contain a special provision regarding payment of estate and state death taxes [see Rev. Proc. 2005-54, 2005-34 I.R.B. 353, § 5.03; Rev. Proc. 2005-55, 2005-34 I.R.B. 367, § 5.03]. Because this form is based on only one measuring life, this alternative has not been included in this form.

[o] Right to Revoke Interest of Successor Recipient

In an inter vivos CRUT providing for annuity payments payable consecutively (or concurrently and consecutively) for two measuring lives, the donor may retain the right to revoke or terminate the interest of the noncharitable recipient. This right is exercisable only by the donor's will [Treas. Reg. § 1.664-3(a)(4)]. The retention of this right may have gift and estate tax consequences, and affects the value of the transferred unitrust interests. It may also cause a portion of the trust to be included in the donor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [ Rev. Proc. 2005-54, 2005-34 I.R.B. 353, § 6.03(1); Rev. Proc. 2005-55, 2005-34 I.R.B. 367, § 6.03(1)]. Because this form is based on only one measuring life, this option has not been included in this form.

Article 1: Creation of Trust

[Source: Rev. Proc. 2005-52, § 4, Introductory Paragraph; § 6.07(3)(a); § 6.08(2)(a); § 6.09(2)(a), 3(a)] Section 1.01. Creation of Trust. On this _____ day of _____, I, [name, e.g., Mary S. Barnes, of Ventura, California] (hereinafter "the Settlor"), desiring to establish a charitable remainder unitrust within the meaning of Revenue Procedure 2005-52 and Internal Revenue Code Section 664(d)(2) [if unitrust income is to be calculated using the net income method, the net income with make-up method, or a combination of either of those methods with the fixed income method, add: and (d)(3)], hereby enter into this trust agreement with _____ as the initial trustee (hereinafter "the Trustee"). This trust shall be known as the _____ [name of trust] Charitable Remainder Unitrust.

[Source: additional provision] Section 1.02. Marital Status. The Settlor is married to [name of spouse, e.g., Horace E. Barnes], and all references in this trust instrument to the Settlor's "[husband or wife]" are to [him or her].

[Source: additional provision] Section 1.03. No Children. The Settlor has never had any children.

Article 2: Trust Estate

[Source: Rev. Proc. 2005-52 , § 4, Paragraph 1] Section 2.01. Funding of Trust. The Settlor hereby transfers and irrevocably assigns, on the above date, to the Trustee the property described in Schedule A, and the Trustee accepts the property and agrees to hold, manage, and distribute the property, and any property subsequently transferred, under the terms set forth in this trust instrument.

[Source: additional provision] Section 2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the Trustee may accept additions to the trust, but only from the Settlor or a duly authorized agent or agents of the Settlor. All such additions shall become a part of the trust estate and shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlor

[Source: Rev. Proc. 2005-52 , § 4, Paragraph 11; § 6.07(3)(a); § 6.08(2)(a), § 6.09(2)(a), 3(a)] Section 3.01. Irrevocability; Limited Power of Amendment. This trust is irrevocable. However, the Trustee shall have the power, acting alone, to amend the trust from time to time in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies and continues to qualify as a charitable remainder unitrust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 664(d)(2) [if unitrust income is to be calculated using the net income method, the net income with make-up method, or a combination of either of those methods with the fixed income method, add: and (d)(3)].

[Source: additional provision] Section 3.02. Removal of Trustee. The settlor reserves the right to dismiss the trustee and to appoint a successor trustee. To remove the trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the trustee 30 days' written notice. To appoint a successor trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the successor trustee written notice of the appointment.

[Source: Rev. Proc. 2005-52 , § 4, Paragraph 2 , § 6.02(2)] Section 4.01. Payment of Unitrust Amount. In each taxable year of the trust during the unitrust period, the Trustee shall pay to [permissible recipient] (hereinafter "the Recipient") a unitrust amount equal to [a number no less than 5 and no more than 50] percent of the net fair market value of the assets of the trust valued as of the first day of each taxable year of the trust (hereinafter "the valuation date"). The first day of the unitrust period shall be the date property is first transferred to the trust and the last day of the unitrust period shall be the date of the Recipient's death [if payment of unitrust amount is to terminate on the earlier of the recipient's death or the occurrence of a qualified contingency, add: or, if earlier, the date on which occurs the _____ (specify qualified contingency)]. The unitrust amount shall be paid in equal quarterly installments at the end of each calendar quarter from income and, to the extent income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the unitrust amount shall be added to principal. If, for any year, the net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, then within a reasonable period after the correct value is finally determined, the Trustee shall pay to the Recipient (in the case of an undervaluation) or receive from the Recipient (in the case of an overvaluation) an amount equal to the difference between the unitrust amount(s) properly payable and the unitrust amount(s) actually paid.

[Source: Rev. Proc. 2005-52, § 4, Paragraph 6; § 6.01(2)(c)] Section 4.05. Deferral of the Unitrust Payment Allocable to Testamentary Transfer. All property passing to the trust by reason of the death of the Settlor (hereinafter "the testamentary transfer") shall be considered to be a single contribution that is made on the date of the Settlor's death. Notwithstanding the provisions of Sections 4.01 and 4.04, above, the obligation to pay the unitrust amount with respect to the testamentary transfer shall commence with the date of the Settlor's death. Nevertheless, payment of the unitrust amount with respect to the testamentary transfer may be deferred from the date of the Settlor's death until the end of the taxable year in which the funding of the testamentary transfer is completed. Within a reasonable time after the end of the taxable year in which the testamentary transfer is completed, the Trustee must pay to the Recipient [if charitable organization is to receive part, but not all, or any unitrust amount, add: and the Charitable Recipient] (in the case of an underpayment) or receive from the Recipient [if charitable organization is to receive part, but not all, or any unitrust amount, add: and the Charitable Recipient] (in the case of an overpayment) the difference between any unitrust amounts allocable to the testamentary transfer that were actually paid, plus interest, and the unitrust amounts allocable to the testamentary transfer that were payable, plus interest. The interest shall be computed for any period at the rate of interest, compounded annually, that the federal income tax regulations under Internal Revenue Code Section 664 prescribe for this computation.

Article 5: Trustee

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or cotrustees have been designated under any other provision of this trust instrument, the following, in the order of priority indicated, shall be trustee:

First, _____ [name and description, e.g., (for cotrustees) Norma S. Jones, who resides at _____ (address); Frank P. Smith, who resides at _____ (address), and Olivia C. Hackman, who resides at _____ (address), or any one or more of them, as cotrustees];

Second, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for individual trustee) Douglas R. Young, who resides at _____ (address)];

Third, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for corporate trustee) Double Eagle Bank, Fresno, California].

[Continue as necessary for each other individual or entity being designated as a successor trustee, and then add the following:]

If all those named above are unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or cotrustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g., Any individual trustee or cotrustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlor, unless no issue of the settlor is able and willing to serve.]

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as cotrustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as cotrustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new cotrustee may be appointed by the court. If no new cotrustee is appointed, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees shall have full power to act as trustee or cotrustees and to continue the trust administration.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.03. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or cotrustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.04. Waiver of Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any trustee named in this instrument.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlor believes that a fee of $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.06. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trust created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall have the power to do all of the following, in addition to being entitled to exercise all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.

(b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

(c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(d) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

(e) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.

(f) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.

(g) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.

(h) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

(i) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.

(j) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]

(k) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.

(l) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.

(m) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.

(n) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.

(o) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(p) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(q) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(r) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(s) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.07. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.08. Payments to Legally Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, then the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.10. Trust Distributions Shall Not Discharge Obligations of Support. Notwithstanding any other provision of this trust instrument, no income or principal of the trust shall be used to discharge, in whole or in part, the legal obligation of any person to support or educate any beneficiary of this trust. In determining the legal obligation of any person to support and educate a beneficiary of this trust, the existence of this trust and the funds made available under it shall not be taken into account.

Limitation on Trustee's Powers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not hold or exercise any power or discretion which is in conflict with the provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 664 or the regulations thereunder, or with any specific provision of this instrument.

[Source: additional provision] Section 5.14. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. Governing Law and Limitation. The operation of the trust shall be governed by the laws of the State of _____ . However, the Trustee is prohibited from exercising any power or discretion granted under said laws that would be inconsistent with the qualification of the trust as a charitable remainder unitrust under Internal Revenue Code Section 664(d)(2) [if unitrust income is to be calculated using the net income method, the net income with make-up method, or a combination of either of those methods with the fixed income method, add: and (d)(3)] and the corresponding regulations.

§ 74.210 Charitable Lead Annuity Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a charitable lead annuity trust. It can be used to create an annuity interest in favor of a qualified charitable organization for a period of years. On termination of the annuity interest, the trust property will be distributed to the settlor or to a designated remainder beneficiary or beneficiaries.

The IRS has not issued prototype forms for charitable lead trusts, as it has for charitable remainder trusts [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326-2005-59, 2005-34 I.R.B. 412 (charitable remainder unitrusts); Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230-2003-60, 2003-31 I.R.B. 274 ; (charitable remainder annuity trusts) see also discussion in §§ 74.200[1][a] and 74.201[1][a] regarding the IRS sample provisions and drafting practices for charitable remainder trusts]. Thus, it is up to the attorney to draft appropriate forms to create charitable lead trusts. However, many of the provisions that are used in charitable remainder trusts are also suitable for inclusion in charitable lead trusts. This form makes use of those provisions, in addition to specially drafted provisions to accommodate the particular needs of the charitable lead trust format. Various standard provisions, for example the marital status/children and issue declaration [ see Sections 1.04, 1.05 of Form], the provision requiring a periodic accounting [ see Section 5.13 of Form], and the method for determining incapacity [ see Section 6.03 of Form], may be modified as necessary to suit the individual fact situation.

For discussion of the distinction between grantor and nongrantor trusts, see § 74.15[2]; see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts § 72.11[2]. For additional coverage of charitable contributions and the charitable deduction, see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions . For general coverage of charitable lead trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 117, Charitable Lead Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[b] Annuity Payment to Charitable Organization

This trust provides for the payment of an "annuity amount" to a qualified charitable organization for a period of years. The annuity amount is stated as a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets, valued as of the date of transfer to the trustee. The stated percentage may be any percentage selected by the settlor, and the term of the annuity payments may be any number of years selected by the settlor. On termination of the annuity payments, the principal and any undistributed income of the trust will be distributed to the settlor in the form of a reversion, or to designated third parties in the form of a remainder.

[c] Measuring Lives

In order to prohibit the abusive scheme of using non-related ill persons as measuring lives for the purpose of accelerating the termination of the charitable lead interest, the IRS has issued regulations providing that only the following individuals may be used as measuring lives [see Treas. Reg. § 25.2522(c)-(c)(2)(vi)(a)]:

- The donor.
- The donor's spouse.
- An individual who, with respect to all remainder beneficiaries (other than charitable organizations described in Internal Revenue Code Section 170, 2055, or 2522), is either a lineal ancestor or the spouse of a lineal ancestor of those beneficiaries.

[d] Irrevocability

This trust is irrevocable. However, the trustee is given the power to amend the trust for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies as a charitable lead annuity trust under the applicable statutes and regulations.

[e] Trustee

Any qualified and suitable person, natural or corporate, may serve as the trustee of this trust. In appropriate circumstances, either the settlor or a remainder beneficiary may serve as the trustee. If, however, it is desirable to remove the trust assets from the settlor's estate for federal estate tax purposes, the settlor should not serve as the trustee, or the trust instrument should be carefully examined for any power that might cause the trust assets to be included in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes. See Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.30 et seq., for a general discussion of trustee powers and the tax consequences of the retention by the settlor of particular powers. If, for example, the settlor has the power to make discretionary distributions of trust property or income, or to designate the income or remainder beneficiaries of the trust, the settlor cannot safely act as the trustee without adverse estate tax consequences. In such a case, an independent trustee may be needed.

A settlor who wishes to nominate cotrustees may do so. For a discussion of the nomination of cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.31. For a discussion of the appropriateness of designating the settlor as the trustee of a charitable lead trust, see § 74.15[6][b].

WILLIAM J. HUNT CHARITABLE LEAD ANNUITY TRUST]

TRUST AGREEMENT

Article 1: Creation of Trust

Section 1.01. Parties. This trust agreement is made by [identify settlor, e.g., William T. Hunt of Los Angeles, California] (the "settlor"), as settlor, and [identify trustee(s), e.g., Daniel W. Green of Los Angeles, California] (the "trustee"), as trustee. The settlor hereby transfers and assigns to the trustee certain property (the "trust estate"), in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

Section 1.02. Purpose of Trust. The settlor desires by this instrument to establish a charitable lead annuity trust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Sections 2055(e)(2)(B) and 2522(c)(2)(B).

Section 1.03. Name of Trust. The name of the trust created by this instrument shall be the [settlor's name followed by words "Charitable Lead Annuity Trust," e.g., William T. Hunt Charitable Lead Annuity Trust].

Section 1.04. Marital Status. The settlor is married to [name of spouse, e.g., Betty W. Hunt], and all references in this trust instrument to the settlor's "[husband or wife]" are to [him or her].

Section 1.05. No Children. The settlor has never had any children.

Article 2: Trust Estate

Section 2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All property subject to this instrument from time to time is referred to as the "trust estate" and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the property described in Schedule A, any other property that may be hereafter subject to this trust, and the income and proceeds attributable to all such property, in accordance with the provisions of this instrument.

Section 2.02. Additions to Trust Prohibited. The Trustee shall not accept any additions to the trust.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlor

Section 3.01. Trust Irrevocable; Limited Power of Amendment by Trustee. The trust is irrevocable. However, the trustee shall have the power, acting alone, to amend the trust in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies and continues to qualify as a charitable lead annuity trust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Sections 2055(e)(2)(B) and 2522(c)(2)(B) and the Regulations thereunder.

Section 3.02. Removal of Trustee. The settlor reserves the right to dismiss the trustee and to appoint a successor trustee. To remove the trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the trustee 30 days written notice. To appoint a successor trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the successor trustee written notice of the appointment.

Article 4: Payments and Distributions

Section 4.01. Payment of Annuity Amount. In each taxable year, the trustee shall pay to _____ [correct legal name of charitable organization] (the "charitable organization"), _____ [specify duration of payments, either: during the lifetime of _____ (name of person) and/or, to specify terms of years: (and) a period of _____ (specify number) years] beginning with the first date the trustee accepts property under this instrument, an annuity amount equal to [specify either dollar amount: $ _____ or

_____ percent of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued as of the date of transfer of those assets to the trustee, as indicated on Schedule A]. The charitable interest in this trust shall terminate at the end of the trust term provided for in this section.

Section 4.02. Installments. The annuity amount shall be paid in equal installments [specify frequency of payment, e.g., at the end of each quarter] from income and, to the extent that income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the annuity amount shall be added to principal.

Section 4.03. Proration. In determining the amount to be paid under Section 4.01, the trustee shall prorate the same on a daily basis for a short taxable year and for the taxable year in which the charitable interests terminate.

Section 4.04. Purpose. The annuity amount shall be used for [describe general or special purpose, e.g., the general charitable purposes of the charitable organization or medical and scientific research for the purpose of finding a cure for cancer]. [Add, if purpose is restricted: If at any time in the judgment of the trustee it is impossible or impractical to carry out this purpose exactly in the manner specified, a purpose and manner as near as is practicable to the above purpose and manner shall be determined by the trustee.]

Section 4.05. Qualification of Charitable Organization. In the event that the charitable organization is not, during the term of this trust, an organization of the type described in Internal Revenue Code Sections 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a) and 2522(a), the amount that would have been paid to the charitable organization had it been an organization of that type shall instead be paid to one or more organizations of that type in the sole discretion of the trustee, or any successor trustee then acting.

Section 4.06. Valuation. In computing the net fair market value of the trust assets, all of the trust's assets and liabilities as of the date of the computation shall be taken into account without regard to whether particular items are taken into account in determining the income or the principal of the trust. All determinations of net fair market value shall be made exclusively by the trustee, and the trustee's decision, reached in good faith, shall be final and binding upon all persons interested in the trust. If the net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, the trustee shall, in the case of an undervaluation, pay to the charitable organization and, in the case of an overvaluation, collect from the charitable organization, an amount equal to the difference between the amount that the trustee would have paid if the correct value had been used and the amount that the trustee actually paid. Each adjustment is to be made within a reasonable period after final determination of the value.

Section 4.07. Distribution on Termination of Charitable Interest. On the termination of all charitable interests, this trust shall terminate and the trustee shall distribute the remaining trust assets outright to _____ [designate beneficiary or beneficiaries, all of whom must be living and ascertainable on the date the trust is created, e.g., the settlor or the settlor's issue who are living on the date that the trust is created or Mildred Harper] [if beneficiaries are members of a class, specify pattern of distribution, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240, 246, or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation or, if assets are to be poured over to another trust, add: to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of that _____ (trust agreement or declaration of trust)]. If, upon termination of all charitable interests, there is no one who is entitled to receive the trust assets under this section, any remaining trust assets shall be distributed outright to [alternative disposition, e.g., the Marin County chapter of The Anonymous Artists of America or the heirs of the settlor].

Section 4.08. Prohibition Against Certain Payments. Except for the distribution on termination of the charitable interest as provided in Section 4.07, or an amount transferred for full and adequate consideration, no amount may be paid to or for the use of any person other than an organization described in Internal Revenue Code Sections 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a). No gift, legacy, succession, inheritance, estate, or generation-skipping transfer taxes that may be assessed against the trust assets by reason of the settlor's transfer to the trust or the settlor's death shall be paid out of any property held in trust under this instrument. The settlor agrees on behalf of [himself or herself], _____ [his or her] heirs, legal representatives, successors and assigns, to provide for payment of any such taxes from sources other than property held by this trust and to indemnify and hold the trustee harmless from any and all liability for any such taxes.

Article 5: Trustee

Section 5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or cotrustees have been designated under any other provision of this trust instrument, the following, in the order of priority indicated, shall be trustee:

First, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for cotrustees) Norma S. Jones, who resides at _____ (address); Frank P. Smith, who resides at _____ (address), and Olivia C. Hackman, who resides at _____ (address), or any one or more of them, as cotrustees];

Second, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for individual trustee) Arthur H. Wilson, who resides at _____ (address)];

Third, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for corporate trustee) First Fidelity Bank, Main Office, Los Angeles, California].

[Continue as necessary for each other individual or entity being designated as a successor trustee, and then add the following:]

If all those named above are unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or co-trustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g., Any individual trustee or cotrustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlor, unless no issue of the settlor is able and willing to serve.]

Section 5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as cotrustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as cotrustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new cotrustee may be appointed by the court. If no new cotrustee is appointed, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees shall have full power to act as trustee or cotrustees and to continue the trust administration.

Section 5.03. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or cotrustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

Section 5.04. Waiver of Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any trustee named in this instrument.

Section 5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlor believes that a fee of $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

Section 5.06. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trust created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall have the power to do all of the following, in addition to being entitled to exercise all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law:

- (a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.
- (b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:
  - (1) General economic conditions.
  - (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
  - (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
  - (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
  - (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
  - (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
  - (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
  - (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

- (c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.
- (d) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

- (e) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.
- (f) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (g) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (h) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.
- (i) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.
- (j) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]
- (k) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.
- (l) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.
- (m) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.
- (n) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, including one acting as trustee hereunder, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.
- (o) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

(p) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(q) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(r) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(s) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

Section 5.07. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

Section 5.08. Payments to Legally Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, then the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

Section 5.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

Section 5.10. Limitations on Trustee's Powers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not:

(a) Engage in any act of self-dealing as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 4941(d) or make any taxable expenditure as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 4945(d), except for the payment of the annuity amount;

(b) Make any investments that jeopardize the charitable purpose of the trust, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 4944, or retain any excess business holdings, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 4943;

(c) Hold or exercise any power or discretion that is in conflict with the provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 170 or the regulations thereunder, or with any specific provision of this instrument.

After the termination of all noncharitable interests, there shall be distributed amounts at least sufficient to avoid liability for the tax imposed by Internal Revenue Code Section 4942(a).

Section 5.11. Realization of Reasonable Income and Gain. Nothing in this trust instrument shall be construed to restrict the trustee from investing the trust assets in a manner that could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets.

Section 5.12. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by [if trust nominates cotrustees: the other trustee or trustees or, if trust nominates a successor trustee: the successor trustee].

Section 5.13. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

Section 6.01. Definitions of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the terms "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined or derived.

Section 6.02. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the term "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

Section 6.03. Definition of Incapacity. For purposes of this instrument, a person shall be deemed "incapacitated" if and for so long as a court of competent jurisdiction has made a finding to that effect, or a guardian or conservator of that person's estate or person duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction is serving, or upon certification by two physicians (licensed to practice under the laws of the state where the person is domiciled at the time of the certification) that the person is unable properly to care for himself or herself or for his or her property. The latter certification shall be made by each physician in a written declaration under penalty of perjury.

Section 6.04. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

Section 6.05. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

Section 6.06. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

Section 6.07. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

Section 6.08. Taxable Year. The taxable year of the trust shall be the calendar year.

Article 7: Execution

Section 7.01. Execution. We certify that we have read the foregoing trust agreement and that it correctly states the terms and conditions under which the trust estate is to be held, administered, and distributed. The settlor approves this trust agreement in all particulars. The trustee[s] approve[s] and accept[s] the trust provided for in this trust agreement.

Executed on [month, day] [year] at [city or town, and state, in which trust agreement is signed, e.g., Los Angeles, California].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 74 SPLIT-INTEREST CHARITABLE TRUSTS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Charitable Lead Trusts

26-74 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 74.211

AUTHOR: Reviewed by Albert G. Handelman

§ 74.211 Charitable Lead Trust Unitrust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a charitable lead unitrust. It can be used to require the trustee to pay a fixed percentage of the trust's assets, valued annually, to a qualified charitable organization for a period of years. Upon termination of the required payments, the trust property will be distributed to the settlor or to a designated remainder beneficiary or beneficiaries.

The IRS has not issued prototype forms for charitable lead trusts, as it has for charitable remainder trusts [see Rev. Proc. 2005-52, 2005-34 I.R.B. 326-2005-59, 2005-34 I.R.B. 412 (charitable remainder unitrusts); Rev. Proc. 2003-53, 2003-31 I.R.B. 230-2003-60, 2003-31 I.R.B. 274 (charitable remainder annuity trusts); see also discussion in §§ 74.200[1][a] and 74.201[1][a] regarding the IRS sample provisions and drafting practices for charitable remainder trusts]. Thus, it is up to the attorney to draft appropriate forms to create charitable lead trusts. However, many of the provisions that are used in charitable remainder trusts are also suitable for inclusion in charitable lead trusts. This form therefore makes use of those provisions, in addition to specially drafted provisions to accommodate the particular needs of the charitable lead trust format. Various standard provisions, for example the marital status/children and issue declaration [see Sections 1.04, 1.05 of Form], the provision requiring a periodic accounting [see Section 5.13 of Form], and the method for determining incapacity [see Section 6.03 of Form], may be modified as necessary to suit the individual fact situation.

For discussion of the distinction between grantor and nongrantor trusts, see § 74.15[2]; see also Ch. 72, Irrevocable Trusts § 72.11[2]. For additional coverage of charitable contributions and the charitable deduction, see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions . For general coverage of charitable lead trusts, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 117, Charitable Lead Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[b] Unitrust Payment to Charitable Organization

This trust provides for the payment of a "unitrust amount" to a qualified charitable organization for a period of years. The unitrust amount is stated as a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the trust assets, valued as of the first day of each taxable year. The stated percentage may be any percentage selected by the settlor, and the term of the unitrust payments may be any number of years selected by the settlor. Upon termination of the unitrust payments, the principal and any undistributed income of the trust will be distributed to the settlor in the form of a reversion, or to designated third parties in the form of a remainder.

[c] Irrevocability

This trust is irrevocable. However, the trustee is given the power to amend the trust for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies as a charitable lead unitrust under the applicable statutes and regulations.

[d] Trustee

The trustee generally may be any person, natural or corporate, who would be qualified to serve as the trustee of a charitable lead annuity trust. See § 74.210[1][d] for important discussion of the qualifications of such a trustee.

[e] Trust Agreement Format

This form uses the trust agreement format.

TRUST AGREEMENT

Article 1: Creation of Trust

Section 1.01. Parties. This trust agreement is made by [identify settlor, e.g., Douglas J. Young of San Jose, California] (the "settlor"), as settlor, and [identify trustee(s), e.g., Thomas W. Brown of San Jose, California] (the "trustee"), as trustee. The settlor hereby transfers and assigns to the trustee certain property (the "trust estate"), in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument.

Section 1.02. Purpose of Trust The settlor desires by this instrument to establish a charitable lead unitrust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Sections 2055(e)(2)(B) and 2522(c)(2)(B).

Section 1.03. Name of Trust. The name of the trust created by this instrument shall be the [settlor's name followed by words "Charitable Lead Unitrust," e.g., Douglas J. Young Charitable Lead Unitrust].

Section 1.04. Marital Status. The settlor is married to [name of spouse, e.g., Barbara W. Young], and all references in this trust instrument to the settlor's "[husband or wife]" are to [him or her].

Section 1.05. No Children. The settlor has never had any children.

Article 2: Trust Estate

Section 2.01. Definition of Trust Estate. All property subject to this instrument from time to time is referred to as the "trust estate" and shall be held, administered, and distributed as provided in this instrument. The trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute the property described in Schedule A, any other property that may be hereafter subject to this trust, and the income and proceeds attributable to all such property, in accordance with the provisions of this instrument.

Section 2.02. Additions to Trust. From time to time, the Trustee may accept additions to the trust, but only from the Settlor or a duly authorized agent or agents of the Settlor. All such additions shall become a part of the trust estate and shall be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument.

Article 3: Rights and Powers of Settlor

Section 3.01. Trust Irrevocable; Limited Power of Amendment by Trustee. The trust is irrevocable. However, the trustee shall have the power, acting alone, to amend the trust in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the trust qualifies and continues to qualify as a charitable lead unitrust within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Sections 2055(e)(2)(B) and 2522(c)(2)(B) and the Regulations thereunder.

Section 3.02. Removal of Trustee. The settlor reserves the right to dismiss the trustee and to appoint a successor trustee. To remove the trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the trustee 30 days written notice. To appoint a successor trustee pursuant to this provision, the settlor shall give the successor trustee written notice of the appointment.

Article 4: Payments and Distributions

Section 4.01. Payment of Unitrust Amount. In each taxable year, the trustee shall pay to _____ [correct legal name of charitable organization] (the "charitable organization"), for a period of _____ years beginning with the first date the trustee accepts property under this instrument, an amount (the "unitrust amount") equal to _____ percent of the net fair market value of the trust assets valued as of the first day of each taxable year of the trust (the "valuation date"); except that when no valuation date occurs in a taxable year of the trust which is a short taxable year or which is the taxable year in which the charitable interest terminates, the trust assets shall be valued as of the earlier of the last day of that short taxable year or as of the date on which the charitable interest terminates. The charitable interest in this trust shall terminate at the end of the trust term provided for in this section.

Section 4.02. Payments When Additional Contributions Have Been Made. In any taxable year in which additional property is contributed to the trust, the unitrust amount shall be _____ percent of the sum of (i) the net fair market value of the trust assets (excluding the added assets and any income from or appreciation on the added assets), and (ii) that proportion of the value of the added assets that was excluded under (i) which the number of days in the period that begins with the date of contribution and ends with the earlier of the last day of the taxable year or the last day of the trust term bears to the number of days in the period that begins on the first day of that taxable year and ends with the earlier of the last day in that taxable year or the last day of the trust term. All added assets shall be valued at the time of contribution. If any additional contribution is made by will, by revocable living trust, or by any other means at the settlor's death, the obligation to pay the unitrust amount specified in Section 4.01 with respect to the additional contribution shall commence with the date of death of the person by whom or under whose will or trust the additional contribution is made, but payment of that amount may be deferred from the date of death until the end of the taxable year of the trust in which the complete funding of the additional contribution occurs. Within a reasonable period after that time, the trustee must pay to the charitable organization in the case of an underpayment, or must receive from the charitable organization, in the case of an overpayment, the difference between (a) any amounts specified in Section 4.01 actually paid, plus interest, compounded annually, computed for any period at the rate of interest that the Treasury Regulations under Internal Revenue Code Section 7520 prescribe for the trust for such a computation for that period, and (b) the amounts payable as specified in Section 4.01 determined under the method similar to that described in Treasury Regulation Section 1.664-1(a)(5)(ii) for charitable remainder trusts, plus interest compounded annually, computed for any period at the rate of interest that the Treasury Regulations under Internal Revenue Code Section 7520 prescribe for the trust for such a computation for that period.

Section 4.03. Installments. The unitrust amount shall be paid in equal installments at the end of each quarter from income and, to the extent that income is not sufficient, from principal. Any income of the trust for a taxable year in excess of the unitrust amount shall be added to principal.

Section 4.04. Proration. In determining the amount to be paid under Section 4.01, the trustee shall prorate the same on a daily basis for a short taxable year and for the taxable year in which the charitable interest terminates.

Section 4.05. Purpose. The unitrust amount shall be used for [describe general or special purpose, e.g., the general charitable purposes of the charitable organization or medical and scientific research for the purpose of finding a cure for cancer]. [Add, if purpose is restricted: If at any time in the judgment of the trustee it is impossible or impractical to carry out this purpose exactly in the manner specified, a purpose and manner as near as is practicable to the above purpose and manner shall be determined by the trustee.]

Section 4.06. Qualification of Charitable Organization. In the event that the charitable organization is not, during the term of this trust, an organization of the type described in Internal Revenue Code Sections 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a) and 2522(a), the amount that would have been paid to the charitable organization had it been an organization of that type shall instead be paid to one or more organizations of that type in the sole discretion of the trustee, or any successor trustee then acting.

Section 4.07. Valuation. In computing the net fair market value of the trust assets, all of the trust's assets and liabilities as of the date of the computation shall be taken into account without regard to whether particular items are taken into account in determining the income or the principal of the trust. All determinations of net fair market value shall be made exclusively by the trustee, and the trustee's decision, reached in good faith, shall be final and binding upon all persons interested in the trust. If the net fair market value of the trust assets is incorrectly determined, the trustee shall, in the case of an undervaluation, pay to the charitable organization and, in the case of an overvaluation, collect from the charitable organization, an amount equal to the difference between the amount that the trustee would have paid if the correct value had been used and the amount that the trustee actually paid. Each adjustment is to be made within a reasonable period after final determination of the value.

Section 4.08. Distribution Upon Termination of Charitable Interest. Upon the termination of all charitable interests, this trust shall terminate and the trustee shall distribute the remaining trust assets outright to _____ [designate beneficiary or beneficiaries, all of whom must be living and ascertainable on the date the trust is created, e.g., the settlor or the settlor's issue who are living on the date that the trust is created or Janice B. Dalton] [if beneficiaries are members of a class, specify pattern of distribution, e.g., in the manner provided in California Probate Code Section _____ (specify either 240, 246, or 247) or in equal shares, regardless of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation or, if assets are to be poured over to another trust, add: to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the terms of that _____ (trust agreement or declaration of trust)]. If, upon termination of all charitable interests, there is no one who is entitled to receive the trust assets under this section, any remaining trust assets shall be distributed outright to [alternative disposition, e.g., the Marin County chapter of The Anonymous Artists of America or the heirs of the settlor].

Section 4.09. Prohibition Against Certain Payments. Except for the distribution upon termination of the charitable interest as provided in Section 4.08, or an amount transferred for full and adequate consideration, no amount may be paid to or for the use of any person other than an organization described in Internal Revenue Code Sections 170(b)(1)(A), 170(c), 2055(a), and 2522(a). No gift, legacy, succession, inheritance, estate, or generation-skipping transfer taxes that may be assessed against the trust assets by reason of the settlor's transfer to the trust or the settlor's death shall be paid out of any property held in trust under this instrument. The settlor agrees on behalf of [himself or herself], _____ [his or her] heirs, legal representatives, successors and assigns, to provide for payment of any such taxes from sources other than property held by this trust and to indemnify and hold the trustee harmless from any and all liability for any such taxes.

Article 5: Trustee

Section 5.01. Successor Trustees. If the office of trustee becomes vacant by reason of death, incapacity, or any other reason, and no successor trustee or cotrustees have been designated under any other provision of this trust instrument, the following, in the order of priority indicated, shall be trustee:

First, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for cotrustees) James Smith, who resides at _____ (address); Edna Smith, who resides at _____ (address), and Roberta Fleegle, who resides at _____ (address), or any one or more of them, as cotrustees];

Second, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for individual trustee) Paul Fleegle, who resides at _____ (address)];

Third, _____ [name and description, e.g. (for corporate trustee) Viking Savings Bank, Main Office, San Jose, California].

[Continue as necessary for each other individual or entity being designated as a successor trustee, and then add the following:]

If all those named above are unwilling or unable to serve as successor trustee, a new trustee or cotrustees shall be appointed by the court. [To limit class of permissible individual trustees, add appropriate limitation, e.g., Any individual trustee or cotrustee not specifically named in this section who is appointed under this section shall be appointed from among the issue of the settlor, unless no issue of the settlor is able and willing to serve.]

Section 5.02. Replacement of Co-trustee. If, at any time when two or more persons or entities are serving as cotrustees, any one or more (but less than all) of them are unable or unwilling for any reason to continue to serve as cotrustees, and no successor co-trustee has been designated under any other applicable provision of this trust instrument, a new cotrustee may be appointed by the court. If no new cotrustee is appointed, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees shall have full power to act as trustee or cotrustees and to continue the trust administration.

Section 5.03. Definition of "Trustee." Reference in this instrument to "the trustee" shall be deemed a reference to whoever is serving as trustee or cotrustees, and shall include alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees, unless the context requires otherwise.

Section 5.04. Waiver of Bond. No bond or undertaking shall be required of any trustee named in this instrument.

Section 5.05. Compensation of Trustee. The trustee shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered, payable without court order. [Optional: The settlor believes that a fee of $_____ is a reasonable annual amount to compensate the trustee for all of the ordinary services that will be required of the trustee during an annual period. Additional compensation in a reasonable amount may be proper to compensate the trustee for any extraordinary services rendered by the trustee, all without court order.] [Optional: If a trustee serves for only part of a calendar year, the annual compensation shall be prorated according to the number of days during that year that the trustee was acting as trustee during that year.]

Section 5.06. General Powers of Trustee. To carry out the purposes of the trust created under this instrument, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this instrument, the trustee shall have the power to do all of the following, in addition to being entitled to exercise all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law:

(a) Retain property received into the trust at its inception, or later added to the trust, as long as the trustee considers that retention in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the settlor in creating the trust, as determined from this trust instrument, but subject to the standards of the prudent investor rule as set forth in the California Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as amended from time to time.

(b) Invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by the beneficiaries.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in Probate Code Sections 16045-16054, or any successor sections.

(c) In the trustee's discretion, invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds, and index funds, and in the shares or securities of any such funds or companies, that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

(d) With or without court authorization, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, and with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, and divide trust property; grant options for the sale or exchange of trust property for any purpose, whether the contract is to be performed or the option is to be exercised within or beyond the term of the trust; and lease trust property for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the expiration of the trust, regardless of whether the leased property is commercial or residential and regardless of the number of units leased.

(e) Manage, control, improve, and maintain all real and personal trust property.

- (f) Subdivide or develop land; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.
- (g) Make ordinary or extraordinary repairs or alterations in buildings or other trust property, demolish any improvements, raze existing party walls or buildings, and erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deems advisable.
- (h) Enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and install and maintain pipelines. Any such leases or agreements may be for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.
- (i) In the trustee's discretion, abandon any [unproductive or wasted] trust asset or interest therein.
- (j) Employ and discharge agents and employees, including but not limited to attorneys, accountants, investment and other advisers, custodians of assets, property managers, real estate agents and brokers, and appraisers, to advise and assist the trustees in the management of any trusts created under this trust instrument, and compensate them from the trust property. [Optional: The agents and employees may be associated or affiliated with the trustee, or may be descendants or other persons related to the trustee or to the settlor, or a company associated with any such persons.] [Optional: The trustee is entitled to rely on the advice of any professional advisers employed under this provision. Reasonable compensation paid to any such agents or employees shall not diminish the compensation to which the trustee is otherwise entitled.]
- (k) With respect to securities held in trust, exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust property; participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and, in connection therewith, deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee deems advisable; exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; and accept and retain as investments of the trust any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the foregoing powers.
- (l) Hold securities or other trust property in the trustee's own name or in the name of a nominee, without disclosure of the trust, or in unregistered form, so that title may pass by delivery.
- (m) Deposit securities in a securities depository that is either licensed or exempt from licensing.
- (n) Borrow money for any trust purpose from any person or entity, including one acting as trustee hereunder, on such terms and conditions as the trustee deems advisable, and obligate the trust for repayment; encumber any trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, whether for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust, as the trustee deems advisable, to secure repayment of any such loan; replace, renew, and extend any such loan or encumbrance; and pay loans or other obligations of the trust deemed advisable by the trustee.
- (o) Procure and carry, at the expense of the trust, insurance in such forms and in such amounts as the trustee deems advisable to protect the trust property against damage or loss, and to protect the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.
- (p) Enforce any obligation owing to the trust, including any obligation secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held as trust property, and purchase any property subject to a security instrument held as trust property at any sale under that instrument.

(q) Extend the time for payment of any note or other obligation held as an asset of, and owing to, the trust, including accrued or future interest, and extend the time for repayment beyond the term of the trust.

(r) Pay or contest any claim against the trust; release or to prosecute any claim in favor of the trust; or, in lieu of payment, contest, release, or prosecution, adjust, compromise, or settle any such claim, in whole or in part, and with or without consideration.

(s) At trust expense, prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings of whatever kind for the protection of the trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties, and employ and compensate attorneys, advisers, and other agents as the trustee deems advisable.

Section 5.07. Division or Distribution in Cash or in Kind. In order to satisfy a pecuniary gift or to distribute or divide trust assets into shares or partial shares, the trustee may distribute or divide those assets in kind, or divide undivided interests in those assets, or sell all or any part of those assets and distribute or divide the property in cash, in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind. Property distributed to satisfy a pecuniary gift under this trust instrument shall be valued at its fair market value at the time of distribution.

Section 5.08. Payments to Legally Incapacitated Persons. If at any time any trust beneficiary is a minor, or it appears to the trustee that any trust beneficiary is incapacitated, incompetent, or for any other reason not able to receive payments or make intelligent or responsible use of the payments, then the trustee, in lieu of making direct payments to the trust beneficiary, may make payments to the beneficiary's conservator or guardian; to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Acts or Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state; to one or more suitable persons as the trustee deems proper, such as a relative of or a person residing with the beneficiary, to be used for the beneficiary's benefit; to any other person, firm, or agency for services rendered or to be rendered for the beneficiary's assistance or benefit; or to accounts in the beneficiary's name with financial institutions. The receipt of payments by any of the foregoing shall constitute a sufficient acquittance of the trustee for all purposes.

Section 5.09. Grant of Specific Powers Not to Limit Exercise of General Powers. The enumeration of specific powers under this trust instrument shall not limit the trustee from exercising any other power with respect to any trusts created by this trust instrument that may be necessary or appropriate for the trustee to have and exercise in order to carry out the purposes of the trusts or to permit the trustee to fulfill the trustee's responsibilities and duties with respect to the trust.

Section 5.10. Limitations on Trustee's Powers. Notwithstanding any other provision of this instrument, the trustee shall not:

(a) Engage in any act of self-dealing as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 4941(d) or make any taxable expenditure as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 4945(d), except for the payment of the unitrust amount;

(b) Make any investments that jeopardize the charitable purpose of the trust, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 4944, or retain any excess business holdings, within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 4943;

(c) Hold or exercise any power or discretion that is in conflict with the provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 170 or the regulations thereunder, or with any specific provision of this instrument.

After the termination of all noncharitable interests, there shall be distributed amounts at least sufficient to avoid liability for the tax imposed by Internal Revenue Code Section 4942(a).

Section 5.11. Realization of Reasonable Income and Gain. Nothing in this trust instrument shall be construed to restrict the trustee from investing the trust assets in a manner that could result in the annual realization of a reasonable amount of income or gain from the sale or disposition of trust assets.

Section 5.12. Power to Disclaim or Release Powers. The trustee may disclaim, release, or restrict the scope of any power or discretion that the trustee may hold in connection with any trust created under this instrument, whether the power or discretion is expressly granted in this instrument or is implied by law. The trustee shall disclaim a power in the manner required by applicable federal or California law. The trustee shall release or restrict any power or discretion by giving written notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries then entitled to current distribution of income from the trust, specifying the power or discretion to be released or restricted, the nature of the restriction, and, if appropriate, the person or persons to whom the released or restricted power shall pass and be exercisable. If a power is disclaimed, the power shall be available to and exercisable by [if trust nominates cotrustees: the other trustee or trustees or, if trust nominates a successor trustee: the successor trustee].

Section 5.13. Duty to Account. The trustee shall render accounts at least annually, at the termination of a trust, and upon a change of trustees, to the persons and in the manner required by law.

Article 6: Concluding Provisions

Section 6.01. Definitions of Child and Children. As used in this instrument, the terms "child" and "children" refer to natural children and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take is determined or derived.

Section 6.02. Definition of Issue. As used in this instrument, the term "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" set forth in this instrument.

Section 6.03. Definition of Incapacity. For purposes of this instrument, a person shall be deemed "incapacitated" if and for so long as a court of competent jurisdiction has made a finding to that effect, or a guardian or conservator of that person's estate or person duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction is serving, or upon certification by two physicians (licensed to practice under the laws of the state where the person is domiciled at the time of the certification) that the person is unable properly to care for himself or herself or for his or her property. The latter certification shall be made by each physician in a written declaration under penalty of perjury.

Section 6.04. Number and Gender. As used in this instrument, references in the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine and neuter gender, and vice versa, and references to the singular shall be deemed to include the plural, and vice versa, wherever the context so permits.

Section 6.05. Captions. The captions appearing in this instrument are for convenience of reference only, and shall be disregarded in determining the meaning and effect of the provisions of this instrument.

Section 6.06. Severability Clause. If any provision of this instrument is invalid, that provision shall be disregarded, and the remainder of this instrument shall be construed as if the invalid provision had not been included.

Section 6.07. California Law to Apply. All questions concerning the validity, interpretation, and administration of this instrument, including any trusts created under this instrument, shall be governed by the laws of the State of California, regardless of the domicile of any trustee or beneficiary.

Section 6.08. Taxable Year. The taxable year of the trust shall be the calendar year.

§ 74.230 Declaration of Trust for Pooled Income Fund

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a sample declaration of trust creating a pooled income fund. This document typically is prepared by legal counsel for a charitable organization that wishes to create a pooled income fund to which individual donors may contribute. Property contributed by individual donors is commingled with the other property in the fund and thereafter managed by a trustee as a single fund. The individual donors retain life income interests in the contributed property, in the form of "units of participation," and must receive income payments on their contributions at least annually, based on the fund's overall rate of return. This form provides for quarterly income payments until otherwise determined by the trustee. On the donor's death, the value of the remainder interest in the property contributed by the donor is severed from the fund and paid to the charitable organization.

Individual donees who wish to contribute funds to a pooled income fund do so by completing an instrument of transfer. For sample instruments of transfer conforming to the applicable IRS requirements for such instruments, see §§ 74.231-74.233.

[b] Sample IRS Form

The content of this form follows the sample IRS form set forth in Revenue Procedure 88-53 [ Rev. Proc. 88-53, § 4]. The IRS has stated that taxpayers who make contributions to a trust that substantially follows this model "can be assured that the Service will recognize the trust as meeting all of the requirements of a qualified pooled income fund, provided the trust operates in a manner consistent with the terms of the trust instrument and provided it is a valid trust under applicable local law" [ Rev. Proc. 88-53, § 2]. According to the IRS, the sample declaration of trust and instruments of transfer made available by this revenue procedure meet all of the applicable requirements for a pooled income fund under I.R.C. § 642(c)(5), and if the public charity responsible for the creation and maintenance of the pooled income fund makes reference in the trust instrument of the fund to Rev. Proc. 88-53, and adopts substantially similar documents, the IRS will recognize the trust documents as satisfying all of the applicable requirements of I.R.C. § 642(c)(5) and the applicable regulations. In addition, remainder interests in property transferred to such a fund will be deductible under I.R.C. §§ 170(f)(2)(A), 2055(e)(2)(A), and 2522(c)(2)(A) for income, estate, and gift tax purposes, respectively [ Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712, § 3].

A trust that contains substantive provisions in addition to those provided by Rev. Proc. 88-53, other than provisions necessary to establish a valid trust under applicable local law, or that omits any of those provisions, will not necessarily be disqualified, but neither will it automatically qualify under the provisions of this revenue procedure [ Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712, § 8]. Prudence therefore obviously dictates that deviations from the standard form be made only if absolutely necessary. The only changes to the sample IRS form made below are minor format and style changes to conform to the general style of the other forms in this publication. The language of the form itself is reproduced verbatim. The sample IRS form states that acknowledgments and signatures of witnesses may be added at the end of the form, but since witnesses are not required under California law, this form provides only for the addition of an optional acknowledgment.

Other sample provisions for pooled income funds are set forth in Revenue Ruling 82-38 [Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96], as amplified by Revenue Ruling 85-57 [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182] and Revenue Ruling 90-103 [Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159], which set forth the terms that must be included in the governing instrument of a qualified pooled income fund. The requirements of these revenue rulings are discussed in greater detail in [c], below. The IRS has specified that the sample provisions contained in these three revenue rulings in no way preclude the use of other provisions conforming to the requirements of I.R.C. § 642(c)(5) and the applicable Treasury Regulations [ Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96, § 11.01]. Although the provisions that appear in these revenue rulings are apparently still good, it appears to make more sense for the drafter to work from the complete form provided in Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712], since automatic IRS approval of the entire instrument is thereby assured.

[c] Pooled Income Fund Requirements

[i] In General

The requirements for qualification of a pooled income fund are set forth in I.R.C. § 642(c)(5) and Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b). Revenue Ruling 82-38 [Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96] serves as a guide in developing governing instruments for funds that meet these requirements. Revenue Ruling 82-38 has been amplified by Revenue Ruling 85-57 [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182] and Revenue Ruling 90-103 [Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159], which set forth additional terms that must be included in the governing instrument of a qualified pooled income fund. The provisions that are required by these revenue rulings are discussed in the subheadings below.

[ii] Transfer of Irrevocable Remainder Interest

Each donor must transfer property to a pooled income fund and contribute an irrevocable remainder interest in such property to or for the use of a public charity [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(1)]. A contingent remainder is not treated as an irrevocable remainder interest [see Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96].

[iii] Creation of Income Interest for Life

The donor of property to a pooled income fund must either retain for himself or herself a life income interest in the property, or create an income interest therein for the life of one or more beneficiaries, each of whom must be living at the time of the transfer. The donor may retain the power, exercisable only by will, to revoke or terminate the income interest of any designated beneficiary other than the charity. No charitable contribution deduction is allowed to the donor for the value of an income interest given to a public charity, or for the amount of any income paid by the fund to such an organization [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(2)].

[iv] Commingling and Investment of Donated Property

The property transferred to a pooled income fund must be commingled with, and invested or reinvested with other property transferred to the fund by other donors. The governing instrument of the pooled income fund must contain a provision requiring compliance with this requirement. However, the fund may invest its property jointly with properties not a part of the fund, i.e., properties held by or for the use of the public charity that maintains the fund [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(3)]. If a bank is the trustee of more than one pooled income fund, it may maintain a common trust fund for collective investment and reinvestment of assets from the pooled income funds [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)(5)-(b)(3); see I.R.C. § 584 (common trust funds)].

[v] Exempt Securities Precluded

A pooled income fund may not accept from a donor, or invest in, any securities the income from which is exempt from federal income tax [Treas. Reg. §§ 1.642(c)-5(b)(4)]. The governing instrument of the fund must contain specific prohibitions against accepting or investing in such securities.

[vi] Control of Fund by Charitable Organization

The pooled income fund must always be maintained by the charity to or for the use of which the remainder was contributed. This requirement is satisfied if the charity exercises control either directly or indirectly [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(5)].

[vii] Prohibition Against Donor or Noncharitable Beneficiary as Trustee

Neither a donor nor a beneficiary other than the charity to or for the use of which the remainder is given may be a trustee of a pooled income fund. The declaration of trust must contain such a prohibition [ Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96 ]. The fact that the donor, or a beneficiary, is a trustee, officer, or other official of the donee charity will not prevent the fund from complying with this prohibition [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(6)].

[viii] Income Beneficiary Requirements

Each beneficiary entitled to income (as defined in I.R.C. § 643(b)) in any taxable year of the fund must receive that income in an amount determined by the rate of return earned by the fund for that year with respect to his or her income interest.

On each transfer of property to the fund by a donor, one or more units of participation in the fund must be assigned to the beneficiary or beneficiaries of the income interest in the property, determined by dividing the fair market value of the property by the fair market value of a unit of participation at the time of the transfer. The fair market value of a unit of participation is to be determined by dividing the fair market value of all property in the fund by the number of units of participation in the fund at the time of the transfer [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(c)(2)].

If a transfer of property to a fund occurs on other than a determination date, the number of units of participation assigned to the income interest in that property may be determined by using the fair market value of the property in the fund on the determination date immediately preceding the date of transfer, with appropriate adjustments on the next succeeding determination date. A determination date is each day of the taxable year of the fund on which there is a valuation of property in the fund, being the first day of that year and at least three other days, with no more than three calendar months between two consecutive determination dates. The share of income allocated to each unit of participation is to be determined by dividing the income of the fund for the taxable year by the outstanding number of units in the fund at the end of that year, with appropriate adjustment for units outstanding during only a part of that year [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(c)(2)].

The governing instrument of the fund must direct the trustee to distribute income currently or within the first 65 days following the close of the taxable year in which the income is earned. The governing instrument must provide that the income interest of any designated beneficiary must either terminate with the last regular payment that was made before the death of the beneficiary, or be prorated to the date of his or her death [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(7)].

On termination of the income interest retained or created by a donor, the trustee of the pooled income fund must sever from the fund an amount equal to the value at that time of the remainder interest in the property upon which the income interest is based. The value of the remainder interest must be either its value as of the determination date next succeeding the termination of the income interest or its value as of the date on which the last regular payment was made before the death of the beneficiary if the income interest is terminated on the payment date [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(8)].

[x] Alternative Remainder Beneficiary

The governing instrument of a pooled income fund should provide for the selection of an alternate charitable remainder beneficiary in the event that the designated charity goes out of existence or loses its charitable qualification. The instrument should authorize the trustee of the pooled income fund to select another organization within 60 days after the designated charity ceases to exist or within 60 days after expiration of the time specified in I.R.C. § 7428(b)(3) in which a pleading may be filed under I.R.C. § 7428(a) to contest such a loss of qualification. The alternative remainder beneficiary must meet the same requirements as the designated charity [ Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182 ].

[xi] Depreciable or Depletable Assets

When property is transferred to a pooled income fund, a charity is designated to receive the remainder interest after termination of the lifetime income interests. If the trustee invests in depreciable or depletable property, the value of the remainder interest will shrink during the lifetimes of the income beneficiaries. The remainder interest can be protected against loss due to this kind of shrinkage either by forbidding the trustee to make this kind of investment or by permitting the trustee to make the investments but requiring the trustee to establish a reserve for depreciation or depletion in accordance with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) [ Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159 ]. Accordingly, the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that the governing instrument must either forbid the trustee from accepting or investing in any depreciable or depletable assets or require the trustee to establish a depreciation or depletion reserve in accordance with GAAP for any such investments [ Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159 ].

[xii] Incorporation of Declaration of Trust by Reference in Other Documents

A will, trust agreement, or other instrument may function as an instrument of transfer if it incorporates the declaration of trust by reference and is consistent with the provisions of the trust and of I.R.C. § 642(c)(5). Paragraph 11 of this form contains a sample IRS provision that may be inserted into the declaration of trust to meet this requirement [see Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96 ; Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712 ].

[2] FORM

Declaration of Trust for Pooled Income Fund

DECLARATION OF TRUST

On this _____ day of _____, [year], the Board of Trustees of the _____ [name] Public Charity (hereinafter referred to as "Public Charity") desiring to establish a pooled income fund within the meaning of Rev. Proc. 88-53 and section 642(c)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code (hereinafter referred to as "the Code"), hereby creates the _____[name] Public Charity Pooled Income Fund (hereinafter referred to as "the Fund") and designates _____[name] as the initial trustee to hold, manage, and distribute such property hereinafter transferred to and accepted by it as part of the Fund under the following terms and conditions.

1. Gift of Remainder Interest. Each donor transferring property to the Fund shall contribute an irrevocable remainder interest in such property to Public Charity.

2. Retention of Life Income Interest. Each donor transferring property to the Fund shall retain for himself or herself an income interest in the property transferred, or create an income interest in such property for the life of one or more named beneficiaries, provided that each income beneficiary must be a living person at the time of the transfer of property to the Fund by the donor. If more than one beneficiary of the income interest is named, such beneficiaries may enjoy their shares concurrently and/or consecutively. Public Charity may also be designated as one of the beneficiaries of the income interest. The donor need not retain or create a life interest in all of the income from the property transferred to the Fund and any income not payable to an income beneficiary shall be contributed to, and within the taxable year of the Fund in which it is received paid to, Public Charity.

3. Commingling of Property. The property transferred to the Fund by each donor shall be commingled with, and invested or reinvested with, other property transferred to the Fund by other donors satisfying the requirements of this instrument and of section 642(c)(5) of the Code or corresponding provision of any subsequent federal tax law. The Fund shall not include property transferred under arrangements other than those specified in this instrument and satisfying the said provisions of the Code.

All or any portion of the assets of the Fund may, however, be invested or reinvested jointly with other properties not a part of the Fund that are held by, or for the use of, Public Charity. When joint investment or reinvestment occurs, detailed accounting records shall be maintained by the Trustee specifically identifying the portion of the jointly invested property owned by the Fund and the income earned by, and attributable to such portion.

4. Prohibition Against Exempt Securities. The property transferred to the Fund by any donor shall not include any securities whose income is exempt from taxation under subtitle A of the Code or the corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax law. The Trustee of the Fund shall not accept or invest in such securities as part of the assets of the Fund.

5. Maintenance by Public Charity. Public Charity shall always maintain the Fund or exercise control, directly or indirectly, over the Fund. Public Charity shall always have the power to remove any Trustee or Trustees and to designate a new Trustee or Trustees.

6. Prohibition Against Donor or Beneficiary Serving as Trustee. The Fund shall not have as a Trustee a donor to the Fund or a beneficiary (other than Public Charity) of an income interest in any property transferred to the Fund. No donor or beneficiary (other than Public Charity) shall have, directly or indirectly, general responsibilities with respect to the Fund that are ordinarily exercised by a Trustee.

7. Income of Beneficiary to be Based on Rate of Return of Fund. The taxable year of the Fund shall be the calendar year. The Trustee shall pay income to each beneficiary entitled thereto in any taxable year of the Fund in the amount determined by the rate of return earned by the Fund for the year with respect to the beneficiary's income interest. Payments must be made at least once in the year in which the income is earned. Until the Trustee determines that payments shall be made more or less frequently or at other times, the Trustee shall make income payments to the beneficiary or beneficiaries entitled to them in four quarterly payments on or about March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31 of each year. An adjusting payment, if necessary, will be made during the taxable year or within the first 65 days following its close to bring the total payment to the actual income to which the beneficiary or beneficiaries are entitled for that year.

On each transfer of property by a donor to the Fund, there shall be assigned to the beneficiary or beneficiaries of the income interest retained or created in the property the number of units of participation equal to the number obtained by dividing the fair market value of the property transferred by the fair market value of a unit in the Fund immediately before the transfer. The fair market value of a unit in the Fund immediately before the transfer shall be determined by dividing the fair market value of all property in the Fund at that time by the number of units then in the Fund. The initial fair market value of a unit in the Fund shall be the fair market value of the property transferred to the Fund divided by the number of units assigned to the beneficiaries of the income interest in that property. All units in the Fund shall always have equal value.

If a transfer of property to the Fund by a donor occurs on other than a determination date, the number of units of participation assigned to the beneficiary or beneficiaries of the income interest in the property shall be determined by using the average fair market value of the property in the Fund immediately before the transfer, which shall be deemed to be the average of the fair market values of the property in the Fund on the determination dates immediately preceding and succeeding the date of transfer. For the purpose of determining the average fair market value, the property transferred by the donor and any other property transferred to the Fund between the preceding and succeeding dates, or on such succeeding date, shall be excluded. The fair market value of a unit in the Fund immediately before the transfer shall be determined by dividing the average fair market value of the property in the Fund at that time by the number of units then in the Fund. Units of participation assigned with respect to property transferred on other than a determination date shall be deemed to be assigned as of the date of the transfer.

A determination date means each day within a taxable year of the Fund on which a valuation is made of the property in the Fund. The property of the Fund shall be valued on January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year; provided, however, that where such date falls on a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday (as defined in section 7503 of the Code and the regulations thereunder), the valuation shall be made on the next succeeding day which is not a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday.

The amount of income allocated to each unit of participation in the Fund shall be determined by dividing the income of the Fund for the taxable year by the outstanding number of units in the Fund at the end of the year, except that income shall be allocated to units outstanding during only part of the year by taking into consideration the period of time the units are outstanding during the year.

For purposes of this instrument, the term "income" has the same meaning as it does under section 643(b) of the Code or corresponding provision of any subsequent federal tax law and the regulations thereunder.

The income interest of any beneficiary of the Fund shall terminate with the last regular payment of income that was made before the death of the beneficiary. The Trustee of the Fund shall not be required to prorate any income payment to the date of the beneficiary's death.

8. Termination of Life Income Interest. Upon the termination of the income interest of the designated beneficiary (or, in the case of successive income interests, the survivor of the designated beneficiaries) entitled to receive income pursuant to the terms of a transfer to the Fund, the Trustee shall sever from the Fund an amount equal to the value of the remainder interest in the property upon which the income interest is based. The value of the remainder interest for severance purposes shall be its value as of the date on which the last regular payment was made before the death of the beneficiary. The amount so severed from the Fund shall be paid to Public Charity. If at the time of severance of the remainder interest Public Charity has ceased to exist or is not a public charity (an organization described in clauses (i) through (vi) of section 170(b)(1)(A) of the Code), the amount severed shall be paid to an organization selected by the Trustee that is a public charity.

9. Prohibited Activities. The income of the Fund for each taxable year shall be distributed at such time and in such manner as not to subject the Fund to tax under section 4942 of the Code. Except for making the required payments to the life income beneficiaries, the Trustee shall not engage in any act of self-dealing as defined in section 4941(d) and shall not make any taxable expenditures as defined in section 4945(d). The Trustee shall not make any investments that jeopardize the charitable purpose of the Fund within the meaning of section 4944 or retain any excess business holdings within the meaning of section 4943.

10. Depreciable or Depletable Assets. The Trustee shall not accept or invest in any depreciable or depletable assets.

11. Incorporation by Reference. The provisions of this document may be, and are intended to be, incorporated by reference in any will, trust, or other instrument by means of which property is transferred to the Fund. Any property transferred to the Fund whereby an income interest is retained or created for the life of one or more named beneficiaries, where this document is not incorporated by reference, shall become a part of the Fund and shall be held and managed under the terms and conditions of this document, unless the instrument of transfer is inconsistent with such terms and conditions, in which case the Trustee shall not accept the property.

12. Governing Law. The operation of the Fund shall be governed by the laws of the State of _____. However, the Trustee is prohibited from exercising any power or discretion granted under said laws that would be inconsistent with the qualification of the Fund under section 642(c)(5) of the Code and the corresponding regulations.

13. Power of Amendment. The Fund is irrevocable. However, Public Charity shall have the power, acting alone, to amend this document and the associated instruments of transfer in any manner required for the sole purpose of ensuring that the Fund qualifies and continues to qualify as a pooled income fund within the meaning of section 642(c)(5).

IN WITNESS WHEREOF _____ [name of public charity] and _____ [name of trustee] by their duly authorized officers have signed this agreement the day and year first above written.

§ 74.231 Instrument Transferring Property to Pooled Income Fund--One Life

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an instrument by which a donor transfers property to an existing pooled income fund, with a retained income interest for one life. For an instrument transferring property to a pooled income fund for two lives, with consecutive interests, see § 74.232[2]. For an instrument transferring property to a pooled income fund for two lives, with concurrent and consecutive interests, see § 74.233[2].

Many pooled income funds may be expected to supply their own transfer instruments to persons who wish to contribute property to the fund. If a pooled income fund does not supply its own form instrument, counsel for the individual donor may need to prepare one.

[b] Sample IRS Form

The content of this form follows the sample IRS form set forth in Revenue Procedure 88-53 [Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712, § 5]. According to the IRS, the sample declaration of trust and instruments of transfer made available by this revenue procedure meet all of the applicable requirements for a pooled income fund under I.R.C. § 642(c)(5). For additional discussion of the effect of using the IRS documents illustrated in Revenue Procedure 88-53, see § 72.230[1][b]. As indicated in that discussion, prudence dictates that deviations from the IRS standard forms be made only if absolutely necessary. The only changes to the sample IRS form made below are minor format and style changes to conform to the general style of the other forms in this publication. The language of the form itself is reproduced verbatim. The sample IRS form states that acknowledgments and signatures of witnesses may be added at the end of the form, but since witnesses are not required under California law, this form provides only for the addition of an optional acknowledgment.

Other sample provisions for pooled income funds are set forth in Revenue Ruling 82-38 [Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96], as amplified by Revenue Ruling 85-57 [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182] and Revenue Ruling 90-103 [Rev. Rul. 90-103, 1990-2 C.B. 159], which set forth various terms that must be included in the instrument of transfer to a qualified pooled income fund. Although the provisions that appear in these revenue rulings are apparently still good, it would appear to make more sense for the drafter to work from the complete form provided in Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712], since automatic IRS approval of the entire instrument is thereby assured.

[c] Transfer Instrument Requirements

[i] In General

The requirements for pooled income funds are set forth in I.R.C. § 642(c)(5) and Treas. Regs. § 1.642(c)-5(b). Revenue Ruling 82-38 [Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96] serves as a guide in developing governing instruments and instruments transferring property to funds that meet those requirements. Revenue Ruling 82-38 has been amplified by Revenue Ruling 85-57 [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182], which sets forth additional terms that must be included in instruments transferring property to pooled income funds. These requirements are discussed in [ii] and [iii], below.

[ii] Irrevocable Remainder Interest

Each donor must transfer property to a pooled income fund and contribute an irrevocable remainder interest in that property to or for the use of a public charity. A contingent remainder interest will not qualify as an irrevocable remainder interest for this purpose [Treas. Reg. § 1.642(c)-5(b)(1); Rev. Rul. 82-38, 1982-1 C.B. 96].

If the donor wishes to designate a particular charitable purpose for which the remainder interest is to be used, care should be exercised to make sure that the statement of purpose does not make the remainder interest contingent.

[iii] Alternate Charitable Remainder Beneficiary

The governing instrument of a pooled income fund should provide for the selection of an alternate charitable remainder beneficiary in the event that the designated charity goes out of existence or loses its charitable qualification. The instrument should authorize the trustee of the pooled income fund to select another organization within 60 days after the designated charity ceases to exist or within 60 days after expiration of the time specified in I.R.C. § 7428(b)(3) in which a pleading may be filed under I.R.C. § 7428(a) to contest such a loss of qualification. The alternative remainder beneficiary must meet the same requirements as the designated charity [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182].

Revenue Ruling 85-57 states that an instrument transferring property to a pooled income fund should include a provision recognizing the possibility that the trustee may select an alternate charitable remainder beneficiary and clearly stating that references in the instrument of transfer to the designated public charity shall in that event be construed to refer to the replacement organization so selected [Rev. Rul. 85-57, 1985-1 C.B. 182], and provides suggested language for such a provision. However, the sample IRS forms illustrated in Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712], and illustrated in this chapter in §§ 74.231[2]-74.233[2] do not contain such express language. They do, however, incorporate the terms and conditions of the fund's declaration of trust, and the standard IRS form for the latter instrument, which is illustrated in § 74.230[2], does provide that if at the time of severance of the remainder interest, the charity has ceased to exist or is not a public charity as described in I.R.C. § 170(b)(1)(A)(i) through (vi), the amount severed be paid to an organization selected by the trustee that is a public charity [see § 74.230[2], § 8].

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an instrument by which a donor transfers property to an existing pooled income fund, with retained income interests for two consecutive lives. For an instrument transferring property to a pooled income fund for one life, see § 74.231[2]. For an instrument transferring property to a pooled income fund for two lives, with concurrent and consecutive interests, see § 74.233[2].

[b] Sample IRS Form

The content of this form follows the sample IRS form set forth in Revenue Procedure 88-53 [ Rev. Proc. 88-53, 1988-2 C.B. 712 , § 6]. According to the IRS, the sample declaration of trust and instruments of transfer made available by this revenue procedure meet all of the applicable requirements for a pooled income fund under I.R.C. § 642(c)(5). For additional discussion of the effect of using the IRS documents illustrated in Revenue Procedure 88-53 , see §§ 72.230[1][b] and 72.231[1][b]. As indicated in those discussions, prudence dictates that deviations from the IRS standard forms be made only if absolutely necessary. The only changes to the sample IRS form made below are minor format and style changes to conform to the general style of the other forms in this publication. The language of the form itself is reproduced verbatim. The sample IRS form states that acknowledgments and signatures of witnesses may be added at the end of the form, but since witnesses are not required under California law, this form provides only for the addition of an optional acknowledgment.
