I direct that all federal estate taxes and any state taxes payable as a result of my death shall be paid out of the residue of my probate estate only, and that no part of those taxes shall be paid out of, charged, or prorated against _____ [identify or describe exempt gift, e.g., the gift that I have made to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will or the annuity that I have directed to be paid to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will].

[Second alternative provision: taxes to be prorated against all assets of probate estate]

I direct that _____ [identify or describe exempt gift, e.g., the gift that I have made to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will or the annuity that I have directed to be paid to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will] shall be free of any charge for or payment of any federal estate tax and any state taxes payable as a result of my death, and that all such taxes shall be paid out of and prorated against the other assets passing under this will in the proportion that the value of the assets received by each beneficiary bears to the total value of all other assets passing under this will.

[Third alternative provision: taxes to be prorated against both probate and nonprobate assets]

I direct that _____ [identify or describe exempt gift, e.g., the gift that I have made to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will or the annuity that I have directed to be paid to _____ (name of beneficiary) in Paragraph _____ of this will] shall be free of any charge for or payment of any federal estate tax and any state taxes payable as the result of my death, and that all such taxes shall be paid out of and prorated against the other assets of my gross estate (whether passing under this will or outside of it) in the proportion that the value of the assets received by each recipient bears to the total value of all of the other assets of my gross estate (whether passing under this will or outside of it).

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

D. Proration of Death Taxes and Payment of Specific Debts

1. Proration of Death Taxes

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.317

§ 63.317 Proration of Death Taxes--Income Beneficiary Under Qualified Terminable Interest (QTIP) Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a special provision for allocation of death taxes when the testator is or is likely to become an income beneficiary under a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, which is a particular type of marital deduction trust. The special tax treatment of such trusts [see discussion in § 63.317[1][b]] may make it necessary to include this or a comparable provision in the will of an income beneficiary of such a trust. For a detailed discussion of the use and advantages of marital deduction trusts, including so-called "QTIP" trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

This provision allocates all death taxes, except those that are attributable to the QTIP trust, to the residuary estate in the same manner as § 63.310. This is the most common situation in which special treatment of taxes attributable to QTIP property is likely to be desirable. If taxes attributable to nonprobate assets are to be paid out of probate assets, as in § 63.312, addition of the special language contained in this form may also be desirable. Language requiring special treatment of taxes attributable to QTIP property is unnecessary in any will that provides that taxes attributable to nonprobate assets will be prorated among those assets, because such a provision could not have the effect of waiving the estate's statutory right to recover such taxes from recipients of the QTIP property [see I.R.C. § 2207A(a)(2); see also discussion in § 63.317[1][c]].

[b] Tax Considerations in Use of Form

A QTIP trust permits a testator to give his or her surviving spouse an income interest in property for life, claim an estate tax marital deduction for the full value of the property (not just the income interest), and concurrently specify the individuals who will take the property upon expiration of the spouse's income interest for life [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. This differs from the standard marital deduction trust, under which the surviving spouse must be given a general power of appointment over the property, thereby depriving the testator of the ability to control with certainty the ultimate beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)].

This form is useful because of the tax treatment of the estate of the income beneficiary (the surviving spouse) under a QTIP trust. On the death of the surviving spouse, the value of the spouse's gross estate includes the value of any qualified terminable interest (QTIP) property for which the original testator received a marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2044; see I.R.C. §§ 2056(b)(7), 2523(f)]. Thus, the corpus of a QTIP trust will be taxable in the estate of the surviving spouse, even though it was the original testator who directed the disposition of that property. However, the Internal Revenue Code contains a special "recapture" provision, I.R.C. § 2207A, which permits the estate of the surviving spouse to recover from the recipient of the corpus of the QTIP trust the difference between the estate's tax liability and the amount of tax the estate would have paid if the value of the QTIP property had not been included in the spouse's gross estate [I.R.C. § 2207A(a)(1)]. Significantly, there is no such right of recovery if the surviving spouse in a will or revocable trust instrument specifically indicates an intent to waive any right of recapture with respect to the QTIP property [I.R.C. § 2207A(a)(2)]. This form precludes the likelihood that a will provision apportioning death taxes will inadvertently waive this right of recovery.

Inclusion of a provision such as this may be important. If the amount of QTIP property is substantial in relation to the total estate, then an otherwise suitable method for allocating death taxes, such as payment of such taxes out of the residuary estate [see § 63.310], may work an undue hardship on other beneficiaries. In such a situation, inclusion of this provision may be necessary to preserve the estate's right to recover the estate tax attributable to the QTIP property from the beneficiaries of that property. In addition, QTIP trusts are often used in situations in which there is antagonism between the surviving spouse and the remainder beneficiaries, and in such a case the surviving spouse may want his or her estate to be able to recover as much tax as possible at the expense of the recipients of the QTIP property.

[2] FORM

Proration of Death Taxes--Income Beneficiary Under Qualified Terminable Interest (QTIP) Trust

Except as hereinafter provided, I direct that all federal estate taxes and any state taxes payable as a result of my death, not limited to taxes assessed on property passing under this will, shall be paid out of the residue of my estate, and shall not be deducted from nor charged against any other gift or gifts that I have made in this will. The foregoing provision shall not affect the right of my estate under Internal Revenue Code Section 2207A(a)(1) to recover from the recipients of any property in which I possess an income interest for life, and which is includable in my gross estate by reason of Internal Revenue Code Section 2044, the difference between the total estate tax for which my estate is liable and the estate tax that would have been payable by my estate had that property not been included in my gross estate.

2. Payment of Debts

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.330

§ 63.330 Discharge of Particular Debt From Specific Fund

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision directing that a specific debt of the testator be paid out of specified estate property. When included in a will, this provision will free all property other than the specified property of the burden of payment of the specified debt and, to that extent, alter the statutory scheme for abatement of the shares of devisees [see Prob. Code §§ 21400 (shares of beneficiaries abate as necessary to effectuate transferor's plan or terms of instrument), 21401 (application of abatement rules), 21402 (statutory order of abatement)]; see also § 63.330[1][b][iii].

[b] Abatement of Devises to Pay Debts

[i] In General

Property subject to testamentary disposition is also subject to the rights of creditors and other persons as provided by law [Prob. Code § 7001; see Prob. Code §§ 11400-11467 (payment of debts)]. Claims that are established in administration proceedings under the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 9000-9399 (creditor claims in administration proceedings)] must be paid in the course of administration [Prob. Code § 9003]. Debts (including expenses of administration, funeral expenses, expenses of the decedent's last illness, a family allowance, if any, and other claims for money) must be paid according to statutory priorities for payment [see Prob. Code § 11420(a)]. If necessary to pay debts, expenses, a family allowance, or other devises, the shares of certain devisees may have to be reduced or eliminated, and the executor may have to sell property devised by the will [see Prob. Code § 10000(a) (executor may sell property when necessary to pay debts, devises, family allowance, expenses of administration, or taxes)]. The process whereby some devises are reduced or, as necessary, eliminated to pay debts, expenses, or other devises is generally referred to as abatement [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406].

For a more detailed discussion of the payment of the testator's debts, see Ch. 65, Executors .

[ii] Statutory Rules

Under abatement rules set forth in the Probate Code, devisees must abate for the purpose of paying debts and other claims in the following order [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(16)]:

- First, property not disposed of by the will.
- Second, residuary gifts [see Prob. Code § 21117(f) ("residuary gift" defined)].
- Third, general gifts to persons other than the transferor's relatives [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(b) ("general gift" defined), 21402(b) ("relative" is person who would be intestate heir if testator died without will and there were no other persons having priority)].
- Fourth, general gifts to the transferor's relatives.
- Fifth, specific gifts to persons other than the transferor's relatives [see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined)].
- Sixth, specific gifts to the transferor's relatives.

With exceptions noted in the code [see Prob. Code §§ 21403(b) (special rule for certain annuities), 21404 (when will requires specific gift to be exonerated from lien), 21405(b) (specific devisee may satisfy contribution for abatement out of other property)], shares of devisees abate pro rata within each of the above classes [Prob. Code § 21403(a)].

[iii] Will Provisions

The Probate Code abatement rules are rules of construction only. They do not apply if the testator's plan (or a particular devise) would be defeated by application of the rules, or if some other scheme of abatement is necessary to effectuate the will or the testator's purpose [Prob. Code § 21400]. However, a general statement calling for payment of expenses out of the "trust estate" or "estate" does not override the order of abatement specified by Prob. Code § 21402 [see Burkett v. Capovilla (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817].

[c] Exoneration

For a form directing the executor to pay encumbrances against specifically devised property, see § 63.419. For a form directing the executor to exonerate encumbrances against specifically devised real property, see § 63.442.

[2] FORM*Discharge of Particular Debt From Specific Fund

I direct that the funds to pay the indebtedness on the note executed by me on _____ [date], payable to [name of creditor], be paid _____ [source of funds for payment of debt, e.g., out of the proceeds of the $_____ (face amount of policy) life insurance policy payable to my estate; policy number _____, issued by _____ (name of insurance company); or from the proceeds of the sale of my ranch located in _____ County, California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ (description)].

§ 63.350 Single Gift of Entire Estate

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to devise the testator's entire estate to one person. It is the simplest and most complete kind of disposition that can be made in a will.

A single gift of the entire estate typically is made when the estate is modest and the testator wishes all of it to pass to one person, usually the testator's spouse. If the testator wishes to give individual items or specified amounts of property to persons other than the principal beneficiary, this form should not be used. In such a case, appropriate provisions specifying the individual dispositions should be inserted [see §§ 63.351-63.510] and the remainder of the estate should be disposed of in the form of a residuary bequest [see §§ 63.530-63.591].

[b] Alternative Dispositions

A devise of the entire estate, like other devises, may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified period of time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For devises conditioned on survival until a future time, see § 63.411. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions setting the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630. For alternative residuary devises to take effect if the residuary devisees fail to survive, see §§ 63.532 and 63.550.

If the will names only one devisee, it is important to consider survival and to provide for alternative dispositions of the estate should the devisee fail to survive the testator, or fail to survive until the time required by the will. If the sole devisee is the testator's spouse, for example, the testator may wish to make alternative dispositions to his or her children, either outright, in trust, or under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925; see Ch.

60A, Gifts ]. If there are no children, alternative dispositions may be made to parents, brothers, sisters, or other individuals.

[2] FORM

Single Gift of Entire Estate

I give to _____ [name of devisee] all of my property, of whatever kind or character and wherever located, and with the intent thereby to give all the property I am entitled to dispose of by will.

[Optional provision: Devise to lapse or not to lapse]

If _____ [name of devisee] does not survive me [for _____ (specify period, e.g. six months)], this gift _____ [shall lapse and shall become part of the residue of my estate or shall not lapse and shall go to those of _____ (his or her) issue who survive me (for that period) on the principle of representation].

§ 63.351 General Pecuniary Devise

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise of money to be paid out of a specified bank account. It is an example of a general pecuniary devise [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(d) ("general pecuniary gift" defined), 21118(b) ("pecuniary gift" defined); see also Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)].

[b] Classification of Devises

The Probate Code rules for the interpretation of wills, trusts, and other instruments refer to transfers made under wills as "gifts" [see Prob. Code §§ 21101-21140]. However, the Code also defines a disposition of real or personal property made by a will as a "devise." In this publication, transfers made under wills are commonly referred to as "devises." Under the Probate Code rules of interpretation, the following types of devises (or "gifts") are specifically recognized by statute:

- A "specific" devise, which is a transfer of specifically identifiable property [Prob. Code § 21117(a)]; see § 63.370[1].
- A "general" devise, which is a transfer from the general assets of the testator's estate that does not give specific property [Prob. Code § 21117(b)]. A general devise is to be satisfied out of the testator's estate generally; that is, by delivering to the devisee the portion of the testator's estate that corresponds to the gift in value or in general description [ Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358 ].
- A "demonstrative" devise, which is a general devise that specifies the fund or property from which it is primarily to be made [Prob. Code § 21117(c)]; see § 63.390[1].

- A "general pecuniary" devise, which is a devise that is expressed stated as a fixed dollar amount or a dollar amount that can be determined by the provisions of the will [Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118(b); see Prob. Code § 21118(a) (if will permits personal representative to value property selected for this distribution as of date other than date of distribution, property must, unless will provides otherwise, fairly reflect net appreciation and depreciation occurring between valuation date and date of distribution in all assets from which distribution could have been made)].
- An "annuity," which is a general pecuniary devise that is payable periodically [Prob. Code § 21117(e); see Prob. Code § 12000].
- A "residuary" devise, which is a devise of all of the property that remains after all of the specific and general devises provided for in the will have been satisfied [Prob. Code § 21117(f); see § 63.530[1]].

These classifications are rules of interpretation. As such, they are subordinate to the intentions of the testator as expressed in the will, and apply only when the testator's intention is not otherwise indicated by the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a), (b)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. In determining the classification of a devise, the intention of the testator as revealed in the will is always controlling [ Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221-222, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358 ].

[c] Survival and Lapse

A general pecuniary devise, like other devises, may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival, see § 63.411.

When a devise is conditioned on survival, it is good practice to make an alternative disposition of the property and to provide whether the devise will lapse and become part of the residue of the estate or pass to the issue of the primary devisee if the survival condition is not satisfied. For a general discussion of the lapse of legacies and the operation of the "anti-lapse statute" [Prob. Code § 21110], see § 63.411[1][d]. For a discussion of alternative dispositions to take effect if the primary devisee fails to take, see § 63.350[1].

§ 63.352 General Pecuniary Devise Specifying Whether Interest Is to Be Paid

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a general pecuniary devise [Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118(b); see § 63.351[1]] and to specify whether or not interest will be paid on the devise.

A general pecuniary devise, like other devises, may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival, see § 63.411.

When a devise is conditioned on survival, it is good practice to make an alternative disposition of the property and to provide whether the devise will lapse and become part of the residue of the estate or pass to the issue of the primary devisee if the survival condition is not satisfied. For a general discussion of the lapse of legacies and the operation of the "anti-lapse statute" [Prob. Code § 21110], see § 63.411[1][d]. For a discussion of alternative dispositions to take effect if the primary devisee fails to take, see § 63.350[1].

[b] Interest on General Pecuniary Devise

[i] Statutory Rules

Unless the will provides otherwise, a general pecuniary devise will bear interest if the devise is not distributed within one year after the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12003]. The rate of interest is three percentage points less than the legal rate on judgments in effect one year after the date of the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12001]. The California Constitution authorizes the Legislature to set the rate of interest on judgments at not more than 10 percent per annum [

Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1). The Legislature has set the current rate at 10 percent per annum, while reserving the right to change the rate at any time to less than 10 percent [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010].

Once the rate of interest has been set, it will not be changed, even if the rate changes before the devise is ultimately distributed [Prob. Code § 12001]. When interest is payable on a general pecuniary devise, the devise begins to earn interest one year after the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12003].

[ii] Modification of Statutory Rules by Will

The will may alter the general rule about payment of interest [Prob. Code § 12000]. It may, for example, provide that interest will not be paid on a devise, or that interest will be paid on a devise from the date of death. It may also alter the applicable rate of interest.

For additional discussion of the payment of interest, and pecuniary legacies in general, see § 63.351[1].

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

1. General and Demonstrative Devises; Gift of Money

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.353

§ 63.353 General Pecuniary Devise to Two or More Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a general pecuniary devise [Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118(b); see § 63.351[1]] to two or more named devisees. It includes an optional provision stating that if one or more of the devisees fails to survive the testator, the share or shares that would have gone to the nonsurviving devisee will go to the survivor or survivors. The form may be modified to express any other intent of the testator.

[b] Form of Ownership

Although the will may provide that property devised to more than one devisee will vest in the devisees as joint owners, in many cases it will be preferable to allow the property to vest in the devisees as owners in common. A devisee who takes as an owner in common rather than as a joint owner has a descendible interest and one that may be the subject of the devisee's own testamentary disposition.

[c] Survival

When a devise is made to two or more persons, it is good practice to specify what disposition will be made of the devise if one of the devisees does not survive the testator. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival until a future time, and a provision establishing such a condition, see § 63.411.

The will may provide that if one of the devisees does not survive the testator (or does not survive until a future time required by the will), his or her share of the devise will go to his or her issue or heirs. If the testator does not wish to name alternative devisees, the will may identify the takers as a class. For a class gift, see § 63.551.

[2] FORM*General Pecuniary Devise to Two or More Beneficiaries

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [names of devisees], in equal shares, share and share alike. In the event that one or more of the above-named devisees does not survive me, then I give the share that would have gone to that devisee had he or she survived me to the other surviving [devisee or devisees, in equal shares].

If _____ [neither or none] of the devisees named in this paragraph survive me, then this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

[OR]

If _____ [neither or none] of the devisees named in this paragraph survive me, then this gift shall be divided into _____ [specify number] equal shares, one equal share to be set aside for each of the above-named devisees. Each equal share shall be distributed on the principle of representation to the surviving issue of the devisee for whom that share has been set aside. If one or more of the devisees named in this paragraph should have no issue who survive me, then the share that would have gone to that devisee had he or she survived me shall be added equally to the remaining shares of those devisees having issue surviving. If _____ [neither or none] of the above devisees have issue surviving, this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

2. Specific Devises of Personal Property

§ 63.370 Specific Devise of Personal Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a specific devise [Prob. Code § 21117(a); see Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)] of personal property. For a specific devise of real property, see § 63.440. For a provision insuring that a devise is specific, see § 63.372. For a discussion of insurance on specific devises and rights of devisees when property subject to a specific devise has been destroyed, damaged, altered, or taken in eminent domain, see § 63.420.

[b] Specific Devise--Defined

A "specific" devise is a transfer of specifically identifiable property made under a will [Prob. Code § 21117(a); see Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)]. A devise is specific if the testator intends to give a specific thing and that thing alone [ Estate of Buck (1948) 32 Cal.2d 372, 374, 196 P.2d 769 ; Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358 ]. Specific devises are used to make dispositions of particular items of personal property, or particular parcels or tracts of real property.

[c] Rights of Devisee When Property Is Sold, Transformed, Destroyed, or Damaged

If property subject to a specific devise is not in the testator's estate at the time of the testator's death, the devise is generally adeemed (extinguished) [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(a) (specific gift as gift of specifically identifiable property), 21133 (specific devisee entitled to remaining property specifically given)]. If the testator does not wholly dispose of property subject to a specific devise, but merely alters his or her interest in the property, the specific devisee has the right to the testator's remaining interest in the property [Prob. Code § 21133].

A recipient of an at-death transfer of a specific gift has a right to the specifically given property, to the extent the transferor owned the property at the time the gift takes effect in possession or enjoyment, and all of the following:

- Any balance of the purchase price (together with any security agreement) owing from a purchaser to the transferor at the time the gift takes effect by reason of a sale of the property [Prob. Code § 21133(a)].
- Any amount of an eminent domain award for the taking of property unpaid at the time the gift takes effect [Prob. Code § 21133(b)].
- Any proceeds unpaid at the time the gift takes effect on fire or casualty insurance on or other recovery for injury to the property [Prob. Code § 21133(c)].
- Property owned by the transferor at the time the gift takes effect and acquired as a result of foreclosure, or obtained in place of foreclosure, of the security interest for a specifically given obligation [Prob. Code § 21133(d)].

[d] Will Provisions

The Probate Code rules for the interpretation of transfers made under wills, trusts, and other instruments are rules of interpretation only [see Prob. Code §§ 21101-21140]. They are subordinate to the intentions of the testator as expressed in the will, and apply only when the testator's intention is not otherwise indicated by the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a), (b)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. In determining the classification of a gift made by a will, the fundamental and controlling factor is always the intention of the testator as revealed in the will [ Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221-222, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358 ].

When considering a specific devise, the testator should consider the possibility that the specifically devised property will not be in the estate at the time of the testator's death and decide whether an alternative devise should be made to take effect in such an event. For a specific devise of personal property with a substitute cash devise, see § 63.371.

[e] Purpose or Condition

A specific devise is often motivated by a particular reason or purpose. That reason or purpose may be expressed in one of several different ways. First, the devise may be conditioned on fulfillment of the purpose. Second, the reason may be offered as an explanation for the devise. Third, the reason or purpose may be stated in precatory language. Before stating a reason or purpose for a devise, the testator should decide whether the devise is or is not to be conditional, and the language used should clearly effectuate that decision. For a provision making an entire will conditional, see § 63.205. For a provision making a devise conditional, see § 63.410. For a provision containing precatory language, see § 63.412.

[f] Survival and Lapse

A specific devise, like other devises, may be condition on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival, see § 63.411.

When a devise is conditioned on survival, it is good practice to make an alternative disposition of the property and to provide whether the devise will lapse and become part of the residue of the estate or pass to the issue of the primary devisee if the survival condition is not satisfied. For a general discussion of the lapse of legacies and the operation of the "anti-lapse statute" [Prob. Code § 21110], see § 63.411[1][d]. For a discussion of alternative dispositions to take effect if the primary devisee fails to take, see § 63.350[1].

[2] FORM

Specific Devise of Personal Property

I give my _____ [describe specific property; if devise is to include insurance on the described property, add: , together with any insurance on it,] to _____ [name of devisee] [if survivorship requirement is to be imposed, add: if _____ (he or she) survives me for _____ (specify period)].

§ 63.372 Provision to Insure That Devise Is Specific

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be added to a devise to insure that it will be construed as a specific devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(a); see also Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)]. Since the Probate Code rules classifying devises are subject to the general rule that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a)], any provision explaining or clarifying the terms of a devise, or the intentions of the testator respecting the rights of the devisee under the devise, will be given effect.

For a general discussion of types or classifications of devises, see § 63.351[1][a]. For a general form for a specific devise of personal property, see § 63.370. For a general form for a specific devise of real property, see § 63.440. For a provision insuring that a devise is a demonstrative devise, see § 63.391.

[2] FORM

Provision to Insure That Devise Is Specific

This devise is intended to be a specific devise, and in the event that the property described in this paragraph is, for any reason, not part of my estate at the time of my death, resort shall not be had to any other assets of my estate to satisfy it.

3. Demonstrative Devises

§ 63.390 Demonstrative Devise

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a demonstrative devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(c) (demonstrative gift defined); see also Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)]. For a will provision insuring that a devise is demonstrative, see § 63.391. For a devise to be paid from a specified bank account with provisions for ademption if the account is insufficient to satisfy the devise in full, see § 63.392.

[b] Demonstrative Devise

[i] In General

A demonstrative devise is a devise that specifies the fund or property from which it is "primarily" to be made [Prob. Code § 21117(c); see Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)]. A gift of "$10,000, to be paid out of my account at First National Bank of Smalltown, California," is an example of a demonstrative devise.

A demonstrative devise differs from a general devise in that a general devise may be paid out of the general assets of the estate and is not limited to any particular fund or property [see Prob. Code § 21117(b)]. A demonstrative devise, in contrast, designates the primary fund or property out of which the devise is to be satisfied [see Prob. Code § 21117(c)]. A demonstrative devise differs from a specific devise in that it is not limited to specifically identifiable property, but may be satisfied out of other assets of the general estate if the fund or property out of which it is "primarily" to be satisfied fails in whole or in part [see Prob. Code § 21403(b) (demonstrative gift treated as general if satisfied out of property other than specified fund or property)].

For further discussion of the classification of devises, see § 63.351[1]; see also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 24, Devises (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Pecuniary Devise

A demonstrative devise frequently takes the form of a pecuniary devise that specifies that it is to be satisfied out of a particular account in a bank or other financial institution. Any devise that is stated as a fixed dollar amount, or a dollar amount that can be determined under the provisions of the instrument, is classified as a pecuniary devise [Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118(b); see § 63.351[1]]. Pecuniary devises are usually made without specifying any particular account or other fund from which they are to be satisfied. A pecuniary devise made in this form is properly classified as a general pecuniary devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(d) ("general pecuniary gift" defined); see also Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)].

Although demonstrative pecuniary devises are typically to be satisfied out of accounts in banks or other financial institutions, a demonstrative pecuniary devise may, by its terms, specify that it is to be satisfied out of the sale of real or personal property. For example, a devise may be for "$10,000, to be obtained from the sale of my shares of common stock in Acme Corporation," or "$100,000 to be paid out of the proceeds of sale of my residence at 100 Shady Lane, Smalltown, California." In both of these cases, the devise would be a demonstrative devise.

For further discussion of pecuniary devises, see § 63.351[1]; see also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 25, Devises of Money and Property (Matthew Bender).

[iii] Nonpecuniary Devise

Demonstrative devises may also take the form of nonpecuniary or non-cash devises. For example, a rancher may devise "two horses from the herd of horses that I maintain at my ranch in Shasta County, California, if sufficient for that purpose; and, if my herd is not sufficient, then my executor shall satisfy this devise from other assets of my estate." This would be an example of a demonstrative devise. By its terms, the devise is "primarily" to be satisfied out of the testator's herd of horses in Shasta County. If that herd is not sufficient, however, the executor will be required to obtain two horses from other sources, purchasing the same if necessary.

[iv] Interest on Devise

If a general pecuniary devise is not distributed within one year after the testator's death, the devise bears interest thereafter [Prob. Code § 12003]. Since a demonstrative pecuniary devise is a kind of general pecuniary devise, it would seem that interest would be payable on a demonstrative pecuniary devise if it is not paid within one year after the testator's death.

The Probate Code provides that a specific devise carries with it income on the devised property from the date of death, less expenses attributable to the property during administration of the estate [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. However, the Probate Code contains no comparable provision giving the devisee the right to receive income on a nonpecuniary demonstrative devise.

Assume, for example, that the devise is of "two horses from the herd of horses that I maintain at my ranch in Shasta County, California, if sufficient for that purpose; and, if my herd is not sufficient, then my executor shall satisfy this devise from other assets of my estate." Assume further that the herd of horses maintained by the executor at the ranch in Shasta County included four thoroughbred horses at the time of the testator's death. One of these horses is a racehorse that, during the time the testator's estate is subject to administration, has net race winnings of $1,000,000. Until such time as the devise is satisfied, it cannot be known which of the four horses will be distributed to the devisee. Until that time, it would seem that the earnings of $1,000,000 would properly belong to the general estate, and not to the devisee of the two horses. It should be understood, however, that the Probate Code rules relating to interest and income on devises are rules of interpretation only [see Prob. Code § 12000; see also Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intention of transferor controls)]. In a given case, they must give way to a contrary result if the terms of the will demonstrate the testator's intention to make other provisions for the payment of interest and income.

[v] Abatement

If the assets of a testator's estate are not sufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises, the shares of devisees must abate (that is, be reduced or eliminated) [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406 (rules for abatement)]. In a given case, the executor may have to sell property disposed of by the will to pay debts, expenses, or even other devises [see Prob. Code § 10000(a)].

If abatement is necessary, property not disposed of by the will must first be used to satisfy debts and expenses [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(1)]. If that property is not sufficient, resort must then be had to residuary devises [Prob. Code § 21402(a); see Prob. Code § 6154(f) ("residuary devise" defined)]. If that property is not sufficient, resort must then be had to general devises [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(3)]. Specific devises will abate only after all other types of devises have been exhausted [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(5), (6); see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined)].

For purposes of abatement, a demonstrative devise is treated as a specific devise to the extent that it is satisfied out of the fund or property specified in the devise and as a general devise to the extent that it is satisfied out of other property [Prob. Code § 21403(b)].

Specific and general devises to nonrelatives will abate before specific and general devises to the testator's relatives [Prob. Code § 21402(a); see Prob. Code § 21402(b) ("relative" defined)].

General statements in a will that the executor is to pay expenses out of the testator's estate are not sufficiently specific to override the abatement order established by Prob. Code § 21402 [ Burkett v. Capovilla (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1452, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 ].

For further discussion of the abatement of devises, see § 63.416[1]; see also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 24, Devises (Matthew Bender).

[c] Survival and Lapse

Demonstrative devises, like other devises, may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival, see § 63.411.

When a devise is conditioned on survival, it is good practice to make an alternative disposition of the property and to provide whether the devise will lapse and become part of the residue of the estate or pass to the issue of the primary devisee if the survival condition is not satisfied. For a general discussion of the lapse of legacies and the operation of the "anti-lapse statute" [Prob. Code § 21110], see § 63.411[1][d]; see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.16[4]. For a discussion of alternative dispositions to take effect if the primary devisee fails to take, see § 63.350[1].

I give _____ [describe devise, e.g., the sum of $10,000 or 100 shares of the common stock of Acme Corporation or two horses] to _____ [name of devisee and relationship, if any, to testator, e.g., my son, Robert Smith] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if he survives me or if he survives me for 60 days]. § 63.391 Provision to Insure That Devise Is Demonstrative

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be added to a devise to insure that it will be construed as a demonstrative and not a specific devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined), (c)("demonstrative gift" defined); see also Prob. Code § 32 ("devise" as disposition of property by will)].

Since the Probate Code rules classifying devises are subject to the general rule that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a)], any provision explaining or clarifying the terms of a devise, or the intentions of the testator respecting the rights of the devisee under the devise, will be given effect.

For further discussion of demonstrative devises, see § 63.390[1]. For further discussion of the classification of devises, see § 63.351[1]; see also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 24, Devises (Matthew Bender).

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.392§ 63.392 Devise From Bank Account With Provision for Ademption If Account Is Insufficient[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a pecuniary devise to be paid from a specified bank account and to provide that, if the account is inadequate to satisfy the devise in full, the devise will be reduced to the amount actually in the account at the time of the testator's death. For a general pecuniary devise, see § 63.351. For discussion of pecuniary devises, see § 63.390[1]; see also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 25, Devises of Money and Property (Matthew Bender).

[b] Ademption of Demonstrative Devise

The general rule is that if the fund or property out of which a demonstrative devise is "primarily" to be satisfied fails in whole or in part, the devise may be satisfied out of the general assets of the estate [see Prob. Code § 21403(b) (demonstrative gift treated as general if satisfied out of property other than specified fund or property)]. However, this rule is subordinate to the intentions of the testator as expressed in the will [Prob. Code §§ 21102(a), 21400]. In determining the classification of a devise, the controlling factor is always the intent of the testator as shown in the will [Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221-222, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358]. This form specifically provides that, if the designated account is not in existence when the testator dies, or is insufficient to satisfy the devise in full, the amount of the pecuniary devise will be reduced to the balance in the account at the time of the testator's death. This clearly indicates the testator's intention that there will be no resort to other assets of the estate to satisfy the devise.

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.410§ 63.410 Conditional Devise[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form--Public Policy Limitations

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise conditional on the occurrence (or nonoccurrence) of a specified event. If the condition described in this provision is satisfied, the devise becomes fully effective. If it is not satisfied, the devise lapses and becomes part of the residue of the testator's estate. For a form making the entire will (as opposed to a particular devise) conditional, see § 63.205.

[b] Conditional Wills and Conditional Devises--Public Policy Limitations

The Probate Code expressly sanctions conditional wills. Under Prob. Code § 6105, if a will makes its own validity conditional, the will must be admitted to probate, denied probate, or denied effect after admission to probate, in conformity with the condition. A will may, however, condition a particular devise or devises without conditioning the validity of the entire will. Conditional devises are sanctioned by case law and supported by general rules of construction in the Probate Code [ In re Kitchen (1916) 192 Cal. 384, 388, 220 P. 301 ; see Prob. Code §§ 21102(a) (intention of transferor as expressed in instrument controls legal effect of dispositions made in instrument), 21120 (words of instrument are to receive interpretation that will give every expression some effect); see also Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, deed, and other instruments)].

A testator is free to dispose of his or her estate on whatever conditions he or she may establish, as long as the conditions are not prohibited by law and do not violate public policy [see In re Kitchen (1916) 192 Cal. 384, 388, 220 P. 301 ]. The language of the will must, however, clearly express the testator's intention that the will is to become operative (or a disposition is to take effect) only if a specified event occurs [ Estate of Taylor (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 574, 580, 259 P.2d 1014 ]. A condition will not be implied from indefinite language [ Estate of Taylor (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 574, 581, 259 P.2d 1014 ], nor will language that merely expresses the testator's reasons for making a will or a particular disposition be interpreted as a condition to the effectiveness of the will or the disposition [ Estate of Moulton (1959) ].

176 Cal. App. 2d 87, 90, 1 Cal. Rptr. 407 ].

Whenever a condition is imposed on a devise, it is possible that the condition will not be fulfilled. In contemplation of this possibility, the testator may wish to make an alternative devise, to take effect only if the condition is not fulfilled. When a devise is subject to complex conditions or restrictions, consideration should be given to the use of a trust. For discussion of the use of trusts, together with illustrative forms, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions , Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions , and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions . For discussion of conditional wills and devises, see § 63.205[1]. For detailed discussion of conditional devises involving future interests, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities .

Certain conditions in a will may be held invalid or denied enforcement because they violate public policy. For a discussion of public policy limitations on conditions in wills, see § 63.205[1].

[c] Survival and Lapse

A devise conditioned on the occurrence (or nonoccurrence) of a specified event may also be conditioned on survival of the testator, or survival until a future time [Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival until a future time, see § 63.411. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630.

[2] FORM

This devise shall become effective only if _____ [specify condition, e.g., I marry _____ (name of intended spouse)], and if _____ [specify negative of condition, e.g., I do not marry _____ (name of intended spouse)] this devise shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.411

§ 63.411 Devise Conditioned on Survival Until a Future Time

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a devise conditional on survival until a future time. It includes optional provisions stating that the devise will lapse if the devisee does not survive for the required time or, in the alternative, that the devise will pass to other named devisees (e.g., the issue of the first devisee).

For a provision making a devise conditional on the occurrence (or nonoccurrence) of a specified event, see § 63.410. For a provision making the entire will conditional on the occurrence (or nonoccurrence) of a specified event, see § 63.205. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630. For detailed discussion of conditional devises involving future interests, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities .

[b] Survival Until a Future Time

[i] Advantages

A devise may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified period of time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, does not take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)].

It is sometimes advisable to condition a devise on survival for a specified period of time, since such a condition may obviate successive administration and taxation of the same property. If, for example, the testator devises property to a devisee who survives the testator for only one week, all the property given will be included in the estate of the devisee, even though the devisee will not have come into beneficial enjoyment of the property. If, in the example given, the devise was conditioned on the devisee's surviving the testator for a specified period (e.g., 60 days or six months), successive administrations of the same property would have been avoided.

The question of survival should be considered as it bears on each devise. A devise to an elderly friend or relative might well be conditioned on survival for a period of time sufficient to allow the probate estate to proceed to distribution (a petition for preliminary distribution may be filed when two months have elapsed after the first issuance of letters [Prob. Code § 11620], but final distribution will not be completed until several months thereafter [Prob. Code §§ 11640-11642]).

[ii] Disadvantages

It is not good practice to routinely condition devises to a surviving spouse on survival until a future time, because such a condition may delay or defeat the confirmation proceedings authorized by Prob. Code §§ 13650-13660. Further, such a condition may deprive the surviving spouse of the benefits of the marital deduction for estate tax purposes. Under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1), no estate tax deduction is allowed for a "terminable" interest passing to a surviving spouse. An interest is "terminable" if it may terminate and pass to another person on the lapse of time, on the occurrence of an event or contingency, or on the failure of an event or contingency to occur. A limited exception to this rule is recognized for interests that are subject to termination if the spouse and the testator die in a common disaster or if the spouse fails to survive the testator for a period not exceeding six months [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3)(A)], though, in this case, the termination or failure must not in fact occur [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3)(B)]. For further discussion of the marital deduction, including the terminable interest rule, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

[iii] Probate Code Rules of Construction

The Probate Code contains rules of construction that are designed to reduce the possibility that drafting errors in wills and trusts will result in inadvertent loss of the marital deduction [see Prob. Code §§ 21520-21526 (marital deduction gifts)]. These rules provide, among other things, that any requirement set forth in a will or trust that the transferor's spouse survive the transferor by a period that exceeds (or may exceed) six months, will be limited to six months as applied to the marital deduction gift [Prob. Code § 2125(a)].

Although in most cases the statutory rules will be adequate to guard against loss of the marital deduction, a careful attorney will draft the will so that its terms do not endanger the deduction if it is important to the testator's dispositive plan. In some cases, the value of the marital deduction will outweigh the savings to be gained by avoiding successive administrations. In other cases, the expense, delay, and inconvenience of successive administrations will strongly suggest the adoption of a survivorship period that satisfies I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3). Each case must be considered on its own merits, and appropriate will provisions should be selected to meet the needs of the individual testator. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630.

[c] Alternative Dispositions

When it is decided to condition a devise on survival (or on survival until a future time), the testator should consider the advisability of making an alternative disposition of the property to take effect in the event that the condition is not satisfied. If the sole devisee is the testator's spouse, for example, the testator may wish to make alternative dispositions to his or her children, either outright, in trust, or under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925; see Ch. 60A, Gifts ]. If there are no children, alternative dispositions may be made to parents, brothers, sisters, or other persons. The effect of the "anti-lapse statute" [Prob. Code § 21110] should also be considered whenever a devise is conditioned on survival until a future time. For a discussion of that statute and the necessity for making alternative or substitute dispositions if it is unclear or uncertain whether the statute will apply to a particular gift, see discussion in § 63.411[1][d].

[d] Lapse of Legacies

Under Prob. Code § 21110 (the "anti-lapse statute"), the issue of devisees who are kindred of the testator, or kindred of a surviving, deceased, or former spouse of the testator, are protected against unintended lapse of devises. The term "kindred" refers to persons related by blood [see Estate of Sowash (1923) 62 Cal. App. 512, 516, 217 P. 123] and includes halfbloods, adopted persons, persons born out of wedlock, stepchildren, foster children, and the issue of all such persons [Prob. Code § 21115; for a general discussion of the statutory definitions of "child" and "children," together with the rights of natural children, adopted children, foster children, and stepchildren to take under wills or by intestate succession, see discussion in § 63.226[1][c][i] et seq.].

The basic rule of the anti-lapse statute is that if a devise is made to "kindred" of the testator (or to kindred of a surviving, deceased, or former spouse of the testator), and if the kindred devisee is dead when the will is executed, or is treated as if he or she predeceased the testator, or fails to survive the testator, or fails (or is treated as failing) to survive until a future time required by the will, the issue of the deceased devisee take in his or her place in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240 [Prob. Code § 21110(a), (c); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments; see also Estate of Mooney, (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 654, 663 ; 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115 (anti-lapse statute provides that when a bequest to a protected transferee would otherwise lapse due to the transferee's death, the bequest passes by right of representation to his or her descendants), see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms § 61.16[4]]. However, the basic rule is inapplicable if the will expresses a "contrary intention" or makes a "substitute disposition" [Prob. Code § 21110(b), (c)]. For this purpose, a requirement that the initial devisee survive the testator or survive for a specified period of time after the testator's death, or until a future time that is related to the probate of the will or the administration of the testator's estate, constitutes a "contrary intention" [Prob. Code § 21110(b); Burkett v. Capovilla (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1451, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817].

The effect of the anti-lapse statute should be considered whenever a devise is conditioned on survival until a future time. A careful attorney will avoid any question about the lapse of such a devise by making an alternate or substitute devise, to take effect if the beneficiary named in the primary gift fails to take. For provisions making alternate or substitute gifts of the residue of the estate to a named beneficiary or beneficiaries, see § 63.532. For provisions making alternate or substitute gifts of the residue to issue of the primary beneficiary, see § 63.533.

If the testator does not wish to have the anti-lapse statute apply to a gift, and no alternate disposition of the property is made, then in the event the gift lapses the property will pass under the residuary clause of the will [Prob. Code § 21111(a)]. This provision states that if a transfer fails for any reason, the property is transferred as follows: (1) if the transferring instrument provides for an alternative disposition in the event the transfer fails, the property is transferred according to the terms of the instrument; (2) if the transferring instrument does not provide for an alternative disposition but does provide for the transfer of a residue, the property becomes a part of the residue transferred under the instrument; and (3) if the transferring instrument does not provide for an alternative disposition and does not provide for the transfer of a residue, or if the transfer is itself a residuary gift, the property is transferred to the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 21111(a)]. If a residuary gift or a future interest is transferred to two or more persons and the transferee's share fails for any reason, and no alternative disposition is provided, the share passes to the other transferees in proportion to their other interest in the residuary gift or the future interest [Prob. Code § 21111(b)]. These provisions are subject to [Prob. Code § 21110 [Prob. Code § 21111(a), (b)]. A transfer of "all my estate," or words of similar import, is a residuary gift for purposes of these provisions [Prob. Code § 21111(c)]. If a failure of a future interest results in an intestacy, the property passes to the testator's heirs determined under [Prob. Code § 21114 [Prob. Code § 21111(d)]. For a clause specifically providing that the issue of kindred devisees will not take any gift made to those devisees, and providing that the gifts in question will lapse instead, see § 63.654[2].

§ 63.412 Conditional Legacy to Son-in-Law or Daughter-in-Law With Precatory Request for Grandchildren

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a conditional pecuniary legacy to a son-in-law or daughter-in-law and to couple it with a precatory request that the funds be used for the support or education of the testator's grandchildren. The legacy is conditioned upon the death of the testator's son or daughter and the existence of minor grandchildren who survive the testator. The form includes two optional provisions specifying alternative dispositions of the gift, to take effect if the conditions are not satisfied. One provides that the gift will lapse and the other that it shall go to the minor grandchildren.

The purpose of this form is to make some provision for the education and support of minor grandchildren of the testator in the event that one of the parents of the grandchildren (a child of the testator) does not survive the testator. It may be more desirable, however, to achieve this result by a transfer under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925] or by creating a testamentary trust. For a detailed discussion of the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, see Ch. 60A, Gifts . For a discussion of trusts and illustrative trust provisions, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions , Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions , and Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions .

[b] Precatory or Mandatory Provisions

"Precatory" words express a hope, wish, desire, recommendation, or suggestion [ Estate of Sloan (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d 319, 341, 46 P.2d 1007 ]. When included in a will, they do not have the effect of a command or a charge and are not legally enforceable [ Estate of Kearns (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 531, 536, 225 P.2d 218 ]. "Mandatory" words import a direction or obligation, and, when included in a will, impose an enforceable legal obligation [ Estate of Burris (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 582, 588-589, 12 Cal. Rptr. 298 ]. While words such as "It is my wish" or "I hereby direct" are ordinarily treated as mandatory rather than precatory, when read in the context in which they are used, they may have quite a different effect [ Estate of Kearns (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 531, 534, 225 P.2d 218 ]. Whether any words are precatory or mandatory depends in every case on the intention of the testator [ Estate of Kearns (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 531, 534, 225 P.2d 218 ; see Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. The legal effect of words used in the will may differ according to the person or persons to whom they are directed. While words expressing the testator's wishes or desires may be mandatory when directed to the executor or administrator [ Estate of Lawrence (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 1, 7, 108 P.2d 893 ], like words directed to a beneficiary or legatee may be merely precatory [ Estate of Farelly (1931) 214 Cal. 199, 204, 4 P.2d 948 ].

Because the legal effect of words used in the will depends upon ascertaining the intention of the testator [see Prob. Code § 21102(a)], any expression that does not clearly and unambiguously express that intention is a potential source of controversy. The danger is that words intended to be precatory may be misinterpreted as mandatory, or that a would-be beneficiary may claim entitlement to the property in question on the basis of such language.

If words intended to be precatory are interpreted as mandatory, a testamentary disposition that was intended as an outright gift may be burdened with unintended conditions or restrictions, or even imposed with the obligations of a trust [see Estate of Hood (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 782, 785, 135 P.2d 383 ]. If the testator intends by the use of a precatory request to benefit a beneficiary other than the named legatee, the intention will be wholly frustrated if the named legatee does not survive the testator (or does not survive until such time as the precatory request is complied with). Further, the use of precatory words may occasion serious and unintended tax consequences. If the testator leaves property to a noncharitable beneficiary with a precatory request that it be devoted to a charitable purpose or distributed to a charitable beneficiary, the estate tax deduction for charitable transfers may be lost even if the noncharitable beneficiary in fact complies with the request [Delaney v. Gardner (5th Cir. [Mass.] 1953) 204 F.2d 855, 860-861] . Compliance with the precatory request by the named legatee may result in a taxable gift [see Housman v. Commissioner (2nd Cir. [B.T.A.] 1939) 105 F.2d 973 , cert. denied, 309 U.S. 656 (1940) ].

When confronted with a situation that suggests the use of a precatory request, the attorney should first consider the possibility of making the request mandatory. If it is deemed undesirable to make it mandatory, the attorney should consider eliminating the request altogether. If it is concluded that the request will serve a useful purpose even if it is not made mandatory or if, notwithstanding the attorney's warnings, the client insists on such a request, it should be drafted in such a way as to make it clear that it is precatory and not mandatory. This form will accomplish that purpose.

Conditional Legacy to Son-in-Law or Daughter-in-Law With Precatory Request for Grandchildren

In the event that my _____ [son or daughter], _____ [name of son or daughter], does not survive me, that, at the time of _____ [his or her] death, _____ [he or she] is married to _____ [name of son-in-law or daughter-in-law], and that _____ [he or she] has a minor child or minor children who survive me, then, and in that case only, I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of son-in-law or daughter-in-law], which I recommend, but do not direct, be used for the _____ [education of those minor children or support and maintenance of those minor children during their minorities]. It is my intention that this recommendation shall be deemed precatory only, and not mandatory.

If _____ [name of son-in-law or daughter-in-law] does not survive me, this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

[OR]

If _____ [name of son-in-law or daughter-in-law] does not survive me, then this gift shall go to those minor children of my _____ [son or daughter] named above who survive me, in equal shares, share and share alike.

§ 63.413 Pecuniary Legacy Limited to Percentage of Estate

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to limit a nonresiduary gift to a specified percentage of the estate. The form includes four alternative provisions. The first alternative may be used to make a gift of a specified sum, to be reduced if the total estate is less than a specified value. The second alternative may be used to make a gift of a specified sum, or a percentage of the estate, whichever is less. The third alternative may be used to make a gift of a specified sum not to exceed a specified percentage of the estate. The fourth alternative may be used to make a gift of a specified sum, to be increased if the total estate is more than a specified value.

For a single gift of the testator's entire estate, see § 63.350. For a general pecuniary legacy, see § 63.351. For a clause limiting nonresiduary gifts provided for in the will to a specified percentage of the estate, see § 63.417. For a clause requiring abatement of nonresiduary bequests to protect residuary beneficiaries against unanticipated reduction of the value of the estate, see § 63.572.

[b] Purpose of Limitation

When the overall plan of the will is to make certain gifts and then to leave the residue of the estate to the testator's spouse and/or children, the testator should consider the possibility that the estate may be substantially reduced before the testator's death. In such a case, specific, general, or demonstrative legacies set forth in the will may no longer accord with the general testamentary plan. When the estate is distributed, such legacies may be paid in full while the residue is drastically reduced. The form set forth below may be used to protect residuary beneficiaries against this contingency.

[c] Valuation Formula

Any other designation of the amount to which the percentage will be applied may be used in place of this formula. The testator may, for example, state that if the "net estate" is less than a fixed amount the bequests will be reduced proportionately.

[2] FORM

Pecuniary Legacy Limited to Percentage of Estate

[First alternative: specified sum, to be reduced if total estate less than specified value]

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of beneficiary]. If the value of all of my property disposed of by this will is less than _____ [specify amount], I reduce this gift to an amount equal to _____ [specify number] percent of that value.

[Second alternative: specific sum or percentage of estate, whichever is less]

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount], or a sum equal to _____ [specify number] percent of the value of all of my property disposed of by this will, whichever is less, to _____ [name of beneficiary].

[Third alternative: specified sum not to exceed percentage of estate]

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of beneficiary]. If this gift exceeds _____ [specify number] percent of the value of all of my property disposed of by this will, I reduce the amount of this gift to a sum equal to _____ [specify number] percent of that value.

[Fourth alternative: specified sum, to be increased if total estate is more than specified value]

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of beneficiary]. If the value of all of my property disposed of by this will is greater than the sum of _____ [specify amount], then, and in that case only, I give the sum of _____ [specify alternative amount], instead of the sum named above, to _____ [name of beneficiary].

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.414§ 63.414 Amount of General Pecuniary Devise Determined by Objective Factor[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a general pecuniary devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(d)] and to measure the amount of the devise by some objective factor in existence at the time of the testator's death. For a general form for a general pecuniary legacy, see § 63.351. For a provision limiting a nonresiduary devise to a specified percentage of the testator's estate, see § 63.413.

A "general pecuniary devise" is defined by statute as a "pecuniary gift" that is made by will [Prob. Code § 21117(d)]. A "pecuniary gift," in turn, is defined as a transfer of property made in an instrument that either is expressly stated as a fixed dollar amount or is a dollar amount determinable by the provisions of the instrument [Prob. Code § 21118(b)]. A pecuniary devise that limits its amount by some objective factor, such as the amount due on a mortgage or promissory note owed by the devise at the time of the testator's death, or a percentage of the total value of the testator's estate, determined as of the time of the testator's death [see § 63.413], will qualify as a pecuniary gift.

[2] FORM*Amount of General Pecuniary Devise Determined by Objective Factor

§ 63.415 Deferred Devise

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to postpone or defer the distribution, possession, or enjoyment of a devise until some time after the testator's death. In addition to the principal provision deferring distribution, the form includes an optional alternative disposition of the devised property.

For a will provision making a single devise of the testator's entire estate, see § 63.350. For a conditional devise, see § 63.410.

[b] Deferred Devises

[i] In General

A testator may wish to postpone the distribution of a particular devise until some time after the testator's death. The testator may wish, for example, to defer distribution of a devise to a minor devisee until the minor attains a specified age. This wish may be stated as a condition precedent to the vesting of the devise, or as a postponement of its enjoyment or possession. If the vesting of the devise is made subject to a condition precedent, the devise will lapse if the condition is not satisfied [ Estate of Catlett (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 315, 317, 255 P.2d 464 ]. If, on the other hand, vesting of the devise is not conditional, but possession or enjoyment of the devised property is deferred, the devise will not lapse if the condition is not satisfied but the devisee will take subject to later defeasance [ Newlove v. Mercantile Trust Co. (1909) 156 Cal. 657, 661, 105 P. 971 ].

[ii] Reference to Acts and Events of Independent Significance

Under Prob. Code § 6131, a will may dispose of property by reference to acts and events that have significance apart from their effect on the dispositions made by the will. The birthday of a devisee is an event that has significance apart from its effect on the dispositions made by the will, and a will may properly dispose of property by reference to such a birthday.

[iii] Alternative Methods of Deferral

Although language postponing or deferring the use or enjoyment of a devise may often accord with the testator's wishes, it may present difficult problems of interpretation and unnecessarily complicate administration of the estate. A provision deferring distribution over a period of years, for example, may require keeping the estate open during all of that period. The death of the devisee before fulfillment of the condition may complicate the question of who is entitled to distribution. In addition, the devisee may demonstrate a genuine need for the devise before the time set forth in the will for distribution but be unable to reach it because of the inflexibility of the will provision. For these reasons, a deferred devise will, in many cases, be less desirable than the creation of a trust, which will provide for otherwise unforeseen contingencies and which will permit the estate to be closed on distribution of the trust assets to the trustee. For a discussion of trusts and trust provisions, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions.

If the testator wishes to defer a devise until a minor reaches the age of majority, a gift under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925] may be the best way of ensuring the desired result, particularly when the amount involved is too small to warrant the expense of creating a trust. For a detailed treatment of the requirements and procedures contained in the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, see Ch. 60A, Gifts.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.416

§ 63.416 Abatement--Order of Payment of Devises

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to specify the order in which devises will abate if the testator's estate is insufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises in full. For a provision limiting nonresiduary devises to a fixed percentage of the estate, see § 63.417. For a provision stating the order of abatement of devises and expressing a preference for the testator's spouse, see § 63.418.

[b] Abatement of Devises

[i] Statutory Rules

If property disposed of by a will is not sufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to fully satisfy all devises, it may be necessary to reduce or even eliminate some devises [see Prob. Code § 10000(a) (executor may sell estate property when necessary to pay debts, devises, family allowance, expenses of administration, or taxes)]. The process whereby devises are reduced or eliminated is referred to as abatement [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406].

Under rules set forth in the Probate Code, devises abate in the following order [Prob. Code § 21402(a)].

First, property not disposed of by the will.

Second, residuary devises [see Prob. Code § 21117(f) ("residuary gift" defined)].

Third, general gifts to persons other than the testator's relatives [see Prob. Code § 21117(b) ("general gift" defined)].

Fourth, general gifts to the transferor's relatives.

Fifth, specific gifts to persons other than the testator's relatives [see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined)].

Sixth, specific gifts to the transferor's relatives.

Shares of devisees generally abate pro rata within each of the above classes [Prob. Code § 21403(a)]. To the extent that annuities and demonstrative devises are satisfied out of a particular fund or property specified in the will, they are treated as specific devises [Prob. Code § 21403(b); see Prob. Code § 21117(a) "specific gift" defined), (c) "demonstrative gift" defined), (e)("annuity" defined)]. To the extent that they are satisfied out of other property, they are treated as general devises [Prob. Code § 21403(b); see Prob. Code § 21117(b) ("general gift" defined)].

General statements in a will that the executor is to pay expenses out of the testator's estate are not sufficiently specific to override the abatement order established by Prob. Code § 21402 [ Burkett v. Capovilla (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1452, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 ].

[ii] Will Provisions

The Probate Code abatement rules are rules of construction only. They do not apply if the testator's plan (or a particular devise) would be defeated by application of the rules, or if some other scheme of abatement is necessary to effectuate the will or the testator's purpose [Prob. Code § 21400]. Since testators frequently provide for surviving spouses or children by residuary devises and for other relatives or friends by general, demonstrative, or specific devises, it will often be in the testator's interest to specify a different order of abatement. If the estate is unexpectedly reduced at the time of death, or if the estate assets are insufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises in full, most testators would prefer that devises to friends or distant relatives be reduced or eliminated before those to the spouse or children. The provisions contained in this form will effectuate this preference by clearly and explicitly stating the order in which the testator wishes the devises to abate.

This form is a will provision that may be used to limit nonresiduary devises to a fixed percentage of the estate. The form includes two alternative provisions, one that limits gifts made in a specific paragraph or paragraphs of the will, and another that limits devises to a specific devisee or devisees. In either of its alternative provisions, the form will guard against unexpected abatement of devises and provide protection for residuary devisees by insuring that nonresiduary devises will abate first. For a discussion of abatement of devises and problems arising when estate assets are not sufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises in full, see § 63.416[1]. For a pecuniary devise limited to a specified percentage of the estate, see § 63.413. For a provision directing the order of abatement of devises, see § 63.416. For a form stating the order of abatement of devises and expressing a preference for the testator's spouse, see § 63.418.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

§ 63.419 Discharge of Encumbrances on Specific Devises

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for the exoneration of encumbrances on specific devises. Two alternative provisions are included. The first exonerates a particular devise from encumbrances, while the second exonerates all specific devises. For a specific devise of real property, see § 63.440. For a specific devise of real property subject to an encumbrance, see § 63.442.

[b] Exoneration of Encumbrances

If a will makes a specific devise of property that is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien at the time of the testator's death, the devisee has a right to the property subject to the lien, without right of exoneration. This is the case even when the will includes a general directive to pay the testator's debts [Prob. Code § 21131].

Unless the will provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 21400], when a testator devises property that is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, and the will requires that the property be exonerated from the lien, other specifically devised property will not abate for the purpose of exonerating the encumbered property [Prob. Code § 21404].

[c] Abatement of Specific Devise

Property subject to a specific devise will not abate for the purpose of paying expenses of administration, funeral expenses, expenses of the testator's last illness, or a family allowance if there is other property available for that purpose [see Prob. Code § 21402(a) (order of abatement of devises); see also § 63.416[1]]. If there are expenses of administration attributable to the devised property, however, those expenses must first be paid out of income from the devised property, if any [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. For this purpose, expenses attributable to the property are expenses that result directly from the use or ownership of the property, including property taxes and taxes on income from the property, but excluding estate and generation-skipping transfer taxes [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. If income from the property is not sufficient to pay expenses attributable to the property, the deficiency must be paid out of the estate until the property is distributed to the devisee or the devisee takes possession of or occupies it, whichever occurs first [Prob. Code § 12002(c)].

Commencing one year after the testator's death, any deficiency must be charged against the share of the devisee. If the executor pays any deficiency attributable to the period commencing one year after death, the executor will have an equitable lien on the specifically devised property as against the devisee in the amount paid [Prob. Code § 12002(c)]. If a specific devise must be abated, the devisee may satisfy the contribution for abatement out of his or her other property [Prob. Code § 21405(b)].

[d] Testator's Intent

Although a general directive in the will to pay the testator's debts will not suffice to require exoneration of encumbrances on specifically devised property [Prob. Code § 21131], the testator may specifically direct that such property be exonerated. The general rules governing exoneration apply only when the intention of the testator is not indicated by the will, and the intention of the testator as evidenced in the will always controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)].

Before expressing an intention on the question of exoneration, the testator should decide whether he or she intends to devise his or her equity in the property or a devise of the property free and clear of all encumbrances. In the case of a residence or other real property, the difference in value may be substantial. The testator should also understand that exoneration of encumbrances will require abatement of other estate assets. For a general discussion of the abatement of devises to pay debts and expenses of administration, see § 63.416[1].

[2] FORM

Discharge of Encumbrances on Specific Devises

[First alternative: exoneration of particular specific devise]

I direct my Executor to pay in full any and all encumbrances, including mortgages, deeds of trust, and other liens, that may at the time of my death be charges or liens against the property described in this paragraph, or any part thereof. It is my intention that _____[name of devisee] shall take this property free and clear of all encumbrances.

[Second alternative: exoneration of all specific devises]

If any _____[real or personal or real or personal] property specifically devised in this will is subject to any encumbrance, including any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, I direct that my Executor exonerate and discharge that encumbrance in full. It is my intention that no liability for any such encumbrance shall attach to the devisee of any such devise.

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.420

§ 63.420 Devise of Insurance on Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that the devisee of specifically devised property will receive the proceeds of any insurance on the property. For a single devise of the testator's entire estate, see § 63.350. For a specific devise of personal property, see § 63.370. For a specific devise of real property, see § 63.440.

[b] Insurance on Specific Gifts

A devisee will not take specifically devised property if it is not in existence or not in the testator's estate at the time of the testator's death [see Prob. Code § 21133 (specific devisee has right to remaining property specifically given)]. Thus, if specifically devised property is destroyed or damaged after the will is executed but before the testator's death, the devise may fail and the devisee may take nothing.

A recipient of an at-death transfer of a specific gift has a right to the specifically given property, to the extent the transferor owned the property at the time the gift takes effect in possession or enjoyment, and all of the following:

- Any balance of the purchase price (together with any security agreement) owing from a purchaser to the transferor at the time the gift takes effect by reason of a sale of the property [Prob. Code § 21133(a)].
- Any amount of an eminent domain award for the taking of property unpaid at the time the gift takes effect [Prob. Code § 21133(b)].
- Any proceeds unpaid at the time the gift takes effect on fire or casualty insurance on or other recovery for injury to the property [Prob. Code § 21133(c)].

■ Property owned by the transferor at the time the gift takes effect and acquired as a result of foreclosure, or obtained in place of foreclosure, of the security interest for a specifically given obligation [Prob. Code § 21133(d)].

To protect a specific devisee against damage or destruction that may occur after death but before distribution, the testator may provide that any insurance on specifically devised property will go to the devisee rather than to the residuary estate. This form will accomplish that objective.

[2] FORM

Devise of Insurance on Property

I give _____ [describe specific property] to _____ [name of devisee], together with any insurance on that property. If this property is the subject of any claim against any insurance on it, I direct that the proceeds of any such claim be given to _____ [name of devisee].

§ 63.421 Devise to Existing Inter Vivos Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise to the trustee of an existing inter vivos trust. The inter vivos trust may be a trust that was established by the testator or by some other person. This type of devise is frequently referred to as a "pour over" and the will in which it is made as a "pour-over will."

For a will provision making a devise to a testamentary trust, see § 63.422. For a married person's will giving the residue of the estate to an inter vivos trust, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.211.

[b] Testamentary Gifts to Trusts

Although the validity of devises to existing trusts was at one time the subject of vigorous debate among lawyers and judges [see Scott & Fratcher, The Law of Trusts, 4th ed. (Little, Brown & Co. 1987), vol. IA, §§ 54.2, 54.3], their validity is now recognized. California has adopted the Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act [Prob. Code §§ 6300-6303], which explicitly validates devises to the trustee of any trust established or to be established by the testator, by another person, or by the testator and another person together [Prob. Code § 6300]. Such a devise requires only that the will identify the trust and that the terms of the trust be set forth in a written instrument. If the trust instrument is not a will, it must be a written instrument that was executed before or concurrently with the testator's will. If the trust instrument is a will, it must be the valid last will of some person who predeceased the testator [Prob. Code § 6300].

Under the Act, a devise to an existing trust is not invalid merely because the trust is amendable or revocable, or both, or because the trust was in fact amended after the execution of the testator's will or even after the testator's death. Unless the testator's will provides otherwise, property given to such a trust is not deemed to be held under a testamentary trust of the testator but becomes part of the trust to which it is given, and the property will be administered and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the original trust instrument [Prob. Code § 6300].

The property given by the testator's will will be administered in accordance with any amendments to the original trust instrument made before the testator's death (regardless of whether made before or after execution of the testator's will). If the testator's will so provides, the property may also be administered according to amendments made after the testator's death. A revocation or termination of the trust before the testator's death will cause the devise to lapse [Prob. Code § 6300].

[2] FORM*Devise to Existing Inter Vivos Trust

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to the Trustee of the _____ [name of trust] Trust, created by a Declaration of Trust dated _____, executed by _____ [name of settlor] as Settlor and _____ [name of trustee] as Trustee, [and designating _____ (name[s] of beneficiary or beneficiaries) as _____ (beneficiary or beneficiaries),] to be held, divided, administered, and distributed according to the terms of that Trust.

§ 63.422 Devise to Existing Testamentary Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise to the trustee of a testamentary trust created by someone other than the testator. For a devise to an inter vivos trust, see § 63.421. For a married person's will giving the residue of the estate to an inter vivos trust, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.211

[b] Testamentary Trustee as Devisee

Under the Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act [Prob. Code §§ 6300-6303], a will may make a devise to the trustee of a testamentary trust created by the will of some person other than the testator [Prob. Code § 6300; see § 63.421[1]]. Although the Act does not require that the other trust be in existence when the devise is made, it does require that the person who executed the will that created the other trust predecease the testator [Prob. Code § 6300]. Since a testamentary trust takes effect only on the death of the testator whose will created the trust [see Prob. Code § 15200(c) (trust may be created by testamentary transfer of property)], it is clear that such a trust could not come into existence before its creator's death.

Gifts to testamentary trusts established by other persons may suit the needs and wishes of some testators. If, for example, a member of the testator's family has already provided for a trust in his or her will (whether or not the other trust has already come into existence), and if the terms of the other trust are the same (or substantially the same) as the testator would impose if creating a new trust, the testator may wish simply to add assets to the other trust. Such a devise may be particularly appropriate if the devise that the testator proposes to make is not large enough to justify the creation of a separate trust.

[2] FORM

Devise to Existing Testamentary Trust

I give the sum of _____[specify amount] to the Trustee of the _____[name of trust] Trust, created by a will dated _____, and executed by _____[name of settlor], who died on _____[date], which will was admitted to probate and administered under the jurisdiction of the _____[name and location of court], File Number _____, and under which Trust _____[name of trustee] is named as Trustee, to be held, divided, administered, and distributed according to the terms of that Trust.

§ 63.423 Incorporation by Reference--Extrinsic Writing

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to incorporate an extrinsic writing into the will. Extrinsic writings that are commonly incorporated into wills are letters giving instructions for the testator's funeral and burial, deeds to real property, trust agreements, contracts, and other wills. The writing illustrated in this form is a memorandum executed by the testator, but any other extrinsic writing may be incorporated in the same manner. For a provision incorporating an antenuptial agreement between the testator and the testator's spouse, see § 63.424.

[b] Incorporation by Reference

A writing in existence when a will is executed may be incorporated by reference if the language of the will manifests this intent and describes the writing sufficiently to permit its identification [Prob. Code § 6130]. The extrinsic writing may be of any kind or character, formal or informal, and may be written by the testator or by another person [see Estate of Foxworth (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 784, 788-790, 50 Cal. Rptr. 237].

Prob. Code § 6130 adopts the traditional requirements for incorporation by reference. The requisites for incorporation by reference, as articulated in the case law, are the following [ Simon v. Grayson (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 531, 533, 102 P.2d 1081 ; Estate of Foxworth (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 784 ; 788-789, 50 Cal. Rptr. 237 ] :

- The extrinsic paper must be in existence at the time the will makes reference to it;
- The will must identify the paper by a sufficiently certain description (extrinsic evidence is admissible as an aid to such identification); and
- It must appear that the testator intended to incorporate the paper for the purpose of carrying out his or her testamentary desires.

The extrinsic writing must be in existence when the will is executed, since to allow the incorporation of a writing to be prepared at a later time would permit the testator to dispose of property without complying with the formalities required for the execution of wills [see Estate of Bauer (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 636, 638, 124 P.2d 630].

Attorneys should note that Prob. Code § 6132 offers a limited exception to the traditional requirements for incorporation by reference for testators who want to make modest gifts ($25,000 total maximum value / $5,000 maximum per item) of tangible personal property in a separate writing. Other statutory requirements also apply, including the requirement that an unrevoked will must specifically refer to the writing [Prob. Code § 6132(a); see § 63.494 (will provision referring to writing)]. A writing that qualifies under Prob. Code § 6132 may be written or signed either before or after the execution of the will [Prob. Code § 6132(c)], and also may be amended from time to time thereafter [Prob. Code § 6132(d)]. If the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132 are met, the writing will be given effect as if it were actually contained in the will itself [Prob. Code § 6132(c)].

This form is designed to meet the traditional requirements for incorporation by reference under Prob. Code § 6130, not the exception for gifts of tangible personal property under Prob. Code § 6132 noted above. For a detailed discussion of the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132, and a form for a separate writing that meets the requirements of that section, see § 63.495. For a will provision incorporating a separate writing or writings making gifts of tangible personal property, see § 63.494.

[c] Advantages and Disadvantages of Incorporation

There are various reasons why a testator may wish to incorporate an extrinsic writing into the will. The extrinsic writing may be a lengthy document, and it may be impractical to set forth all of its terms in the will. The extrinsic writing may contain terms or information that the testator wishes to conceal from persons who will have access to the will before the testator's death.

There are, however, inherent dangers in incorporation. An extrinsic writing may be amended, altered, revoked, or destroyed after the incorporation. If the extrinsic writing is not in existence when the will is offered for probate, problems of proof may be difficult or even impossible. If the extrinsic writing has been amended or altered, the date of the amendment or alteration may be critical. Since a writing that is not in existence when the will is executed may not be incorporated into the will, it follows (although there is no express authority on this point) that an amendment or alteration that is not in existence when the will is executed may not be incorporated.

If the testator wishes to incorporate an extrinsic writing into the will, the attorney should carefully evaluate the writing and determine if problems of proof or identification are likely to arise after the testator's death. If the extrinsic document is altered or amended after execution of the will, the attorney should advise the testator to execute a codicil referring to the amended document to comply with the requirement that the extrinsic writing be in existence at the time the will is executed [for discussion, see Ch. 62, Codicils].

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.424

§ 63.424 Incorporation by Reference--Antenuptial Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to refer to and incorporate into the will the terms of a premarital agreement executed by the testator and the testator's spouse. For a discussion of incorporation by reference and the requisites of an effective incorporation, together with a general provision incorporating an extrinsic writing by reference, see § 63.423.

[b] Premarital Agreements

Under the California Uniform Premarital Agreement Act [Fam. Code §§ 1600-1617], parties to a premarital agreement may contract with regard to various matters including the rights and obligations of the parties in any of the property of either or both of them [Fam. Code § 1612(a)(1)] and the making of a will, trust, or other arrangement to carry out the provisions of the agreement [Fam. Code § 1612(a)(4)]. However, premarital agreements are subject to restrictions that do not apply to other agreements. For example, a premarital agreement becomes effective only on the marriage of the parties [Fam. Code §§ 1610(a), 1613] and is not enforceable if the party against whom enforcement is sought proves that the agreement was unconscionable when it was executed and that before the agreement's execution all of the following applied to that party [Fam. Code § 1615(a)(2)]:

- He or she was not provided a fair and reasonable disclosure of the property or financial obligations of the other party;
- He or she did not voluntarily and expressly waive, in writing, any right to disclosure of the property or financial obligations of the other party beyond the disclosure provided; and
- He or she did not have, or reasonably could not have had, an adequate knowledge of the property or financial obligations of the other party.

A premarital agreement must be in writing and signed by both parties, although it is enforceable without consideration [Fam. Code § 1611].

A premarital agreement may or may not include an agreement to make a will or devise, or other instrument, or not to revoke a will or devise or other instrument, or to die intestate. Any agreement to make a will or devise or other instrument, not to revoke a will or devise or other instrument, or to die intestate must satisfy the requirements of Prob. Code § 21700. For a general consideration of contracts to make wills, not to make wills, or to die intestate, see § 63.694[1]. For a will provision stating that such a contract has not been made, see § 63.693. For a will provision confirming that such a contract has been made, see § 63.694. For a general consideration of the legal requirements of premarital agreements, together with forms for complete agreements and optional premarital agreement provisions, see Ch. 108, Antenuptial Agreements .

Incorporation by Reference--Antenuptial Agreement

Under the terms of a written premarital agreement made between my _____ [wife or husband], _____ [name], and me, dated _____, my _____ [wife or husband] relinquished certain rights in my separate property existing at that time and in any separate property that I might thereafter acquire [add, if applicable: and waived any interest in my earnings, salaries, commissions, or other income that _____ (he or she) would otherwise have owned as our community property]. In consideration of that relinquishment, and as a part of that agreement, I promised that, upon my death, _____ [he or she] would receive _____ [state sum of money or other agreed disposition] from my estate. I hereby direct my executor to carry out the provisions of that agreement.

§ 63.425 Payment for Delivery of Specific Gifts

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to direct the executor to deliver a specifically devised gift to the intended beneficiary and to pay the costs of delivery out of the residuary estate. For a specific legacy, see § 63.370.

[b] Purpose of Provision

When the testator makes specific gifts of tangible personal property, delivery to the intended beneficiary may involve shipping expenses. If it is the testator's intention that those expenses be paid out of the estate, the will should state that fact. If the intended beneficiary is unable to take immediate possession of the property, storage may be necessary, and, if insurance on items of personal property in the testator's estate does not cover those items while in transit, additional insurance may be required. This form requires the executor to pay the cost of storage incidental to transportation and to insure the goods. It may be modified to provide for the payment of any other expenses incidental to delivery that can be anticipated.

[2] FORM

Payment for Delivery of Specific Gifts

If the beneficiary of any gift provided for in this will desires that all or any part of the property so given be delivered to him or her, my executor shall cause delivery to be made, and shall pay out of the residue of my estate all the costs and expenses of packing, shipping, insurance, and storage incidental to delivery that my executor shall deem reasonable, necessary, and appropriate.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

4. Provisions Affecting Devises

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.426

§ 63.426 Advancement--Deduction of Lifetime Transfers From Testamentary Gifts

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to state whether or not transfers made to beneficiaries under the will during the testator's lifetime are to be deducted from the testamentary dispositions in favor of those beneficiaries. The form includes a general provision stating that no transfer made during the testator's lifetime will be considered as an advancement or ademption. It also contains two alternative provisions, one stating that specific gifts made in the will are not to be reduced by prospective lifetime transfers, and the other stating that specific gifts are to be reduced by any such transfers. For a provision stating whether lifetime gifts or transfers will adeem residuary bequests, see § 63.591.

[b] Advancement

Property given by a transferor during his or her lifetime to a person is treated as a satisfaction of an at-death transfer to that person, in whole or in part, only if one of the following conditions is satisfied:

- The instrument provides for deduction of the lifetime gift from the at-death transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(1)].
- The transferor declares in a contemporaneous writing that the gift is in satisfaction of the at-death transfer or that its value is to be deducted from the value of that transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(2)].
- The transferee acknowledges in writing that the gift is in satisfaction of the at-death transfer or that its value is to be deducted from the value of that transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(3)].
- The property given is the same property that is the subject of a specific gift to that person [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(4)].

When a lifetime gift is to be treated as a partial satisfaction of a testamentary gift, a value must be assigned to it. If the value is expressed in a contemporaneous writing of the testator, or in an acknowledgment made by the devisee contemporaneously with the gift, that value is conclusive in the division and distribution of the estate [Prob. Code § 21135(c)]. If no value has been expressed in a contemporaneous writing of the testator or in an acknowledgment by the devisee, the property must be valued as of the time the devisee came into possession or enjoyment, or as of the time of the testator's death, whichever occurs first [Prob. Code § 21135(b)].

If the transferee fails to survive the transferor, the gift is treated as a full or partial satisfaction of the gift in applying Prob. Code §§ 21110 and 21111, unless the transferor's contemporaneous writing provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 21135(d)].

[c] Practical Considerations

Except in unusual cases, it is better for the will to remain silent on the question of whether lifetime gifts are to be deducted from testamentary dispositions. A will provision dealing with this issue builds in unnecessary inflexibility by making it more difficult for the testator to deal with advancement or ademption on a case-by-case basis. If, for example, the will provides that lifetime gifts are not to be deducted from testamentary gifts, and the testator later decides to advance to one of the beneficiaries all or part of that beneficiary's inheritance, it will be necessary to prepare a codicil to the will to eliminate confusion. By the same token, if the will provides that lifetime gifts will be deducted from the beneficiary's share, the testator must go to the trouble of changing the will if he or she decides that a particular gift should not be deducted.

It is much easier, and simpler, if the will simply says nothing about advancement. Then, if the testator does decide that a particular gift should be an advancement on a beneficiary's inheritance, the testator can execute a declaration to that effect at the time the transfer is made, without any need to change the terms of the will.

[2] FORM

Advancement--Deduction of Lifetime Transfers From Testamentary Gifts

[If testamentary gifts are not to be reduced by the amount of any lifetime transfers:]

Any gift or other transfer of any of my property that I have made or shall make during my lifetime to any beneficiary under this will shall not be deemed an ademption of any gift I have made to that person in this will, nor shall any such gift or transfer reduce or satisfy any gift I have made to that person in this will.

The _____ [gift or gifts] that I have made to _____ [name or names of beneficiaries] in Paragraph[s] _____ [number or numbers] of this will shall not be reduced by any lifetime gift or other transfer which I have made or shall hereafter make to _____ [him or her or them], nor shall any such lifetime gift or transfer reduce or satisfy any provision I have made for _____ [him or her or them] in this will, [unless the beneficiary acknowledges in writing that a lifetime gift or transfer is in whole or partial satisfaction of a gift that I have made in this will].

The gift[s] that I have made to _____ [name(s) of devisee(s)] in Paragraph[s] _____ of this will shall be reduced by any lifetime gifts that I may hereafter make to _____ [him or her or them].

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

5. Devises of Real Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.440

§ 63.440 Specific Devise of Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise of real property. Since the subject of the devise is specifically identifiable property, the devise is a specific devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific gift" defined)]. For a discussion of specific devises, including rules relating to ademption and lapse of specific devises, see § 63.370[1]. For a general discussion of types or classifications of devises, see § 63.351[1][b].

For a will provision making a specific devise of personal property, see § 63.370. For a devise of real property to more than one person, see § 63.441. For a devise of a farm, see § 63.443. For a devise of a leasehold interest, see § 63.444. For a pecuniary devise to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of real property, see § 63.445.

[b] Real Property Subject to Encumbrance

If the real property being devised is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien existing at the date of death, the testator should consider whether the property should pass with or without the encumbrance. When a will makes a specific devise of property and, at the time of the testator's death, the property is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, the devisee has a right to the property subject to the lien, without right of exoneration. This is the case even when the will includes a general directive to pay the testator's debts [Prob. Code § 21131]. However, the testator may require exoneration by specific language in the will [see Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intention of testator controlling)]. For a devise of real property subject to an encumbrance, and more detailed discussion of the statutory rules governing exoneration of encumbrances, see § 63.442.

[c] Survival and Lapse

A specific devise of real property, like other testamentary gifts, may be conditioned on survival of the testator, or on survival for a specified time after the testator's death. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, does not take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)].

If the devisee is "kindred" of the testator, or of a surviving, deceased, or former spouse of the testator, the relationship should be stated, since this may determine whether the devise will lapse [see Prob. Code § 21110 ("anti-lapse statute")].

The will should also specify whether the devise will lapse if the devisee predeceases the testator or fails to survive the testator for a time specified in the will. For a clause providing that the issue of kindred devisees will not take any devise made to their ancestors, see § 63.654.

[d] Property Destroyed, Damaged, Altered, or Taken in Eminent Domain

If specifically devised property is destroyed or damaged after the will is executed but before the testator's death, the devise is generally deemed (extinguished) [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(a) (specific gift as gift of specifically identifiable property), 21133 (specific devisee entitled to remaining property specifically given)]. If the testator does not wholly dispose of the property, however, but merely alters his or her interest in it, the specific devisee has the right to the testator's remaining interest in the property [Prob. Code § 21133.].

A recipient of an at-death transfer of a specific gift has a right to the specifically given property, to the extent the transferor owned the property at the time the gift takes effect in possession or enjoyment, and all of the following:

- Any balance of the purchase price (together with any security agreement) owing from a purchaser to the transferor at the time the gift takes effect by reason of a sale of the property [Prob. Code § 21133(a)].
- Any amount of an eminent domain award for the taking of property unpaid at the time the gift takes effect [Prob. Code § 21133(b)].
- Any proceeds unpaid at the time the gift takes effect on fire or casualty insurance on or other recovery for injury to the property [Prob. Code § 21133(c)].
- Property owned by the transferor at the time the gift takes effect and acquired as a result of foreclosure, or obtained in place of foreclosure, of the security interest for a specifically given obligation [Prob. Code § 21133(d)].

For a provision giving a specific devisee the proceeds of any insurance on specifically devised property, see § 63.420.

Specific Devise of Real Property

I give to _____ [name of devisee] all of my interest in and to that certain real property situated in the [City of _____,] County of _____, State of _____, and commonly known as _____ [description, e.g., 100 Broad Street, Small Town, California 94001].

5. Devises of Real Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.441

§ 63.441 Devise of Real Property to More Than One Person

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a testamentary disposition of real property to two or more named beneficiaries. It includes an optional clause providing that if one or more of the beneficiaries fails to survive the testator, the share or shares that would have gone to the nonsurviving beneficiary will go to the survivor(s). This form may be modified to express any other intent of the testator.

For a specific devise of the testator's entire interest in real property to one person, and general discussion relevant to all testamentary gifts of real property, see § 63.440.

[b] Form of Ownership

Although the testator may provide that property devised to more than one devisee will vest in the devisees as joint owners, in many cases it will be preferable to allow the property to vest in the devisees as owners in common. A beneficiary who takes as an owner in common rather than as a joint owner has a descendible interest and one that may be the subject of the beneficiary's own testamentary disposition, while a beneficiary who takes as a joint owner does not.

[c] Survival and Lapse of Gifts

When a devise is made to two or more persons, it is good practice to specify what disposition will be made of the devise if one of the devisees does not survive the testator. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, cannot take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)]. For a discussion of gifts conditioned on survival until a future time and a provision establishing such a condition, see § 63.411. The testator may provide that the equal interest that would have gone to the beneficiary who did not survive the testator (or did not survive until a future time required by the will) will go to the nonsurviving beneficiary's issue or heirs. If the testator does not wish to name alternative beneficiaries, the will may identify the takers as a class [for a class gift, see § 63.551].

Devise of Real Property to More Than One Person

I give all of my interest in and to that certain real property situated in the [City of _____ (name of city),] County of _____ [name of county], State of _____ [name of state], and commonly known as _____ [description, e.g., 100 Broad Street, Smalltown, California 94001] to _____ [names of beneficiaries], as tenants in common, in equal shares, share and share alike [or, if interests are to be unequally distributed, specify fractional share that will go to each named individual, e.g., in the following proportions: one-sixth to _____ (name), two-sixths to _____ (name), and three-sixths to _____ (name)]. If one or more of the above-named beneficiaries does not survive me, then I give the share that would have gone to that beneficiary had he or she survived me to the other surviving _____ [beneficiary or beneficiaries, in equal shares].

If _____ [neither or none] of the beneficiaries named in this paragraph survives me, then this gift shall lapse and shall become part of the residue of my estate.

[OR]

If _____ [neither or none] of the beneficiaries named in this paragraph shall survive me, then this gift shall be divided into _____ [specify number] equal shares, one equal share to be set aside for each of the above-named beneficiaries. Each equal share shall be distributed on the principle of representation to those issue of the beneficiary for whom that share has been set aside who survive me. If one or more of the beneficiaries named in this paragraph should have no issue who survive me, then the share which would have gone to the nonsurviving beneficiary had he or she survived me shall be added equally to the remaining shares of those beneficiaries having issue who survive me. If _____ [neither or none] of the above beneficiaries have issue who survive me, this gift shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

5. Devises of Real Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.442

§ 63.442 Devise of Real Property--Exoneration of Encumbrance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for the exoneration of encumbrances on real property devised in the will. For a specific devise of a testator's entire interest in real property and general discussion of testamentary gifts of real property, see § 63.440. For a provision requiring the discharge of encumbrances on real or personal property specifically devised, see § 63.419.

Unless the will provides otherwise [see Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intention of testator controlling)], when a will makes a specific devise of property and, at the time of the testator's death, the property is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, the devisee has a right to the property subject to the lien, without right of exoneration. This is the case even when the will includes a general directive to pay the testator's debts [Prob. Code § 21131].

When a testator devises real or personal property that is subject to a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, and the will requires that the property be exonerated from the lien, other specifically devised property will not be sold for the purpose of exonerating the encumbered property [Prob. Code § 21404] unless the will expressly requires such a sale [see Prob. Code § 21400 (will may provide for abatement of gifts made by will)].

[c] Liability for Debts, Expenses, Family Allowance, and Taxes

Property subject to a specific devise will not abate for the purpose of paying expenses of administration, funeral expenses, expenses of the testator's last illness, or a family allowance if there is other property available for that purpose [see Prob. Code § 21402(a) (order of abatement of devises); see also § 63.416[1]]. If there are expenses of administration attributable to the devised property, however, those expenses must first be paid out of income on the devised property, if any [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. If a specific devise must be abated, the devisee may satisfy the contribution for abatement out of his or her other property [Prob. Code § 21405(b)]. For further discussion of rules relating to the abatement of specific devises, see § 63.419[1][c].

[d] Testator's Intent

Although a general directive in the will to pay the testator's debts will not suffice to require exoneration of encumbrances on specifically devised property [Prob. Code § 21131], the testator may specifically require that the property be exonerated. The general rules for interpretation of wills apply only when the intention of the testator is not otherwise indicated by the will [see Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intention of testator controlling)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)].

Before expressing an intention on the question of exoneration, the testator should determine the extent of the property interest that he or she intends to devise--in other words, whether the property will be free and clear of all encumbrances, or whether it will be a gift of the testator's equity in the devised property only. In the case of a residence or other parcel of real estate, the difference in value between these two interests may be substantial, and exoneration of the encumbrance may substantially deplete the remainder of the testator's estate. For a discussion of the abatement of testamentary gifts to pay debts and expenses of administration, see § 63.416[1].

Devise of Real Property--Exoneration of Encumbrance

I give to _____ [name of devisee] all of my interest in and to that certain real property situated in the [City of _____,] County of _____, State of _____, and commonly known as _____ [description, e.g., 100 Broad Street, Smalltown, California 94001]. I direct my Executor to pay in full any and all encumbrances, including mortgages, deeds of trust, and other liens, that may at the time of my death be charges or liens against the property, or any part thereof. It is my intention that _____ [name of devisee] shall take the property free and clear of any such encumbrances.

Specific Devise of Farm

I give to _____ [name of devisee] that certain farm situated in the [City of _____,] County of _____, State of _____, and commonly known as _____ [description, e.g., the Smith Ranch], together with any other real estate I may own at the time of my death that is used as a part of the farming operation conducted on that farm, whether or not that other real estate is physically connected to or contiguous with the farm. This gift also includes all machinery, trucks, automobiles, farm animals, [bank accounts,] and other property used in connection with the operation of the farm, but does not include any of my personal automobiles or effects.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

5. Devises of Real Property

§ 63.444 Devise of Leasehold Interest

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to devise of a leasehold interest in real property.

A leasehold interest in real property may be the subject of a testamentary disposition [ Burns v. McGraw (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485, 171 P.2d 148 ]. Unless the lease specifically provides that the lessee's interest will terminate on his or her death, the lessee may transfer the leasehold interest by will, despite a clause prohibiting assignment without consent of the lessor [ Burns v. McGraw (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 481, 488, 171 P.2d 148 ]. A lease is a form of contract, and contracts do not terminate on the death of the parties unless they contain specific provisions to that effect [ Horning v. Ladd (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 806, 810, 321 P.2d 795 ]. Contracts will be construed, whenever possible, to avoid forfeiture, and the party claiming a forfeiture has the burden of proving the right to it [ Horning v. Ladd (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 806, 810, 321 P.2d 795 ]. Provisions often found in leases to the effect that the terms and conditions of the lease "are binding on the parties, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns" will lend authority to any claim that a leasehold interest survives the death of the lessor and may be disposed of in the lessee's will [ Burns v. McGraw (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 481, 487, 171 P.2d 148 ], though the devisability of a leasehold interest in every case depends on the terms of the lease.

[b] Effect of Clause Prohibiting Assignment

A clause prohibiting assignment does not automatically make an assignment void, but instead gives the lessor a right to pursue whatever remedies may be available on account of the breach [ Sexton v. Nelson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 248, 258, 39 Cal. Rptr. 407 ]. A prohibition of assignment is a personal covenant for the benefit of the lessor and, until the lessor asserts the breach and declares a forfeiture of the lease, the assignment is valid and binding on all other parties [ Weisman v. Clark (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 764, 767, 43 Cal. Rptr. 108 ].

The lessor cannot accept inconsistent remedies. If the lessor protests the assignment but accepts rent, the provision against assignment is waived [ Buchanan v. Banta (1928) 204 Cal. 73, 76, 266 P. 547 ]. A lessor's refusal to accept the assignment and an assertion that the assignment is void does not terminate the lease or void the assignment unless the lessor also declares a forfeiture of the lease and demands possession of the premises [ People v. Klopstock (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 897, 901, 151 P.2d 641 ].

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

5. Devises of Real Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.445

§ 63.445 Pecuniary Devise to Be Paid Out of Proceeds of Sale of Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a gift of money (a pecuniary devise) [see Prob. Code § 21118(b) ("pecuniary gift" defined)] and to direct that the money be paid out of the proceeds of a sale of specific real property owned by the testator. For a general provision for a pecuniary devise, see § 63.351. For a general provision for a devise of real property, see § 63.440. For a general discussion of devises of real property, see § 63.440[1].

[b] Pecuniary Devise to Be Paid From Proceeds of Sale

If the will makes a pecuniary devise and directs that it be satisfied out of proceeds of the sale of specific real property owned by the testator, there is a question whether the testator intended the devise to be specific, and thus subject to ademption, or demonstrative, and not subject to ademption.

Under the Probate Code rules for interpretation of wills, a pecuniary devise is typically a "general" rather than a "specific" devise [see Prob. Code § 21117 (classification of gifts made under wills, trusts, and other instruments)]. While a specific devise is subject to ademption if the specifically devised property is not in the testator's estate at the time of death [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(a) (specific gift as gift of specifically identifiable property), 21133 (specific devisee entitled to remaining property specifically given)], a general devise, which is payable from the general assets of the estate, is not [see Prob. Code § 21117(b) ("general gift" defined)]. The Probate Code defines a "demonstrative" gift as a "general" gift that specifies the fund or property from which it is "primarily" to be made [Prob. Code § 21117(c)]. If the specified fund or or property fails, in whole or in part, a demonstrative devise may be satisfied as other general devises are satisfied, out of the general assets of the estate [see Prob. Code § 21403(b) (demonstrative gift treated as general gift if satisfied out of property other than fund or property specified)].

The Probate Code classifications, however, are rules of construction only. They apply only when the intention of the testator is not indicated by the will, and are subject to the fundamental rule that the intentions of the testator as expressed in the will control the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a), (b)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)].

In determining the legal effect of any will provision, the courts are always guided by intent of the testator as expressed in the will, if that intent can be ascertained [ Estate of Russell (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 200, 205, 70 Cal. Rptr. 561, 444 P.2d 353 ]. In one case, for example, the testator gave $2,000 to each of his daughters and directed that the money be "raised" by the sale of a specific parcel of real property. The residue was left to the testator's wife. The court held that the devises to the daughters were specific and not demonstrative, explaining that when the proceeds of specific property are the subject of a devise, or when specific land is designated as the exclusive source for payment of a devise, the devise is specific [ Estate of Sullivan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 144, 147, 274 P.2d 946 ]. In another case, the testator gave the residue of the estate to a trust and directed that the trust be divided into two funds. Fund B was to be funded with a specific parcel of real property. The court held that this devise was specific and not residuary, explaining that if the testator's intent is to give a particular sum of money, not generally, but only from a specified and definitely ascertained source, the devise is specific [ Estate of Loescher (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 589, 594, 284 P.2d 902 ]. If the source fails, so does the devise.

[d] Will Provisions

A careful will drafter will not rely on judicial interpretation to clarify an otherwise uncertain or ambiguous will provision, but will state the testator's intentions in unambiguous terms. This form offers two optional clauses, either of which may be added to the principal provision to specify the testator's intentions with respect to whether the pecuniary devise is to be specific or demonstrative. The first option states that if proceeds from the sale of the specific real property are insufficient to satisfy the pecuniary devise in full, there will be no resort to other assets of the estate to satisfy it. If this clause is used, the devise will be specific. The second option states that if proceeds of the sale of the specific property are insufficient to satisfy the pecuniary devise in full, other assets of the estate will be resorted to in order to satisfy the devise. If the second option is included, the devise will be demonstrative.

[e] Sale Proceeds Treated as Personal Property

Unless a contrary intention is indicated by the will, if a will directs the conversion of real property into money, the property and its proceeds are deemed personal property from the time of the testator's death [Prob. Code § 21107]. Under the principle of "equitable conversion," when the will directs that property be sold and converted into money, the law regards as done that which ought to be done, and the property is considered personal from the date of death, regardless of when the sale takes place [see Estate of Gracey (1927) 200 Cal. 482, 490, 253 P. 921 ].

[2] FORM

Pecuniary Devise to Be Paid Out of Proceeds of Sale of Real Property

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of devisee], to be paid from the proceeds of the sale of my _____ [describe property, e.g., apartment house or residence] located at _____ [street address, city, state].

[If devise is intended to be specific, add following:]

This devise is intended to be specific, and in the event that the proceeds of the sale of my _____[

describe property] are insufficient to fully satisfy this devise, or if my _____ [describe property] is not in my estate at the time of my death, resort is not to be had to other assets of my estate to satisfy it.

[Or, if devise is intended to be demonstrative, use following alternative:]

This devise is intended to be demonstrative, and in the event that the proceeds of the sale of my _____ [describe property] are insufficient to fully satisfy this devise, or if my _____ [describe property] is not in my estate at the time of my death, I direct that resort shall be had to the general assets of my estate to satisfy it.

5. Devises of Real Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.446

§ 63.446 Option to Purchase Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give a named person an option to purchase property owned by the testator. For a specific devise of real property, see § 63.440. For a specific devise of a farm, see § 63.443. For a devise of a leasehold interest, see § 63.444. For a pecuniary devise to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of real property, see § 63.445.

[b] Options Given by Will

[i] In General

An option to purchase property owned by a testator may be set forth in the testator's will. Options created by will are subject to rules set forth in the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 9885, 9980-9983].

When a will gives any person an option to purchase real or personal property, the option may be exercised at any time within the limits provided by the will [Prob. Code § 9980(a)]. If a time limitation in the will is measured from the death of the testator, the time must be extended by the period between the testator's death and the issuance of letters, or by six months, whichever is the shorter period [Prob. Code § 9980(a)]. If the will does not provide a time limit for exercise of the option, the time limit is one year from the death of the decedent [Prob. Code § 9980(b)]. If, before the expiration of an option, property still subject to the option is distributed, it must be distributed subject to the option [Prob. Code § 9980(c)].

[ii] Exercise of Option Given to Executor

Although personal representatives [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" includes executor)] are generally forbidden to purchase estate property for their own account [see Prob. Code § 9880; see also Ch. 65, Executors, § 65.285[1]], a personal representative may exercise an option given him or her by the will, providing the other requirements for exercise of options are satisfied [Prob. Code § 9885].

[iii] Court Order Directing Transfer or Conveyance

If the rights of creditors are adequately protected [see Prob. Code § 9982; see also § 63.446[1][b][iii]] when an option to purchase property is given in a will admitted to probate, the court may direct the personal representative to transfer or convey the property to the person given the option on compliance with the terms and conditions stated in the will [Prob. Code § 9981(a)]. A petition for an order directing the transfer or conveyance may be filed by the executor or by the person given the option [Prob. Code § 9881].

[iv] Rights of Creditors

Sale of property by exercise of an option is subject to the rights of creditors of the estate [see Prob. Code §§ 9000 et seq. (creditor claims), 11400-11467 (payment of debts)]. The court cannot make an order directing the executor to sell property pursuant to an option unless it (1) determines that the sale will not impair the rights of creditors [Prob. Code § 9882(a)] or (2) requires a bond [Prob. Code § 9882(b)].

[2] FORM

Option to Purchase Property

Option

I give _____ [name] of _____ [place] an option to purchase the following property: _____ [describe property, e.g.: the 100-acre ranch owned by me in Mendocino County, California, and generally known as "Quicksilver Ranch," together with all improvements, fixtures, equipment, and animals located thereon]. This option may be exercised by giving written notice to my Executor no later than _____ [specify time, e.g.: 180 days after the date of my death] of the intention to exercise the option. The total purchase price for all property subject to the option shall be _____ [specify price and terms of payment, e.g.: $200,000 in cash, all payable within 60 days of the date of exercise of the option]. I authorize and direct my Executor to sell the property described in this paragraph to _____ [name of optionee] on the terms and conditions, and at the price, specified in this option.

§ 63.460 Devise of Sole Proprietorship Business

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to devise the assets of a business owned by the testator as a sole proprietor. The form includes an optional survivorship clause and an alternative disposition, to dispose of the business if the initial devisee does not survive the testator, or does not survive until a time specified in the devise. A devisee who does not survive the testator, or who does not survive until a future time required by the will, does not take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, deeds, and other instruments)].

For a provision authorizing the executor to continue (or to sell) a business, see § 63.461. For a provision stating that expenses attributable to the business are to be paid by the business, see § 63.462. For a provision dividing a business and its assets between two or more persons, see § 63.463. For a devise of an interest in a partnership, see § 63.464. For a devise of stock in a closely held corporation, see § 63.465.

[b] Nature and Characteristics of Sole Proprietorship Business

A sole proprietorship is a form of business in which one person owns all of the assets and is liable for all of the debts. It differs from other types of business enterprises, such as corporations and partnerships, in that it has no independence of existence apart from that of the owner. A sole proprietorship typically depends in large measure on the personal knowledge, skills, and management of the owner, and when the owner dies what remains are the business assets, such as fixtures, inventory, customers lists, and, to the extent not dependent on the owner personally, the goodwill.

[c] Continuation of Business after Owner's Death

The owners of sole proprietorship businesses often wish to assure that the businesses will continue in some form after their retirement or death. When the client expresses such a wish, the attorney should ascertain if there is any person, such as a trusted employee or manager, who would be willing and able to operate the business after the client's departure. If so, the attorney should also determine what incentives, if any, that person would have to continue in the business. The attorney may suggest that the person be given an equity interest in the business, or an opportunity to purchase such an interest. This may require that the business be reorganized into some other legal form, such as a partnership or corporation.

It is almost always better to plan for the continuation of a sole proprietorship business after the owner's death by reorganizing it during the owner's lifetime. If the client is unwilling to do this, however, and if the client insists on attempting to dispose of the business by will, the attorney should prepare a will provision devising the assets of the business to the intended beneficiaries.

A devise of business assets may be outright or in trust, and may be designed to transfer the assets to one or more than one devisee. In any case, the devise should clearly identify all assets that are to be included in the devise. If there are any assets used in or associated with the business that the testator does not wish to include in the devise (e.g., a patent owned by the testator but covering a product manufactured by the business), the devise should clearly state that the asset is not included.

Proper planning for the continuation of businesses owned by clients is complex and demanding. For a general discussion of business planning, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 29, Devises of Business Interests (Matthew Bender).

Devise of Sole Proprietorship Business

I give all of my right, title, and interest in and to all of the assets of _____ [describe business, e.g., the whole machine tool business owned and operated by me under the name and style of Williams Tool Works, with principal place of business at 1400 Ocean Boulevard, San Felipe, California,] to _____ [name of devisee(s) and relationship to testator or other means of identification, e.g., my son, John J. Williams, Jr.] [if desired, add survivorship clause, e.g., if he survives me or if he survives me for 60 days.] [If gift is conditioned on survival, add alternative disposition, e.g., If he does not survive me (for that period), this gift shall _____ (e.g., lapse and become part of the residue of my estate or go to my grandson John J. Williams, III).] This gift shall include all of the inventory, stock-in-trade, equipment, machinery, supplies, accounts receivable, cash on hand, bank accounts and similar deposits, leases, good will, and other property (tangible or intangible) used in connection with the business at the time of my death. [If testator wishes to include or exclude particular property, add appropriate language, e.g., This gift shall include United States Patent No. _____, relating to an improved process for the manufacture of die stamping machines, and all of my right, title, and interest in and to the Royalty Agreement executed on April 1, 1998, by and between me and Machine Processors Corporation, a California corporation, providing for the payment to me of royalties or use of that patent or However, this gift shall not include the oil portrait of me that is currently displayed in the office lobby of the business at 1400 Ocean Boulevard, San Felipe, California.]

6. Devise of Business Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.461

§ 63.461 Authorization to Continue or to Sell Unincorporated Business

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to authorize the executor to continue the operation of an unincorporated business belonging to the estate. It includes an optional provision authorizing the executor to sell or liquidate the business.

For a devise of a sole proprietorship business, see § 63.460. For a provision stating that expenses attributable to an unincorporated business are to be paid by the business, see § 63.462. For a provision dividing a business and its assets between two or more persons, see § 63.463. For a devise of an interest in a partnership, see § 63.464. For a devise of shares in a closely held corporation, see § 63.465.

[b] Power to Continue Operation of Business

[i] In General

The executor may continue to operate an unincorporated, non-partnership business owned by the estate, with or without court authorization, for a period of up to six months following his or her appointment, if it is to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the interested persons [see Prob. Code § 48 (definition)] to do so [Prob. Code § 9760(b); see also Prob. Code § 9760(a) (definition of "decedent's business" excludes partnership in which decedent was a partner)]. The executor may at any time request court authorization to continue operation of the business; however, he or she must do so not more than six months from the date of his or her appointment [Prob. Code § 9760(b)]. Any operation of the business by the executor beyond the six-month limitation requires a court order authorizing the continuation [Prob. Code § 9760(b); see discussion in § 63.461[1][b][iii]].

Upon a noticed petition by the executor or any interested person, the court may authorize the executor to continue operation of an unincorporated, non-partnership business owned by the decedent or direct the executor to discontinue operation of the business. The petition must show the advantage to the estate and the benefit to the interested persons of the order requested. The order may then be granted with any restrictions that the court determines to be in the best interests of the estate and those interested in it [Prob. Code § 9760(c), (d); see Prob. Code § 1220 (notice of hearing)].

[ii] Partnership Interests

A partnership is an association formed by two or more persons to carry on a business as co-owners for profit [see Corp. Code § 16101(9); Civ. Code § 684]. In a partnership, the partners have no specific interest in partnership property but merely own an interest in the partnership business, with a right to participate in its profits, losses, and distributions [Corp. Code §§ 16203, 16401, 16502]. For additional discussion of the law applicable to partnerships, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12[7].

Estate planning for partnership interests is most effectively handled by drafting buy-sell agreements with specific terms providing either for the dissolution of the partnership business on the death of a partner or the continuation of the partnership business after a partner's death and the purchase of the deceased partner's interest in the business from the deceased partner's personal representative, devisees, or heirs.

Under the former version of the Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq., repealed effective January 1, 1999; see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12[7]], if one of the partners died, the probate court could order the personal representative of the deceased partner to continue as a general partner in the partnership [see Prob. Code § 9762]. The probate court had discretion to specify the terms and conditions of that continuation [Prob. Code § 9762(a)]. If there was a written partnership agreement giving the personal representative the right to participate as a partner, the personal representative would have all of the rights, powers, duties, and obligations provided in it, except as otherwise ordered by the court [Prob. Code § 9762(b)]. If there was no such agreement, the court would specify the personal representative's rights, powers, duties and obligations [Prob. Code § 9762(c)].

Under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94) [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.], which governs all partnerships regardless of when they were formed [Corp. Code § 16111(b); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12[7]], the court's authority to make such an order is not as clear. The UPA '94 specifically provides that the rights and duties of surviving partners and the legal representatives of deceased partners created by or defined in the Act "shall be given full force and effect notwithstanding any inconsistent provisions of the Probate Code" [Corp. Code § 16109]. But the UPA '94 also provides that nothing in it "shall otherwise affect any provision of the Probate Code" [Corp. Code § 16109]. The UPA '94 explicitly provides that a person may become a partner only with the consent of all of the partners [Corp. Code § 16401(i)]. A court order permitting the personal representative to act as a partner without the consent of all of the surviving partners would clearly seem to violate the rights of the surviving partners. If the surviving partners consent, there would seem to be no obstacle to such an order. If they do not consent, however, the validity of such an order is uncertain.

The death of a general partner does not cause immediate termination of the partnership business. Under the UPA '94, the partnership may continue after the death of a partner, subject to its obligation to purchase the interest of the deceased partner [see Corp. Code § 16701 and discussion in § 60.12[7][d]].

For more detailed discussion of the UPA '94, see Ch. 15, Part A, Formation of General Partnerships, § 1509 et seq.

[iii] Effect of Will Provision Authorizing Executor to Continue Business

The executor may not continue the operation of an unincorporated, nonpartnership business owned by the estate for more than six months after letters are first issued unless a court order has been obtained authorizing the extended operation [Prob. Code § 9760(b)]. The prohibition against operation beyond six months without a court order recognizes that operation of a business by an executor may result in the loss of estate assets if the business proves to be unprofitable [Recommendations Relating to Probate Law, 19 Cal. L. Rev. Comm'n Reports 72 (1988)].

Although some earlier cases stated that the executor could operate a business owned by the decedent for an indefinite period without a court order if the will authorized the executor to operate the business [ Estate of Ward (1932) 127 Cal. App. 347, 353-354, 15 P.2d 901 ; see Estate of Burke (1926) 198 Cal. 163, 166, 244 P. 340 (discussing personal liability of executor)], Prob. Code § 9760(b) explicitly requires a court order for any operation beyond six months, and does not authorize the testator to waive the requirement. As a practical matter, it is unlikely that a prudent executor would continue the operation of a testator's business beyond six months without court authorization, whether or not the will authorized the executor to operate the business.

Nevertheless, a will provision authorizing operation may serve a useful purpose. By clearly stating the testator's wishes in the matter, it will help to strengthen any petition the testator may file for authority to operate the business beyond six months.

Authorization to Continue or to Sell Unincorporated Business

I authorize my Executor to continue the operation of _____ [any business belonging to my estate or the business referred to in Paragraph _____ of this will] for such time and in such place and manner as my Executor shall deem to be in the best interests of my estate and the persons interested in it. Any operation pursuant to this paragraph, in good faith, shall be at the risk of my estate and without liability on the part of my Executor for any losses resulting therefrom.

[Optional provision authorizing sale:]

I further authorize my Executor to sell or liquidate _____ [any business belonging to my estate or the business referred to in Paragraph _____ of this will] if my Executor shall deem sale or liquidation to be in the best interests of my estate and the persons interested in it. Any sale or liquidation made in good faith pursuant to this paragraph shall be at the risk of my estate and without liability on the part of my Executor for any losses resulting therefrom.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

6. Devise of Business Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.462

§ 63.462 Provision Requiring That Expenses Attributable to Business Be Paid by Business

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require that expenses attributable to the operation of an unincorporated, nonpartnership business owned by the testator be paid out of the income of the business and not out of other assets of the testator's estate. The provision should be included in the will when the testator is authorized to continue to operate a sole proprietorship business owned by the testator [see § 63.461] and it is contemplated that the business will collect its own receivables and pay its own debts.

The effect of a will provision requiring that the expenses of operating a sole proprietorship business owned by the testator be paid out of the income of the business will depend on how long the business is operated and the terms of the court order, if any, under which the business is operated.

If it is to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the interested persons, the executor may, without court authorization, operate an unincorporated, nonpartnership business owned by the decedent for up to six months from the date letters are first issued [Prob. Code § 9760(b); see Prob. Code § 48 ("interested person" defined); see also § 63.461[1]]. Any operation for longer than six months requires a court order [Prob. Code § 9760(b)]. If the court orders continued operation, it may do so subject to any restrictions it determines to be for the advantage of the estate and in the best interests of the interested persons [Prob. Code § 9760(d)(1)]. If the court determines that paying the expenses of the business only out of the income of the business would be to the advantage of the estate and in the best interests of the interested persons, it may order the executor to operate the business on that basis. If the court determines that the income of the business is inadequate for that purpose, it may order that the business be discontinued [see Prob. Code § 9760(d)(2)].

While a will provision requiring that the expenses of operating a business owned by the testator be paid out of the income of the business will not be binding on the court, it will provide a guideline to the executor and the court by clarifying the testator's intentions. Such a provision, considered with other facts relating to the financial condition of the estate and the interests of the devisees, may help the court determine whether the business should be continued and, if so, on what conditions [see Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intention of transferor as expressed in instrument controls legal effect of dispositions made in instrument)].

The expenses of a business must be paid even if the income of the business is not adequate to pay them [see Prob. Code §§ 11401 ("debt" includes claim payable in course of administration), 11420(a)(order of priority for payment of debts)]. In such a case, other assets of the estate will be subject to abatement (reduction or even elimination) [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406 (rules for abatement)]. For a general discussion of abatement, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms ; see also § 63.416[1][b].

[c] Taxes

Income taxes and property taxes attributable to the operation of a business are ordinarily considered expenses of the operation of the business, while estate and other death taxes are not [see Prob. Code § 12002(b) (for purposes of paying income and interest on specific devise, expenses include property tax and tax on income from property but exclude estate and generation-skipping transfer taxes)]. Under rules set forth in the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 20100-20125], estate taxes must be equitably prorated among the persons interested in the estate [Prob. Code § 20110(a)]. The statutory rules do not apply, however, if the will directs that particular property be applied to the satisfaction of a tax or that a tax be prorated in a different manner [Prob. Code § 20110(b)(1)].

This form defines "expenses" to include property and income taxes but to exclude estate and other death taxes. If this definition is included in the will, death and other estate taxes attributable to the assets of the business will be prorated according to other will provisions for proration or, if there are no other provisions, according to the proration rules set forth in the Probate Code. If the testator wishes estate or other death taxes attributable to the assets of a business to be paid out of the business assets only, this definition should be modified accordingly. For a general discussion of the proration of estate taxes, see § 63.310[1].

Provision Requiring That Expenses Attributable to Business Be Paid by Business

All of the expenses attributable to the operation by my Executor of _____ [any business belonging to my estate or the business referred to in Paragraph ____ of this will] shall be paid first out of the ordinary business operating income of that business, and second out of the proceeds of loans or sales of the assets of that business. None of those expenses shall be paid out of other assets of my estate. It is my intention that the business shall continue without interruption on account of my death and that its operation shall not disrupt the beneficial enjoyment by any devisees of any of the assets of my estate. As used in this paragraph, the word "expenses" includes debts and taxes attributable to _____ [any business belonging to my estate or the business referred to in Paragraph ____ of this will], and the word "taxes" includes income taxes, property taxes, and any other taxes imposed as a consequence of the conduct of the business, but excludes estate, inheritance, and other death taxes.

§ 63.463 Provision Dividing Business and Its Assets Between Two or More Persons

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to divide a business owned by the testator between two or more persons. In some instances, it may be desirable for family or tax reasons to separate the income operation of a family business from the ownership of certain of its assets in such a way that specified family members will receive rent from tangible business assets and other members will receive income from the operation of the business.

The description of the business contained in this form and the enumeration of the things it comprises are taken largely from Haldeman v. Haldeman (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 498, 21 Cal. Rptr. 75. Although that case involved a marital dissolution rather than a will, the court's view and definition of the business was largely drawn from will and probate situations.

Wills and trusts that contain detailed instructions and restrictions that have become obsolete, impracticable, or unworkable at the time of probate are frequently interpreted away by strained construction or are ignored and in effect repealed by necessity. It is preferable that the will itself contain provisions for adaptation to necessity and changing circumstances. If the overall intent of the testator is reasonable and clear, the court is more likely to follow that intent than to enforce narrow and detailed instructions and restrictions set forth in the will.

[2] FORM

Provision Dividing Business and Its Assets Between Two or More Persons

(a) The assets of my _____ [descriptive word or phrase, e.g., retail or manufacturing or restaurant] business _____ [located at or the principal office of which is located at] _____ [street address, city, state, zip], hereinafter referred to as the "family business," shall be allocated among my family members as follows:

(1) To _____ [name of beneficiary], I give all real property used with or in connection with the family business, including, but not limited to _____ [*description of real property being given, e.g., all that certain real property situated in the (City of _____ [name of city],) County of _____ (name of county), State of _____ (name of state), and commonly known as _____ (description, e.g., 100 Broad Street, Small Town, California 94001)], together with all improvements thereon, _____ [excepting or including] the fixtures and machinery affixed thereto, together with insurance thereon and the proceeds, if any, from that insurance, if there is a claim against that insurance at the time of my death.*

(2) To _____ [name of beneficiary], I give all tangible and intangible personal property used with or in connection with the family business including, but not limited to, inventory, stock in trade, cash on hand, bank accounts, accounts receivable, and good will, together with business insurance and loss of business insurance thereon, and the proceeds, if any, from that insurance, if there is a claim against it at the time of my death; but I specifically exclude from this gift all real property used with or in connection with the family business.

(b) I wish, but do not direct, that _____ [name of beneficiary receiving business] continue to operate the family business and that _____ [he or she] pay a fair rental to _____ [name of beneficiary receiving business real property] for use in connection with the operation of the business of the real property given to _____ [name of beneficiary receiving business real property].

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this will directing the payment or apportionment of debts or costs, and notwithstanding any other direction or expressed wish concerning the conduct of business, the payment of taxes, the property or fund out of which any charge shall be paid, the executor, trustee, donee, or other person charged with that payment, charge, or allocation may and is hereby directed to depart from that payment, allocation, plan, or scheme if it appears on reflection and from the circumstances then existing that such a departure is in the best interests of the beneficiaries of this will.

§ 63.464 Gift of Interest in Partnership

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a testamentary disposition of an interest in a partnership in which the testator is a partner. It includes an optional provision giving the proceeds of the sale of the testator's partnership interest if it is purchased by the other partners pursuant to the terms of a buy-sell agreement.

For a gift of a sole proprietorship business, see § 63.460. For authorization to continue (or sell) a business, see § 63.461. For a provision requiring that debts, expenses, and taxes attributable to a business be paid by the business, see § 63.462. For a provision dividing a business and its assets between two or more persons, see § 63.463. For a gift of shares in a closely held corporation, see § 63.465.

[b] Death of General Partner

[i] Partnership Agreement

The effect of the death of a person who was a partner in a general partnership depends first of all on whether there is a partnership agreement that specifies what will happen after the death. Partnership agreements commonly include buy-sell agreements that either call for the dissolution of the partnership business upon the death of one of the partners or provide for the purchase of the deceased partner's interest in the partnership from the deceased partner's personal representative, heirs, or devisees. When there is a buy-sell agreement, its provisions ordinarily will control [see discussion in § 60.12[7][d]].

[ii] Dissolution and Purchase of Deceased Partner's Interest

Under the former version of the Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq., repealed effective

January 1, 1999; see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12[7]], a general partnership was dissolved by the death of a partner, unless there was a written agreement of the partners providing otherwise, or unless the probate court ordered the personal representative to continue as a partner [former Corp. Code § 15031(4), repealed Jan. 1, 1999; see Prob. Code § 9762]. The probate court could make such an order only on a showing that it would be to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the interested persons [Prob. Code § 9762(a); see § 63.461[1][b][ii]].

[iii] Dissociation and Purchase of Deceased Partner's Interest

Under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94) [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.], which now governs all partnerships regardless of when they were formed [Corp. Code § 16111(b); see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.12[7]], the death of a partner does not cause the dissolution of the partnership, but merely "dissociates" the deceased partner from it [Corp. Code § 16601(7)(A)]. The surviving partners have the right to continue the partnership business, but the partnership has an obligation to buy out the deceased partner's interest [Corp. Code § 16701(a)]. The buyout price is the amount that would have been distributable to the deceased partner if, on the date of the deceased partner's death, the assets of the partnership were sold at the greater of their liquidation value or the value of the entire business as a going concern without the deceased partner and the partnership was wound up as of that date [Corp. Code § 16701(b)].

The UPA '94 contemplates that the surviving partners and the deceased partner's personal representative will seek to reach an agreement on a definite price for the deceased partner's interest [see Corp. Code § 16701(e)]. If they do not do so within 120 days after a written demand for payment, however, the partnership must make a cash payment of the amount it estimates to be the buyout price, plus accrued interest and reduced by any offsets [Corp. Code § 16701(e)]. The payment or tender must be accompanied by a statement of partnership assets and liabilities as of the date of the deceased partner's death, the latest available partnership balance sheet and income statement, an explanation of how the estimated amount of the payment was calculated, and a written notice that the payment is in full satisfaction of the obligation to purchase unless, within 120 days, the deceased partner's personal representative commences an action to determine the buyout price [Corp. Code § 16701(g)]. Any such action must be commenced within the 120 days, or within one year after written demand for payment if no payment or offer to pay is tendered [Corp. Code § 16701(i)]. In the action, the court may determine the buyout price, any offsets that the partnership is entitled to, and accrued interest that the deceased partner's personal representative is entitled to, and enter judgment for any additional payment or refund [Corp. Code § 16701(i)].

However, the UPA '94 makes it clear that the partnership has no obligation to buy out the deceased partner's interest in the partnership if the partnership is dissolved and its business is wound up within 90 days after the deceased partner's death [Corp. Code § 16701.5]. In that event, the partnership's assets and liabilities will be distributed as in the case of any other windup and dissolution of a partnership business [see Corp. Code § 16801].

[iv] Consent of Surviving Partners

As a practical matter, a testamentary disposition of an interest in a general partnership will be effective only if the surviving partners consent to accept the devisee or devisees into the partnership. The UPA '94 clearly provides that a person may become a partner only with the consent of all of the partners [Corp. Code § 16401(i)]. If the surviving partners do not consent, a devisee cannot become a partner, even if the deceased partner's will devisees the partnership interest to a designated person or persons. For this reason, the testator should devise a general partnership interest only if he or she is sure that the surviving partner(s) will consent to accept the devisee as a partner. The testator can be certain that this consent will be forthcoming only if there is an agreement obligating the surviving partner or partners to consent.

A buy-sell agreement obligating the partnership or the surviving partners to purchase the interest of the deceased partner is more typical. Such an agreement typically will specify the price and the terms of sale, and provide for financing the purchase price through insurance on the life of the deceased partner. When there is an agreement of this kind, the alternative provision of this form devising the proceeds of the sale of the testator's partnership interest will make much more sense. As in all matters relating to estate planning for a general partnership, a well-drafted partnership agreement is essential. For further discussion, see § 60.12[7][e] and Ch. 15, General Partnerships. For more detailed discussion of buy-sell agreements in general, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements.

[c] Limited Partnership Interests

Under the California Revised Limited Partnership Act [Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723 (repealed January 1, 2010)], if a limited partner who is an individual dies, the limited partner's executor or administrator may exercise all the partner's rights for the purpose of settling the partner's estate or administering the partner's property [Corp. Code § 15675; see Prob. Code § 9763(b)]. If a partner had a power to assign his or her partnership interest, the legal representative may exercise that power [Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships, § 721.06 (Matthew Bender 4th ed.)].

A limited partnership interest is assignable in whole or in part, except as otherwise provided in the partnership agreement. The assignment entitles the assignee to receive, to the extent assigned, only the distributions and the allocations of income, gain, loss, credit, or similar items to which the assignor would be entitled [Corp. Code § 15672]. Unless the assignment states otherwise, the assignee of an interest in a limited partnership interest with more than 100 limited partners will be entitled to the rights of inspection granted in Corp. Code § 15634 [Corp. Code § 15672].

An assignee of a limited partnership interest may become a limited partner if and to the extent that the partnership agreement provides or all the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15674(a)]. The assigning limited partner retains his or her status as such until the assignee becomes a limited partner under those conditions [Corp. Code § 15672]. On attaining limited partner status, the assignee has, to the extent assigned, the rights and powers and is subject to the restrictions and liabilities under the partnership agreement and the California Revised Limited Partnership Act [Corp. Code § 15674(b); see Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723]. For discussion of the California Revised Limited Partnership Act and its predecessor, the California Uniform Limited Partnership Act, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships, Part B, (Matthew Bender 4th ed.).

Under the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 [Corp. Code §§ 15900-15912.07; see Corp. Code §§ 15912.04, 15912.06 (operative date and limited application of former limited partnership acts prior to January 1, 2010)], if a partner dies, the deceased partner's personal representative or other legal representative may exercise the rights of a transferee as provided in Corp. Code § 15907.02. For the purposes of settling the estate, the representative may exercise the rights of a current limited partner under Corp. Code § 15903.04 [Corp. Code § 15907.04].

The only interest of a partner that is transferable under the ULPA '08 is the partner's transferable interest. That interest is personal property [Corp. Code § 15907.01]. "Transferable interest" is defined as a partner's right to receive distributions [Corp. Code § 15901.02(a-k)]. A transferee has a right to receive, in accordance with the transfer, distributions to which the transferor would otherwise be entitled [Corp. Code § 15907.02(b)]. A transferee of a partnership interest, including a transferee of a general partner, may become a limited partner if and to the extent that (1) the partnership agreement provides, or (2) all general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent [Corp. Code § 15907.02(h)].

For further discussion of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships, Part C, § 747.

[d] Partnership Agreements Controlling

Before drafting any will provision specifically relating to a partnership interest, whether that interest is in a general or a limited partnership, the attorney should determine what provisions the partnership agreement has made for the death of one of the partners, whether the agreement includes a buy-out provision, and the extent, if any, to which the partnership agreement will permit the partnership interest to be transferred by will.

Gift of Interest in Partnership

I give to _____ [name of beneficiary] my partnership interest as _____ [general or limited] partner in the _____ [general or limited] partnership known as _____ [name of partnership], created by the partnership agreement entitled _____ [title of partnership agreement], dated _____ [month, day, year]. In the event that I am the sole owner of the business carried on by the partnership at the time of my death, this gift shall consist of all of the assets of the business, both real and personal, tangible and intangible.

[Add if partnership is subject to buy-sell agreement:]

This gift is subject to an option by the surviving members in the partnership to purchase my interest in the partnership in the event of my death. In the event that the surviving partners, if any, elect to exercise their option to purchase my interest in the partnership, this gift shall include the proceeds of any such sale.

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.465

§ 63.465 Gift of Shares in Closely Held Corporation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a testamentary gift of shares held by the testator in a closely held corporation. It includes an optional provision giving the proceeds of the sale of the testator's shares in the corporation if they are purchased by the other shareholders or by the corporation pursuant to the terms of a buy-sell agreement.

For a gift of a sole proprietorship business, see § 63.460. For authorization to continue (or sell) a business, see § 63.461. For a provision requiring that debts, expenses, and taxes attributable to a business be paid by the business, see § 63.462. For a provision dividing a business and its assets between two or more persons, see § 63.463. For a gift of an interest in a partnership, see § 63.464.

[b] Close and Closely Held Corporations; Buy-Sell Agreements

A "close corporation" is a corporation whose articles contain, in addition to the general provisions required by Corp. Code § 202, a provision that all of the corporation's issued shares of all classes shall be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not exceeding 35, and the statement, "This corporation is a close corporation" [Corp. Code § 158(a)]. The shareholders of close or closely held corporations frequently enter into buy-sell agreements that prevent shares of the corporations from being freely transferable and that prevent possibly hostile or incompatible "outsiders" from becoming shareholders. For discussion, and forms for buy-sell agreements in close and closely held corporations, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements. If the testator's shares are subject to such an agreement, the optional provision contained in this form should be included in the gift.

A gift of shares in a closely held corporation is a specific gift if it appears from the will or from extrinsic evidence that the testator intended to transfer specific shares and no others [ Estate of Buck (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 372, 375, 196 P.2d 769 ].

[2] FORM*Gift of Shares in Closely Held Corporation

I give to _____ [name of beneficiary] all of the shares in _____ [name of corporation], or its successors, held by me at the date of my death.

[Add, if shares subject to buy-sell agreement]

This gift is subject to an agreement among the shareholders [and the corporation] set forth in _____ [if by separate agreement, set forth title, date of execution, and names of parties to agreement; if in bylaws, set forth specific reference to provision in bylaws containing agreement] providing that the remaining shareholders [and the corporation] have the option [or are required] to purchase all of the shares of a deceased shareholder of the corporation. In the event that the surviving shareholders [or the corporation] elect to exercise their option to purchase my shares, this gift shall include the proceeds of any such sale.

7. Gifts of Tangible Personal Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.480§ 63.480 Gift of Personal Property to Spouse[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give tangible personal property to the testator's spouse. For a gift of tangible personal property with a precatory request for distribution to other beneficiaries, see § 63.481. For a gift of jewelry to one beneficiary, see § 63.482. For a gift of jewelry to more than one beneficiary, see § 63.483. For a gift of inherited personal property, see § 63.484.

[b] Gifts of Personal Property to Spouse

When a will includes a testamentary trust for the benefit of the testator's family, it is usual to provide for a direct gift of tangible personal property to the surviving spouse or children so that the personal property is not given to the trustee. Such property is usually cumbersome for the trustee to receive and distribute. If the will does not contain a trust, the property disposed of by this form will be included in the residue.

In the case of a testamentary trust, it is unlikely that a dispute will arise as to the description of the personal property given to the surviving spouse or children since the trustee is not interested in acquiring the property and since the trust is for the benefit of the same persons who are the beneficiaries under this clause. However, when the residuary beneficiary and the beneficiary named in a gift of personal property are different persons, particular attention should be given to the description of the personal property in order to minimize or eliminate the possibility of dispute. In this form, use of the words "other tangible articles of a personal nature" is intended to exclude money, choses in action, securities, banks accounts, and other intangible personal property.

A gift of personal property, like any other testamentary gift, may be conditioned on survival for a specified period [

Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. For a discussion of gifts conditioned on survival until a future time, see § 63.411[1]. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630.

7. Gifts of Tangible Personal Property

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.481

§ 63.481 Gift of Tangible Personal Property With Precatory Request for Distribution to Other Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give tangible items of personal property to a named beneficiary and to couple the gift with a precatory request that the beneficiary distribute those items to other beneficiaries. For a gift of personal property to the testator's spouse, see § 63.480. For a gift of jewelry to one beneficiary, see § 63.482. For a gift of jewelry to more than one beneficiary, see § 63.483. For a gift of inherited personal property, see § 63.484.

[b] Gift of Tangible Personal Property for Distribution to Others

When a testator wishes to give various items of tangible personal property to a number of beneficiaries, an alternative to specifically listing all the gifts in the will is to give the property to a trusted friend or relative with a general precatory request that the friend or relative distribute the items to others after the testator's death in accordance with the testator's expressed intentions. The advantage of this approach is that it avoids the necessity of listing all the beneficiaries in the will, thereby making it easier to keep the identity of the recipients of specific items of property confidential. This privacy may be desirable in some situations. Conversely, however, this approach obviously gives a great deal of discretion to the person empowered with distributing the property. The testator has no absolute assurance that the property will actually be given to the testator's intended recipient; thus, it is imperative that this provision be used only when the testator has absolute trust in the individual who is given the power to distribute the property. Moreover, the person empowered to distributed the property may be subjected to pressure from would-be beneficiaries. For these reasons, among others, it is unusual to use this type of provision in a will.

[c] Precatory or Mandatory Provisions

"Precatory" words express a hope, wish, desire, recommendation, or suggestion [ Estate of Sloan (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d 319, 341, 46 P.2d 1007 ]. When included in a will, they do not have the effect of a command or a charge and are not legally enforceable [ Estate of Kearns (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 531, 536, 225 P.2d 218 ]. "Mandatory" words import a direction or obligation and, when included in a will, impose an enforceable legal obligation [ Estate of Burris (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 582, 588-589, 12 Cal. Rptr. 298 ].

Since precatory requests may cause unintended results or bring about significantly unfavorable tax consequences, they should be used with caution and only after a careful assessment of their comparative advantages and disadvantages. For a discussion of precatory requests and the dangers they present, see the discussion in § 63.412[1][b].

Gift of Tangible Personal Property With Precatory Request for Distribution to Other Beneficiaries

I give all my tangible personal property, specifically exempting any securities, choses in action, money, bank accounts, promissory notes, debentures, shares of stock, and other intangibles, together with any insurance on any such property, to _____[name of beneficiary]. This gift is unconditional, but it is my wish that _____[name of beneficiary] distribute certain items of the property given hereunder to certain persons in the manner in which I may from time to time suggest, or in such a manner as _____[name of beneficiary] may believe I would wish the property to be distributed. The wish expressed in this paragraph is precatory only, and not mandatory.

§ 63.482 Gift of Jewelry to One Beneficiary

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a gift of jewelry to one beneficiary. For a gift of jewelry to more than one beneficiary, see § 63.483. For a gift of personal property to the testator's spouse, see § 63.480. For a gift of tangible personal property with a precatory request for distribution to other beneficiaries, see § 63.481. For a gift of inherited personal property, see § 63.484.

[b] Gifts of Jewelry

Many testators wish to make specific gifts of items of jewelry, either because of the sentimental value attached to the items or because their sale by the executor frequently results in a cash price substantially less than the purchase price or appraised value. This form will accomplish that purpose.

§ 63.483 Gift of Jewelry to More Than One Beneficiary

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give various items of jewelry to various beneficiaries. For a gift of jewelry to one beneficiary, see § 63.482. For a gift of personal property to the testator's spouse, see § 63.480. For a gift of tangible personal property with a precatory request for distribution to other beneficiaries, see § 63.481. For a gift of inherited personal property, see § 63.484.

[b] Gifts of Jewelry

Many testators wish to make gifts of specific items of jewelry. When describing any item of jewelry, the attorney may find it advisable to consult insurance policies, appraisals, or sales slips for the specific items. Confusion may result if the will refers to "my gold watch" or "my diamond ring" and the testator has more than one such item. Since this form does not refer to "all of the jewelry I own at the time of my death," it will not be effective to dispose of any items that the testator may acquire after execution of the will. If the testator wishes to make provision for items not disposed of by this provision, it may be advisable to use § 63.482, which refers to "all of the jewelry I own at the time of my death," in addition to this form. Alternatively, the testator may execute a codicil to dispose of any after-acquired jewelry.

§ 63.484 Gift of Tangible Personal Property Inherited From an Ancestor

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to make a gift of tangible personal property that the testator inherited from an ancestor. A testator may wish to leave certain property inherited by the testator (or to be inherited at a later time) to a particular person or persons. A gift of this kind often consists of tangible personal property that has been in the testator's family for a period of time, rather than money, securities, or other property that is commonly traded or negotiable. These items may be jewelry, collections of antiques, household furniture, heirlooms, libraries, or works of art.

[2] FORM

Gift of Tangible Personal Property Inherited From an Ancestor

I give to _____ [name of beneficiary] all tangible personal property which may be in my estate at the time of my death and which I received from _____ [name person from whom the property was inherited, e.g., my father or my grandmother] by way of gift, inheritance, bequest, devise, legacy, or other transfer. As used in this paragraph, tangible personal property includes jewelry, clothing, household goods, books, works of art, mementoes, and personal effects, but does not include securities, contracts, rights in action, money, bank accounts, or any real property or interest therein.

[Add optional provision, if appropriate]

This gift is intended to be a specific gift, and, in the event that there is no such property in my estate at the time of my death, it is my intention that this gift shall fail.

§ 63.485 Specific Gift of Library

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to make a specific gift of a library. A testator who has collected a library relating to a specific subject may wish to keep the library intact and to give it to a person who is interested in the same subject. If the library is part of a business or profession, it may be disposed of as one of the business assets [for a gift of a sole proprietorship business, together with the assets of the business, see § 63.460]. The description of the library should be as complete as possible to minimize any dispute as to the books included in the gift.

§ 63.486 Gift of Pet

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to make a testamentary gift of a pet. All domestic animals are subject to ownership [Civ. Code § 655]. Dogs are personal property, and their value is to be ascertained in the same manner as the value of other property [Penal Code § 491]. Since animals are chattels, they may be disposed of by will in the same manner as other personal property. If animals are pets of the testator, however, different considerations are present, since the testator generally desires that the pet be cared for and protected. For a form for a general pecuniary legacy for the protection and care of animals, see § 63.487.

§ 63.487 Pecuniary Legacy Coupled With Precatory Request for Care of Pet

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make a pecuniary legacy and to couple it with a precatory request for care of a pet. For a gift of a pet, see § 63.486.

[b] Devise to Pet

A pet cannot be a beneficiary under a will [see Estate of Russell (1968) 69 Cal.2d 200, 215, 70 Cal. Rptr. 561, 444 P.2d 353]. Thus a testator who wishes to provide by will for the care of a pet cannot make an outright devise to the pet, but must seek some other means of providing for its care [see § 63.487[1][c], [d]].

[c] Devise to Individual With Precatory Request for Care of Pet

A testator who wishes to provide for the care of a pet can devise property to an individual, and couple that devise with a request that the property be used for the care of the pet. Prob. Code § 15212 provides for the establishment of an enforceable trust for the care of the pet [see § 63.487[1][d]].

[d] Trust for Care of Pet--Creation and Enforceability

A trust may be created for the care of a pet.

The Trust Law clearly provides that every trust other than a charitable trust must have a beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15205(a)]. The beneficiary is the person who has the primary right to enforce the trust by judicial action [see Prob. Code § 17200(a) (right of trustee or beneficiary to petition court to determine existence, or concerning internal affairs, of trust)].

Notwithstanding this, the Probate Code recognizes the existence of trusts for the care of domestic or pet animals. Prob. Code § 15212 provides that a trust for the care of an animal is a trust for a lawful noncharitable purpose [Prob. Code § 15212(a)]. The trust terminates when no animal living on the date of the settlor's death remains alive [Prob. Code § 15212(a)]. The instrument governing the animal trust must be liberally construed to bring the trust within Prob. Code § 15212 and to presume against the precatory or honorary nature of the disposition and to carry out the general intent of the settler [Prob. Code § 15212 (a)].

A trust for the care of an animal must use principal and income for the benefit of the animal and must not be converted to the use of the trustee or to any other use [Prob. Code § 15212 (b)(1)]. Upon termination of the trust, the trustee must distribute any unexpended trust property in accordance with the statute [Prob. Code § 15212 (b)(2)]. The trust may be enforced by a person designated in the trust instrument, a person identified in Prob. Code § 17200(a), or any person or nonprofit charitable organization interested in the welfare of the animal [Prob. Code § 15212 (c)]. A court may name a trustee or successor trust if one is not designated, and make all other orders and determinations to carry out the intent of the settler [Prob. Code § 15212 (d)]. If the value of assets in the trust exceeds forty thousand dollars ($40,000), accountings required by Prob. Code § 16062 must be provided to the beneficiaries who would be entitled to distribution should the animal be deceased [Prob. Code § 15212 (d)].

[e] Practical Considerations

Under ordinary circumstances, it is probably preferable to avoid the formalities of a trust arrangement for pet care if possible. The sums normally required for the care of a pet ordinarily are not great enough to justify the expense of creating a trust. Moreover, as discussed above, the problem of enforcing such a trust may mean that as a practical matter the trust form may not provide any greater assurance that the testator's wishes will be carried out than would a simple outright gift of the pet to a caring individual [see § 63.486], or a cash gift coupled with a precatory request such as that illustrated in this form.

In unusual situations, however, a "pet trust" may make sense. For example, if the animal is one that is expensive to care for and that has a long life expectancy, it may reasonably be anticipated that a large sum of money might be necessary to care for the animal over its lifetime. Moreover, some persons may insist on leaving what might appear to be an exorbitant amount of money to make sure that all expenses will be met. If, for example, a client insists on leaving $50,000 to make sure that a pet receives proper care, it is reasonable to create a trust to provide specific limits on how the money is to be spent, and to assure that the leftover proceeds will pass to appropriate remainder beneficiaries when the animal dies. The existence of remainder beneficiaries with an expectation of receiving some meaningful share of the trust proceeds when the pet dies may be the best assurance that the trustee at least will not misappropriate the trust assets, though such beneficiaries also may have little or no motivation to see that the pet receives proper care.

A trust for the benefit of a pet should be created with all of the formalities required for the creation of any other trust. For a discussion of those requirements, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.30 et seq.

[2] FORM

Pecuniary Legacy Coupled With Precatory Request for Care of Pet

I give the sum of $ _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of trustee] to use for the care and benefit of my _____ [description of name of pet, e.g., dog, Joey,]. Should _____ [name of trustee] be unable to care for my _____ [description of name of pet, e.g., dog, Joey,], I appoint _____ [name of successor trustee] to use the specified amount for the care and benefit of my _____ [description of name of pet, e.g., dog, Joey,].

§ 63.494 Will Provision Referring to Gifts of Tangible Personal Property Made In Separate Writing

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision in which the testator directs that items of tangible personal property are to be disposed of in accordance with one or more separate writings describing those items and identifying the recipients. A provision such as this one must be included in the will if the testator intends to dispose of tangible personal property items in this manner. Otherwise, the separate writing will be ineffective [Prob. Code § 6132(a)], unless it qualifies as a holographic codicil to the decedent's will [see Prob. Code §§ 88, 6111, 6120(a)]; see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.10[2][c]; Ch. 62, Codicils, § 62.31].

Under the traditional rules governing incorporation by reference, a will may incorporate the terms of another document by reference only if that writing is in existence at the time the will is executed [Prob. Code § 6130; Simon v. Grayson (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 531, 533, 102 P.2d 1081]. An attempt to incorporate a document executed after the will was executed, or to incorporate amendments to a pre-existing document when the amendments were made after execution of the will, would be invalid under this rule [see Simon v. Grayson (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 531, 533, 102 P.2d 1081; Estate of Foxworth (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 784; 788-789, 50 Cal. Rptr. 237].

Prob. Code § 6132, operative January 1, 2007, creates a special exception to the traditional rules governing incorporation by reference. Under Prob. Code § 6132, a testator may refer to a writing that directs the disposition of tangible personal property not otherwise disposed of by a will [Prob. Code § 6132]. Such a writing is only effective if an unrevoked will refers to the writing, the writing is dated and is either in the handwriting of or signed by the testator, and the writing describes the items and the recipients of the property with reasonable certainty [Prob. Code § 6132(a)]. The writing may be written or signed before or after the execution of the will, and need not have significance apart from its effect on the dispositions of property made by the will [Prob. Code § 6132(c)]. A writing that meets the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132 will be given effect as if it were actually contained in the will itself [Prob. Code § 6132(c)].

Many testators want to make small gifts of personal items to relatives and friends as tokens of remembrance, love and affection, and so on. The items in question and the identities of the recipients often change over time. Making a formal change to the will each time the testator wishes to make a minor change respecting these gifts of personal property would be an expensive and time-consuming proposition. If the applicable statutory requirements are observed, the testator may avoid the need for a formal change by creating a separate document making the type of disposition described above, and subsequently may amend that document or make new documents from time to time after the will is executed, subject to specific limitations, without violating the traditional rules governing incorporation by reference [see Prob. Code §§ 6130, 6132].

For more detailed discussion of the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132, including the types of property that qualify under this section, the requirements that must be met by the separate writing, and pitfalls for the client, see § 63.495[1]. For a sample form for a separate document making gifts of tangible personal property to specified individuals, see § 63.495[2].

If the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132 cannot be satisfied, the more restrictive traditional requirements of Prob. Code § 6130 must be met, including the requirement that the writing in question must be in existence at the time the will is executed. For a general form for incorporation by reference of a document in existence at the time the will is executed, see § 63.423.

[b] Requirements for Validity of Gift

In order for gifts made under Prob. Code § 6132 to be valid, the total value of all property identified and disposed of in separate writings must not exceed $25,000, and the individual value of each item must not exceed $5,000. Items with a value in excess of $5,000 described in the writing will be disposed of as provided in the remainder clause of the will [Prob. Code § 6132(g)]. For additional discussion and cautionary notes regarding the pitfalls of these valuation limitations, see § 63.495[1][e].

"Tangible personal property" includes articles of personal or household use or ornament, including, but not limited to, furniture, furnishings, automobiles, boats, and jewelry, as well as precious metals in any tangible form, such as bullion or coins and articles held for investment purposes [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(1)]. Money that is common coin or currency may not be disposed of under Prob. Code § 6132 [Prob. Code § 6132(a)], although coins or currency kept or acquired for their historical, artistic, collectable, or investment value apart from their normal use as legal tender for payment may be disposed of under Prob. Code § 6132 [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(2)]. Real property, mobilehomes [see Civ. Code § 798.3 (definition)], intangible property, such as evidences of indebtedness, bank accounts and other monetary deposits, documents of title, or securities, are also excluded [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(1)]. Property used primarily in a trade or business also may not be disposed under Prob. Code § 6132 [Prob. Code § 6132(a)].

There is no statutory procedure for abatement of gifts to reduce the total so that it will be under the $25,000 limit. However, subsection (b) of this form provides that if the total value of all tangible personal property disposed of by separate writing exceeds the statutory maximum [Prob. Code § 6132(g)] in effect at the time of the testator's death, the personal representative, in his or her discretion, is authorized to reduce or eliminate gifts made in those separate writings as necessary to reduce the maximum value of all gifts below the statutory maximum. Attorneys should be aware that there is no authority on the effect of such a provision and it is not specifically authorized by Prob. Code § 6132. Nevertheless, at the very least it will give the probate court a basis on which to abate the dispositions in accordance with the testator's intent.

[c] Changes or Amendments to Writing

The testator may make subsequent handwritten or signed changes to any writing. If there is an inconsistent disposition of tangible personal property as between writings, the most recent writing controls [Prob. Code § 6132(d)]. This statutory requirement is incorporated into Subparagraph (a) of the form.

[d] Death of Beneficiary

If any person designated to receive property in the writing dies before the testator, the property will pass as further directed in the writing. In the absence of any further directions, the disposition will lapse [Prob. Code § 6132(c)]. In the usual case, this will mean that the property will pass under the residuary clause of the will, if there is one [see Prob. Code § 21111(a)(2); see also § 63.411 (d)(lapse rules)].

Subparagraph (c) of this form provides that in the event a beneficiary predeceases the testator, the gift will be disposed of as otherwise provided in the written instrument or, if the written instrument makes no provision in that case, as otherwise provided in the will.

[2] FORM

Will Provision Referring to Gifts of Tangible Personal Property Made In Separate Writing

Gift of Specific Tangible Personal Property by Separate Writing

(a) I intend to leave at my death one or more separate writings that describe the disposition of specified items of my tangible personal property, and I hereby direct that the items of property specified in those writings be devised as specified therein. If there are inconsistencies between separate writings, the most recent valid writing shall be controlling to the extent of the inconsistency.

(b) If the total value of all items of tangible personal property devised in separate writings exceeds the maximum dollar limitation (if any) for items of tangible personal property that may be validly devised in this manner under the applicable provisions of the California Probate Code in effect on the date of my death, I direct my personal representative to reduce any or all of the devises made in those writings in such proportions as my personal representative, in my personal representative's sole discretion, determines to be in accordance with my probable wishes and desires, or to eliminate one or more of such gifts entirely, as necessary to reduce the total value of the items of tangible personal property disposed of by separate writings so that it does not exceed the maximum that I may validly dispose of in this manner under the law in effect on the date of my death.

(c) If any person designated to receive property in any writing described in this section predeceases me, the property devised to that person in the writing shall pass as further directed in the writing or another valid writing; or, in the absence of further directions in a writing, according to the terms of this will without regard to the writing.

(d) If I do not leave any such separate writing at my death, all of my tangible personal property will be distributed as provided in the other provisions of this will.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

7. Gifts of Tangible Personal Property

1-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.495

§ 63.495 Separate Writing Disposing of Tangible Personal Property of Modest Value

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a writing, separate from the will itself, devising specified items of the testator's tangible personal property. The advantage of such a document is that as long as the applicable statutory requirements and limitations are observed, the testator may dispose of items of tangible personal property of modest value, and may add, modify, or eliminate such dispositions, without going through the formal process of creating a codicil or a new will every time the testator wants to change the disposition of an item of personal property.

Frequently, testators wish to leave specific items of tangible personal property to relatives and friends as tokens of remembrance, love, and affection. The testator's wishes regarding the items of property to be given away in this manner, and the identity of the recipients, frequently change with the passage of time. Making a formal change to the will each time the testator wishes to make a minor change respecting these gifts of personal property would be an expensive and time-consuming proposition. If the applicable statutory requirements are observed, the testator may avoid the need for a formal change by creating a separate document (this form) making the type of disposition described above, and subsequently may amend that document or make new documents from time to time after the will is executed, without violating the traditional rules governing incorporation by reference [see Prob. Code §§ 6130, 6132 and discussion in [b], below].

Although in many cases documents of the type described above will be created or amended by testators without attorney involvement, the governing statute, Prob. Code § 6132, imposes important requirements and limitations on the use and content of such documents. At a minimum, the attorney should be prepared to explain these requirements to the client. Furthermore, as discussed in this comment, there are potential pitfalls. It is recommended that the attorney assist the client in drafting the initial separate document and counsel the client on making any subsequent changes. This form provides a basic format for such a document, meeting all the statutory requirements.

Note that in order for the dispositions to be effective under Prob. Code § 6132, the will must contain a provision referring to the writing. For an appropriate will provision to be used in conjunction with this form, see § 63.494.

[b] Exception to Rules Governing Incorporation by Reference

Under the traditional rules governing incorporation by reference, as codified in Prob. Code § 6130, a will could incorporate the contents of a separate document only if that document was already in existence at the time the will was executed. An attempt to incorporate by reference a document not in existence at that time would be ineffective [see Simon v. Grayson (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 531, 533, 102 P.2d 1081 ; Estate of Foxworth (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 784, 788-789, 50 Cal. Rptr. 237]. Thus, under the traditional rule, a testator could not incorporate by reference a document disposing of items of personal property if that document did not exist at the time the will was executed. Similarly, a testator could not modify such a document after the fact, since the modification would not have existed when the will was executed and therefore could not validly be incorporated by reference.

Prob. Code § 6132, operative January 1, 2007, creates a limited exception to these requirements. Under that section, a will may refer to a writing that directs disposition of tangible personal property not otherwise specifically disposed of by the will [Prob. Code § 6132(a)]. A separate writing complying with the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132 will be given effect as if it were actually contained in the will itself, regardless of whether it was written or signed before or after the execution of the will [Prob. Code § 6132(c)].

If the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132 cannot be satisfied, the more restrictive traditional requirements of Prob. Code § 6130 must be met, including the requirement that the writing in question must be in existence at the time the will is executed. For a general form for incorporation by reference of a document in existence at the time the will is executed, see § 63.423.

PRACTICE TIP:

If for any reason a writing fails to satisfy the requirements of Prob. Code § 6132, the attorney should determine, as an alternative, whether or not it might be able to qualify as a holographic codicil to the testator's will [see Prob. Code §§ 88, 6111, 6120(a); see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.10[2][c]; Ch. 62, Codicils, § 62.31]. Commentary by publisher's editorial staff.

[c] Basic Conditions for Application of Prob. Code § 6132

A writing directing disposition of a testator's tangible personal property is effective if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Prob. Code § 6132(a)]:

- An unrevoked will refers to the writing [see § 63.494 (will provision referring to writing)].
- The writing is dated and is either in the handwriting of, or signed by, the testator. However, the failure of a writing to conform to this requirements does not preclude the introduction of evidence of the existence of the testator's intent regarding the disposition of tangible personal property as authorized by Prob. Code § 6132 [Prob. Code § 6132(b)].
- The writing describes the items of property and the recipients of the property with reasonable certainty.

As noted in [b], above, the writing may be written or signed either before or after the execution of the will. The writing need not have significance apart from its effect on the dispositions of property made by the will [Prob. Code § 6132(c)].

[d] Types of Property Subject to Disposition Under Prob. Code § 6132

In order to be subject to disposition under Prob. Code § 6132, property must qualify as tangible personal property under that section. "Tangible personal property" means articles of personal or household use or ornament, including, but not limited to, furniture, furnishings, automobiles, boats, and jewelry, as well as precious metals in any tangible form, such as bullion or coins and articles held for investment purposes [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(1)]. "Tangible personal property" does not include real property, mobilehomes as defined in Civ. Code § 798.3 [see Ch. 40, Mobilehomes, § 40.13], or intangible property, such as evidences of indebtedness, bank accounts and other monetary deposits, documents of title, or securities [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(1)]. The following types of property also are specifically excluded for purposes of Prob. Code § 6132 [Prob. Code § 6132(a)]:

- Money that is common coin or currency. "Common coin or currency" is defined to mean the coins and currency of the United States that are legal tender for the payment of public and private debts, but not coins or currency kept or acquired for their historical, artistic, collectable, or investment value apart from their normal use as legal tender for payment [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(2)]. Note also that the definition of tangible personal property set forth above does specially include "precious metals in any form, such as bullion or coins..." [Prob. Code § 6132(h)(1)]. In other words, a rare coin could be devised under Prob. Code § 6132, as apparently could a bag of silver coins held for investment, even though both technically are legal tender, but a common $100 bill held for its cash value alone ordinarily could not.
- Property used primarily in a trade or business.

[e] Value Limited to $5,000 Per Item and $25,000 Total Value

If the value of an item of tangible personal property described in the writing exceeds $5,000, that item will not be disposed of as provided in the written instrument, but instead will be disposed of pursuant to the remainder clause of the will [Prob. Code § 6132(g)]. The statute does not contain any provision authorizing testamentary modification of this rule.

The total value of tangible personal property identified and disposed of in the writing is not permitted to exceed $25,000. The value of an item of tangible personal property that is disposed of pursuant to the remainder clause of the will (in other words, an item listed in the writing but having a value in excess of $5,000) is not counted towards the $25,000 limit [Prob. Code § 6132(g)].

Note that the statute contains no procedure for abatement or other direction as to what will happen if the total value of the property given away exceeds $25,000. The statutory language can be read to invalidate the entire property disposition in such a case, although it is unlikely that such a result would reflect the testator's intent.

PRACTICE TIP:

The valuation limitations discussed above create dangerous traps for the unwary testator. First, even if a gift is worth less than $5,000 at the time the document is executed, subsequent appreciation in value may cause it to exceed the $5,000 limit by the date of the testator's death--and, if this happens, the gift will no longer pass to the designated beneficiary under the written instrument, but instead will pass under the residuary clause in the estate [Prob. Code § 6132(g)].

Second, the $25,000 total limitation is even more dangerous. A testator who adds gifts to relatives and friends one by one over the passing years easily might inadvertently exceed that limit (especially when appreciation is taken into account) and thereby risk invalidating not just the gift that pushes the total over the limit, but rather all the gifts made in the entire instrument [see above]. Since there is no statutory procedure in that situation for abatement of gifts to reduce the total so that it will get under the $25,000 limit, an attorney would be well advised to attempt to address that issue in the document by including a provision for abatement of the gifts. Although there is no authority on the effect of such a provision and it is not specifically authorized by Prob. Code § 6132, at the very least it will give the probate court a basis on which to abate the gifts in accordance with the testator's intent should the court be inclined to do so. This form addresses this issue by giving the testator's personal representative authority to eliminate or abate any of the gifts if necessary to reduce the total below the statutory maximum.

For the above reasons, it is essential that an attorney clearly instruct the client on the existence of the $5,000 and $25,000 limitations and the importance of keeping track of any gifts made in this manner to assure that those limits are complied with. An informational letter specifically informing the client of these limits is recommended. Commentary by Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[f] Date of Execution

It is important that a document intended to comply with Prob. Code § 6132 specify the date on which it was executed. If the document omits a statement as to the date of its execution, and if the omission results in doubt whether its provisions or the provisions of another writing inconsistent with it are controlling, then the writing omitting the statement is invalid to the extent of its inconsistency, unless the time of its execution is established to be after the date of execution of the other writing [Prob. Code § 6132(e)(1)]. Furthermore, if the document omits a statement as to the date of its execution, and it is established that the testator lacked testamentary capacity at any time during which the writing may have been executed, the writing is invalid unless it is established that it was executed at a time when the testator had testamentary capacity [Prob. Code § 6132(e)(2)].

[g] Subsequent Amendments to Writing

The testator may make subsequent handwritten or signed changes to any writing. If there is an inconsistent disposition of tangible personal property as between writings, the most recent writing controls [Prob. Code § 6132(d)].

[h] Death of Beneficiary

If any person designated to receive property in the writing dies before the testator, the property will pass as further directed in the writing. In the absence of any further directions, the disposition will lapse [Prob. Code § 6132(c)]. In the usual case, this will mean that the property will pass under the residuary clause of the will, if there is one [see Prob. Code § 21111(a)(2); see also § 63.411 (d)(lapse rules)].

Separate Writing Disposing of Tangible Personal Property of Modest Value

As provided in Section _____ of my will dated _____, I, _____ [name of testator], do hereby make the following gifts of items of my tangible personal property to the persons named below, effective on my death:

1. To _____ [designation and name, e.g., my niece, Janice Smith], I give _____ [describe item(s) of tangible personal property as specifically as possible, e.g., my pair of gold heart shaped earrings, approximately 3/4 inch in diameter and each set with three small red garnet stones, that were once the property of my grandmother], if I am the owner of that property at the time of my death.
2. To _____ [designation and name, e.g., my friend, James Jones], I give _____ [describe item(s) of tangible personal property as specifically as possible, e.g., my Super Olympia Model 155 ocean kayak, together with the paddles, ropes, car rack, and related hardware accompanying that kayak], if I am the owner of that property at the time of my death.

3. To _____ [designation and name, e.g., my sister, Donna Love], I give _____ [describe item(s) of tangible personal property as specifically as possible, e.g., the large golden barrel cactus in the green enamel pot on the front porch of my house at 1237 West Street], if I am the owner of that property at the time of my death.

[continue as necessary for any other items of testator's tangible personal property]

If any of the items of property specified above are not among the items of tangible personal property at the time of my death, the gift shall lapse.

If the total value of the items specified above, including any items subsequently added in an amendment to this writing or in a separate writing, exceed in value the maximum amount that may be validly disposed of by a separate writing in this manner under the applicable provisions of the California Probate Code in effect on the date of my death, I direct my personal representative to reduce any or all of the gifts made above, if possible, in such proportions as my personal representative determines to most likely be in accordance with my wishes and desires as understood by my personal representative, or eliminate one or more of such gifts entirely if necessary, in order to ensure that the total value of the items of tangible personal property disposed of under this provision does not exceed the maximum permitted by law.

 _____ [signature of testator; must be handwritten]

PART IV. FORMS

8. Devises of Securities, Notes, and Annuities

§ 63.500 General Devise of Securities

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a general gift of securities. For a specific gift of securities, see § 63.501. For a pecuniary gift to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of securities, see § 63.502. For a distribution of securities in kind, see § 63.232.

Note that with respect to registration of securities made by decedents dying on or after January 1, 1998, the Uniform TOD Security Registration Act [Prob. Code §§ 5500-5512] provides a procedure for a securities title form to designate a TOD beneficiary that is effective, without probate or estate administration, for transferring the securities at death in accordance with the directions of the deceased owner. For additional discussion, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.17[9].

[b] Specific Gifts and General Gifts

[i] Distinctions

A testamentary gift of securities may be either a "specific" or a "general" gift [see Prob. Code § 21117(a), (b); see also § 63.351[1][b]]. A specific gift is a gift of a specific thing and that thing alone [Prob. Code § 6154(a); Estate of Buck (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 372, 374, 196 P.2d 769; Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 221, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358]. A general gift, on the other hand, is a gift from the general estate of a decedent that does not give specific property [Prob. Code § 21117(b)]. The distinction between specific and general gifts may become important if, after executing the will, the testator disposes of property referred to in the will, or if there are insufficient assets to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all gifts in full.

[ii] Ademption and Abatement

If property that is subject to a specific gift is not in the testator's estate at the time of death, the specific gift is generally adeemed (extinguished), although the devisee, under circumstances specified in the Probate Code, may have a right to the proceeds of any sale, exchange, mortgage, or other transformation of the property [see Prob. Code §§ 21132-21134; see also § 63.370[1][c]]. In contrast, a general devise is not adeemed merely because specific property is not in the estate at the time of death, since a general devise will be satisfied out of the general assets of the estate [see Prob. Code § 21117(b)]. General devises, however are subject to abatement (reduction or even elimination) [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406] before specific devises if necessary to pay debts and expenses of administration [Prob. Code § 21402(a); see § 63.416[1][b][i]]. Similarly, general devises may abate before specific devises to pay the share of an omitted spouse or child if abatement of the specific devise would defeat the obvious intention of the testator and adoption of a different method of apportionment is deemed consistent with the testamentary intent [see Prob. Code §§ 21612(b) (spouse), 21623(b) (child)].

[iii] Rights of Specific Devisee of Securities

If the testator executes a will that makes an at-death transfer of securities and the testator then owned securities meeting the description in the will, the devise includes additional securities the testator owned at death to the extent the testator acquired them after executing the will as a result of his or her ownership of the described securities [Prob. Code § 21132(a)]. The securities must be:

- Securities of the same organization acquired by reason of action initiated by the organization or any successor, related, or acquiring organization, excluding any acquired by exercise of purchase options [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(1)].
- Securities of another organization acquired as a result of a merger, consolidation, reorganization, or other distribution by the organization or any successor, related, or acquiring organization [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(2)].
- Securities of the same organization acquired as a result of a reinvestment plan [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(3)].

Cash distributions before death with respect to a described security are not part of the devise [Prob. Code § 21132(b)]. Thus, for example, cash dividends declared and payable as of a record date occurring before the testator's death do not pass as a part of the specific devise even though paid after death [see Comment to Uniform Probate Code § 2-607; see also Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession, 16 Calif. L. Rev. Comm'n Rep. 2408 (1982)(Prob. Code § 21132(b) is based on Uniform Probate Code § 2-607)].

[iv] Judicial Construction

If it is unclear whether the testator intended a devise to be specific or general, the courts will indulge in presumptions to resolve the question. It has been held, for example, that a devise of a stated number of bonds of a designated corporation, without descriptive words of ownership showing an intent to make a devise of specific bonds, is presumed to be a general devise [ Estate of Jones (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 795, 801, 141 P.2d 764 ]. A devise of shares in a closely held corporation, in the absence of other evidence of the testator's intent, is presumed to be specific [ Estate of Buck (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 372, 374-375, 196 P.2d 769 ]. A devise closely associated in the will with other devises to the same devisee that are clearly specific will also be presumed to be specific [ Estate of Ehrenfels (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 215, 225, 50 Cal. Rptr. 358 ].

[v] Will Provisions

A careful will drafter will not rely on judicial interpretation to clarify an otherwise uncertain or ambiguous will provision, but will state the testator's intentions in unambiguous terms. The classification of devises set forth in the Probate Code applies only when the intention of the testator is not indicated by the will, and is subject to the general rule that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code §§ 21102, 21117]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. The Probate Code abatement rules also are simply rules of construction. They do not apply if the testator's plan (or a particular devise) would be defeated by application of the rules, or if some other scheme of abatement is necessary to effectuate the will or the testator's purpose [Prob. Code § 21400].

If the testator wishes the devisee to take only if the specific securities are in the estate at the time of the testator's death, the devise should be specific. If, on the other hand, the testator wishes the devisee to take the securities (or their equivalent value) whether or not they are in the estate at the time of death, the devise should be general.

[vi] Changes in Issuing Corporation's Capital Structure

It is common for corporations to change their capital structures, enter into mergers, reorganizations, or consolidations, split shares of stock, and declare stock dividends. All of these changes may affect the value of securities that are the subjects of devises. When planning any devise of securities, the testator should consider how any such changes may affect the devise and the extent to which they will comport with the testator's intentions. If, for example, the testator wants the named devisee rather than the residuary devisees to receive any increase in value that may result from changes in the capital structure of a corporation, the testator should describe the securities with words that will clearly embrace all such changes (e.g., "all of the shares of stock of ABC Corporation that I own at the time of my death") or should consider a provision making an adjustment for capital changes. For a provision making an adjustment for capital changes in the structure of an issuing corporation, see § 63.504.

[c] Description of Securities

The attorney should keep in mind that it is quite common for corporations to issue different classes of common and capital stock, different classes of preferred stock, and bonds with different rates of interest and maturities. It is important that the securities intended to be devised are described with sufficient specificity to avoid confusion with other securities issued by the same or other corporations.

[d] Survival and Lapse

A devise of securities may, like other devises, be conditioned on survival for a specified period [Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival until a future time, see § 63.411[1]. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630.

[2] FORM

General Devise of Securities

I give to _____ [name of devisee] _____ [specify number] shares of the _____ [describe shares, e.g., class B common] stock of _____ [name of corporation]. This devise is intended to be a general devise, and, in the event that there are insufficient shares of this stock in my estate at the time of my death, I direct my executor to purchase, out of the general assets of my estate, any additional shares that are necessary to satisfy this devise in full.

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.501§ 63.501 Specific Devise of Securities[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a specific devise of securities. For a general devise of securities, see § 63.500. For a pecuniary devise to be paid out of proceeds of the sale of securities, see § 63.502. For a distribution of securities in kind, see § 63.503. For a provision making an adjustment for capital changes in the structure of an issuing corporation, see § 63.504.

A devise of securities may be specific or general. For a detailed discussion of general and specific devises of securities and the characteristics of each, see § 63.500[1].

Changes in the capital structures of corporations may affect the value of securities that are the subjects of devises. For a discussion of such changes and how they may affect the testator's intentions, see §§ 63.500[1] and 63.504[1]. For a provision making an adjustment for capital changes, see § 63.504.

When drafting any devise of securities, the attorney should describe the securities with sufficient specificity to avoid confusion with other securities issued by the same or other corporations [see discussion in § 63.500[1][c]].

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

E. Devises

8. Devises of Securities, Notes, and Annuities

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.502

§ 63.502 Pecuniary Devise to Be Paid Out of Proceeds of Sale of Securities

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make general pecuniary gift of money [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(d) ("general pecuniary gift" defined), 21118(b) ("pecuniary gift") defined; see also § 63.351[1]] and to direct that the money be paid out of the proceeds of a sale of securities owned by the testator. For a general provision for a pecuniary devise, see § 63.351. For a general devise of securities, see § 63.500. For a specific devise of securities, see § 63.501. For a pecuniary devise to be paid out of proceeds of the sale of real property owned by the testator, see § 63.445.

[b] Ademption and Abatement

If the will makes a devise of money and directs that the money be paid out of proceeds of the sale of specific property owned by the testator, a question may arise of whether the devise is specific [see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific devise" defined); see also § 63.370[1]] or demonstrative [see Prob. Code § 21117(c) ("demonstrative devise" defined); see also § 63.390[1]]. Whether a devise is specific or demonstrative is important under the Probate Code rules of ademption and abatement.

Under the ademption rules, if property that is subject to a specific devise is not in the testator's estate at the time of death, the specific devise is generally adeemed (extinguished), although the devisee may, under circumstances specified in the Code, have a right to the proceeds of any sale, exchange, mortgage, or other transformation of the property [see Prob. Code §§ 21132-21134; see also § 63.370[1][c]]. A demonstrative devise, on the other hand, is not subject to ademption if specific property is not in the estate when the testator dies, since a demonstrative devise may be satisfied from the general assets of the estate if the fund or property out of which it is primarily to be paid fails, in whole or in part [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(b) (general devise is devise from general estate), (c)(demonstrative gift is a type of general gift), 21403(b)(demonstrative gift treated as general gift if satisfied out of property other than fund or property specified)].

Under the abatement rules [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406 (abatement of devises)], however, demonstrative devises are subject to abatement (reduction or even elimination) before specific devises if they are satisfied out of the general assets of the estate and if abatement is necessary to pay debts and expenses of administration [Prob. Code §§ 21401, 21402(a); see Prob. Code §§ 21117(c), 21403(b) (demonstrative gift treated as general gift to extent satisfied out of property other than fund or property specified); see also § 63.416[1][b][i]]. Similarly, a demonstrative devise that is satisfied out of the general assets of the estate will abate before a specific devise to pay the share of an omitted spouse or child if abatement of the specific devise would defeat the obvious intention of the testator and adoption of a different method of apportionment is deemed to be consistent with the testamentary intent [see Prob. Code §§ 21612(b) (spouse), 21623(b) (child)].

[c] Optional Clauses

Whether a devise is specific or demonstrative depends on the intention of the testator as expressed in the will [see Prob. Code §§ 21102, 21117]. For a discussion of judicial interpretation of will provisions making specific and general devises, see § 63.500[1][b][iv]. A careful will drafter will not leave so important a question to judicial interpretation, however, but will clearly specify the testator's intentions in the will.

This form offers two optional clauses that may be used to clearly express the testator's intentions. The first states that if the proceeds from the sale of the specific securities are insufficient to fully satisfy the pecuniary devise, there will be no resort to other assets of the estate to satisfy it. If this optional clause is used, the devise will be specific.

The second optional clause states that, if the proceeds from the sale of the testator's securities are insufficient to fully satisfy the pecuniary devise, resort is to be had to the general assets of the estate to satisfy it. If this optional clause is used, the devise will be demonstrative.

[2] FORM

Pecuniary Devise to Be Paid Out of Proceeds of Sale of Securities

I give the sum of _____ [specify amount] to _____ [name of devisee], to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of my shares of _____ [describe shares, e.g., class B common] stock in _____ [name of corporation].

[If devise is intended to be specific, add the following:]

This devise is intended to be specific, and in the event that the proceeds from the sale of the shares described herein are insufficient to fully satisfy this devise, or if those shares are not in my estate at the time of my death, resort is not to be had to other assets of my estate to satisfy it.

[Or, if devise is intended to be demonstrative, add the following:]

This devise is intended to be demonstrative, and in the event that the proceeds from the sale of the shares described herein are insufficient to fully satisfy this devise, or if those shares are not in my estate at the time of my death, I direct that resort shall be had to the general assets of my estate to satisfy it.

§ 63.503 Distribution of Securities in Kind

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to authorize the executor to satisfy any general, demonstrative, or residuary devise provided for in the will by distributing securities owned by the estate to any devisee. For a discussion of the powers and duties of an executor, see Ch. 65, Executors, § 65.10 et seq.

[2] FORM

Distribution of Securities in Kind

I direct that my Executor, in my Executor's sole discretion, may pay any general, demonstrative, or residuary devises provided for in this will or in any codicil to this will by transferring to the devisees of those gifts any securities owned by me at the time of my death. It is my desire, but I do not direct, that my Executor shall use every opportunity to make any such distribution in the form of the securities themselves.

§ 63.504 Adjustment for Capital Changes

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for future changes in the capital structures of corporations whose securities are the subjects of devises. The form is optional only and, if used, should be added to and made a part of any paragraph making a devise of corporate securities.

[b] Changes in Capital Structure

It is common for corporations to change their capital structures; enter into mergers, reorganizations, or consolidations; split shares of stock; and declare stock dividends. Since these changes may affect the value of devised securities, they are potential sources of controversy and litigation.

If the testator executes a will that makes an at-death transfer of securities and the testator then owned securities meeting the description in the will, the devise includes additional securities the testator owned at death to the extent the testator acquired them after executing the will as a result of his or her ownership of the described securities [Prob. Code § 21132(a)]. The securities must be:

- Securities of the same organization acquired by reason of action initiated by the organization or any successor, related, or acquiring organization, excluding any acquired by exercise of purchase options [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(1)].
- Securities of another organization acquired as a result of a merger, consolidation, reorganization, or other distribution by the organization or any successor, related, or acquiring organization [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(2)].

- Securities of the same organization acquired as a result of a reinvestment plan [Prob. Code § 21132(a)(3)].

Cash distributions before death with respect to a described security are not part of the devise [Prob. Code § 21132(b)].

For further discussion of the right of specific devisees of securities, see § 63.500[1][b][iii].

If the will makes a specific devise of only a portion of the stock the testator owns in a particular company and there is later a stock split or stock dividend, the specific devisee is entitled, under the Probate Code rules, only to a proportionate share of the additional stock received [Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession, 16 Calif. L. Rev. Comm'n Rep. 2408 (1982)]. Assume, for example, that when the will is executed the testator owns 500 shares of stock in XYZ Corporation and that he or she devises 100 of those shares to a son or daughter. If the stock later splits two for one, the son or daughter will be entitled to 200 shares, not 600 [Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession, 16 Calif. L. Rev. Comm'n Rep. 2408 (1982)].

[c] Will Provisions

The Probate Code rules for the interpretation of wills, trusts, and other instruments are rules of construction only. They apply only when the intention of the testator is not otherwise indicated by the will and are subject to the fundamental rule that the intentions of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102; see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. Whenever a testator makes a devise of securities, the will should clearly state the testator's intentions with respect to stock dividends, splits, mergers, consolidations, and related changes in the structure of the corporation or its stock. If the testator intends that the named devisee and not the residuary devisees will receive any increase in value that may result from any such changes, the will should describe the securities with words that will clearly encompass them (e.g., "all of the shares of stock of ABC Corporation that I own at the time of my death") or include a provision such as this form.

Adjustment for Capital Changes

If, after execution of this will, any change or adjustment, whether resulting from stock dividends, stock splits, mergers, consolidations, reorganizations, or any other event or events, is made in the capital structure of any corporation whose stock I own, any devise of the stock of that corporation made in this will shall be adjusted so as to consist of the number of shares of the stock of that corporation, or of its successor, that, as the result of the change or adjustment, would be derived from or attributable to the number of shares of stock given by this will, as those shares exist on the date this will is executed. If the total number of shares of a class of stock devised by this will, as adjusted by any such changes or adjustments, exceeds the total number of shares owned by me or by my estate, all devises of that stock shall be ratably reduced, so that the total number of shares of that stock devised shall be the number of shares owned by me or by my estate.

8. Devises of Securities, Notes, and Annuities

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.505

§ 63.505 Specific Devise of Promissory Note (and Deed of Trust)

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a devise of a promissory note owned by the testator. If the note is secured by a deed of trust, the form may also be used to give the deed of trust. For a will provision discharging a debt owed to the testator, see § 63.506.

[b] Devise of Promissory Note

A testamentary gift of a promissory note is a specific devise [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(a) ("specific devise" defined), 8851 (devise of debt or demand of testator against any person is specific devise); see also § 63.370[1]]. If property subject to a specific devise is not in the testator's estate at the time of death, the specific devise is generally adeemed (extinguished), although under circumstances specified in the Probate Code the devisee may have a right to the proceeds of any sale, exchange, mortgage, or other transformation of the property [see Prob. Code §§ 21132-21134]. Specific devises, however, will abate (be reduced or even eliminated) to pay debts and expenses of administration [Prob. Code § 21402(a)]; see Prob. Code § 10000(a) (executor may sell property to pay debts, devises, family allowance, expenses of administration, or taxes)], or to satisfy the statutory shares of an omitted spouse [Prob. Code § 21612] or child [Prob. Code § 21623], only after all other devises have abated. For a general discussion of ademption, see § 63.370[1][c]. For a general discussion of abatement, see § 63.416[1][b][i].

[c] Note Subject to Administration

A devise of a promissory note, like a devise of any other debt or demand of the testator against any person, will not remove the note from the probate estate or relieve the executor of the duty of including it in the inventory and, if necessary, applying it to the payment of the testator's debts [Prob. Code § 8851; see § 63.506[1]]. If the note is not necessary for the payment of the testator's debts, it will be distributed in the same manner and proportion as other specific devises [Prob. Code § 8851].

[d] Change in Form of Note

Promissory notes are sometimes assigned, renewed, paid, cancelled, or otherwise transformed or extinguished. A testator who makes a devise of a promissory note should be advised that if there is any change in the form or legal status of the note, the will should be modified to reflect the change.

[2] FORM

Specific Devise of Promissory Note (and Deed of Trust)

I give to _____ [name of devisee] that certain promissory note executed on _____, at _____ [place of execution], in the principal amount of _____, in which _____ [name of promisor] is named as promisor and _____ [name of promisee] is named as promisee [add, if appropriate:, together with the deed of trust that secures that note, in which _____ (name of trustor) is named as trustor and _____ (name of trustee) is named as trustee]. This devise includes all documents relating to payment of the note [and deed of trust], including payment books. This devise is intended to be specific, and, in the event that this note is paid in full, discharged, or transferred by me, this devise shall fail, and resort shall not be made to any other assets of my estate to satisfy it.

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.506§ 63.506 Cancellation of Indebtedness[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to discharge a debt owed to the testator. It is drafted in the form of a direction to the executor to discharge the indebtedness and to cancel a promissory note evidencing the indebtedness. It may be modified, however, to apply to any other form of indebtedness. For a will provision making a devise of a promissory note owned by the testator, see § 63.505.

[b] Discharge of Debt or Demand

The executor has a duty to collect all debts due to the decedent or the estate [Prob. Code § 9650(a)(1)]. The decedent's property is subject to administration [see Prob. Code §§ 7000-12591] and, under rules set forth in the Probate Code, to the payment of debts [see Prob. Code §§ 9000-9399 (creditor claims), 11400-11467 (payment of debts)], expenses of administration [see Prob. Code §§ 11401(b) ("debt" includes an expense of administration), 11420(a)(1)(priority for payment of expenses of administration)], and any family allowance that may be payable out of the assets of the estate [Prob. Code § 7001; see Prob. Code §§ 6540-6545 (family allowance)].

The will may discharge a debt or demand of the testator against any person (including the executor) [Prob. Code § 8851]. Such a discharge is deemed to be a specific devise of the debt or demand, but it is not valid against creditors of the testator [Prob. Code § 8851; see Prob. Code § 21117(a) ("specific devise" defined)]. Like other devised property, the discharged debt or demand must be included in the inventory [see Ch. 65, Executors, § 65.41[3]] and will be subject to the payment of debts, expenses, and any family allowance payable out of the estate [Prob. Code § 8851]. If not necessary for the payment of debts, expenses, or a family allowance, the debt or demand will be distributed in the same manner and proportion as other specific devises [Prob. Code § 8851; see Ch. 65, Executors, § 65.41[9]].

Cancellation of Indebtedness

I direct that the entire balance of the outstanding indebtedness on the promissory note payable to me in the face amount of _____, which was executed on _____ [date], by _____ [name of promisor- devisee] be discharged, and that the note (and any security therefor) be cancelled by my executor and delivered to _____ [name of promisor- devisee]. This form is a will provision that may be used to devise a patent. If a patent is being used by a business owned by the testator, it may be devised as part of the business assets. For a devise of a sole proprietorship, see § 63.460.

The contractor licensing agreement relating to the patent should be examined to determine whether it makes any provision for the death of the testator. If it does, and if it does not preclude the possibility of testamentary disposition, the provision should be respected and referred to in the will.

Courtroom procedure relating to patents and their protection is discussed in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions (Matthew Bender)

§ 63.508 Annuity With Fixed Periodic Payments

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the executor to purchase a commercial annuity contract providing for periodic payments in a fixed amount to a named annuitant. The premium required to purchase the contract will vary according to the age of the intended annuitant. For a provision directing the executor to purchase an annuity contract for a fixed premium (and with periodic payments varying according to the age of the intended annuitant), see § 63.509. For a provision providing for an annuity with an option to take cash in lieu of periodic payments, see § 63.510.

[b] Annuities

A testamentary annuity is a devise of periodic payments to be made from the general assets of the estate. The payments may be made at any interval selected by the testator, such as monthly, quarterly, or annually. The amount of the payments must be expressly stated as a fixed dollar amount or a dollar amount determinable by the provisions of the will [Prob. Code §§ 21117(b), (e), 21118(b); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)].

An annuity must be distinguished from a gift of income. An annuity is a periodic payment of a specified or ascertainable sum that is payable unconditionally [ Estate of Markham (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 69, 73-74, 168 P.2d 669 ]. A periodic payment that is dependent on the existence of an income that may fluctuate is not an annuity, but a gift of income [ Estate of Luckel (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 481, 488, 312 P.2d 24 ]. When an annuity is created, the annuitant is entitled to the stipulated payments, irrespective of the earnings derived from a particular corpus or fund, and, if the earnings are insufficient to meet the payments, other assets of the corpus or fund or may be resorted to to satisfy them [ Estate of Luckel (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 481, 488, 312 P.2d 24 ]. A devise of a specified monthly sum to be paid out of the net income of the estate is not an annuity, since the devisee is entitled to the monthly payments only insofar as there is income to meet them [ Estate of Roberts (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 70, 77, 162 P.2d 461 ]. In determining whether a devise is an annuity or merely income from a specified corpus or fund, the testator's intentions must be given effect [ Estate of Luckel (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 481, 487, 312 P.2d 24 ].

[c] Commercial Annuity Contracts

A gift of an annuity to be paid directly out of the assets of the estate, while legally possible, may be inadvisable. Since an annuity is potentially payable from the general assets of the estate [Prob. Code §§ 21117(b), (e), 21118(b); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)], it is a charge against the whole estate, and, if the payments are to continue over a long period (e.g., the lifetime of the annuitant), administration of the estate will be prolonged indefinitely. To avoid this problem, the testator may provide that a commercial annuity contract be purchased. Even without such a direction in the will, the executor or any other person interested in the estate may petition the court for authority to purchase an annuity from an insurer admitted to do business in California [Prob. Code § 9733]. On such a petition, the court may prescribe the conditions under which the annuity will be purchased [ Estate of Luckel (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 481, 492, 312 P.2d 24 (decided under former Prob. Code § 584, repealed July 1, 1988); see now Prob. Code § 9733].

[d] Considerations in Providing for Commercial Annuity Contracts

Whenever a testator contemplates making provision in the will for an annuity, several factors must be considered. The first is whether the annuity is to run for the lifetime of the intended annuitant or merely for a period of years. The age of the annuitant is also of critical importance, as is the amount of money that will be available to purchase an annuity contract. Before deciding to authorize the purchase of a commercial annuity contract, the testator or the attorney should confer with an insurance agent who is familiar with annuities to determine the cost of a single premium annuity contract for a person of the age of the intended annuitant. The testator should also decide if the intended annuitant will have the right to obtain a lump sum payment in lieu of periodic payments. The will may provide that the annuitant shall have the option of receiving a cash settlement in lieu of the annuity [for such a provision, see § 63.510].

The testator may require that the annuity contract be nonassignable, noncancelable, and nonrefundable. By providing that the contract be nonguaranteed, nonrefundable, noncancelable, and nonassignable, this form will prevent the annuitant from obtaining a lump sum payment in lieu of the periodic payments. The testator should, of course, be aware that any devisee may purchase an annuity contract for his or her own benefit. Unless the intended devisee requires investment guidance, a provision allowing the devisee to decide whether he or she would prefer to take the annuity contract or a cash devise [see § 63.510] may be advisable.

Annuity With Fixed Periodic Payments

I direct my executor to purchase a commercial annuity contract to provide for payments to _____ [name of intended annuitant] of _____ [specify amount] per month, beginning _____ [specify period, e.g., one year after my death] and continuing thereafter until the death of _____ [name of intended annuitant], and I give that annuity contract to _____ [name of intended annuitant]. As used in this will, the term "commercial annuity contract" means an annuity contract sold by an insurance company authorized to do business in the _____ [State of California or state in which I am domiciled at the time of my death] and insured on a nonguaranteed, nonrefundable, noncancelable, and nonassignable basis.

This form may be used to direct the executor to purchase a single premium annuity contract to provide for periodic payments to an intended annuitant. The amount of the premium is fixed, while the amount of the periodic payments will vary according to the age of the intended annuitant. 23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.510§ 63.510 Annuity With Option to Take Cash in Lieu of Periodic Payments[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to direct the executor to purchase a commercial annuity contract but allow the intended annuitant the option of taking a cash bequest in lieu of the periodic payments. The form includes two alternative provisions. The first gives the intended annuitant the option of taking a specified sum of cash in lieu of the annuity contract. The second gives the intended annuitant the option of taking cash equal to the cost of the annuity contract. For a provision directing the executor to purchase an annuity contract calling for fixed periodic payments, see § 63.508. For a provision directing the executor to purchase an annuity contract with a fixed premium, see § 63.509.

For discussion of annuities, commercial annuity contracts, and considerations in providing for commercial annuity contracts, see § 63.508[1].

[2] FORM*Annuity With Option to Take Cash in Lieu of Periodic Payments

[First alternative: gift of annuity contract or specified sum of cash]

I direct my executor to purchase a commercial annuity contract to provide for payments to _____[name of intended annuitant] of _____[specify amount] per month, beginning _____[specify period, e.g., one year after my death] and continuing thereafter until the death of _____[name of intended annuitant], and I give that annuity contract to _____[name of intended annuitant]. As used in this will, the term "commercial annuity contract" means an annuity contract sold by an insurance company authorized to do business in the _____[State of California or state in which I am domiciled at the time of my death] and insured on a nonguaranteed, nonrefundable, noncancelable, and nonassignable basis. Provided, however, that at the sole and exclusive option of _____[name of intended annuitant], communicated to my executor in writing within _____[specify period, e.g., four months] after my death, the foregoing provision providing for the purchase of a commercial annuity contract shall be ineffective, and _____[name of intended annuitant] shall receive cash in the amount of _____[specify amount], in lieu of the commercial annuity contract and the payments that would have been received thereunder.

I direct my executor to determine the cost of a single-premium commercial annuity contract providing for payments to _____[name of intended annuitant] in the amount of _____[specify amount] _____[per month or quarterly or annually], beginning _____[specify period, e.g., one year after my death], and continuing thereafter until the death of _____[name of intended annuitant]. I further direct my executor to advise _____[name of intended annuitant] of that cost, in writing, no later than _____[specify period, e.g., two months after my death]. I give _____[name of intended annuitant] the option to receive such an annuity, which shall be purchased for _____[him or her] by my executor, or to receive instead of such an annuity an amount of cash equal to the cost of purchasing such an annuity, determined as provided above. _____[name of intended annuitant] must advise my executor, in writing, no later than _____[specify period, e.g., four months] after my death, whether _____[he or she] elects to receive a commercial annuity or to receive cash as provided above. If _____[name of intended annuitant] fails to make such an election, then upon expiration of the time for making the election my Executor shall purchase a commercial annuity for _____[name of intended annuitant] as provided above. As used in this will, the term "commercial annuity contract" means an annuity contract sold by an insurance company authorized to do business in _____[California or the state in which I am domiciled at the time of my death] and insured on a nonguaranteed, nonrefundable, noncancelable, and nonassignable basis.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

F. Residuary Clause

1. General Residuary Clauses

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.530§ 63.530 Residuary Clause--Short and Long Forms[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give the residue of the testator's estate to a single devisee. A residuary clause should be included in any will that makes specific, general, or demonstrative devises, or that provides for any annuities, to ensure that the will disposes of the entire estate. The only situation in which a residuary clause is not required is when the will makes a general devise of all of the testator's property to a single devisee [see § 63.350]. Even in that case, however, an alternative residuary devise is recommended to take effect in the event that the primary disposition fails.

This form should be used in conjunction with § 63.532, which provides for alternative dispositions in the event the primary residuary devisee does not take. If the residue is to be divided into classes of property, § 63.531 should be used in place of this form. If there will be more than one residuary devisee, § 63.550 (residuary devise to two or more devisees in fractional shares) or § 63.551 (residuary devise to class) should be used instead of this form. For a "pour-over" residuary clause distributing the residue into a preexisting inter vivos trust, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.211[2], Section 3.01. For residuary clauses establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions .

[b] Residue of the Estate

A "residuary devise" is a devise of property that remains after all specific and general devises have been satisfied [Prob. Code § 21117(f); for discussion of the terminology used in the Probate Code, see § 63.351[1][b]]. A general residuary clause (or a will making a general disposition of all of the testator's property), however, does not, exercise a power of appointment held by the testator unless specific reference is made to the power or there is some other indication of an intention to exercise it [Prob. Code § 641(a)]. For a detailed list of all property that might potentially be included in the residue of an estate, see § 63.530[1][g].

[c] Function of Residuary Clause

The purpose of the residuary clause is to dispose of any portion of the testator's estate not otherwise disposed of by the will. The amount and value of the property included in the residue will vary widely from estate to estate. If the will has disposed of the bulk of the estate assets in the form of specific, general, or demonstrative devises, the residue will be small. If the will has made no such devises, or if the specific, general, or demonstrative devises are inconsequential, the residue may consist of all or nearly all of the estate.

Since general and demonstrative devises are satisfied out of the general assets of the estate and the residuary devisee receives only what remains [Prob. Code § 21117(f)], the residuary devisee will be the first to suffer if the estate assets are inadequate to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises. [see Prob. Code §§ 21401, 21402(a); see also § 63.416[1][b][i]]. If, after satisfaction of specific, demonstrative, and general devises, the remaining assets are small or insignificant, problems of administration may also arise.

Notwithstanding these negative features of residuary devises, if the testator wants the bulk of the estate to pass to a specific person or persons, or to a class, it will be easier to carry out the testator's intent by allowing the property to pass under a residuary devise than by attempting to itemize all of the property into specific, general, and demonstrative devises. The use of a residuary clause to dispose of the bulk of the estate has the added advantage of automatically passing to the primary devisee any property that the testator may inadvertently have failed to itemize, or that may be acquired after execution of the will. For this reason, it is recommended that the bulk of the estate be devised by way of the residuary clause. In addition, the use of one or more abatement provisions may be helpful. For a provision specifying the order in which devises will abate if the estate is inadequate to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises in full, see § 63.416. For a provision limiting nonresiduary devises to a fixed percentage of the estate, see § 63.417. For a provision specifying the order in which devises will abate if the estate is inadequate, and expressing a preference for the testator's spouse, see § 63.418. For a provision specifying the responsibility of the residue for the debts, expenses, and any family allowance, see § 63.591.

Devises designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056] by means of a "marital deduction formula" present special considerations. One component of such a formula typically involves a residuary devise that is designed either to qualify for the marital deduction or to take advantage of the surviving spouse's unified credit [I.R.C. § 2010] to minimize estate taxation. The role of residuary devises in connection with marital deduction planning is discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, which also contains formula clauses [see §§ 71.210-71.212 (formula clauses for testamentary trusts)].

[d] Short or Long Form

This form sets forth two alternative clauses, a short form and a long form. The long form contains a detailed itemization of the classes of property that are included in the residue. Whether the short or the long form will be used is largely a matter of individual preference. A specification of the property that is included in the residue is not necessary to transfer that property and adds little to an otherwise carefully drafted will. Some attorneys, however, feel that such a specification helps to clarify the scope of the residuary clause and makes it clear that property included in the residue is not included in any other devise.

[e] Drafting Considerations

The residuary clause should never include phrases that refer to specific items of property, such as "including my house and books," or "consisting of my tools and my furniture." Phrases such as these may be interpreted as specific devises and may raise questions about whether the clause is intended as a true residuary disposition. The testator may exempt certain items of property from the residue, if those items have been mentioned and disposed of in other parts of the will. Whenever any property is exempted from the residuary clause, the will should make an alternative disposition of the property to take effect if the devisee named to take the property does not in fact take it. Failure to make an alternative disposition will, under those circumstances, result in a partial intestacy. Although it is possible to exempt certain items of property from the residue, it is never necessary to do so, since the residue consists, by definition, of property that remains after all other devises have been satisfied [Prob. Code § 21117(f)]. In most cases, it is also inadvisable to do so.

The residuary clause should be placed at the end of the portion of the will that makes property dispositions. It should follow all specific, general, and demonstrative devises. If such a placement is impossible or impractical, the will should include a provision confirming that the clause is intended as a general residuary disposition. For such a provision, see § 63.570.

[f] Income Distributed to Residuary Beneficiaries

Unless the will provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 12000], net income received during administration and not paid to other devisees [see Prob. Code §§ 12002 (income payable to specific devisees), 12003 (interest payable on general pecuniary devise in trust), 12004(b) (interest payable on annuity), 12005 (interest payable to devisee of devise for maintenance)] must be distributed to the residuary devisee or devisees [Prob. Code § 12006].

[g] Property That May Be Included in Residue

Since the definition of residue is so inclusive [see discussion in § 63.530[1][b]], the kinds, categories, and forms of property that may pass under the residue clause are almost limitless. Some that the testator may not be aware of are the following:

- Property the testator owns but has forgotten.
- Property the testator acquired after execution of the will [Prob. Code § 21105].
- Property owned by the testator but wrongfully withheld by others.
- A remainder interest in real property to which the testator becomes entitled upon expiration of the prior estate.
- Devises conditioned on circumstances that have failed by the time of distribution (e.g., survival).
- Devises renounced or disclaimed by their devisees.
- Devises forfeited through unsuccessful will contests.
- Devises invalid for illegality or because they violate public policy.
- Devises invalid because of undue influence, fraud, menace, or duress [see Prob. Code § 6104].
- Earnings of the testator received after execution of the will.
- Income received during administration [Prob. Code §§ 12006, 16345].

[h] Survival and Lapse

A residuary devise, like any other devise, may be conditioned on survival for a specified period [Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. A devisee who fails to survive the testator, or who fails to survive until a future time required by the will, does not take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. For a discussion of devises conditioned on survival until a future time, see § 63.411[1]. For a discussion of simultaneous death and provisions stating the order of death in the event of a common disaster, see § 63.630. For an alternative disposition of the residue to take effect if the primary devisee does not survive the testator or for some other reason fails to take, see § 63.532. For alternative dispositions of the residue if there are multiple devisees, see § 63.550.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

F. Residuary Clause

1. General Residuary Clauses

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.531

§ 63.531 Residuary Clause--Gifts by Categories of Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to make residuary dispositions of different classes or categories of property to different beneficiaries. It includes provisions making residuary dispositions of real property, personal property, and particularly described items of property. Also included is a "catch-all" provision that may be used to dispose of all of the residue of the estate not otherwise disposed of by the will. For general residuary clauses, see § 63.531.

[b] Categories of Property

This form will permit the testator to divide the residue of the estate into specified classes or categories of property and to make a separate disposition of each. This method of disposition may be useful if the testator owns large quantities of particular types of property and wishes to ensure that all property of a certain type (e.g., all of the testator's commercial real property, or all of the testator's personal property) will pass to a named beneficiary. It eliminates the need for an itemized description of all property in a particular category and may be useful if the testator expects to acquire property after execution of the will or is concerned that any items in a specific category may have been inadvertently omitted.

Although this provision may be useful in rare cases, it should be employed with caution. If more than three or four separate residuary dispositions are contemplated, specific gifts of the property subject to those dispositions will usually be preferable. Splitting the residue into categories invites problems of classification, may lead to conflict among the residuary beneficiaries, and may unnecessarily prolong and complicate administration and distribution of the estate.

Great care must be taken to avoid overlapping descriptions of the property that is subject to the separate residuary dispositions. If a particular item of property could fall within two different categories of the residue as established by the will, conflict and litigation will almost invariably result. If there is the slightest danger of overlapping descriptions, a single residuary disposition will almost always be preferable. For general residuary clauses disposing of a single residue, see § 63.530. If the testator wishes different beneficiaries to receive different proportions of the single residue, the form in § 63.550 may be used.

[d] Need for Complete Residuary Scheme

The attorney must carefully construct a complete residuary scheme for any will that has more than one residue. Other residuary dispositions should be effective to dispose of any part of the residue that is not covered by the residuary categories. The "catch-all" provision included in this form should be employed to eliminate any possibility that property not described in another residuary disposition will escape the effect of the will and result in a partial intestacy.

1. General Residuary Clauses

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.532§ 63.532 Alternative Gift of Residue to One or More Named Beneficiaries[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make an alternative gift of the residue. The form provides that a named beneficiary or beneficiaries will take the residue if the primary residuary beneficiary for any reason fails to take. When used, it should immediately follow the residuary clause of the will. For an alternative gift of the residue which provides that issue of a deceased beneficiary will take the share of the deceased beneficiary, see § 63.533.

[b] Alternative Gifts

If the residuary beneficiaries do not survive the testator or fail to take the residue for any other reason, the will should provide for an alternative disposition. In the absence of such a disposition, the gift will either lapse or pass under provisions of the anti-lapse statute, Prob. Code § 21110. For a general consideration of the content and application the anti-lapse statute (together with drafting considerations), see discussion in § 63.411[1][d]. For a general consideration of distribution in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][d] and § 63.533[1][c].

 CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 F. Residuary Clause
 1. General Residuary Clauses

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.533

§ 63.533 Alternative Gift of Residue to Issue of Primary Beneficiary

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give the residue of the estate to the issue of the primary beneficiary if the primary beneficiary should for any reason fail to take. The form may provide that distribution will be made to the issue of the primary beneficiary according to any one of four basic patterns of distribution. For discussion of these basic patterns and the legal rules that govern them, see § 63.533[1][b] et seq.

For a will provision making an alternative gift of the residue to a named beneficiary or beneficiaries, see § 63.532.

[b] Gifts to Issue or Descendants--In General

There are four basic patterns under which the property of a testator may be distributed to the testator's "issue" or "descendants." Three of these patterns are set forth in the Probate Code, while the fourth is recognized in case law. The patterns are:

- Distribution by representation based on the nearest generation with living members (also referred to as distribution in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240;) [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245; see discussion in § 63.533[1][c]];
- Distribution "per stirpes," "by representation," or "by right of representation" (also referred to as distribution in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 246) [Prob. Code § 246; see discussion in § 63.533[1][d]];
- Distribution per capita at each generation (also referred to as distribution in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 247) [Prob. Code § 247; see discussion in § 63.533[1][e]]; and ■ Distribution per capita [ In re Estate of Rauschenplat (1931) 212 Cal. 33, 35, 297 P. 882 ; Estate of Carroll (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 798, 801-802, 145 P.2d 644 ; see also discussion in § 63.533[1][f]].

Which of these patterns will apply to a particular gift depends on the intention of the testator as expressed in the will [see Prob. Code §§ 245, 246, 247].

[c] Distribution by Representation Based on Nearest Generation With Living Members (Probate Code Sections 240, 245)

If the will calls for issue or descendants to take without specifying the manner, or requires distribution "in the manner provided in Section 240 of the Probate Code" and expresses no contrary intention, it will be distributed by representation based on the nearest generation with living members [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245]. This is the same pattern applicable to intestate distributions. Under this pattern, the property is divided into as many equal shares as there are living members of the nearest generation of issue then living and deceased members of that generation who leave issue then living. Each living member of the nearest generation of issue then living receives one share, and the share of each deceased member of that generation who leaves issue then living is divided in the same manner among his or her then living issue [Prob. Code § 240, see Estate of Beckle (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 34, 38, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 890 (Distribution of an intestate decedent's estate could not be limited to surviving first cousins and the children of predeceased first cousins while excluding grandchildren of predeceased first cousins because the governing statutes, Prob. Code §§ 50, 240, 6402(d), do not limit the surviving issue of a predeceased heir entitled to inherit to the first generation; rather, surviving issue includes all lineal descendants of all generations)].

A contrary intention is not shown by the use, without more, of the words "per capita," when living members of the designated class are not all of the same generation [Prob. Code § 245(b)(1)], nor is a contrary intention expressed, without more, by use of contradictory wording, such as "per capita and per stirpes," or "equally and by right of representation" [Prob. Code § 245(b)(2)].

For further consideration of distribution by representation based on the nearest generation with living members, see discussion in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][d].

[d] Distribution Per Stirpes or by Representation (Probate Code Section 246)

If the will calls for property to be distributed "per stirpes," "by representation," "by right of representation," or "in the manner provided in Section 246 of the Probate Code," it will be distributed as provided in the latter section [Prob. Code § 246(c); for special rule applicable to will or trust executed before January 1, 1986, see Prob. Code § 246(b)]. The property will be divided into as many equal shares as there are living children of the designated ancestor, if any, and deceased children who leave issue then living. Each living child of the designated ancestor is allocated one share, and the share of each deceased child who leaves issue then living is divided in the same manner [Prob. Code § 246(a)].

This pattern of distribution is based upon "roots" or "stocks" ("stirpes" in Latin) [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979) 1030]. Under it, heirs are entitled to take the shares of their own immediate ancestors, who in turn are entitled to take the shares of their immediate ancestors, and so on until a common ancestor is reached [ In re Estate of Rauschenplat (1931) 212 Cal. 33, 35, 297 P. 882 ; Estate of Carroll (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 798, 801-802, 145 P.2d 644 ].

For further discussion of distribution "per stirpes" or "by representation," see discussion in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][e].

[e] Distribution Per Capita at Each Generation (Probate Code Section 247)

If the will calls for property to be distributed "per capita at each generation," or "in the manner provided in Section 247 of the Probate Code," [Prob. Code § 247(b)]; for special rule applicable to will or trust executed before January 1, 1986, see Prob. Code § 247(c)], the property will be divided into as many equal shares as there are living members of the nearest generation of issue then living and deceased members of that generation who leave issue then living. Each living member of the nearest generation of issue then living is allocated one share, and the remaining shares, if any, are combined and then divided and allocated in the same manner among the remaining issue as if the issue already allocated a share and their descendants were then deceased [Prob. Code § 247(a)].

For further discussion of distribution per capita at each generation, see discussion in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][f].

[f] Distribution Per Capita

Distribution "per capita" is the traditional pattern under which property is distributed to the issue, descendants, or other heirs of a decedent as individuals and not according to the shares of their ancestors [ In re Estate of Rauschenplat (1931) 212 Cal. 33, 35, 297 P. 882 ; Estate of Carroll (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 798, 801-802, 145 P.2d 644 ]. In Latin, the words "per capita" mean "by the heads or polls"; i.e., "according to the number of individuals" [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979) 1022]. When property is distributed "per capita," the distributees take in equal shares [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979) 1022]. Distribution "per capita" is traditionally contrasted with distribution "per stirpes" [see Lombardi v. Blois (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 191, 198, 40 Cal. Rptr. 899 ; see discussion in § 63.533[1][d]].

Care must be used in drafting any will provision which calls for distribution "per capita." Use of the words "per capita," without more, when living members of the designated class are not all of the same generation, will not achieve a traditional distribution "per capita," but will result in a distribution in the manner provided by Prob. Code § 240 [Prob. Code § 245(b)(1)]; see discussion in § 63.533[1][c].

For further discussion of distribution "per capita," see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][g].

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.550

§ 63.550 Residuary Clause--Fractional Shares

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give the residue of the estate to two or more named individuals in fractional shares. For general residuary gifts, see § 63.530. For residuary gifts by categories of property, see § 63.531.

The fractional shares provided for in this form may be equal or unequal. The use of fractional shares instead of alternative methods such as percentage interests is recommended as the easiest and most practical method of disposing of the residue among several named beneficiaries. If the residue is to be apportioned among a large number of beneficiaries, the attorney should use a common denominator to describe all shares (e.g., eight-sixteenths instead of one-half) and make sure that the total of all fractional interests equals 100 percent of the residuary estate.

If the residue will be given to a group, such as children or grandchildren of the testator, and if the membership of the group may expand before the testator's death, the testator should consider making a class gift. For a residuary disposition to a class, see § 63.551.

[b] Residuary Gift to Multiple Beneficiaries--Statutory Rules

If a residuary gift is made to two or more persons, and the gift to one of those persons fails for any reason and no alternative disposition is provided, the share passes to the other persons in proportion to their other interest in the residuary gift [Prob. Code § 2111(b)]. This rule, however, is subject to two major exceptions that in practice are likely to apply more often than the rule itself.

First, the rule yields to the "anti-lapse" statute [Prob. Code § 2110], which provides in substance that a devise to "kindred" of the testator or the testator's spouse will pass to the issue of the devisee in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240 [for discussion of Prob. Code § 240, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms § 61.115[6]] if the transferee predeceases the testator or fails (or is treated as failing) to survive until the required time [Prob. Code § 21110(a); for discussion of the anti-lapse statute, see § 63.411[1][d]]. Since residuary beneficiaries are usually persons closely related to the testator, the anti-lapse statute usually will apply to residuary dispositions. It assures that the issue of deceased devisee will take the devisee's share of the residuary estate, rather than having that share divided among the other devisees named in the will.

Second, both the basic rule and the anti-lapse statute will yield to the intent of the testator [Prob. Code §§ 21102(b), 21110(b)]. If the will makes a substitute disposition, that disposition will control. As noted below, the preferred drafting practice is to include a substitute disposition].

In addition, the use of extrinsic evidence is not precluded, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21101(c)].

[c] Alternative and Substitute Dispositions

Although application of the statutory rules discussed above will usually give the result desired by the testator, the best drafting practice is to specify what the testator wants done if one or more devisees are deceased or unable to take their respective shares. This reduces the possibility of uncertainty over the testator's intent and results in a clearer, more complete estate plan. alternate or substitute gifts of the residue of the estate to a named beneficiary or beneficiaries, see § 63.533. For provisions making alternate or substitute gifts of the residue to issue of the primary beneficiary, see § 63.533.

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

F. Residuary Clause

2. Dispositions to Multiple Beneficiaries and Classes

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.551

§ 63.551 Residuary Clause--Gift to Class

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give the residue of the estate to members of a class. The form includes two alternative provisions. The first may be used to make a class gift to specified relatives, such as the testator's "children" or "grandchildren," or children of a specified relative. The second may be used to make a class gift to "issue" of the testator or of some other named person. Either of these provisions may be used to direct that distribution to members of the class will be made in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240, in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 246, in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 247, or "per capita." For a discussion of distributions under Prob. Code §§ 240, 246, and 247, and distribution "per capita," see § 63.551[1][e].

For will provisions making general residuary gifts, see § 63.530. For will provisions making residuary gifts by classes or categories of property, see § 63.531. For will provisions making alternative disposition of the residue if all or part of a primary residuary gift fails, see §§ 63.532 and 63.533. For a gift of the residue in fractional shares, see § 63.550.

[b] Gifts to a Class

[i] In General

Halfbloods, adopted persons, persons born out of wedlock, stepchildren, foster children, and the issue of all such persons when appropriate to the class, are included in the terms of a class gift or relationship in accordance with the rules for determining relationship and inheritance rights for purposes of intestate succession [Prob. Code § 21115(a); see Prob. Code §§ 6400-6455 (intestate succession rules)]. However, two exceptions are recognized to this rule. First, in construing a devise by a testator who is not the natural parent, a person born to the natural parent will not be considered the child of that parent unless the person lived while a minor as a regular member of the household of the natural parent or of that parent's parent, brother, sister, spouse, or surviving spouse [Prob. Code § 21115(b)]. Second, in construing a devise by a testator who is not the adoptive parent, a person adopted by the adoptive parent will not be considered the child of that parent unless the person lived while a minor (either before or after the adoption) as a regular member of the household of the adopting parent or of that parent's parent, brother, sister, or surviving spouse [Prob. Code § 21115(b); Estate of DeLoreto (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1048, 1052-1053, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 513 (adopted adult children of beneficiary of father's trust were not members of class of grandchildren who were trust beneficiaries)]. This rule (and the two exceptions noted) also apply to:

- Persons who would be kindred of the testator or kindred of a surviving, deceased, or former spouse of the testator under Prob. Code § 21110 [Prob. Code § 21115(c)(1)];
- Persons to be included as issue of a deceased devisee under Prob. Code § 21110 (the anti-lapse statute) [Prob. Code § 21115(c)(2); see § 63.411[1][d)];
- Persons who would be the testator's or other person's heirs under Prob. Code § 21114 [Prob. Code § 21115(c)(3)].

These rules for determining intestate succession are those in effect at the time the transfer is to take effect in enjoyment [Prob. Code § 21115(d)].

For more detailed discussion of the statutory definitions of "child" and "children," together with rules governing the rights of natural children, adopted children, foster children, and stepchildren to take under a will or by intestate succession, see § 63.226[1][c][i] et seq.

[ii] Rule Against Perpetuities

A gift to a class has the potential for violating the rule against perpetuities. In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP), which includes a recodification of Professor John Chipman Gray's classic formulation of the common-law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a); see also Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16]. Under that recodification, a nonvested property interest is invalid unless, when the interest is created, it is certain either to vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of a person alive at the time of creation [Prob. Code § 21205(a)]. If the right of any person to membership in a particular class cannot be determined within the specified 21 years, then the class will fail to vest or terminate within that period and the common-law rule against perpetuities is violated.

However, the USRAP as adopted in California also includes a 90-year "wait-and-see" rule, under which a nonvested interest may be valid if it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [see Prob. Code § 21205(b)]. The 90-year "wait-and-see" rule shifts the traditional perpetuities focus from what might conceivably happen to a nonvested interest during the applicable perpetuities period to what actually happens to the interest in the 90 years after it is created. For further discussion of this rule and its effect, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16[6]

Although the 90-year "wait-and-see" rule substantially liberalizes perpetuities regulation in California, it does not eliminate the need to recognize potential perpetuities violations and take reasonable steps to avoid them. Any will provision that makes a class gift should be drafted to avoid the potential for a perpetuities violation. Further, any will that makes a class gift (or otherwise calls for a complex disposition of property) should include a perpetuities savings clause. For perpetuities savings clauses suitable for use in wills, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, §§ 67.231, 67.232. For a detailed discussion of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16.

[c] Protection for Issue of Kindred Devisees

Under Prob. Code § 21110 (the anti-lapse statute), the issue of devisees who are kindred of the testator, or kindred of a surviving, deceased, or former spouse of the testator, are protected against unintended lapse of gifts. For a general discussion of the antilapse statute, see § 63.411[1][d].

[d] Defining the Class

Since the statutes go to some lengths to specify the persons who will and will not be included in a class gift [see § 63.551[1][b][i]], the will should clearly state whether halfbloods, adopted persons, and persons born out of wedlock, or the issue of those persons, will be included in the class. For a will provision defining the words "child" and "children," see § 63.672. For a will provision defining the word "issue," see § 63.673. For a general consideration of the statutory definitions of "child" and "children," together with rules governing the rights of natural children, adopted children, foster children, and stepchildren to take under a will or by intestate succession, see § 63.226[1][c][i] et seq.

[e] Patterns of Distribution for Gifts to Issue and Descendants

There are four basic patterns under which the property of a testator may be distributed to the testator's "issue" or "descendants":

- Distribution by representation based on the nearest generation with living members (also referred to as "distribution in the manner provided in Section 240 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245; see § 63.533[1][c)];
- Distribution "per stirpes," "by representation," or "by right of representation" (also referred to as "distribution in the manner provided in Section 246 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 246; see discussion in § 63.533[1][d)];
- Distribution per capita at each generation (also referred to as "distribution in the manner provided in Section 247 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 247; see § 63.533[1][e)]; and
- Distribution per capita [see In re Estate of Rauschenplat (1931) 212 Cal. 33, 35, 297 P. 882; Estate of Carroll (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 798, 801-802, 145 P.2d 644; see also § 63.533[1][f)].

Which of these patterns will apply to a particular gift depends on the intention of the testator as expressed in the will [see Prob. Code §§ 245, 246, 247]. If the class consists of "issue" or "descendants" of the testator (or of another person, e.g., a child of the testator), the will should adopt one of these patterns of distribution.

[2] FORM

Residuary Clause--Gift to Class

Class Gift of Residue

[First alternative provision: Class consisting of specified relatives:]

I give all the rest and residue of my estate to _____ [identify class, e.g., my children or my grandchildren or the children of my sister, Sally Ann Smith], as a class. The class so designated _____ [includes, but is not limited to, or does not include] halfbloods, adopted persons, persons born out of wedlock, and the issue of those persons. In the event that any class member does not survive me and leaves issue who survive me, then the share which that class member would have received if he or she had survived me shall be distributed to his or her issue [in the manner provided in Section _____ (specify either 240, 246, or 247) of the California Probate Code or per capita, and not per stirpes, the issue to take in equal shares, whether or not of the same generation].

[OR]

[Second alternative provision: Class consisting of issue of testator or another specified person:]

I give all the rest and residue of my estate to my issue [or the issue of _____ (name and relationship)], as a class. In the event that any class member does not survive me and leaves issue who survive me, then the share which that class member would have received if he or she had survived me shall be distributed to his or her issue _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (specify either 240, 246, or 247) of the California Probate Code or per capita, and not per stirpes, said issue to take in equal shares, whether or not living members of the class are all of the same generation].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to confirm that a specific clause is intended to operate as a general residuary provision. It is usually unnecessary to confirm that a specific provision of the will is intended as a residuary disposition. If, however, the residuary clause cannot be placed as the last dispositive provision in the will, or if there is any possibility of uncertainty about whether a particular clause is really intended to operate as a general residuary disposition, this clause will clarify the testator's intent.

[2] FORM

Clause Confirming That Particular Provision Is Intended as General Residuary Provision

Notwithstanding any other provision of this will or any order among the provisions of this will, it is my intention that this clause operate as the general residuary disposition of this will and shall pass all the property that I am entitled to dispose of by will and that is not otherwise effectively disposed of in this will.

3. Interpretation and Operation of Residuary Clause

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.571

§ 63.571 Clause Directing Executor to Convert Residue Into Cash

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Will

This form may be used to direct the executor to sell the residue of the estate and distribute the proceeds in accordance with other directions in the will. For general residuary gifts, see § 63.530. For residuary gifts by categories of property, see § 63.531. For alternative dispositions if all or part of the primary residuary gift fails, see § 63.532. For a gift of the residue in fractional shares with alternative dispositions, see § 63.550. For a residuary gift to a class, see § 63.551. For a clause requiring abatement of nonresiduary gifts to protect the residuary beneficiaries against unanticipated reduction of the estate, see § 63.572.

[b] Sale of Estate Property

When the will directs that property be sold, or gives the executor authority to sell property [see Prob. Code § 10000], the executor must sell the property in accordance with the directions stated in the will [Prob. Code § 10002(a)]. The executor, or any interested person [see Prob. Code § 48 (definition)], may, after a noticed hearing, receive an order relieving the executor of the duty to comply with the will if noncompliance would be to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the interested persons [Prob. Code § 10002(b); see Prob. Code § 1220 (notice requirements)]. Similarly, if the executor neglects or refuses to sell estate property when the will directs the executor to do so, any interested person may petition the court for an order compelling the executor to perform the sale [Prob. Code § 10001].

Absent directions in the will [see Prob. Code § 10002(a)], the executor has discretion to determine the order in which estate property will be sold, whether to sell the estate's entire interest or some lesser interest, and whether the sale will be at public auction or by private sale [Prob. Code § 10003]. The executor has the authority to enter into contracts with agents, brokers [see Prob. Code § 10150], or auctioneers [see Prob. Code § 10151] for the purpose of securing the sale of estate property [see also Prob. Code §§ 10160-10167 (compensation of agents, brokers, or auctioneers)]; Sullivan v. Dorsa (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 947, 956, 963, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 547 (broker's commission cannot be awarded on unconsummated sale of real property)].

In the absence of any contrary directions in the will [see Prob. Code § 10002(a)], if the executor determines that any assets of the estate constitute a unit for purposes of sale, he or she may have them appraised as a unit [Prob. Code § 10004(a)]. With court approval, the property may be sold under one bid without prior appraisal, but if the property is sold at a private sale, the purchase price may not be below 90 percent of its appraised value [Prob. Code § 10004(b), (c)]. If the estate assets to be sold as a unit include any real property, the sale must be made pursuant to the statutes governing those sales [see Prob. Code §§ 10300-10316], and if the assets constituting a unit are all personal property, the personal property sales provisions [see Prob. Code §§ 10250-10264] apply [Prob. Code § 10004(d)].

At the executor's discretion, estate property may be sold either with or without notice if the will directs or authorizes the sale [Prob. Code §§ 10252 (personal property), 10303 (real property)].

Clause Directing Executor to Convert Residue Into Cash

I direct my Executor, as soon after commencement of the administration of my estate as is consistent with proper administration, to sell all of the residue of my estate, at either public auction or private sale, and with or without notice (as my Executor shall in my Executor's discretion determine) _____ [or state other specific directions for the method of selling the property], and to distribute the proceeds of that sale [as I have otherwise directed in this will or in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph _____ (number of paragraph) of this will].

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

F. Residuary Clause

3. Interpretation and Operation of Residuary Clause

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.572§ 63.572 Clause Requiring Abatement of Nonresiduary Devises to Protect Residuary Devises[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for the abatement of nonresiduary devises and thus to protect the residuary devisees against an unanticipated reduction in the size of the estate. The form provides that if the residue of the estate is less than a specified sum (or, in the alternative, less than a specified percentage of all of the property disposed of by the will), the nonresiduary devises are to abate proportionally, so that the residue will be no less than a specified sum (or, in the alternative, no less than a specified percentage of all the property disposed of by the will). For a pecuniary devise limited to a specified percentage of the estate, see § 63.413. For a provision specifying the order in which devises will abate if the testator's estate is insufficient to pay all debts and expenses and satisfy all devises in full, see § 63.416. For a clause limiting nonresiduary devises to a specified percentage of the estate, see § 63.417.

[b] Abatement of Residue*[i] Statutory Rules

A typical testamentary plan may envision a few devises of relatively small or nominal value to friends or relatives, followed by a residuary disposition of the bulk of the estate to the testator's spouse or children. A testator who wishes to pass the bulk of his or her assets by way of a residuary devise should consider the possibility that the value of the estate may decline after the will is executed but before he or she dies. If property disposed of by a will is not sufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devises in full, it may be necessary to reduce or eliminate some devises. In some circumstances, it may even be necessary to sell assets disposed of by the will to pay debts or expenses of administration or to satisfy other devises [see Prob. Code § 10000(a)]. The process whereby testamentary devises are reduced or eliminated is referred to as "abatement" and is subject to rules set forth in the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 21400-21406].

Under the Probate Code rules, residuary devisees [see Prob. Code § 21117(f) ("residuary devise" defined)] abate before all other devisees [Prob. Code § 21402(a)]. If abatement is necessary, a residuary devise, even if to the testator's spouse or children, will abate before a specific or general devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(a), (b)], even if the specific or general devisees are unrelated to the testator.

The Probate Code rules do not apply, however, if the will provides otherwise. If the will provides for abatement, or if the testator's plan or purpose would be defeated by abatement under the statutory rules, the shares of devisees will abate as necessary to effectuate the will, plan, or purpose [Prob. Code § 21400; see Prob. Code § 21100(b) ("instrument" includes will)].

[ii] Will Provisions

If the testator wishes to protect the residuary devisees from application of the statutory abatement rules, the will may provide that a particular devise will not exceed a specified percentage of the estate [see § 63.413]. Alternatively, the will may provide that nonresiduary devisees, considered collectively, will not exceed a specified percentage of the estate [see § 63.417]. Finally, the will may provide that, if the residue is less than a specified sum or a specified percentage of the estate, nonresiduary devisees will abate. This form adopts the latter approach. For a general consideration of abatement and problems that arise when estate assets are not sufficient to pay all debts and expenses and to satisfy all devisees, see § 63.416[1].

[2] FORM

Clause Requiring Abatement of Nonresiduary Devisees to Protect Residuary Devisees

I give all the rest and residue of my estate to _____ [name of residuary devisee]. If the value of the residue of my estate is less than _____ [the sum of _____ (specify amount) or _____ (specify percent) percent of the value of all of my property disposed of by this will], then I direct that all of the nonresiduary devisees provided for in this will shall abate proportionally, so that the residue of my estate shall in no event be less than _____ [the sum of _____ (specify amount) or _____ (specify percent) percent of the value of all of my property disposed of by this will]. As used in this paragraph, "residue of my estate" means the value of all of my property disposed of by this will, less the total of all of my debts, all expenses of administration of my estate, all death taxes due and payable as a result of my death, and all nonresiduary devisees provided for in this will.

§ 63.590 Responsibility of Residue for Debts, Expenses, and Family Allowance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to specify whether debts, expenses of administration, and any family allowance payable out of the estate will or will not be paid out of the residue of the estate. The form includes two optional provisions, one providing that the residue will be free of responsibility for payment, and the other providing that the residue will bear the burden of payment but that any part of the residue that qualifies for the estate tax marital deduction will be free of it. For forms apportioning the payment of death taxes, see §§ 63.310-63.317.

[b] Apportionment of Debts, Expenses, and Family Allowance

The estate of every testator is subject to administration [see Prob. Code §§ 7000-12591] and, under rules set forth in the Probate Code, to the payment of debts [see Prob. Code §§ 9000-9399 (creditor claims), 11400-11467 (payment of debts)], expenses of administration [see Prob. Code §§ 11401(b) ("debt" includes an expense of administration), 11420(a)(1) (priority for payment of expenses of administration)], and any family allowance that may be payable out of the assets of the estate [Prob. Code § 7001; see Prob. Code §§ 6540-6545 (family allowance)]. If necessary, the executor may sell property disposed of by the will to pay debts, taxes, expenses of administration, a family allowance, or even other devises [Prob. Code § 10000(a)]. Unless the will provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 21400], the shares of devisees will abate (be reduced or eliminated if necessary) for the purpose of paying debts, expenses of administration, and a family allowance in the order specified in Prob. Code § 21402 [Prob. Code § 21401]. Under Prob. Code § 21402, property not disposed of by the will (if any) will abate first, followed by property subject to a residuary devise [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(1), (2)]. Property subject to general and specific devises will abate only after all of the residue has been abated [Prob. Code § 21402(a)(36)]. If there are two or more residuary devisees, the shares of those devisees will abate pro rata [Prob. Code § 21403(a)].

The order of abatement set forth in Prob. Code § 21402 will be appropriate for many estates. If the will names only one devisee, for example, payments of the debts and expenses out of the residue will adequately serve the needs of that devisee and other arrangements will be unnecessary. If most of the estate consists of specific devises, however, and if the residue is too small to pay all of the debts and expenses, the executor may be forced to require a pro rata contribution from the specific devisees [see Prob. Code § 21402(a)(5), (6) (order of abatement of specific devisees); see also Prob. Code § 21403(a) (shares of beneficiaries abate pro rata within each class)]. If the testator wishes a particular devisee to be free of responsibility for payment of debts or expenses, the will should provide that the devisee take free of those charges.

If a substantial part of the testator's estate has been transferred to an inter vivos trust, leaving only a small probate estate, the probate estate may be inadequate for payment of the debts and expenses. In such a case, the testator may provide that the trust will pay all or part of the debts and expenses. If the testator wishes to preserve the maximum estate tax marital deduction, without reduction for debts or expenses [see I.R.C. § 2056(a); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(a)-2(b)(2)], the will should provide that no debts or administration expenses are to be paid from property subject to the marital deduction gift.

[2] FORM

Responsibility of Residue for Debts, Expenses, and Family Allowance

[If residue will not be responsible for debts of estate:]

The residue of my estate shall not be charged with or responsible for the payment of any of my debts, any of the expenses of administration of my estate, or any family allowance that may be payable out of my estate. It is my wish and intention that the residuary _____ [devisee or devisees] named in this will shall take without deduction, reduction, charge, or offset for any such payment. I direct that my executor shall not resort to the residue for any such payment, unless all other property of my estate shall have been exhausted, but shall pay all of my debts, expenses of administration, and any family allowance as follows: _____ [set forth directions for payment].

[Or, if only that portion of residue that does not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction will be responsible for debts of estate:]

I direct my executor to pay all of my debts, all expenses of administration of my estate, and any family allowance that may be payable out of my estate, from the residue of my estate that is disposed of by this will. Provided, however, that if any portion of the residue qualifies for the marital deduction allowed by Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(a) (or its successor), my executor shall pay any debts, expenses, and family allowance only from the part of the residue that does not qualify for the marital deduction. It is my intention that the marital deduction shall not be reduced, diminished, or impaired, in whole or in part, by reason of any such payment.

F. Residuary Clause

4. Liabilities of the Residue

§ 63.591 Instructions as to Ademption of Residuary Interests

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to state whether the interests of any of the residuary beneficiaries will be adeemed (i.e., satisfied or reduced) by inter vivos transfers from the testator to those beneficiaries. The form includes two optional provisions, one stating that inter vivos transfers to residuary beneficiaries will not satisfy, reduce, or otherwise adeem any gifts made to those beneficiaries under the will, and the other providing that inter vivos transfers to some, but not all, of the residuary beneficiaries will have that effect. For a general provision stating whether transfers made during the testator's lifetime will or will not adeem testamentary dispositions in favor of those beneficiaries, see § 63.426.

[b] Advancement and Ademption as Applied to Residue

Property given by a transferor during his or her lifetime to a person is treated as a satisfaction of an at-death transfer to that person, in whole or in part, only if one of the following conditions is satisfied:

- The instrument provides for deduction of the lifetime gift from the at-death transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(1)].
- The transferor declares in a contemporaneous writing that the gift is in satisfaction of the at-death transfer or that its value is to be deducted from the value of that transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(2)].
- The transferee acknowledges in writing that the gift is in satisfaction of the at-death transfer or that its value is to be deducted from the value of that transfer [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(3)].
- The property given is the same property that is the subject of a specific gift to that person [Prob. Code § 21135(a)(4)].

Thus, a will provision dealing with ademption is only one of the permissible ways for dealing with this issue. As discussed below, it is probably not the preferable method in the majority of cases.

[c] Practical Considerations

In the majority of estates, the residuary beneficiaries will receive the largest portion of the estate. Under these circumstances, the testator may or may not want a particular lifetime gift to affect the amount of a residuary beneficiary's inheritance. The testator should consider each gift made to such a beneficiary during the testator's lifetime on its own merits, and decide whether or not that gift should be deducted from the share left to that beneficiary under the testator's will. In other words, the testator needs flexibility to determine whether or not ademption should apply in a given case.

The testator's will should not limit the flexibility necessary to make this case-by-case determination. As discussed in § 63.426[1][c], any will provision dealing with ademption will operate as a constraint on the testator's flexibility. For this reason, it is recommended that except in unusual cases, it is better for the will to remain silent on the question of whether lifetime gifts are to be deducted from testamentary dispositions. If the testator decides that a particular gift to a residuary beneficiary should count against that beneficiary's share under the will, the testator can simply execute a declaration to that effect at the time the gift is made.

[2] FORM

Instructions as to Ademption of Residuary Interests

[If there is to be no ademption of residuary gifts:]

No payment, gift, or transfer of property of any kind made by me during my lifetime to any residuary beneficiary under this will shall operate to reduce, satisfy, or adeem, in whole or in part, any residuary gift I have made under this will.

[Or, if some but not all residuary gifts are to be adeemed:]

No payment, gift, or transfer of property of any kind made by me during my lifetime to any residuary beneficiary under this will shall operate to reduce, satisfy, or adeem, in whole or in part, any residuary gift that I have made to that beneficiary under this will, except with respect to a transfer to the beneficiary named in Paragraph _____[number] of this will. Should I make any gift, payment, or transfer during my lifetime to the beneficiary named in Paragraph _____[number] of this will, then I direct that the full value of that gift, payment, or transfer, determined as of the date of the gift, payment, or transfer, shall be deducted from the value of the residuary gift made to that beneficiary under this will, and if the value of all such gifts, payments, or transfers made to that beneficiary, determined in the manner stated above, equals or exceeds the value of the residuary gift made to that beneficiary under this will, then, and to that extent, the residuary gift shall be satisfied in full.

PART IV. FORMS

G. Arrangements for Funeral, Burial, Cremation, and Burial Plot

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.610

§ 63.610 Directions for Burial of Testator's Remains

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give directions for the burial of the testator's remains. For directions for cremating the testator's remains, see § 63.611. For provisions directing the executor to comply with written instructions left by the testator or with the terms of a contract providing for funeral and burial or cremation, see § 63.612.

[b] Testator's Instructions for Interment

[i] In General

Any person may leave written directions regarding the disposition of his or her remains and specifying funeral goods and services to be provided after his or her death [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(a)]. If there is no contrary statement signed and dated by the person, the directions may not be altered, changed, or otherwise amended in any material way, except as may be required by law, and they must be faithfully carried out upon the person's death, provided both of the following requirements are met [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(a)]:

- The directions clearly and completely set forth the person's wishes in sufficient detail to preclude any material ambiguity with regard to the instructions.
- The arrangements for payment through trusts, insurance, commitments by others, or any other effective and binding means have been made [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7735 (preneed funeral arrangements)].

If funds are set aside only for the cost of disposition of the person's remains, or only for the funeral goods and services, the wishes of the person must be carried out only to the extent that the person has sufficient assets to do so, unless the person or persons that otherwise have the right to control the disposition and arrange for the funeral goods and services agree to assume the cost [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(b)].

If directions for the disposition of a person's remains are contained in a will, they must be carried out immediately, regardless of the validity of the will in other respects or the fact that the will may not be offered for or admitted to probate until a later date [Prob. Code § 7100.1(c)].

[ii] Right of Survivors to Control Disposition of Remains

Unless a person has left written directions regarding the disposition of his or her remains and specifying the funeral goods and services to be provided after his or her death, the right to control the disposition of the remains and to arrange for the funeral goods and services vests in the following persons in the order named [Health & Safety Code § 7100(a)]:

- An agent under a power of attorney for health care governed by the Health Care Decisions Law [Prob. Code § 4600 et seq.].
- The competent surviving spouse.
- The sole surviving competent adult child of the deceased person or, if there is more than one competent adult child, the majority of the surviving competent adult children. However, less than the majority may exercise this right if they have used reasonable efforts to notify all other surviving competent adult children of their instructions and are not aware of any opposition to those instructions on the part of one-half or more of all the surviving competent adult children.
- The surviving competent parent or parents of the decedent. If one of the surviving competent parents is absent, the remaining competent parent will be vested with this right after reasonable efforts have been unsuccessful in locating the absent surviving competent parent.
- The sole surviving competent adult sibling of the decedent or, if there is more than one surviving competent adult sibling of the decedent, the majority of the surviving competent adult siblings. Less than the majority of the surviving competent adult siblings may exercise this right if they have used reasonable efforts to notify all other surviving competent adult siblings of their instructions and are not aware of any opposition to those instructions by the majority of all surviving competent adult siblings.
- The surviving competent adult person or persons respectively in the next degrees of kindred or, if there is more than one surviving person of the same degree of kindred, the majority of those persons. Less than the majority of surviving competent persons of the same degree of kindred may exercise this right if they have used reasonable efforts to notify all other surviving competent persons of the same degree of kindred of their instructions and are not aware of any opposition to those instructions on the part of one-half or more of all surviving competent persons of the same degree of kindred.
- The public administrator when the deceased person has sufficient assets.

As used above, "adult" means an individual who has attained 18 years of age, "child" means a natural or adopted child of the decedent, and "competent" means an individual who has not been declared incompetent by a court of law or who has been declared competent by a court of law following a declaration of incompetence [Prob. Code § 7100(g)].

If any person to whom the right of control has vested has been charged with murder or voluntary manslaughter in connection with the decedent's death, and those charges are known to the funeral director or cemetery authority, the right of control is relinquished and passed on to the next of kin in accordance with Prob. Code § 7100(a) [Prob. Code §

7100(b)(1)].

Liability for the reasonable cost of interment devolves upon the same persons in whom the right to control disposition of the remains and arrange for funeral goods and services is vested, and in the same order of priority as shown in the foregoing list [Health & Safety Code § 7100(a)]. This liability devolves jointly and severally upon all kin of the deceased person in the same degree of kindred, and upon the estate of the deceased person [Health & Safety Code § 7100(c)]. However, if a person accepts the gift of an entire body, that person will, subject to the terms of the gift, be liable for the reasonable cost of final disposition of the deceased person [Health & Safety Code § 7100(c)]; see also Health & Safety Code §§ 7150-7151.40 (anatomical gifts); see also Ch. 106, Anatomical Gifts § 106.11 et seq.].

[iii] Authority of Funeral Director or Cemetery Authority

A funeral director or cemetery authority will have complete authority to control the disposition of a deceased person's remains, and to recover the usual and customary charges for the disposition, when both of the following apply [Health & Safety Code § 7100(b)]:

- The funeral director or cemetery authority has knowledge that there are no persons who have the legal right to control the disposition of the remains and arrange for the funeral services and goods, or none of those persons can be found after reasonable inquiry or contacted by reasonable means [see Health & Safety Code § 7100(a) and discussion in § 63.610[1][b][ii]].
- The public administrator fails to assume responsibility for disposition of the remains within seven days after having been given written notice of the facts. For this purpose, written notice may be delivered by hand, U.S. mail, facsimile transmission, or telegraph.

A funeral director or cemetery authority will not be liable to any person or persons for carrying out the instructions of the deceased person or the person entitled to control the disposition [Health & Safety Code § 7100(e)].

[iv] Practical Considerations Relating to Inclusion of Interment Directions in Will

Most attorneys believe that interment instructions should not be left solely in a will. This is because funerals and interments ordinarily must be carried out within a short time after the testator's death and, in many cases, the will is not consulted or read until after the remains have been interred. If the testator's wishes respecting interment are not known before the remains are interred, it is likely that those wishes will be completely frustrated. For this reason, it is preferable to set forth interment instructions in a separate inter vivos instrument, such as a letter addressed to the executor or to a close relative. To guard against the possibility that such a letter may be lost or misplaced, the original should be delivered to the executor and a copy (or duplicate original) should be attached to and stored with the will. As further protection against misplacement of the instructions, the will may repeat and confirm the nontestamentary instructions.

Whether the instructions are embodied in the will or elsewhere, they should be in writing [see, e.g., Maffei v. Woodlawn Memorial Park (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 119, 123-130, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 679 (dispute between decedent's surviving husband and decedent's brother concerning decedent's wishes regarding disposition of her remains in absence of written instructions)], and relatives should be advised where they may be found. A statement by the testator indicating what amount he or she considers reasonable for funeral and burial expenses may be helpful to those who must make the arrangements.

[c] Dispositions Under Uniform Anatomical Gift Act

As an alternative to burial, a testator may dispose of all or part of his or her remains under the Uniform Anatomical Gift

Act [Health & Safety Code §§ 7150-7151.40]. The Uniform Anatomical Gift Act permits any person who is at least 18 years of age to make an anatomical gift for transplantation, therapy, research, or the education [Health & Safety Code § 7150.15]. The donor may make an anatomical gift by:

- (1) Indicating such on their driver's license [Health & Safety Code § 7150.20 (a)(1)];
- (2) Directly through the Donate Life California Organ and Tissue Donor Registry Internet Web site [Health & Safety Code § 7150.20 (a)(2)];
- (3) In a will [Health & Safety Code § 7150.20 (a)(3)];
- (4) During a terminal illness or injury, by any form of communication that clearly expresses the donor's wish, addressed to at least two adults, at least one of whom is a disinterested witness [Health & Safety Code § 7150.20 (a)(4)];
- (5) By a donor card or other record signed by the donor [Health & Safety Code § 7150.20 (b)].

For discussion of gifts under the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act, see Ch. 106, Anatomical Gifts .

PART IV. FORMS

G. Arrangements for Funeral, Burial, Cremation, and Burial Plot

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.611§ 63.611 Directions for Cremation of Testator's Remains[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to give directions for the cremation of the testator's remains. For a general will provision giving funeral and burial directions, see § 63.610. For provisions directing the executor to comply with written instructions left by the testator or with the terms of a contract providing for funeral and burial or cremation, see § 63.612.

Cremation means the combination of (1) the reduction of the body of a deceased person to its essential elements by incineration, (2) the repositioning or movement of the body or remains during incineration to facilitate the process, and (3) the processing of the remains after removal from the cremation chamber [Health & Safety Code § 7010; see Health & Safety Code § 7010.3 ("processing" means removal of foreign objects, and reduction of the particle size of cremated remains by mechanical means, such as grinding, crushing, and pulverizing to a consistency appropriate for disposition)]. Any person may leave written directions for the disposition of his or her remains, including cremated remains [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(a); see Health & Safety Code §§ 7001 ("human remains" includes cremated remains), 7002 ("cremated remains" means human remains after cremation)]. For rules governing interment instructions made before death and whether they should be embodied in the will or in some other writing, see discussion in § 63.610[1][b].

Cremated remains may be inurned, placed or buried in a cemetery, or buried at sea [Health & Safety Code § 7009; see Health & Safety Code §§ 7003 (cemetery), 7011 (inurnment), 7011.2 (placement), 7013 (burial)]. They may also be kept in private dwellings or in churches or religious shrines if certain requirements are met [Health & Safety Code § 7054.6]. Before cremated remains may be removed to a private dwelling, church, or religious shrine, a death certificate must be filed with the local registrar of vital statistics and the registrar must issue a permit [Health & Safety Code §§ 103050, 103065]. The remains must be in a durable container when they are removed from the place of cremation [Health & Safety Code § 7054.6]. The dwelling in which the remains are kept must be owned or occupied by the person having the right to control disposition of the remains [Health & Safety Code § 7054.6; see Health & Safety Code §

7100(a), (b) (right to control disposition of remains)]. If the remains are to be kept in a church or religious shrine, written permission must be obtained from the church or shrine, and there must be no conflict with local use permit requirements or zoning laws [Health & Safety Code § 7054.6]. When cremated remains are to be buried at sea, they may be taken by air or by boat from any harbor in California [Health & Safety Code § 7117]. Before disposition of cremated remains, the licensee or registrant, and its agents and employees, must remove the cremated remains from the place of cremation in a durable container and responsibly maintain the cremated remains, including keeping the remains in a durable container and storing the cremated remains in a place free from exposure to the elements [Health & Safety Code § 7054.6(b)].

No crematory may make or enforce any rules requiring that human remains be placed in a casket before cremation or that the remains be cremated in a casket, nor may a crematory refuse to accept remains for cremation because they are not in a casket [Health & Safety Code § 8342]. The remains must be removed from their container before they are buried at sea, and any person who carries out such a burial must file with the local registrar of births and deaths in the county nearest the point where the remains were buried a verified statement containing the name of the deceased person, the time and place of death, the place at which the cremated remains were buried, and any other information that the local registrar of births and deaths may require [Health & Safety Code § 7117]. All remains not disposed of in accordance with the rules governing the operation and management of private cemeteries [Health & Safety Code §§ 8275-8362], within one year, must be interred [Health & Safety Code § 8341]. For additional rules and regulations governing the operation of crematories, in particular, see Health & Safety Code §§ 8343-8347.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to direct the executor to carry out funeral and burial or cremation instructions or arrangements made by the testator during his or her lifetime. The form includes two alternative provisions, one directing the executor to comply with written instructions left by the testator and the other directing the executor to comply with a contract entered into by the testator. For funeral and burial directions, see § 63.610. For cremation directions, see § 63.611.

[b] Will Provisions Confirming Lifetime Arrangements

Any person may leave written directions regarding the disposition of his or her remains and specifying funeral goods and services to be provided after his or her death [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(a)]. If there is no contrary statement signed and dated by the person, the directions may not be altered, changed, or otherwise amended in any material way, except as may be required by law, and they must be faithfully carried out upon the person's death, provided both of the following requirements are met [Health & Safety Code § 7100.1(a)]:

- The directions clearly and completely set forth the person's wishes in sufficient detail to preclude any material ambiguity with regard to the instructions.
- The cost of the disposition and the funeral goods and services is (1) funded through insurance, (2) set aside in a fund or funds designated for that purpose, or (3) held in trust pursuant to a "preneed funeral arrangement" so as to preclude the payment of any funds by the survivor or survivors who might otherwise retain the right to control the disposition and arrange for the funeral goods and services to be provided [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7735 (preneed funeral arrangements)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
H. Simultaneous Death Provision

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.630§ 63.630 Provision Reversing Statutory Presumption Regarding Order of Death in Event of Simultaneous Death[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to state that if the testator and the testator's spouse die simultaneously or under circumstances that render it difficult or impossible to determine who died first, the spouse will be conclusively presumed to have survived the testator. This provision reverses the order of death specified in the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 103, 220, 21109(b)]. It may be useful to do this for federal estate tax purposes if the testator's estate is significantly larger than that of his or her spouse [see discussion in § 63.630[1][b][iii] et seq.]. If both spouses have small estates, this form will not be necessary to save estate taxes and may increase expenses of probate administration. If both estates are large, the provision could significantly increase estate taxes by pushing the estate of the spouse into a higher bracket.

This form should never be used if the estate of the testator's spouse is larger than the testator's own estate. This provision, if used in such a situation, is likely to increase rather than reduce the combined federal estate tax liability of the testator and his or her spouse. The attorney should carefully calculate the potential tax effect of any survivorship provision before including it in the will.

For a discussion of gifts conditioned on survival until a future time, and a provision establishing such a condition, see § 63.411.

[b] Simultaneous Death*[i] In General

If two people are spouses, beneficiaries under each other's wills, or heirs under the laws of intestate succession, and die simultaneously in a common disaster or under other circumstances that render it difficult or impossible to determine who died first, a problem will arise regarding the disposition of their estates. Since both spouses will have died, neither will have survived long enough to have come into beneficial enjoyment of the other's estate. If one survived the other by only a few days (or even a fraction of a second) [see Recommendation Relating to Simultaneous Deaths, 17 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 443, 447 (1984)], the survivor would inherit property from the other. The property that the surviving spouse inherits from the first spouse to die would pass, on the death of the surviving spouse, to the heirs or devisees of the surviving spouse, and the heirs or devisees of the first spouse would not share in it. Further, the property that the surviving spouse inherits from the first spouse would be subject to double administration and taxation--once in the estate of the first spouse and a second time in the estate of the surviving spouse.

[ii] Probate Code Rules Affecting Testamentary Devises

The Probate Code offers solutions to the problems presented by simultaneous death. First, the Code sets forth a special rule relating to community and quasi-community property [see Prob. Code § 103]. Under this rule, when a husband and wife die and it cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence that one spouse survived the other, each spouse's share of the community and quasi-community property is treated as if it belonged to that spouse and did not pass to the other [Prob. Code § 103]. The effect of this rule is to treat each spouse's half of the community and quasi-community property as that spouse's separate property for purposes of intestate succession and testamentary disposition. Each spouse has the power to dispose of his or her half of the community and quasi-community property by will, but has no power of testamentary disposition over the other spouse's half [see Prob. Code § 6101 (general rule relating to disposition of property by will)].

The Probate Code also addresses the problem of simultaneous death when two persons (who may or may not be husband and wife) die leaving property to each other by will [see Prob. Code § 21109]. Under this rule, a devisee who does not survive the testator, or does not survive until a future time required by the will, does not take under the will. If it cannot be determined by clear and convincing evidence that the devisee survived the testator, or survived until a future time required by the will, it is deemed that the devisee did not survive for the required time [Prob. Code § 21109]. However, this rule applies only when the will does not contain a contrary provision [Prob. Code § 21102(b)]. If the will contains a specific provision dealing with simultaneous death and survivorship requirements, the will provisions are controlling and will be given effect under the rules for interpretation of wills. The first and most important of these rules is that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rules applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)]. However, this general rule does not preclude the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. For a general discussion of the rules of construction of wills, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.20.

[iii] Estate Tax Consequences

Although the Probate Code rules discussed above will prevent successive administration and taxation of the same property in the estates of two persons, they may have undesirable estate tax consequences if the individuals involved are spouses (as is usually the case) and there is a significant disparity in the relative sizes of their estates. The most extreme situation would be one in which one spouse has a large separate property estate, the other spouse has little or no separate property, and the spouses together have little or no community property [see § 63.630[1][b][iv]].

Two features of the federal estate tax are important in such situations. The first is the graduated tax rate. When there is a disparity in the sizes of the estates of the parties, the estates will be taxed at different rates, and the larger estate will pay a disproportionately higher tax [see I.R.C. § 2001(c)]. The second important feature is the unified credit against estate and gift tax, under which property equal in value to the "applicable credit amount" can pass by gift or through an estate without liability for federal estate or gift tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2505(a) (table of graduated amounts) and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]]. If the value of the smaller estate is less than the "applicable credit amount," the unused portion of that amount will be wasted.

In order to achieve the most favorable estate tax treatment, it is desirable to equalize the estates of the parties as much as possible by shifting property from the larger estate into the smaller one where it will be taxed at a lower rate. This will also ensure that the unified credits available to each estate will be fully utilized. This shifting of property cannot be accomplished under the survivorship rule established by the Probate Code. However, if the spouse with the larger estate is presumed to have predeceased the spouse with the smaller estate, the will of the spouse with the larger estate can transfer property to the spouse with the smaller estate, thereby equalizing the estates of the parties to achieve the most favorable tax treatment possible.

There is no potential for double taxation in such a situation. This is because the amounts transferred from one spouse to the other spouse are fully protected by the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056; see also § 63.630[1][b][v]].

[iv] Example of Tax Effect of Form

The advantages and disadvantages of a provision establishing a conclusive presumption may be illustrated by a relatively simple example. Assume a husband with a taxable estate of $1.5 million and a wife with a taxable estate of $500,000 died simultaneously in 2003, when the applicable exclusion amount for the estate tax unified credit was $1 million [see I.R.C. § 2010(c)], and discussion in § 60.13[4][b]. Assume that the husband included a provision in his will stating that in the event of a simultaneous death, the wife will be presumed to have survived him. With this presumption in effect, if the husband left the wife $500,000 in his will, the entire amount will be fully sheltered from estate tax in the husband's estate under the unlimited marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], and the remaining $1 million in his estate is sheltered from estate tax by the unified credit available to his estate. In the wife's estate, her original $500,000 plus the $500,000 received from the husband is sheltered from the estate tax by her unified credit [I.R.C. § 2010(c)]. A total of $2 million therefore passed to other heirs or beneficiaries without estate tax liability. If the husband's will did not establish a conclusive presumption that the wife survived him, then (assuming he had no other available deductions or credits) federal estate tax would be imposed on $500,000 of his estate ($1.5 million less the $1 million applicable exclusion amount) [see I.R.C. §§ 2001, 2010(c)].

[v] Marital Deduction Considerations

The federal estate tax marital deduction allows an unlimited amount of property to pass from a decedent to his or her surviving spouse without liability for federal estate tax [I.R.C. § 2056(a)]. The marital deduction is not available, however, for any interest in the property of the decedent which is "terminable" [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1)]. An interest is "terminable" if it may terminate or fail on the lapse of time, the occurrence of an event or contingency, or the failure of occurrence of some contingency or event [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1)]. However, a limited exception to the terminable interest rule provides that the interest of a surviving spouse will not be disqualified if it is terminable if the spouse dies within six months of the decedent or as the result of a common disaster. If the contingency does not in fact occur, the interest of the surviving spouse is not a "terminable interest" [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3)].

A will provision establishing a presumption that the spouse survived the testator will preserve the marital deduction if the property passing from the testator to the surviving spouse is included in the gross estate of the spouse [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(e)-2(e)]. This form will establish such a presumption.

[vi] Other Considerations

The client should be reminded that property that passes to the spouse under a conclusive presumption of survival will be disposed of in accordance with the spouse's will rather than that of the testator, and that the testator will accordingly lose control over the estate. The ultimate recipients of the portion of the estate passing to the spouse will be designated by the spouse rather than the testator. For this reason, a provision establishing a conclusive presumption that the spouse survived the testator should be used only when the testator and the spouse substantially agree as to the ultimate disposition of the estate. Finally, since this provision will never become operative in the vast majority of cases, it should be included only if otherwise consistent with the client's dispositive scheme.

[2] FORM

Provision Reversing Statutory Presumption Regarding Order of Death in Event of Simultaneous Death

If my _____ [wife or husband] and I should die simultaneously, or if it cannot be established by clear and convincing evidence which of us died first, my _____ [wife or husband] shall be conclusively presumed to have survived me, and the will shall be construed on the basis of that presumption.

§ 63.650 Disinheritance Clause--Short Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to disinherit persons who are not beneficiaries under the will. Two alternative provisions are included. The first is a general disinheritance clause that does not name specific persons, while the second is a disinheritance clause that may be used to name a specific person or persons, and, if desired, to state the reason for the disinheritance. The first alternative will be used in most wills as a general clause to disinherit all of the testator's heirs except those provided for in the will. The second may be used in more limited circumstances, that is, if the testator wishes specifically to disinherit a person or persons who might otherwise claim that the testator mistakenly believed them to be dead, or was unaware of their birth (for the rights of persons whom the testator mistakenly believed to be dead or whose birth the testator is unaware of, see discussion in § 63.650[1][c]).

For a long form disinheritance clause, see § 63.651. For a clause disinheriting a spouse married after execution of the will, see § 63.652. For a clause disinheriting children born or adopted after execution of the will, see § 63.653. For a clause providing that issue of kindred beneficiaries will not take any gifts made to those beneficiaries, see § 63.654. For a no contest clause, see § 63.655.

[b] Disinheritance Clauses

The purpose of a disinheritance clause is to clearly state the testator's intention not to provide for persons who would otherwise be entitled to inherit all or part of the estate. A disinheritance clause applies only to persons who would inherit the estate if the testator did not intentionally disinherit them (that is, omitted or "pretermitted" heirs) and is to be distinguished from a no contest (in terrorem clause), which is designed to discourage beneficiaries under the will from contesting its provisions [ Estate of Torregano (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 234, 251, 5 Cal. Rptr. 137, 352 P.2d 505 ; for a discussion of will contests and will provisions that may discourage them, see § 63.651[1][b]]. Because contesting beneficiaries may take all or part of the estate under the laws of intestate succession or under a former will, their interests depend on defeating the will. Omitted heirs, in contrast, do not "contest" or "challenge" the will, but take in spite of it [ Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 80, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774, 507 P.2d 78 ].

A spouse or child of the testator may, under specified circumstances, assert rights as omitted heirs.

[c] Omitted Children

If a decedent fails to provide in a testamentary instrument for a child born or adopted after the execution of all of the decedent's testamentary instruments, the omitted child generally will be entitled by statute to receive a prescribed share of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 21620; but see Prob. Code § 21621 (no share if child intentionally omitted or otherwise provided for) and discussion below]. The share will be equal in value to the share the child would have received if the decedent had died without executing any testamentary instrument [Prob. Code § 21620]. For purposes of this rule, a "testamentary instrument" is either a will or a trust instrument that was executed by the decedent and that became irrevocable on the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 21601(a)] and "estate" is the decedent's probate estate and all property held in any revocable trust executed by the decedent that became irrevocable on the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 21601(b)].

A child is not entitled to receive a share of the estate if any of the following is established [Prob. Code § 21611]:

- The decedent's failure to provide for the child in the decedent's testamentary instruments was intentional and that intention appears from the testamentary instruments.
- The decedent had one or more children and devised or otherwise directed the disposition of substantially all the estate to the other parent of the omitted child.
- The decedent provided for the child by transfer outside of the estate passing by the decedent's testamentary instruments and the intention that the transfer be in lieu of a provision in those instruments is shown by statements of the decedent or from the amount of the transfer or by other evidence.

If, at the time of the execution of all of the decedent's testamentary instruments effective at the time of the decedent's death, the decedent failed to provide for a living child solely because the decedent believed the child to be dead or was unaware of the birth of the child, the child must receive a share in the estate equal in value to the share the child would have received if the decedent had died without having executed any testamentary instruments [Prob. Code § 21622].

For further discussion of the inheritance rights of omitted children, see § 61.16[3].

[d] Omitted Spouse

If a decedent fails to provide in a testamentary instrument for a spouse who married the decedent after the execution of all of the decedent's testamentary instruments, the omitted spouse generally will be entitled by statute to receive a prescribed share of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 21610; but see Prob. Code § 21611 (no share if spouse intentionally omitted or otherwise provided for) and discussion, below]. The share consists of all of the following [Prob. Code § 21610]:

- The one-half of the community property that belongs to the decedent under Prob. Code § 100(a).
- The one-half of the quasi-community property that belongs to the decedent under Prob. Code § 101(a).
- A share of the decedent's separate property equal in value to the share the spouse would have received if the decedent had died without having executed a testamentary instrument, but in no event is the share to be more than one-half the value of the separate property in the estate.

The equal division of community or quasi-community property does not apply if the spouses have agreed in writing to a non pro rata division of that property (either as to the aggregate value or as to an individual asset). This does not mean, however, that a written agreement is automatically required to permit or recognize a non pro rata division of community property [see Prob. Code §§ 100(b), 101(b)].

For purposes of this rule, a "testamentary instrument" is either a will or a trust instrument that was executed by the decedent and that became irrevocable on the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 21601(a)] and "estate" is the decedent's probate estate and all property held in any revocable trust executed by the decedent that became irrevocable on the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 21601(b)].

The spouse is not entitled to receive a share of the estate if any of the following is established [Prob. Code § 21611]:

- The decedent's failure to provide for the spouse in the decedent's testamentary instruments was intentional and that intention appears from the testamentary instruments.
- The decedent provided for the spouse by transfer outside of the estate passing by the decedent's testamentary instruments and the intention that the transfer be in lieu of a provision in those instruments is shown by statements of the decedent or from the amount of the transfer or by other evidence.
- The spouse made a valid agreement waiving the right to share in the decedent's estate.

For further discussion of the inheritance rights of omitted spouses, see § 61.16[2].

[e] Language Necessary for Disinheritance

The testator may disinherit an omitted child [Prob. Code § 21610] or an omitted spouse [Prob. Code § 21620] by stating an intention to do so in the will. Since the law presumes that the failure to name an omitted heir in a will was unintentional [ Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 78-79, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774, 507 P.2d 78 ], the language used in the disinheritance clause must be "strong and convincing" [ Estate of Smith (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 74, 78-79, 106 Cal. Rptr. 774 ].

In Estate of Gardner, the California Supreme Court held that a will clause purporting to disinherit "any person not mentioned" in the will was insufficient to terminate the rights of omitted heirs. The court pointed out that the intention to disinherit must "clearly appear on the face of the will" and concluded that a clause referring to "any person not mentioned" did not satisfy the requirement [ Estate of Gardner (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 620, 623, 147 Cal. Rptr. 184, 580 P.2d 684 ]. In Estate of Szekely (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 236, 243, 163 Cal. Rptr. 506 (also decided under former Prob. Code § 90), however, the Court of Appeal upheld a disinheritance clause stating, among other things, that the testator had omitted to provide for "my heirs." The court concluded that the word "heir" was more precise and definite than the words "any person" and adequately expressed the testator's intention to disinherit an omitted heir [ Estate of Szekely (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 236, 241, 163 Cal. Rptr. 506 ].

In Estate of Shannon, a widower made a will in favor of his daughter. Twelve years later, he married again. He died two years later, without having made a new will or having revoked his fourteen-year-old will. The will included a disinheritance clause, stating: "I have intentionally omitted all other living persons and relatives. If any devisee, legatee, beneficiary under this will, or any legal heir of mine, person or persons claiming under any of them, or other person or persons shall contest this will or seek to impair or invalidate any of its provisions or conspire with or voluntarily assist anyone attempting to do any of those things mentioned, in that event, I specifically disinherit such person or persons. If any Court finds that such person or persons are lawful heirs and entitled to participate in my estate, then in that event I bequeath each of them the sum of one dollar ($1.00) and no more." The court held that the spouse married 12 years after the execution of the will was an omitted spouse under former Prob. Code § 6560 and that the disinheritance clause did not adequately evidence the testator's intention to fail to provide for the spouse under former Prob. Code § 6561. A general disinheritance clause does not effectively state an intention not to provide for a future spouse. Since there was no mention of the future spouse in the disinheritance clause, or any indication of a future marriage, the spouse was entitled to claim the rights of an omitted spouse [ Estate of Shannon (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1153-1154, 274 Cal. Rptr. 338 ].

Although a clause referring to the testator's "heirs" will probably be sufficient to disinherit omitted heirs, more specific language should be used whenever possible. The will should always include declarations as to the testator's marital status and children and issue [for will provisions containing such declarations, see §§ 63.220-63.229]. If complete and accurate, these declarations will name all persons (except a spouse married after execution of the will) who would be entitled to protection as omitted heirs. A disinheritance clause referring to "heirs, whether named in this will or not named herein," should then satisfy the statutory requirement that the intention to disinherit appear "from the will" [see Prob. Code §§ 6561(a), 6571(a)].

[f] Disinheritance and Lapsed Gifts

The statutes protecting omitted heirs from unintentional omission [Prob. Code §§ 21600-21630] must be distinguished from the statutes that protect the issue of kindred beneficiaries from the lapse of testamentary gifts [Prob. Code §§ 21110, 21115]. An omitted heir asserts a claim to all or part of the estate because he or she was not provided for in the testator's will or in a revocable trust instrument executed by the testator [Prob. Code §§ 21610 (spouse), 21620 (child); see Prob. Code § 21601(a) ("decendent's testamentary instruments" defined)]. The issue of a kindred devisee asserts a claim because the will made a gift to his or her ancestor and the ancestor died before the gift took effect. In either case, the will may express an intention that the claimant receive nothing. In the case of omitted heirs, the failure to provide may appear "from the testamentary instruments" [Prob. Code §§ 21611(a) (spouse), 21621(a) (child)]. In the case of the issue of kindred beneficiaries, the intention may be shown "if the will expresses a contrary intention or a substitute disposition" [Prob. Code § 21110(b)]. For discussion of statutory protection for the issue of kindred beneficiaries, see § 63.551[1][c]. For a clause providing that issue of kindred beneficiaries will not take any gift made to their ancestors, see § 63.654.

[g] Disinheritance Clause Should Be Used With Caution

A disinheritance clause should be used with caution and only after a full consideration of its consequences. While it is only natural that a testator should wish to preserve the testamentary plan embodied in the will and to protect it against contest or challenge, the testator should understand that the omitted heir statutes are designed to protect persons who are typically objects of a testator's bounty and that if those persons are not provided for in a will it is often because the testator did not consider them. The will should not attempt to disinherit those persons unless the testator has in fact considered them and determined that they will not benefit from the will.

PART IV. FORMS
I. Disinheritance and No Contest Provisions

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.651

§ 63.651 Disinheritance Clause--Long Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a broad form disinheritance clause. It may be used to disinherit persons who are not defined under the will or alternatively, provide a nominal devise to specific persons under the will.

For a short-form disinheritance clause, and general discussion relevant to the use of disinheritance clauses, see § 63.650. For a basic no contest clause, see § 63.655. For a broadly defined no contest clause, see § 63.656. For additional discussion of the use and construction of no contest clauses, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.18.

[b] Nominal Devises to Disinherit or Discourage Will Contests

A provision making a nominal devise ($1) to an heir may be sufficient to disinherit the heir [ Van Strien v. Jones (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 705, 707, 299 P.2d 1 ], though such a devise will add nothing to the effectiveness of an otherwise properly drafted disinheritance provision or no contest clause and, if it is improperly drafted, it may be ineffective for either purpose. In Estate of Carroll (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366, 291 P.2d 976, the testator left $1 to each of her nephews and the residue of the estate to her sister, the mother of one of the nephews. The sister died before the testator. The court held that the nominal devise was not a sufficient indication of the testator's intent to deny the son of the deceased sister the benefits of the anti-lapse statute [former Prob. Code § 92 (repealed Jan. 1, 1985); now Prob. Code § 21110] and that the nephew was entitled to the share left to the deceased mother [ Estate of Carroll (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366-367, 291 P.2d 976 ].

A nominal devise may, however, be part of a valid disinheritance clause. In Estate of Hirschi, the will gave $1 "to any person who, if I died intestate, would be entitled to any part of my Estate," if that person contested the will. The court held that the testamentary language showed an intent to exclude intestate heirs and was sufficient to defeat a claim by an omitted heir [ Estate of Hirschi (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 681, 684, 170 Cal. Rptr. 186 ].

[c] Use Disinheritance Clause With Caution

Any disinheritance clause should be used with caution and only after a full consideration of its consequences. For matters to be considered before using a disinheritance clause, see § 63.650[1][g].

[2] FORM*Disinheritance Clause--Long Form--No Contest Provision

Except as otherwise provided in this will, I have intentionally failed to provide herein for any of my heirs, and I specifically disinherit any person claiming to be my heir who is not provided for in this will.

[AND, to make a nominal devise to a specific devisee:]

§ 63.652 Disinheritance Clause--Spouse Married After Execution of Will

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to disinherit a spouse married after execution of the will. It includes two alternative provisions. The first states that the testator is contemplating marriage, identifies the prospective spouse by name, and states that the testator has intentionally failed to provide for the spouse in the will. The second states that the testator has considered the possibility of marriage and does not wish to provide for any person who may become an heir by reason of marriage, but does not name such a person.

For a short form disinheritance clause, and general discussion relevant to the use of disinheritance clauses, see § 63.650. For a no contest clause, see § 63.655. For a broadly defined no contest clause, see § 63.656.

[b] Omitted Spouse

A spouse who married the testator after the execution of all of the testator's "testamentary instruments" is an "omitted spouse" and may be entitled to a share in the testator's estate [see Prob. Code § 21610]. For this purpose, the testator's "testamentary instruments" include the testator's will and any revocable trust that the testator may have executed [Prob. Code § 21601(a)]. However, a surviving spouse is not entitled to a share in the estate if the testator's failure to provide for the spouse in the "testamentary instruments" was intentional and that intention appears from the "testamentary instruments" [Prob. Code § 21611(a)]. For further discussion of the inheritance rights of omitted spouses, see § 61.16[2].

[c] Use Disinheritance Clause With Caution

A disinheritance clause should be used with caution and only after a full consideration of its consequences. For matters to be considered before using a disinheritance clause, see discussion in § 63.650[1][g].

[2] FORM*Disinheritance Clause--Spouse Married After Execution of Will

[If prospective spouse is to be named:]

I am presently contemplating marriage to _____ [name of prospective spouse]. Should that marriage take place, it is my intention not to make any testamentary provision for _____ [name of prospective spouse] [, for the reason that _____ (state reason, e.g., she already has ample resources to accommodate her needs)]. My failure to provide for _____ [name of prospective spouse] in this will is intentional.

[OR, if prospective spouse is not to be named:]

In the event that I marry after the execution of this will, I do not intend to make any testamentary disposition in favor of my spouse, and it is my specific intention not to make any provision in this will for any person who may, after the date of this will, become my heir by reason of marriage.

§ 63.653 Disinheritance Clause--Children Born or Adopted After Execution of Will

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to disinherit children born or adopted after execution of the will. For a short form disinheritance clause, and general discussion relevant to the use of disinheritance clauses, see § 63.650. For a no contest clause, see § 63.655.

[b] Omitted Children

If a decedent fails to provide in a testamentary instrument for a child born or adopted after the execution of all of the decedent's testamentary instruments, the omitted child generally will generally be entitled by statute to receive a prescribed share of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 21620; see Prob. Code § 21601(a) ("decedent's testamentary instruments" means the decedent's will or revocable trust)]. However, a child is not entitled to receive a share of the estate if any of the following is established [Prob. Code § 21611]:

- The decedent's failure to provide for the child in the decedent's testamentary instruments was intentional and that intention appears from the testamentary instruments.
- The decedent had one or more children and devised or otherwise directed the disposition of substantially all the estate to the other parent of the omitted child.
- The decedent provided for the child by transfer outside of the estate passing by the decedent's testamentary instruments and the intention that the transfer be in lieu of a provision in those instruments is shown by statements of the decedent or from the amount of the transfer or by other evidence.

If, at the time of the execution of all of the decedent's testamentary instruments effective at the time of the decedent's death, the decedent failed to provide for a living child solely because the decedent believed the child to be dead or was unaware of the birth of the child, the child must receive a share in the estate equal in value to the share the child would have received if the decedent had died without having executed any testamentary instruments [Prob. Code § 21622].

For further discussion of the inheritance rights of omitted children, see § 61.16[3].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 I. Disinheritance and No Contest Provisions

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.654

§ 63.654 Lapse Provision--Issue of "Kindred" Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to state that the issue of specified "kindred" beneficiaries will not take any gifts made to those beneficiaries and to provide that the gifts will lapse. Its effect is to render the "anti-lapse" statute [Prob. Code § 21110; see § 63.654[1][b]] inapplicable to specified provisions of the will. Although in the technical sense it is not a disinheritance or no contest clause, its practical effect is to preclude the issue of one or more specified relatives from taking directly under the will. Obviously, it will not preclude those issue from taking indirectly if the primary beneficiary does survive to take the gift, since once the primary beneficiary takes the property he or she can dispose of it as he or she desires. A form such as this would be used only in unusual circumstances [see § 63.654[1][c]].

[b] "Kindred" Beneficiaries and the Anti-Lapse Statute

Under the "anti-lapse" statute [Prob. Code § 21110], transfers to a person who is "kindred" of the transferor or of the transferor's spouse ordinarily will not lapse if the transferor dies before the transfer takes effect or fails (or is treated as failing) to meet any applicable survivorship requirement [Prob. Code § 21110(a), (c)]. Instead, the issue of the deceased transferee take in his or her place in the manner specified in Prob. Code § 240 [Prob. Code § 21110(a)]; for discussion of Prob. Code § 240, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][d]; for discussion of the anti-lapse statute, see § 63.411[1][d]. For this purpose, a requirement that the initial devisee survive the testator or survive for a specified period of time after the testator's death, constitutes a "contrary intention" [Prob. Code § 21110(b); Burkett v. Capovilla (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1451, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817].

The will may vary the foregoing rule if the testator decides for any reason that the transferee's issue should not take the property if the transferee fails to do so [Prob. Code § 21110(b)]. To render the rule inapplicable, the will may either express a contrary intention, or simply make a substitute disposition [Prob. Code § 21110(b)]. This form combines these two methods by providing that the gift will lapse if the named beneficiary does not survive to take it, and specifies that the lapsed gift will become part of the residue of the settlor's estate.

[c] Use Provision With Caution

A clause providing that the issue of kindred beneficiaries will not take any gift made to their ancestors should be used with caution, and only after a full consideration of its consequences. The statutory protection for the issue of kindred beneficiaries is, like the omitted heir statutes, designed to protect persons who are the natural objects of a testator's bounty. A testator who decides that such persons will not participate in the estate or will not benefit from the will should do so only after a careful consideration of the consequences of that decision.

[2] FORM*Lapse Provision--Issue of "Kindred" Beneficiaries

If any beneficiary named in Paragraph[s] _____[number(s)] of this will should fail to survive me, fail to survive until any time required by this will, or be treated under any provision of this will as if that beneficiary had predeceased me, the issue of that beneficiary, if any, shall not take any gift or gifts made to that beneficiary under this will, but that gift or gifts instead shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
I. Disinheritance and No Contest Provisions

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.655

§ 63.655 No Contest Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that provides a short form no contest clause that complies with the statutory requirements of Prob. Code § 21310-21315 [see Prob. Code § 21310-21315]. For a short form disinheritance clause, and general discussion relevant to the use of disinheritance clauses, see § 63.650. For a long form disinheritance clause, including nominal devise, see § 63.651. For a broad form no contest clause see § 63.656. For additional discussion on the use and enforcement of no contest clauses, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.18 .

NOTE:

Although no contest provisions are commonly included in wills, such a provision may be ineffective as to property that the testator-settlor has already transferred to a trust. For this reason, it is recommended that consideration be given to including a no contest clause in any trusts created by the settlor as well. The settlor may revoke the trust as to the contesting beneficiary, or as to both the contesting beneficiary and the issue of that beneficiary. Careful consideration should be given before penalizing the issue of the beneficiary.

[b] Enforcement of No Contest Clauses Under the Probate Code

Effective January 1, 2010, but effective for documents that become irrevocable on or after January 1, 2001, revised Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315 controls the enforcement of no contest clauses [Prob. Code § 21315]. The revised statute affects all contests of a protected instrument filed on or after January 1, 2010, wherever executed, if that protected instrument became irrevocable on or after January 1, 2001 [Prob. Code § 21315]. Under the new statute, a no contest clause is effective only against (1) direct contests brought without probable cause, (2) actions involving creditor's claims, and (3) actions involving certain types of property claims (e.g., Prob. Code § 850 actions) [Prob. Code § 21311(a)]. The two latter types of proceedings must be expressly identified in the no contest clause as violations for the clause to apply to them [Prob. Code § 21311(a)]. For all other contests, common law continues to apply [Prob. Code §

21315].

[c] Direct Contest

A no contest clause is enforceable in a direct contest that is brought without probable cause [Prob. Code § 21311(a)(1)]. A direct contest is one that alleges the invalidity of a protected instrument or one or more of its terms based on [Prob. Code § 21310(b)]:

- Forgery;
- Lack of due execution;
- Lack of capacity;
- Menace, duress, fraud or undue influence;
- Revocation of a will pursuant to § 6120, revocation of a trust pursuant to § 15401, or revocation of an instrument other than a will or trust pursuant to the procedure for revocation that is provided by statute or by the instrument; and
- Disqualification of a beneficiary under Prob. Code §§ 6112, 21350.

Probable cause exists if, at the time of filing a contest, the facts known to the contestant would cause a reasonable person to believe that there is a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery [Prob. Code § 21311(b)].

[d] Challenge to Transfer of Property

A no contest clause is also enforceable against a pleading challenging the transfer of property on the grounds that it was not the transferor's property at the time of the transfer (a "forced election"), so long as the no contest clause expressly provides [Prob. Code § 21311(a)(2)]. In this type of contest, probable cause is irrelevant, and the forced election may be applicable to anyone [see Prob. Code § 21311(a)(2)].

[e] Creditor's Claim

A no contest clause is also enforceable against the filing of a creditor's claim or prosecution of an action based on it, so long as the no contest clause expressly provides [Prob. Code § 21311(a)(3)]. In this type of contest, probable cause is also irrelevant [see Prob. Code § 21311(a)(3)].

[f] No Availability of Declaratory Relief

Under the new statutory provisions, Declaratory relief (previously granted under the Safe Harbor Provision of former Prob. Code § 21320) will no longer be available [see Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315].

[2] FORM

If any beneficiary under this will, singularly or in combination with any other person or persons, directly or indirectly does any of the following acts, then the right of that person to take any interest given to him or her by this will shall be void, and any gift or other interest in my estate to which the beneficiary would otherwise have been entitled shall pass as if he or she had predeceased me [optional: without issue].

Without probable cause challenges the validity of this will [optional], or the validity of any contract, agreement (including any trust agreement), declaration of trust, beneficiary designation, or other document executed by me or executed by another for the benefit of me that is in existence on the date that this will is executed and further described as _____ (provide express identification of such items, either individually or as a class),] on any of the following grounds:

- (a) Forgery;
- (b) Lack of due execution;
- (c) Lack of capacity;
- (d) Menace, duress, fraud, or undue influence;
- (e) Revocation pursuant to the terms of [optional: applicable instrument, document, contract, or] applicable law;
- (f) Disqualification of a beneficiary under California Probate Code §§ 6122 or 21350 or applicable successor statutes.

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that provides a broad form no contest clause which complies with the statutory requirements of Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315 [see Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315].

For a short form no contest clause, and general discussion relevant to the use of no contest clauses see § 63.655. For additional discussion on the use and enforcement of no contest clauses, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.18.

NOTES:

Although no contest provisions are commonly included in wills, such a provision may be ineffective as to property that the testator-settlor has already transferred to a trust. § 63.670 Definition of "Executor"

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to define the word "executor" as it is used in the will.

As used in the Probate Code, "personal representative" means an executor [see Prob. Code §§ 8420-8425], administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 8460-8468], administrator with the will annexed [see Prob. Code §§ 8440-8442], special administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 8540-8547], successor personal representative, or any other person who performs substantially the same function under the law of another jurisdiction governing the person's status [Prob. Code § 58(a)]. To avoid confusion, the form set forth below defines "executor" to include any personal representative of the estate. Since an executor may be masculine or feminine, natural or corporate, and singular or plural, it is not necessary to refer to an "executrix" or to "executors."

For coverage of the selection, nomination, appointment, qualification, and duties of executors and other personal representatives, see Ch. 65, Executors .

[2] FORM

Definition of "Executor"

[Short form]

As used in this will, the words "my Executor" include any personal representative or representatives of my estate.

[Long form]

As used in this will, the words "my Executor" refer to any personal representative or representatives of my estate and include the person named in Paragraph _____ [number of paragraph in which Executor is nominated] and any other person, persons, entity, or entities, regardless of number or gender, who may for any reason become the Executor or of this will and to the successor or successors of that person, persons, entity, or entities.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to define the term "trustee." The will may nominate one or more trustees. A trustee or trustees nominated in the will may be unable or unwilling to serve or to continue to serve in that capacity, with the result that it may be necessary to appoint an alternate, additional, or successor trustee or trustees. As used in the Probate Code, the word "trustee" includes an original, additional, or successor trustee, whether or not appointed or confirmed by a court [Prob. Code § 84]. The will should define the term "trustee" in such a way that it will apply to any such contingency.

[2] FORM

Definition of "Trustee"

As used in this will, the word "trustee" refers to the person named in Paragraph _____ [number of paragraph in which trustee is nominated] and includes any other person, persons, entity, or entities, regardless of number or gender, who may for any reason become the trustee or trustees of the trust created by this will and to the successor or successors of that person, persons, entity, or entities.

§ 63.672 Definitions of "Child" and "Children"

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to define the words "child" and "children." It includes two alternative provisions, one that includes all natural children and all legally adopted children, and the other that adopts the broader definition of "child" used in the Probate Code to determine intestate succession rights.

The Probate Code contains many provisions affecting the rights of children to take under wills or by intestate succession. These provisions include definitions of the words "child" [Prob. Code § 26], "issue" [Prob. Code § 50], "parent" [Prob. Code § 54], and "descendants" [Prob. Code § 6205]; rules for intestate succession that determine when natural children, children born out of wedlock, adopted children, foster children, and stepchildren are entitled to share in the estate of a parent [see Prob. Code § 6400-6455]; and rules to be followed in the construction of wills that make gifts to "heirs," "heirs at law," "next of kin," "relatives," or "family" [Prob. Code § 21114] or to members of a class [Prob. Code § 21115]. For a general discussion of the statutory definitions of "child" and "children," together with the rights of natural children, adopted children, foster children, and stepchildren to take under wills or by intestate succession, see discussions in § 63.226[1] et seq.

[b] Testator's Definition of "Child" and "Children"

The will is not limited by the definition of "child" contained in the Probate Code provisions relating to intestate succession, and the testator is free to adopt an identical, similar, or different definition. The first alternative provision stated below is a more limited definition than that set forth in Prob. Code §§ 26 and 6400-6455. It includes natural children and children who have been legally adopted by a parent through whom their right to inherit or to take as a beneficiary (or as issue of a beneficiary) is determined or derived. The second alternative provision includes all persons included within the definition of "child" in Prob. Code § 26 or any successor provision.

[2] FORM

Definitions of "Child" and "Children"*Definitions of "Child" and "Children"

[First alternative provision: "Child" and "children" include natural and adopted children]

As used in this will, the words "child" and "children" refer to natural children [add, if testator wishes to exclude children adopted out of testator's family: (except natural children who have been adopted out of the family of their natural parents)] and to children who have been legally adopted by the parent or parents from or through whom their right to inherit or to take as a beneficiary or as issue of a beneficiary is determined or derived.

§ 63.673 Definition of "Issue"

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to define the word "issue" as it is used in the will. The form includes two alternative provisions, one that may be used if the will has adopted its own definition of the words "child" and "children" [see § 63.672] and the other that may be used if the will has adopted the definition of "child" set forth in Prob. Code § 26.

As used in the Probate Code, "issue" of a person means all his or her lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of child and parent set forth in the Probate Code [Prob. Code § 50; see Prob. Code §§ 26 ("child"), 54 ("parent")].

[2] FORM

Definition of "Issue"

[Use this alternative if will does not adopt statutory definition of "child" or "children":]

As used in this will, the word "issue" refers to all lineal descendants of all generations, with the relationship of parent and child at each generation being determined by the definitions of "child" and "children" as defined in this will.

[Or, use this alternative if the will adopts the definition of "child" or "children" contained in Prob. Code § 26:]

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that any use of the masculine, feminine, or neuter gender, and the singular or plural, is deemed to include the others whenever the context so indicates. Use of this provision may help reduce the possibility of misinterpretation of any will provision that uses terms such as "he," "she," "they," "it," "his," "her," "their," or similar terms denoting number or gender. It may be helpful if the will drafter has inadvertently failed to use the appropriate pronoun or adjective in any will provision.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used as a general severability clause providing that if any provision of the will is unenforceable, the remaining provisions will be carried into effect.

[b] Interpretation of Wills

The intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. However, this provision does not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. The words of a will must be interpreted in such a way as to give some effect to every expression in the instrument, and not so that any of the expressions will become inoperative. Preference must be given to an interpretation that will prevent rather than result in an intestacy or failure of a transfer [Prob. Code § 21120; see Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)].

Severability Provision

If any provision of this will is unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall be carried into effect.

[OR]

If any part, clause, provision, or condition of this will is held to be void, inoperative, ineffective, or otherwise invalid, its invalidity shall not affect any other part, clause, provision, or condition of this will, and the remainder of this will shall be carried into effect as if the invalid part, clause, provision, or condition had not been included.

§ 63.692 Allocation and Distribution of Income Received During Administration

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for the distribution of income from estate property. It includes two alternative provisions, one that allocates net income to particular devisees made under the will and provides that the income will be distributed to the devisees of those devisees, and another that provides generally that all net income of the estate will be distributed to a named devisee.

[b] Right to Income From or Interest on Devised Property

[i] In General

The right of devisees to income earned by devised property while the property is in administration and before it is distributed is governed by rules set forth in the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 12000-12007]. These rules determine when devisees are entitled to receive interest on devisees (or on the value of devised property). The rules distinguish devisees according to their classifications (i.e., whether they are specific, general, or residuary) [see Prob. Code § 21117; see also § 63.351[1][b]] and, in specified circumstances, according to the purpose for which they were made.

[ii] Specifically Devised Property

If property subject to a specific devise [see Prob. Code § 21117(a); see also § 63.370[1]] is income-producing property, the devisee of that property is entitled to receive the income on the property from the date of death to the date of distribution, less expenses attributable to the property during administration [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. If the income is not sufficient to pay expenses attributable to the property, the deficiency must be paid out of the estate until the property is distributed to the devisee, or until the devisee takes possession of or occupies the property, whichever occurs first [Prob. Code § 12002(c)]. to receive the income on the property from the date of death to the date of distribution, less expenses attributable to the property during administration [Prob. Code § 12002(b)]. If the income is not sufficient to pay expenses attributable Prob. Code § 12002(c). For purposes of this rule, expenses attributable to property are expenses that result directly from the use or ownership of the property, including property taxes and taxes on income from the property, but excluding estate and generation-skipping transfer taxes [Prob. Code § 12002(b)].

If property subject to a specific devise is sold during administration, the devisee is entitled to the net income from the property until the date of sale and to interest on the net sale proceeds thereafter, but no interest accrues during the first year after the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12002(d); see Prob. Code § 12001(a) (rate of interest); see also § 63.692[1][b][vii]]. Specific devisees are not entitled to any other interest [Prob. Code § 12002(a)].

[iii] Cash Devises

If a general pecuniary devise [see Prob. Code §§ 21117(d), 21118(b); see also § 63.351[1]], including a general pecuniary devise in trust, is not distributed within one year after the testator's death, the devise bears interest thereafter [Prob. Code § 12003; see Prob. Code § 12001(a) (rate of interest); see also § 63.692[1][b][vii]].

[iv] Annuities

If an annuity [see Prob. Code § 21117(e)] ("annuity" defined); see also § 63.508[1] is not paid at the end of the annual, monthly, or other period specified in the will [see Prob. Code § 12004(a)], the annuitant is entitled to receive interest, except that no interest is payable during the first year after the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12004(b); see Prob. Code § 12001(a) (rate of interest); see also § 63.692[1][b][vii]].

[v] Devise for Maintenance

The devisee of a devise for maintenance is entitled to interest on the amount of any unpaid accumulations of the payments held by the executor on each anniversary of the testator's death, computed from the date of the anniversary [Prob. Code § 12005; see Prob. Code § 12001(a) (rate of interest); see also § 63.692[1][b][vii]]. For this purpose, a devise for maintenance includes a devise for support [California Law Revision Commission, Official Comments to Assembly Bill 2841 (1988), p. 114].

[vi] Residue

Net income received during administration and not paid to any other devisee under the Probate Code rules must be distributed pro rata as income among all distributees who receive either residuary or intestate property [Prob. Code § 12006; see Prob. Code § 21117(f)] ("residuary devise" defined); see also § 63.530[1]. If a distributee takes for life or for a term of years, the pro rata share of income belongs to the tenant for life or for the term of years [Prob. Code § 12006].

[vii] Rate of Interest

When interest is payable to a devisee, the rate is three percentage points less than the legal rate on judgments in effect one year after the date of the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12001]. The California Constitution authorizes the Legislature to set the rate of interest on judgments at not more than 10 percent per annum [Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1]. The Legislature has set the current annual rate at 10 percent, while reserving the right to change the rate at any time to less than 10 percent [Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010].

Once the rate of interest has been set, it will not be changed, even if the rate changes before the devise is finally distributed [Prob. Code § 12001]. When interest is payable on a general pecuniary devise, the devise begins to earn interest one year after the testator's death [Prob. Code § 12003].

[viii] Will Provisions

The will may alter the Probate Code rules governing the payment of income and interest to devisees [Prob. Code § 12000]. Any will provision allocating income received during administration and before distribution will in any case be subject to the general rule that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a); see Prob. Code § 21101 (rule applicable to wills, trusts, and other instruments)].

[2] FORM

Allocation and Distribution of Income Received During Administration

[Use this provision if income is to be apportioned among more than one devisee:]

I direct that all net income received during administration of my estate shall be allocated and distributed as follows:

(1) All net income received from or attributable to the property described in Paragraph _____ [number of paragraph] of this will shall be distributed to _____ [name of first devisee].

(2) All net income received from or attributable to the property described in Paragraph _____ [number of paragraph] of this will shall be distributed to _____ [name of second devisee].

(3) All net income received from or attributable to all the rest and residue of my estate shall be distributed to _____ [name of residuary or other designated devisee].

[OR, if all income will be paid to a single devisee:]

I direct that all net income received during administration of my estate shall be distributed to _____ [name of devisee].

§ 63.693 Contracts to Make Wills--Statement That Testator Has Made No Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to state that the testator has not entered into any contract to make a will or devise or other instrument, not to revoke a will or devise or other instrument, or to die intestate. The provision may be included in the will of every testator who has not entered into such a contract and, when used, may negate any inference that such a contract exists. For a clause confirming that the testator has made such a contract, see § 63.694. If the testator's estate or will is affected by the terms of an antenuptial agreement, the will drafter should review § 63.424[1].

For a detailed discussion of contracts affecting wills, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 61, Contracts and Other Instruments Affecting Wills (Matthew Bender). For a detailed discussion of wills made pursuant to contracts, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 60, Joint and Mutual Wills (Matthew Bender).

[b] Contracts Affecting Wills

[i] Uses and Validity

Contracts affecting wills are generally valid in California. A contract affecting a will may take one of three different forms: (1) a contract to dispose of property by will or other instrument in a specified manner; (2) a contract not to revoke an existing will or other instrument; or (3) a contract not to make a will (that is, to die intestate) [see Prob. Code § 21700 (proof of contract to make will or devise or other instrument)].

Contracts of this kind are sometimes made by married persons who have been married previously and who have children by their previous marriages. These persons will often wish to make sure that their children receive an inheritance, or a specified share of an inheritance, after both of the spouses have died. Conversely, they often wish to prevent the surviving spouse from making a will that disinherits the deceased spouse's children. Contracts affecting wills are sometimes incorporated into premarital agreements executed by prospective spouses [see Fam. Code § 1612(a)(4) and § 63.693[1][b][ii]].

Four elements are essential to the existence of any contract in California. These are (1) parties capable of contracting, (2) the consent of those parties, (3) a lawful object, and (4) consideration [Civ. Code § 1550; see Civ. Code §§ 1556-1559 (parties), 1565-1590 (consent), 1595-1599 (object of contract), 1605-1615 (consideration); but see Fam. Code § 1611 (consideration not required for enforceable premarital agreement)]. A contract affecting a will, like any other contract, will not be enforced unless the four elements are present.

[ii] Premarital Agreements

Under the California Uniform Premarital Agreement Act [see Fam. Code §§ 1600-1617], parties to a premarital agreement may contract, among other things, with regard to the making of a will or other arrangement to carry out the terms of the agreement [Fam. Code § 1612(a)(4)]. However, premarital agreements are subject to restrictions that do not apply to other agreements. For example, a premarital agreement becomes effectively only on the marriage of the parties [Fam. Code §§ 1610(a), 1613]. Such an agreement is subject to rigorous disclosure requirements and is totally unenforceable if its provisions are "unconscionable" [see Fam. Code § 1615(a)(2)]. All premarital agreements must be in writing and signed by both parties, although they are enforceable without consideration [Fam. Code § 1611]. For detailed discussion of the Premarital Agreement Act and contracts subject to it, see Ch. 108, Antenuptial Agreements.

[iii] Contract Distinguished From Will

The law recognizes three types of wills that are sometimes associated with contracts. These are joint wills, mutual wills, and joint and mutual wills.

A "joint will" is a single instrument that contains the wills of two or more persons [ Estate of Lane (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 52, 56, 120 Cal. Rptr. 499 ; Daniels v. Bridges (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 585, 588, 267 P.2d 343 ]. "Mutual wills," in contrast, are separate wills with "reciprocal" provisions. For this purpose, provisions are "reciprocal" if they show on their faces that they are executed in consideration of each other [ Van Houten v. Whitaker (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 510, 514, 337 P.2d 900 ; Daniels v. Bridges (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 585, 588, 267 P.2d 343 ]. A "joint and mutual will" is a single will that has characteristics of both a "joint will" and "mutual wills"; that is, it is executed by two or more persons and contains "reciprocal" provisions [ Thompson v. Boyd (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 365, 374-375, 32 Cal. Rptr. 513 ].

It is important to distinguish a contract affecting a will from a will that may be affected by a contract. A contract affecting a will is not in itself a will, even though it may call for the execution of a will. The validity of such a contract will always be determined under the law of contracts, and not the law of wills. A will that is affected by a contract, in contrast, is not in itself a contract, and will be enforced only if it complies with the law of wills. Further, joint wills, mutual wills, and joint and mutual wills may all be executed in the absence of any contract. Wills of this type do not depend on underlying contracts for their validity.

[iv] Proof of Contract

The Probate Code contains special rules relating to the proof of a contract to make a will or devise, or other instrument, or not to revoke a will or devise or other instrument, or to die intestate [Prob. Code § 21700(a) (applicable only to contract made on or after January 1, 2001)]. These rules may become critically important if the heirs of a deceased spouse claim that the deceased spouse and the surviving spouse were parties to a contract that affected their wills. At least one spouse will be deceased when such a claim is made; and many times both will be deceased, thus exacerbating the problems of proof.

Of course, if the contract itself has been reduced to writing and signed by the deceased spouse, the writing will be adequate to prove the terms of the contract [Prob. Code § 21700(a)(3)]. In the absence of a signed writing, however, the contract may be proved by provisions of a will or other instrument stating material provisions of the contract [Prob. Code § 21700(a)(1)] or an express reference in a will or other instrument to a contract and extrinsic evidence proving the terms of the contract [Prob. Code § 21700(a)(2)]. Alternatively, a contract may be proved by clear and convincing evidence of an agreement between the decedent and the claimant or a promise by the decedent to the claimant that is enforceable in equity [Prob. Code § 21700(a)(4)], or by clear and convincing evidence of an agreement between the decedent and another person for the benefit of the claimant or a promise by the decedent to another person for the benefit of the claimant that is enforceable in equity [Prob. Code § 21700(a)(5)].

[c] Equitable Estoppel

A contract to make (or not to revoke) a will or devise or other instrument may be enforced under the doctrine of equitable estoppel even when the contract is not in writing and the Probate Code requirements for proof of the contract cannot be met [see Prob. Code § 21700(a) and discussion in § 63.693[1][b][iv]]. Under the doctrine of equitable estoppel, the courts will enforce an oral contract when one party has detrimentally relied on the oral promise of another and the other party has been unjustly enriched [ Crail v. Blakely (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 106 Cal. Rptr. 187, 505 P.2d 1027 ].

The doctrine of equitable estoppel is designed to prevent an unconscionable injury that would result from refusing to enforce an oral contract when one party has been induced to make a serious change of position in reliance on the contract, or when unjust enrichment would result if a party who has received the benefits of the other's performance under the contract were allowed to deny the contract [ Juran v. Epstein (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 882, 892, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 588 ]. If, for example, married persons execute reciprocal wills pursuant to an oral agreement to leave their property after their deaths to all of their children, and one of the spouses dies before either will has been revoked, equity will not permit the surviving spouse to accept the benefits of the deceased spouse's will and thereafter make a different disposition of the property. To permit a surviving spouse to do this would, in effect, be to permit the surviving spouse to benefit from a fraud perpetrated against the deceased spouse and to unjustly enrich the beneficiaries under the later will at the expense of the beneficiaries under the original will [ Notten v. Mensing (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 469, 474, 45 P.2d 198 ]. Under these circumstances, the courts will enforce the oral agreement under the doctrine of equitable estoppel, even when the statutory requirements for proof of the agreement cannot be met [ Juran v. Epstein (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 882, 894, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 588 ].

[d] Enforcement

It may be difficult to enforce the terms of a contract affecting a will, even when the terms are susceptible of proof. The courts will not enforce such a contract by specific performance, since a contract affecting a will is a personal act and thus not subject to specific performance [ Ludwicki v. Guerin (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 127, 130, 17 Cal. Rptr. 823, 367 P.2d 415 ; Bank of California v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 524, 106 P.2d 879 ]. Similarly, the court will not compel the execution of a will, or revive a revoked will, merely because there is a contract requiring such a will [see Estate of Watson (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 569, 573, 223 Cal. Rptr. 14 ].

An action for money damages is usually the only remedy available when a contract affecting a will has been breached. If, as is often the case, the breaching party is deceased, the aggrieved parties must proceed on the theory that they have claims for money against the deceased person's estate, and file claims in that estate [ Morrison v. Land (1915) 169 Cal. 580, 584, 147 P. 259 ]. In some cases, the aggrieved party may proceed in quantum meruit [ Johns v. Coleman (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 778, 782, 1 Cal. Rptr. 784 ]. For example, if one person performed services for another in return for the other's promise to make a will in his or her favor, the person who performed the services may be entitled to recover on the contract that the law implies on failure to perform the express contract. However, such an action may be maintained only after a claim has been filed against the deceased person's estate [see Mattes v. Pinkney (1968) 260

Cal. App. 2d 491, 493, 67 Cal. Rptr. 255 ].

If legal remedies would not adequately compensate an aggrieved party for the breach of a contract affecting a will, the court may impose a constructive trust on the property affected by the will [see Ludwicki v. Guerin (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 127, 130, 17 Cal. Rptr. 823, 367 P.2d 415 ; Estate of Stewart (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 296, 298, 70 Cal. Rptr. 545, 444 P.2d 337 ]. Such an action must be addressed, not to the probate court, but to the superior court acting in the exercise of its general equity jurisdiction [see Ludwicki v. Guerin (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 127, 132, 17 Cal. Rptr. 823, 367 P.2d 415 ; Estate of Mullins (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 924, 929, 255 Cal. Rptr. 430 ].

[e] Effect of No Contest Clause

A claim based on an alleged contract to make a will may violate a valid no contest clause. Although there may be instances in which a beneficiary who is also a creditor of the estate may file a creditor's claim without violating a no contest clause, if the claim is a disguised attack on the will it will violate the no contest clause and result in forfeiture of the claimant's right to take under the will [ Estate of Larsen (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139, 207 Cal. Rptr. 526 ]. Any legal proceeding that is plainly intended to frustrate the testator's unequivocally expressed intent will violate a valid no contest clause. For a general discussion of no contest clauses, see § 63.651[1]. See also California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 40, Disinheritance and No Contest Clauses (Matthew Bender).

[f] Disadvantages

Contracts to make a will, or not to revoke a will, are fraught with disadvantages and avoided by prudent estate planners. A contract of this kind deprives a person of testamentary flexibility, making it difficult or impossible to revise a will as and when conditions dictate. Any variation between the terms of a will and the underlying contract has the potential for inviting litigation and adding greatly to the expense and delay of administering the testator's estate.

The difficulties of enforcing a contract affecting a will [see § 63.693[1][d]] make it an inadequate safeguard for the rights of the persons it is designed to protect. It is often impossible to determine whether a person who has contracted to make a particular will has in fact made such a will until the person has died, and after death the problems of enforcing the contract against the person's estate will be substantial. The right to sue for the breach of such a contract will not ordinarily accrue until after the death of both parties, when problems of proof will be onerous [see § 63.693[1][b][iv]].

In the rare circumstances in which it is possible to impose a constructive trust on property affected by a contract to make a will, or not to revoke a will, the rights of the surviving spouse in and to the property will be seriously impaired. In such a case, the rights of the surviving spouse in the affected property will amount to a life estate. Since a life estate is not eligible for the estate tax marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1) (terminable interest rule); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b)], any such arrangement will have potentially disastrous consequences if the marital deduction is needed to reduce or avoid estate taxes on the death of the deceased spouse. For a more detailed discussion of the marital deduction, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

The goals that are usually sought to be achieved by a contract to make a will, or not to make a will, can almost always be achieved by the creation of one or more trusts. A trust is much simpler to enforce than a contract affecting a will. It is more flexible, and can be revised and modified while both spouses are living to adjust to changing conditions. A properly drafted trust will qualify for the marital deduction while at the same time safeguarding the legitimate interests of remainder beneficiaries, such as children and grandchildren [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) (qualified terminable interest property trusts)]. See the discussion of qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trusts in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

K. Miscellaneous Will Provisions

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.694§ 63.694 Contracts to Make Wills--Statement That Testator Has Made Contract[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to confirm that the testator has entered into a contract to make a will or devise or other instrument, not to revoke a will or devise or other instrument, or to die intestate. The provision may be used to disclose the existence of such a contract and to affirm the testator's intention to comply with its terms. For a clause stating that the testator has not made such an agreement, see § 63.693. If the testator's estate or will is affected by the terms of an premarital agreement, the will drafter should review § 63.424[1].

For general discussion of contracts to make a will, or not to revoke a will, see § 63.693[1]. For a detailed discussion of contracts affecting wills, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 61, Contracts and Other Instruments Affecting Wills (Matthew Bender). For a detailed discussion of wills made pursuant to contracts, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 60, Joint and Mutual Wills (Matthew Bender).

Contracts to make a will or other instrument, not to revoke a will or other instrument, or to die intestate are fraught with dangers and almost always avoided by experienced estate planners. Contracts of this type are generally designed to protect children of previous marriages from disinheritance by a stepparent. When persons who have children by a previous marriage enter into a subsequent marriage, they will often wish to plan their estates in such a way that the surviving spouse will have the full use and enjoyment of the property during the surviving spouse's lifetime, but the children will receive the property (or a specified share of the property) after both spouses have died. In circumstances of this kind, the spouses will sometimes ask their attorney to draft a contract obligating both spouses to make wills that protect the inheritance rights of the children. A contract of this kind may be incorporated in a premarital agreement subject to the Uniform Premarital Agreement Act [Fam. Code § 1612(a)(4)]; see Fam. Code §§ 1600-1617 (Uniform Premarital Agreement Act); see also Ch. 108, Antenuptial Agreements ].

However, contracts to make a will or other instrument, not to revoke a will or other instrument, or to die intestate are clumsy devices and ill-suited to accomplish their stated goals. They are difficult to prove and equally difficult to enforce. If such a contract is successfully enforced, it will seriously limit the surviving spouse's use of the affected property and result in the loss of the estate tax marital deduction, with potentially disastrous consequences both for the clients and the attorney [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1) (terminable interest rule); see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-1(b) and discussion of the marital deduction in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions ].

The goals that are usually sought to be achieved by a contract to make a will, or not to make a will, can almost always be achieved by the creation of one or more trusts. A trust is a much more flexible arrangement than a contract. The terms of a trust are almost always easy to prove. Enforcing a trust is almost always easier than enforcing a contract affecting a will. Further, a properly drafted trust will qualify for the marital deduction while at the same time providing for remainder beneficiaries, such as children and grandchildren [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) (qualified terminable interest property trusts)]. For a general discussion of qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions . For further discussion of the disadvantages of contracts affecting wills, see § 63.693[1].

Contracts to Make Wills--Statement That Testator Has Made Contract

On _____[date], _____[name of other party to contract] and I entered into a written contract that affects the dispositions to be made by me in this will. [That contract is hereby incorporated into this will and made a part hereof.] In that contract, I agreed, among other things, _____[set forth operative terms of contract, e.g., that I would leave all of my estate to _____ (name of other party to contract)]. I declare that the terms of Paragraph _____[number] of this will are for the express purpose of performing and discharging my obligations under that contract. [If there is any inconsistency between the terms of that contract and any provision of this will, then, and to the extent of that inconsistency, I direct that the terms of that contract shall control and govern the interpretation of this will].

[Add, if the contract has not yet been fully performed:]

The disposition of property made in Paragraph _____[number] of this will is expressly conditioned upon the performance by _____[name of other party to contract] of all of the terms and conditions of that contract to be performed by _____[him or her]. If _____[name of other party to contract] shall not as of the date of my death have performed all such terms and conditions [add, if appropriate, a statement of the performance required of the other party, e.g., by residing with me and caring for me at all times from the date of that contract until the date of my death], then the disposition of property made in Paragraph _____[number] shall not take effect and the gift of the property described in that paragraph shall lapse and become part of the residue of my estate.

Except as otherwise specified in this paragraph, I have not entered into any contract to make a will or devise, not to revoke a will or devise, or to die intestate.

§ 63.695 Provision for Natural Child Adopted Out of Testator's Family

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to include a child adopted out of the testator's family in the testator's will. The form includes three alternative provisions. The first alternative names the adopted child and includes the child within the definition of the terms "children," "grandchildren," and "issue," but makes no special provision for the child. The second alternative names the adopted child, includes the child within the definition of the terms "children," "grandchildren," and "issue," and makes an individual gift to the child. The third alternative does not name the adopted child but states generally that all references in the will to "children," "grandchildren," and "issue" include any person who would be included by those references but for the fact of his or her adoption.

A fourth alternative, not illustrated in this form, is simply to make an outright gift to the child without stating the facts of the adoption or the names of the natural parents. This may be preferable to the other alternatives if confidentiality is a concern. Failure to identify the child as an adopted child may, however, deny the issue of that child the protection of the anti-lapse statute [Prob. Code § 21110], which applies to adopted persons [Prob. Code § 21115(a), (b), (c)(1), (2)].

[b] Right of Adopted Child to Inherit From or Through Natural Parent

Although a child who has been adopted may under certain circumstances inherit from or through his or her natural parent [see Prob. Code § 6451(a)]; see also § 63.226[1][c][iv], the right is not available to all children who have been adopted. If the testator wishes to provide for such a child, the will should clearly state an intention to do so, either by naming the child or by including the child within the definitions of "children," "grandchildren," and "issue," as used in the will.

[2] FORM

Provision for Natural Child Adopted Out of Testator's Family

[First alternative: child named, included in definition of "children," "grandchildren," and "issue," but no individual gift]

I declare that _____ [name of child adopted out of testator's family], who was born [on _____ (date)] to _____ [name(s) of natural parent(s)] and was thereafter adopted by _____ [name(s) of adoptive parent(s)], is considered by me for all purposes and particularly with reference to this will as my _____ [state relationship, e.g., grandson or granddaughter]. Whenever this will refers to children, grandchildren, issue, or similar words, I thereby refer to and include _____ [name of child adopted out of testator's family].

[Second alternative: child named, included in definition of "children," "grandchildren," and "issue," with individual gift]

I give _____ [specify gift, e.g., the sum of $10,000] to _____ [name of child adopted out of testator's family], who was born to my _____ [relationship of child's parent to testator, e.g., daughter], _____ [name of child's parent], [on _____, 20 ____], and adopted by _____ [names of adoptive parents] [on _____, 20 ____] [add any additional identifying information, such as address of adoptive parents, name of court in which adoption was adjudged, and file number of adoption proceeding].

[Third alternative: child not named, but included in definition of "children," "grandchildren," and "issue"]

All references in this will to children, issue, or other similar words, shall include any person who would be included by such a reference but for the fact of his or her adoption either before or after the date of this will or before or after my death.

1. Signature of Testator

§ 63.710 Standard Signature Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standard signature clause and may be included in the will of any testator who is competent to sign his or her name. Four alternative provisions, each of which differs slightly in its wording and in the placement of its component parts, are included. All are proper and adequate signature clauses that fully comply with the statutory requirements for will signatures.

For a will signature by a person other than the testator in the testator's name and at the testator's direction, see § 63.711. For a will signature by witnessed mark, see § 63.712.

[b] Will Signatures

A formal, witnessed will must be in writing [Prob. Code § 6110(a)] and must be signed by the testator or by someone other than the testator in the testator's name and presence and at the testator's direction [Prob. Code § 6110(b)]. The requirement of former Prob. Code § 50(1) (repealed eff. January 1, 1985) that the will be subscribed "at the end thereof" no longer applies. All former questions relating to the placement of the signature on or in the will are now immaterial.

The will need not be signed in the presence of the subscribing witnesses. The testator may either sign the will or acknowledge the signature of the will (or the will itself) in the presence of at least two witnesses, each of whom must be present at the same time [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)]. The witnesses must understand that the will is the testator's will, and they must sign it. It is not necessary, however, that the witnesses sign the will in each other's presence or even in the presence of the testator, but the will must be witnessed during the testator's lifetime [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)], see Senate Legislative Committee Comment to Prob. Code § 6110. Additionally, if a will was not executed in compliance with Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1), the will must be treated as if it was executed in compliance with Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1) if the proponent of the will can establish by clear and convincing evidence that, at the time the testator signed the will, the testator intended the will to constitute the testator's will [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(2)]. For rules relating to the competency of witnesses, interested witnesses, and the formalities of attestation, see discussion in § 63.730[1][b], [c], and [d].

[c] Place and Date of Execution

Although the statute does not require that the place (or even the date) of execution appear on the will, it is advisable to include that information. A will is valid if it complies with the law at the time of execution of the place where it is executed [Prob. Code § 6113(b)]. The date of a will may be important for many reasons. It may help witnesses to remember the will and when it was executed. It may help to establish the validity of the will if the legal requirements for execution or attestation have been changed after the will was signed. If the testator has executed other wills, codicils, or contracts that relate to property that is disposed of by the will, the date will help to relate the will to those other documents.

[d] Form of Signature

To avoid any confusion as to the identity of the testator, the testator's name should be signed in the same form as it appears in the title and in the introductory clause of the will. The same form of the name should be typed under the testator's signature.

[e] Numbering and Initialing Each Page of Will

It is the practice of many attorneys to provide a space for the testator's signature or initials on each page of the will. This procedure provides some protection against the substitution of will pages, indicates that the testator has read (or at least has looked at) each page, and adds a degree of solemnity to the execution and attestation. While the Probate Code does not require such precautions, it neither prohibits nor discourages them.

PART IV. FORMS

L. Signature and Attestation

1. Signature of Testator

§ 63.711 Testator's Signature Written by Another

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the signature clause when the will is signed by some person other than the testator at the testator's direction and in the testator's presence. For a standard signature clause, see § 63.710. For a will signature by witnessed mark, see § 63.712.

[b] When Testator Is Unable to Sign

A formal, witnessed will must be in writing [Prob. Code § 6110(a)] and signed by the testator or by someone other than the testator in the testator's name and presence and at the testator's direction [Prob. Code § 6110(b)]. If the testator is too ill or infirm to sign the will, at least three alternative courses of action are available.

First, some person other than the testator may help the testator sign by guiding the testator's hand. In one case, the testator was too weak to hold a pen or pencil and, at his request, another person put a pencil in his hand and helped him write his name. The Supreme Court held that the signature was valid and fully complied with the statutory requirements for will signatures [ Estate of Holloway (1925) 195 Cal. 711, 719, 235 P. 1012 ].

Second, the testator may make his or her mark [see § 63.712], with the testator's name being written near to the mark by a person who signs as a witness [Civ. Code § 14; Code Civ. Proc. § 17]. Although signatures by mark were formerly made by persons who had never learned to write, marks may also be used by persons who know how to write but cannot do so because of illness or physical disability [ In re Guilfoyle (1892) 96 Cal. 598, 601, 31 P. 553 ].

Third, the testator may direct another person to sign the testator's name in the testator's presence [Prob. Code § 6110(b)]. If the testator is too ill or infirm to sign, the will drafter may prepare for the problem by adding the clause set forth below to the will.

[c] When Testator Is Subject to Conservatorship

If the testator is subject to a conservatorship, the conservator has no more authority than any other person to help the testator sign. Thus, if a conservator assists the conservatee in signing the will, one of the three methods described above must be used; the conservator has no general authority to sign the will on the testator's behalf. A conservator may be granted the authority to make a will for the conservatee, but only by obtaining prior court authorization to do so [Prob. Code §§ 2580(b)(13), 6100(b), 6100.5(c)]. For discussion, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.11[3].

[d] Form of Signature

To avoid any confusion as to the identity of the testator, the testator's name should be signed in the same form as it appears in the title and in the introductory clause of the will. The same form of the name should be typed under the testator's signature.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS

PART IV. FORMS

L. Signature and Attestation

1. Signature of Testator

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.712

§ 63.712 Signature by Witnessed Mark

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the signature clause when the will is signed by the testator's mark. For a standard signature clause, see § 63.710. For a will signature by a person other than the testator in the testator's name and at the testator's direction, see § 63.711.

[b] Signature by Mark

Prob. Code § 6110(a) requires that the will be signed either (1) by the testator or (2) in the testator's name by some other person in the testator's presence and at the testator's direction. Civ. Code § 14 and Code Civ. Proc. § 17 both provide that "signature or subscription includes mark, when the person cannot write, his name being written near it, by a person who writes his own name as a witness." Civ. Code § 14 and Code Civ. Proc. § 17 have been construed to permit subscription of a will by mark when the testator cannot write [ Estate of McCabe (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 330, 332, 274 Cal. Rptr. 43 ; Estate of Mangeri (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 76, 81, 127 Cal. Rptr. 438 ].

Civ. Code § 14 and Code Civ. Proc. § 17 require (1) that the testator be unable to write, (2) that the testator make his or her mark on the will, (3) that another person write the testator's name "near" the mark, and (4) that the other person write his or her own name as a witness. However, it has been held that substantial compliance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 14 and Code Civ. Proc. § 17 may validate a will even when the literal requirements of the statutes are not satisfied [ Estate of McCabe (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 330, 332, 274 Cal. Rptr. 43 ].

In one case, the testator made his mark at the end of the will, on a line below which his name had been typewritten. A witness signed her name immediately below the typewritten name of the testator. Two additional witnesses attested to the due execution of the will. Although no witness had written the testator's name near his mark, as required by Civ. Code § 14 and Code Civ. Proc. § 17, the court held that the fact that the testator's name was typewritten and that the witness signed her name immediately below the typewritten name constituted substantial compliance with the statutory requirement that the testator's name be "written near" to the mark [ Estate of McCabe (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 330, 334, 274 Cal. Rptr. 43 ]. In another case, the testator's name appeared in the body of a one-page will but was not written next to her mark. Noting that the "only conceivable object of requiring the name to be written 'near' the mark is to show what name the mark is intended to represent," the court held that there had been substantial compliance with the statutory requirement [ In re Guilfoyle (1892) 96 Cal. 598, 600, 31 P. 553 ].

It is difficult to draw a general rule as to when a failure to fully comply with the statutory requirements for execution of a will, will be deemed substantial compliance. There are two competing policies in determining whether a will has been validly executed. Strict compliance with statutory requirements is generally required to protect testators from fraud [ Estate of Howell (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 211, 215, 324 P.2d 578 ]. On the other hand, the policy of the law is generally to favor the validity of a will when there is some doubt as to whether the statutory requirements have been satisfied [ Estate of Baker (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 680, 683, 31 Cal. Rptr. 33, 381 P.2d 913 ]. Wills are most often sustained on grounds of substantial compliance when the wills are holographic. However, the doctrine of substantial compliance is not limited to holographic wills; and, in appropriate circumstances, a formal, witnessed will may be validated when there is some failure to comply with the statutory requirements, provided the validation does not open the door to fraud or potential fraud [see Estate of McCabe (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 330, 334, 274 Cal. Rptr. 43 ]. Of course, a prudent attorney will never rely on the doctrine of substantial compliance to validate a will when strict compliance with the statutory requirements is possible.

For a general discussion of the courses of action available when a testator is unable to sign his or her name to the will, see § 63.711[1].

2. Attestation

§ 63.730 Attestation Clause--Standard Signature by Testator

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the attestation clause (or declaration of subscribing witnesses) when the will has been personally signed by the testator. The form contains appropriate alternatives that may be used when the witnesses have witnessed the signing of the will or when the witnesses have witnessed the acknowledgment of the signature (or the acknowledgment of the will).

For an attestation clause to be used when the testator's signature has been written by another person in the testator's presence and at the testator's direction, see § 63.731. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator's signature is by witnessed mark, see § 63.732. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator is sight-impaired or sightless, see § 63.733.

[b] Witnesses to the Will

Every formal witnessed will must be signed by at least two witnesses [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)]. Any person generally competent to be a witness may act as a witness to a will [Prob. Code § 6112(a)]. Except as otherwise provided by statute, every person, irrespective of age, is qualified to be a witness, and no person is disqualified to testify to any matter [Evid. Code § 700]. A person is disqualified to be a witness if he or she is incapable of expressing himself or herself concerning the matter so as to be understood, either directly or through interpretation by one who can understand the witness [Evid. Code § 701(a)], or incapable of understanding the duty of a witness to tell the truth [Evid. Code § 701(b)].

[c] Interested Witnesses

A will or will provision is not invalid merely because the will is signed by an interested witness [Prob. Code § 6112(b)].

However, if the will makes a devise to a witness, and if there are not at least two other disinterested witnesses, a presumption will arise that the witness procured the devise by duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence [Prob. Code § 6112(c); for definitions of "duress," "menace," "fraud," and "undue influence," see § 63.200[1][e][i] et seq.]. If a devise to an interested witness fails because of this presumption, the interested witness will take so much of the devise as does not exceed the intestate share to which the witness would otherwise be entitled [Prob. Code § 6112(d)]. The witness can still testify to the due execution of the will, however [see Uniform Prob. Code § 2-505, Comment; Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession, 16 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 2301, 2396 (1982)(Prob. Code § 6112 same as Uniform Prob. Code § 2-505)]. Furthermore, if there are at least two other disinterested witnesses, the devise to the "interested" witness is as effective as any other [Prob. Code § 6112; Recommendation Relating to Revision of Wills and Intestate Succession Law, 17 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 537, 541, 552].

No presumption that a devise to an interested witness was procured by duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence will arise if the devisee is made to the witness solely in a fiduciary capacity, such as that of trustee [Prob. Code § 6112(c)].

The witnesses must witness either the testator's signing of the will or the testator's acknowledgment of the signature (or acknowledgment of the will). The signing or the acknowledgment must take place in the presence of the witnesses, who must be present at the same time, but the witnesses need not sign in the presence of each other [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1); see Law Revision Commission Comment to Prob. Code § 6110; see also Estate of Armstrong (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 204, 209-210, 64 P.2d 1093 ]. The subscription of the will by two witnesses must occur before the testator's death [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(2), see Estate of Saueressig (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1045, 1050, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672 , see also Crook v. Contreras (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1205, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319 ].

The requirement of former Prob. Code § 50(3) (repealed January 1, 1985) that the testator "declare" that the will is his or her will has been eliminated, as has the requirement of former Prob. Code § 50(4) that the testator "request" that the witnesses sign. It is sufficient if the witnesses "understand" that the instrument they sign is the testator's will, although this understanding will in most cases be supplied by a declaration of the testator or the testator's attorney.

Although the witnesses are not required to give their residences, that information may help in locating the witnesses at the time it is necessary to prove the will [for proof of wills when there is no contest, see Prob. Code § 8220; for contests of wills, see Prob. Code §§ 8250-8254].

[e] Law Office Procedure

[i] Arranging for Witnesses

The attorney may find it helpful to develop a standard procedure for the execution and attestation of wills. In the usual case, when the will has been drafted and is ready for the client's signature, the attorney will arrange for two witnesses. Neither of these witnesses should be an "interested witness" (i.e., a person to whom the will "makes a devise") [Prob. Code § 6112(b)]. One of the witnesses may be the attorney for the testator. While some attorneys prefer not to act as witnesses unless no other witness is available, many others do so routinely.

[ii] Attorney as Witness

The attorney is legally competent to act as one of the witnesses to the will [see Prob. Code § 6112(a); Evid. Code § 700]. Opinions differ about whether an attorney should customarily act in that capacity.

If there is a will contest, the testimony of an attorney-witness may be necessary to prove the will. Before July 1, 1989, an attorney who knew or should have known that he or she would be called on to testify in a contested proceeding relating to the subject matter of his or her employment was required to withdraw from the employment unless the client, after having been fully advised in the matter and having had a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent counsel, consented in writing to the continued employment [former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-111(A)(4), superseded May 27, 1989, by Rule 5-210]. Under former Prob. Code § 371 (repealed July 1, 1989), key issues of fact in will contests could be tried before a jury. Operative May 27, 1989, Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 5-210 disqualifies an attorney from acting as an advocate in a matter in which the attorney will give testimony, but only if the matter is tried before a jury. Operative July 1, 1989, Prob. Code § 8252(b) eliminates jury trials in will contests. Since a will contest must now be tried before the court sitting without a jury, an attorney who acts as a witness to a will is not automatically disqualified from also acting as advocate in the trial of the contest.

If the attorney is not a witness to the will, he or she may be unable to state an opinion about the sanity of the testator. Under Evid. Code § 870(b), a witness may state an opinion about the sanity of a person if the witness was a subscribing witness to a writing the validity of which is in dispute and which was signed by the person whose sanity is in question. The second witness may be a secretary or other employee in the attorney's office.

[iii] Execution and Attestation

The testator and the witnesses should assemble in one place, typically the attorney's office. After the testator has read the will and approved its contents, the attorney may ask the testator if the indicated instrument is the testator's will. If the answer is affirmative, the testator may proceed to sign and date the will, after which the witnesses may sign and indicate their places of residence. Although the statute no longer requires that the testator be present when the witnesses sign their names, it will be convenient in most cases to complete the execution and attestation at one time and place and while all persons concerned are present. It is not necessary to disclose the contents of the will to the witnesses. The statute requires only that the witnesses "understand" that the indicated document is the testator's will [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)], and that understanding may be imparted without a disclosure of the contents of the document.

[f] "Self-Proving Wills"

Prob. Code § 8220(b) permits the proof of an uncontested will by "an affidavit in the original will that includes or incorporates the attestation clause." Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5, an unsworn declaration under penalty of perjury has the same force and effect as an affidavit. If no one appears to contest the will, the court may admit it to probate on the evidence of only one of the subscribing witnesses, if the evidence shows that it was executed in all particulars as required by law [Prob. Code § 8220(a)]. Evidence of execution of the will may be received in the form of an affidavit of a subscribing witness, to which a photographic copy of the will is attached, or by an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury) in the original will that includes or incorporates the attestation clause [Prob. Code § 8220(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 (declaration under penalty of perjury in lieu of affidavit)].

[g] Statements as to Testamentary Capacity

The Probate Code does not require that the witnesses attest to the testator's capacity or anticipate grounds for contest of the will by denying such influences as fraud, duress, menace, or undue influence. Nothing in the code, however, forbids the inclusion in the attestation clause of a statement that the testator "appears" (or words of like effect) to have the requisite testamentary capacity, or "appears" to be free of fraud, menace, or the like. Many attorneys routinely include such statements in attestation clauses. Others, recognizing that such statements have little or no probative value and are not matters to which the witnesses are competent to testify [see Evid. Code § 702(a) (a witness who is not an expert witness must have personal knowledge of the matter testified to)], routinely reject them.

If the will is not contested, it may be admitted to probate on the affidavit of one of the witnesses, or on an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury) in the will itself [Prob. Code § 8220(b)]. Neither the affidavit nor the declaration under penalty of perjury need establish that the testator was of "sound mind" or "not under the influence of fraud" when the will was executed, but only that the will was "executed" properly [see Prob. Code § 8220].

If the will is contested, each subscribing witness must be produced and examined [Prob. Code § 8253]. If only one subscribing witness is available in a will contest, his or her evidence alone may be sufficient to prove due execution and the unavailable witness is not necessary [ Estate of Burdette (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 938, 945, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 ]. If no subscribing witness is available as a witness [see Evid. Code § 240 (when witness is "unavailable as a witness")], the court may admit the evidence of other witnesses to prove the due execution of the will [Prob. Code § 8253]. At the trial of an action, a witness can be heard only in the presence and subject to the examination of all parties to the action, if they choose to attend and examine [Evid. Code § 711].

Affidavits and verified petitions may be received as evidence in uncontested probate proceedings [Prob. Code § 1022] but not in contested proceedings [ Estate of Duncan (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 212, 215, 81 Cal. Rptr. 568 ]. Neither a verified petition nor the affidavit of an attesting witness is competent to prove a will in the face of a contest [ Estate of Duncan (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 212, 214-215, 81 Cal. Rptr. 568 ].

A statement in the will that the testator "appeared" to a witness (who may never have seen the testator before or after) to be of "sound mind," even if supported by an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury, will have little or no probative value. At worst, such a statement may be regarded as surplusage. At best, it may serve to inform the witnesses that they may one day be called on (in open court) to testify to the testator's capacity. This form offers a statement about the testator's competency as an optional provision, which the will drafter may or may not see fit to include in the attestation clause.

§ 63.731 Attestation Clause--Testator's Signature Written by Another

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the attestation clause (or declaration of subscribing witnesses) when the testator's signature has been written by another person in the testator's presence and at the testator's direction. The form contains appropriate alternatives that may be used when the witnesses have witnessed the signing of the will or when the witnesses have witnessed the acknowledgment of the signature (or the acknowledgment of the will).

For an attestation clause to be used when the will has been signed personally by the testator, see § 63.730. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator's signature is by witnessed mark, see § 63.732. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator is sight-impaired or sightless, see § 63.733.

For discussion of the rules relating to witnesses to wills, formalities of will attestation, "self-proving" wills, and statements as to testamentary capacity, see § 63.730[1].

[b] Testator's Hand Guided by Another

When the testator is too ill or infirm to sign his or her own name to the will, at least three alternative courses of action are available. First, another person may help the testator sign by guiding the testator's hand. Second, the testator may make his or her mark, with the testator's name being written near to the mark by a person who signs as a witness. Third, the testator may direct another person to sign the testator's name in the testator's presence. For a detailed discussion of these alternatives and considerations to be followed in choosing among them, see discussion in § 63.711[1][b].

§ 63.732 Attestation Clause--Signature by Witnessed Mark

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the attestation clause (or declaration of subscribing witnesses) when the will is signed by witnessed mark. The form contains appropriate alternatives that may be used when the witnesses have witnessed the signing of the will or when the witnesses have witnessed the acknowledgment of the signature (or the acknowledgment of the will).

For an attestation clause to be used when the will has been signed personally by the testator, see § 63.731. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator's signature has been written by another person in the testator's presence and at the testator's direction, see § 63.732. For an attestation clause to be used when the testator is sight-impaired or sightless, see § 63.733.

[b] Witnesses to Signature by Mark

A signature or subscription includes a mark when the person whose signature is required cannot write [Civ. Code § 14; Code Civ. Proc. § 17]. In addition to the requirement that a will signed by mark, like other formal wills, must be witnessed by at least two persons [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)], if a signature by mark is to be acknowledged, the signature itself must be witnessed by two persons who must subscribe their own names thereto [Civ. Code § 14; Code Civ. Proc. § 17]. The same witnesses who subscribe their names as witnesses to the will may sign their names as witnesses to the mark.

For discussion of the rules relating to signatures by witnessed mark, see § 63.712[1]. For discussion of the rules relating to witnesses to wills, formalities of will attestation, "self-proving" wills, and statements as to testamentary capacity, see § 63.730[1].

2. Attestation

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.733

§ 63.733 Attestation Clause--Signature by Sight-Impaired or Sightless Person

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as the attestation clause (or declaration of subscribing witnesses) when the will is signed by a sight-impaired or sightless person. It has been adapted from a form developed by Sacramento attorney Sharon Quinn, and is reproduced by permission. It assumes that the witnesses were present at the signing of the will (rather than at a subsequent acknowledgment of the signature or will by the testator) [see Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)] and that the optional procedure discussed in § 63.733[1][b], has been used.

For discussion of the rules relating to witnesses to wills, formalities of will attestation, "self-proving" wills, and statements as to testamentary capacity, see § 63.730[1].

[b] Wills Signed by Sight-Impaired or Sightless Persons

The statutes governing the execution and attestation of wills do not make any special provision for the problems of sight-impaired or sightless testators. The form set forth below addresses these problems by including a recitation that (1) the will has been read aloud to the sight-impaired or sightless testator, (2) the will has been read silently by the subscribing witnesses, and (3) the instrument signed by the witnesses is the identical instrument that was read aloud to the testator. This procedure is an optional one, but its use may make it easier to prove that the sightless or sight-impaired person was aware of and approved of the contents of the will that he or she signed. In the alternative, a standard attestation clause [see § 63.730] may be used in lieu of this form.

[2] FORM

Attestation Clause--Signature by Sight-Impaired or Sightless Person

On the date written below, we, the undersigned, each being present at the same time, witnessed the signing of this instrument by _____ [full name of testator]. At that time, and in our presence, this instrument, consisting of _____ [number] pages, including this page, was read aloud to _____ [full name of testator] while, at the same time, the undersigned read it silently and to ourselves. This instrument is the same instrument that was read aloud to _____ [full name of testator] at that time, and no clause or clauses that appear herein was or were omitted from the instrument as it was read aloud to _____ [full name of testator]. Upon completion of the reading, _____ [full name of testator] stated to us that this instrument was _____ [his or her] will and, then and there, and in our presence, _____ [full name of testator] signed it in the place indicated above.

3. Certification of International Will

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.750

§ 63.750 Certification of International Will

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used by an authorized person to certify that the requirements of the Uniform International Wills Act [Prob. Code §§ 6380-6389] have been fulfilled.

[b] International Wills

[i] In General

An international will is a will that is executed in conformity with the Uniform International Wills Act [Prob. Code § 6380; see Prob. Code §§ 6381-6384]. Under the Act, a will is valid as regards form (irrespective of the place where it is made, the location of the assets which it covers, or the nationality, domicile, or residence of the testator) if it is made in the form of an international will complying with the provisions of the Act [Prob. Code § 6381(a)].

[ii] Form

Under the Act, an international will must be in writing, though it need not be written by the testator himself or herself [Prob. Code § 6382(a)]. It may be written in any language, by hand or by other means [Prob. Code § 6382(a)].

The signatures must be placed at the end of the will [Prob. Code § 6383(a)]. If the will consists of several sheets, each sheet will be signed by the testator or, if he or she is unable to sign, by the person signing on his or her behalf or, if there is no such person, by an "authorized person" [Prob. Code § 6383(a); see discussion in § 63.750[1][c]]. In addition, each sheet must be numbered [Prob. Code § 6383(a)].

The date of the will is the date of its signature by the authorized person [Prob. Code § 6383(b)]. That date must be noted at the end of the will by the authorized person [Prob. Code § 6383(b)].

[iii] Requirements for Execution

The testator must declare in the presence of two witnesses and of a person authorized to act in connection with international wills [see Prob. Code §§ 6380(b), 6388; see also discussion in § 63.750[1][c]] that the document is his or her will and that he or she knows its contents [Prob. Code § 6382(b)]. The testator need not inform the witnesses or the authorized person of the contents of the will [Prob. Code § 6382(b)]. The testator must sign the will in the presence of the witnesses and the authorized person, or (if he or she has previously signed it) acknowledge his or her signature [Prob. Code § 6382(c)].

If the testator is unable to sign, the absence of a signature does not affect the validity of the international will provided the testator includes the reason for his or her inability to sign and the authorized person makes note of that reason on the will [Prob. Code § 6382(d)]. In that case, it is permissible for any other person present, including the authorized person or one of the witnesses, to sign the testator's name at the direction of the testator, if the authorized person makes note of this also on the will. However, it is not required that any person sign the testator's name for the testator [Prob. Code § 6382(d)]. The witnesses and the authorized person must then and there attest the will by signing in the presence of the testator [Prob. Code § 6382(e)].

The authorized person must ask the testator whether he or she wishes to make a declaration concerning the safekeeping of the will. If so, and at the express request of the testator, the place where he or she intends to have his or her will kept must be mentioned in the certificate that is attached to the will by the authorized person [Prob. Code § 6383(c); see Prob. Code § 6384].

[c] Persons Authorized to Act in Connection With International Wills

As used in the Act, the terms "authorized person" and "person authorized to act in connection with international wills" mean persons who are empowered by the laws of the United States or by Prob. Code § 6388 to supervise the execution of international wills [Prob. Code § 6380(b)]. Persons authorized by the laws of the United States to supervise the execution of international wills include members of the diplomatic and consular service of the United States designated by Foreign Service Regulations [Prob. Code § 6380(b)]. Persons authorized by Prob. Code § 6388 are individuals who have been admitted to practice law before the courts of California and who are in good standing as active law practitioners in the state.

[d] Certificate of Authorized Person

The authorized person must attach to the will a certificate to be signed by him or her establishing that the requirements of the Act for the valid execution of an international will have been fulfilled [Prob. Code § 6384]. The authorized person must keep a copy of the certificate and deliver another to the testator [Prob. Code § 6384]. The certificate must be substantially in the form prescribed by Prob. Code § 6384.

Although the absence or irregularity of a certificate does not affect the formal validity of an international will [Prob. Code § 6385], the certificate is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, conclusive of the formal validity of the instrument [Prob. Code § 6385].

[e] International Wills Registry System

Prob. Code § 6389 requires the Secretary of State to establish a registry system by which authorized persons may register in a central information center information regarding the execution of international wills. Information registered in the system must be kept in strictest confidence until the testator's death and then made available to any person who presents a death certificate or other satisfactory evidence of the testator's death [Prob. Code § 6389]. Information that may be received, preserved, and reported is limited to the name, social security (or any other individual identifying number established by law), address, date and place of birth of the testator, and the intended place of deposit or safekeeping of the instrument. The Secretary of State, at the request of the authorized person, may cause the information it receives about execution of any international will to be transmitted to the registry system of another jurisdiction as identified by the testator, if that other system adhered to rules protecting the confidentiality of the information similar to those established in California [Prob. Code § 6389].

[2] FORM

Certification of International Will

CERTIFICATE

(Convention of October 26, 1973)

1. I, _____ [name, address, and capacity], a person authorized to act in connection with international wills,

2. certify that on _____ [date] at _____ [place]

3. _____ [name of testator, address, date, and place of birth] in my presence and that of the witnesses

4. (a) _____ [name, address, date, and place of birth]

CHAPTER 63 WILL PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
M. Election and Waiver of Marital Rights

23-63 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 63.770

§ 63.770 Election and Waiver of Marital Rights

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used when the testator's spouse elects to waive his or her rights in the community and quasi-community property of the parties in return for provisions in the testator's will. When executed by the spouse, this form amounts to an "election" by the spouse to ratify or acquiesce in the testator's disposition of both halves of the community and quasi-community property. For a will provision disposing of all the community and quasi-community property of both spouses and putting the testator's spouse to an election, see § 63.272.

When used, this form should be set forth at the end of the will and immediately follow the signatures of the attesting witnesses.

[b] Waiver of Marital Rights

A spouse may waive his or her marital or property rights in the estate of the other spouse, including the right to elect to take community or quasi-community property against the will [Prob. Code § 141(a)(7)]. Because relations between spouses are typically based on trust and confidence, however, and because waivers of marital or property rights may be requested or granted under unfair or inequitable circumstances, such waivers have long been subject to special scrutiny. Before the enactment of Prob. Code §§ 140-147 (operative January 1, 1985), marital waivers were subject to the general rules that control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other [Fam. Code § 721; see Estate of Mader (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 409, 89 Cal. Rptr. 787; see also Estate of Wiedemann (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 269, 48 Cal. Rptr. 558].

Under Prob. Code §§ 140-147, waivers of marital and property rights are governed by specific statutory rules that apply to a broad spectrum of marital rights and that comprehensively specify the circumstances under which waivers of those rights may be enforced.

The statutory rules apply to complete or partial waivers of the rights of a "surviving spouse" [see Prob. Code § 78] in or to any property that would pass from one spouse to another upon death, including, but not limited to [Prob. Code § 141(a), (b)]:

- Property that would pass from the decedent spouse by intestate succession;
- Property that would pass from the decedent by testamentary disposition in a will executed before the waiver;
- A probate homestead;
- The right to have exempt property set aside;
- The right to a family allowance;
- The right to have a small estate set aside without probate administration [see Prob. Code §§ 6600-6615];
- The right to elect to take community or quasi-community property against the decedent's will;
- The right to take the statutory share of an omitted spouse [see Prob. Code §§ 21610-26112];
- The right to be appointed as the personal representative of the decedent's estate; and
- An interest in property that is the subject of a nonprobate transfer on death [see Prob. Code §§ 5000-5705].

[c] Enforceability of Marital Waivers

The waiver must be in writing and signed by the surviving spouse [Prob. Code § 142(a)]. Enforcement of the waiver is subject to the same defenses as enforcement of a contract, except that lack of consideration is not a defense [Prob. Code § 142(c)(1)]. A minor intending to marry may make a waiver as if married, but the waiver becomes effective only upon the marriage [Prob. Code § 142(c)(2)].

After it has been determined that the waiver is in writing and signed by the surviving spouse, the waiver is subject to scrutiny on at least three levels. At any one of these levels, the court may determine that the waiver does or does not meet the statutory requirements and is or is not enforceable.

First, Prob. Code § 143 provides that the waiver is enforceable unless the surviving spouse proves either (1) that a fair and reasonable disclosure of the property or financial obligations of the decedent was not provided to the surviving spouse before the waiver was signed (unless such a disclosure was waived after advice by independent legal counsel) [Prob. Code § 143(a)(1)]; or (2) that the surviving spouse was not represented by independent legal counsel when the waiver was signed [Prob. Code § 143(a)(2)]. If the foregoing requirements are not established, the court may proceed to a second level of determination.

Under Prob. Code § 144(a), the waiver is enforceable if the court determines either: (1) that the waiver at the time of signing made a fair and reasonable disposition of the rights of the surviving spouse [Prob. Code § 144(a)(1)]; or (2) that the surviving spouse had (or reasonably should have had) an adequate knowledge of the property and financial obligations of the decedent, and the decedent did not violate any of the fiduciary duties imposed by Fam. Code 721(b).

If the court determines that the waiver is enforceable under Prob. Code § 144(a), the court may proceed to a third level of determination. Even if the waiver is enforceable under Prob. Code § 144(a) (because it made a fair and reasonable disposition of the rights of the surviving spouse or because the surviving spouse had, or reasonably should have had, an adequate knowledge of the property and financial obligations of the decedent), the court may deny enforcement if, after considering all relevant facts and circumstances, it finds that enforcement would be "unconscionable" under the circumstances existing at the time enforcement is sought [Prob. Code § 144(b)]. If the court finds that enforcement would be unconscionable in whole or in part, it may refuse to enforce the waiver entirely, refuse to enforce the part that is unconscionable and enforce the rest, or limit the application of the unconscionable provisions to avoid an unconscionable result [Prob. Code § 144(b)].

[d] Tax Consequences of Waivers and Elections

The use of marital waivers, especially waivers that include the widow(er)'s election, may have significant tax consequences. For discussion, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 22, Property Devised by Will, § 22.06[4] (Matthew Bender).

[2] FORM

Election and Waiver of Marital Rights

ELECTION AND WAIVER BY SPOUSE

I, _____ [full name of testator's spouse], the _____ [husband or wife] of _____ [full name of testator], have read the foregoing will of my _____ [husband or wife] and fully understand that it disposes, not only of all of _____ [his or her] separate property, but also of all of our community property and quasi-community property.

[EITHER]

Before signing this Election and Waiver, I was provided a fair and reasonable disclosure of all of the property and financial obligations of my _____ [husband or wife] and, at the time of signing, was represented by independent legal counsel, _____ [name of independent legal counsel], attorney-at-law, who has fully advised me as to my legal rights and as to the consequences of this Election and Waiver.

[OR]

At the time of signing this Election and Waiver, I was represented by independent legal counsel, _____ [name of independent legal counsel], attorney-at-law, whose address is _____ [street address, city, state, zip] and who has fully advised me as to my legal rights and as to the consequences of this Election and Waiver and, upon whose advice, I do now waive the provisions of the California Probate Code § 143(a), under which I am entitled to a fair and reasonable disclosure of the property or financial obligations of my _____ [husband or wife]. I do hereby waive such a disclosure.

I am fully satisfied with the foregoing will and therefore elect to accept and acquiesce in its provisions. I hereby waive any and all claims to my share of the community property and quasi-community property, if any, and all other rights, claims or interests that I may have in or to any of the property disposed of by the foregoing will [, but not my right to request and receive a family allowance out of the estate of my _____ (husband or wife) during the administration of _____ (his or her) estate]. This Election and Waiver is not intended and shall not operate as a present transfer or release of any of my rights in any property.

[Optional; add if spouse will retain right to revoke election and waiver:]

This Election and Waiver may be revoked by me by a written instrument signed by me and delivered to my _____ [husband or wife] at any time during _____ [his or her] lifetime.

[Continue with the following:]

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers payments and distributions of income and principal from testamentary trusts. It discusses the general legal rules that govern the formation of testamentary trusts in California, including the comprehensive statutory scheme embodied in the Trust Law [Prob. Code §§ 15000-19403; see discussion in § 64.30[1] et seq.]. It includes a detailed analysis of testamentary trust provisions that empower trustees to make payments or distributions from trusts, that determine whether payments or distributions are mandatory or discretionary, and that specify whether the payments are to be made from income, from principal, or from both.

This chapter does not discuss the selection or appointment of trustees [see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions ], the administrative powers of trustees [see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions ], operational provisions of the trust [see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions ], or the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code § 16320-16375], which prescribes rules for the allocation of the receipts and expenditures of trusts to income or principal [see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions ]. Complete will forms, including wills with testamentary trusts, are illustrated in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms.

This chapter does not contain marital deduction formula provisions, payment and distribution provisions for marital deduction trusts, or ancillary provisions that are usually included in marital deduction trusts. These forms are illustrated and discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

Although the forms in this chapter are drafted for testamentary trusts, many of them can be adapted for use in inter vivos ("living") trusts. For complete inter vivos trust forms, and discussion of the use and drafting of inter vivos trusts, see Ch. 70, Complete Revocable Trust Forms .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.30

§ 64.30 The Trust Law

[1] Scope and Purpose

In 1987, a comprehensive Trust Law [Prob. Code § 15000 et seq.] took effect in California. Recognizing that preexisting law relating to the creation, administration, and termination of trusts (much of which dated back to the Field Codes of 1872) had become a patchwork of confusing, overlapping, and sometimes conflicting provisions, the legislature sought to replace the patchwork with a comprehensive statutory scheme reorganizing, recodifying, and recasting relevant provisions of trust law [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 520 (1986)]. Some new rules were introduced as part of the Trust Law. The substance of much of the old law, however, was reenacted, although sometimes in different language [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 520 (1986)]. Although the Trust Law largely reorganizes and streamlines rules relating to the creation and administration of trusts, it does not purport to codify all relevant rules relating to trusts that may apply under the common law [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 520 (1986)]. On the contrary, it specifically provides that, except as they are modified by statute, common law rules governing trusts remain the law of California [Prob. Code § 15002; see Civ. Code § 22.2 (common law as rule of decision in California)].

[2] Effective Date

The Trust Law became effective on July 1, 1987 [Prob. Code § 15001]. It applies broadly to trusts created both before and after that date. Many of the provisions of the Trust Law continue similar or identical provisions of previous law. Although some provisions of the Trust Law differ from corresponding provisions of the former law, the changes were, for the most part, dictated by public policy considerations that indicate the desirability of applying them both prospectively and retroactively. Further, most of the provisions of the Trust Law are rules of construction that apply only when the trust instrument does not prescribe a different rule [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 521 (1986)]. For these reasons, it was decided to apply the new law to existing trusts to the fullest extent possible [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 605 (1986)].

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the Trust Law generally applies to all trusts, regardless of whether they were created before, on, or after July 1, 1987 [Prob. Code § 15001(a)]. It also applies to all proceedings concerning trusts commenced before July 1, 1987, unless in the opinion of the court application of a particular provision of the law would substantially interfere with the effective conduct of the proceedings or the rights of the parties and other interested persons. In that case, prior law applies [Prob. Code § 15001(c)]. The Trust Law also applies to all proceedings concerning trust commenced on or after July 1, 1987 [Prob. Code § 15001(b)].

[3] Application to Charitable Trusts

The Trust Law applies generally to charitable trusts as well as to so-called "private trusts" [see Prob. Code § 15004]. Recognizing, however, that charitable trusts have been given special treatment under the common law [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 501, 604 (1986)], the law subordinates the general statutory rules to the supervisory authority of the Attorney General and to other more specific statutory provisions. Thus the Trust law applies to charitable trusts that are subject to the jurisdiction of the Attorney General to the extent that application of the law is not in conflict with the Uniform Supervision of Trustees for Charitable Purposes Act [Prob. Code § 15004; see Gov. Code §§ 12580-12597]. For further consideration of special rules relating to charitable dispositions, see Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions .

[4] Involuntary Trusts

By its own terms, the Trust Law is inapplicable to "involuntary" trusts (also called "constructive" or "resulting" trusts) [Prob. Code § 15003(a)]. Unlike a "voluntary" or "express" trust, an involuntary trust arises, not when the settlor manifests an intention to create it, but when circumstances raise an inference that the settlor does not intend that the person taking or holding title to property should have its beneficial enjoyment. Stated otherwise, a constructive trust is not imposed to effectuate intention, but to redress a wrong or prevent unjust enrichment [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 1 cmt. e]. Constructive and resulting trusts are subject to Civ. Code §§ 2223-2225, which apply to persons who wrongfully detain property belonging to others [see Civ. Code § 2223]; persons who gain property by fraud, accident, mistake, undue influence, violation of a trust, or some other wrongful act [see Civ. Code § 2224]; and felons or profiteers who receive money for selling materials or rights that are enhanced by the notoriety gained from the felons' convictions [see Civ. Code § 2225]. Note, however, that the Supreme Court of California has held that Civ. Code § 2225, which imposes a constructive trust on the proceeds or profits of a convicted felon from expressive materials that include a story of the crime, is facially invalid under both free speech clause of First Amendment to federal Constitution as applied to states through Fourteenth Amendment, and liberty of speech clause of California Constitution (art. I, § 2, subd. (a)) [ Keenan v. Superior Court (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 413, 431-435, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 40 P.3d 718 ] .

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.31

§ 64.31 Elements of a Trust

[1] In General

Four elements are required for the creation of a valid "express" trust [see § 64.30[4]]. These are (1) intent [Prob. Code § 15201; see § 64.31[2]]; (2) property [Prob. Code § 15202; see § 64.31[3]]; (3) a beneficiary or beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 15205; see § 64.31[4]]; and (4) a trust purpose [see Prob. Code §§ 15203, 15204; see also § 64.31[6]].

[2] Intent

A valid express trust is created only if the settlor properly manifests an intention to create a trust [Prob. Code § 15201]. It is immaterial whether the settlor knows that the intended relationship is called a "trust," or even whether the settlor knows the precise characteristics of a "trust" [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 23 cmt. a]. It is essential, however, that the intention to create the trust be expressed in some way--by words (oral or written) [see Prob. Code § 15207(a)] (when writing is required); see also § 64.33[2]] or even by conduct [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 23 cmt. a]. In any event, the intention must be evidenced by an external expression as distinguished from an undisclosed intention [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 23 cmt. a].

[3] Property

Since a trust is, by its nature, a method of making a disposition of property and subjecting a person (the trustee) to equitable duties to deal with the property for the benefit of another person (the beneficiary), it follows that there can be no trust without trust property [Prob. Code § 15203; see Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 74 cmt. a]. In this connection, it is important to distinguish a trust from a contract to create a trust. Although the former requires property for its subject, the latter may be created without any property, providing the requisites of a valid contract are satisfied [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 74 cmt. a; see § 64.32].

Whether the subject of a trust meets the "property" requirement will, in many cases, depend on the character of the property sought to be transferred in trust. Generally, any property that can be voluntarily transferred by the owner can be held in trust [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 78]. Examples of interests that may be transferred in trust include partnership interests in businesses [ Walberg v. Smyth (N.D. Cal. 1956) 142 F. Supp. 293, 297 ], debts or contract rights [ Placerville Fruit Growers' Assn. v. Irving (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 731, 737, 287 P.2d 793 ], transferable rights in intangibles (e.g., patents, copyrights, trademarks, trade secrets, or unpatented inventions [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 82], and the proceeds of life insurance policies that are made payable to the trustee [ Shaw v. Johnson (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 599, 605-606, 59 P.2d 876 ]).

Certain property interests, however, cannot be held in trust. For example, as a general rule, an interest that has not come into existence or that has ceased to exist cannot be held in trust [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 75]. Similarly, neither an interest that is not definite or definitely ascertainable [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 76] nor an interest that the owner cannot transfer [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 79] may be held in trust. Other examples of interests that cannot be held in trust include pensions and salaries received from public office [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. I, § 79], a right of action for a tort [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. I, § 79], joint tenancy property [see Goldberg v. Goldberg (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 623, 628, 32 Cal. Rptr. 93 ], and a lease subject to a covenant not to assign [ Weintraub v. Weingart (1929) 98 Cal. App. 690, 695-697, 277 P. 752 ].

Life insurance proceeds are not subject to testamentary disposition and hence may not be transferred by a testamentary trust unless the policy specifies that the proceeds are to be paid to the estate or to the personal representatives of the insured, since the policy is a contract under which the insurer agrees to pay a certain sum to a named beneficiary [ Cook v. Cook (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 639, 644-648, 111 P.2d 322 ]. However, the ownership rights to a life insurance policy may be disposed of by will, and the beneficiary then will take whatever interest the insured possessed under the policy [Ins. Code § 10130; see Cook v. Cook (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 639, 644, 111 P.2d 322 ].

[4] Beneficiary or Beneficiaries

A valid trust (other than a charitable trust) is created only if there is a beneficiary or beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 15205(a)]. Problems sometimes arise when a trust instrument designates beneficiaries by describing a class (e.g., "my family," "my relatives," or "my descendants") or attempts to delegate the power to determine the beneficiaries to the trustee [see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 526 (1986)]. The Trust Law provides that the requirement of a beneficiary is satisfied if the trust instrument provides for either of the following:

- A beneficiary or class of beneficiaries that is ascertainable with reasonable certainty or that is sufficiently described so that it can be determined that some person meets the description or is within the class [Prob. Code § 15205(b)(1)]; or
- A grant of power to the trustee or some other person to select the beneficiaries based on a standard or in the discretion of the trustee or other person [Prob. Code § 15205(b)(2)]. (A trustee who refuses to act under a grant of power to select beneficiaries may be compelled to exercise his or her discretion in a reasonable manner [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 528 (1986)]).

A will may make a disposition of property to any person, including but not limited to (1) an individual; (2) a corporation; (3) an unincorporated association, society, lodge, or any branch of such an organization; (4) a county, city, city and county, or any municipal corporation; (5) any state, including the State of California; (6) the United States or any instrumentality of the United States; and (7) a foreign country or a governmental entity in a foreign country [Prob. Code § 6102]. Within the limits of this section, a person who has capacity to take and hold legal title to property has capacity to be the beneficiary of a trust of that property [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 116]. Conversely, a person who does not have capacity to take legal title to property has no capacity to become the beneficiary of a trust of that property; and a person who has become a beneficiary may continue in that capacity only to the extent that he or she has capacity to hold legal title to the trust property [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 117]. However, a disability that would prevent a person from making a contract will not prevent that person from being a beneficiary of a trust. Thus, a child or an insane person may be the beneficiary of a trust [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 116].

[5] Honorary Trusts

Some trusts lack a specific beneficiary but are nonetheless enforceable as so-called "honorary trusts." An "honorary trust" is a trust that has no ascertainable beneficiary but is created for a specific, non-charitable purpose [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), at 1354]. Trusts to maintain a tombstone or a grave, or to care for a pet, are examples of honorary trusts [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 124].

The courts have sometimes enforced and sometimes declined to enforce honorary trusts. In one case, the testator left the sum of $1,000 in trust to a fraternal lodge for the purpose of erecting and caring for a headstone for the testator and the testator's wife. The court held that the trust violated the rule against perpetuities, since it was a trust for a non-charitable purpose that was intended to continue for an unlimited time [ Estate of Pfund (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 444, 445, 209 P.2d 52 ]. In another case, the testator left the residue of his estate to a bishop for the purpose of saying masses for the repose of his soul. The Supreme Court held that this was a valid charitable trust and, as such, enforceable under the charitable exception to the rule against perpetuities [ Estate of Hamilton (1919) 181 Cal. 758, 771-772, 186 P. 587 ]. For discussion of the rule against perpetuities and exceptions to the rule, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.10 et seq.

In an effort to bring some certainty to this area of the law, the legislature enacted two statutes that became operative in 1991. The first was Prob. Code § 15211, which provides that a trust for a lawful non-charitable purpose may be performed by the trustee, whether or not there is a beneficiary who can seek enforcement or termination of the trust. Under Prob. Code § 15211, however, such a trust may be performed for only 21 years, even when the terms of the trust contemplate a longer duration.

The second statute was Prob. Code § 15212, which provides that a trust for the care of a designated domestic or pet animal may be created by the trustee for the life of the animal, whether or not there is a beneficiary who can seek enforcement or termination of the trust, and whether or not the terms of the trust contemplate a longer duration. On the death of the designated animal, the trust terminates and the trust property is distributed according to the terms of the trust instrument or, if there are no such terms, as directed by the court [Prob. Code § 15212; see Recommendation Relating to Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, 20 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 2501, 2540 (1990); for distribution of trust on termination, see Prob. Code § 15410].

The time limits set for the duration of trusts by Prob. Code §§ 15211 and 15212 are exceptions to the general rule of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, which prescribes a 90-year "wait-and-see" rule for determining the validity of most trusts. The Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities is set forth in Prob. Code §§ 21200-21225 and discussed in Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.10 et seq.

[6] Purpose

Every trust must have an ascertainable purpose. However, a trust created for an indefinite or general purpose is not invalid for that reason if it can be determined with reasonable certainty that a particular use of the trust property comes within that purpose [Prob. Code § 15204].

A trust may be created for any purpose that is not illegal or against public policy [Prob. Code § 15203]. Although most trusts result from the settlors' desires to separate the management and control of property from its beneficial enjoyment and to create successive interests in the same property, the reasons that particular settlors may have for creating trusts are varied and incapable of exact classification [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 59 cmt. b].

§ 64.32 Consideration Not Required

Consideration is not required to create a valid trust [Prob. Code § 15208]. If property is transferred in trust, it is immaterial whether the settlor gives (or promises to give) the trustee any compensation; nor must the settlor receive any compensation (or promised compensation) from the beneficiary.

The rule is different, however, with respect to a promise to create a trust. A promise to create a trust in the future is a contract, and like other contracts, is subject to the general requirement of consideration [Prob. Code § 15208].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.33

§ 64.33 Creation of Trust

[1] Methods

Subject to other provisions of the Trust Law, a trust may be created in any of the following methods [Prob. Code § 15200]:

- By a declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds the property as trustee;
- By a transfer of property by the owner to another person as trustee;
- By a testamentary transfer of property by the owner to another person as trustee;
- By an exercise of a power of appointment to another person as trustee; or
- By an enforceable promise to create a trust.

[2] When Writing Is Required

Although the law recognizes and will enforce certain oral trusts in relation to personal property [see § 64.33[3]], trusts relating to real property must be in writing. Specifically, the Trust Law provides that a trust in relation to real property is not valid unless evidenced by one of the following [Prob. Code § 15206]:

- A written instrument signed by the trustee or by the trustee's agent if authorized in writing to do so;
- A written instrument conveying the trust property signed by the settlor, or by the settlor's agent if authorized in writing to do so; or
- Operation of law.

A trust instrument that relates to real property may be recorded in the office of the county recorder in the county in which all or a portion of the real property is located [Prob. Code § 15210]. Recordation is not essential to the validity of a trust instrument, however, even an instrument that relates to real property, since an unrecorded instrument is valid as between the parties and those who have actual notice of it [Civ. Code § 1217].

[3] Validity of Oral Trusts

California law recognizes the validity of oral trusts in personal property [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 525 (1986)] but subjects them to special requirements designed to facilitate proof of their terms. It is unlikely that an oral trust will meet all of the requirements of a formal express trust [see § 64.31[1]]. Further, efforts to prove trusts by parol are fraught with the danger of perjury [see Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 525 (1986)]. Thus, the Trust Law provides that the existence and terms of an oral trust of personal property may be established only by "clear and convincing" evidence [Prob. Code § 15207(a)]. It further provides that the oral declaration of the settlor, standing alone, is not sufficient evidence of the creation of the trust [Prob. Code § 15207(b)].

[4] Testamentary Trusts

A testamentary trust is a trust that is created by a will and takes effect on the death of the settlor (or testator) [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), at 1356; see Prob. Code § 15200(c) (trust may be created by testamentary transfer of property)]. Since a testamentary trust is an inseparable part of a will [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 33], it must be created with all of the formalities of a will [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 53].

No writing may be a part of a will unless it is incorporated into the will by reference [Estate of Doane (1923) 190 Cal. 412, 414, 213 P. 53; see Prob. Code § 6130 (requirements of incorporation by reference)], although a will may dispose of property by reference to acts and events that have significance apart from their effect upon the dispositions made by the will [Prob. Code § 6131]. For discussion of the formalities for creation of a will, and the general rules applicable to the construction and interpretation of wills, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.10 et seq.

If the owner of property has the capacity to devise property to another person, the owner has the capacity to transfer it by will to be held by the transferee in trust [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 20 cmt. a]. The rules governing capacity to create a valid testamentary trust are the same as the rules regarding capacity to create a valid will. In California, any person who is 18 years of age or older and of sound mind may make a will [Prob. Code § 6100(a); see Prob. Code § 6100.5 (when person is not mentally competent to make will)]. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 64.35 Testamentary Trusts and Survivorship

Frequently, a testator will wish to have a testamentary trust take effect only if the principal beneficiary named in the will (often the testator's spouse) does not survive the testator or does not survive until some time after the testator's death. A testator is free to dispose of his or her estate on whatever conditions he or she may see fit, as long as the conditions are not prohibited by law and do not violate public policy [see In re Kitchen (1923) 192 Cal. 384, 388, 220 P. 301 ; see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.410[1]].

The general rule is that a devisee who does not survive the testator, or does not survive until a future time required by the will, will not take under the will [Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. However, when the devisee is "kindred" of the testator, the "anti-lapse" statute [Prob. Code § 21110] will apply and the devise instead will pass to the heirs of the devisee [Prob. Code § 21110(a)], unless the will expresses a contrary intent or makes a substitute disposition [Prob. Code § 21110(b); see Prob. Code § 21102(a) (intent of testator is controlling)]. For a general discussion of the lapse of legacies and the operation of the "anti-lapse statute," see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.411[1][d].

Whether a gift should be conditioned on survival should be considered as it bears on each gift in a will. While it is often advisable to condition a testamentary gift on survival for a specified period of time, since such a condition may obviate successive administration and taxation of the same property, it is unwise to routinely condition gifts to a surviving spouse on survival until a future time, because such a condition may delay or defeat the community property confirmation proceedings authorized by Prob. Code §§ 13650-13660 [see discussions in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.200[1][b] et seq.].

Under the Internal Revenue Code, a will provision that requires a surviving spouse to survive a testator for more than six months will deprive the spouse of the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1), (3)]. This six-month requirement has been very strictly construed by the IRS and presents a trap for the unwary. For example, a survivorship requirement conditioned on the conclusion of probate or the time of distribution disqualifies the gift from the marital deduction, because the specified period of time involved might exceed six months after the death of the testator [ Rev. Rul. 88-90, 1988-2 C.B. 335 ; Estate of Heim v. Commissioner (9th Cir. [T.C.] 1990) 914 F.2d 1322, 1327-1328 ; Estate of Robertson v. United States (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1990) 903 F.3d 1034, 1037 ]. Under California law, however, if a will that makes a marital deduction gift includes a condition that the transferor's spouse survive the transferor by a period that exceeds (or may exceed) six months, the condition will be limited to six months as applied to the marital deduction gift [Prob. Code § 21525(a); see Prob. Code §§ 45 ("instrument" defined), 21522 (rules applicable to "instrument"); see also Prob. Code § 21520(a) ("marital deduction" defined), (b) ("marital deduction gift" defined)]. This statute is intended to protect against inadvertent loss of the marital deduction [see Prob. Code § 21522(a)]. Nevertheless, attorneys should not attempt to specify survivorship periods that might exceed the six-month limit, since the California statute also provides, somewhat inconsistently with the provision limiting survivorship periods, that these rules are inapplicable to any instrument "the terms of which expressly or by necessary implication" make them inapplicable [Prob. Code § 21502(a)].

A different limitation applies if the will includes a condition that the testator's spouse survive a common disaster that results in the death of the spouse and the testator. If the will includes the latter type of condition and the testator and spouse die in a common disaster, California law limits the condition to the time of the final audit of the federal estate tax return for the testator's estate, if any, as applied to the marital deduction gift [Prob. Code § 21525(b)].

For further discussion of survivorship clauses and testamentary trusts, see § 64.200[1][j]. For a will provision conditioning a gift on survival until a future time, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.411.

As an alternative to a testamentary trust, a testator may make a testamentary gift to an existing trust, or to a trust to be created independently of the testator's will. Although testamentary gifts to existing trusts were at one time the subject of heated controversy [see McClanahan, Bequests to an Existing Trust--Problems and Suggested Remedies, 47 Cal. L. Rev. 267 (1959)], they have been explicitly sanctioned by statute in California since 1965, when the Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act was added to the Probate Code [Stats. 1965, ch. 1640; see Prob. Code §§ 6300-6303 (Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act)]. These gifts are commonly referred to as "pour-over gifts," and the trusts to which they are made are known as "pour-over trusts" [see Black's Law Dictionary 1517 (7th ed. 1999)].

A pour-over gift may be made to a trust created by the testator, to a trust created by some person other than the testator, or to a trust created by the testator and another person together [Prob. Code § 6300]. Although the pour-over trust need not actually be in existence before the pour-over gift is made, the trust must be identified in the testator's will [Prob. Code § 6300]. To be identified in the testator's will, the trust must be evidenced either (1) by an inter vivos instrument executed before or at the same time as the testator's will or (2) by the will of a person who died before the testator [Prob. Code § 6300]. A pour-over gift may be made to a funded or an unfunded trust, i.e., to a trust with or without corpus [Prob. Code § 6300]. Such a gift is not invalid because the pour-over trust is amendable or revocable, or both, or even because the trust is in fact amended after the pour-over gift is made (i.e., after the testator's will was executed). If, however, the trust is revoked or terminated before the testator's death, the pour-over gift will lapse [Prob. Code § 6300] and become part of the residue of the testator's estate [Prob. Code § 21111(a)]. If the gift is a residuary gift, there are no other residuary beneficiaries, and the will does not contain an alternate residuary disposition, the pour-over gift will pass to the testator's heirs under the law of intestate succession [Prob. Code § 6400 (any part of decedent's estate not effectively disposed of by will passes under intestate succession statutes); see Prob. Code §§ 6400-6414 (intestate succession rules)].

Unless the testator's will provides otherwise, property subject to a pour-over gift is not deemed to be held under a testamentary trust of the testator but becomes part of the trust to which it is given and must be administered and disposed of under the terms of the instrument (inter vivos or testamentary) by which that trust was created, including any amendments to that instrument [Prob. Code § 6300].

For will provisions making gifts to existing inter vivos trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.211 and Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.421. For a will provision making a gift to an existing testamentary trust, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.422.

CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 64.37 "Income" and "Principal"

A typical testamentary trust requires the trustee to pay the trust income to one or more income beneficiaries (such as the testator's surviving spouse or children) during their lifetimes. It often grants the trustee discretion to make payments out of principal if the trustee determines that the income is not sufficient to meet the needs of the beneficiaries. Finally, it provides that on the deaths of the income beneficiaries, the trust principal will be distributed to remainder beneficiaries, who may be children or grandchildren of the testator.

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] prescribes detailed rules under which the receipts and disbursements of a trust must be allocated to or charged against trust income or principal [for discussion of the Act, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.30 et seq.]. However, the will may prescribe its own rules for the determination of income and principal [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)], and these rules, like the other provisions of the trust, are binding on the trustee [see Prob. Code § 16000] and enforceable by the courts [see Prob. Code §§ 16400-16442].

CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 64.38 "Payments" and "Distributions"

As used in this chapter, the word "payment" generally refers to a payment to a current income beneficiary, whether that payment is out of trust income or principal. "Distribution" refers generally to a distribution of principal to a remainder beneficiary. The distinction between payments and distributions, however, is not always precise. "Payments" out of income are sometimes made to remainder beneficiaries; and "distributions" of principal, or of both income and principal, are sometimes made to current income beneficiaries. For this reason, the words "payment" and "distribution" are often used interchangeably. Whether a transaction is labeled a "payment" or a "distribution" is less important than the times and circumstances under which the payment will be made, whether the trustee has discretion to determine the amount of the payment, and whether the payment is to be made from income, from principal, or from both income and principal. A "final distribution" is generally the last payment made by the trustee upon termination of the trust.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.39

§ 64.39 Testamentary Trusts and the Income Tax

[1] In General

Testamentary trusts are treated as separate entities for the purpose of reporting and paying income taxes. The income tax [see I.R.C. § 1(e)] applies to the taxable income of any kind of property held in trust, including income accumulated for future distribution under the terms of a will or trust, income that is to be distributed currently to income beneficiaries, and income that, in the trustee's discretion, may be either distributed to income beneficiaries or accumulated [I.R.C. § 641(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.641(a)-2]. The trustee is required to make and file the tax return and pay the tax for which the trust is liable [I.R.C. § 641(b); Treas. Reg. § 1.641(b)-2(b)]. Unlike individuals, however, trusts frequently function as conduits for the purpose of passing on income and income tax liability to the income beneficiaries, rather than as separate taxable entities. This function arises out of the rule permitting trusts to deduct income distributed to beneficiaries [see I.R.C. §§ 651, 661] and the corresponding rule requiring income beneficiaries to include that income in their gross incomes [see I.R.C. §§ 652, 662].

Although the income tax rules pertaining to testamentary trusts are simple in theory, they are more complicated in application. For a basic discussion of the income taxation of trusts in general, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 82, Basic Tax Considerations in Trust Planning (Matthew Bender). More detailed discussion of the same subject may be found in Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation, Ch. 42, Income Taxation of Trusts and Estates (Matthew Bender), and in Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, Chs. 54- 58 (Matthew Bender).

[2] "Simple" and "Complex" Trusts

The income tax liability of a trust depends in part on determining whether the trust is "simple" or "complex." A "simple" trust is one that requires all of its income to be distributed currently and does not provide for any amounts to be paid, permanently set aside, or used for charitable purposes [I.R.C. § 651(a), Treas. Reg. § 1.651(a)-1; see I.R.C. § 642(c) (charitable deduction)]. Whether all of the income must be distributed currently depends on the terms of the trust instrument and the applicable local law [Treas. Reg. § 1.651(a)-2(a)]. It is immaterial whether the amount of income to be allocated to each beneficiary is specified in the instrument or is left to the discretion of the trustee, provided that the trustee is required to distribute all of the income [Treas. Reg. § 1.651(a)-2(b)]. All trusts that are not "simple" are "complex" [I.R.C. 661(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.661(a)-1].

In determining "income" for the purpose of distinguishing between simple and complex trusts, an allocation of amounts between income and principal under applicable local law will be respected if that law provides for a reasonable apportionment between the income and remainder beneficiaries of the total return of the trust for the year, including ordinary and tax-exempt income, capital gains, and appreciation. A state statute that permits the trustee to make adjustments between income and principal to fulfill the trustee's duty of impartiality between the income and remainder beneficiaries generally is a reasonable apportionment of the total return of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.643(b)-1; see Prob. Code § 16336(a)].

Likewise, a state statute which provides that income is a unitrust amount of no less than three percent and no more than five percent of the fair market value of the trust assets, whether determined annually or averaged on a multiple year basis, is a reasonable apportionment of the total return of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 1.643(b)-1; see Prob. Code § 16328]. Prob. Code §§ 16336.4, 16336.5, and 16336.6, effective January 1, 2006, allow a trustee, under the circumstances described in those sections, to convert a net income trust to a unitrust to take advantage of this regulation, without running afoul of the "prudent investor" rule while meeting the terms of an instrument requiring income to a beneficiary such as a surviving spouse. These sections restrict the annual distribution or unitrust amount to four percent of the net fair market value of the trust's assets [Prob. Code § 16336.4(e)(2)]. The unitrust conversion power and the adjustment power afforded by Prob. Code § 16336 enable trustees to achieve impartiality between income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries.

A trust may be simple in one year and complex in another [Treas. Reg. 1.651(a)-1(b)]. Every trust is complex in any year in which corpus is actually distributed, and in the year of termination [see I.R.C. § 651(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.651(a)-3(a), (b)].

While a simple trust is allowed an annual deduction of $300 for its personal exemption, a complex trust is allowed a deduction of only $100 [I.R.C. § 642(b)]. In computing its taxable income for the year, a simple trust may deduct the amount of trust income required to be distributed currently [I.R.C. § 651(a)] and, if that amount exceeds the trust's distributable net income [see I.R.C. § 643(a); see also § 64.39[3]], the deduction is limited to the amount of the distributable net income [I.R.C. § 651(b)]. A complex trust may deduct the sum of (1) any amount of income required to be currently distributed; and (2) any other amounts properly paid, credited, or required to be distributed for the taxable year [I.R.C. § 661(a)].

[3] Distributable Net Income

The "distributable net income" of a trust [see I.R.C. § 643(a)] is important for two reasons. First, distributable net income is a measure of the trust's income. Second, it acts as a cap on amounts that will be taxable to the beneficiaries and deductible by the trust on distribution [see I.R.C. §§ 651, 652, 661, 662].

Since it would be inequitable to tax the beneficiaries on income that is taxable to the trust but cannot be distributed to the beneficiaries, distributable net income generally includes items that can be distributed to the beneficiaries and excludes items that cannot be distributed. Thus, distributable net income is defined as the taxable income of the trust (that is, gross income less deductible items such as business and investment expenses) modified as follows [I.R.C. § 643(a)]:

- No deduction is made for the deduction for distributions to beneficiaries [see I.R.C. §§ 651, 661].
- No deduction is made for the $100 or $300 personal exemption of the trust [see I.R.C. § 642(b)].
- Capital gains are not included unless they are paid, credited, or required to be distributed to beneficiaries, or are paid or permanently set aside for a charitable purpose [see I.R.C. § 642(c)].

- Capital losses are not included unless they are taken into account in determining the amount of capital gains that are paid, credited, or required to be distributed to beneficiaries during the taxable year.
- The partial exclusion available for gain from the sale of certain qualified small business stock [see I.R.C. § 1202] is not taken into account.
- Tax exempt interest, with certain adjustments, is included.
- With respect to simple trusts only [see I.R.C. §§ 651, 652], extraordinary dividends or taxable stock dividends that the trustee determines in good faith to allocate to trust principal are excluded.

With respect to foreign trusts, gross income received from sources outside the United States is included in distributable net income, reduced by any disbursements that would be deductible from that income but for I.R.C. § 265(a)(1) [I.R.C. § 643(a)(6)(A)]. Gross income from sources within the United States is determined without regard to exemptions based on treaty provisions [I.R.C. § 643(a)(6)(B); see I.R.C. § 894 (income exempt under treaty)]. Capital gains are included in determining the distributable net income of a foreign trust, but the amount of any capital losses may be deducted from the amount of the gains [I.R.C. § 643(a)(6)(C)].

[4] Trusts and Income Shifting

It may sometimes be possible to reduce the overall income tax liability of a trust's beneficiaries by using the trust as an income-shifting device. If the beneficiaries are in a lower marginal tax bracket than the trust, or if one beneficiary is in a lower bracket than another beneficiary, a trustee with appropriate powers may withhold income, or may distribute income to the beneficiary in whose hands it would be taxed at the lowest marginal rate. Withholding (i.e., accumulating) income, or distributing income unequally among two or more beneficiaries (i.e., "sprinkling" income) may be advantageous, depending on an analysis of the trust's total taxable income and the total taxable income of each of the beneficiaries.

However, the differences between the tax rate brackets applicable to trusts and the rates applicable to individuals will often make accumulation of income undesirable from an income tax standpoint. Both individuals and trusts are subject to the same maximum tax rate [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2) (tax brackets for individuals), (e) (tax bracket for trusts and estates)]. Because the income tax brackets for trusts and estates are compressed, they apply at much lower dollar amounts than the corresponding rates applicable to individuals. For example, for individuals, the maximum tax rate applies to any income in excess of $250,000, or $125,000 in the case of married individuals filing separate returns. [I.R.C. § 1(a)-(d), (i)(2)]. In contrast, for trusts and estates, all income in excess of $9,550 is taxed at the maximum rate [I.R.C. § 1(e)]. Thus, unless the beneficiary is already in or near the maximum tax bracket, income ordinarily is subject to higher tax in the hands of the trust than in the hands of the beneficiary. The effect of this rule is to discourage accumulations of income.

Whether any benefits can be achieved by income shifting will also be affected by the so-called "kiddie tax" rule of I.R.C. § 1(g), which subjects the unearned income of minor children under the age of 18 to income taxation at the parents' marginal rates. If young children are the income beneficiaries of a trust, it is unlikely that any substantial tax savings will be achieved by shifting family income to the trust, for the children will be taxed on the income distributed to them at their parents' rates [I.R.C. § 1(g)]. For discussion of the rule taxing unearned income of minors under the age of 18 at the parents' marginal rates, see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.44[2].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 64.40 Testamentary Trusts and the Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax*[1] In General

The federal estate and gift taxes ordinarily operate to expose property to taxation at least once in each generation [see I.R.C. §§ 2001(a), 2031(a), 2033], assuming that the estates involved are of sufficient size. However, it is possible to avoid federal estate and gift tax for one or more generations by using what has come to be known as a "generation-skipping transfer" [see I.R.C. § 2611; see also § 64.40[2]]. Probably the most common arrangements involving generation-skipping transfers are (1) a succession of life estates in favor of persons in different generations (e.g., to the testator's children for life, then grandchildren for life, with remainder to the great-grandchildren); and (2) trusts with income beneficiaries in one or more generations and remainder beneficiaries who are in a later generation than any of the income beneficiaries (e.g., a trust providing income to the testator's children and grandchildren for life, with remainder to the great-grandchildren). In these examples, the property is taxed in the estate of the testator, but not in the estates of the life or income beneficiaries [see I.R.C. §§ 2001(a), 2031(a), 2033]. Before 1976, arrangements such as these could be and were used to avoid federal estate or gift tax for one or more generations, subject only to the limitations on duration of the interests imposed by the applicable rule against perpetuities.

Beginning in 1976, Congress sought to limit the use of this tax-avoidance device by imposing a special "generation-skipping transfer tax." The first generation-skipping transfer tax [see former I.R.C. §§ 2601-2622] purported to tax successive transfers of property to successive generations of beneficiaries in much the same way that gift or estate taxes would have taxed the transfers if they had been made by gift or inheritance. This tax was the subject of widespread confusion and dissatisfaction. It was repealed by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and replaced by a new generation-skipping transfer tax which applies generally to all generation-skipping transfers made after October 22, 1986 [Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1433].

[2] Application*NOTE ABOUT GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER TAX REPEAL:

The generation-skipping transfer tax has been repealed, effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2264]. Similarly, the estate tax has also been repealed, effective for decedents dying after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2210(a)]. Until then, both taxes remain in effect.

Under a sunset provision of the 2001 legislation that enacted the repeals, none of the provisions of the legislation--including the repeal of the GSTT and the estate tax--apply to generation-skipping transfers, or to estates of decedents dying, after December 31, 2010 [Pub. Law 107-16, § 901]. Thus, unless the provisions repealing the GST tax and estate tax are re-enacted before 2010, the GST tax law in effect before enactment of the 2001 legislation will apply after 2010 [see Pub. Law 107-16, § 901; see also I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663, before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16]. Many commentators feel that significant changes will be made to the estate tax law, and probably the GST tax, before 2010.

For now, post-2001 GST tax planning involves to some degree guessing how long a client will live. For transfers made in 2010, there will be no GST tax due [I.R.C. § 2264]. For the time being, with respect to clients who are likely to live past 2010 and make taxable transfers after that time, the same GST tax considerations apply as under the law before the 2001 legislation because, under the current scheme, the law after 2010 will be the same as it was prior to enactment of that legislation [Pub. Law 107-16, § 901].

Under the generation-skipping transfer tax, a tax is imposed on every generation-skipping transfer [I.R.C. § 2601]. A "generation-skipping transfer" is (1) a "taxable distribution," (2) a "taxable termination," or (3) a "direct skip" [I.R.C. § 2611(a)]. A "taxable distribution" is generally any distribution from a trust to a "skip person" (a beneficiary assigned to a generation more than one generation below that of the transferor) or to a trust of which all the beneficiaries are "skip persons" [I.R.C. § 2612(b) ("taxable distribution" defined); see I.R.C. § 2613(a) ("skip person" defined)]. A "taxable termination" is generally the termination (by reason of death, lapse of time, release of a power, or otherwise) of a beneficial interest in a trust if thereafter all of the beneficiaries of the trust are skip persons [I.R.C. § 2612(a); I.R.C. § 2613(a) ("skip person" defined)]. A "direct skip" is generally a transfer directly to a skip person that is subject to gift or estate tax [I.R.C. § 2612(c)]. The tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer is equal to the "taxable amount" multiplied by the "applicable rate" [I.R.C. § 2602; see I.R.C. §§ 2621-2624 (taxable amount); see also I.R.C. §§ 2641-2642 (applicable rate)].

Unlike the federal income, estate, and gift taxes, the generation-skipping transfer tax does not have a series of progressive tax rates. Rather, it is simply imposed at a flat rate equal to the maximum federal estate tax rate in effect at the time of the transfer [I.R.C. § 2641]. Because of this high tax rate, generation-skipping transfer tax liability can be extremely undesirable, and estate planners generally plan to minimize that liability.

Every individual is allowed an exemption (called the "GST exemption") [see I.R.C. § 2631(a), (c) and discussion in § 60.16[3]], which may be allocated by the individual (or the individual's executor) to any property with respect to which the individual is the transferor [I.R.C. § 2631]. The amount of the exemption depends on the year of the transfer, and ranges from $1 million in 1998 [I.R.C. § 2631(a), before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16] to $3.5 million in 2009 [I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c); see § 60.16[3] for a detailed discussion]. In addition, there is an exemption of $2,000,000 for any "direct skip" made before January 1, 1990, from a transferor to a grandchild of the transferor [Pub. L. No. 99-514, § 1433(b)(3)].

Liability for payment of the generation-skipping transfer tax depends on the nature of the transfer. If the transfer is a taxable distribution, the tax must be paid by the transferee [I.R.C. § 2603(a)(1)]. If the transfer is a taxable termination, the tax must be paid by the trustee [I.R.C. § 2603(a)(2)]. If the transfer is a direct skip (other than a direct skip from a trust), the tax must be paid by the transferor [I.R.C. § 2603(a)(3)]. Unless otherwise directed in the trust instrument by specific reference to the generation-skipping transfer tax, the tax must be charged against the property constituting the transfer [I.R.C. § 2603(b)].

[3] Drafting Dangers

The attorney must be aware of the existence and possible application of the generation-skipping transfer tax. While it will be difficult, if not impossible, to avoid imposition of the tax in some cases, a careful drafter should make every reasonable effort to anticipate situations in which the tax might be imposed and advise testators of the potential dangers.

Although a complete discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax is beyond the scope of this chapter, special aspects of the tax and its application are considered at numerous points in the chapter. For a general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see § 60.16. For a detailed consideration of the tax and its potential pitfalls, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[4] California Pickup Tax on Generation-Skipping Transfers

Every generation-skipping transfer that is subject to taxation under federal law [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2664; see also § 64.40[1]] is also subject to taxation in California if the original transferor is a resident of California at the date of the original transfer or if the property transferred is real or personal property in California [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 16702].

Like the California estate tax [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 13302], the California generation-skipping transfer tax is a "pickup" tax. It is equal to the amount allowable as a credit for state generation-skipping transfer taxes under I.R.C. § 2604 [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 16710(a)]. Note that the federal GST credit for state taxes is repealed for generation-skipping transfers after 2004 [I.R.C. § 2604(c)]. If any of the property transferred is real property in another state or personal property having a business situs in another state, and the other state requires the payment of a tax for which credit is received against the federal generation-skipping transfer tax, the California tax will be reduced proportionally [Rev. & Tax. Code § 16710(b)]. The reduction will be by an amount that bears the same ratio to the total state tax credit allowable for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes as the value of the property taxable in the other state bears to the value of the gross generation-skipping transfer for federal generation-skipping transfer tax purposes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 16710(b)].

Every person required by law to file a return reporting a generation-skipping transfer under federal law must also file a return with the California State Controller on or before the last day prescribed for filing the federal return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 16720].

 CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
 PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.41

§ 64.41 Spendthrift Trusts

[1] In General

A beneficiary who has the capacity to transfer property ordinarily will have the capacity to transfer his or her interest in the trust or the trust income [ Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Duffill (1923) 191 Cal. 629, 649, 218 P. 14 ; Restatement (Second) of Trusts §§ 132, 133]. Since the beneficiary's interest in the trust may be assigned, it follows that the beneficiary's interest may be subject to claims by the beneficiary's creditors, whether by way of garnishment, execution, or otherwise [ Lynch v. Cunningham (1933) 131 Cal. App. 164, 175, 21 P.2d 154 ; Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 147]. The trust instrument may, however, restrict the right of the beneficiary to transfer or assign his or her interest and limit the right of the beneficiary's creditors to reach the beneficiary's interest by legal process [see Prob. Code §§ 15300-15309]. A trust with such restrictions is commonly known as a "spendthrift trust" [see Black's Law Dictionary 1400 (6th ed. 1990)].

[2] Protection Against Creditors

Although the right of the settlor to restrict the assignment of the beneficiary's interest has been held void in some states, California courts have traditionally upheld the right on the theory that the settlor is free to make any disposition of the trust property that does not violate public policy [see Canfield v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 1, 12, 87 P.2d 830 ; Seymour v. McAvoy (1898) 121 Cal. 438, 442, 53 P. 946] . Further, the right of the settlor to impose restrictions on the transfer of the beneficiary's interest is clearly recognized (and regulated) by statute in California.

The Trust Law [Prob. Code §§ 15000-19403] broadly protects beneficiaries of spendthrift trusts from the claims of creditors [see Prob. Code §§ 15300-15309]. It provides, with specified exceptions [see Prob. Code §§ 15301(b), 15304-15307; see also § 64.41[4]], that if the trust instrument provides that a beneficiary's interest in income or principal is not subject to voluntary or involuntary transfer, the beneficiary's interest in that income or principal may not be transferred and is not subject to enforcement of a money judgment until paid to the beneficiary [Prob. Code §§ 15300, 15301(a)]. Further, the Trust Law provides, with specified exceptions [see Prob. Code §§ 15305-15307; see also § 64.41[4]], that if the trust instrument provides that the trustee "shall pay" income or principal, or both, for the education or support of a beneficiary, then the beneficiary's interest in income or principal, or both, under the trust, to the extent the income or principal, or both, is necessary for the education or support of the beneficiary, may not be transferred and is not subject to the enforcement of a money judgment until paid to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15302].

[3] Protection for Discretionary Payments

The Trust Law also protects discretionary payments from creditors. If the trust instrument requires the trustee to pay the beneficiary as much of the income or principal, or both, as the trustee "in the trustee's discretion" sees fit to pay, a transferee or creditor of the beneficiary may not compel the trustee to make a discretionary payment [Prob. Code § 15303(a); but see Prob. Code § 15303(d) (beneficiary's right to compel payment not impaired)].

If the trustee has knowledge of the transfer of the beneficiary's interest, however, or if the trustee has been served with process in a proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 709.010 by a judgment creditor seeking to reach the beneficiary's interest, and if the trustee thereafter makes discretionary payments to or for the benefit of the beneficiary, the trustee will be liable to the transferee or creditor to the extent that the payments impair the transferee's or creditor's rights [Prob. Code § 15303(b)]. This rule applies whether or not the trust instrument provides a standard for the exercise of the trustee's discretion [Prob. Code § 15303(c)].

The trustee will not be liable to the transferee or creditor, however, if the beneficiary's interest in the trust is subject to a restraint on transfer that is valid under Prob. Code § 15300 or 15301 [Prob. Code § 15303(b); see § 64.41[2]].

[4] Exceptions

The protection provided by the Trust Law is subject to significant exceptions.

First, the protection afforded a beneficiary's interest in trust principal is subject to the general qualification that, after an amount of principal has become due and payable to the beneficiary, a judgment creditor may petition the court for an order under Code Civ. Proc. § 709.010 directing the trustee to satisfy the judgment out of that principal amount, and the court, in its discretion, may issue an order directing the trustee to satisfy all or part of the judgment out of that principal amount [Prob. Code § 15301(b)].

Second, the settlor may not escape the settlor's own creditors by placing his or her assets in a trust with spendthrift provisions. If the settlor is also the beneficiary, a trust provision restraining the voluntary or involuntary transfer of the beneficiary's interest is invalid against transferees or creditors of the beneficiary (although the trust is not itself invalid) [Prob. Code § 15304(a)]. If the settlor is also the beneficiary, and the trust instrument requires the trustee to pay income or principal, or both, for the education or support of the beneficiary, or gives the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income or principal, or both, to be paid to or for the benefit of the settlor, a transferee or creditor of the settlor may reach the maximum amount that the trustee could pay to or for the benefit of the settlor under the trust instrument, not exceeding the amount of the settlor's proportionate contribution to the trust [Prob. Code § 15304(b)].

Third, a beneficiary's interest in trust income or principal may be reached to satisfy all or part of a money judgment for support of the beneficiary's spouse, former spouse, or minor child [Prob. Code § 15305(a)]. If the beneficiary has the right under the trust to compel the trustee to pay income or principal to or for the beneficiary's benefit, the court may order the trustee to satisfy all or part of the support judgment out of all or part of those payments as they become due and payable, presently or in the future [Prob. Code § 15303(b)]. Whether or not the beneficiary has the right to compel the trustee to make payments, the court may order the trustee to satisfy all or part of the support judgment out of all or part of future payments that the trustee determines to make to or for the benefit of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15305(c)]. The court's power to make an order requiring the trustee to satisfy a support judgment out of principal or income payable to the beneficiary may not be restricted by any provision in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15305(d)].

Fourth, a beneficiary's interest in the trust income or principal may be reached to satisfy a judgment for restitution or damages incurred as a result of conduct for which the defendant was convicted of a felony [Prob. Code § 15305.5(a)]. If the beneficiary has the right to compel the trustee to pay income or principal to or for the beneficiary's benefit, the court may order the trustee to satisfy all or part of the restitution judgment out of all or part of those payments as they become due and payable, presently or in the future [Prob. Code § 15305.5(b)]. Whether or not the beneficiary has the right to compel payments, the court may order the trustee to satisfy all or part of the restitution judgment out of all or part of the future payments that the trustee determines to make to or for the benefit of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15305.5(c)]. The court's power to make an order requiring the trustee to satisfy a restitution judgment out of principal or income payable to the beneficiary may not be restricted by any provision in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15305.5(d)].

Fifth, no provision in the trust will be sufficient to insulate a beneficiary from any statutory liability to reimburse the state or a local public entity in the state for public support furnished to the beneficiary, the beneficiary's spouse, or the beneficiary's minor child [Prob. Code § 15306(a)]. If a California statute imposes this kind of liability on the beneficiary, the court, upon petition under Code Civ. Proc. § 709.010 by the appropriate public entity or public official, may make any of the orders specified in Prob. Code § 15306, to the extent it determines to be equitable and reasonable under the circumstances of the particular case.

Sixth, the court may, upon a judgment creditor's petition under Code Civ. Proc. § 709.010, order the trustee to satisfy all or part of the judgment out of payments to which the beneficiary is entitled under the trust instrument or that the trustee, in the exercise of the trustee's discretion, has determined (or determines in the future) to pay to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15306.5]. However, the court may not require the trustee to pay more than 25 percent of the payment that otherwise would be made to or for the beneficiary's benefit [Prob. Code § 15306.5(b)]; nor may it require the trustee to pay any amount that the court determines is necessary for the support of the beneficiary and all the persons the beneficiary is required to support [Prob. Code § 15306.5(c)]. Further, an order for satisfaction of a judgment for support of the beneficiary's spouse, former spouse, or minor child [see Prob. Code § 15305(a) ("support judgment" defined)] has priority over an order to satisfy any other judgment; and any amount ordered to be applied for any other judgment must be reduced by the amount of an order for satisfaction of a judgment for support, regardless of whether the order for satisfaction of the support judgment was made before or after the order for satisfaction of the other judgment [Prob. Code § 15306.5(d)]. In addition, subject to the rule authorizing orders for the satisfaction of support judgments [see Prob. Code §§ 15305, 15306.5(d)], the aggregate of all orders for satisfaction of money judgments may not exceed 25 percent of the payment that otherwise would be made to or for the beneficiary's support [Prob. Code § 15306.5(f)].

Finally, any amount to which the beneficiary is entitled under the trust instrument or that the trustee, in the exercise of the trustee's discretion, has determined to pay the beneficiary in excess of the amount that is or will be necessary for the beneficiary's education and support, may be applied to the satisfaction of a money judgment against the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15307].

[5] Use in Marital Deduction Trusts

Although a carefully drafted spendthrift clause may safely be used in a marital deduction trust [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(7); see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (regulations applicable to QTIP trusts)], a poorly drafted clause may endanger or even defeat the deduction. The marital deduction rules require that all of the income from lifetime income plus power of appointment trusts and qualifying terminable interest property (QTIP) trusts must be paid to the surviving spouse annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)]. The regulations pertaining to lifetime income plus power of appointment trusts provide that an income interest is not disqualified merely because it is not subject to assignment, alienation, pledge, attachment, or claims of creditors [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(7)], and the same rules are applicable to QTIP trusts [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2)]. Thus, a clause that provides that the beneficiary's interest will cease and terminate if any attempt is made to violate the spendthrift provision will defeat the deduction [see Virginia National Bank v. United States (4th Cir. [Va.] 1971) 443 F.2d 1030, 1032 (spendthrift clause interfered with power of appointment under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5))]. In California, however, a will making a marital deduction gift (including any power, duty, or discretionary authority given to the fiduciary in such a will) must be construed so as to comply with the marital deduction provisions of the Internal Revenue Code [Prob. Code § 21522(a); see Virginia National Bank v. United States (4th Cir. [Va.] 1971) 443 F.2d 1030, 1034-1035 (parole evidence admissible to save deduction when will is ambiguous)]. Under this rule, a gift might still qualify for the deduction despite a poorly drafted spendthrift clause. A careful attorney, however, will not rely on rules of construction to save an otherwise questionable marital deduction when careful drafting will assure it.

For further discussion of the potential dangers of using spendthrift clauses with marital deduction trusts, see Halbach, "Drafting and Over-Drafting: A Voyeur's View of Recurrent Problems," 19 University of Miami Institute on Estate Planning (1985), P 1307.5.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.42

§ 64.42 Accumulation of Income

[1] In General

"Accumulation" is the process by which, pursuant to a valid direction in a will or other trust instrument, income is added to trust principal and not currently paid out to the income beneficiaries [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), p. 20; see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. I, § 62.11]. When the income is treated by the trustee as capital and the trustee invests it, the new capital and the income accrued on it constitute accumulations [ Estate of Steele (1899) 124 Cal. 533, 541, 57 P. 564 ]. There is no accumulation if the entire net income is distributed annually [ Estate of Steele (1899) 124 Cal. 533, 541, 57 P. 564 ].

[2] Time Limitations

Although a will or trust instrument may require that income be accumulated for the benefit of one or more persons, objects, or purposes, an accumulation of income generally cannot extend beyond the time permitted for the vesting of future interests under the rule against perpetuities [Civ. Code § 724(a); but see Civ. Code § 724(b) (exception for trusts forming part of employee profit-sharing or retirement plans)]. If a will or trust instrument requires that income be accumulated for a longer time, the requirement is void insofar as it applies to the longer period [Civ. Code § 725]. However, such a requirement will not affect the validity of any other provision of the will or trust [Civ. Code § 725].

In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code § 21200 et seq.], which includes a recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Under that recodification, a nonvested property interest is invalid unless (1) when the interest is created, it is certain to either vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of a person alive at the time of creation or (2) the interest actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205(a)].

The perpetuities period is marked off from the time the interest is created [Prob. Code §§ 21205-21207]. Since a will does not take effect until the testator dies, an interest created by a will (such as an interest in a testamentary trust) is not created until the testator dies. Thus, the perpetuities period for an interest created by a will is marked off from the testator's death [ Estate of Gorchakoff (1951) 108 Cal. App. 2d 44, 46, 238 P.2d 121 ].

For a detailed discussion of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.10 et seq.

[3] Direction Required

A valid direction in a will or other trust instrument is essential to accumulation. In the absence of such a direction, undistributed income belongs to the person presumptively entitled to the next eventual interest [Civ. Code § 73] and must be distributed currently to that person [ Estate of Robinson (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 32, 40-42, 68 Cal. Rptr. 420 ; Estate of Lefranc (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 289, 299-301, 239 P.2d 617 ]. The person presumptively entitled to the next eventual interest must be ascertained from the terms of the will and is ordinarily the remainder beneficiary [see Estate of Charters (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 227, 240, 293 P.2d 778 ; see also Estate of Lefranc (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 289, 299-301, 239 P.2d 617] ].

[4] Acceleration by Court

A valid direction for accumulation may be ignored if the person for whom the income is accumulated is destitute of other sufficient means of support or education [Civ. Code § 726]. Such a person may petition the court at any time for an order requiring a suitable sum to be paid out of the fund directed to be accumulated [Civ. Code § 726].

[5] Tax Consequences

Accumulations of income generally result in unfavorable income tax consequences. This is because trust income is taxed at lower rates when it is distributed to beneficiaries than when it is accumulated by the trust, as a result of the compressed tax rate brackets for trusts [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2)]. Before August 5, 1997, accumulated income was subject to complex income tax rules known as the "throwback rules." The throwback rules required that when income that has been accumulated in a trust is finally distributed to a beneficiary, it must be included in the beneficiary's income if the beneficiary's top average marginal tax rate in the preceding five years was higher than that of the trust [I.R.C. §§ 665, 666, 667]. Effective August 5, 1997, the "throwback" rules are inapplicable to most domestic trusts created on or after March 1, 1984 [I.R.C. § 665(c)].

Although distributions of accumulated income are no longer subject to the "throwback rules," accumulation of income is still discouraged by the compressed tax rates applicable to trusts [see I.R.C. § 1(e) and discussion in § 64.39[4]].

§ 64.43 Powers of Appointment

[1] Nature and Uses

A power of appointment is a power that an owner of property gives to another person to designate the person or persons who will receive the property at some time in the future [Recommendation Relating to Revision of the Powers of Appointment Statute, 15 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 1667, 1673 (1980)]. The person who creates a power of appointment is called the "donor" [Prob. Code § 610(e)]. The person to whom a power of appointment is given is called the "donee" [Prob. Code § 610(d)]. The person in whose favor the power is exercised is called the "appointee" [Prob. Code § 610(a)].

A power of appointment may be created to give the donee the power to designate the person or persons who will receive a legal interest in property at some time in the future (for example, a remainder or some other future interest). More often, however, powers of appointment are created in connection with trusts to give the donee the power to designate the persons who will receive the trust property, income from the trust property, or some other interest in the trust, at a future time. The typical power of appointment is created in connection with a trust under which the income is to be paid to a designated beneficiary for life. In such a situation, the power may give the lifetime income beneficiary or some other person the power to designate the person or persons who will receive the trust property after the death of the income beneficiary. Powers of appointment are versatile devices, however, and capable of adaptation to a variety of circumstances.

Powers of appointment may, according to their terms, be exercised by will, or during the lifetimes of the donees. In either case, they have be used to accomplish important objectives that cannot conveniently be accomplished in other ways. A power of appointment will, for example, authorize the donee to act as a kind of posthumous agent and to designate the ultimate taker of the property after the death of the donor. This may be particularly useful if trust property is to be distributed to beneficiaries who are much younger than the donor, and the donor wishes to postpone the decision as to which of the younger beneficiaries will actually receive the property. The donee can make the decision years after the power is created, at a time when the identities, characters, and special needs of the potential beneficiaries are known.

A power of appointment may also help foster deference to the wishes of older family members. For example, a grandparent may wish to create a trust and to designate one of his or her children as the lifetime income beneficiary. The grandparent may be unsure about which of the grandchildren should receive the trust property on the death of the child. In these circumstances, the grandparent could give the child the power to designate the grandchildren who will ultimately receive the property, and the shares that each grandchild will receive. Giving a child a power of this kind will give the child authority over the ultimate distribution of the trust property, and tend to encourage the grandchildren to treat the child with deference. In turn, this may help to promote family unity and discourage disputes. Whether it is desirable to permit a child to determine how and in what shares the grandparent's property will be distributed to grandchildren is, of course, a question that each grandparent should consider and resolve. In one family, such an arrangement may seem appropriate, while in others it may not.

A power of appointment may also help a child accomplish his or her own long-term objectives. Assume, for example, that a child is in comfortable financial circumstances and does not need the parent's property for support. If the child has the power to decide who will ultimately receive the property, the child can help other persons who are in greater need, coordinating the ultimate distribution of the grandparent's property with the distribution of the child's own estate to confer maximum benefits on the ultimate beneficiaries.

[2] Applicable Law

In California, powers of appointment are governed by provisions of the Probate Code [Prob. Code §§ 600-695]. However, these provisions do not supplant the common law. Except to the extent that the common-law rules governing powers of appointment are modified by statutes, the common law as to powers of appointment is the law of California [Prob. Code § 600].

Powers of appointment also have important income, estate, gift, and generation-skipping tax consequences. The income tax consequences of powers of appointment are covered in I.R.C. § 678(a) and discussed in § 64.5[2]. The estate tax consequences of powers of appointment are covered in I.R.C. § 2041 and discussed in § 64.51[3]. The gift tax consequences of powers of appointment are covered in I.R.C. § 2514 and discussed in § 64.51[6]. The generation-skipping transfer tax consequences of powers of appointment are generally dealt with in the generation-skipping transfer tax statutes, I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663, and discussed in 64.51[7]. To properly create or exercise a power of appointment, both the Probate Code and Internal Revenue Code provisions relating to powers of appointment must be carefully considered.

§ 64.44 Classification of Powers of Appointment

[1] "General" and "Special"

All powers of appointment are either "general" or "special" [see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 31, Powers of Appointment, § 31.02[2] (Matthew Bender)].

A "general" power of appointment is one that can be exercised so as to confer benefits on the donee, either directly or indirectly. Thus, the Probate Code provides that a power of appointment is "general" if it can be exercised in favor of the donee, the donee's estate, the donee's creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate, whether or not it is exercisable in favor of others [Prob. Code § 611(a)]. The power does not have to give the donee a choice among all of these groups. It will be classified as general if it enables the donee to appoint to any one or more of them [Relocation of Powers of Appointment Statute, 21 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 91, 103 (1991)]. The Internal Revenue Code definition is substantially identical to the Probate Code definition [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)].

A general power of appointment may take various forms. Perhaps the most common is the power to invade the principal of a trust. If a beneficiary or trustee has the power to invade the principal for his or her own benefit, the power is a general power of appointment for purposes of both the Probate Code and the Internal Revenue Code.

The Probate Code specifically excludes certain types of powers from the definition of a "general" power. Thus, a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of a person in discharge of the donee's obligation of support that is limited by an ascertainable standard relating to the person's health, education, support, or maintenance is not a general power of appointment [Prob. Code § 611(b)]. Similarly, the Probate Code provides that a power exercisable by the donee only in conjunction with a person who has a substantial interest in the appointive property that is adverse to the exercise of the power in favor of the donee, the donee's estate, the donee's creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate is not a general power of appointment [Prob. Code § 611(c)]. The Probate Code exclusions have parallels in the Internal Revenue Code provisions relating to powers of appointment [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A), (C)(ii)].

Any power of appointment that is not "general" is "special" [Prob. Code § 611(d)].

[2] "Testamentary" and "Nontestamentary"

Powers of appointment may be exercised by will or by inter vivos instrument. If a power can be exercised only by will it is classified as a "testamentary" power [Prob. Code § 612(a)]. If a power cannot be exercised by will, it is classified as "nontestamentary." Unless expressly prohibited by the creating instrument, a power stated to be exercisable by an inter vivos instrument can also be exercised by a written will [Prob. Code § 630(b)].

[3] "Presently Exercisable" and "Postponed"

Powers of appointment may be classified as "presently exercisable" or "postponed" [Prob. Code § 612]. A power is "presently exercisable" if at any given time an irrevocable appointment can be made under the power [Prob. Code § 612(b)]. A power is "postponed" if the creating instrument provides that the power may be exercised only after a specified act or event occurs or a specified condition is met, and the act or event has not occurred or the condition has not been met [Prob. Code § 612(c)(1)]; or if the creating instrument provides that an exercise of the power will be revocable until a specified act or event occurs, or a specified condition is met, and the act or event has not occurred, or the condition has not been met [Prob. Code § 612(c)(2)].

[4] "Imperative" and "Discretionary"

Powers of appointment may be classified as "imperative" or "discretionary" [Prob. Code § 613]. A power is "imperative" if the creating instrument manifests an intent that the permissible appointees be benefited even if the donee fails to exercise the power. A power may be "imperative" even though the donee has the privilege of selecting some permissible appointees and excluding others [Prob. Code § 613].

If a power is imperative, the donee must exercise the power or the court will divide the appointive property among the permissible appointees [Prob. Code § 671(a); see § 64.49[1]]. If an imperative power is exercised but the exercise is defective, the court has the power to remedy the defective appointment [Prob. Code § 635].

All powers that are not imperative are classified as "discretionary" [Prob. Code § 613]. When a power is discretionary, the donee is privileged to exercise or not to exercise the power, as the donee chooses [Prob. Code § 613].

§ 64.45 Creation of Power of Appointment

[1] Capacity to Create

A power of appointment may be created only by a donor who has the capacity to transfer the interest in property to which the power relates [Prob. Code § 620]. A person generally has the capacity to convey property if he or she can comprehend the nature of the act of conveyance, the character of the subject property, and his or her relationship to the natural objects of his or her bounty (that is, family members or other heirs) [ Marback v. Marback (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 354, 356, 45 Cal. Rptr. 341 ]. A person does not have the capacity to transfer property if he or she is a minor or mentally incapacitated [Civ. Code § 38; Fam. Code § 6701].

[2] By Written Instrument

A power of appointment may be created by a deed, a will, a trust instrument, or some other writing or document [Prob. Code § 610(c)]. A power created by will is generally deemed to have been created on the date of the testator's death [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(e)]. This accords with the general view that a will becomes effective only on the death of the testator [see Tennant v. John Tennant Memorial Home (1914) 167 Cal. 570, 577, 140 P. 242 ]. A power created by inter vivos instrument is deemed to have been created on the date the instrument takes effect [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(e)].

§ 64.46 Revocability of Power of Appointment

The creation of a power of appointment is irrevocable unless the power to revoke is in the creating instrument, or unless the power is created by a trust instrument that itself is revocable [Prob. Code § 695(a)]. A trust instrument is revocable by the settlor unless it is expressly made irrevocable by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15400]. However, the latter rule applies only when the trust instrument is executed in California, the settlor is domiciled in California when the trust is created, or the trust instrument provides that the law of California governs the trust [Prob. Code § 15400].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.47

§ 64.47 Exercise of Power of Appointment

[1] Capacity to Exercise

A power of appointment can be exercised only by a donee who has the capacity to transfer the interest in property to which the power relates [Prob. Code § 625(a); see § 64.45[1]]. Unless the creating instrument provides otherwise, a donee may not exercise a power of appointment while he or she is a minor [Prob. Code § 625(b)].

[2] Compliance With Creating Instrument

If the creating instrument specifies requirements as to the manner, time, and conditions of the exercise of a power of appointment, the power can generally be exercised only by complying with those requirements [Prob. Code § 630(a)]. However, the court may excuse formal compliance with requirements specified in the creating instrument if an actual appointment approximates the manner of appointment prescribed by the donor and the failure to satisfy the formal requirements does not defeat the accomplishment of a significant purpose of the donor [Prob. Code § 631(a)].

If the creating instrument expressly directs that a power of appointment be exercised by an instrument that makes a specific reference to the power or to the instrument that created the power, the power can be exercised only by an instrument containing the required reference [Prob. Code § 632]. The court cannot excuse compliance with a requirement of this kind [Prob. Code § 1631(b)].

[3] Consent of Donor or Other Person

If the creating instrument requires the consent of the donor or some other person to exercise a power of appointment, the power can only be exercised when the required consent is contained in the instrument of exercise or in a separate written instrument, signed in each case by the person whose consent is required [Prob. Code § 633(a)]. A required consent can be given before or after the power is exercised [Prob. Code § 633(b)(3)].

Unless the creating instrument expressly provides otherwise, if a person whose consent is required dies, the power may be exercised by the donee without the consent of that person [Prob. Code § 633(b)(1)]. Similarly, if a person whose consent is required becomes legally incapable of consenting, the person's guardian or conservator may consent to an exercise of the power [Prob. Code § 633(b)(2)].

[4] Exercise by Two or More Donees

A power of appointment created in favor of two or more donees can only be exercised when all of the donees unite in its exercise. If one or more of the donees dies, becomes legally incapable of exercising the power, or releases the power, the power may be exercised by the others, unless expressly prohibited by the creating instrument [Prob. Code § 634].

[5] Manifestation of Intent to Exercise

The exercise of a power of appointment requires a manifestation of the donee's intent to exercise the power [Prob. Code § 640(a)]. The intent to exercise a power may be manifested in various ways [see Prob. Code § 640(b)]. For example, the donee may declare, in substance, that the donee exercises a specific power or powers, or all of the powers that the donee has [Prob. Code § 640(b)(1)]. Alternatively, the donee may purport to transfer an interest in the appointive property that the donee would have no power to transfer except by virtue of the power [Prob. Code § 640(b)(2)]. Or the donee may make a disposition that, when considered with reference to the property owned and the circumstances existing at the time of the disposition, manifests the donee's understanding that the donee was disposing of the appointive property [Prob. Code § 640(b)(3)].

[6] Exercise by Will

A power of appointment may be exercised by a will [see Prob. Code §§ 612(a), 642]. A will may even be effective to exercise a power of appointment that was not in existence when the will was executed, provided the will adequately manifests the intent to exercise the power [Prob. Code § 642]. However, a will cannot exercise a power not in existence when the will was executed if the creating instrument manifests an intent that the power may not be exercised by a will previously executed, or if the will manifests an intent not to exercise a power subsequently acquired [Prob. Code § 642].

A power of appointment cannot be exercised by a general residuary clause in a will, or by a will making a general disposition of all of the testator's property, unless specific reference is made to the power or there is some other indication of intent to exercise the power [Prob. Code § 641(a); but see Prob. Code § 641(b) (rule applicable only when donee dies on or after July 1, 1982)].

[7] Types of Appointments

Various types of appointments may be made under a power of appointment. When the power is exercisable inter vivos, for example, the donee may appoint all of the appointive property at one time, or make several partial appointments at different times [Prob. Code § 650(a)(1)]. The appointment may be of present or future interests, or both [Prob. Code § 650(a)(2)]. The appointment may be unconditional, or subject to conditions, charges, or otherwise lawful restraints on the alienation of the appointive interest [Prob. Code § 650(a)(3), (4)]. The appointment may be in trust, or free of trust [Prob. Code § 650(a)(5)], or by creating a new power of appointment [Prob. Code § 650(a)(6)].

If the power is, by its terms, a special power [see § 64.44[1]], any of these types of appointments may be made, provided the appointment complies with the terms of the creating instrument [see § 64.47[2]]. The donee of a special power of appointment may appoint the whole or any part of the appointive property to any one or more of the permissible appointees and exclude others, unless the donor specifies either a minimum or maximum share or amount to be appointed to one or more of the permissible appointees, in which case the exercise of the power must conform to the specification [Prob. Code § 652].

[8] Contract to Make an Appointment

The donee of a power of appointment can contract to make an appointment under the power to the same extent that the donee could make an effective appointment under the power [Prob. Code § 660(a)]. However, a contract to make an appointment can be made only while the power itself is presently exercisable [Prob. Code § 660(a), (b); see § 64.44[3]]. If the donee and the donor are the same person, a contract to make an appointment can be made while the power is postponed, providing the creating instrument does not expressly forbid such a contract [Prob. Code § 660(c)].

[9] Revocability of Exercise

The exercise of a power of appointment is generally revocable if the exercise is contained in a revocable trust instrument [see Prob. Code § 15400 (presumption of revocability of trust instrument)] or so long as the interest in the appointive property, whether present or future, has not been transferred or become distributable pursuant to the appointment [Prob. Code § 695(b)]. The exercise of a power of appointment is irrevocable, however, if the creating instrument or the instrument of exercise expressly makes it irrevocable [Prob. Code § 695(b)].

§ 64.48 Release of Power of Appointment

Unless the creating instrument provides otherwise, a discretionary power of appointment [see § 64.44[4]], whether general or special, testamentary or inter vivos, may be released by a written instrument signed by the donee and delivered to the person entitled to delivery [Prob. Code § 661(a)]; for delivery requirements, see Prob. Code § 661(c)].

A releasable power may be released with respect to the whole or any part of the appointive property [Prob. Code § 661(b)]. It may also be released in such a manner as to reduce or limit the permissible appointees [Prob. Code § 661(b)]. If the creating instrument designated a person or persons to take in default of the donee's exercise of the power, however, no release is possible unless the power is presently exercisable [see § 64.44[3]], or unless the release serves to benefit all persons designated as provided by the donor [Prob. Code § 661(b)].

If the release of a power of appointment affects real property, or obligations secured by real property, it must be acknowledged and proved in the same manner as grants of real property [Prob. Code § 661(d)]; for acknowledgment and proof of execution of instruments, see Civ. Code §§ 1181-1207. A release that affects real property may be also be certified and recorded [Prob. Code § 661(d)]. A release made on behalf of a minor donee must be made by the guardian of the minor's estate pursuant to a court order [Prob. Code § 662].

A release of a power of appointment is irrevocable unless the power to revoke is reserved in the instrument release the power [Prob. Code § 695(c)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.49

§ 64.49 Failure to Exercise Power of Appointment

[1] Imperative Power

If the donee dies without having made an effective appointment under a power of appointment, the rights of the parties to the appointive property will vary, depending on whether the power was imperative or discretionary [see § 64.44[4]] and whether the creating instrument specifically provided for the consequences of a failure to exercise the power.

If the power was imperative and the donee dies without having exercised the power in whole or in part, the persons designated as permissible appointees will take equally of the appointive property not already appointed, unless the creating instrument or the donee, in writing, manifests a contrary intent [Prob. Code § 671(a)]. If the creating instrument establishes a minimum distribution requirement that is not satisfied by an equal division of the property not already appointed, the appointees who have received a partial appointment are required to return a pro rata portion of the property they would otherwise be entitled to receive in an amount sufficient to meet the minimum distribution requirement [Prob. Code § 671(a)].

If an imperative power of appointment has been exercised defectively, either in whole or in part, the court may order its proper execution in favor of the person intended to be benefited by the defective exercise [Prob. Code § 671(b)].

If an imperative power of appointment has been created so that it confers on a person a right to have the power exercised in the person's favor, the court may compel the exercise of the power in favor of the person, or the person's assigns, creditors, guardian, or conservator [Prob. Code § 671(c)].

[2] Discretionary Power

If the power was discretionary [see § 64.44[4]] and the donee dies without having exercised the power, in whole or in part, the general rule is that the appointive property not effectively appointed will pass to the person named by the donor as the taker in default or, if there is none, it will revert to the donor [Prob. Code § 672(a)]. The same result will apply if the power was discretionary and the donee released the entire power, or made an appointment that was ineffective [Prob. Code § 672(a)].

If the power was a discretionary general power of appointment, however, and the donee made an ineffective appointment, an implied alternative appointment to the donee's estate may be found if the donee has manifested an intent that the appointive property be disposed of as property of the donee rather than as in default of appointment [Prob. Code § 672(b)].

[3] Death of Appointee Before Effective Date of Appointment

Unless the creating instrument expressly provides otherwise, if an appointment by will or by some other instrument effective only at the death of the donee is ineffective because of the death of an appointee before the appointment becomes effective and the appointee leaves issue surviving the donee, the surviving issue of the appointee will take the appointed property in the same manner as the appointee would have taken had the appointee survived the donee [Prob. Code § 673(a),(b)]. In these circumstances, however, the property will pass only to persons who are permissible appointees or the issue of permissible appointees [Prob. Code § 673(a); see Prob. Code § 674]. If the surviving issue are all of the same degree of kinship to the deceased appointee, they will take equally; if they are of unequal degree, however, those of more remote degree will take in the manner provided in Prob. Code § 240 [Prob. Code § 673(a); see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6][d]].

If the power is a special power of appointment [see § 64.44[1]], and a permissible appointee dies before the power is exercised, the donee has the power to appoint to the issue of the deceased permissible appointee, whether or not the issue was included within the description of the permissible appointees, but only if the deceased permissible appointee was alive at the time of the execution of the creating instrument or was born thereafter [Prob. Code § 674(a)]. This rule applies whether the special power of appointment is exercisable by inter vivos instrument, by will, or otherwise [Prob. Code § 674(b)]. It does not apply, however, if the creating instrument expressly provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 674(a)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.51

§ 64.51 Tax Consequences of Powers of Appointment

[1] In General

Since powers of appointment affect the control, ownership, and enjoyment of property, they are subject to special tax rules. A power of appointment may have income, gift, or estate tax consequences for the donee, depending on whether the power is classified as a general or special power [see § 64.44[1]], and whether it is held by the donee at the time of the donee's death. The exercise or release of a power of appointment may also have important tax consequences.

[2] Income Tax Consequences

Any person who has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest any portion of the income or principal of a trust in himself or herself is taxable on the income of the portion of the trust that is subject to the power [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17731]. Since the donee of a presently exercisable [see § 64.44[3]] general [see § 64.44[1]] power of appointment will have such a right, the donee will be liable for income taxes on the income of the property.

The same result will obtain after the power has been partially released or modified if, after the release or modification, the donee retains control over the appointive property that, if retained by the grantor, would subject the grantor to treatment as the owner [I.R.C. § 678(a)(2); see I.R.C. §§ 671-677 (grantor tax rules); see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 17731].

[3] Estate Tax Consequences

Property that is subject to a general power of appointment [see § 64.44[1]] is includable in the gross estate of the donee for estate tax purposes if the donee holds the power at the time of death [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)]. A power will be classified as a general power of appointment for estate tax purposes if it amounts to a general power of appointment in substance and effect, regardless of whether the power is formally designated as a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. A wide variety of powers over trust property may be deemed to constitute a general power of appointment for estate tax purposes.

For example, if a trust instrument provides that a beneficiary may appropriate or consume the principal of the trust, the power to consume or appropriate is a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. Similarly, a power to affect the beneficial enjoyment of trust property or its income by altering, amending, or revoking the trust instrument, or terminating the trust, will be deemed a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. However, the power to amend the administrative provisions of a trust instrument, when the administrative provisions cannot substantially affect the beneficial enjoyment of the trust property or income, is not a power of appointment for this purpose [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

The power to discharge a trustee and appoint a successor trustee may constitute a power of appointment if, under terms of the trust instrument, the person who holds the power can name himself or herself as the successor trustee and, in that capacity, appropriate or consume the principal of the trust [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. However, the mere power to manage, invest, or take custody of property, or to allocate receipts and disbursements as between income and principal, is not a power of appointment if the power can only be exercised in a fiduciary capacity and if the holder of the power has no power to enlarge or shift any of the beneficial interests in the property except as an incidental consequence of the discharge of his or her fiduciary duties [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

If a power is a special power of appointment, it will have no estate tax consequences for the donee [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c) (definition of "general power of appointment")].

[4] Power Limited by Ascertainable Standard

A power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of the holder will not be deemed a general power of appointment for estate tax purposes if the power is limited by an ascertainable standard relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the holder [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. A power is limited by an ascertainable standard if the extent of the holder's duty to exercise (or not exercise) the power is reasonably measurable in terms of the beneficiary's needs for health, education, or support, or any combination of them. A power is not limited by an ascertainable standard if the holder can exercise the power for the beneficiary's "comfort," "welfare," or "happiness" [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)].

[5] Estate Tax Consequences of Exercise or Release

Property subject to a general power of appointment is includable in the gross estate of the holder for estate tax purposes even if the holder does not have the power at the date of death if, during the holder's lifetime, he or she exercised or released the power under circumstances such that, if the property subject to the power had been owned and transferred by the holder, the property would have been included in the decedent's gross estate under I.R.C. § 2035, 2036, 2037, or 2038 relating to certain lifetime transfers [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (applicable to powers created after October 21, 1942)]. If, for example, the holder of a general power of appointment exercises or releases the power in such a way that the holder retains the beneficial use of the property for life, or retains a right to revoke the exercise or release and regain the beneficial use of the property, then the property will be included in the gross estate of the holder for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2036 (estate taxation of transfers with retained life estate), 2038 (estate taxation of revocable transfers)]. For more detailed discussion, see California Wills and Trusts, Ch. 2, Overview of Tax Laws Affecting the Disposition of Estates, § 2.06 (gross estate).

[6] Gift Tax Consequences of Exercise, Release, or Lapse of Power

The exercise, release, or lapse of a general power of appointment constitutes a transfer of the property subject to the power for gift tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2514(b) (powers created after October 21, 1942); see I.R.C. § 2514(e) (lapse of power treated as release of power)].

Whether a power has been exercised for gift tax purposes will generally be determined under the applicable state law [

see § 64.47[1] et seq.]. A power is released when the holder gives up the right to make an appointment under it.

A power lapses when the right to exercise the power expires. Assume, for example, that the income beneficiary of a trust has a right to demand the withdrawal of $10,000 a year from the trust principal. If the right is not exercised by the end of a year, it will expire. If the beneficiary fails to exercise the right in any year, the right lapses, and under the gift tax law the beneficiary will be deemed to have made a transfer to the remainder beneficiaries of the trust.

Although the lapse of a general power of appointment constitutes a transfer for gift tax purposes, the transfer is taxed only to the extent that the property subject to the power in any calendar year exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the aggregate value of the assets out of which the exercise of the lapsed power could have been exercised [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)]. Under this rule (generally called the "Five or Five" rule), it is possible to give the beneficiary of a trust the power to withdraw (or demand the withdrawal of) property from a trust without subjecting the beneficiary to possible gift taxation if the power is not exercised, provided the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent per year, and further provided that the power is not cumulative from year to year [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)]. For further discussion of the "Five or Five" rule, see § 64.302[1].

[7] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Consequences

The exercise, release, or lapse of a general power of appointment may also have generation-skipping transfer tax consequences, depending on whether the exercise, release, or lapse results in a distribution from a trust, the termination of an interest in a trust, or a direct transfer to a person who qualifies as a "skip person" under the generation-skipping transfer tax law [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663].

For generation-skipping transfer tax purposes, a "skip person" is defined as (1) any natural person who is assigned to a generation two or more generations below that of the transferor, (2) any trust in which all interests are held by skip persons, and (3) any trust in which no person holds an interest in the trust and at no time after the transfer to the trust may any distribution be made from the trust to any "non-skip person" [I.R.C. § 2613(a)].

Three types of taxable events are subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax. These are taxable distributions, taxable terminations, and direct skips [I.R.C. §§ 2611, 2612]. A taxable distribution is any distribution from a trust to a skip person [I.R.C. § 2612(b)]. A taxable termination is generally any termination of an interest in property held in trust, whether the termination occurs as the result of death, lapse of time, release of a power, or otherwise [I.R.C. § 2612(a)(1)]. A direct skip is any transfer of a property interest to a skip person if the transfer is also subject to either gift or estate tax [I.R.C. § 2612(c)(1)].

A full discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax is beyond the scope of this chapter. For a general discussion of the tax, see § 60.16. For an in-depth discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[8] Disclaimer of Power

A person who holds a general power of appointment may have considerable flexibility in exercising or declining to exercise the power. If it is advantageous to exercise the power, the holder may do so by complying with the rules for exercise [see § 64.47[1]]. If unfavorable tax or other consequences would follow the exercise of the power, the holder may disclaim (that is, refuse to accept) the power and be treated for all practical purposes as if the power had never been transferred to the holder. A donee who complies with the statutory requirements for disclaimer may avoid any tax liability that would otherwise result from the power of appointment [see I.R.C. §§ 678(d), 2518(a)].

A disclaimer will be effective for estate or gift tax purposes only if it is a "qualified disclaimer" [I.R.C. § 2046, 2518]. A "qualified disclaimer" is an irrevocable and unqualified refusal to accept an interest in property that meets all of the following requirements [I.R.C. § 2518(b)]:

- The refusal is in writing.
- The writing is received by the transferor of the interest, the transferor's legal representative, or the holder of the legal title to the property to which the interest relates not later than nine months after the date on which the transfer creating the interest is made or the date on which the person attains the age of 21.
- The person to whom the interest was given has not accepted the interest or any of its benefits.
- As a result of the refusal, the interest passes without any direction on the part of the person making the disclaimer to some other person.

A disclaimer that is effective under the Internal Revenue Code is also effective under the California Probate Code [Prob. Code § 295]. For further discussion of disclaimer, see Ch. 60A, Gifts .

The following facts and documents relate specifically to the creation of testamentary trusts. Ch. 60, Estate Planning, contains detailed questionnaires that are designed to be filled out by the client or the client's financial advisors [see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.200[2] (client information form)]. It may be desirable to have the client complete these forms prior to the initial interview so that the attorney will be in a better position to evaluate the client's needs (including potential tax liability) at that time.

1. Purpose(s) of trust.

a. To provide for particular beneficiaries:

- (1) Testator's spouse;
- (2) Testator's children;
- (3) Testator's grandchildren;
- (4) Combination of testator's spouse, children, and grandchildren; or
- (5) Other beneficiaries.

b. To avoid or reduce taxes:

- (1) Death taxes:

NOTE:

If the attorney has reviewed personal and financial questionnaires prepared by the client [see Note, above], it should be possible to determine rather quickly whether there is any realistic possibility of estate tax liability. If this possibility does exist, the attorney should begin to consider tax planning devices, including the use of a marital deduction trust. For a more complete treatment of this subject, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning .

- (a) Due on death of testator;

(b) Due on death of beneficiaries.

(2) Income taxes.

2. Assets of trust.

a. Value of assets:

- (1) Total current market value of all of assets to be included in trust;
- (2) Individual market value of particular assets to be included in trust;
- (3) Amount of encumbrances against any trust property;
- (4) Whether assets are likely to appreciate before testator's death.

b. Character of assets:

- (1) Marketable or unmarketable.
- (2) Real or personal.
- (3) Community or separate.
- (4) Business assets held as:
  - (a) Partnership;
  - (b) Corporation; or
  - (c) Sole proprietorship.

(5) Other.

c. Any assets that testator is likely to acquire by will or inheritance.

d. Form of title:

- (1) In testator's sole name;
- (2) In cotenancy;
- (3) Joint tenancy;
- (4) Tenancy in common;
- (5) Other.

e. Income:

(1) Nonproductive assets.

(2) Productive assets:

(a) Estimated annual income;

(b) Intervals at which income is received (e.g., monthly, quarterly, annually).

3. Income Beneficiaries.

a. Identities (or description of class, if a class gift is contemplated):

(1) Full name of each income beneficiary;

(2) Relationship to testator;

(3) Birth date;

(4) Marital status;

(5) Address;

(6) Names, birth dates, and addresses of children;

(7) Other identifying information (e.g., name of employer).

b. Needs:

(1) Income:

(a) Approximate income of each income beneficiary, independent of trust;

(b) Source of income;

(c) Whether income can be expected to remain constant;

(d) Approximate income each income beneficiary should have, including payments from trust;

(e) If expected income of trust will exceed needs of income beneficiary or beneficiaries, whether excess income will be accumulated.

(2) Principal:

(a) If needs of income beneficiary or beneficiaries will exceed expected income of trust, whether principal will be invaded;

(b) If principal will be invaded, whether amount of invasions will be fixed, or committed to discretion of income beneficiary, trustee, or cotrustees.

4. Remainder beneficiaries.

a. Identities (or description of class, if a class gift is contemplated):

- (1) Full name of each remainder beneficiary;
- (2) Relationship to testator;
- (3) Birth date;
- (4) Marital status;
- (5) Address;
- (6) Names, birth dates, and addresses of children;
- (7) Other identifying information (e.g., name of employer).

b. When principal will be distributed to remainder beneficiaries:

- (1) On fixed date;
- (2) At specified age; or
- (3) On death of income beneficiaries.

5. Management problems or needs.

- a. Any restrictions on powers of trustee or cotrustees;
- b. Any restrictions on investment of trust assets;
- c. Any other special needs of trust assets, beneficiaries, or proposed trustee or cotrustees.

6. Dispositive plan.

a. Income.

- (1) Amount of payments to income beneficiaries:
  - (a) All income to be paid out currently;
  - (b) Amount of payments to be in discretion of trustee or cotrustees; or
  - (c) All or part of income to be accumulated.
- (2) Frequency of payments to income beneficiaries:
  - (a) Monthly;

- (b) Quarterly;
- (c) Annually;
- (d) Other.

b. Principal.

(1) To be distributed currently:

- (a) Fixed sums; or
- (b) Power of invasion in trustee or beneficiary.

(2) To be distributed at some time in future:

- (a) On specified date or dates;
- (b) When remainder beneficiary attains specified age;
- (c) When income beneficiary dies; or
- (d) At other specified time.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Preliminary Determinations for Payments and Distributions of Income and Principal

§ 64.120 Number of Trusts

1. Will trust have more than one beneficiary?

NOTE:

If the trust will have only one beneficiary (such as a spouse or a minor child of the testator), it is clear that only one trust is appropriate. If, however, the trust will have two or more beneficiaries (such as a spouse and a child, or any combination of children or grandchildren), the testator may elect either to place the trust assets in a single ("family pot") trust or to divide them into separate trusts, with one trust being set aside for each of the beneficiaries. For an introduction to the advantages and disadvantages of family pot trusts and separate trusts, see discussions in § 64.200[1][b] et seq.

2. If trust will have more than one beneficiary, should will create single ("family pot") trust or separate trusts?

a. Are trust assets substantial enough to justify division into separate trusts?

(1) Corporate trustees are generally more willing to accept administration of large trusts than small trusts.

NOTE:

Since the compensation of most corporate trustees is based on a percentage of the trust assets, larger trusts are generally more acceptable to corporate trustees than small trusts. While the total fees derived from several small trusts may equal (or even exceed) the fees derived from a single, large trust, the administrative duties and costs of several small trusts will ordinarily exceed those of a single, large trust.

(2) Unanticipated needs of beneficiaries are more likely to exhaust principal of small trusts than large trusts.

NOTE:

If, as is often the case, the trustee has power to invade the trust corpus to meet the beneficiaries needs (such as college education or medical expenses) [see § 64.122, PP 1, 2], the principal of a small trust may be more easily exhausted than that of a large trust. This will deprive the trustee of a large measure of flexibility in meeting the beneficiaries' needs and, if any beneficiary's separate trust is exhausted before termination of the trust, that beneficiary may suffer real hardships. Invasions of principal to meet the needs of one or two of several beneficiaries will be less likely to exhaust the principal of a large family pot trust.

b. Does testator wish trustee to have power to "sprinkle" income among two or more beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Discretion to distribute ("sprinkle") income among various beneficiaries according to their respective needs may be useful when the needs of several beneficiaries are not identical or when it is anticipated that the beneficiaries' needs will vary from time to time. When separate trusts are created, the trustee may look only to the separate trust created for a particular beneficiary to meet that beneficiary's needs.

c. Does testator wish to avoid inequities in distributions of principal among beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Because the ages of beneficiaries will differ, almost any scheme for distribution of principal from a family pot trust will result in disparities. If all of the principal is distributed at one time, the younger beneficiaries will have the benefit of the income for a shorter period. If the principal is distributed at different times, the value of the corpus will be diminished when later distributions are made. For a discussion of the inequities of principal distributions from family pot trusts, see discussion in § 64.200[1][c].

d. Is testator concerned about providing adequately for younger beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Younger children will generally be provided for more adequately with family pot trusts than with separate trusts. In general, the younger the beneficiary, the longer he or she may be expected to depend upon the trust for support. A very young beneficiary, such as a minor child or grandchild of the testator, will have a larger trust estate to look to for support when a family pot trust is created than when a separate trust is established for each beneficiary.

e. Does testator wish trustee to have wide latitude in responding to emergencies?

NOTE:

Generally, medical or other emergencies may be met more adequately by family pot trusts than by separate trusts. If, for example, one child suffers a major illness that requires the unexpected expenditure of a large sum of money, the trustee may respond to that emergency out of the resources of a family pot trust without severely impairing or exhausting the separate share of the affected child.

f. Does testator wish to discourage family arguments about trust payments and distributions?

NOTE:

Creation of a separate trust for each beneficiary may help to avoid family arguments about income payments and principal distributions from a family pot trust. The assets set aside for each beneficiary will be clearly identified from the inception of the trust, and the trustee will have no discretion to draw upon any trust other than the trust set aside for a particular beneficiary in satisfying that beneficiary's needs.

g. Does testator wish older beneficiaries to receive principal distributions without waiting for younger beneficiaries to reach a specified age?

NOTE:

Family pot trusts typically provide for termination and distribution of principal to the remainder beneficiaries when the youngest beneficiary (e.g., a child or grandchild of the testator) reaches a certain age. If there is a substantial difference in the ages of the oldest and youngest beneficiaries, the oldest beneficiary may be required to wait for many years before receiving his or her share of the trust principal. For the inequities of distributions from family pot trusts and possible drafting solutions to those inequities, see discussions in § 64.200[1][c] et seq.

h. Will trust make distributions to beneficiaries who are two or more generations below generation assignment of testator?

NOTE:

It can be extremely difficult to evaluate the potential effect of the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2664] on a decision to establish separate trusts or a single family pot trust. (Note that the GST tax has been repealed for generation-skipping transfers after 2009, but remains in effect until then [I.R.C. § 2664].) Substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries in a single trust will be treated as separate trusts for purposes of the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. § 2654(b)].

In general, any transfer of principal or income to a beneficiary who is assigned to a generation that is two or more below the testator's generation is a generation-skipping transfer [I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611(a)]. However, separate trusts have a more immediate potential for triggering the imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax with regard to the corpus of each separate trust. For example, if the testator creates a separate trust for each child and one of the children dies leaving surviving issue, ordinarily the trust terminates and the corpus is distributed to the surviving grandchildren. The entire corpus of that separate trust is subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax on distribution [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611(a), 2612(a); see also I.R.C. §§ 2611(c), 2613(a)(2)]. In contrast, in a "family pot" trust, final distribution is often postponed until the death of the last child, or until some other event such as the date the youngest grandchild reaches a specified age. In this situation, if one of the children dies leaving surviving issue, the trust continues to operate. The corpus is not subject to the tax until the trust finally terminates and all the corpus is distributed to the grandchildren (or other beneficiaries who are two or more generations below that of the testator) [I.R.C. §§ 2611(a), 2612(a); see I.R.C. § 2612(a)(2)]. Of course, if any distributions are made to grandchildren before the trust terminates, those distributions are subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax at the time of distribution, unless exempt [I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2612, 2613(a); see I.R.C. § 2631].

i. Is trust (or any portion of trust) designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income/power of appointment or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust?

NOTE:

The use of one trust with two or more income beneficiaries for marital deduction purposes is risky at best. At worst, such a plan will wholly disqualify the interest passing to the surviving spouse for the marital deduction.

An interest in a lifetime income/power of appointment trust will qualify for the marital deduction only if the surviving spouse is entitled to all of the income from the entire interest or all or the income from a "specific portion" of the interest [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. "Specific portion" means a portion determined on a fractional or percentage basis [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(10); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(c) (meaning of "specific portion")]. A substantially similar rule applies to QTIP trusts [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(b)(1)(ii)].

The will drafter should attempt to qualify a partial interest in a trust only after carefully studying the statutes and regulations applicable to lifetime income/power of appointment trusts and QTIP trusts. If the attorney is not confident that the proposed partial interest will satisfy all the statutory and regulatory requirements, a distinct and separate trust should be used as a vehicle for the marital deduction gift. The safest and most commonly used method is simply to divide the trust estate into two trusts--a marital deduction trust and a residuary trust. For wills illustrating basic two-trust arrangements commonly used in testamentary trusts, see §§ 61.213 and 61.214. For additional discussion of the federal estate tax marital deduction and marital deduction trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Preliminary Determinations for Payments and Distributions of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.121

§ 64.121 Payments or Accumulations of Income

1. Should will require trustee to pay all of net income to income beneficiary or beneficiaries?

NOTE:

For a general discussion of trust "income" and "principal," see discussions in §§ 64.37 and 64.220[1][b].

a. Does testator wish to favor income beneficiaries at expense of remainder beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Payment of all trust income favors the income beneficiary at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries because it ensures that the income beneficiary will receive all the trust income regardless of whether or not it is actually necessary for his or her support or maintenance.

b. Are income beneficiaries likely to need all of trust income for their support?

c. Is any income beneficiary a minor?

NOTE:

If an income beneficiary is a minor and it is likely that he or she can be supported without recourse to the trust income, it may be desirable to provide that income that might otherwise be paid to that beneficiary be accumulated until he or she reaches age 21 or some other specified age.

d. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income/power of appointment or QTIP trust?

NOTE:

If the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment or QTIP trust, the surviving spouse must be entitled to receive all of the income, payable annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts); 20.2057(b)-7(d)(2)-(6) (income requirements applicable to QTIP trusts)].

e. Do tax advantages of "simple trust" justify requiring current distribution of all income?

NOTE:

A trust is "simple" if it requires all of its income to be distributed currently, does not distribute any amounts other than income, and makes no charitable distributions [I.R.C. § 651(a)]. All other trusts are "complex" [I.R.C. § 661(a)].

(1) "Simple" trust is entitled to annual deduction of $300 (instead of $100), in lieu of personal exemption [I.R.C. § 642(b)]; and

(2) Distribution of all current income under "simple" trust will be taxed at beneficiaries' rates, which are likely to be lower than trust rate [see I.R.C. §§ 642, 651, 661(a); see also discussions in § 64.39[2] et seq.].

2. Should will require trustee to pay income beneficiaries fixed amount out of trust income?

a. Does testator wish to supplement income beneficiary's income rather than provide full support for income beneficiary?

NOTE:

It will be difficult, if not impossible, to anticipate a given beneficiary's total income needs years before those needs arise. Although the educational requirements of a young beneficiary may reasonably be predicted, the medical needs of an older beneficiary can rarely be anticipated. Changing economic conditions (including widely varying rates of inflation) add to this difficulty. Fixed periodic payments (whatever their amount) are likely to be more or less than what is required to fully satisfy an income beneficiary's needs. If the purpose of the trust is merely to supplement a beneficiary's income rather than provide full support, the testator need not be as concerned about the income beneficiary's fluctuating needs. In that case, the trust may safely require that a small, fixed sum be paid.

b. Is there a danger that fixed periodic payments might deplete or exhaust trust principal?

NOTE:

If the net income of the trust is not large (or if the amount of the net income is susceptible to variation), there is a danger that fixed periodic payments will exceed the net income and thus impair the principal of the trust. If preservation of principal is one of the goals of the trust, fixed periodic payments will be undesirable unless the trust income is clearly adequate to meet the payments. If the will calls unconditionally for the payment of a fixed periodic sum, the sum is deemed an annuity and must be paid whether or not the income is or is not sufficient for the purpose [Prob. Code § 663(c); Estate of Luckel (1957) 151].

Cal. App. 2d 481, 488-490, 312 P.2d 24 ]. For general discussion of annuities, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.508[1].

c. Does testator have doubts about prospective trustee's ability to determine income beneficiaries' needs and make appropriate income payments?

NOTE:

If the prospective trustee lacks business experience or the kind of judgment necessary to fairly and accurately determine the needs of the income beneficiaries, requiring fixed periodic payments will avoid the necessity of granting the trustee the discretion to determine the amount of the income payments.

d. Does testator wish to eliminate disputes among beneficiaries?

NOTE:

When the trustee has discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to two or more beneficiaries, the possibility of disputes among those beneficiaries (and litigation to resolve those disputes) exists. Requiring fixed periodic payments is one way of avoiding such disputes.

e. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income/power of appointment trust or QTIP trust?

NOTE:

The beneficiary of a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust or QTIP trust must have the right to receive all of the income from the trust property, payable annually or at more frequently intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts); 20.2057(b)-7(d)(2)-(6) (income requirements applicable to QTIP trusts)].

3. Should will give trustee discretion to determine amount of income to be paid to income beneficiaries?

a. Are there two or more income beneficiaries with different needs?

NOTE:

Whenever there are two or more income beneficiaries, it is possible (or even likely) that their needs will differ, or that the needs of different income beneficiaries will vary from time to time. For example, one income beneficiary may require larger payments while he or she is pursuing an education and smaller payments thereafter. Another may need greater payments during times of illness or unemployment. A trustee with discretion to determine the amount of income to be paid to two or more income beneficiaries may make payments to income beneficiaries who are in actual need and withhold payments from income beneficiaries who have no needs, or adjust payments among the income beneficiaries, making larger payments to income beneficiaries with greater needs. A trustee with discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to two or more income beneficiaries is said to have a "sprinkling" power.

b. Is any beneficiary likely to need protection from creditors?

NOTE:

If the trustee has discretion to determine when and in what amounts an income beneficiary will receive income from the trust, provisions specifically limiting the right of the beneficiary's creditors to reach the beneficiary's interest in the trust ("spendthrift" provisions) may be unnecessary. If and when the beneficiary's income interest is threatened by a creditor, the trustee may withhold payments; or, if there are several income beneficiaries and the trustee has the power to "sprinkle" income among them, the trustee may shift payments to the other income beneficiaries. For preliminary determinations relating to "spendthrift" provisions, see § 64.121, P 6. For legal rules relating to "spendthrift" protection, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq.

c. Does testator wish trustee to have power to reduce (or equalize) income tax liabilities of beneficiaries?

NOTE:

A trustee with power to "sprinkle" income among two or more income beneficiaries may make larger payments to beneficiaries in lower income tax brackets and lower payments to beneficiaries in higher income tax brackets, thus effecting an overall income tax savings for the income beneficiaries.

d. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income/power of appointment trust or QTIP trust?

NOTE:

The right of the surviving spouse to receive all of the income, payable at least annually, must be assured if the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust or QTIP trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts); 20.2057(b)-7(d)(2)-(6) (income requirements applicable to QTIP trusts)].

e. Will trust make distributions to beneficiaries who are assigned to generations two or more generations below that of testator?

NOTE:

Distributions of income or principal to trust beneficiaries who are assigned to generations two or more generations below that of the testator will trigger imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611(a)]. For a general consideration of testamentary trusts and the generation-skipping transfer tax, see the discussions in § 64.40[1] et seq.

4. If will gives trustee discretion to determine amount of income to be paid to income beneficiary or beneficiaries, should trustee be required (or forbidden) to consider income beneficiaries' outside means?

NOTE:

The will may or may not require the trustee, when making discretionary payments to an income beneficiary (out of either trust income or principal), to consider the beneficiary's income outside the trust. If the trust instrument does not require the trustee to make payments to the beneficiary regardless of the beneficiary's outside means, the trustee will ordinarily be required to consider outside means in making payments [ Estate of Ferrall (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 166, 176, 258 P.2d 1009 ; see discussion in § 64.200[1][f]].

a. Does testator wish to encourage income beneficiaries to provide for themselves?

NOTE:

An income beneficiary whose payments from the trust will be the same whether or not that beneficiary is gainfully employed may be encouraged to lead an idle life. Requiring the trustee to consider the beneficiary's employment capabilities, in contrast, may encourage the beneficiary to employ himself or herself gainfully.

b. Does testator wish trustee to conserve trust principal?

NOTE:

Requiring the trustee to consider outside means may be a significant means of saving income and, to the extent that undistributed income is accumulated [see § 64.141, P 5], conserving or even enhancing principal. If the will calls for payments to several income beneficiaries, and if the trust income will be stretched to meet all of the income beneficiaries' needs, considering outside means may help to conserve assets and cover more of the beneficiaries' legitimate needs.

c. Does testator wish to reduce time required for, and difficulty of, trust administration?

NOTE:

Requiring the trustee to determine outside means may add significantly to the trustee's responsibilities and thus increase the time required for (and the resulting costs of) trust administration. Forbidding consideration of outside means may, conversely, help to reduce those responsibilities and lower administration costs.

d. Does testator wish to reduce likelihood of disputes among beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Prescribing a means test for trust payments may result in disputes among beneficiaries and encourage litigation to determine the beneficiaries' entitlements. Dispensing with determination of outside means may help to reduce such disputes.

e. Does testator wish beneficiaries to exhaust other resources before receiving income payments from trust?

NOTE:

Requiring consideration of outside means may be interpreted as requiring that a beneficiary exhaust other resources before receiving payments from the trust. Such a requirement could work a significant hardship on an otherwise deserving income beneficiary. Further, if the beneficiary's living expenses are increased by loss of the other assets (such as a residence), such a provision could prove costly to the trust by ultimately increasing the income beneficiary's needs.

5. Should will require trustee to accumulate undistributed income?

NOTE:

Any will or trust instrument may direct the trustee to accumulate income [Civ. Code § 724(a)]. However, an accumulation of income generally cannot extend beyond the time permitted for the vesting of future interests under the rule against perpetuities [Civ. Code § 724(a), but see Civ. Code § 724(b) (exception for trusts forming part of employee profit-sharing or retirement plan)]. If a trust instrument requires that income be accumulated for a longer time, the requirement is void to the extent that it exceeds the permissible perpetuities period [Civ. Code § 725]. In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform

Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231], which includes a recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. For a detailed discussion of the USRAP and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16

a. Does testator wish undistributed income to be preserved for possible future benefit of income beneficiaries?

NOTE:

If the will does not require accumulation, any income not currently distributed to the income beneficiaries belongs to and must be currently distributed to the person or persons presumptively entitled to the next eventual interest (ordinarily the remainder beneficiary) [Civ. Code § 733; Estate of Robinson (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 32, 40-42, 68 Cal. Rptr. 420; see discussions in §§ 64.42[1] et seq. and 64.200[1][i]].

If undistributed income is currently distributed to a remainder beneficiary, it will not be added to principal, and income from the undistributed income will not be available for future payment to the income beneficiaries. Accumulation, on the other hand, will enhance the corpus and thus increase the income available for payment to the income beneficiaries at a future time when they may need it most.

b. Does testator wish to protect income beneficiaries from improvidence in handling trust income?

NOTE:

If the income beneficiaries are minors or inexperienced adults, a direction for accumulation will authorize the trustee to withhold funds until such time as they have attained sufficient maturity or experience to handle the funds themselves.

c. Does testator wish to contribute to income beneficiaries' incomes without making them totally dependent on trust?

NOTE:

If a minor is an income beneficiary and also a remainder beneficiary, a valid direction for accumulation will empower the trustee to pay part of the income to the beneficiary on a current basis and accumulate the rest for later distribution as part of the trust principal. If, for example, a minor grandchild of the testator is both an income beneficiary and a remainder beneficiary, the testator may wish the minor's parents to provide for his or her ordinary support until the grandchild reaches college age (or majority), at which time the trust can provide funds for education or other special needs (such as the purchase of a home or a business). A valid direction for accumulation will empower the trustee to pay part of the income to the income beneficiary currently and to accumulate the rest for later distribution to the beneficiary as remainder beneficiary.

d. Does will give trustee "sprinkling" power?

NOTE:

A valid direction for accumulation is, in most cases, a necessary complement of a "sprinkling" power. Without the power to accumulate undistributed income, the trustee's discretion to determine when and in what amounts income payments should be made to the income beneficiaries will (if the income beneficiaries, as is often the case, are also remainder beneficiaries) be largely ineffective. If, for example, the trustee determines that only part of the net income should currently be distributed to the income beneficiaries, and if the income beneficiaries are also remainder beneficiaries, the income beneficiaries will, in the absence of a valid direction for accumulation, be entitled to current distribution of the undistributed balance of the income. This will largely undermine the purposes of the "sprinkling" power.

e. Does testator wish trustee to have power to reduce (or equalize) income tax liabilities of beneficiaries?

NOTE:

A trustee who has power both to "sprinkle" and to accumulate may, in appropriate cases, help the beneficiaries reduce (or equalize) their income tax liabilities. For example, a trustee with power both to "sprinkle" income and principal and to accumulate undistributed principle may make payments of accumulated income to beneficiaries in low income tax brackets and of principal to beneficiaries in high brackets, thus producing a net tax savings for the beneficiaries. Alternatively, the trustee may be authorized to distribute accumulated income after a beneficiary's higher earning years are past (e.g., upon retirement or after a serious illness) and while the beneficiary's income is taxed at lower rates. However, accumulations of income will often result in a higher overall income tax burden. This is because trust income that accumulates in the trust is subject to higher tax because of compressed tax brackets than when it is distributed to beneficiaries than when it is accumulated by the trust [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2) and discussion in § 64.39[4]].

6. Should beneficiary's right to receive income be subject to "spendthrift" provisions?

NOTE:

There are significant legal limitations on the protections afforded by spendthrift trusts. For a general consideration of spendthrift provisions and their use in California, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq.

a. Does testator have doubts about income beneficiary's ability to handle money or manage his or her own affairs?

NOTE:

If the income beneficiary is inexperienced in business matters, has little ability to handle money, or is the kind of person who is likely to be imposed upon, a "spendthrift" provision may help protect him or her from improvidence. Protection from improvidence may be particularly appropriate if the trust is intended to support the income beneficiary over an extended period. In general, the greater the beneficiary's dependence on trust income, the greater the inherent danger from improvident handling of trust payments. Conversely, if the beneficiary's payments from the trust will continue for only a short time, spendthrift protection ordinarily will be less useful.

b. Would "spendthrift" clause unnecessarily restrict beneficiary's freedom to use trust income?

NOTE:

If the income beneficiary is not the kind of person who is likely to need spendthrift protection [see § 64.120, P 6(a)], a spendthrift clause will serve little purpose and will, in fact, constitute a formidable obstacle to the reasonable and provident management of the beneficiary's affairs.

c. Does will give trustee discretion to determine amounts of income (or principal) that will be paid to income beneficiary?

NOTE:

If the trustee has discretion to determine amounts of income and principal that will be paid to or distributed among two or more income beneficiaries (a "sprinkling" power), spendthrift provisions may be unnecessary to protect the income beneficiaries from creditors. If any income beneficiary's income interest is threatened by a creditor, the trustee may shift payments to the other income beneficiaries.

d. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income/power of appointment trust or QTIP trust?

NOTE:

The Treasury Regulations provide that a clause under which payments to the surviving spouse will be cut off if there is an attempt to violate a spendthrift clause will defeat the marital deduction if the trust is a lifetime income/power of appointment trust or a QTIP trust [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(7) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (applicability to QTIP trusts)]. Although California law provides that a marital gift will be construed so as to comply with the marital deduction provisions of the Internal Revenue Code if the intention to make a qualifying gift appears from the will [Prob. Code § 1032(a)], careful attorneys will not rely on rules of construction to save otherwise questionable marital deduction trusts. If a marital deduction gift is intended, the will should not provide for cutting off or terminating the surviving spouse's right to receive trust income.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

B. Preliminary Determinations for Payments and Distributions of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.122

§ 64.122 Distributions of Principal

1. Should will authorize trustee to invade principal for benefit of income beneficiaries?

NOTE:

The will may give the trustee discretion to make distributions of principal to a beneficiary or beneficiaries, or may confer on a beneficiary a right to compel the trustee to make such a distribution to the beneficiary. The power to make distributions of principal to a beneficiary is termed a "power of invasion."

a. Will net income of trust be sufficient to meet all reasonably anticipated needs of income beneficiaries without invasion?

NOTE:

If the net income of the trust is small or modest, and if the testator wishes the trust to provide all of the support of a designated income beneficiary or beneficiaries, the power to invade principal will ordinarily be desirable. When the needs of the designated income beneficiary or beneficiaries exceed the net income, the trustee (or the beneficiaries) may apply (or compel the application of) trust principal. Every trust should be carefully designed to fit the needs of the individual beneficiaries. If a minor beneficiary has educational needs, for example, those needs may require application of trust principal. If an adult beneficiary has special medical or other health needs that cannot be met out of the net income of the trust, invasion of principal may also be necessary.

b. Does testator wish to preserve trust principal from impairment?

NOTE:

If the trust assets are small or modest in size, and if the testator does not wish to impair trust principal, a power of invasion will usually be inappropriate. Invading principal to meet current support needs will not impair the remainder beneficiary's interest if the sole income beneficiary is also the sole remainder beneficiary (such as a minor child of the testator). If, however, the remainder beneficiary is not an income beneficiary, every invasion of principal will, to the extent of the invasion, impair the principal and diminish the remainder beneficiary's interest.

c. Is trust designed to supplement income beneficiary's income rather than provide full support?

NOTE:

If the trust is designed merely to supplement an income beneficiary's income, there will be less reason to authorize invasions of principal than if the trust is intended to provide the beneficiary's full support. An income beneficiary who looks to a trust for his or her full support may be expected from time to time to have needs that cannot be fully met out of income. On the other hand, an income beneficiary who has comfortable means outside the trust (e.g., an adult child of the testator) may reasonably be expected to look to his or her own resources to satisfy unusual or unanticipated needs.

d. Are income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries likely to argue over invasions?

NOTE:

If the income beneficiaries and the remainder beneficiaries are not the same persons, invasions of principal may be the subject of disputes, since every invasion of principal will inure to the benefit of an income beneficiary and to the detriment of a remainder beneficiary. Even when the right to invade is undisputed, the amount of the invasions may be questioned. One way of avoiding such disputes is simply to forbid invasions.

2. If will authorizes invasions of principal, should right to invade be limited?

NOTE:

An unlimited right to invade the corpus of a trust will be construed as a general power of appointment and cause assets subject to the power to be included in the holder's estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041; Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. For the same purposes, the value of the gross estate of any decedent includes the value of any property with respect to which the decedent had, at the time of his or her death, a general power of appointment created after October 21, 1941, or with respect to which the decedent has at any time exercised or released a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)]. If one of the purposes of a trust is to effect estate tax savings by removing assets from a beneficiary's estate, the will drafter must take precautions to avoid giving the beneficiary a power of invasion that amounts to a general power of appointment.

a. Should power of invasion be limited by "ascertainable standard"?

NOTE:

A right to invade the corpus of a trust will not be deemed a general power of appointment if it is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the donee [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. For a general discussion of "ascertainable standards," see discussion in § 64.51[4].

b. Should power of invasion be limited to annual withdrawal of $5,000 or five percent of trust principal, whichever is greater?

NOTE:

Under the "five or five" rule [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)], the taxable estate of a beneficiary who fails to exercise a general power of appointment will not include assets subject to the power if the beneficiary did not have the power to appoint more than $5,000 or 5 percent of the trust estate, whichever is greater [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)]. If the beneficiary has the power to withdraw more than the statutory maximum, and if the beneficiary does not exercise the power, the beneficiary's estate will include the excess over the statutory maximum. That is, the beneficiary's estate will include assets subject to the power to the extent that the power exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3)-(5)]. For a general discussion of powers of invasion and the "five or five" rule, see discussion in § 64.302.

3. What provision should will make for determining date of distribution of principal to remainder beneficiaries?

a. Should will call for distribution of principal on death of income beneficiaries?

NOTE:

If a principal purpose of the trust is to provide income support for one or more beneficiaries for life, and if none of the beneficiaries is also a remainder beneficiary, the will should provide for distribution of the principal on the death of the income beneficiaries. Any earlier distribution will interfere with the beneficiaries' support and defeat the purpose of the trust. The situation is otherwise, however, if one of the income beneficiaries is also a remainder beneficiary. In such a case, the will may provide for distribution of the principal to the remainderman upon the death of the beneficiaries who are not remainder beneficiaries.

b. Should will call for distribution of principal to remaindermen when designated beneficiary attains specified age?

NOTE:

If a principal purpose of the trust is to support a designated beneficiary during his or her minority (or until such time as the income beneficiary will have, in the normal course of development, become self-supporting), the will may call for distribution of the principal when the income beneficiary (or the youngest of two or more income beneficiaries) attains a certain age, such as 25 or 30. Such a provision will further the purpose of the trust by assuring that the beneficiary will have regular income payments and the benefit of competent asset management during his or her minority and, if desired, during the period required for his or her education, after which the remainder beneficiaries may enjoy the full use of the principal.

c. Should will call for distribution of principal on specified date?

NOTE:

A provision calling for distribution on a specified date will generally be advisable only if the date corresponds to some other event which has significance in the overall trust plan (e.g., a particular birthday of a beneficiary). Such a provision will be inappropriate if the principal purpose of the trust is to provide lifetime support for the income beneficiaries, since the date of termination of the lifetime interests cannot be determined in advance.

d. Would proposed scheme of distribution violate rule against perpetuities?

NOTE:

The distributive scheme of the trust should be scrutinized for potential perpetuities problems. In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code § 21200 et seq.], which includes a recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Under that recodification, a "nonvested" property interest is invalid unless (1) when the interest is created, it is certain to either vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of a person alive at the time of creation or (2) the interest actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205(a)]. Certain powers of appointment are also invalid unless they meet the requirements of the rule [see Prob. Code §§ 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Although the rule against perpetuities does not require the termination of a trust that continues beyond the permissible perpetuities period if all interests in the trust are vested, powers of appointment, accumulations of income, spendthrift clauses, and other provisions of the trust may violate the rule against perpetuities or some related rule if termination is not required. To guard against this possibility, it is generally good practice to require the termination of the trust at the end of the applicable perpetuities period and to guard against inadvertent violation of the rule by including a perpetuities savings clause in the will. For general coverage of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities, together with forms for perpetuities savings clauses, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities .

§ 64.123 Powers of Appointment

NOTE:

For a general discussion of the legal rules relating to powers of appointment and their uses, see § 64.43[1] et seq.

1. Should will create power of appointment?

a. Does testator wish to postpone or delegate decision as to who will receive trust principal upon termination of lifetime income interest?

NOTE:

Powers of appointment are usually used in conjunction with lifetime income interests in trust property, although they may also be used in connection with income interests for a period of years (e.g., income to testator's children for 25 years). By terms of a typical power of appointment, the holder (usually an income beneficiary) is empowered to act for or on behalf of the creator (the testator) and to designate the person or persons who will take the trust property upon termination of the income interest. If trust property is to be distributed to beneficiaries who are much younger than the testator, postponing the decision as to which persons will take may serve a useful purpose. The holder of the power can select the ultimate takers years after the power is created, at a time when the identities, characters, and special needs of the potential recipients are known.

b. Does testator wish to foster deference to wishes of older family members?

NOTE:

If one of the testator's children has the power to decide which of the testator's grandchildren will receive the principal of the trust upon termination of the child's lifetime income interest, the grandchildren may show greater deference to the wishes of their parent than if their rights to the trust property had been fixed from the time of the testator's death. Empowering a parent to decide which children will receive the grandparent's property may, however, create or exacerbate family arguments and rivalries.

c. Does testator wish to facilitate implementation of donee's estate plan?

NOTE:

A power of appointment may, in appropriate circumstances, help the donee accomplish his or her own estate planning objectives. For example, an adult child of the testator who has substantial assets that he or she plans to leave to his or her children (the testator's grandchildren) may coordinate distribution of the appointive property with distribution of his or her own estate.

d. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); see § 64.123, P 2(a)].

NOTE:

Although lifetime income plus power of appointment trusts are generally less flexible than qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trusts [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], they are one means of securing the benefits of the marital deduction.

2. If will creates power of appointment, should power be "general" or "special"?

NOTE:

A power of appointment is "general" if it is exercisable in favor of the donee, the donee's estate or creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate, whether or not it is also exercisable in favor of others [I.R.C. §§ 2041(b)(1), 2514(c); Prob. Code § 611(a)]. All other powers are "special" [Prob. Code § 611(d); see § 64.44[1]].

a. Is trust designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment trust?

NOTE:

To qualify a marital deduction gift as a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust, the power of appointment must be a general power [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)].

b. Does testator wish to remove appointive property from donee's estate for federal estate tax purposes?

NOTE:

If the testator wishes to create a power of appointment but does not wish the appointive assets to be included in the donee's estate for federal estate tax purposes, the power should be special. Any action or inaction by the holder of a general power of appointment (such as exercise or release of the power--or even allowing the power to lapse) that results in another person or persons receiving the appointive property will cause federal gift or estate tax consequences [see I.R.C. §§ 2041(a), 2514(b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3; for a general discussion of the federal estate and gift tax consequences of general powers of appointment, see § 64.51[3]-[6]].

(1) If power is limited by "ascertainable standard" relating to holder's health, education, support, or maintenance, appointive property will not be subject to federal estate or gift tax in hands of the holder [I.R.C. §§ 2041(b)(1)(A), 2514(c)(1)].

NOTE:

For discussion, see § 64.51[4].

(2) If power is exercisable only in conjunction with person who has substantial interest in appointive property that is adverse to exercise of power in favor of donee, appointive property will not be subject to federal estate or gift tax in hands of the holder [I.R.C. §§ 2041(b)(1)(C)(ii), 2514(c)(3)(b)].

NOTE:

This guide provides a general overview of the categories of provisions that should be included in testamentary trusts, together with indications of the more commonly used alternatives within these categories and references to illustrative provisions in the forms in this chapter. Because each testamentary trust must be tailored to the unique circumstances of the individual testator, it is obviously impossible to anticipate all possible combinations and drafting possibilities.

For drafting guides to marital deduction trusts, including survivor's trusts, see §§ 71.120-71.121. Marital deduction formula clauses and payment and distributive provisions for marital deduction trusts are illustrated and discussed in Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

C. Drafting Guide for Testamentary Trust Provisions Governing Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

§ 64.140 Introductory Provisions

1. Include language creating trust, as follows:

a. Testamentary gift to trustee, consisting of:

(1) Residue of estate;

NOTE:

The forms in this chapter are drafted as residuary trusts, because testamentary trusts are most commonly funded with the residue of the testator's estate. For a general consideration of the uses and purposes of residuary clauses, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.530[1]. For residuary clauses suitable for use in nontrust wills, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, §§ 63.530-63.591. For residuary clauses suitable for use in trust wills, see the introductory paragraphs to §§ 64.200-64.207.

(2) Specific sum of money; or

(3) Other fund or property.

NOTE:

The trust may be created by language making a testamentary gift of a specific sum of money, an identifiable fund, or any other property. For the uses and purposes of general legacies (e.g., gifts of money), see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.351[1]; for the uses of and purposes of specific legacies (i.e., gifts of specifically identified property), see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.370[1]; for the uses and purposes of demonstrative legacies (i.e., gifts to be satisfied out of particular funds or properties), see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.390[1]. To make any nonresiduary gift to a trustee, the introductory paragraphs of §§ 64.200-64.207 may be modified appropriately.

b. Language identifying trustee, either in:

(1) Same paragraph as gift; or

NOTE:

The trustee may be appointed in the same paragraph in which the gift to the trustee is made. For examples of provisions both making gifts and appointing trustees, see the introductory paragraphs to § 64.200-64.207.

(2) Separate paragraph or paragraphs.

NOTE:

The trustee, cotrustees, and successor trustees, if any, may be appointed in separate paragraphs of the will. For provisions appointing trustees in separate paragraphs, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.200-64A.202. For forms providing for the appointment of alternate and successor trustees, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, §§ 64B.270-64B.272. If the trustee is appointed in a separate paragraph of the will, the gift to the trustee should cross-refer to the paragraph in which the appointment is made. For examples of provisions that refer to the paragraph in which the trustee is appointed, see the introductory paragraphs to §§ 64.200-64.207.

c. Language showing testator's intention to make gift in trust.

NOTE:

The gift to the trustee should clearly reflect the testator's intention to make the gift in trust, and not outright. For examples of will provisions making gifts in trust, see the introductory paragraphs to §§ 64.200-64.207.

2. Include language specifying whether trust estate is to be held and administered as single trust or divided into separate trusts:

NOTE:

If the trust estate is to be divided, it may be divided at the outset of the trust or at some future time. The trust may, for example, provide for its administration as a single trust during the lifetime of the lifetime income beneficiary or beneficiaries (who may be the testator's spouse or children), with division occurring upon the death of the lifetime income beneficiary.

a. If single trust, language directing trustee to hold all of trust estate as single trust [see, e.g., § 64.201[2], P 1; § 64.203[2], P 1].

b. If separate trusts, language:

(1) Directing trustee to divide trust estate into separate trusts [see, e.g., § 64.200, P 1; § 64.201[2], P 2; § 64.202[2], P 1]; and

(2) Specifying and identifying separate shares [see, e.g., § 64.200, P 1; § 64.201, P 2; § 64.202; P 1].

NOTE:

For an example of a provision requiring the trustee to divide the estate into equal shares for each of the testator's children, see P 1 of § 64.200[2]. For an example of a provision requiring the trustee to divide the trust estate into two equal shares, see P 1 of § 64.202[2]. For an example of a provision requiring the trustee to set apart a fractional share of the trust estate and hold it for the benefit of a lifetime income beneficiary, see P 4 of § 64.206[2]. These provisions may be appropriately modified to make other divisions or specify other shares.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

C. Drafting Guide for Testamentary Trust Provisions Governing Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.141

§ 64.141 Payments or Accumulations of Income

1. Identify income beneficiaries, as follows:

- a. If they are individual beneficiaries, by name and relationship to testator [see, e.g., § 64.205[2], P 1; § 64.224[2]]; or
- b. If they are members of class, by appropriate class description [see, e.g., § 64.223[2], § 64.225[2]].

NOTE:

Class gifts may be made to the testator's "children," "grandchildren," "issue," "descendants," or any other group. Testamentary classes are sometimes defined in very limited terms, e.g., "the children of my friend, John Smith, who are under the age of 30 years at the time of my death," or "the lawful issue of my deceased sister, Jane Brown." For an example of a trust provision requiring a trustee to pay income to the testator's living children, see P 1(a) of § 64.201[2]. For an example of a trust provision requiring the trustee to pay income to each of the testator's children who meet specified age requirements, see P 1(b) of § 64.203[2].

2. Specify time period during which trustee will make payments to income beneficiaries, as follows:

- a. During lifetime of beneficiary [see, e.g., § 64.204[2], P 1; § 64.205[2], P 1; § 64.221[2]];
- b. During joint lifetimes of two income beneficiaries [see, e.g., § 64.206, P 1];
- c. Until income beneficiary reaches specified age [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(a); § 64.202[2], P 2(b); § 64.202[2], P 3(b); § 64.206, P 5(a); §§ 64.220[2] and 64.222[2]];

d. For term of years [see, e.g., §§ 64.220 and 64.222]; or

e. Until occurrence of some other event.

3. Specify amount or share of payments that trustee will make, as follows:

a. If payments are to be fixed, periodic payments, specify one or more of following:

(1) All of net income [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(b); § 64.201[2], P 3(a); § 64.202[2], P 3(b); § 64.204[2], P 1; §§ 64.220[2], 64.221[2], and 64.223];

(2) Part of net income [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(b); § 64.222];

(3) Proportions or shares of net income [see, e.g., § 64.223];

(4) Fixed dollar amounts.

b. If trustee will have discretion to determine amount of payments, specify one or more of following:

(1) Any amounts trustee deems appropriate [see, e.g., § 64.224];

(2) Amounts trustee deems advisable for income beneficiary's proper care, support, maintenance, and education [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(a); § 64.201[2], P 2(a); § 64.206[2], P 1];

(3) Amounts paid according to "sprinkling" power.

NOTE:

Discretion to determine the amounts of income (or principal) that will be paid to two or more beneficiaries, and the proportions in which payments will be made, is known as a "sprinkling" power. Under a typical sprinkling power, the trustee may pay more income to some beneficiaries than others, and may omit some beneficiaries altogether. For examples of "sprinkling" powers, see P 1 of § 64.201[2], P 1 of § 64.203[2], and § 64.225.

4. Specify intervals at which payments will be made, as follows:

a. Monthly [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(a), (b); § 64.201[2], PP 1(a), 3(a); § 64.202[2], P 2(a); §§ 64.220 and 64.221];

b. Annually [see, e.g., § 64.242];

c. At other specified intervals.

5. If trustee is not required to pay out all of net income on current basis, include one of following provisions:

a. Provision requiring trustee to accumulate income [see, e.g., § 64.201[2], P 1(d); § 64.203[2], P 1(d); § 64.205[2], P 1; § 64.206[2], P 4(a); § 64.206[2], P 5(c); and §§ 64.222, 64.224, and 64.50]; or

b. Provision specifying how, when, and to whom unpaid income will be distributed [see, e.g., § 64.320].

6. If any or all trust income will be accumulated, specify:

a. Time limit on duration of accumulation [see, e.g., § 64.260]; or

b. Event on which accumulation will cease [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(b)].

NOTE:

Accumulations of income are subject to the rule against perpetuities. If the will directs the trustee to accumulate income, it should limit the duration of the accumulation. For an example of a provision limiting the duration of an accumulation, see § 64.280. If the accumulation is not specifically limited, then the trust should provide in some other paragraph for a limitation on its duration, as by a perpetuities savings clause. For an example of a perpetuities savings clause, see P 8 of § 64.200[2].

C. Drafting Guide for Testamentary Trust Provisions Governing Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

§ 64.142 Distributions of Principal

1. If trustee will be required or authorized to distribute principal before termination of trust, specify following:

a. Names and relationships to testator of persons to whom distributions will be made;

NOTE:

If, as is usually the case, principal is distributed and income is paid to the same person or persons, the principal distributees will also be the income beneficiaries and may be identified in the same paragraph [see § 64.121, P 1(a), (b)].

b. Time period during which distributions may or must be made, as follows:

(1) During lifetime of distributee (or beneficiary) [see, e.g., § 64.206[2], P 3; § 64.240];

(2) Until designated child reaches specified age [see, e.g., § 64.241];

(3) Until distributee (or beneficiary) reaches specified age [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(b)]; or

(4) Until occurrence of some other event [see, e.g., § 64.241].

c. Amount of distributions, as follows:

(1) Dollar amount of fixed, periodic payments [see, e.g., §§ 64.240 and 64.241];

(2) Fractions or percentages of trust principal [see, e.g., § 64.207[2], P 1; § 64.242];

(3) Amounts to be determined in discretion of trustee [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(c); § 64.202[2], P 2(b); § 64.204[2], P 2; and §§ 64.243 and 64.244];

(4) Amounts to be determined according to trustee's "sprinkling" power [see, e.g., § 64.244]; or

(5) Lump-sum distributions [see, e.g., § 64.321].

d. Intervals at which distributions will be made, as follows:

(1) Monthly [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(b); § 64.207[2], P 1];

(2) Annually [see, e.g., § 64.242];

(3) At other specified intervals, such as "from time to time" [see, e.g., § 64.204[2], P 2].

e. Whether distributions are to be deducted from any distributive share of trust estate that distributee will receive on termination of trust [see, e.g., § 64.201[2], P 1(e); § 64.203[2], P 1(e); § 64.206[2], P 5(d); § 64.245].

2. If any income or remainder beneficiary will have power to invade principal for his or her own benefit, specify following:

a. Names and relationships to testator of persons who will have power of invasion;

NOTE:

If one or more of the income beneficiaries will have the power of invasion, they may be identified in the same paragraph as the income beneficiaries [see § 64.121, P 1(a), (b)].

b. Time period during which principal may be invaded, as follows:

(1) During lifetime of holder of power;

(2) Until holder of power reaches specified age [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(c)]; or

(3) Until occurrence of some other event.

c. Permissible amount of invasions, as follows:

(1) Unlimited power of invasion [see, e.g., § 64.300]; or

(2) Power limited by;

(a) Percentage of corpus [see, e.g., § 64.302];

(b) Maximum dollar amount [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 2(c)];

(c) "Five or Five" rule [see, e.g., § 64.202[2], P 3(c); § 64.204[2], P 3; § 64.302];

(d) Recipient's reasonable needs;

(e) "Ascertainable standard" relating to the holder's health, education, support, or maintenance [see, e.g., § 64.301].

d. Whether power is cumulative [see, e.g., § 64.204[2], P 3; § 64.302];

e. Whether amounts withdrawn are to be deducted from distributive share that beneficiary would otherwise receive on termination of trust [see, e.g., § 64.245].

3. Specify pattern of distribution, as follows:

a. To individual beneficiary or beneficiaries;

b. To members of class in equal shares;

c. In stages [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 4(d)-(f); § 64.201[2], P 3(b)-(f)].

§ 64.146 Provisions Affecting Payments, Distributions, and Terminations

1. If interest of income beneficiary is to be protected from beneficiary's creditors, include spendthrift clause [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 14; § 64.203, P 10].
2. If maximum duration of trust is to be limited (so as to avoid inadvertent violation of rule against perpetuities), include perpetuities saving clause [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 8].
3. If income beneficiary is to occupy real property belonging to trust (e.g., family residence), include provision:
  - a. Authorizing trustee to permit beneficiary to occupy real property, if occupation is to be discretionary with trustee [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 9; § 64.203, P 5];
  - b. Directing trustee to permit beneficiary to occupy real property, if beneficiary is to have enforceable right of occupation [see, e.g., § 64.206[2], P 9].
4. If trustee is to be authorized to make payments on behalf of minor or incompetent beneficiary, include clause authorizing trustee to make payments directly to beneficiary, to guardian or conservator of beneficiary, or to any provider of support, maintenance, care, health care, or education [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 10; § 64.203[2], P 6; § 64.204[2], P 8].
5. If trustee is to be authorized to withhold payments when there are conflicting claims as to proper recipient of any payment, include provision authorizing trustee to withhold payment until claims have been finally adjudicated [see, e.g., § 64.200[2], P 13; § 64.204[2], P 11; § 64.206[2], P 13].

§ 64.200 Separate Trusts for Testator's Children

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a separate trust for each of the testator's children. It is cast in the form of a residuary clause. The clause may be conditioned to take effect only if the testator's spouse fails to survive the testator for a specified period (e.g., six months); or, if appropriate, it may be made unconditional [see discussion in § 64.200[1][j]]. It gives the residue of the estate to the trustee, to be divided into as many equal shares as there are children of the testator living at the time of the testator's death and children deceased but leaving surviving issue. Until the age of 21, each child will receive as much of the income and principal from his or her share of the trust estate as the trustee deems advisable for the child's support and education. From the age of 21 until 35, each child will receive all of the net income from his or her separate trust and any principal payments that the trustee deems advisable for his or her support and education. The corpus of each trust will be distributed to the child in three stages, at the ages of 25, 30, and 35. If any child predeceases the testator, the child's share will be retained in the trust for his or her issue until the youngest issue reaches 21. For discussion of the important generation-skipping tax consequences of these provisions, see § 64.51[7].

For will provisions creating single (or family pot) trusts, see §§ 64.201 and 64.203. For complete will forms, including complete will forms establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms.

[b] Separate Trusts Compared to "Family Pot" Trust

When drafting a testamentary trust that is designed to benefit the testator's children, the attorney and client should first decide whether to establish a single unified family trust (sometimes called a "family pot" trust) or separate trusts for each of the children. When a family pot trust is established, the trustee will typically have the discretionary power to distribute (i.e., "sprinkle") income and principal among the income beneficiaries according to their needs. When separate trusts are established, the needs of each income beneficiary will be met only out of that income beneficiary's separate trust. Both family pot trusts and separate beneficiary trusts have advantages and disadvantages that the attorney and the testator should carefully consider before deciding on any trust plan.

[c] Advantages and Disadvantages of Separate Trusts

[i] Separation of Beneficiaries' Shares

When separate trusts are established, a separate share of the trust estate will be set aside for each income beneficiary. The needs of each income beneficiary will be met out of the income and, eventually, out of the corpus of that beneficiary's separate trust, without encroaching on the interests of other income beneficiaries. Because the needs of each income beneficiary may be met only out of that beneficiary's assigned share, family quarrels as to comparative needs are more likely to be avoided. If, for example, one child receives a complete college and graduate school education at an expensive institution, the share of trust corpus ultimately distributed to that beneficiary may be significantly reduced. Another child who does not receive such an education may expect to receive a proportionately larger share of corpus at the time of final distribution.

When separate trusts are established, each income beneficiary's share of the corpus may be distributed at the same age, and older beneficiaries need not wait until younger beneficiaries reach a specified age. When a family pot trust is established, distribution inequities are likely to result, whether the trust provides for distribution of all of the corpus at one time (e.g., when the youngest beneficiary reaches majority) or at different times (as and when each income beneficiary reaches majority or some other specified age). For a discussion of the inequities of distributions from family pot trusts and possible drafting solutions to them, see discussion in § 64.200[1][d].

[ii] Size of Total Trust Estate

If the total trust estate is large, separate trusts for each of the income beneficiaries may be particularly advantageous. In such a case, the danger that one of the trusts will be depleted by a medical or other emergency is small. Separate trusts may also be appropriate when the income beneficiaries will have substantial assets or means of support outside the trust. If the income beneficiaries will have no other assets or means of support, and if the total trust estate is small or modest, there may be insufficient assets to adequately fund separate trusts. If any trust is not funded adequately, the trustee may find it difficult or impossible to respond to the beneficiary's ongoing needs. A medical or other emergency affecting one beneficiary, for example, may exhaust the separate trust of the affected beneficiary while leaving the shares of the other beneficiaries untouched. Many testators choose to prevent inequities of this kind by establishing family pot trusts.

[iii] Administrative Difficulties of Small Trusts

If the separate trusts are small, significant administrative difficulties may be encountered. Many corporate trustees will not accept appointment as trustee of any trust with assets below a specified minimum level. Before appointing any corporation (such as a bank or trust company) as trustee, the attorney should check with the corporation to determine if it has a minimum asset level for trusts and, if so, what that level is. For a provision appointing a trust company or other corporate trustee, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.201.

[d] Advantages and Disadvantages of Family Pot Trusts

A "family pot" trust will be larger than separate trusts and, for that reason, more acceptable to most corporate trustees. Since younger children may be expected to depend upon the trust for longer periods than older children, younger children are usually provided for more adequately with family pot trusts than with separate trusts. Since, under terms of the trust created by this form, the final principal distribution will not be made to each child until that child reaches the age of 35, a child who is only 6 years old when the trust comes into effect may look forward to receiving support from the trust for 29 years, while a child who is 19 years old when the trust comes into effect may look forward to receiving support for only 6 years.

In addition, unexpected medical or other emergencies may be met more adequately by a family pot trust than by separate trusts. If, for example, one child suffers a major illness that requires the unexpected expenditure of a large sum of money, the family pot trust may respond to that need without severely impairing or exhausting the separate share of the affected child.

It may be more difficult in the case of a family pot trust to decide when the trust corpus should be distributed to the beneficiaries. If the trust corpus is distributed to each beneficiary at the same age, then the older children will enjoy the support of the full family pot until they attain the designated distribution age, while the younger children will have only what is left after principal distributions to the older children. To avoid this inequity, the trust may postpone distributions of corpus until the youngest child has reached the age of 21, but this will require the older children to wait longer for their distributive shares of corpus. Alternatively, the trust may provide for a partial distribution of corpus to each child when the child has reached a specified age, such as 25, or the trustee may be empowered to make distributions of corpus to older children if, and only if, there is a valid reason for those distributions.

[e] Tax Consequences

[i] Income Tax

The income tax liabilities of the beneficiaries may be affected by the testator's decision to establish a family pot trust or separate trusts for each of the testator's children. If there are separate trusts, the children ordinarily will be taxed only on current and accumulated income from their separate trusts. Under I.R.C. § 663(c), substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries in a single trust must be treated as separate trusts for the purpose of determining the amount of distributable net income that may be deducted by the trust [see I.R.C. § 663(a)] and that must be included in the gross income of the beneficiaries [see I.R.C. § 662(a)].

If the trustee has discretion to "sprinkle" income among the beneficiaries, the trustee may distribute income to beneficiaries in lower income tax brackets and withhold income from beneficiaries in higher brackets. Similarly, the trustee may distribute income to beneficiaries in years in which those beneficiaries are in lower brackets than in other years. Although the compressed income tax brackets for trusts and estates [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2)]; see also § 64.39[4]] tend to discourage accumulations of income, differences among the income tax brackets of the individual beneficiaries may still permit some income tax savings to be achieved from family pot trusts. Separate trusts, in contrast, afford the trustee less flexibility in distributing income.

Whether income tax savings will result from shifting income tax liability from one beneficiary to another (or from one year to another year when there is only one beneficiary) will depend on the relative income levels of the beneficiaries and a careful calculation of the marginal rates applicable to individuals and trusts. For a general discussion of income tax rules relating to trusts, see § 64.39[1] et seq.

[ii] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax

The separate trusts established by this form will trigger the imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax if any of the children who survive the testator die before attaining the age of 35 and leave surviving issue. The termination of the child's interests in the trust constitute a generation-skipping transfer [I.R.C. § 2612(a)].

If any child predeceases the testator, the establishment of the trust in favor of the child's surviving issue is not a generation-skipping transfer because of the application of a special rule for determining whether a transfer is a generation-skipping transfer. Under this rule, a transfer to any individual who is a descendant of a parent of the transferor (or the transferor's spouse or former spouse) is deemed to be a transfer to a person only one generation below the transferor's generation if the transferee's parent who is a lineal descendant of the parent of the transferor (or the transferor's spouse or former spouse) is dead when the transfer is made [I.R.C. § 2651(e)] (applicable to terminations, distributions, and transfers occurring after December 31, 1997)]. This rule has the effect excepting transfers to grandchildren and collateral heirs of the transferor (such as nieces, nephews, grandnieces, and grandnephews) from the operation of the generation-skipping transfer tax when the transferees' parents (who are lineal descendants of the transferor's parent) are dead at the time of the transfer [I.R.C. § 2651(e)].

In general, all distributions of principal or income to a beneficiary who is assigned to a generation that is two or more generations below that of the testator are generation-skipping transfers [I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611(a)]. However, the establishment of separate trusts may trigger the imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663] with regard to the entire corpus of the separate trust, before the corpus of a family trust would be subject to the tax. For example, if the testator creates a separate trust for each child and any child dies before final distribution leaving surviving issue, ordinarily that child's separate trust terminates and the corpus is distributed to the surviving grandchildren. In such a case, the entire corpus of the separate trust would be subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax on distribution at the child's death [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611(a), 2612(a); see also I.R.C. §§ 2611(c), 2613(a)(2)].

In contrast, the terms of a family pot trust often postpone final distribution until the death of the last child, or until some other event such as the date the youngest grandchild reaches a specified age. In this situation, if one of the children dies leaving surviving issue, the trust continues to operate. The corpus is not subject to the tax until the trust finally terminates and all the corpus is distributed to the grandchildren (or other beneficiaries who are two or more generations below that of the testator) [I.R.C. §§ 2611(a), 2612(a); see I.R.C. § 2612(a)(2); see also I.R.C. §§ 663(c), 2654 (application of separate-share rules)]. Of course, if any distributions are made to grandchildren before the trust terminates, those distributions are subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax at the time of distribution unless exempt [I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2612(b), 2613(a); see I.R.C. § 2631].

Every testator is allowed an exemption (called the "GST exemption") and discussion in § 60.16[3], which may be allocated by testator or the executor to any property that he or she, or his or her executor, transfers [I.R.C. § 2631]. The amount of the exemption depends on the year of the transfer. The exemption amount was $1 million for 1998 [I.R.C. § 2631(a), before amendment by Pub. Law 107-16], $1,010,000 in 1999, $1,030,000 for 2000 [ Rev. Proc. 99-42 , § 3.18, 1999-46 I.R.B. 568 ], and $1,060,000 for 2001 [ Rev. Proc. 2001-13 , § 3.18, 2001-3 I.R.B. 337 ], $1,100,000 for 2002 [ Rev. Proc. 2001-59 , § 3.20, 2001-52 I.R.B. 623 ], and $1,120,000 for 2003 [ Rev. Proc. 2002-70, 2002-46 I.R.B. 845 ]. Beginning for generation-skipping transfers after 2003, the exemption amount is determined by the estate tax exclusion amount for the calendar year [I.R.C. § 2631(c)]. For 2004 and 2005, the amount was $1.5 million; for 2006 through 2008, the amount is $2 million; for 2009, the amount is $3.5 million [I.R.C. §§ 2010(c), 2631(a), (c)]. Absent any specific allocations before the testator's estate tax return is filed, any unused portion of the exemption is allocated by statute [see I.R.C. § 2632]. Any unused GST exemption for a lifetime direct skip is automatically allocated to the property transferred to the extent necessary to make the inclusion ratio for that property equal to zero [I.R.C. § 2632(b)(1)]. An individual can elect out of the automatic allocation for lifetime direct skips [I.R.C. § 2632(b)(3)]. For a lifetime indirect skip, any unused portion of the individual's GST exemption is allocated to the property transferred to the extent necessary to produce the lowest possible inclusion ratio [I.R.C. § 2632(c)(1)].

An indirect skip is any transfer of property (that is not a direct skip) subject to the gift tax that is made to a generation-skipping transfer trust [I.R.C. § 2632(c)(3)(A), (B)]. An individual can elect [I.R.C. § 2632(c)(5), (g)(1); Treas. Reg. § 26.2632-1(b)(2)(iii)(B), (C), (4)(iv) (manner and time for making election out, and example of language that may be used in statement required to elect out)]:

- Not to have the automatic allocation rules apply to an indirect skip;
- Not to have the automatic allocation rules apply to any or all transfers made to a particular trust; and
- To treat any trust as a generation-skipping transfer trust with respect to any or all transfers made to the trust.

An election not to have the automatic allocation rules apply may be made with respect to the following [Treas. Reg. § 26.2632-1(b)(2)(iii)(A)]:

- One or more prior year transfers made to a specified trust or trusts.
- One or more (or all) current year transfers made to a specified trust or trusts.
- One or more (or all) future transfers made to a specified trust or trusts.
- All future transfers made to all trusts whether or not in existence at the time the election out is made.
- Any combination of the above.

An election out does not affect the automatic allocation of the GST exemption to any transfer that is not covered by the election out statement. An election out with respect to future transfers remains in effect unless and until terminated, and once made, a transferor need not file a Form 709 in future years solely to prevent the automatic allocation of the GST exemption to any future transfer covered by the election out [Treas. Reg. § 26.2632-1(b)(2)(iii)(D)].

The GST exemption can be allocated retroactively when there is an unnatural order of death. If a lineal descendant of the transferor predeceases the transferor, then the transferor can allocate any unused GST exemption to any previous transfer or transfers to the trust on a chronological basis. A transferor may retroactively allocate the GST exemption to a trust when a beneficiary [I.R.C. § 2632(d)(1), effective for deaths of non-skip persons occurring after 12/31/00]:

- Is a non-skip person;
- Is a lineal descendant of the transferor's grandparent or a grandparent of the transferor's spouse;
- Is a generation younger than the generation of the transferor; and
- Dies before the transferor.

Any portion of an individual's GST exemption that has not been allocated under one of the above rules is allocated ratably (1) among nonexempt portions of direct skips occurring at death, and (2) among trusts from which a taxable distribution or taxable termination might occur [see I.R.C. § 2632(e)(1)].

If the testator has sufficient assets and wishes to ensure that significant assets pass to the grandchildren, and if the children are self-supporting, the testator might consider creating one trust for the children and a separate trust for the grandchildren. Assuming that all the testator's children who have surviving issue are alive when the testator dies, the transfer of assets to the trust in favor of the grandchildren is subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax; this transfer is taxed as a "direct skip" because all the interests in the trusts are held by persons assigned to generations that are two or more below that of the testator [I.R.C. §§ 2612(c), 2613(a)(2)]. If the remaining unused portion of the testator's GST exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2631(a), (c), 2010(c) and discussion in § 60.16[3]] may be used to offset the tax, all distributions from the grandchildren's trust (including appreciation and interest) to the grandchildren are exempt from the tax. Absent specific instructions to the contrary, the deemed allocation rules would automatically allocate any unused portion of the testator's exemption to any nonexempt portion of direct skips occurring at death, such as a trust in favor of grandchildren [see I.R.C. § 2632(e)(1)]. It is important to note that if any of the testator's children predecease the testator and leave surviving issue, a trust in favor of the grandchildren would no longer be taxed as a direct skip [see I.R.C. § 2651(e)], and a retroactive allocation of the testator's GST exemption can be made, as described above [I.R.C. § 2632(d), effective for deaths of non-skip persons occurring after 12/31/00]. Therefore, as a drafting technique, the trust might provide that any grandchildren-beneficiaries whose parent (who is a lineal descendant of the testator) predeceases the testator be reassigned as beneficiaries of the trust in favor of the children. If a trust in favor of the grandchildren is not a direct skip because one of the children predeceases the testator, and no such reassignment provision is included in the trust instrument to prevent this result, subsequent distributions of income or corpus to a grandchild whose parent (who is a lineal descendant of the testator) is still living constitute taxable distributions [see I.R.C. § 2651(e)]. However, subsequent distributions of income or corpus to a grandchild whose parent (who is a lineal descendant of the testator) has predeceased the testator are not subject to the generation-skipping tax [see I.R.C. § 2651(e)].

For terminations, distributions, and transfers occurring on or after July 18, 2005, the following rules apply [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-3 (for transfers occurring after December 31, 1997 and before July 18, 2005, taxpayers may rely on any reasonable interpretation of I.R.C. § 2651(e)):

- If an individual's parent, who is a lineal descendant of the parent of the transferor (or the transferor's spouse or former spouse), is deceased at the time of the transfer from which the individual's interest is established or derived, the individual is treated as if he or she were a member of the generation that is one generation below the lower of the transferor's generation or the generation assignment of the individual's youngest living lineal ancestor who is also a descendant of the parent of the transferor (or the transferor's spouse or former spouse) [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-1(a)(1)].
- If an individual's generation assignment is so adjusted with respect to a transfer, a corresponding adjustment with respect to that transfer is also made to the generation assignment of each spouse or former spouse of that individual, each descendant of that individual, and each spouse or former spouse of each descendant [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-1(a)(2)(i)].
- An individual's interest is established or derived when the transferor is subject to estate or gift tax. If the transferor is subject to transfer tax on the property on more than one occasion, then the individual's interest is considered established or derived on the earliest of those occasions [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-1(a)(3)].
- The interest of a remainder beneficiary of a trust for which an election under I.R.C. § 2523(f) or I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7) (QTIP election) has been made will be deemed to have been established or derived, to the extent of the QTIP election, on the date as of which the value of the trust corpus is first subject to tax under I.R.C. § 2519 or I.R.C. § 2044. This rule does not apply to a trust to the extent that an election under I.R.C. § 2652(a)(3) (reverse QTIP election) has been made for the trust because, to the extent of the reverse QTIP election, the spouse who established the trust remains the transferor of the trust for GST tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-1(a)(3)].
- The above rules do not apply in the case of a transfer to any individual who is not a lineal descendant of the transferor (or the transferor's spouse or former spouse) if the transferor has any living lineal descendant at the time of the transfer [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-1(b)].
- In general, an individual who would be assigned to more than one generation is assigned to the youngest of the generations to which he or she would be assigned [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-2(a)].
- An adopted individual is treated as a member of the generation that is one generation below the adoptive parent. The adopted individual must be legally adopted by the adoptive parent, be a descendant of a parent of the adoptive parent (or the spouse or former spouse of the adoptive parent), be under 18 years of age at the time of the adoption, and not be adopted primarily for the purpose of avoiding the GST tax [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-2(b)].

- If an adopted individual's generation assignment is so adjusted with respect to a transfer, a corresponding adjustment with respect to that transfer is also made to the generation assignment of each spouse or former spouse of that individual, each descendant of that individual, and each spouse or former spouse of each descendant [Treas. Reg. § 26.2651-2(c)(1)].

[f] Beneficiary's Outside Resources

The will may require the trustee, when making discretionary payments to a beneficiary out of trust income or principal, to consider the beneficiary's income outside the trust. If the trust instrument does not require the trustee to make payments to the beneficiary regardless of the beneficiary's outside means, the trustee ordinarily will be required to consider outside means in making payments [ Estate of Ferrall (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 166, 176, 258 P.2d 1009 ]. The trust may provide, however, that payments should be made only if the beneficiary is in actual need, in which case the beneficiary is not entitled to payments if he or she has other sufficient resources [Scott, The Law of Trusts (Little Brown & Co. 3d ed. 1967), § 128.4]. Whether the trustee is required to consider outside resources must be determined by the intent of the settlor as manifested in the trust instrument [Scott, The Law of Trusts (Little, Brown & Co. 3d ed. 1967), § 128.4]. Whether the testator should require the trustee to consider outside means depends on the circumstances of the trust, the needs of the income beneficiaries, and the interests of the remainder beneficiaries. If the will forbids the trustee to consider outside means, the beneficiary might be induced to lead a life of idleness or to dissipate other resources, since trust income would be forthcoming in any case. Conversely, a provision requiring the trustee to consider outside means might cause undue hardship if it is interpreted to require that the beneficiary must exhaust all other resources (including a home) before receiving discretionary payments from the trust.

If there are several beneficiaries, and if the testator believes that the resources of the trust will be stretched to meet their needs, a provision requiring the trustee to consider outside resources may serve a useful purpose. If there is only one beneficiary, however, or if the trust resources are clearly adequate to meet the needs of all of the beneficiaries, a provision forbidding the trustee to consider outside resources may be advisable. Before adopting any provision relating to outside means, the will drafter should consult with the testator, evaluate the circumstances of the trust and the needs of the beneficiaries, and effectuate the testator's wishes.

[g] Application of Income for Benefit of Beneficiary

This form authorizes the trustee to make payments to a beneficiary directly or, under appropriate circumstances, to apply the payments for the beneficiary's benefit. If the beneficiary is under an incapacity (e.g., suffering from mental impairment, incompetency, or otherwise unable to handle funds properly or wisely), this power will permit the trustee to reimburse third-party providers for goods or services supplied to the beneficiary without the necessity of first establishing a conservatorship or other protective proceeding for the beneficiary [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 182 cmt. d]. Protective proceedings may also be avoided by granting the trustee power to apply payments for the benefit of a minor beneficiary [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 182 cmt. d]. These powers are useful because a trust, particularly one with a corporate trustee, may be significantly less expensive to maintain and establish than a protective proceeding such as a conservatorship or guardianship. For beneficiaries who are minors, however, a custodianship under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act [Prob. Code §§ 3900-3925] may adequately serve the testator's needs and effect a considerable savings over the cost of establishing and maintaining a trust or guardianship. For a discussion of gifts to minors, see Ch. 60A, Gifts, §§ 60A.13, 60A.40 et seq.

[h] Spendthrift Provision

A trust instrument may or may not include a "spendthrift" provision intended to protect a beneficiary's interest in the trust from creditors. Although California law recognizes the trustor's power to limit creditor's claims against beneficiaries, the power is subject to significant limitations [see Prob. Code §§ 15300-15309 (restrictions on voluntary and involuntary transfers)]. Spendthrift clauses have distinct advantages and disadvantages and should not automatically be included in every trust. For rules relating to spendthrift clauses and a consideration of the advantages and disadvantages of including "spendthrift" provisions in trusts, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq.

[i] Accumulation of Income

If the will does not direct the trustee to distribute all of the income of the trust on a current basis, it is good practice to direct the trustee to accumulate undistributed income and add it to principal. If the will does not require accumulation of undistributed income, the income belongs to the person presumptively entitled to the next eventual interest, who will ordinarily be the remainder beneficiary [Civ. Code § 733; see Estate of Charters (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 227, 240, 293 P.2d 778 ; Estate of Lefranc (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 289, 299-301, 239 P.2d 617 ]. If the remainder beneficiary is entitled to the next eventual interest, undistributed income will be distributed to the remainder beneficiary on a current basis [ Estate of Robinson (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 32, 40-42, 68 Cal. Rptr. 420 ].

An accumulation of income generally cannot extend beyond the time permitted for the vesting of future interests under the rule against perpetuities [Civ. Code § 724(a); but see Civ. Code § 724(b) (exception for trusts forming part of employee profit-sharing or retirement plans)]. In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code § 21200 et seq.], which includes a recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Under that recodification, a nonvested property interest is invalid unless (1) when the interest is created, it is certain to either vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of a person alive at the time of creation or (2) it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205]. For a detailed discussion of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16.

Accumulations of income generally have unfavorable income tax consequences. The compressed income tax rate brackets applicable to trusts [see I.R.C. § 1(e) and discussion in § 64.39[4]] operate to effectively discourage accumulations of income. This is because trust income is taxed at lower rates when it is distributed to beneficiaries than when it is accumulated by the trust [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e), (i)(2)].

Before August 5, 1997, accumulated income was also subject to complex income tax rules known as the "throwback rules." The throwback rules required that when income that has been accumulated in a trust is finally distributed to a beneficiary, it must be included in the beneficiary's income if the beneficiary's top average marginal tax rate in the preceding five years was higher than that of the trust [I.R.C. §§ 665, 666, 667]. Since August 5, 1997, however, the "throwback" rules have been inapplicable to most domestic trusts created on or after March 1, 1984 [I.R.C. § 665(c)].

For a trust provision requiring that all of the net income of the trust be accumulated and added to principal, see § 64.280.

[j] Survivorship Clauses

A testamentary gift, including a testamentary gift in trust, may be conditioned on survival until a future time [see Prob. Code § 21109(a)]. The will may condition a gift in trust on the survivorship of a beneficiary of the trust (e.g., the testator's spouse). It is often advisable to condition a testamentary gift on survival for a specified period of time, since such a condition may obviate successive administration and taxation of the same property. It is unwise, however, to routinely condition gifts to a surviving spouse on survival until a future time, because such a condition may prevent or delay the statutory procedures for passage of the property to the surviving spouse without administration [see Prob. Code §§ 13500-13660], or deprive the surviving spouse of the benefits of the federal estate tax marital deduction. A gift to a surviving spouse may, however, be conditioned upon survival of that spouse for up to six months without depriving the spouse of the benefits of the marital deduction [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(3)].

The gift to the trustee set forth in this form may be conditioned to take effect only if the testator's spouse does not survive the testator for six months. If the testator chooses not to condition the gift upon the spouse's failure to survive, or chooses to condition the gift on the spouse's failure to survive for some period other than six months, the opening clause of the form may be modified or entirely omitted.

For a general discussion of survivorship clauses and factors to be considered before conditioning a gift on survival, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.411[1][b].

[k] Distributions to "Issue" or "Descendants"

This trust provides for distribution of the shares of the testator's deceased children to the "issue" of those children. When a will or trust provides for "issue" or "descendants" to take property, the manner of distribution and the shares that each distributee is entitled to take will vary according to the language of the instrument.

The Probate Code provides for the following three basic patterns of distribution:

- Distribution in the manner provided in cases of intestacy (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 240 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245];
- Distribution "per stirpes" or "by representation" (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 246 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 246]; and
- Distribution "per capita at each generation" (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 247 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 247].

Case law provides for a fourth pattern of distribution, which is distribution "per capita" [see Lombardi v. Blois (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 191, 198, 40 Cal. Rptr. 899].

The shares that issue will receive may be affected by which pattern of distribution is adopted. For a more detailed discussion of these patterns, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6].

[2] FORM

Separate Trusts for Testator's Children

Trust

[If my _____ (husband or wife) fails to survive me for _____ (specify period, e.g.: six months),] I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee or, if trustee appointed in separate paragraph, state: the trustee named in Section _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL

Division of Trust Estate Into Separate Trusts

1. The Trustee shall divide the trust estate into as many equal shares as there are children of mine living at the time of my death and children of mine then deceased but leaving issue then surviving. Each share shall constitute and be held, administered, and distributed by the Trustee as a separate trust.

Separate Trust for Each Child

2. One equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of each of my children living at the time of my death, and shall constitute the separate trust estate of each child's trust.

Separate Trust for Issue of Each Deceased Child

3. One equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of the issue of each child of mine who is deceased at the time of my death but who leaves issue then living, and shall constitute the separate trust estate of the issue of each such child.

Payments and Distributions From Trusts for Children

4. The Trustee shall apply and distribute the net income and principal of each of the trusts set aside for the benefit of my children who are living at the time of my death as follows:

(a) Until each child reaches the age of 21 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income from the separate trust set aside for that child (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for the child's proper care, support, maintenance, and education. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child the balance, if any, of the net income not paid or applied in accordance with the foregoing provision.

(b) After each child reaches the age of 21 years, and until that child attains the age of 35 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, all of the net income from the separate trust set aside for that child.

(c) If, at any time, the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, determine that any child is in need of additional funds for that child's proper care, support, maintenance, and education, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child such additional amounts from the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, may deem advisable.

(d) When each child reaches the age of 25 years, the Trustee shall distribute to that child one-third of the remaining balance of the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child.

(e) When each child reaches the age of 30 years, the Trustee shall distribute to that child one-half of the remaining balance of the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child.

(f) When each child reaches the age of 35 years, the Trustee shall distribute to that child the whole of the remaining balance of the separate trust set aside for that child.

(g) If any child should die before attaining the age of 35 years, then, on the death of that child, the Trustee shall distribute the whole of the remaining balance of the separate trust set aside for that child to that child's surviving issue _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. If there should be no surviving issue, then the whole of the balance of the separate trust set aside for the deceased child shall be added to the shares set aside for the benefit of my other living children and the issue of any deceased children _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____

(240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation], including proportionately both the distributed and undistributed portions of each share.

(h) If my children and their issue should all die before final distribution of the trust estate, all of the estate not disposed of as hereinabove provided shall be distributed to _____ [specify alternative disposition, e.g.: my heirs, their identities and respective shares to be determined in accordance with the laws of the State of California in effect at the time of distribution. If there are no heirs of mine, the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ (name and address of charitable beneficiary).]

Payments and Distributions From Trusts for Issue of Deceased Children

5. The Trustee shall distribute the separate trust estate set aside for the benefit of each child of mine who is deceased at the time of my death but who leaves issue then living to the issue of that child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]; provided, however, that each share set aside for any issue who has not yet reached the age of _____ [e.g.: 25 years] shall be retained in the trust. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that issue as much of the income and principal of that issue's share of the trust as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, considers appropriate for that issue's support, health, and education. When that issue reaches the age of _____ [e.g.: 25 years], the Trustee shall distribute the remaining balance of principal and undistributed income of that issue's share of the trust to that issue free of trust.

Exercise of Discretion

6. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary or beneficiaries as provided in this will, the Trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, the value of the trust assets, the needs, both present and future, of the beneficiaries, and the tax consequences to the trust and to the beneficiaries of any payment or distribution. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of any beneficiary receiving a payment or distribution as to the amount and availability of any other income or resources of that beneficiary. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to any beneficiary shall be conclusive on all persons interested in the trust. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary, the Trustee shall _____ [*consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of that beneficiary or not consider any income or resources available to that beneficiary outside the trust*].

Definitions

7. As used in this will:

(a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.

(b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.

(c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to one of the separate trusts provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of one of those separate trusts.

(d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with all such education.

Maximum Duration of Trusts

8. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

9. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit any person who has a current right to receive income from the trust estate to occupy any real property that forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which that beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of any such real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If testator wishes to assure a particular beneficiary the right to occupy a residence that has been occupied by that beneficiary before the testator's death, then a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For such a clause, see P 9 of § 64.206]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

10. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, is an incompetent person, is a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, health care, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any good faith decision by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

11. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of the termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Notice to Trustee

12. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

13. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, or from any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

14. No income or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income of any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.201

§ 64.201 Family Pot Trust for Children With "Sprinkling" Provisions

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a single (or "family pot") trust and to authorize the trustee to distribute ("sprinkle") income and principal among the testator's children. It is drafted in the form of a residuary clause. The clause may be conditioned to take effect only if the testator's spouse fails to survive the testator for a specified period (e.g., six months); or, if appropriate, it may be made unconditional [see discussion in § 64.200[1][j]]. It gives the residue of the estate to the trustee, to be held and administered as one trust until the youngest living child of the testator reaches 21, at which time the trust will be divided into separate trusts, one for each child. Thereafter, each child will receive the entire net income and any principal payments from that child's separate trust that the trustee deems advisable for that child's support and education. Distribution of each separate trust will be made in stages, at the ages of 25 and 30. The share of any child who dies before the age of 30 will continue to be held in trust for the issue of that child (if any) until the issue reach a stated age (such as 25), or 21 years after the death of the last surviving issue of the testator who is living at the time of the testator's death, whichever is earlier. The 21-year outside limitation is included to make certain that providing for final distribution to issue (i.e., grandchildren) when they are older than 21 years will not result in violation of the rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code § 21200 et seq. (Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities)]; but see Prob. Code § 21220 (reformation of disposition to comply with rule).

If the testator wishes to vary the distribution pattern prescribed by this form, the trust may provide that the share of any child who dies before the age of 30 will be distributed to the surviving spouse, if any, of that child.

Before distribution, the trustee is empowered to make payments from income or principal for the proper care, support, maintenance, and education of the children.

For a will provision creating separate trusts for each of the testator's children, see § 64.200. For complete will forms, including complete wills establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms. For rules relating to spendthrift trusts and the advantages and disadvantages of including spendthrift provisions in the will, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq.

[b] Separate Trusts Compared With Family Pot Trust

A trust that is intended to benefit the testator's children may be cast in the form of a single (or "family pot") trust or divided into separate trusts, with each trust assigned to one of the testator's children (whether living or deceased). Before deciding on any testamentary trust plan, the attorney and the client should consider the respective advantages and disadvantages of these different trust structures and choose the one that best suits the intentions of the testator and the anticipated needs of the beneficiaries.

When separate trusts are established, the needs of each beneficiary will be met only out of that beneficiary's separate trust. The trustee may not draw funds from one separate trust to meet the needs of the beneficiary of another separate trust, however great the needs of the other beneficiary may be. When the will establishes a single trust, however, the trustee may be given the discretionary power to distribute ("sprinkle") income and principal among the beneficiaries according to their needs. For a general discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of separate beneficiary trusts and family pot trusts, see § 64.200[1][c][i] et seq.

[c] Discretionary Payments of Income and Principal

Trustees frequently are given discretion to make payments of income or principal, or both. The general rule is that a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is not left to the trustee's arbitrary discretion but must be exercised reasonably [Prob. Code § 16080]. Even if a trust instrument confers "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion on a trustee, the trustee has a duty to act in accordance with fiduciary principles and not to act in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081]. For further discussion of trustee discretion, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.39[8] and 64A.340[1].

Provisions authorizing a trustee to make discretionary payments of income and principal permit the trustee to respond to the needs of the beneficiaries. A trustee with discretion to make payments may benefit beneficiaries who are in need and withhold payments from beneficiaries who are not in need. The trustee may distribute income to a beneficiary who has little or no outside income and withhold it from a beneficiary who has a large outside income. This may serve the needs of the beneficiaries more adequately than a provision that requires the trustee to make payments to beneficiaries regardless of need. Further, it may result in income tax savings, since beneficiaries with outside income may be in higher income tax brackets than those without such income. A trustee who sprinkles income among beneficiaries in this manner may effect substantial tax savings for the beneficiaries. Exercise of such a power may, however, have adverse tax effects [see discussions in § 64.201[1][d][i], [ii]].

[d] Tax Considerations

[i] Income Tax

The testator's decision to establish a family pot trust or a separate trust for each of the testator's children may result in substantially different income tax liabilities for the beneficiaries. For a consideration of these liabilities, see discussion in § 64.200[1][e].

[ii] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax

A testamentary trust that has the potential to benefit the testator's grandchildren also has the potential to trigger the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. § 2601 et seq.]. For general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see § 60.16.

[2] FORM

Family Pot Trust for Children With "Sprinkling" Provisions

Trust

[If my _____ (husband or wife) fails to survive me for _____ (specify period, e.g., six months),] I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee or, if trustee is appointed in separate paragraph, state: the trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL

Administration as Single Trust

1. The entire trust estate shall be administered as one trust until my youngest child then living reaches the age of 21 years. Until that time, the Trustee shall apply the net income and principal of the trust estate as follows:
  - (a) The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each of my children then living, including those who have attained the age of 21 years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for the proper care, support, maintenance, and education of each of them.
  - (b) The Trustee shall, from time to time, pay to or apply for the benefit of the surviving spouse and each of the issue of any deceased child of mine so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for their proper care, support, maintenance, and education.
  - (c) The Trustee may pay more to or apply more for some beneficiaries than others, and may omit some beneficiaries entirely.
  - (d) The Trustee shall accumulate and add to the principal of the trust any net income of the trust not paid out in accordance with the discretion herein conferred on the Trustee.
  - (e) Payments or distributions made by the Trustee from trust principal as authorized by the terms of this will shall not subsequently be deducted from or otherwise reduce or impair the value of the property to which the recipients of the payments shall be entitled on any distribution or termination of the trust.

Division Into Separate Trusts

2. When my youngest child then living reaches the age of 21 years, the Trustee shall immediately divide the trust estate into as many equal shares as there are children of mine then living and children of mine then deceased but with issue then living. One equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of each of my children then living, and one equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of the issue of each child of mine who is then deceased but leaves issue then living. Each share set aside under the terms of this paragraph shall constitute, and be held, administered, and distributed by the Trustee as, a separate trust.

Payments and Distributions From Trusts for Children

3. On division of the trust estate as provided in Paragraph 2, above, the Trustee shall pay and distribute the income and principal of each of the separate trusts set aside for the benefit of my living children as follows:

(a) If any child of mine shall have reached the age of 30 years at the time of division, the Trustee shall then distribute the whole of the separate trust set aside for that child to that child, free of trust.

(b) If any child of mine shall have reached the age of 25 years (but shall not have reached the age of 30 years) at the time of division, the Trustee shall then distribute one half of the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child to that child, free of trust, and shall hold the remaining one half of the principal in trust for that child until that child attains the age of 30 years, whereupon all amounts remaining in the separate trust for that child shall be distributed to that child and the separate trust for that child shall terminate.

(c) If any child of mine shall not have attained the age of 25 years at the time of division, the Trustee shall continue to hold the entire principal of the separate trust for that child in trust. The Trustee shall distribute one half of the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child to that child at the time the child attains the age of 25 years, and shall hold the remaining one half of the principal in trust for that child until that child attains the age of 30 years, whereupon all amounts remaining in the separate trust for that child shall be distributed to that child and the separate trust for that child shall terminate.

(d) Until such time as all the principal in the separate trust for each child has been distributed in accordance with Paragraph 3(a), (b), or (c) above, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each child, in monthly or other convenient installments (but not less often than annually), all of the net income of the separate trust held by the Trustee for that child. If, at any time, the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, determine that any child is in need of additional funds for that child's proper care, support, maintenance, and education, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of that child such additional amounts from the principal of the separate trust set aside for that child (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable.

(e) If any child of mine for whom a separate trust has been set aside as provided in Paragraph 2, above, should die before attaining the age of 30 years, leaving issue surviving, the trustee shall apportion the whole of the remaining balance of the separate trust set aside for that child among that child's surviving issue _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike], and shall continue to hold the share of each issue in trust. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each issue as much of the income and principal of the share of that issue as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, considers appropriate for the health, education, support, and maintenance of that issue, and shall distribute any remaining balance of that issue's share to that issue when that issue attains the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, or 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death, whichever occurs first. If any issue for whom a share has been apportioned under this Paragraph 3(e) should die before attaining the age of _____ [restate age of final distribution, e.g., 25] years, the share of that issue shall be apportioned among the issue of that issue, if any, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike]; or, if that issue leaves no issue surviving, shall be apportioned among the other issue of my deceased child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike]; provided that no final distribution to any issue under the provisions of this Paragraph 3(e) shall occur until the date when that issue reaches the age of _____ [restate age of final distribution, e.g., 25] years, or 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death, whichever occurs first.

(f) If any child of mine for whom a separate trust has been set aside as provided in Paragraph 2, above, should die without issue before attaining the age of 30 years, then the remaining balance, if any, of the separate trust set aside for that child shall be apportioned among the shares and partial shares set aside for the benefit of my other living children and the issue of any deceased children _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike] and held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the provisions of this will.

Payments and Distributions From Trusts for Issue of Deceased Children

4. Each share of the trust estate set aside for the benefit of the living issue of a deceased child of mine, as provided in Paragraph 2, above, shall, on division of the trust into separate shares as provided in Paragraph 2, be apportioned among the issue of that deceased child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike]. The share of any issue who has attained the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years shall be distributed to that issue, free of trust. The Trustee shall continue to hold in trust the share of any issue who has not yet attained the age of _____ [restate age of distribution, e.g., 25] years. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each issue for whom a share is held in trust as much of the income and principal of the share of that issue as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, considers appropriate for the health, education, support, and maintenance of that issue, and shall distribute any remaining balance of that issue's share to that issue when that issue attains the age of _____ [e.g., 25] years, or 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death, whichever occurs first. If any issue for whom a share has been apportioned under this Paragraph 4 should die before attaining the age of _____ [restate age of final distribution, e.g., 25] years, the share of that issue shall be apportioned among the issue of that issue, if any, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike]; or, if that issue leaves no issue surviving, shall be apportioned among the other issue of my deceased child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike]; provided that no final distribution to any issue who receives any share of the trust estate set aside for the issue of a deceased child of mine under the provisions of this Paragraph 4 shall occur until the date when that issue reaches the age of _____ [restate age of final distribution, e.g., 25] years, or 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death, whichever occurs first.

Distribution if No Issue

5. If my children and their issue should all die before final distribution of the trust estate, then the whole of the trust estate not otherwise disposed of shall be distributed to _____ [specify alternative disposition, e.g., my heirs, their identities and respective shares to be determined in accordance with the laws of the State of California in effect at the time of distribution. If there are no heirs of mine, the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ (name and address of charitable beneficiary)].

Exercise of Discretion

6. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary or beneficiaries as provided in this will, the Trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, the value of the trust assets, the needs, both present and future, of the beneficiaries, and the tax consequences to the trust and to the beneficiaries of any payment or distribution. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of any beneficiary receiving a payment or distribution as to the amount and availability of any other income or resources of that beneficiary. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to any beneficiary shall be conclusive on all persons interested in the trust. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary, the Trustee shall _____ [consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of that beneficiary or not consider any income or resources available to that beneficiary outside the trust].

Definitions

7. As used in this will:

- (a) The terms "child" and "children" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.
- (b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.
- (c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to one of the separate trusts provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of one of those separate trusts.
- (d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with any such education.

Maximum Duration of Trusts

8. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

9. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit any person who has a current right to receive income from the trust estate to occupy any real property that forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which that beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of the real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If the testator wishes to assure a particular beneficiary the right to occupy a residence that has been occupied by that beneficiary before the testator's death, then a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For such a clause, see P 9 of § 64.206.]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

10. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, is an incompetent person, is a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, health care, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any decision, in good faith, by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

11. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Notice to Trustee

12. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

13. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, or from any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

14. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income of any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.202

§ 64.202 Separate Trusts for Children With Different Payment Provisions for Each Child

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to divide the trust estate into equal shares for each of the testator's children and to make different payment and distribution provisions for each child.

For a will provision creating separate trusts for the testator's children and making identical provisions for payment of income and principal to each child, see § 64.200. For will provisions creating single (or family pot) trusts, see §§ 64.201 and 64.203. For rules relating to spendthrift trusts and the advantages and disadvantages of including spendthrift provisions in the will, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq. and in § 64.200[1][h]. For complete will forms, including complete will forms establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms.

For a comparison of trust plans that create separate trusts for the testator's children with trust plans that create single or family pot trusts, see discussion in § 64.200[1][b]. For a discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of separate trusts and family pot trusts, see discussion in § 64.200[1][c][i] et seq.

[b] Separate Shares With Different Payment Provisions

[i] In General

A testator who creates separate trusts for his or her children may also make different provisions for the payment and distribution of the income and principal of those trusts. This form illustrates how different provisions may be specified. It is cast in the form of a residuary clause. The clause may be conditioned to take effect only if the testator's spouse fails to survive the testator for a specified period (e.g., six months); or, if appropriate, may be made unconditional (see discussion in § 64.200[1][j]). It requires the trustee to divide the trust estate into equal shares and to set aside one share for each of the testator's children. Different provisions for payment and distribution of income and principal are made for each trust. Although this form assumes that the testator has two sons, it may be modified to fit the needs of any number of sons or daughters of a particular testator.

[ii] Advantages and Disadvantages

Before the testator decides to make different payment and distribution provisions for his or her children, the advantages and disadvantages of different provisions should be carefully considered.

A testator's children will sometimes have significantly different needs. For example, one child may have a special medical condition that requires the expenditure of large sums of money for health or custodial care. One of the testator's children may have an independent source of income, while the other may depend solely on the trust for the necessities of life. One child may enjoy the testator's full confidence, while the other may not. One child may have a large family that is dependent upon him or her for financial support, while the other may have no family to support. In these or other similar circumstances, the testator may find it necessary or desirable to make different provisions for payment of income and principal to suit the needs of different children.

Different provisions for the payment of income and principal may, however, be the source of unhappiness and dissatisfaction among children. While different children sometimes have different needs, they frequently expect their parents to treat them alike in matters of inheritance. If the testator decides to make different provisions for the children, it may be desirable for the attorney to meet with the children, outline the payment and distribution provisions of the will, and explain the testator's reasons for making different provisions. This explanation may serve to ease problems that the attorney might otherwise encounter during the administration of the estate or the operation of the trust.

[iii] Particular Provisions

This form grants the trustee discretion to pay sufficient sums out of income and, if necessary, out of principal, for the benefit of the testator's older son until the older son reaches the age of 22. Between the ages of 22 and 30, the older son will receive only one-half of the net income because the testator believes the older son should be at least partially self-supporting. However, the testator wishes the son to complete his education and provides additional payments for that purpose. Additionally, the testator authorizes the older son to withdraw a total of $30,000 from the trust between the ages of 25 and 30. The testator believes this money may be necessary to assist the older son in starting a business, opening a professional office, or purchasing a residence. All of the older son's share of the trust estate is distributed to him when he reaches the age of 30.

The testator gives the younger son the same benefits for support and education that were given to the older son, except that the younger son's benefits continue until he reaches 25, rather than 22. Thereafter, the younger son will receive all of the net income from his share of the trust and an annual payment equivalent to 2 percent of the total value of his share, or $5,000, whichever is greater. When the younger son dies, the trust terminates and is distributed to his issue.

[c] Invasion of Principal: "Five or Five Power"

This trust gives the testator's younger son an annual payment equivalent to 2 percent of the value of his share of the trust, or $5,000, whichever is greater. This is an example of a "five or five" power of appointment [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(2)]. The taxable estate of a beneficiary who fails to exercise a qualifying five or five power will not include the assets subject to the power. If the beneficiary's power of invasion exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent, however, the excess over that amount (if not withdrawn) will be deemed to have been released and will be included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(d)(3)]. For a more detailed consideration of five or five powers, their uses and limitations, see the discussion in § 64.302.

[d] Revision of Will Necessary to Accommodate After-Born Children

It is nearly impossible to draft a coherent will with varying clauses for different children that will adequately provide for children born after execution of the will. For this reason, whenever a will with different provisions for different children is executed, the testator should be advised to contact the attorney promptly if another child is born so that a new will with adequate provisions for the after-born child can be executed. The trust set forth in this form makes no provision for after-born children.

[2] FORM

Separate Trusts for Children With Different Payment Provisions for Each Child

Trust

[If my _____ (husband or wife) fails to survive me for _____ (specify period, e.g.: six months),] I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee or, if trustee appointed in separate paragraph, state: the trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL

Division of Trust Estate Into Separate Trusts

1. The Trustee shall divide the trust estate into two equal shares. One equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of my older son, _____ [name], and shall constitute and be held and administered as a separate trust for his benefit. The other equal share shall be set aside for the benefit of my younger son, _____ [name], and shall constitute and be held and administered as a separate trust for his benefit.

Trust for Older Son

2. The Trustee shall apply and distribute the net income and principal of the share set aside for the benefit of my older son, _____ [name], as follows:

(a) Until my older son reaches the age of 22 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for his benefit, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of his share of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for his proper care, support, maintenance, and education. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When my older son reaches the age of 22 years, and until he reaches the age of 30 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my older son, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, one-half of the net income from his share of the trust estate. While my older son is between the ages of 22 and 30 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for his benefit such additional payments out of the net income of his share of the trust estate and, if the net income is insufficient, out of the principal of his share of the trust estate, as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems necessary to enable my older son to complete his education. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to the principal of his share of the trust estate any net income not distributed.

(c) In addition to the above payments, during the period that my older son is between the ages of 25 and 30 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my older son such additional amounts out of the net income and, if the net income is insufficient, out of the principal of his share of the trust estate, as my older son shall, from time to time, request in writing of the Trustee; provided, however, that the total amount of the requests to be honored by the Trustee during that five-year period shall not exceed $30,000. My older son need not give any reasons to the Trustee for making any requests pursuant to this paragraph.

(d) When my older son reaches the age of 30 years, the Trustee shall immediately distribute to him all of the remaining balance of his share of the trust estate.

(e) If my older son should die before he reaches the age of 30 years, then on his death the Trustee shall distribute all of the balance of my older son's share of the trust estate to his surviving issue on the principle of representation. If my older son should die before attaining the age of 30 years leaving no issue, then on his death the balance of my older son's share of the trust estate shall be added to the share of the trust estate set aside for my younger son. If my older son should die before attaining the age of 30 years leaving no issue, and if at that time the share of the trust estate set aside for my younger son has been distributed in full, then on the death of my older son the Trustee shall distribute all of the balance of my older son's share of the trust estate to the surviving issue of my younger son on the principle of representation. If my older son should die before reaching the age of 30 years and is not survived by any of his issue or by my younger son or by any issue of my younger son, the then-balance of my older son's share of the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ [specify alternative disposition, e.g.: my heirs, their identities and respective shares to be determined in accordance with the laws of the State of California in effect at the time of distribution. If there are no heirs of mine, the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ (name and address of charitable beneficiary)].

Trust for Younger Son

3. The Trustee shall apply and distribute the net income and principal of the share of the trust estate set aside for the benefit of my younger son, _____ [name], as follows:

(a) Until my younger son reaches the age of 25 years, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for his benefit, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of his share of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for his proper care, support, maintenance, and education. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

(b) When my younger son reaches the age of 25 years, the Trustee shall thereafter pay to or apply for the benefit of my younger son, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, all of the net income from his share of the trust estate.

(c) On the first day of the calendar year immediately following my younger son's 25th birthday, and annually thereafter during his lifetime on the first day of the calendar month immediately following his birthday, the Trustee shall determine the market value of the principal of his share of the trust estate. This determination shall be conclusive on all persons interested in his share of the trust estate. Annually, on the first day of the first month immediately following the month in which the Trustee makes this determination, the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my younger son out of the principal of his share of the trust estate a sum equal to 2 percent of that value, as last determined by the Trustee, or $5,000, whichever is greater.

(d) On the death of my younger son, the Trustee shall distribute all of the balance of my younger son's share of the trust estate to his issue _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation]. If my younger son should die leaving no issue, then on his death the balance of my younger son's share of the trust estate shall be added to the share of the trust estate set aside for my older son. If my younger son should die without issue, and if at the time of my younger son's death the share of the trust estate set aside for my older son has been distributed in full, then the Trustee shall distribute the balance of my younger son's share of the trust estate to my older son, or if my older son is not living at that time, to the surviving issue of my older son on the principle of representation. If my younger son should die without surviving issue, and if he is not survived by my older son or by any issue of my older son, the balance of all of the principal and undistributed income then remaining in my younger son's share of the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ [specify alternative disposition, e.g.: my heirs, their identities and respective shares to be determined in accordance with the laws of the State of California in effect at the time of distribution. If there are no heirs of mine, the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ (name and address of charitable beneficiary)].

Exercise of Discretion

4. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary or beneficiaries as provided in this will, the Trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, the value of the trust assets, the needs, both present and future, of the beneficiaries, and the tax consequences to the trust and to the beneficiaries of any payment or distribution. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of any beneficiary receiving a payment or distribution as to the amount and availability of any other income or resources of that beneficiary. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to any beneficiary shall be conclusive on all persons interested in the trust. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary, the Trustee shall _____ [consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of that beneficiary or not consider any income or resources available to that beneficiary outside the trust].

Definitions

5. As used in this will:

- (a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.
- (b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.
- (c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to one of the separate trusts provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of one of those separate trusts.
- (d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with any such education.

Maximum Duration of Trusts

6. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

7. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit any person who has a current right to receive income from the trust estate to occupy any real property which forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which that beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of the real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If the testator wishes to assure a particular beneficiary the right to occupy a residence that has been occupied by that beneficiary before the testator's death, then a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For such a clause, see P 9 of § 64.206.]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

8. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, is an incompetent person, is a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, healthcare, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any decision, in good faith, by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments, shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

9. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Notice to Trustee

10. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to persons whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

11. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, or from any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

12. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income of any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.203

§ 64.203 Family Pot Trust for Spouse and Children With Remainder to Children

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a single (or "family pot") trust for the benefit of the surviving spouse and the children of the testator and to provide that the remainder will go to the children when the surviving spouse dies or the testator's youngest child reaches the age of 25, whichever occurs last. It authorizes the trustee to pay the income to the surviving spouse and to the testator's children who are under the age of 22. Between the ages of 22 and 25, the children will receive discretionary payments for their educations. When the surviving spouse dies, or when the youngest child reaches the age of 25, whichever occurs last, the trust will terminate and the principal will be distributed to the surviving children.

For a form creating a family pot trust for the testator's children with sprinkling provisions, see § 64.201. For forms creating a separate trust for each of the testator's children, see §§ 64.200 and 64.202. For rules relating to spendthrift trusts and the advantages and disadvantages of including spendthrift provisions in the will, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq., and in § 64.200[1][h]. For complete will forms, including complete wills establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch., Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms.

[b] Marital Deduction Considerations

Because this form allows the trustee to pay income to the testator's children during the lifetime of the surviving spouse, it will not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1), (5), (7)(B)(ii)(I)]. Thus, it should be used only if the amount of the trust is small enough that recourse to the marital deduction is unnecessary, or if for some other reason the marital deduction is to be inapplicable. The use of such a trust for larger estates ordinarily is inappropriate and in a great many cases could constitute legal malpractice. For discussion of the marital deduction, marital deduction planning, and the circumstances under which a marital deduction trust should be used in lieu of a trust such as this one, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.11.

[c] "Family Pot" Trust for Benefit of Spouse and Children--Advantages and Disadvantages

The establishment of a family pot trust that will benefit both the testator's surviving spouse and children presents both advantages and disadvantages. Before deciding upon any testamentary plan, the testator and the attorney should carefully consider these advantages and disadvantages, weighing them against the needs of the prospective beneficiaries and the wishes of the testator.

A trustee who has discretion to shift the benefits of a trust among the beneficiaries may spread the trust income among the beneficiaries in such a way as to minimize their total income tax liability. If, for example, one of the beneficiaries is in a lower income tax bracket than another, distributing income to the lower-bracket beneficiary will result in a net income tax savings for the beneficiaries. Further, a trust that benefits both the surviving spouse and the children will ensure that the children will receive some benefit from the estate as soon as the trust becomes effective. If the trust is created for the benefit of the surviving spouse alone, the children may or may not receive some benefit from it during the spouse's lifetime or upon his or her death. Many testamentary trusts provide that all payments are to be made to the surviving spouse while he or she is living. In such a case, any benefit that the children will receive during the surviving spouse's lifetime will depend solely upon the largesse of the surviving spouse.

A trust that benefits both the surviving spouse and the children must, of necessity, divide its benefits among the beneficiaries. If the trust estate is small or modest in size, the income that would otherwise be available for the support of the spouse will necessarily be diminished by any payments made to the surviving children. If the principal object of the testator's bounty is the surviving spouse, then the testator and attorney should determine the adequacy of the trust estate to provide for the spouse's needs as well as those of the children. If the trust estate is inadequate to make provisions for both, the testator may choose to benefit the spouse at the expense of the children, who may be better able to provide for themselves.

For a comparison of trust plans that create separate trusts for beneficiaries with plans that create single or family pot trusts, see discussion in § 64.200[1][b]. For a general consideration of the advantages and disadvantages of separate trusts and family pot trusts, see discussion in § 64.200[1][c][i] et seq.

[d] Particular Provisions

This trust provides that each of the testator's children will be supported by the trust until he or she reaches the age of 22. This is the age at which many children complete their college educations and, presumably, are ready to become self-supporting. Any other age that suits the wishes of the testator or the anticipated needs of the children may be substituted. If, for example, the testator expects that the children will pursue postgraduate studies, then the age at which their right to support will terminate may be raised. No child will receive a distribute share of the trust principal until that child is 25 or until the surviving spouse dies, whichever occurs later. The distribute share of each child is charged with the amount of educational payments made between the ages of 22 and 25 in an effort to equalize the total of the benefits received by each beneficiary. If the testator wishes to encourage each child to obtain as much education as possible, and does not wish to penalize those children who pursue their educations and benefit those who do not, this provision may be omitted.

[2] FORM

Family Pot Trust for Spouse and Children With Remainder to Children

Trust

I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee or, if trustee appointed in separate paragraph, state: the trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL*Administration as Single Trust

1. The entire trust estate shall be administered as one trust until my youngest child then living reaches the age of 25 years, or until my spouse dies, whichever event occurs last. Until that time, the Trustee shall apply the net income and principal of the trust estate as follows:

(a) The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my spouse during _____ [his or her] lifetime, and for the benefit of each of my living children who are under the age of 22 years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for the proper care, support, maintenance, and education of each of them.

(b) The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each of my living children who are over the age of 22 years but under the age of 25 years, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for the education of each of them.

(c) The Trustee may pay more to or apply more for some beneficiaries than others, and may omit some beneficiaries entirely.

(d) The Trustee shall accumulate and add to the principal of the trust any net income of the trust not paid out in accordance with the discretion hereinabove conferred on the Trustee.

(e) Payments or distributions made by the Trustee from trust principal as authorized by the terms of this will _____ [shall or shall not] subsequently be deducted from the value of the trust principal to which the recipient of those payments shall be entitled on distribution or termination of the trust.

(f) In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary or beneficiaries as provided in this will, the Trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, the value of the trust assets, the needs of the beneficiaries, both present and future, and the tax consequences to the trust and to the beneficiaries of any payment or distribution. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of any beneficiary receiving a payment or distribution as to the amount and availability of any other income or resources of that beneficiary. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to any beneficiary shall be conclusive on all persons interested in the trust. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to any beneficiary, the Trustee shall _____ [consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of that beneficiary or not consider any income or resources available to that beneficiary outside the trust].

Division Into Separate Trusts

2. When my youngest child then living reaches the age of 25 years, or when my spouse dies, whichever event occurs last, the trust shall terminate and the Trustee shall immediately divide the trust estate into as many equal shares as there are children of mine then living and children of mine then deceased but leaving issue then surviving. One equal share shall be then be distributed to each of my children then living, and one equal share shall then be distributed to the issue of each deceased child of mine on the principle of representation.

Definitions

3. As used in this will:

(a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.

(b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.

(c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to the trust provided for in this will, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of that trust.

(d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with all such education.

Maximum Duration of Trusts

4. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

5. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit any person who has a current right to receive income from the trust estate to occupy any real property that forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which that beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of any such real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If the testator wishes to assure a particular beneficiary the right to occupy a residence that has been occupied by that beneficiary before the testator's death, then a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For such a clause, see P 9 of § 64.206.]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

6. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, is an incompetent person, is a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, health care, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any decision, in good faith, by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

7. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of the termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Notice to Trustee

8. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

9. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, or from any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

10. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income of any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.204

§ 64.204 Trust for Adult Son or Daughter With Power to Invade Corpus and Special Power of Appointment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a trust for the benefit of an adult son or daughter of the testator and to provide the son or daughter with funds beyond those a trustee might consider adequate for the son's or daughter's support. In addition, the beneficiary is given a special power of appointment exercisable by will.

For a form creating separate trusts for two or more of the testator's children, see §§ 64.200 and 64.202. For rules relating to spendthrift trusts and the advantages and disadvantages of including spendthrift provisions in the will, see discussions § 64.41[1] et seq. and in § 64.200[1][h]. For complete will forms, including complete wills establishing testamentary trusts, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms .

[b] Particular Provisions

This form is suitable for use by a testator who is a widow, widower, or divorced person and who wishes to establish a trust for the benefit of an adult child. The form contemplates that there are presently no grandchildren but reflects the testator's wish that, if grandchildren are born, the adult child will have the power to determine what amounts the grandchildren will receive from the trust. To implement this wish, the beneficiary is given a power to appoint trust assets in favor of the testator's grandchildren. This power is a special power of appointment [see Prob. Code § 611(d); see also § 64.44[1]] and, as such, will not cause the property subject to the power to be included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2); see also § 64.51[3]].

[c] Five or Five Power

This form includes a so-called "Five or Five" power. Under this power, the beneficiary has the right to demand the withdrawal of the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the market value of the trust principal in each calendar year. If the power is not exercised in any given year, it will lapse and cannot be exercised in succeeding years.

The power is limited to $5,000 or 5 percent of the market value of the trust principal so that the lapse of the power will not be deemed a taxable gift to the remainder beneficiaries. Under I.R.C. § 2514(e), the lapse of a power of appointment will be deemed a taxable gift only to the extent that the property subject to the power exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the property out of which the power could be exercised. For further discussion of "five or five" powers and the "five or five" rule, see § 64.302[1].

[d] Independent Trustee

Because this form gives the sole income beneficiary extensive rights in the trust, it is suggested that the testator appoint an independent trustee [for provisions appointing trustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.200-64A.202; for tax considerations in the selection of trustees, see discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.32[1] et seq.].

[2] FORM

Trust for Adult Son or Daughter With Power to Inva d e Corpus and Special Power of Appointment

Trust

I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee, or, if trustee is appointed elsewhere in will: the Trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

Payment of Income

1. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my _____ [son or daughter], _____ [name], during _____ [his or her] lifetime, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, all of the net income from the trust estate.

Discretionary Payments out of Principal

2. The Trustee shall, from time to time, pay to or apply for the benefit of my _____ [son or daughter] such additional sums from the principal of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for _____ [his or her] proper care, support, and maintenance. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of principal pursuant to this paragraph, the Trustee, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, shall take into consideration any income or resources known to the Trustee that are available to my _____ [son or daughter] from sources outside of this trust.

"Five or Five" Power

3. In addition to any other payments provided for in this will, the Trustee shall, during the lifetime of my _____ [son or daughter], pay to or apply for _____ [his or her] benefit such additional sums from the principal of the trust estate as _____ [he or she] may, from time to time, request in writing, not exceeding in any calendar year the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the market value of the principal of the trust estate, determined as of the last day of the calendar year in which the request was made. This limited right to make withdrawals from the principal of the trust estate is noncumulative, so that an amount which might have been, but was not, withdrawn during any year may not be withdrawn in any later year.

Special Power of Appointment

4.(a) On the death of my _____[son or daughter], the Trustee shall distribute the balance of the trust estate then remaining, if any, together with accrued income and undistributed income, to those persons appointed by my _____[son or daughter] from among _____[his or her] own issue; provided, however, that this power of appointment may not be exercised in favor of my _____[son or daughter], _____[his or her] estate, _____[his or her] creditors, or the creditors of _____[his or her] estate. The appointment shall be in the amounts or proportions and on the terms and conditions, either outright or in trust, that my _____[son or daughter] shall appoint in a valid will, whether executed before or after my death, specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment.

(b) Before distributing the balance of the trust estate, the Trustee shall pay any federal estate tax, any federal generation-skipping transfer tax, and any other federal or state tax or taxes that may be due by reason of the death of my _____[son or daughter].

(c) If any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by my _____[son or daughter] for any reason, the property shall be distributed to _____[specify alternative disposition, e.g.: my heirs, their identities and respective shares to be determined in accordance with the laws of the State of California in effect at the time of distribution. If there are no heirs of mine, the trust estate shall be distributed to _____ (name and address of charitable beneficiary)].

Definitions

5. As used in this will:

(a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.

(b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.

(c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to the trust provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of that trust.

(d) The term "education" includes _____[college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with all such education.

Maximum Duration of Trust

6. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

7. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit any person who has a current right to receive income from the trust estate to occupy any real property that forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which that beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of any such real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If the testator wishes to assure a particular beneficiary the right to occupy a residence that has been occupied by that beneficiary before the testator's death, then a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For such a clause, see P 9 of § 64.206.]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

8. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, an incompetent person, a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, may make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, healthcare, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any decision, in good faith, by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

9. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Trustee Not Liable Absent Notice

10. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

11. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

12. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income thereof, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.205

§ 64.205 Trust for Impaired Son or Daughter With Maximum Protection Against Creditors and Remainder to Grandchildren

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a trust for the benefit of a physically or mentally impaired son or daughter of the testator. The form will be appropriate when the testator has only one child and that child needs special or institutional care or treatment, or when all of the testator's children (with the exception of the impaired child) are self-supporting adults. In establishing this trust, the testator is primarily concerned for the welfare of the impaired child and only secondarily concerned about his or her other children or their issue.

The trust is cast in the form of a residuary clause. The clause may be conditioned to take effect only if the testator's spouse fails to survive the testator for a specified period (e.g., six months); or, if appropriate, may be made unconditional [see discussion in § 64.200[1][j]].

[b] Spendthrift Provisions

To protect the interest of the impaired child from creditors, this trust includes a spendthrift provision. Although spendthrift provisions should not automatically be included in every testamentary trust, they will be useful when the primary purpose of the trust is to provide for the continuing support of a principal beneficiary who has little or no income outside the trust and who lacks experience in handling money or is the kind of person who may easily be imposed upon by others. For the rules relating to spendthrift trusts and the advantages and disadvantages of including spendthrift provisions in the will, see discussions in § 64.41[1] et seq. and in § 64.200[1][h].

[c] Discretion of Trustee to Determine Amount of Distributions

This trust also gives the trustee the sole and absolute discretion to determine the amount of all payments of income and principal to the beneficiary. If a trust instrument confers "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion on a trustee, the trustee must act in accordance with fiduciary principles and must not act in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)]. When the trustee is given absolute discretion to determine the amounts of income and principal that will be paid to a beneficiary, the court will not substitute its judgment for the trustee's [ Estate of Canfield (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 443, 450, 181 P.2d 732 ]. The absolute discretion of the trustee, exercised in good faith, is not subject to control by the court as to its reasonableness in the allocation of income [ Estate of Canfield (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 443, 450, 181 P.2d 732 ]. When the trust provides that the trustee will pay or apply only so much of the income as is necessary for the education or support of an income beneficiary, the beneficiary cannot assign the income interest and the beneficiary's creditors cannot reach it [ Seymour v. McAvoy (1898) 121 Cal. 438, 443-444, 53 P. 946 ; Scott, The Law of Trusts (2d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. II, § 154]. A provision that an income beneficiary is to receive only such income as is necessary for the beneficiary's support limits the beneficiary's interest in such a way that no one other than the beneficiary may enjoy it [Scott, The Law of Trusts (2d ed., 1967), vol. II, § 154]. Such a provision will afford an extra measure of protection to an income beneficiary in need of spendthrift protection (although it will also restrict the beneficiary's ability to use trust income in ways that may be beneficial).

[d] Provisions

To carry out the purposes of the trust, the trustee is authorized to make payments or distributions directly to the beneficiary or to make payments to any person or entity furnishing care or support for the beneficiary. The trust also provides for payment of the expenses of the beneficiary's last illness and funeral and burial expenses.

The trust may provide for any appropriate distribution of trust principal on the death of the principal beneficiary. Since it is contemplated that the testator's other children are self-supporting adults, the testator may choose to distribute the principal to his or her grandchildren in any suitable proportions or shares. The Probate Code describes three basic patterns for the distribution of class gifts. They are: (1) distribution in the manner provided in cases of intestacy (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 240 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245]; (2) distribution "per stirpes" or "by representation" (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 246 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 246]; and (3) distribution "per capita at each generation" (also called "distribution in the manner provided in Section 247 of the Probate Code") [Prob. Code § 247]. Case law provides for a fourth pattern of distribution, which is distribution "per capita" [see Lombardi v. Blois (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 191, 198, 40 Cal. Rptr. 899]. For a general discussion of these patterns, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6].

[e] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax

When distributions are made to grandchildren, the generation-skipping transfer tax may be triggered. For rules relating to the imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see discussion in § 64.200[1][e][ii].

[2] FORM

Trust for Impaired Son or Daughter With Maximum Protection Against Creditors and Remainder to Grandchildren

Trust

[If my _____ (husband or wife) fails to survive me for _____ (specify period, e.g.: six months),] I give the residue of my estate to _____ [name of trustee, or, if trustee is appointed elsewhere in will: the Trustee named in Paragraph ____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL

During Lifetime of Beneficiary

1. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my _____ [son or daughter], _____ [name] (hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Beneficiary), during _____ [his or her] lifetime, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate (up to the whole thereof) as the Trustee, in the Trustee's sole and absolute discretion, deems necessary for the Beneficiary's proper care, support, and maintenance. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal the balance, if any, of the net income not paid or applied in accordance with the foregoing provision.

Exercise of Discretion

2. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to the Beneficiary, the Trustee shall take into consideration, to the extent that the Trustee deems advisable, the value of the trust assets, the needs, both present and future, of the Beneficiary, and the tax consequences to the trust and the Beneficiary of any payment or distribution. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of the Beneficiary as to the amount and availability of any other income or resources of the Beneficiary. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to the Beneficiary shall be conclusive on all persons and the creditors of all persons interested in the trust. In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to the Beneficiary, the Trustee shall consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of the Beneficiary.

Payment of Funeral and Burial Expenses

3. On the death of the Beneficiary, the Trustee shall pay out of the income, if available, and, if not, out of the principal of the trust estate the expenses of the Beneficiary's last illness, funeral, and burial, unless the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, determine that other provisions have been made for the payment of those expenses.

Termination on Death of Beneficiary

4. The trust shall terminate on the death of the Beneficiary, and the Trustee shall immediately distribute the balance of the trust estate _____ [add provisions for distribution of principal, e.g.: to my grandchildren then living, in equal shares. However, if any grandchild of mine is deceased at the time of the Beneficiary's death but leaves issue then surviving, the share of the trust estate that would otherwise have been distributed to the deceased grandchild shall instead be distributed to those issue _____ (e.g.: in the manner provided in Section 246 of the California Probate Code)].

Definitions

5. As used in this will:

(a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.

- (b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.
- (c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to the trust provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of that trust.
- (d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the Beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the Beneficiary. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the Beneficiary in connection with all such education.

Occupation of Real Property

6. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, permit the Beneficiary to occupy any real property that forms a part of _____ [the trust estate or any separate part of the trust estate from which the Beneficiary's right to income is derived]. The terms of occupation may include, but are not limited to, rent-free occupation of that real property, or occupation in consideration of full or partial payment of taxes, insurance, maintenance, and ordinary repairs. The terms of any such occupation shall be determined by the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion.

[If the testator wishes to assure the beneficiary of the right to occupy a residence occupied by the beneficiary before the testator's death, a clause directing the trustee to allow the beneficiary to occupy the residence should be used. For a clause that may be adapted for that purpose, see P 4 of § 64.206[2].]

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

7. The Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from the trust in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the Beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the Beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, healthcare, or education of or for the Beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any good faith decision by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Notice to Trustee

8. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

9. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

10. Neither the Beneficiary nor any of the remainder beneficiaries shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the principal or income of the trust estate, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of the Beneficiary and of each and every remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of the Beneficiary's or any remainder beneficiary's creditors and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by the Beneficiary or any remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.206

§ 64.206 Non-Marital Deduction Trust for Spouse and Parent With Remainder in Family Pot Trust for Testator's Children

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a non-marital deduction trust that will provide for the support of both the testator's spouse and a parent of the testator. It gives the trustee discretion to pay whatever amounts of income are necessary for the support of the parent during the joint lifetimes of the parent and the spouse, with the balance of the income being paid to the spouse. If the parent survives the spouse, a fractional share of the trust estate will be set aside for the benefit of the parent, who will receive discretionary payments of income and principal from that share. On the parent's death, the parent's share of the trust will, depending on the age of the testator's youngest living child, either be held in trust for the benefit of the testator's children or distributed to them outright. If the spouse survives the parent, all of the trust estate will be held for the benefit of the spouse, and the remainder either held in trust for the children or distributed to them outright.

For a discussion of the relative merits of creating a single family pot trust for the benefit of the testator's children or separate trusts for each of the children, see discussion in § 64.200[1][b] et seq.

[b] Marital Deduction Considerations

Because this form allows the trustee to pay income to the testator's parent as well as the testator's surviving spouse, it will not qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(1), (5), (7)(B)(ii)(I)]. Thus, it should be used only if the amount of the trust is small enough that recourse to the marital deduction is unnecessary, or if for some other reason the marital deduction is to be inapplicable. In larger estates, this form should be used with caution and only after a full consideration of the tax consequences. Often, when a person with a larger estate wants to create a trust for the care of a parent, it may be preferable to create a separate trust for the care of the parent, with remainder to the testator's spouse or children on the parent's death [see, e.g., § 64.207]. Assets earmarked for the surviving spouse then can be placed in a standard marital deduction trust.

For discussion of the marital deduction, marital deduction planning, and the circumstances under which a marital deduction trust should be used, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.11.

[c] Provisions

Payments to the testator's parent are limited to net income, regardless of any emergencies that might occur, so that the ability of the trust to provide for the testator's spouse (and, after the death of the spouse, the testator's children) will not be impaired. During the parent's lifetime, the spouse will receive the balance of any income that is not paid to the parent. If the spouse dies while the parent is still living, a fractional part of the trust estate will be set aside for the parent, out of which he or she will thereafter receive whatever income and principal payments are appropriate. On the parent's death, the balance of his or her share will be added to the remainder of the trust estate.

On the death of the spouse, a family pot trust will be established for all of the children of the testator who are under a specified age (e.g., 24 years). When the testator's youngest living child reaches the specified age, the trust will be distributed in equal shares to all of the children.

Alternatively, the support needs of a parent of the testator may be served by establishing a separate trust for the benefit of the parent. For a form establishing such a trust, see § 64.207.

[2] FORM

Non-Marital Deduction Trust for Spouse and Parent With Remainder in Family Pot Trust for Testator's Children

Trust

I give _____ [describe property to be placed in trust e.g.: the residue of my estate] to _____ [name of trustee, or, if trustee is appointed elsewhere in will: the Trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL

Income Payments for Support of Parent

1. During the joint lifetimes of my _____ [husband or wife] and my _____ [mother or father], the Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father], _____ [name], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems appropriate for the proper support and care of my _____ [mother or father], after considering, to the extent known to the Trustee, any other income or resources available to _____ [him or her].

Remaining Income to Spouse

2. During the lifetime of my _____ [husband or wife], the Trustee shall pay to or apply for _____ [his or her] benefit, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, any and all of the net income not paid to or applied for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father] in accordance with the terms of Paragraph 1 of this trust.

Payments of Principal for Support of Spouse

3. The Trustee shall, from time to time during the lifetime of my _____ [husband or wife], pay to or apply for _____ [his or her] benefit such additional sums from the principal of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems appropriate for _____ [his or her] support in _____ [his or her] accustomed manner of living. In exercising the Trustee's discretion to make payments of principal to my _____ [husband or wife] under this paragraph, the Trustee shall, to the extent deemed advisable by the Trustee, take into consideration any income or other resources available to _____ [him or her] from sources outside the trust that may be known to the Trustee.

Payments and Distributions if Parent Survives Spouse

4. If my _____ [mother or father] survives my _____ [husband or wife], then upon the death of my _____ [husband or wife] the Trustee shall set aside _____ [specify fractional share of trust estate, e.g.: one-quarter] of the trust estate for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father], and shall hold, administer, and distribute that share as follows:

(a) The Trustee shall, during the lifetime of my _____ [mother or father], pay to or apply for _____ [his or her] benefit, in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of that share of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems appropriate for the support of my _____ [mother or father] in _____ [his or her] accustomed manner of living, after considering, to the extent known to the Trustee, any other income or resources available to _____ [him or her]. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income of the trust not paid out to my _____ [mother or father] pursuant to this paragraph.

(b) On the death of my _____ [mother or father], if my youngest living child has not then reached the age of _____ [specify age, e.g.: 24 years], the Trustee shall add the balance of _____ [his or her] share of the trust estate to the rest of the trust estate and shall hold, administer, and distribute it in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 5 of this trust.

(c) If my _____ [mother or father] dies after my youngest living child reaches the age of _____ [same age set forth above, e.g.: 24 years], the balance of _____ [his or her] share of the trust estate shall, upon _____ [his or her] death, _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g.: be distributed in equal shares to my children living at the time of distribution]. If any child of mine not living at the time of distribution leaves issue then surviving, an equal share shall be distributed to the then-living issue of that child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Payments and Distributions if Spouse Dies Before Youngest Living Child Reaches Specified Age

5. On the death of my _____ [husband or wife], if my youngest living child has not then reached the age of _____ [same age set forth above, e.g.: 24 years], the Trustee shall hold, administer, and distribute all the rest and residue of the trust estate (excepting any part of the trust estate then being held for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father] under the terms of Paragraph 4 of this trust) as follows:

(a) The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of each of my children then living who are under the age of _____ [same age set forth above, e.g.: 24 years], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, so much of the net income and so much of the principal of the trust estate, up to the whole thereof, as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems advisable for the proper care, support, maintenance, and education of each such child. No child who has attained the age of _____ [same age set forth above, e.g.: 24 years] shall receive any of the aforesaid payments from the trust estate.

(b) The Trustee may pay more to or apply more for some children than others and may omit some beneficiaries entirely.

(c) The Trustee shall accumulate and add to the principal of the trust any net income of the trust not paid out in accordance with the discretion conferred on the Trustee.

(d) Payments or distributions made by the Trustee from trust principal as authorized by the terms of this will shall not subsequently be deducted from or otherwise reduce or impair the value of the property to which the recipient of the payments shall be entitled on any distribution or termination of the trust.

(e) In exercising the Trustee's discretion to make payments of income of principal to any child of mine, the Trustee shall take into consideration any income or resources available to the child from sources outside of the trust that may be known to the Trustee. The Trustee may accept as final and conclusive the written statement of the child receiving payment as to other available income or resources. The determination of the Trustee with respect to the advisability of making payments out of income or principal to any of my children shall be conclusive on all persons interested in the trust.

(f) When my youngest child then living reaches the age of _____ [same age set forth previously, e.g.: 24 years], the Trustee shall immediately distribute all of the trust estate then remaining in equal shares to my children living at the time of distribution. If any child of mine not living at the time of distribution leaves issue then surviving, an equal share of the trust estate shall be distributed to the then-living issue of that child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Distribution if Spouse Dies After Youngest Living Child Reaches Specified Age

6. If my _____ [husband or wife] dies after my youngest living child reaches the age of _____ [same age set forth above, e.g.: 24 years], all the rest and remainder of the trust estate (excepting any share of the trust estate then being held for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father] under the terms of Paragraph 4 of this trust) shall, upon my _____ [husband's or wife's] death, _____ [specify distribution plan, e.g.: be distributed in equal shares to my children living at the time of distribution]. If any child of mine not living at the time of distribution leaves issue then surviving, an equal share shall be distributed to the then-living issue of that child _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Definitions

7. As used in this will:

(a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.

(b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.

(c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to the trust provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of that trust.

(d) The term "education" includes _____ [college, but not postgraduate, or both college and postgraduate] study at any accredited institution of the beneficiary's choice and for any period of time that the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advantageous to the beneficiary concerned. The Trustee shall, within reasonable limits, provide adequate amounts for all living and travel expenses of the beneficiary in connection with all such education.

Maximum Duration of Trust

8. Any trust created by this will shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Occupation of Real Property

9. If any real property that _____ [name of beneficiary] occupies as _____ [his or her] home at the time of my death is, after my death, distributed to the Trustee and forms a part of the trust estate, the Trustee is authorized and directed to allow _____ [name of beneficiary] to continue to use and occupy the same as _____ [his or her] home, without the payment of any rent or other cost, expense, or charge, and for as long as _____ [he or she] wishes to reside there. During such time as the home is occupied by _____ [name of beneficiary], the Trustee shall pay all taxes, assessments, insurance, and maintenance costs, and all costs of ordinary and reasonable repairs, replacements, and improvements for the home, with payments for these costs to be made out of the principal or income of the trust, as the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, determine. With the written consent of _____ [name of beneficiary], or at such time as _____ [name of beneficiary] shall cease permanently to occupy that real property as _____ [his or her] home, the Trustee may sell the home, and, on the written request of _____ [name of beneficiary], the sale proceeds shall be used by the Trustee to purchase, acquire, or build a substantially similar home, or if _____ [name of beneficiary] wishes, a home of lesser value, taking title in the name of the Trustee and allowing _____ [name of beneficiary] to occupy and use it on the same terms and conditions set forth above with respect to the home that _____ [name of beneficiary] may occupy as _____ [his or her] home at the time of my death. If _____ [name of beneficiary] does not request the acquisition or construction of another home, the Trustee shall invest the proceeds of any such sale and shall hold, administer, and distribute the income and principal of those proceeds under the terms of this will, exclusive of this paragraph.

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

10. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, an incompetent person, a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, healthcare, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any good faith decision by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Accrued or Undistributed Payments

11. On the termination of the right of any beneficiary to receive payments from net income or principal under any trust provided for in this will, all such payments accrued or undistributed by the Trustee at the date of termination shall be distributed to the beneficiary next entitled to the successive interest by the terms of this will.

Notice to Trustee

12. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

13. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate, or from any of the separate trusts provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

14. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income thereof, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

A. Complete Provisions for Payment and Distribution of Income and Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.207

§ 64.207 Trust for Testator's Parents With Payments Equivalent to Specified Percentage of Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a trust that will provide for the support of the testator's mother or father. For a form creating a trust that will provide for the support of the testator's spouse and a parent of the testator, see § 64.206.

[b] Drafting Considerations

The payments that will be made to the testator's parent from the trust may be measured in various ways. For example, they may be specified as a percentage of the trust estate. Such a provision may be appropriate if the testator has reason to believe that the value of the trust estate will increase in the future and wishes the payments to his or her parent to increase correspondingly. This plan may be suitable if payments the testator has been making to the parent have increased in the past and the testator expects that the parent's needs will increase in the future. A provision stating the payments as a percentage of the estate probably will not be appropriate, however, if the estate is small or if its value is expected to decline in the future. Under those circumstances, payments expressed as a percentage of the principal will decline as the principal declines, and may eventually become inadequate to meet the parent's needs.

If preferred, the payments may be stated as a fixed dollar amount, or as all of the net income of the trust. Alternatively, the trustee may be given discretion to fix the amount of the payments and to draw upon income or principal to satisfy them. For a form setting the amount of payments in a fixed dollar amount, see § 64.260. For a form directing the trustee to pay the net income of the trust to the parent, see § 64.207. For a form directing the trustee to make fixed, periodic payments out of income or principal, see § 64.260.

For rules and drafting considerations relating to survivorship clauses, see discussion in § 64.200[1][j]. For a consideration of spendthrift clauses and circumstances under which such clauses may be appropriate or inappropriate, see discussion in § 64.41[1] et seq.

[2] FORM*Trust for Testator's Parents With Payments Equivalent to Specified Percentage of Principal*Trust

If my _____ [mother or father], _____ [name] survives me [add, if desired, appropriate survivorship period, e.g.: for six months], I give _____ [describe property to be placed in trust] to _____ [name of trustee, or, if trustee is appointed elsewhere in will: the Trustee named in Paragraph _____ of this will], or to the successor trustee or trustees named below, in trust, to be held, administered, and distributed in accordance with the following provisions:

A. PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND PRINCIPAL*During Lifetime of Parent

1. The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of my _____ [mother or father], during _____ [his or her] lifetime, _____ [specify amount of payment, e.g.: an annual sum equal to _____ (e.g.: 5) percent of the value of the principal of the trust estate determined as of the first day of the calendar year]. This sum shall be paid in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, and from the net income of the trust estate, or, if the net income should be insufficient, from the net income and principal of the trust estate. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

On Death of Parent

2. On the death of my _____ [mother or father], the Trustee shall distribute the trust estate _____ [specify disposition, e.g.: in equal shares to my children then living; however, if any child of mine not then living leaves issue then living, an equal share shall be distributed to the then-living issue of that child _____ (in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation)].

Definitions

3. As used in this will:

- (a) The terms "child" and "children" and "grandchild" and "grandchildren" include adopted children and any children who may hereafter be born.
- (b) The term "issue" means lawful issue and includes legally adopted children.
- (c) Unless the context requires otherwise, the term "trust" refers to the trust provided for herein, and the term "trust estate" refers to the estate of that trust.

Maximum Duration of Trust

4. Any trust created by this will, or by the exercise of any power of appointment conferred by this will, shall, if not terminated sooner, terminate 21 years after the death of the last survivor of those of my issue who are living at the time of my death. The principal and undistributed income of any trust terminated under this clause shall be distributed to the income beneficiaries of that trust in the same proportion that they are entitled to income immediately before termination. If that proportion is not fixed by the terms of this will, distribution shall be to the income beneficiaries of that trust who are then living and to the then-living issue of income beneficiaries of that trust who are deceased but who leave issue then living, _____ [in the manner provided in Section _____ (240 or 246 or 247) of the California Probate Code or in equal shares, share and share alike, irrespective of whether or not all such issue are members of the same generation].

Payments on Behalf of Beneficiary

5. If, at any time, any beneficiary entitled to receive income or principal from the trust estate is a minor, an incompetent person, a person for whose person or estate a guardian or conservator has been appointed, or is, in the judgment of the Trustee, unable to handle funds properly or wisely, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, make or apply payments or distributions from any trust provided for in this will in one or more of the following ways:

- (a) Directly to the beneficiary;
- (b) To the natural guardian or legally appointed guardian or conservator of the person or estate of the beneficiary; or
- (c) To any provider of support, maintenance, care, health care, or education of or for the beneficiary.

In making any payments or distributions under this clause, the Trustee shall not be required to see to the application of any funds paid or applied in any of the aforementioned ways, and receipt by the payee shall fully discharge the Trustee. Any good faith decision by the Trustee as to which of the aforementioned methods should be used in making payments shall be conclusive and binding on all parties concerned.

Trustee Not Liable Absent Notice

6. Until the Trustee receives written notice of any birth, death, marriage, or other event on which a right to receive payments or distributions from the trust estate may depend, the Trustee shall incur no liability to any person whose interests may have been affected by that event for disbursements or distributions previously made in good faith.

Discretion to Withhold Disputed Payments

7. If, at any time, there are conflicting claims as to the person or persons entitled to any payment or distribution from the trust estate or from any part of the trust estate, the Trustee may, in the Trustee's discretion, withhold all or part of any disputed payment or distribution until entitlement to the payment or distribution has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction; and, in doing so, the Trustee shall incur no obligation to pay interest on any disputed payment or distribution withheld in good faith.

Spendthrift Clause

8. No income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary shall have any right, power, or authority to sell, transfer, assign, pledge, mortgage, alienate, hypothecate, encumber, or otherwise impair all or any part of his or her interest in the trust estate or in the principal or income thereof, directly or indirectly, or in any manner whatsoever. To the fullest extent allowed by the law, the interest of each and every income beneficiary and remainder beneficiary shall be free from claims, control, or any other interference on the part of his or her creditors, and shall be free from attachment, execution, bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal process. The Trustee shall pay, disburse, and distribute principal and income only in the manner provided for in this will, and not on any attempted transfer or assignment by any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary, or by operation of law.

§ 64.220 Payment of All Net Income for Limited Period

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to pay all of the net income of the trust estate to a designated beneficiary for a specified period of time. The period of time may be stated in various ways: as a term of years, until a specified date, or, more usually, until the beneficiary reaches a specified age. The trust may provide that all or a part of the principal of the trust estate will be distributed to the beneficiary when the income payments terminate.

For a will provision directing the trustee to pay all of the net income of the trust to a designated beneficiary for life, see § 64.221. For a discussion of alternative trust provisions requiring a trustee to pay income to one or more beneficiaries for a specified period of time, see § 64.220[1][c].

[b] Income and Principal

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] prescribes rules for allocating receipts to principal or income. Under the Act, "income" means money or property received by a fiduciary as a current return from a principal asset. It also includes a portion of receipts from a sale, exchange, or liquidation of certain principal assets [Prob. Code § 16324]. "Net income" means the total receipts allocated to income during an accounting period minus the disbursements made from income during the accounting period, plus or minus transfers under this chapter to or from income during the accounting period [Prob. Code § 16328]. The current version of the Uniform Principal and Income Act does not expressly define the term "principal."

A trustee must administer a trust in accordance with the terms of the trust, even if the terms of the trust contradict provisions of the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. A trustee may administer a trust in accordance with a discretionary power given by the trust, even if this produces a result contrary to a result required or permitted by the Act [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(2)]. A trustee must administer the trust in accordance with the terms of the Act if the trust does not include a different provision or does not grant the trustee a discretionary power of administration [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(3)]. In exercising a discretionary power of administration, whether granted by a trust or the Act, the trustee must administer the trust impartially, except when the trust expresses an intention that the fiduciary favor one or more of the beneficiaries. The exercise of discretion in accordance with the Act is presumed to be fair and reasonable to all beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16335(b)].

For detailed discussion of the Uniform Principal and Income Act, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions.

[c] Drafting Alternatives

A direction to pay the entire net income of the trust to a designated beneficiary is a common trust provision, particularly when the trust will have only one income beneficiary, such as the testator's spouse or child. If there is more than one income beneficiary, it is more common to divide the estate into separate trusts or trust shares or to grant the trustee discretion to distribute ("sprinkle") income and principal among the beneficiaries. For a will provision creating a separate trust for each of the testator's children, see § 64.200. For a provision authorizing the trustee to pay a part of the net income to a designated beneficiary, see § 64.222. For a provision authorizing the trustee to pay all of the net income to a class of beneficiaries, see § 64.223. For a provision granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary, see § 64.224. For a provision creating a single (or family pot) trust and authorizing the trustee to "sprinkle" income and principal among the testator's children, see § 64.201. For a "sprinkling" trust that authorizes discretionary payments of income among several beneficiaries, see § 64.225.

[d] Reserves and Frequency of Payments

It is the usual practice to pay the income beneficiary in monthly installments. Since the net income of the trust cannot be finally determined until all of the year's expenses have been computed, some provision must be made for withholding income to meet expenses. Most banks that act as trustees set up a reserve for regularly recurring charges against income (e.g., attorneys' fees and trustee's compensation), which are customarily paid once a year and, in some cases, every two or three years.

Monthly payments may be impractical if the trust consists of assets that produce income on an irregular basis. Further, beneficiaries who do not depend upon payments from the trust for their entire support may prefer to receive payments at other intervals, e.g., quarterly or semi-annually. For this reason, it is good practice to authorize, but not to require, the trustee to make monthly payments.

§ 64.221 Payment of All Net Income for Life

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to pay all of the net income of the trust estate to a designated beneficiary for the beneficiary's lifetime. For a provision directing the trustee to pay all of the net income to a designated beneficiary for a specified period of time, see § 64.220. For a provision directing the trustee to pay part of the net income to a designated beneficiary, see § 64.222. For a provision directing the trustee to pay all of the net income to members of a class, see § 64.223. For a provision granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary, see § 64.224.

[b] Trustee's Duty to Determine and Pay Net Income

Under this provision, the trustee's duty is to determine and pay all the net income except the amount necessary to meet reasonably anticipated expenses chargeable against income [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 182 cmt. b]. The trustee's determination of what is income and what is principal will be determined by other provisions of the trust or, in default of other provisions, by the terms of the Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16300-16375; see also Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions ].

Since the net income of a trust cannot be finally determined until all of the year's expenses have been computed, some provision must be made for withholding income to meet expenses. For a consideration of reserves for expenses and the frequency with which payments of net income should be made to the beneficiary, see discussion in § 64.220[1][d].

For a detailed discussion of the Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.31[1] et seq. For will provisions governing the determination by the trustee of principal and income, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions § 64B.200 et seq.

 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Payments out of Income

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.222

§ 64.222 Payment of Part of Net Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to pay a part of the net income to a designated beneficiary. The part may be expressed as a fraction or as a percentage of the net income. The form further authorizes the trustee to accumulate the net income not paid to the beneficiary and add it to the trust principal. For a general discussion of accumulations and the tax consequences of directions to accumulate, see § 64.42[1] et seq.

For a provision directing the trustee to pay all of the net income to a designated beneficiary, see § 64.220. For a provision authorizing the trustee to pay all of the net income to a class of beneficiaries, see § 64.223. For a provision granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary, see § 64.224. For a "sprinkling" trust that authorizes discretionary payments of income among a class of beneficiaries, see § 64.225.

[b] Tax Caution

This provision should not be used if the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a life estate with power of appointment trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 1056(b)(7)]. An interest in a lifetime income/power of appointment trust will qualify for the marital deduction only if the surviving spouse is entitled to all of the income from the entire interest or all or the income from a "specific portion" of the interest [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. "Specific portion" means a portion determined on a fractional or percentage basis [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(10); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(c) (meaning of "specific portion")]. A substantially similar rule applies to QTIP trusts [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(b)(1)(ii)]. For a more detailed discussion of the income requirements applicable to these trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Payments out of Income

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.223

§ 64.223 Payment of All Net Income to Class of Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to pay all of the income of the trust in equal shares to members of a designated class. For a will provision making an outright gift to members of a class, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.551.

[b] Class Gifts

[i] In General

A class gift is a gift to a group of persons who are uncertain in number at the time the gift is made but who will be determined at some future time and who are to take in equal or other definite proportions [ Estate of Moore (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 122, 135, 286 P.2d 939 ]. A class gift (outright or in trust) may be useful if the testator wishes the group of persons who will enjoy the gift to increase or decrease in number by reason of the birth or death of additional members. Class gifts are frequently characterized by the use of terms such as "my children," "my grandchildren," or "my brothers and sisters."

For further consideration of class gifts, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.551[1][b][i] et seq.

[ii] Statutory Rules

The general rule is that halfbloods, adopted persons, persons born out of wedlock, stepchildren, foster children, and the issue of all such persons, when appropriate to the class, are included within the terms of a class gift [Prob. Code § 21115(a)]. However, the general rule is subject to important qualifications relating to certain natural and adopted children [see Prob. Code § 21115(b)]. For a discussion of these qualifications, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.226[1].

[iii] Drafting Considerations

A testator who intends to make a class gift should not identify members of the class by name. Such an identification will raise an inference that the identified individuals (and only those individuals) are intended to take [ Estate of Murphy (1909) 157 Cal. 63, 67, 106 P. 230 ; Estate of Moore (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 122, 134-137, 286 P.2d 939 ]. If words that, standing alone, would be effective to create a class are followed by equally operative words of devise to devisees by name and in definite proportions, the law infers from the designation by name and shares that the devisees are to take individually and that the descriptive portion of the class is intended merely as a means of identifying the individual devisees [ Estate of Moore (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 122, 136-137, 286 P.2d 939] . Similarly, when the will numbers the persons who will take (e.g., "my three children" or "the four children of my late sister, Jane Smith"), an inference arises that the children were intended to take individually rather than as members of a class [ Estate of Murphy (1909) 157 Cal. 63, 64, 67, 106 P. 230] .

When drafting a class gift, the attorney should clearly define and specify all of the following:

- The members of the class.
- The time when membership in the class will be ascertained.
- The proportions or shares that will be taken by members of the class.

If such words as "children," "grandchildren," "issue," or "heirs" are used to define the class, the drafter should precisely determine and clearly explain to the testator the persons who will be included within the definition. The time when membership in the class will be determined may be the date of execution of the will, the date of the testator's death, or any other readily ascertainable event or date. When a will or trust provides for issue or descendants to take property, the manner of distribution and the shares that each distributee are entitled to take will vary according to the language used. The Probate Code provides for three basic patterns of distribution:

- Distribution in the manner provided for in cases of intestacy [Prob. Code §§ 240, 245].
- Distribution "per stirpes" or by representation [Prob. Code § 246].
- Distribution "per capita at each generation" [Prob. Code § 247].

Case law provides for a fourth pattern of distribution, which is distribution "per capita" [see Lombardi v. Blois (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 191, 198, 40 Cal. Rptr. 899 ]. For a discussion of these patterns of distribution, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[6].

[c] Alternatives to Class Gifts

A result similar or nearly identical to that of a class gift may, in appropriate circumstances, be achieved by other means. For example, the testator may create separate trusts for each named member of a particular class. Alternatively, the will may create a "family pot" trust for the benefit of named members of the testator's family, such as children or grandchildren, and authorize the trustee to distribute ("sprinkle") income and principal among the beneficiaries. For a will provision creating a separate trust for each of the testator's children, see § 64.200. For a will provision creating a single (or family pot) trust and authorizing the trustee to "sprinkle" income and principal among the testator's children, see § 64.201. For a will provision creating a family pot trust for the benefit of the surviving spouse and children of the testator, see § 64.203.

[d] Class Gifts and the Rule Against Perpetuities

A gift to a class, whether outright or in trust, has the potential for violating the rule against perpetuities. The California rules governing perpetuities are contained in the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231], which includes a recodification of the old common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Under that recodification, a nonvested property interest is invalid unless, when the interest is created, it is certain to either vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of the person alive at the time of creation [Prob. Code § 21205(a)]. If the right of any person to membership in a particular class cannot be determined within 21 years after the death of a person alive when the testator dies, then the class gift might fail to either vest or terminate within the 21-year period of the common law rule against perpetuities.

However, the USRAP also includes a 90-year "wait and see" rule, under which a nonvested interest that violates the common law rule against perpetuities may nevertheless be valid if it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205(b); see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16[6]]. The 90-year wait-and-see rule shifts the perpetuities focus from the traditional consideration of what might conceivably happen to what actually happens to the interest in the 90 years after it is created.

The 90-year wait-and-see rule substantially liberalizes perpetuities regulation in California, and allows will drafters a measure of latitude in drafting dispositions that might possibly exceed the period of the rule. However, the liberalized rule still does not entirely eliminate the need for recognizing potential perpetuities violations and taking reasonable steps to avoid them. First, any disposition that has the potential of violating the common law rule against perpetuities (as recodified in the USRAP) should be drafted so as to avoid any obvious violation. In the case of a class gift, this can be done by carefully defining membership in the class and avoiding the possibility that any person could claim membership in the class more than 21 years after the death of some person alive when the gift is made (when a gift is made by will, whether outright or in trust, the gift is made at the time of the testator's death). Second, any will that creates a trust, makes a class gift, or otherwise calls for a complex disposition of property should include a perpetuities savings clause. For perpetuities savings clauses suitable for wills, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, §§ 67.231, 67.232. For a detailed discussion of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16

§ 64.224 Discretionary Payment of Income to One Beneficiary

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary.

For a will provision creating a single (or family pot) trust and authorizing the trustee to "sprinkle" income and principal among the testator's children, see § 64.201.

[b] Tax Caution

This form should not be used in a trust intended to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a life estate plus power of appointment or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, as the right of the surviving spouse to the income of such a trust must be unqualified [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)]. If the trustee has power to grant or withhold income from the surviving spouse, then the right to income is not unqualified and the trust will not qualify for the marital deduction. For discussion of the "terminable interest" rule and the limitations it places on income payments from marital deduction trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.10[4].

[c] Discretion of Trustee

This form grants the trustee simple discretion to determine the amount of the income of the trust that will be paid to the beneficiary. Unless the trust instrument provides that the trustee's discretion is to be "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" [see Prob. Code § 16081], a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is not left to the trustee's arbitrary discretion, but must be exercised reasonably [Prob. Code § 16080]. Even if a trust instrument confers "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion on a trustee, the trustee has a duty to act in accordance with fiduciary principles and not to act in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081]. A grant of "absolute" discretion to a trustee means simply that the judgment of the trustee, if exercised in good faith, will control, but it will not excuse bad faith or failure to exercise any judgment at all [ Copley v. Copley (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 284, 178 Cal. Rptr. 842 ]. In every case, whether the discretionary power conferred on the trustee is narrow or broad, it is subject to judicial review [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(5)]. For further discussion of trustee discretion, see discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.39[8].

[d] Guidelines for Exercise of Discretion

The will may direct the trustee, in exercising its discretion to determine the amount of income to pay to a beneficiary, to consider other income or resources available to the beneficiary. This is one of many possible guidelines that the trust instrument may lay down for exercise of the trustee's discretion. Alternatively, the trust instrument may direct the trustee to consider such factors as the relative tax consequences to the beneficiary and the trust of a distribution of income, the beneficiary's accustomed standard of living, or the amount necessary for the comfortable support of the beneficiary. The instrument may further direct the trustee to consider specific needs of the beneficiary, such as medical care, custodial care, or education expenses. If the testator prefers, the trustee's discretion may be made unlimited, with the trustee free to consider any factors the trustee considers relevant. Any standard or directions that will guide the trustee in exercising its discretion granted may be employed. The attorney should determine the testator's precise intentions in this regard and draft the provision accordingly.

For a general consideration of the advantages and disadvantages of requiring the trustee to consider a beneficiary's income or resources outside the trust, see discussion in § 64.200[1][f].

 PART IV. FORMS
 B. Payments out of Income

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.225

§ 64.225 Power to "Sprinkle" Trust Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the trustee discretion to distribute ("sprinkle") trust income among several beneficiaries.

For a will provision creating a "family pot" trust and authorizing the trustee to sprinkle income and principal among the testator's children, see § 64.201. For a will provision granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary, see § 64.224. For a will provision granting the trustee discretion to "sprinkle" trust principal among several beneficiaries, see § 64.244.

[b] Discretion of Trustee

This form grants the trustee simple discretion to determine the amount of the trust income that will be paid to the beneficiaries, and what proportions each beneficiary will receive. Unless the trust instrument confers "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion on the trustee [see Prob. Code § 16081], the trustee's discretion must be exercised reasonably [Prob. Code § 16080]. For additional discussion, see § 64.224[1][c]; see also Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.39[8] and 64A.340[1].

[c] "Sprinkling" Trusts

[i] In General

Granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to two or more beneficiaries, and the proportions in which those beneficiaries will receive the income, may permit the trustee to respond to the particular needs of the beneficiaries. The needs may be purely economic (i.e., for larger payments), or they may be based partly on economic and partly on tax considerations. Beneficiaries with income from sources outside the trust will presumably be in higher marginal tax brackets than those without such income and will pay a correspondingly higher percentage of the income in taxes. A trustee who sprinkles income among beneficiaries, making higher payments to beneficiaries with no other income and lower payments to those with outside income, may thus effect substantial tax savings.

[ii] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Considerations

The power to sprinkle income, principal, or both principal and income may have generation-skipping transfer tax implications [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663]. Distributions of principal or income to a beneficiary assigned to a generation two or more generations below that of the transferor is subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611-2613; but see I.R.C. § 2651(e)]. For a general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see § 64.40 et seq. For a general discussion of sprinkling powers and their tax consequences, see § 64.201[1][c], [d][ii].

Payment of Income

As long as any of _____ [the group consisting of _____ (names of income beneficiaries); or describe class, e.g.: my children] are living, the Trustee shall, from time to time, pay to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of them so much of the net income of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems necessary for their _____ [specify purpose or purposes of income payments, e.g.: support, health, and education]. In making these payments, the Trustee may pay more to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others, and may make payments to or applications of benefits for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others. [If desired, add guideline for exercise of trustee's discretion, e.g.: In exercising the discretion conferred by this paragraph, the Trustee _____ (shall or shall not) consider any other income or resources reasonably available to _____ (him or her) and known to the Trustee.] The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

§ 64.240 Payment of Fixed Amount for Life

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a designated beneficiary out of trust principal for the beneficiary's life. This provision will typically be used when the will also requires the trustee to pay all of the net income to the same beneficiary. It is designed to assure the beneficiary of a fixed minimum income and may be useful if the testator fears that the income alone will not be sufficient to meet the beneficiary's needs.

[b] Payments out of Principal

[i] In General

Distributions from the principal of the trust estate may be appropriate if the net income is not sufficient to meet all the needs of the income beneficiaries. However, clear authority for such distributions must be included in the will. A trust provision authorizing the trustee to pay the net income to an income beneficiary does not authorize the trustee to make any payments to that beneficiary out of principal [ Estate of Van Deusen (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 285, 294, 182 P.2d 565 ].

The testator should clearly understand that payments out of principal will ordinarily reduce the value of the trust corpus and, by so doing, diminish the value of the interests of the remainder beneficiaries. For this reason, the power to make payments out of principal may be a source of conflict between the remainder beneficiaries and the trustee or income beneficiaries. Generally, the larger the estate, the larger the principal payments that may safely be made out of it; and the smaller the trust estate, the more rapidly it will be exhausted by invasions. The testator should authorize invasions of principal only when he or she clearly intends to favor the income beneficiaries at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries. Any provision authorizing invasions of principal should be carefully drafted so as to minimize conflicts over the extent of the power or the circumstances under which it may be exercised.

In appropriate circumstances, an express statement of the testator's intention to favor the income beneficiaries over the remainder beneficiaries, or to favor one income beneficiary over another income beneficiary, may help to guide the trustee and the courts in interpreting a power of invasion. For a provision stating the testator's intention to favor the income beneficiaries over the remainder beneficiaries, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.230. For a provision stating the testator's intention to favor the remainder beneficiaries over the income beneficiaries, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.231.

[ii] Contrasted With Annuities Payable out of Estate

The payments provided for by this form are to be contrasted with annuities that are payable out of the general assets of the testator's estate. An annuity is defined in the Probate Code as a specific sum to be paid periodically [Prob. Code § 662(c)]. If the fund out of which an annuity is payable fails, in whole or in part, resort may be had to the general assets of the estate to pay it [Prob. Code § 662(c)]. An annuity may be made payable out of a specific fund, such as a trust or the income from a trust. In such a case, the payments will continue only as long as the fund is adequate; if the fund fails, so will the payments [ Estate of Markham (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 69, 73-74, 168 P.2d 669 .

Annuities that are made payable out of the general assets of the decedent's estate will prolong the administration of the estate. It is almost always preferable to provide that a fixed periodic payment be made from a trust, or to direct the executor or the trustee to purchase a commercial annuity that will guarantee payments to the recipient. For a general discussion of annuities, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.508[1][b]. For will provisions creating annuities, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.508-63.510.

[c] Drafting Alternatives

There are other ways in which beneficiaries may be given the right to receive fixed periodic payments. If the testator's primary concern is to guarantee that a beneficiary will receive a certain minimum income regardless of fluctuations in the trust income, the will may direct the trustee to make principal payments only to the extent that the trust does not produce a certain level of income. Another method is to direct the trustee to pay the beneficiary a certain percentage of the trust corpus. For a form directing the trustee to pay the beneficiary a percentage of the corpus, see § 64.242. For a form requiring the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a designated beneficiary out of income, to the extent that the income is adequate for the purpose, and out of principal to the extent that the income is not adequate, see § 64.260. For a form requiring the trustee to pay all of the net income to the beneficiary, and such additional amounts out of principal as will guarantee the beneficiary a fixed periodic income when added to the income payments, see § 64.261.

Alternatively, the beneficiary may be granted the right to demand payments out of trust principal. However, a beneficiary who is given an unlimited right to invade principal may consume the principal more rapidly than the testator would wish. Directing the trustee to make fixed payments of principal to the beneficiary will limit the amounts of principal that the beneficiary may withdraw in a given period. Further, the grant of an unlimited power of invasion may result in adverse federal estate tax consequences. If not limited by an "ascertainable standard," a power of invasion will be deemed a general power of appointment and the assets subject to the power will be included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1); see Prob. Code § 611(a) (general power of appointment defined)]. For a consideration of powers of invasion and their estate tax consequences, see discussion in § 64.300[1][b]. For a will provision granting a beneficiary an unlimited power of invasion, see § 64.300. For a will provision granting a beneficiary a power of invasion limited by an "ascertainable standard," see § 64.301.

[d] Cost-of-Living Adjustments

If the purpose of a provision directing the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a beneficiary is to guarantee the beneficiary a certain level of income, that purpose may be defeated by the eroding effects of inflation. For this reason, it may be advisable to include language requiring the trustee to adjust the amount payable to reflect changes in one or more of the consumer price indexes published at regular intervals by the United States Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics publishes two consumer price indexes that reflect national trends in price changes. The Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U) reflects the buying habits of about 80 percent of the noninstitutional, civilian population of the United States. The revised Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (revised CPI-W) covers about half the population covered by the CPI-U. In addition, regional indexes are published to show price changes in 85 urban areas in the United States. In California, Class A regional indexes are published for the Los Angeles-Long Beach-Anaheim, San Francisco-Oakland, and San Diego areas. Class B and Class C indexes are published for San Jose, San Bernardino, Fresno, Salinas, and Bakersfield.

The testator should understand, however, that cost-of-living adjustments in times of inflation will cause the trust principal to be depleted, and the value of the remainder to decline more rapidly, than would otherwise be the case. Before including any cost-of-living adjustment in the will, the testator should decide if the additional protection a provision requiring adjustments will give the beneficiary will outweigh the additional loss that the provision may be expected to cause to the remainder beneficiaries.

§ 64.241 Payment of Fixed Amount to Spouse Until Child Reaches Certain Age

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to make fixed payments to the surviving spouse until a designated child of the testator reaches a certain age, at which time the payments to the spouse will be reduced. The decrease in the amount of the payments is predicated on the assumption that the spouse's needs will be reduced when the child's education is finished or the child is otherwise ready to assume responsibility for his or her own support.

This form may be modified to provide that nothing will be paid out of principal after the child reaches a certain age. If desired, an inflation adjustment provision may be added. For a discussion of circumstances under which inflation adjustment provisions may be desirable, see discussion in § 64.240[1][d].

§ 64.242 Payment of Percentage of Corpus

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to direct the trustee to pay a fixed percentage of the trust corpus at specified intervals to a designated beneficiary. Such a provision is normally included in the will only if the trustee is also directed to pay all of the net income to the beneficiary. For a form directing the trustee to pay all of the net income from the trust to a designated beneficiary, see § 64.221.

[b] Advantages of Percentage Payments

A provision requiring the trustee to pay a percentage of the trust corpus to a beneficiary may be desirable for the same reasons as a provision requiring the trustee to make fixed payments out of corpus. Such a provision will help to insure that the beneficiary will receive an income adequate to his or her needs regardless of fluctuations in the trust income and whether or not the trust income is sufficient to meet those needs. Other provisions that may be used to guarantee a beneficiary a certain level of income are provisions directing the trustee to pay the beneficiary a fixed periodic amount, with or without adjustments for inflation. For a form directing the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a beneficiary out of trust principal for the beneficiary's life, see § 64.240. For a provision directing the trustee to pay the beneficiary a fixed amount until a designated child reaches a certain age, see § 64.241.

A provision requiring the trustee to pay the beneficiary a percentage of the trust estate may help to insure that the beneficiary's income will be adequate to meet all of the beneficiary's needs. Such a provision will be particularly suitable if the trust assets are expected to appreciate on a regular basis, so that payments to the beneficiary will not deplete or exhaust the corpus. If the trust assets appreciate, the provision will have the further virtue of automatically increasing the amount of the payments. Such increases will, in many cases, parallel increases in the Consumer Price Index or in some other appropriate index of price fluctuations.

It should be remembered, however, that the amount of the payments will decrease if the value of the trust corpus decreases. For this reason, a payment formula based on a percentage of the corpus should not be adopted if the beneficiary's needs for a fixed income is definite and the testator is not reasonably certain that the corpus will appreciate.

For a consideration of fixed payments and adjustments for inflation, see discussion in § 64.240[1][d].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Payments out of Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.243

§ 64.243 Payment of All of Net Income for Life With Discretionary Payments of Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to pay all of the net income to a designated beneficiary for life, and to grant the trustee discretion to make additional payments of principal to the same beneficiary. A provision of this type should be included in the will if the testator is concerned that the income of the trust may be insufficient to provide adequately for the beneficiary and wishes the beneficiary to receive payments out of principal only when there is a real need for them. Since principal payments will ordinarily be made to a beneficiary only when all of the net income is also paid to that beneficiary, the provision includes a direction requiring the trustee to pay all of the net income to the beneficiary. If the testator wishes the income to be paid to another beneficiary, however, the form may be appropriately modified.

Although this trust provides that the trustee will receive payments of income and principal for life, it may be modified to require payments only for a designated period of time, which may be measured by a number of years or by a specified birthday, either of the beneficiary or another person (e.g., a child of the testator or beneficiary). For a provision directing the trustee to pay all of the net income to a designated beneficiary for a specified period of time, see § 64.220.

[b] Defining Trustee's Discretion

[i] In General

A provision granting the trustee discretion to make principal payments to an income beneficiary will ordinarily have the effect of diminishing the principal and reducing the value of the remainder. For this reason, such a provision may open the door to controversy between the remainder beneficiaries and the trustee, or between the beneficiary and the trustee. Except in unusual cases (such as when the corpus is expected to appreciate in an amount equal to or greater than the expected invasions of principal), the testator should authorize invasions of principal only when he or she clearly intends to favor the income beneficiaries at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries. Furthermore, the extent of the trustee's discretion should be carefully defined in order to minimize controversies among the beneficiaries and remaindermen and clearly guide the trustee in exercising the discretion. Any power to invade principal must be interpreted in accordance with the testator's intent as revealed in the trust instrument [ Estate of Stober (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 591, 596-597, 166 Cal. Rptr. 628; Estate of Patten (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 167, 171, 31 Cal. Rptr. 767 ].

[ii] Considering Outside Income or Resources

Among other things, the testator may direct the trustee to consider (or not to consider) any income or other resources that the beneficiary may have outside the trust. Unless the will provides otherwise, the trustee will ordinarily be required to consider outside means when making discretionary payments [ Estate of Ferrall (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 166, 176, 258 P.2d 1009 ]. For a consideration of means outside the trust and whether the trustee should be required to consider those means when making discretionary payments out of income or principal, see discussion in § 64.200[1][f]§ 64.200.

[iii] Whether Income Beneficiary or Remainder Beneficiary Is to Be Favored

A statement of the testator's intentions to favor the income beneficiary over the remainder beneficiaries (or vice versa) may help the trustee and the courts to interpret a provision of the will that is not otherwise clear and unambiguous. The intention of the testator as expressed in the will must control the legal effect of the dispositions made in the will [Prob. Code § 6140(a)]. In analyzing the terms of a trust created by a will, the court's function is to ascertain the general scheme of the testator as expressed in the will and to give effect to its scope and purpose as manifested in the will's language [ County National Bank etc. Co. v. Sheppard (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 205, 215, 288 P.2d 880; see Getty v. Getty (1972) 28 Cal. app. 3d 996, 1004, 105 Cal. Rptr. 295 (intent of trustor of inter vivos trust will control allocations to principal or income)].

For a general consideration of declarations of the testator's intentions to favor income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries, see discussion in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.32. For a provision stating the testator's intention to favor income beneficiaries over remainder beneficiaries, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.230. For a provision stating the testator's intention to favor remainder beneficiaries over income beneficiaries, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.231.

[iv] Purposes of Discretion

The will should clearly state the purpose or purposes for which the discretion is to be exercised. A clause that clearly reflects the intent of the testator and realistically takes into account circumstances in which the beneficiaries may find themselves will do much to obviate controversies over the limits of the trustee's discretion. For a consideration of trustee discretion to invade principal and guidelines that may help the trustee to exercise the discretion in accordance with the testator's intentions, see § 64.240[1].

[v] Simple or Absolute

Unless the trust instrument provides that the trustee's discretion is to be "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled," a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is presumed not to be left to the arbitrary discretion of the trustee, but must be exercised reasonably [Prob. Code § 16080; see Prob. Code § 16081]. For further consideration of trustee discretion, see § 64.224[1][c]; see also Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.39[8] and 64A.340[1].

[2] FORM

Payment of All of Net Income for Life With Discretionary Payments of Principal

Payment of Income and Principal

The Trustee shall pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [name of beneficiary], in monthly or other convenient installments, but not less often than annually, all of the net income of the trust for _____ [his or her] lifetime. If the Trustee considers such payments insufficient for the _____ [specify purpose, e.g.: support, health, and education] of _____ [name of beneficiary], the Trustee shall, from time to time, pay to or apply for the benefit of _____ [name of beneficiary], out of the principal of the trust estate, such sums as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems necessary for the _____ [specify purpose, e.g.: support, health, and education] of _____ [name of beneficiary].

[If appropriate, add statement relating to outside means:]

In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments to _____ [name of beneficiary] out of the principal of the trust estate, the Trustee _____ [shall consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of _____ (name of beneficiary) or shall not consider any income or resources available to _____ (name of beneficiary) outside the trust].

[If desired, add statement of testator's intention to favor income beneficiary:]

In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments to _____ [name of beneficiary] out of the principal of the trust estate, the Trustee shall be mindful of the fact that my primary concern in establishing this trust is the welfare of _____ [name of beneficiary], and that it is my intention that the interests of others in the trust are to be subordinate to _____ [his or her] interest.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Payments out of Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.244

§ 64.244 Power to "Sprinkle" Trust Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the trustee discretion to distribute ("sprinkle") trust principal among several beneficiaries.

For a will provision creating a "family pot" trust and authorizing the trustee to sprinkle income and principal among the testator's children, see § 64.201. For a will provision granting the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income that will be paid to a single beneficiary, see § 64.224. For a will provision granting the trustee discretion to sprinkle trust income among several beneficiaries, see § 64.225.

[b] "Sprinkling" Trusts

[i] In General

The power to "sprinkle" income or principal among the beneficiaries of a trust may enable a trustee to respond in a more satisfactory manner to the particular needs of the beneficiaries. Those needs may be purely economic (i.e., one beneficiary may have greater needs than another, or the needs of one beneficiary may be greater at some times than at other times), or may be based partly on economic and partly on tax considerations.

First, a sprinkling power will enable the trustee to make higher payments to beneficiaries with greater needs and lower payments to beneficiaries with lesser needs. This will be important if the trust is designed to provide all (or a large part) of the beneficiaries' support and not merely to supplement their incomes. Second, an appropriately drafted sprinkling power may enable the trustee to distribute payments to the beneficiaries in a way that will minimize their respective tax liabilities. For a discussion of the income and generation-skipping transfer tax uses of sprinkling powers, see § 64.244[1][b][ii], [iii]. For a general discussion of sprinkling powers and their tax consequences, see § 64.201[1][c]-64.201[1][d][ii]; and § 64.40[1] et seq.

[ii] Possible Income Tax Advantages

In appropriate cases, the power to sprinkle income may be used to reduce the beneficiaries' income tax liabilities by making larger income payments to beneficiaries in lower income tax brackets and smaller payments to beneficiaries in higher tax brackets [for a provision granting the trustee discretion to sprinkle income among several beneficiaries, see § 64.225]. The power to sprinkle both income and principal may similarly be used to reduce the beneficiaries' potential income tax liabilities by making income payments to beneficiaries in lower income tax brackets and principal distributions to beneficiaries in higher brackets [for a provision granting the trustee discretion to sprinkle both income and principal, see P 1 of § 64.201].

The power to sprinkle principal only may be used to reduce the overall income tax liabilities of the beneficiaries by making principal payments to beneficiaries in higher income tax brackets. Principal payments ordinarily do not ordinarily subject either the trust or the beneficiaries to income tax liability. A trustee with the power to sprinkle principal may thus make principal distributions to a beneficiary in a high income tax bracket without subjecting that beneficiary to any additional income tax liability.

[iii] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Advantages and Disadvantages

The power to sprinkle income, principal, or both may have generation-skipping transfer tax implications [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2664]. (The generation-skipping transfer tax has been repealed, effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2264]. Until then, however, it remains in effect.). Distributions of principal or income to a beneficiary assigned to a generation that is two or more below the generation assignment of the transferor is subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611-2613; but see I.R.C. § 2651(e)]. However, the testator's GST exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2631(a), (c), 2010(c)] and discussion in § 60.16[3] may be used to offset the tax. For a general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see discussions in § 64.40[1] et seq. For a general discussion of sprinkling powers and their tax consequences, see §§ 64.201[1][c], [d][ii].

[c] Defining Trustee's Discretion

Any provision empowering a trustee to make discretionary payments out of income or principal should be drafted carefully so as to accurately reflect the testator's intentions and, to the extent possible, minimize potential conflicts among the income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries. Since any provision authorizing payments out of principal to an income beneficiary will ordinarily have the effect of reducing the value of the corpus and diminishing the interests of the remainder beneficiaries, it will be helpful to state the purposes of the payments so that potential challenges by remainder beneficiaries will be discouraged. Further provisions may help to clarify the testator's intentions with respect to the exercise of the discretion. The will may, for example, require (or forbid) the trustee to consider any income or resources the beneficiaries may have outside the trust. Additionally, it may include a statement of the testator's intentions to favor the income beneficiaries or the remainder beneficiaries. For a general review of provisions that may be included in any grant of discretion, see discussions in § 64.243[1].

[2] FORM*Power to "Sprinkle" Trust Principal*Payment of Principal

As long as any of _____ [the group consisting of _____ (names of income beneficiaries); or describe class, e.g.: my children] are living, the Trustee shall, from time to time, pay to or apply for the benefit of any one or more of them so much of the principal of the trust estate as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems necessary for their _____ [specify purpose or purposes of income payments, e.g.: support, health, and education]. In making these payments, the Trustee may pay more to or apply more for some beneficiaries than for others and may make payments to or applications of benefits for one or more beneficiaries to the exclusion of others.

[If appropriate, add provision relating to outside means:]

In exercising the discretion conferred on the Trustee to make payments and distributions of income and principal to the Beneficiary, the Trustee shall _____[consider any income or resources outside the trust made known to the Trustee and reasonably available to the needs of the Beneficiary or not consider any income or resources available to the Beneficiary outside the trust].

[If desired, add statement of testator's intention to favor income beneficiary:]

In making these payments, the Trustee shall be mindful of the fact that my primary concern in establishing this trust is the welfare of _____[names of income beneficiaries] and that it is my intention that the interests of others in the trust are to be subordinate to their interests.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
C. Payments out of Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.245

§ 64.245 Payments From "Sprinkling" Trust to Be Deducted (or Not to Be Deducted) From Recipient's Share on Distribution

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that principal payments made to a beneficiary pursuant to a "sprinkling" power will (or will not) be deducted from that beneficiary's distributive share of the trust estate, if any, on termination of the trust. It is intended to be used in conjunction with another provision granting the trustee discretion to distribute ("sprinkle") income, principal, or both income and principal, among two or more beneficiaries. For a provision granting the trustee power to "sprinkle" income among several beneficiaries, see § 64.225. For a provision granting the trustee discretion to "sprinkle" principal among several beneficiaries, see § 64.244. For a provision authorizing the trustee to "sprinkle" both income and principal from a family pot trust, and further providing that payments from trust principal will not be deducted from the recipients' distributive shares of principal, see § 64.201.

[b] Deduction From Distributive Shares

When the trustee is empowered to "sprinkle" principal among several beneficiaries, the will should state whether or not principal payments made under the "sprinkling" power will be deducted from the beneficiary's distributive share of principal on termination of the trust. Whether such deductions should be made will depend in most cases on what the testator considers fair under the circumstances.

If the primary purpose of the "sprinkling" power is to retain all of the assets in one pot until the testator's younger children have completed their educations, and if the older children received similar educations before the trust was established, most testators would choose not to charge the younger children's distributive shares with payments made out of the trust for their educations. If, on the other hand, the "sprinkling" is to occur when all of the beneficiaries are adults, the testator may choose to require deductions. If, for example, one beneficiary makes great efforts to provide for his or her own support and does not receive principal payments from the trust, while another less industrious beneficiary draws heavily from trust principal, equity might well require that some equalization of the beneficiaries' shares be made at the time of distribution.

[2] FORM

Payments From "Sprinkling" Trust to Be Deducted (or Not to Be Deducted) From Recipient's Share on Distribution

[First alternative: deduction required]

Payments of Principal to Be Deducted From Recipient's Share Upon Distribution

All payments made by the Trustee from trust principal as authorized by the terms of this will shall be charged to and deducted from the share, if any, of trust principal or corpus, to which the recipient of those payments shall be entitled on distribution or termination of the trust. The amount to be charged against the interest of any recipient will be the amount paid or, if property is transferred, the market value of the property transferred, determined as of the date of transfer and without adjustment for subsequent increases or decreases in the value of that property.

[OR]

[Second alternative: deduction prohibited]

Payments of Principal Not to Be Deducted From Recipient's Share Upon Distribution

Payments or distributions made by the Trustee from trust principal as authorized by the terms of this will shall not subsequently be deducted from or otherwise reduce or impair the value of the property to which the recipients of the payments shall be entitled on any distribution or termination of the trust.

D. Payments out of Income or Principal

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.260

§ 64.260 Fixed Periodic Payments out of Income or Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to make a fixed periodic payment to a beneficiary. It provides that the payment will be made out of the income of the trust, to the extent that the income is sufficient for that purpose, and out of principal to the extent that the income is not sufficient. For a fixed periodic payment to be paid only out of the trust principal, see § 64.240.

[b] Payments out of Principal--In General

If the testator wishes to guarantee a beneficiary a certain fixed payment and believes that the income of the trust may be insufficient to meet those payments, the fixed payment may be made payable from both income and principal. To the extent that such a payment is made out of trust principal, it will tend to reduce the value of the trust corpus and, by so doing, diminish the value of the interest of the remainder beneficiaries interest. For this reason, the power to make payments out of principal may be a source of conflict between the remainder beneficiaries and the trustee or income beneficiaries. The testator should authorize invasions of principal only when he or she clearly intends to favor the income beneficiaries at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries, and any provision authorizing invasions of principal should be carefully drafted so as to minimize conflicts over the extent of the power or the circumstances under which it may be exercised. For a general discussion of fixed periodic payments, see discussion in § 64.240[1].

[c] Drafting Alternatives

There are other ways in which beneficiaries may be given the right to receive fixed periodic payments. The will may, for example, direct the trustee to make fixed payments out of the principal of the trust. It may direct the trustee to make principal payments only to the extent that the trust does not produce a certain level of income, or the trustee may be directed to pay the beneficiary a certain percentage of the trust corpus. For a form requiring the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a designated beneficiary out of trust principal, see § 64.240. For a form directing the trustee to pay the beneficiary a percentage of the corpus, see § 64.242. For a form directing the trustee to pay all of the net income to the beneficiary, together with additional amounts of principal which, when added to the income payments, will be sufficient to guarantee the beneficiary a fixed periodic income, see § 64.261. For a general consideration of these and other alternative provisions, see discussion in § 64.240[1][c].

[d] Cost-of-Living Adjustments

If the purpose of a provision directing the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a beneficiary is to guarantee the beneficiary a certain level of income, the testator should consider adding a cost-of-living adjustment to the provision. For a general discussion of cost-of-living adjustments and the advantages and disadvantages of such provisions, see discussion in § 64.240[1][d].

Payments out of Income or Principal

During the lifetime of _____ [name of beneficiary], the Trustee shall pay to or apply for _____ [his or her] benefit, the sum of $_____ per _____ [e.g.: month]. This payment shall be paid out of the net income of the trust, to the extent that the net income is adequate for this purpose, and out of the principal of the trust estate, to the extent that the net income is not adequate. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

[If testator wishes payments to be adjusted for inflation, add following:]

The dollar amount of this _____ [interval of payment, e.g.: monthly] payment is based upon monetary values as of _____, 20 _____ [date of execution of will], and shall be adjusted in the manner and at the times specified herein to reflect changes in the _____ [specify index, e.g.: Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers or San Francisco-Oakland All Urban Consumers Index] published by the United States Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, using as the base figure the latest published index figure available on the date of my death. An adjustment in the dollar amount of the _____ [interval of payment, e.g.: monthly] payments shall be made on January 1 of each year, beginning with the year immediately following the year of my death, and shall be based on the most current published figures for the Consumer Price Index specified above. The amount of the _____ [interval of payment, e.g.: monthly] payments for the twelve-month period following each adjustment date shall be increased [add, if desired: or decreased] from the amount specified above in the same proportion that the specified Consumer Price Index figure available on the adjustment date is higher [or lower] than the base index figure, provided that the index figure available on the adjustment date is at least _____ [e.g.: 5] percent higher [or lower] than the base index figure.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to pay a trust beneficiary all the net income of the trust and amounts out of the trust principal that, when added to the income payments, will be sufficient to guarantee the beneficiary a minimum periodic payment. The amount of the minimum periodic payment will ordinarily be the amount that the testator considers necessary for the beneficiary's support, although any suitable sum may be designated. If desired, a cost-of-living adjustment clause may be added to provide protection against inflation.

For a form directing the trustee to pay the beneficiary a fixed amount out of the trust principal, see § 64.240. For a form directing the trustee to pay the surviving spouse a fixed amount until the testator's child reaches a certain age, see § 64.241. § 64.262 Fixed Periodic Payments to Two Beneficiaries or Survivor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to pay a fixed periodic sum to two beneficiaries during their joint lifetimes and, on the death of one, to pay the same sum to the survivor. This provision may be used when the testator wishes to benefit a married couple and wants payments to continue without interruption after the death of one of the beneficiaries. The payments will be made out of the net income of the trust estate, to the extent that the net income is sufficient for that purpose, and out of the trust principal, to the extent that the net income is not sufficient.

For a general discussion of fixed periodic payments and payments out of trust principal, together with a discussion of the tax consequences of such payments, see discussions in §§ 64.240[1][b][i] et seq.

[b] Drafting Alternatives

For a form creating a family pot trust and authorizing the trustee to distribute ("sprinkle") income and principal among the beneficiaries, see § 64.201. For a form creating a family pot trust for the benefit of the surviving spouse and children of the testator, see § 64.203. For a form creating a trust for the benefit of an adult son or daughter of the testator, see § 64.204. For a form creating a trust for the surviving spouse and a parent of the testator, see § 64.206. For a form creating a trust for the benefit of the testator's mother or father, see § 64.207. For a form requiring the trustee to make fixed periodic payments to a single beneficiary, with payments to be made out of income, to the extent that the income is sufficient for that purpose, and out of principal, to the extent that the income is not sufficient, see § 64.260. For a form requiring the trustee to pay all of the net income to a single beneficiary and such additional amounts out of principal as, when added to the income payments, will guarantee the beneficiary a fixed periodic income, see § 64.261.

For discussion of alternative provisions for guaranteeing a beneficiary a minimum periodic income, see § 64.240[1][c].

[c] Cost-of-Living Adjustments

If the payments from this trust are designed to provide the beneficiaries' principal support, the testator may choose to add a cost-of-living adjustment to the provision. If the payments are designed only to supplement the beneficiaries' incomes, a cost-of-living adjustment may be inappropriate. The testator should remember that cost-of-living adjustments will, in inflationary periods, tend to deplete trust principal more quickly than principal payments that are not periodically adjusted for inflation. For a consideration of cost-of-living adjustments, and the advantages and disadvantages of such provisions, see discussion in § 64.240[1][d].

[2] FORM

Fixed Periodic Payments to Two Beneficiaries or Survivor

Payments out of Income or Principal

The Trustee shall, during the joint lifetimes of _____ [name of first beneficiary] and _____ [name of second beneficiary], pay to or apply for the benefit of each of them the sum of $ _____ [e.g.: $ 2,500] per _____ [specify interval, e.g.: month or quarter]. On the death of either of them, the Trustee shall, during the lifetime of the survivor, pay to or apply for the benefit of the survivor the sum of $ _____ [twice the sum set forth above, e.g.: $5,000] per _____ [specify interval, e.g.: month or quarter]. These payments shall be made out of the net income of the trust estate, to the extent that the net income is sufficient for that purpose, and out of the principal of the trust estate, to the extent that the net income is not sufficient. The Trustee shall accumulate and add to principal any net income not distributed.

[If testator wishes payments to be adjusted for inflation, add following:]

§ 64.280 Accumulation of All of Net Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require that all of the net income of the trust be accumulated and added to principal. It may be combined with any suitable provision for payment of income or principal, such as periodic payments of income, or a lump sum distribution of principal when the beneficiary reaches a designated age.

[b] Accumulations of Income

[i] Time Limit

An accumulation of income generally cannot extend beyond the time permitted for the vesting of future interests under the rule against perpetuities [Civ. Code § 724(a)]; but see Civ. Code § 724(b) (exception for trusts forming part of employee profit-sharing or retirement plans)]. In California, perpetuities are subject to the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) [see Prob. Code §§ 21200 et seq.], which includes a recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities [see Prob. Code §§ 21205(a), 21206(a), 21207(a)]. Under that recodification, a nonvested property interest is invalid unless (1) when the interest is created, it is certain to either vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of a person alive at the time of creation or (2) it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205]. For a detailed discussion of the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities and its operation in California, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16.

[ii] Direction Required

A valid direction is essential to accumulation. In the absence of such a direction, undistributed income belongs to the person presumptively entitled to the next eventual interest [Civ. Code § 733]. That person will ordinarily be the remainder beneficiary [see Estate of Charters (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 227, 240, 293 P.2d 778; see also Estate of Lefranc (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 289, 299-301, 239 P.2d 617]. If the remainder income is entitled to the next eventual interest, then the undistributed income will be distributed to the remainder beneficiary on a current basis [ Estate of Robinson (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 32, 40-42, 68 Cal. Rptr. 420] .

For a general discussion of income accumulations and rules relating to accumulations, see § 64.42[1] et seq.

[iii] Purposes

Accumulations may be desirable for various reasons. These reasons typically include personal considerations, such as a wish to preserve trust income and assets for distribution at times when the beneficiary most needs it; lack of faith in the beneficiary's ability to handle the income; or simply a desire to exercise control over the beneficiary. A testator may, for example, wish to provide benefits for a particular beneficiary but feel that the beneficiary should not depend on the trust for ordinary living expenses. If the prospective beneficiary is a minor grandchild of the testator, the testator may expect the minor's parents to provide for his or her ordinary support until the grandchild reaches college age (or adulthood), at which time the trust can provide funds for education or other special needs (such as the purchase of a home). In other instances, a testator may wish to withhold funds from minor beneficiaries until such time as the beneficiaries have attained sufficient maturity to handle the funds themselves. If the prospective beneficiaries are adults, the testator may entertain doubts about their ability to handle the income properly and wish to postpone their enjoyment of the income by requiring accumulation for a period of years.

[iv] Income Tax Consequences

Accumulations of income generally have unfavorable income tax consequences because trust income is taxed at lower rates when it is distributed to beneficiaries than when it is accumulated by the trust [see I.R.C. § 1(a)-(e) and discussion in § 64.39[4]].

Before August 5, 1997, accumulated income also was subject to complex income tax rules called the "throwback rules." The throwback rules require that when income that had been accumulated in a trust was finally distributed to a beneficiary, it had to be included in the beneficiary's income if the beneficiary's top average marginal tax rate in the preceding five years was higher than that of the trust [I.R.C. §§ 665, 666, 667]. Since August 5, 1997, the "throwback" rules have been inapplicable to most domestic trusts created on or after March 1, 1984 [I.R.C. § 665(c)].

[v] Estate Tax Consequences

A direction for accumulation of income should not be included in any trust that is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, since the surviving spouse must have the right to receive all of the income from such a trust, payable at least annually [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)]. Neither a trust that provides expressly for accumulation nor a trust that indirectly accomplishes a similar purpose will satisfy the requirement that the surviving spouse be entitled to all of the income [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-(5)(f)(5) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application to QTIP trusts)].

[vi] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Consequences

The effect of the generation-skipping transfer tax on accumulation distributions should be carefully considered. A distribution from a trust to a beneficiary assigned to a generation that is two or more generations below that of the transferor will be subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax, regardless of whether the distribution is from principal, income, or accumulated income [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611-2613; but see I.R.C. § 2651(e)] (The generation-skipping transfer tax has been repealed, effective for generation-skipping transfers after 2009 [I.R.C. § 2264]. Until then, however, it remains in effect.). However, the testator's GST exemption [see I.R.C. §§ 2631(a), (c), 2010(c) see also § 60.16[3]] may be used to offset the tax. For a general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see § 64.40[1] et seq.

CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
F. Invasion of Principal by Beneficiary

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.300

§ 64.300 Unlimited Right of Invasion

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give a designated beneficiary the unlimited right to withdraw principal from the trust estate. Because the amount, time, and frequency of invasions is unlimited, the beneficiary will have the power, in effect, to terminate the trust by withdrawing all of the principal. A provision of this type will be suitable only if the testator wishes to provide generously for the needs of a particular income beneficiary and the interests of the remainder beneficiaries and the tax consequences of large withdrawals of trust principal are of minor concern.

For a provision granting a power of invasion limited by an ascertainable standard, see § 64.301. For a provision establishing a "five or five" power, see § 64.302. For other forms conferring limited invasion rights on beneficiaries, see §§ 64.204 and 64.206.

[b] Power of Invasion

[i] In General

As used in the law of trusts, the word "invasion" refers to payments made from the trust corpus or principal and not from income [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979), at p. 739]. The right to receive payments out of the corpus of a trust may be conferred by explicit words in the trust instrument or inferred from other words granting powers to a trustee or beneficiary [see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. II, § 128.7]. The power to invade principal may be conferred on the trustee or on a beneficiary. When the power is conferred on a beneficiary, the trust instrument usually provides that the beneficiary will have the right to require the trustee to pay the beneficiary a part or all of the principal [see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. II, § 128.7]. The extent of the beneficiary's powers under such a provision depends upon the intention of the trustor as revealed in the words of the trust instrument.

For general discussion of powers of appointment, their creation and exercise, see § 64.43[1] et seq.

[ii] Estate Tax Considerations

An unlimited power to withdraw principal from a trust is a general power of appointment and will cause the trust assets to be included in the holder's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1) ("general" power of appointment defined); see also Prob. Code § 611(a)]. Assets subject to a general power of appointment will be subject to estate taxation in the holder's estate if the power is held at the time of death, regardless of whether the power is or is not exercised [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)]. If the entire trust estate is subject to an unlimited power of invasion exercisable by a beneficiary, and if the beneficiary holds the power of invasion at the time of death, the entire trust estate will be subject to estate tax in the beneficiary's estate. If only a part of the estate is subject to the power, only a part will be subject to estate taxation.

However, a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of the holder will not be deemed a general power of appointment for estate tax purposes if the power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance of the holder [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. A power is limited by an ascertainable standard if the extent of the holder's duty to exercise (or not exercise) the power is reasonably measurable in terms of the beneficiary's needs for health, education, or support, or any combination of them. A power is not limited by an ascertainable standard, however, if the holder can exercise the power for the beneficiary's "comfort," "welfare," or "happiness" [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]. For further discussion of the "ascertainable standard" rule, see § 64.301[1].

[iii] Gift Tax Consequences

Under I.R.C. § 2514(e), the lapse of a power of appointment is deemed to be a release of the power and to constitute a transfer of the property subject to the power to the persons who would be entitled to the property if the power were not exercised by the holder. When a general power of appointment is held by the income beneficiary of a trust, and the power lapses, the beneficiary is deemed to have made a transfer of the property to the remainder beneficiaries for gift tax purposes.

A transfer for gift tax purposes will sometimes occur when an income beneficiary is given the right to withdraw a specified sum of money from a trust during a calendar year, and the trust instrument provides that if the right is not exercised in a given year it will expire. The expiration of the right would ordinarily constitute a transfer for gift tax purposes from the income beneficiary to the remainder beneficiaries. If, however, the right to withdraw money is limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the value of the trust assets, the lapse of the power in a given year will not constitute a transfer for gift tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2514(e)]. Invasion rights conferred on income beneficiaries are often limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the trust assets so as to avoid this undesirable potential for gift tax liability. For further discussion of the "five or five" rule, see § 64.302[1].

[iv] Income Tax Considerations

Any person who has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest any portion of the income or principal of a trust in himself or herself is deemed the owner of that portion of the trust for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 17731]. A beneficiary who has an unlimited right to withdraw principal from the whole of a trust estate will thus be liable for taxes on the income from the entire trust estate. For further discussion, see § 64.51[2].

[v] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Considerations

An unlimited power of invasion may have generation-skipping transfer tax implications [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663]. Distributions of principal or income to a beneficiary assigned to a generation that is two or more generations below that of the transferor is subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611-2613; but see I.R.C. § 2651(e) (special rule for determining whether a transfer to a trust is a generation-skipping transfer)]. Thus, if the testator establishes a trust and gives his or her grandchildren an unlimited power of invasion (assuming that the transfer to the trust does not itself constitute a direct skip [see I.R.C. §§ 2612(c), 2613(a)]), any amounts that they withdraw will be subject to the tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2612(b)]. If the testator gives a child an unlimited power of invasion, the power is a general power of appointment and causes the assets subject to the power to be included in the child's estate [I.R.C. § 2041; see § 64.300[1][b][ii]]. If, by reason of the child's death, those assets pass to a beneficiary who is two or more generations below that of the transferor, the transfer is subject to estate tax, but it is not subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. §§ 2041(a)(2), 2612(a), (c), 2613(a)]. However, if by reason of the child's death, the assets pass to a beneficiary who is two or more generations below that of the child, the transfer is subject to estate tax and the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. §§ 2041(a)(2), 2612(a), (c), 2613(a)].

For further discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see § 64.51[7]. See also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

 CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 F. Invasion of Principal by Beneficiary

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.301

§ 64.301 Right of Invasion Limited by Ascertainable Standard

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give a beneficiary a limited power to withdraw principal from the trust estate. The power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" so that it will not be considered a general power of appointment for federal estate and income tax purposes.

For a provision granting a beneficiary an unlimited right to invade the principal of the trust, see § 64.300. For a provision establishing a "five or five" power, see § 64.302. For other forms conferring limited invasion rights on beneficiaries, see §§ 64.204 and 64.206.

[b] Power Limited by Ascertainable Standard

If a beneficiary has an unlimited right to invade the principal of a trust, and if the beneficiary holds the right at the time of death, the trust property will be included in the beneficiary's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (power created after October 21, 1942)]. The property will not be included in the beneficiary's gross estate, however, if the trustee's power to invade the trust principal for the benefit of the beneficiary is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to the beneficiary's health, education, support, or maintenance [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)].

A power is limited by an "ascertainable standard" if the extent of the trustee's duty to exercise (or not exercise) the power is reasonably measurable in terms of the beneficiary's needs for health, education, or support, or any combination of them. A power is not limited by an ascertainable standard if the trustee can exercise the power for the beneficiary's "comfort," "welfare," or "happiness" [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)].

The regulations lay down certain terms that are insufficient to establish a valid ascertainable standard and contrast them with other terms that meet the statutory requirements. For example, a power to use property for the "comfort,"

"welfare," or "happiness" of the holder is, according to the regulations, insufficient to establish the requisite standard [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)]; but a power exercisable for the holder's "support," "support in reasonable comfort," "maintenance in health and reasonable comfort," "support in his [or her] accustomed manner of living," "education, including college and professional education," or "health," and "medical, dental, hospital and nursing expenses and expenses of invalidism," is properly limited [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)].

Inadvertent use of the wrong word or words may defeat an attempt to lay down an "ascertainable standard" [see Cory v. Ward (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 631, 642, 165 Cal. Rptr. 330; Estate of Allgeyer (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 169, 174, 129 Cal. Rptr. 820 (both decided under former Rev. & Tax. Code § 13692)]. When drafting a trust instrument, prudence indicates the wisdom of adopting the precise language approved by the regulations.

 PART IV. FORMS
 F. Invasion of Principal by Beneficiary

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.302

§ 64.302 $5,000 or Five Percent Invasion Power

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give a beneficiary a limited power to withdraw principal from the trust estate. The power to withdraw principal in any calendar year is limited to $5,000 or 5 percent of the trust assets, whichever is greater. For general discussion of powers of appointment, their creation and exercise, see § 64.43[1] et seq. For the income, gift, estate, and generation-skipping tax consequences of powers of appointment, see § 64.51[1] et seq.

For a provision conferring an unlimited power of invasion, see § 64.300. For a provision granting a beneficiary an unlimited right to invade trust principal, see § 64.301. For a provision establishing a "five or five" power, see § 64.302. For other forms conferring limited invasion rights on beneficiaries, see §§ 64.204 and 64.206.

[b] Five or Five Powers

The lapse of a general power of appointment constitutes a transfer of the property subject to the power for gift tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2514(b) (powers created after October 21, 1942); see I.R.C. § 2514(e) (lapse of power treated as release of power)].

A power lapses when the right to exercise the power expires. For example, a power to demand the withdrawal of money from a trust during any calendar year is subject to lapse if the trust instrument provides that the power is noncumulative and that any amount that might have been withdrawn during one year but was not in fact withdrawn in that year may not be withdrawn in any later year.

When a power to demand a withdrawal from a trust lapses, the person who holds the power will be deemed to have made a transfer of the property subject to the power to the person or persons who thereupon become entitled to the property. If the power is held by the income beneficiary of a trust, for example, the income beneficiary will be deemed to have made a transfer of the property to the remainder beneficiaries.

However, the lapse of a general power of appointment is taxable only to the extent that the property subject to the power in any calendar year exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the aggregate value of the assets out of which the exercise of the lapsed power could have been exercised [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)]. Under this rule (generally called the "five or five" rule), it is possible to give the beneficiary of a trust the power to demand the withdrawal of property from a trust without subjecting the beneficiary to possible gift taxation if the power is not exercised, provided the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent per year, and further provided that the power is not cumulative from year to year [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)].

Assume that the value of the trust principal is $200,000 and that the income beneficiary has the right to withdraw $10,000 a year from that principal. The withdrawals can be made at any time before the end of the calendar year. If a withdrawal is not made in one calendar year, however, the right to make a withdrawal in that year will expire and cannot be exercised in any succeeding year. If the beneficiary does not exercise the withdrawal right in a given year, so that the right expires, the beneficiary will be deemed to have made a transfer to the remainder beneficiaries of the trust. Since $10,000 does not exceed 5 percent of $200,000, however, no gift tax will be due on the transfer. If the beneficiary dies while retaining an unexpired right to withdraw, $10,000 will be included in the beneficiary's gross estate for estate tax purposes as property subject to a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)]. However, no gift tax will be due on any of the withdrawal rights that lapsed in previous years [I.R.C. § 2514(e)].

In appropriate cases, a five or five power will add a desirable measure of flexibility to a trust plan. The beneficiary may exercise the right (in which case the amount withdrawn will either be consumed or held in the beneficiary's estate) or let the right lapse (in which case the assets that might have been withdrawn pursuant to the lapsed right will not be included in the beneficiary's estate). A five or five power may also be helpful to the trustee in that it will decrease pressure on the trustee to exercise a discretionary power to pay principal to the beneficiary.

In some cases, the testator may wish to limit the invasion power to something less than the statutory maximum. The power may, for example, be limited to $5,000, or to something less than 5 percent of the value of the trust assets. Such limitations may be particularly appropriate if the estate is small and larger invasions would quickly deplete it.

Five or five powers should not be routinely included in every will or trust. In some cases (particularly when the trust estate is small), the power will result in rapid depletion of trust principal and may seriously damage the interests of the remainder beneficiaries. Such a power may also have adverse income tax consequences for the beneficiary who is granted the power. For a discussion of those consequences, see § 64.51[2].

In addition to any other payments that _____ [name of beneficiary] may receive under this will, the Trustee shall pay to _____ [him or her] such additional sums out of the principal of the trust estate as _____ [he or she] may, from time to time, request of the Trustee in writing; provided, however, that the amount withdrawn in any calendar year shall not exceed the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the value of the principal of the trust, determined as of the end of the calendar year. This right of withdrawal is noncumulative, so that if _____ [name of beneficiary] does not withdraw the full amount that _____ [he or she] is entitled to withdraw in any calendar year, the right to withdraw the amount not withdrawn shall lapse at the end of that calendar year.

G. Payments to Particular Beneficiaries

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.320

§ 64.320 Payment of Undistributed Income to Succeeding Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee, on termination of the income interest of any income beneficiary, to pay any undistributed income held by the trustee for that beneficiary to the person or persons next entitled to receive income from the trust. The provision will be helpful if, at the time that the income beneficiary's income interest terminates (e.g., by reason of death), the trustee is holding undistributed income that the trustee is required, under terms of the will, to distribute to the beneficiary. If the will does not require the trustee to pay any income to the beneficiary, the provision will not be necessary.

[b] Income Rights of Successive Beneficiaries

[i] In General

The Probate Code prescribes certain rules for the distribution of income received by a trust after a particular income beneficiary's right to receive income from the trust is terminated. When a mandatory income interest ends, the beneficiary of that interest, or that person's estate, is entitled to "undistributed income," meaning net income received before the end of the income interest. There is no entitlement to income which is due or has accrued, but is not yet received, net income that has been added or is required to be added to principal by the trust [Prob. Code § 16347(a)], or receipts that may be adjusted from principal to income pursuant to other provisions of the Uniform Principal and Income Act [see Prob. Code § 16347 (requirement for payment of undistributed income limited to "mandatory" income beneficiaries)]. These rules may be modified, however, by a contrary provision in the trust [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)].

[ii] Tax Considerations

Unless modified by the will, the statutory rule may unnecessarily subject undistributed income to estate taxation. Assume, for example, that the current income beneficiary dies leaving two children who, by terms of the will, succeed to the income interest. Assume also that the trustee is holding undistributed income received before the death of the income beneficiary but, under terms of the will, payable to that beneficiary. Under Prob. Code § 16347(b), the undistributed income belongs to the income beneficiary's personal representative and, under I.R.C. § 2033, it will be included in the beneficiary's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes. If, however, the will provides that the current beneficiary will have no interest in income undistributed at the time his or her interest terminates, the undistributed income will not be included in the income beneficiary's gross estate and may be distributed to the succeeding income beneficiaries free of estate tax. The savings effected by this provision will usually be significant only if the estate is large and the amount of undistributed income held by the trustee when the first income interest terminates is also large, since the amount of the tax saved will depend on the amount of undistributed income.

CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
G. Payments to Particular Beneficiaries

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.321

§ 64.321 Payments to Grandchildren

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to make gifts to the testator's grandchildren. The provision is intended primarily to illustrate the use of a trust as a vehicle for making gifts to particular persons. As drafted, the form requires the trustee to pay a specified sum of money to any grandchild who obtains a degree from an accredited college or university. The actual terms of the provision may, however, be modified to provide for any kind of gift under any condition or conditions (except, of course, a condition that is prohibited by law or violates public policy).

The final sentence of this form (which states that the provision will not prolong the existence of the trust), is intended to avoid inadvertent violation of the rule against perpetuities. For a general discussion of the rule against perpetuities, see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.10 et seq.

[b] Definition of Grandchildren

Before including this provision in the will, the attorney should examine the will's definition of "grandchildren" to make sure that it clearly reflects the testator's wishes. If the testator intends adopted as well as natural grandchildren to benefit from this provision, the term "grandchildren" should be defined accordingly.

As used in the Probate Code, the word "child" means any individual entitled to take as a child by intestate succession from the parent whose relationship is involved [Prob. Code § 26]. The rules of intestate succession are set forth in Prob. Code §§ 6400-6414.

For a general will provision defining the words "child" and "children," see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.672. For trust forms that include definitions of the words "child," "children," "grandchild," and "grandchildren," see §§ 64.200-64.207.

This provision shall not prolong the existence of the trust, and the Trustee shall not make any payment to any grandchild pursuant to this provision after the trust has terminated.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
G. Payments to Particular Beneficiaries

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.322

§ 64.322 Payments to Income Beneficiaries and Remainder Beneficiaries in Foreign Countries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision designed to facilitate the distribution of trust funds to beneficiaries who reside in certain foreign countries. The provision states that if transmission of private funds to any beneficiary in a foreign country would, by reason of political or other conditions in that country, be withheld or otherwise interfered with, the trustee will have the authority to retain the funds in the trust for a specified period. If the funds cannot be transmitted to the beneficiary at the end of the specified period, they will be added to the principal of the trust estate and paid out in accordance with other provisions of the trust.

[b] Rule Against Perpetuities

This form specifies that the ability of a beneficiary to personally use or enjoy a distribution or payment of property or funds from the trust is a condition precedent to the vesting of the property or funds in the beneficiary. A provision that postpones the vesting of an interest in a trust has the potential for violation of the rule against perpetuities.

Under the Uniform Statutory Rule Against Perpetuities (USRAP) as adopted in California [see Prob. Code §§ 21200-21231; see also Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16[3]], a nonvested property interest is invalid unless it meets the requirements of the common law rule against perpetuities or the alternative requirements of the 90-year "wait-and-see" rule. Similarly, under provisions of the Civil Code, income cannot be accumulated for a longer time than is permitted for the vesting of a property interest under the rule against perpetuities [Civ. Code §§ 724, 725; see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16[5][c]].

Under the USRAP recodification of the common law rule against perpetuities, a nonvested property interest is valid if, when the interest is created, it is certain to vest or terminate no later than 21 years after the death of an individual who is alive at the time of the creation [Prob. Code § 21205(a)]. Under the 90-year wait-and-see rule of the USRAP, a nonvested interest that does not meet the requirements of the common law rule is valid if it actually vests or terminates within 90 years after its creation [Prob. Code § 21205(b)]. Although the 90-year wait-and-see rule has greatly ameliorated the draconian effects of the common law rule, it has not eliminated the need for considering perpetuities questions when drafting a will or trust. A prudent attorney will still scrutinize a will or trust for potential perpetuities violations and take reasonable steps to avoid them. This form avoids the possibility of a perpetuities violation arising from a withheld payment or distribution by providing that payments or distributions cannot be withheld for longer than 21 years after the death of a designated person who must be alive at the time of the testator's death. This person will become the "measuring life" for perpetuities purposes [see Ch. 67, Future Interests and Perpetuities, § 67.16[8]].

[c] Drafting Considerations

Of necessity, the terms of this provision are general. A testator who knows, or who has reason to believe, that a prospective income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary resides in a foreign country that, by reason of political instability, is likely to interfere with the personal enjoyment of any payment or distribution from the trust, should make specific provisions for that situation.

[d] Avoid Use in Marital Deduction Trust

This provision is not suitable for use in a trust that is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a life estate plus power of appointment trust or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)]. The surviving spouse must have the right to receive all of the income from a life estate plus power of appointment or QTIP trust at least annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)]. If the will includes a marital deduction trust, the optional clause set forth at the conclusion of this form should be added to the principal provision to make clear that the provision will not apply to the marital deduction trust. For a general discussion of the marital deduction, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

[2] FORM

Payments to Income Beneficiaries and Remainder Beneficiaries in Foreign Countries

Payments to Beneficiaries in Foreign Countries

(a) All payments and distributions out of the trust(s) established by this will are intended to be for the personal use and benefit of the income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries, whether or not they (or any of them) shall at any time reside in a foreign country. The ability of any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary to personally use or enjoy any distribution or payment is a condition precedent to the vesting of any such property or funds. If, at any time, it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Trustee [add, if trust is to be subject to continuing judicial supervision: and the probate court] that political or other conditions existing in any foreign country would make it impossible or reasonably impractical for any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary in that country to personally use and enjoy any payment or distribution, or if the transmission of private funds to that income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary in any foreign country would, under any provision of the laws, regulations, or executive orders of that country, of the United States, or of any state of the United States, be withheld, prevented, or otherwise interfered with, in whole or in part, the Trustee shall, notwithstanding any other provision of this will, withhold and retain in the trust all such payments and distributions.

(b) If, at any time within _____ years after the commencement of any withholding of funds in accordance with (a), above, it is possible for any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary for whom payments or distributions have been withheld pursuant to the terms of this paragraph to have the personal use and enjoyment of the withheld property or funds, all sums that shall have become payable to that income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary under the terms of this will shall immediately be paid or distributed to that beneficiary or remainder beneficiary. No payment or distribution shall be withheld for a period of longer than _____ [e.g., five] years.

(c) When any payment or distribution has been withheld for _____ [e.g., five] years, or upon the death of the income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary for whom any payment or distribution has been withheld, whichever first occurs, the Trustee shall accumulate and add that payment or distribution to the principal of the trust estate, to be paid or distributed in the manner otherwise provided in this will for disposition of the trust principal; provided, however, that all such withheld payments or distributions must, in any event, be paid or distributed by the Trustee to the person or persons entitled to the same not later than 21 years after the death of _____ [specify person whose life will be "measuring life," e.g., the last survivor of my wife and my issue living at the date of my death].

(d) The Trustee's determination of the facts that authorize or require the Trustee to withhold or to make any payment or distribution to any income beneficiary or remainder beneficiary pursuant to the terms of this paragraph shall be conclusive upon all persons interested in the trust established by this will. In determining these facts, the Trustee may, but shall not be required to, conduct an investigation, personally or through agents, as the Trustee may deem advisable.

[If the will includes a marital deduction trust, add the following: ]

(e) This paragraph shall not apply to any payments of income to my _____ [wife or husband] out of _____ [describe marital deduction trust, e.g.: the marital deduction trust established under Section _____] of this will, all of which payments must be made at least annually.

 PART IV. FORMS
 H. Powers of Appointment

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.340

§ 64.340 General Testamentary Power of Appointment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a general testamentary power of appointment; that is, a power of appointment that may be exercised only by the will of the donee. For general nontestamentary powers of appointment (i.e., powers that may be exercised by inter vivos instrument), see §§ 64.341 and 64.342. For special powers of appointment (both testamentary and nontestamentary), see §§ 64.343-64.345. For will provisions either exercising or refusing to exercise testamentary powers of appointment, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, §§ 63.290-63.292.

For a consideration of the uses, purposes, and characteristics of powers of appointment, see discussions in § 64.43[1] et seq. For a consideration of the types of powers of appointment and legal rules governing their creation, disclaimer, release, and exercise, see discussions in § 64.43[1] et seq.

[b] General Powers of Appointment

[i] Purposes and Functions

A "general" power of appointment is one that can be exercised so as to confer benefits on the donee, either directly or indirectly. Thus, the Probate Code provides that a power of appointment is "general" if it can be exercised in favor of the donee, the donee's estate, the donee's creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate, whether or not it is exercisable in favor of others [Prob. Code § 611(a)].

Two types of powers of appointment are excluded from the definition of a general power. The first is a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of a person that is limited by an ascertainable standard relating to the person's health, education, support, or maintenance [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A); Prob. Code § 611(b)]. The second is a power that is exercisable by the donee only in conjunction with a person having a substantial interest in the appointive property that is adverse to the exercise of the power in favor of the donee, the donee's estate, the donee's creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C); Prob. Code § 611(c)]. Any power that is not "general" is "special" [Prob. Code § 611(d)].

Powers are further classified according to the time and manner in which they may be exercised. Thus a power is "testamentary" if it may be exercised only by a will [Prob. Code § 612(a)] and "presently exercisable" at a particular time to the extent that an irrevocable appointment can be made under the power [Prob. Code § 612(b)]. A power that is not "presently exercisable" is said to be "postponed" [Prob. Code § 612(c)].

[ii] Estate and Gift Tax Consequences

Because the donee of a general power of appointment has the right to appoint the subject property in his or her own favor (either personally or through his or her estate or creditors, or the creditors of his or her estate) [I.R.C. §§ 2041(b), 2514(c); Prob. Code § 611(a); see discussion in § 64.340[1][b][i]], any action (or inaction) by the donee that results in another person or persons receiving the subject property will have transfer tax consequences. Thus, the exercise, release, or lapse during the donee's lifetime of a general power of appointment (created after October 21, 1942) is deemed a transfer subject to the federal gift tax [I.R.C. § 2514(b); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3]. Similarly, property subject to a general power of appointment (created after October 21, 1942) that the donee either retains or exercises at the time of the donee's death will be included in his or her estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. A lifetime exercise or release of a general power, under circumstances that, if it were property, would have caused the property to be included in the donee's estate, will similarly cause the appointive property to be included in the donee's estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)].

Although the lapse of a general power of appointment constitutes a transfer for gift tax purposes, the transfer is taxed only to the extent that the property subject to the power in any calendar year exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the aggregate value of the assets out of which the exercise of the lapsed power could have been exercised [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)]. Under this rule (generally called the "five or five" rule), it is possible to give the beneficiary of a trust the power to withdraw (or demand the withdrawal of) property from a trust without subjecting the beneficiary to possible gift taxation if the power is not exercised, provided the power is limited to the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent per year, and further provided that the power is not cumulative from year to year [I.R.C. § 2514(e); Treas. Reg. § 25.2514-3(c)(4)].

For a general consideration of the income, estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax consequences of powers of appointment, see § 64.51[1] et seq.

[iii] Exercise by Will

A power of appointment may be exercised by a will [see Prob. Code §§ 612(a), 642; see also § 64.44[2]]. A will may even be effective to exercise a power of appointment that was not in existence when the will was executed, provided the will adequately manifests the intent to exercise the power [Prob. Code § 642]. However, a will cannot exercise a power not in existence when the will was executed if the creating instrument manifests an intent that the power may not be exercised by a will previously executed, or if the will manifests an intent not to exercise a power subsequently acquired [Prob. Code § 642].

A power of appointment cannot be exercised by a general residuary clause in a will, or by a will making a general disposition of all of the testator's property, unless specific reference is made to the power or there is some other indication of intent to exercise the power [Prob. Code § 641(a); but see Prob. Code § 641(b) (rule applicable only when donee dies on or after July 1, 1982)]. The purpose of this rule is to guard against the inadvertent exercise of a power of appointment by a testator who is not aware of the existence of the power and has no intention of exercising it.

[c] Takers in Default

When the donee of a discretionary power of appointment [see Prob. Code § 613; see also § 64.44[4]] fails to exercise the power, or makes an appointment that is wholly or partially ineffective, the appointive property not effectively appointed will pass to the person named by the donor as the taker in default [Prob. Code § 672(a)]. If no taker in default is named, the property will revert to the donor [Prob. Code § 672(a)].

If the donee makes an ineffective appointment, however, an implied alternative appointment to the donee's estate may be found if the donee has manifested an intent that the appointive property be disposed of as property of the donee rather than as in default of appointment [Prob. Code § 672(b)].

Good drafting practice demands that the creating instrument designate a taker or takers in default. This will avoid disputes that might otherwise result if the power of appointment is not exercised, or if it is not effectively exercised. If there are to be two or more takers in default, the creating instrument should also specify the shares in which they will take.

General Testamentary Power of Appointment

Power of Appointment

On the death of _____ [name of donee], the Trustee shall distribute the then-remaining balance of the trust estate, if any, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the estate of _____ [name of donee], whom _____ [name of donee] shall appoint by _____ [his or her] valid last will [add, if desired: executed after my death and] specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment, on the terms and conditions that _____ [name of donee] shall specify therein. If, for any reason, any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by _____ [name of donee], that property shall be distributed to _____ [specify names, identities, and shares of takers in default].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
H. Powers of Appointment

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.341

§ 64.341 General Nontestamentary Power of Appointment: Exercise to Be Effective on Death of Donee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a general nontestamentary power of appointment, that is, a power of appointment that can be exercised by inter vivos instrument. The form requires the donee to file the exercising instrument, and any instrument or instruments revoking the exercise, with the trustee. Although the appointment must be made during the donee's life, the terms of the power provide that the appointment will be effective only upon the death of the donee.

For a general testamentary power of appointment, see § 64.340. For a general nontestamentary power of appointment, the exercise of which may be effective only during the lifetime of the donee, see § 64.342. For special powers of appointment, see §§ 64.343-64.345.

For the uses, purposes, and characteristics of powers of appointment, see discussion in § 64.43[1]. For definitions of "general," "special," "testamentary," and "nontestamentary" powers, and rules relating to the creation, exercise, and release of powers of appointment, see § 64.44[1] et seq. For the income, estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax consequences of powers of appointment, see § 64.51[1] et seq.

[b] Filing Instrument With Trustee

The creating instrument should require the donee to file the instrument exercising the power of appointment with the trustee. If the creating instrument specifies the manner, time, and conditions of exercise, the power of appointment can be exercised only by complying with those requirements [Prob. Code § 630(a)]. Requiring the donee to file the exercising instrument with the trustee will enable the trustee to supervise and keep track of the power of appointment. It will also help to prevent an inadvertent exercise of the power [see discussion in § 64.340[1]].

[c] Right to Revoke Exercise

This form authorizes the donee to revoke or modify any exercise of the power by another instrument filed with the trustee. Unless made expressly irrevocable by the creating instrument or the instrument of exercise, an exercise of a power of appointment will remain revocable so long as the interest in the appointive property has not been transferred or become distributable pursuant to the appointment [Prob. Code § 695(b); see Prob. Code § 15400 (presumption of revocability of trust)].

If the testator wishes to make the exercise of the power of appointment irrevocable, this form may be modified accordingly.

[d] Drafting Caution

A power stated to be exercisable by an inter vivos instrument is also exercisable by a written will unless the creating instrument prohibits such an exercise [Prob. Code § 630(b)]. Thus, if the testator does not wish the donee to exercise the power by will, the provision creating the power should clearly prohibit such an exercise.

[2] FORM

General Nontestamentary Power of Appointment: Exercise to Be Effective on Death of Donee

Power of Appointment

On the death of _____ [name of donee], the Trustee shall distribute the then-remaining balance of the trust estate, if any, including all principal and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including the estate of _____ [name of donee], whom _____ [name of donee] shall appoint, and on the terms and conditions that _____ [name of donee] shall specify, in the last unrevoked written instrument, other than a will, executed and acknowledged by _____ [name of donee], on file with the Trustee at the time of the death of _____ [name of donee], and specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. Any exercise of this power of appointment may be revoked by a later written instrument, other than a will, executed and acknowledged by _____ [name of donee], filed with the Trustee, specifically referring to this power and to the exercise to be revoked, and making an alternative exercise of the power. If, for any reason, any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by _____ [name of donee], that property shall be distributed to _____ [specify names, identities, and shares of takers in default].

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.342

§ 64.342 General Nontestamentary Power of Appointment: Exercise to Be Effective During Lifetime of Donee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a general nontestamentary power of appointment (that is, a power that can be exercised by inter vivos instrument) that may be exercised only during the lifetime of the donee. For a general nontestamentary power that may be made exercisable only after the donee's death, see § 64.341. For a general testamentary power of appointment, see § 64.340. For special powers of appointment, see §§ 64.343-64.345.

For a general discussion of the uses, purposes, and characteristics of powers of appointment, see § 64.43 et seq.

[b] Drafting Considerations

A power of appointment that is exercisable only by will is a "testamentary" power [Prob. Code § 612(b)]. To the extent that a power is not exercisable by will, it is a "nontestamentary" power [see discussion in § 64.44[2]].

Although every nontestamentary power may be exercised during the lifetime of the donee, the exercise may (depending on the terms of the creating and exercising instruments) take effect during or after the lifetime of the donee. The creating instrument may, for example, provide that an exercise of the power will take effect at any time during the donee's lifetime that the donee may specify. In such a case, the donee may make an appointment effective immediately, or may specify that it will take effect at any other time during his or her lifetime.

Alternatively, the creating instrument may provide that the exercise can take effect only after the donee's death. In such a case, an exercise of the power may not be made effective at any earlier time [see Prob. Code § 630(a) (exercise must comply with terms of power)].

A power stated to be exercisable by an inter vivos instrument is also exercisable by a written will unless the creating instrument prohibits such an exercise [Prob. Code § 630(b)]. Thus, if the testator does not wish the donee to exercise the power by will, the provision should clearly prohibit such an exercise.

[c] Revocation of Exercise

This form authorizes the donee to revoke or modify any exercise of the power by another instrument filed with the trustee. Unless made expressly irrevocable by the creating instrument or the instrument of exercise, an exercise of a power of appointment will remain revocable so long as the interest in the appointive property has not been transferred or become distributable pursuant to the appointment [Prob. Code § 695(b); see Prob. Code § 15400 (presumption of revocability of trust)]. If the testator wishes to make an exercise irrevocable only, this form may be modified accordingly.

[2] FORM

General Nontestamentary Power of Appointment: Exercise to Be Effective During Lifetime of Donee

Power of Appointment

From time to time during the lifetime of _____ [name of donee], the Trustee shall distribute all or any part of the trust estate, including accrued income and undistributed income, to the person, persons, or entities, including _____ [name of donee] or the estate of _____ [name of donee], whom _____ [name of donee] shall appoint, and on the terms and conditions that _____ [name of donee] shall specify, in the last unrevoked written instrument other than a will executed and acknowledged by _____ [name of donee] and filed with the Trustee, specifically referring to and exercising this power of appointment. Except to the extent that property or an interest in property shall previously have been transferred or become distributable pursuant to an exercise of this power, any such exercise may be revoked by an instrument other than a will executed and acknowledged by _____ [name of donee], filed with the Trustee, specifically referring to this power of appointment and the exercise to be revoked, and making an alternative exercise of the power. If, for any reason, any of the property subject to this power of appointment is not effectively appointed by _____ [name of donee], that property shall be distributed to _____ [specify names, identities, and shares of takers in default].

 PART IV. FORMS
 H. Powers of Appointment

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.343

§ 64.343 Special Testamentary Power of Appointment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a special testamentary power of appointment. The power is "special" because it is not exercisable in favor of the donee, the donee's estate or creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate; "testamentary" because it may be exercised only by a will of the donee. For definitions of "general," "special," "testamentary," and "nontestamentary" powers of appointment, see discussion in § 64.44[1] et seq.

[b] Special Powers of Appointment

[i] In General

Unlike a general power of appointment, a special power limits the class of persons in whose favor it may be exercised. The persons in whose favor a special power may be exercised are referred to as "permissible appointees" [Prob. Code § 610(f)]. The class of permissible appointees may be as broad or narrow as the donor wishes, providing it does not include the donee, the donee's estate or creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate. Although the class of permissible appointees under a special power may be nearly unlimited, most donors prefer to limit the class to members of their family--spouses, issue, descendants, or the spouses of issue or descendants.

A very broad special power (one that may be exercised in favor of anyone other than the donee, the donee's estate or creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate) may be appropriate if the donor wishes the donee to have broad latitude in selecting the appointees. More narrowly drafted powers will be appropriate when the donor wishes to keep the appointive property in the family. A special power should reflect the wishes of the individual testator and be drafted accordingly.

[ii] Tax Considerations

The exercise, release, or lapse of a special power of appointment will not usually have federal estate or gift tax consequences [see discussion in § 64.51[1] et seq.]. However, special powers of appointment may trigger imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601-2663]. If, for example, the holder of a special power of appointment over trust assets exercises the power in favor of a beneficiary who is two or more generations below the generation assignment of the transferor of the power, the transfer constitutes a taxable distribution and is subject to the generation-skipping tax [I.R.C. § 2611(a) (generation-skipping transfer defined); see I.R.C. § 2612(b) (taxable distribution defined)]. Similarly, if the release or lapse of a special power of appointment results in a transfer to a beneficiary who is two or more generations below the generation assignment of the transferor of the power, the transfer a taxable termination or a direct skip [see I.R.C. § 2612(a), (c)]. For a detailed consideration of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 113, Generation-Skipping Transfers and Trust Strategies (Matthew Bender).

[iii] Use With Marital Deduction Trust

Caution must be exercised when including a special power of appointment in a marital deduction trust. Such a power should not be included in any trust that is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust, since such a trust must grant the surviving spouse a general power of appointment over the deductible property or interest in property [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)]. If the trust is designed to qualify for the marital deduction as a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, the trustee (or any other person) may be given the power to appoint the trust property to persons other than the surviving spouse, providing the power is exercisable only at or after the surviving spouse's death [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)]. No person may have a power under a QTIP trust to appoint any part of the property to any person other than the surviving spouse during the surviving spouse's lifetime, and the surviving spouse must be entitled to all of the income from the property, payable annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)(I)]. For a general consideration of marital deduction trusts, see Ch., Marital Deduction Trust Provisions; see also California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 112, The Marital Deduction and Marital Deduction Trusts (Matthew Bender).

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.344

§ 64.344 Special Nontestamentary Power of Appointment: Exercise to Be Effective on Death of Donee

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a special nontestamentary power of appointment. The power is "special" because it is not exercisable in favor of the donee, the donee's estate or creditors, or creditors of the donee's estate [see Prob. Code § 611(a), (d)]; it is "nontestamentary" because it may be exercised during the lifetime of the donee but not by the donee's will [see Prob. Code § 612(a); see also § 64.44[2]]. Although the appointment must be made by inter vivos instrument, the appointment will, by terms of the power, be effective only upon the death of the donee. For a special nontestamentary power authorizing an appointment to be effective during the lifetime of the donee, see § 64.345.

For a general consideration of the uses, purposes, and characteristics of powers of appointment, see § 64.43[1]. For types of powers and legal rules governing their creation, exercise, and release, see § 64.44[1] et seq. For the income, estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer tax consequences of powers of appointment, see § 64.51[1] et seq. For a discussion of special powers, their creation and exercise, see § 64.343[1].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to create a special nontestamentary power of appointment. The appointment will, by terms of the power, be effective at any time during the lifetime of the donee. For a special nontestamentary power authorizing an appointment to be effective only upon the death of the donee, see § 64.344.

 CHAPTER 64 TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: PAYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 H. Powers of Appointment

24-64 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64.346

§ 64.346 Limited Right to Release Power of Appointment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the donee of a power of appointment a limited right to release the power. The form permits the entire power over all of the property to be released without consideration; it prohibits a partial release and any release for consideration.

[b] Releases of Powers of Appointment

[i] In General

A power of appointment is "released" when the donee relinquishes, concedes, or gives up the right to exercise the power [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979) at 1159]. After it is released, the power passes to the person or persons designated by the donor as takers in default; or, if there are none, it reverts to the donor [Prob. Code § 672(a)].

Under California law, a "discretionary" power of appointment may be released [Prob. Code § 661(a)], but an "imperative" power may not. For the distinctions between "discretionary" and "imperative" powers, see § 64.44[4].

Any discretionary power of appointment may be released, regardless of whether it is "general" or "special," "testamentary" or "nontestamentary," unless the creating instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 661(a)]. The release may apply to the whole or any part of the appointive property, and it may reduce or limit the number of permissible appointees [Prob. Code § 661(b)].

[ii] Power Not Presently Exercisable

A special rule limits the circumstances under which a power that is not "presently exercisable" [see Prob. Code § 612(b); see also § 64.44[3]] may be released. If the power is not presently exercisable and if the donor designated persons or a class of persons to take in default of the donee's exercise of the power, the power cannot be released, unless the release serves to benefit all persons designated as provided by the donor [Prob. Code § 661(b)]. The purpose of this rule is to prevent the donee, under the guise of a release, from benefiting certain of the takers in default at the expense of others [see Recommendation Relating to Revision of the Powers of Appointment Statute, 15 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 1667, 1679 (1980)]. If, for example, the power is exercisable only after all of the testator's children reach the age of 21, the donee cannot at any earlier time release the power as to all of the children except one, because such a release would amount to a premature exercise of the power.

[iii] Delivery

Delivery is required for the effective release of a power of appointment [Prob. Code § 661(a)]. If the creating instrument specifies a person to whom a release is to be delivered, the release must be delivered to that person, unless the person cannot with due diligence be found [Prob. Code § 661(c)(1)]. If the property to which the power relates is held by a trustee, the release must be delivered to the trustee [Prob. Code § 661(c)(2)].

In all other cases, the release may be delivered to any person (other than the donee) who could be adversely affected by the exercise of the power [Prob. Code § 661(c)(3)(A)] or to the county recorder of the county in which the donee resides or in which the deed, will, or other instrument creating the power is filed [Prob. Code § 661(c)(3)(B)].

[iv] Recordation

If the release of a power of appointment affects real property, or obligations secured by real property, it must be acknowledged and proved in the same manner as grants of real property [Prob. Code § 661(d)]; for acknowledgment and proof of execution of instruments, see Civ. Code §§ 1181-1207]. A release that affects real property may be also be certified and recorded [Prob. Code § 661(d)].

[c] Tax Caution

The release of a power of appointment may have gift or estate tax consequences for the donee (or the donee's estate), depending on whether the power is "general" or "special," whether the donee retains any interest in the appointive property after the release, and whether the value of the property released exceeds the greater of $5,000 or 5 percent of the property out of which the power could have been exercised [see I.R.C. § 2514(e) ("five or five" rule)]. For the tax consequences of releases of powers of appointment, see § 64.51[5], [6].

[d] Drafting Considerations

This form permits the power of appointment to be released to the extent permitted by Prob. Code § 661. This will avoid conflict of laws problems if the testator dies while domiciled in some state other than California or if, for any other reason, the law of another jurisdiction is applicable to the will. By expressly making the California law relating to releases applicable, this provision deals with the possibility that some other law might be applied to preclude release.

[2] FORM

Limited Right to Release Power of Appointment

Limited Right to Release Power of Appointment

Any provision of this will to the contrary notwithstanding, any power created by this will, whether expressly granted in this will or implied by law, may be released to the extent and in the manner authorized in California Probate Code Section 661, providing that section exists at the date of the release. Any released power shall pass to and may be exercised by _____ [name and identity of person to whom power will pass].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers the selection, appointment, and general administrative powers of testamentary trustees. The Legal Background discusses the legal qualifications of trustees, special rules relating to cotrustees, tax considerations in the selection of trustees, appointment of testamentary trustees (both by the trustor-testator and by the court), duties and obligations of testamentary trustees, and the rights and powers of testamentary trustees. The forms include provisions for the appointment of testamentary trustees, complete provisions for the general administrative powers of testamentary trustees, an optional provision conferring "absolute," "unlimited," or "sole" discretion on the trustee, and alternate provisions for retention of trust assets, investment powers, business interests, sale and exchange of assets, and employment of attorneys and agents. Also included are forms relating to the allocation of trust duties and responsibilities between cotrustees.

This chapter does not cover the rules governing compensation of trustees or continuing judicial supervision of testamentary trusts. Both of these topics are dealt with in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. This chapter also does not contain trust provisions governing the appointment of successor trustees and related matters. These provisions, together with discussion, are also contained in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions. In addition, Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, covers other miscellaneous matters affecting the operation of the trust, some of which have an impact on the duties and obligations of the trustee.

Trust provisions governing the payment and distribution of income and principal are covered in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.30

§ 64A.30 Who May Act as Trustee

[1] In General

In general, any person who is capable of taking legal title to property (or a beneficial interest in that property) may take it as trustee for another [ Wallace v. Riley (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 654, 666, 74 P.2d 807 ]. A person who is "unfit" to execute the trust, or who has acquired an interest or become charged with a duty adverse to the interests of any beneficiary of the trust, may be appointed as trustee, but such a person is subject to removal by the court after appointment [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(2)].

[2] Aliens and Nonresidents

In some states, an alien may not serve as a trustee [see Scott, The Law of Trusts, vol. II, § 93 (Little, Brown & Co. 3d ed. 1967)]. However, the rule appears to be otherwise in California, where any person, citizen, or alien, may take, hold, and dispose of property, both real and personal [Civ. Code § 671].

There is no requirement that a trustee appointed under a California trust be a resident of the state [see Scott, The Law of Trusts, vol. II, § 94 (Little, Brown & Co. 3d ed. 1967)]. Similarly, there is no requirement that an out-of-state trustee post bond, and no appellate cases impose such a requirement. However, a court could conceivably conclude in a given case that the potential difficulty of obtaining jurisdiction over an out-of-state trustee justified imposition of a bond in order to protect the interests of the beneficiaries [see Prob. Code § 15602(a)].

[3] Trust Company

A trust company is a corporation, industrial bank, or commercial bank that is authorized to engage in the trust business in California [Fin. Code § 107; Prob. Code § 83]. The trust business is the business of acting as executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, or conservator of estates, assignee, receiver, depository, or trustee under the appointment of any court or by authority of any state or federal law [Fin. Code § 106]. Certain large commercial banks maintain trust departments that qualify as trust companies [see Fin. Code § 1500.1 (commercial or industrial bank engaging in trust business)]. Corporations are generally prohibited from engaging in the trust business in California unless they meet the requirements of Fin. Code § 1500 (specifying contents or articles of incorporation, certificate or authority, and required deposits). Foreign corporations are prohibited from acting as trust companies in California unless they are national banking associations or sister-state banks that have been authorized to conduct a trust business in California [Fin. Code § 1503].

One of the advantages of appointing a trust company as trustee of a private trust is that the trusts of such a company will not be disrupted by any reorganizations or mergers affecting the company. When a trust company sells its trust business, the buyer automatically acquires all of its trusts and assumes all of its fiduciary responsibilities under trust instruments, executorships, administrations, guardianships, agencies, and other similar arrangements [Fin. Code §§ 4859(f), 4879.14(e); see Fin. Code § 4877.05].

Another advantage of appointing a trust company is that it will not be required to post a bond as a condition to its qualification as trustee. The Trust Law specifically provides that a trust company cannot be required to give a bond, even if a bond is required by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15602(e); see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts Administrative Provisions, § 64B.36]. This may result in a saving to the trust, since the cost of a bond will be charged against the trust unless the trust instrument provides or the court orders otherwise [Prob. Code § 15602(d)].

Many trust companies will decline to serve as trustee unless the trust estate meets minimum value requirements. Before drafting any instrument naming a trust company as trustee, the attorney should consult with the trust company and ascertain its minimum estate requirements.

[4] Other Corporate Trustees

Various statutes permit corporations other than trust companies to accept appointments as trustees. Fin. Code § 6515(a), for example, authorizes savings and loan associations to act as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, or in any other fiduciary capacity in which banks, trust companies, or other corporations are permitted to act [Fin. Code § 6515(a)]. Savings and loan associations may advertise and solicit trust business in California [Fin. Code § 6515(b)] and may accept fiduciary savings accounts in the name of any administrator, executor, custodian, conservator, guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary for a named beneficiary or beneficiaries [Fin. Code § 6850].

Corp. Code § 5140(k) authorizes any nonprofit public benefit corporation [see Corp. Code §§ 5110-6910] to act (subject to any limitations contained in its articles or bylaws and to any other applicable laws) as trustee under any trust incidental to the principal objects of the corporation, and further authorizes such a corporation to receive, hold, administer, exchange, and expend funds and property subject to the trust. Prob. Code § 15604 authorizes a nonprofit charitable corporation to be appointed as trustee upon petition to the court provided a valid, unexpired, unsuspended license as a professional fiduciary, under the Professional Fiduciaries Act has been obtained [Prob. Code § 2340, see Professional Fiduciaries Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.].

[5] Beneficiary

A beneficiary of a trust may be its trustee [ Crocker-Citizens National Bank v. Younger (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 202, 212, 93 Cal. Rptr. 214, 481 P.2d 222 ], provided that beneficiary is not the sole beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 15209 (inter vivos trust not invalid, merged, or terminated if it provides for successor beneficiaries after settlor's death)]. Since separation of the legal and equitable interests in property is essential to the concept of a trust, it follows that the trust will terminate if the legal title to the trust property and the entire beneficial interest become united in one person who is not under an incapacity [ Estate of Washburn (1909) 11 Cal. App. 735, 746, 106 P. 415 ; Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 341(2)].

Although there is no legal bar to the appointment of a beneficiary as trustee, a beneficiary may be subject to restrictions that do not apply to other trustees. If there is only one beneficiary under the trust, for example, that beneficiary may not serve as trustee without effecting a cessation of the trust, as there can be no trust when the legal and the equitable interests in property are united in one person.

Even if there is more than one beneficiary, or more than one trustee [see § 64A.31[1]], a person who is both a beneficiary (or co-beneficiary) and a trustee (or co-trustee) may have significantly limited powers. Prob. Code § 16081 sets forth special rules that are applicable to persons who have discretion to make distributions from a trust of principal or income for their own benefits. For a discussion of those rules, see § 64A.39[8].

The appointment of a trustee who is also a beneficiary may result in the loss of significant tax advantages. For a discussion of those advantages, and other important tax consequences of the selection of a trustee, see § 64A.32[1].

[6] Attorney Who Drafts Trust

The attorney who drafts the trust instrument may serve as trustee. If the attorney is the sole trustee, however, the attorney may be subject to removal under Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6). That section authorizes (but does not require) the removal of a trustee if (1) there is only one trustee; (2) the trust instrument became irrevocable after January 1, 1994; and (3) the trustee is a person described in Prob. Code § 21350(a) [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)]. Persons described in Prob. Code § 21350(a) include the person who drafted the instrument and certain other persons who are relatives, partners, employees, or cohabitants of the person who drafted the instrument [see Prob. Code § 21350(a)].

However, a trustee may avoid removal under Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6) if certain precautions are taken. One of these precautions is to request an independent attorney to review the trust instrument and to sign and deliver a Certificate of Independent Review [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B); see § 64A.203]. For further discussion of the circumstances under which a trustee may be removed under Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6), see § 64A.37[1], [2].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.31

§ 64A.31 Cotrustees

[1] In General

The settlor may designate one or several trustees to execute the trust. Unless the will provides otherwise, a power vested in two or more cotrustees may only be exercised by their unanimous action [Prob. Code § 15620]. If a vacancy occurs in the office of a cotrustee, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust as if they were the only trustees [Prob. Code § 15621].

A testator who elects to appoint more than one trustee should, if at all possible, select cotrustees who will work together smoothly. If the testator has reason to suspect that the cotrustees will not work together smoothly, other cotrustees should be selected; or, failing that, some provision should be made in the trust instrument for the exercise of trust powers by less than all of the cotrustees. Such a provision might, for example, authorize action by a majority of the cotrustees, or might divide or apportion the powers of the trust among named cotrustees [see §§ 64A.360-64A.367 (will provisions dividing or allocating powers of cotrustees)]. In the absence of such a provision, judicial action would be necessary to resolve differences among cotrustees who were unable to reach unanimous agreement about trust action [see Prob. Code § 17200 (petitions concerning internal affairs of trust)]. If continuing hostility or lack of cooperation among the cotrustees impairs the administration of the trust, the court, on its own motion or on the petition of any cotrustee or beneficiary, may remove one (or all) of the cotrustees and appoint successors [Prob. Code § 15642(a), (b)(3)].

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, if a cotrustee is unavailable to perform the duties of cotrustee by reason of absence, illness, or other temporary incapacity, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust as if they were the only trustees, when necessary to accomplish the purposes of the trust or to avoid irreparable injury to the trust property [Prob. Code § 15622].

[2] Compensation

Unless the trust instrument provides or the cotrustees agree otherwise, the compensation of cotrustees must be apportioned among them according to the services rendered by each [Prob. Code § 15683]. Although the appointment of more than one trustee need not, in itself, increase the total amount of the compensation, the number of the trustees may indirectly affect the total.

When the trust instrument does not specify the amount of the compensation, the trustee is entitled to "reasonable compensation under the circumstances" [Prob. Code § 15681]. Factors that should be considered when determining the reasonableness of compensation include the amount of the trust income, the success or failure of the cotrustees' administration, any unusual skill or experience that the cotrustees have brought to the trust, the loyalty or disloyalty displayed by the cotrustees, the amount of risk and responsibility assumed, the time spent in carrying out the trust, the custom in the community as to allowances to trustees and charges by trust companies and banks, whether the work done is routine or involves skill and judgment, and any estimates that the cotrustees themselves have made of the value of their services [ Estate of McLaughlin (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 462, 467-468, 274 P.2d 868 ]. Thus, if cotrustees shoulder greater responsibility than would a sole trustee, or spend more time and do more work in the execution of the trust, they may be entitled to greater compensation.

For a general discussion of trustee compensation, see discussions in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.35[1] et seq.

[3] Liability

If there are two or more cotrustees, responsibility for wrongdoing may be shared. The general rule is that except as provided in Prob. Code § 16402(b), a trustee is not liable to a beneficiary for a breach of trust committed by a cotrustee [Prob. Code § 16402(a)]. However, Prob. Code § 16402(b) provides that a trustee is liable to the beneficiary for a breach committed by a cotrustee under any of the following circumstances:

- If the trustee participates in a breach of trust committed by the cotrustee;
- If the trustee improperly delegates the administration of the trust to the cotrustee;
- If the trustee approves, knowingly acquiesces in, or conceals a breach of trust committed by a cotrustee;
- If the trustee negligently enables the cotrustee to commit a breach of trust; or
- If the trustee neglects to take reasonable steps to compel the cotrustee to redress a breach of trust in a case in which the trustee knows or has information from which the trustee reasonably should have known of the breach.

The liability imposed by Probate Code § 16402(b), unlike other provisions of the Trust Law [see discussion in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.30[2]], applies only to acts or omissions of a cotrustee that occurred on or after July 1, 1987, the effective date of the law. Liability for acts or omissions that occurred before that date is governed by prior law [Prob. Code § 16402(c)].

[4] Tax Consequences of Appointment

The appointment of more than one trustee may, in certain circumstances, avoid unfavorable tax consequences. Under Internal Revenue Code Section 678(a), a person (other than the grantor) who has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest the corpus or the income of a trust in himself or herself will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes. If the power may be exercised only with another person, however, the rule does not apply [Treas. Reg. § 1.678(a)-1(b)].

Requiring that such a power be exercised in conjunction with a cotrustee will not, however, be sufficient to avoid unfavorable estate tax consequences. If a trustee has a power to invade the principal of the trust for his or her own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to health, education, support, or maintenance, that portion of the trust assets subject to the power may be includible in the estate of the holder and subject to estate tax upon his or her death [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A) and discussion in § 64A.32[1] et seq.]. This unfavorable estate tax result may be avoided only by establishing an "ascertainable standard" [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)] or by appointing a cotrustee who has a substantial interest in the property adverse to the holder [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)(ii)]. An "adverse interest" is not established by the mere fact that the co-holder has joint possession of the power, but does exist if the co-holder may possess the power after the death of the other holder and exercise it in favor of himself or herself, his or her estate or creditors, or the creditors of his or her estate [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-3(c)(2)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.32

§ 64A.32 Tax Considerations in Selection of Trustee*[1] In General

The selection of a trustee or cotrustee may have significant tax consequences. Some of these consequences apply especially to trusts in which beneficiaries are also trustees. Others are more generally applicable to trusts in which the trustees have wide powers to determine or allocate payments or benefits. In any trust arrangement in which tax savings are or may be an important factor, the attorney should carefully consider any provisions that may limit or imperil those savings.

[2] Management Powers

If the will gives the trustee the power to invade the principal of the trust for his or her own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)], with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. A general power of appointment, as defined in Section 2041(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code, is any power of appointment that is exercisable in favor of the decedent, the decedent's estate, the decedent's creditors, or creditors of the decedent's estate, except certain joint powers [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2041-2, 20.2041-3] and certain powers limited by an "ascertainable standard" [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)]. The term "power of appointment" includes all powers that are in substance and effect powers of appointment, regardless of the nomenclature used in creating them [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

Administrative powers typically granted to a testamentary trustee will not, however, constitute a power of appointment. The mere power of management, investment, and custody of assets, or the power to allocate receipts and disbursements as between income and principal, exercisable in a fiduciary capacity, whereby the holder has no power to enlarge or shift any of the beneficial interests except as an incidental consequence of the discharge of fiduciary duties, is not a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

[3] Generation-Skipping Trusts

The selection of the trustee will not in itself have any generation-skipping transfer tax consequences [see I.R.C. §§

2601-2663]. However, some provisions of the trust may trigger the imposition of the tax if the trust has the potential for benefitting the testator's grandchildren. For discussion, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.40[1] et seq. For a general discussion of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.16.

[4] Income Tax Liability

Appointment of a beneficiary as trustee may also result in the loss of the income tax advantages of a trust. A trust is ordinarily considered a separate entity for income tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 641 (imposition of income tax on trusts); I.R.C. §§ 651, 661 (trusts may deduct income distributed to beneficiaries); I.R.C. §§ 652, 662 (beneficiaries taxable on distributions from trusts)]; see also discussion in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.39[1]. The income of a trust may, however, be taxed to the trustee if the trustee has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest the corpus or the income of any portion of the trust in himself or herself [I.R.C. § 678]. The income will not be taxed to the trustee, however, if the power enables the trustee to apply the income of the trust to the support or maintenance of a person he or she is obligated to support (except to the extent the income is actually so applied) [Treas. Reg. § 1.678(c)-1].

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.33

§ 64A.33 Appointment of Trustee

[1] By Testator

One of the methods recognized in the Trust Law for the creation of a trust is a testamentary transfer of property by the owner to another person as trustee [Prob. Code § 15200(c); see discussion in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.33[1]]. Thus, a will in which the testator gives all or part of the property subject to the will to a named trustee, in trust, will suffice to appoint the named person as trustee.

[2] By Court

Failure to appoint a trustee will not be fatal to the trust, providing the other requisites of a valid testamentary trust are present [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 33; see discussions in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, §§ 64.31[1] et seq., 64.33[1] et seq.]. If a trust has no trustee, the vacancy may be filled, either in the manner provided in the trust instrument or by court order [Prob. Code § 15660].

The Trust Law describes eight circumstances under which the office of trustee will be deemed to be vacant [see Prob. Code § 15643]. For a general discussion of those circumstances, see discussion in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.34[1]. The Probate Code prescribes three ways in which a vacancy in the office of trustee may be filled:

- If the will names a successor or alternate trustee or specifies some other practical way for filling the vacancy, the vacancy must be filled in that way [Prob. Code § 15660(b)].
- If the will does not name a successor or alternate trustee or specify some other practical way for filling the vacancy, a trust company may become the trustee, providing all of the adult beneficiaries agree [Prob. Code § 15660(c); see Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined)].
- If the will does not name a successor or alternate trustee or specify a practical way for filling the vacancy, and if the vacancy is not filled by a trust company, the court may appoint a trustee to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)].

For a general discussion of the court's power to fill vacancies, see discussion in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.34[2].

§ 64A.34 Acceptance by Trustee

Just as a valid trust may be created without the appointment of a trustee [see discussion in § 64A.33[2]], so a valid trust may be created even if the trustee refuses or fails to accept the trust [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 35; see Pacific S. & L. Co. v. American etc. Co. (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 307, 309, 99 P.2d 355 (acceptance of trustee not essential to trust deed)]. Acceptance, however, usually will be a prerequisite to the imposition of liability on a trustee, and rejection will usually be essential to any claim that the trustee is absolved of liability to the trust or the beneficiaries.

The Trust Law provides that the person named as trustee may accept the trust (or a modification of the trust) by either of the following methods:

- (1) Signing the trust instrument (or the trust instrument as modified) or a separate written acceptance [Prob. Code § 15600(a)(1)]; or
- (2) Knowingly exercising powers or performing duties under the trust instrument (or the trust instrument as modified), except when there is an immediate risk of damage to the trust property [Prob. Code § 15600(a)(2); see Prob. Code § 15600(b)]. For the effect of acting when there is an immediate risk of danger to the trust property, see discussion in § 64A.35.

§ 64A.35 Rejection by Trustee

A person named as trustee may reject the trust (or a modification of the trust) in writing [Prob. Code § 15601(a)]. If the person named as trustee does not accept in writing within a reasonable time after learning of being named as trustee, the person is deemed to have rejected the trust (or the modification) [Prob. Code § 15601(b)].

In cases in which there is an immediate risk of damage to the trust property, the person named as trustee may act to preserve the trust property without accepting the trust (or a modification of the trust) if, within a reasonable time after acting, the person delivers a written rejection of the trust or modification to the settlor or, if the settlor is dead or incompetent, to a beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15600(b)]. The fact that there is an immediate risk of damage to the trust property does not, in itself, impose any duty on the person named as trustee to act in the capacity [Prob. Code § 15600(b)].

§ 64A.36 Resignation of Trustee

A trustee who has accepted the trust may resign the office. However, resignation may be effected only in the manner specified in Prob. Code § 15640. That section permits resignation:

- As provided in the trust instrument;
- With the consent of the person holding the power to revoke the trust (if the trust is revocable);
- With the consent of all adult beneficiaries who are receiving or are entitled to receive income under the trust or who would, if the trust were terminated at the time consent is sought, be entitled to receive a distribution of principal (if the trust is irrevocable); or
- Pursuant to a court order.

On petition by the trustee, the court is required to accept the trustee's resignation. However, the court may, at the time the resignation is accepted, make any orders necessary for the preservation of the trust property, including the appointment of a receiver or a temporary trustee [Prob. Code § 15640(d)].

A trustee's resignation does not affect the trustee's liability for acts or omissions, if any, nor does it relieve the sureties on the trustee's bond of their liability for acts or omissions of the trustee [Prob. Code § 15641]. A trustee who resigns is required to deliver the trust property to the successor trustee, or to a person appointed by the court to receive it, and remains responsible for the property until it is delivered [Prob. Code § 15644]. A resigning trustee has the powers reasonably necessary under the circumstances to preserve the trust property until it is delivered to the successor trustee and to perform actions necessary to complete the resignation or wind up his or her administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 15644].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.37

§ 64A.37 Removal of Trustee

[1] In General

A trustee may be removed in accordance with the trust instrument or by the court, on its own motion or on petition of a cotrustee or beneficiary [Prob. Code § 15642(a)]. Grounds for removal include breach of trust [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(1)], insolvency or other unfitness to administer the trust [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(2)], or failure or refusal to act [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(4)]. A trustee may also be removed if hostility or lack of cooperation among cotrustees impairs the administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(3)], if the trustee's compensation is excessive under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(5)], if there is a conflict between the trustee's interests and those of the trust [ Getty v. Getty (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139-140, 252 Cal. Rptr. 342 ]. A trustee also may be removed if the trustee is substantially unable to manage the trust's financial resources [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(7)], the trustee is substantially unable to resist fraud or undue influence [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(8)], or if there is other "good cause" for removal [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(9)]. When a conflict between the trustee's interest and those of the trust pertains only to particular litigation involving the trust, the court may order a partial removal of the trustee with respect to that litigation. The court then will appoint a trustee ad litem to act as trustee for that litigation only [ Getty v. Getty (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 134, 141-142, 252 Cal. Rptr. 342 ].

If it appears to the court that trust property or the interests of a beneficiary may suffer loss or injury pending decision on a petition for removal of a trustee, the court, on its own motion or on petition of a cotrustee or beneficiary, may compel the trustee whose removal is sought to surrender trust property to a cotrustee or to a receiver or temporary trustee. The court may also suspend the powers of the trustee to the extent the court deems necessary.

Like a trustee who has resigned [see § 64A.36], a trustee who has been removed is obligated to deliver the trust property to his or her successor and has the powers reasonably necessary to preserve the trust property pending termination of his or her administration [Prob. Code § 15644].

[2] Special Rules Governing Removal of Trustee Who Drafted Trust Instrument or Is Relative or Associate of Drafter

In addition to the general grounds for removal of a trustee, a trustee may also be removed if there is only one trustee, if the trust instrument became irrevocable after January 1, 1994, and if the trustee is a person described in Prob. Code § 21350(a) [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)]. The persons described in Prob. Code § 21350(a) are:

- The person who drafted the instrument.
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or employee of the person who drafted the instrument.
- Any partner or shareholder of any law partnership or law corporation in which the person who drafted the instrument has an ownership interest, and any employee of any such law partnership or law corporation.
- Any person who has a fiduciary relationship with the transferor, including a conservator or trustee, who transcribes the instrument or causes it to be transcribed.
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or employee of, a person described in the fourth category, above.
- A care custodian of a dependent adult.
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or an employee of a care custodian.

For purposes of this rule, a "person who is related by blood or marriage" to a person means all of the following [Prob. Code § 21350(b)]:

- The person's spouse or predeceased spouse.
- Relatives within the third degree of the person and the person's spouse.
- The spouse of any person who is described in the second category immediately above.

In determining relationships for purposes of this rule, Prob. Code § 6406, which governs the inheritance rights of relatives of the half blood, Prob. Code § 6407, which covers the inheritance rights of afterborn heirs, and Prob. Code §§ 6450-6455, which prescribe rules for determining the relationship of parent and child for purposes of intestate succession, are all applicable [Prob. Code § 21350(b)].

The term "dependent adult" means any of the following [Prob. Code § 21350(c); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 15610.23(a)]:

- Any person residing in California, between the ages of 18 and 64 years, who has physical or mental limitations that restrict his or her ability to carry out normal activities or to protect his or her rights including, but not limited to, persons who have physical or developmental disabilities or whose physical or mental abilities have diminished because of age [Prob. Code § 21350(c)].
- Any person between the ages of 18 and 64 who is admitted as an inpatient to a 24-hour health facility as defined in Health & Safety Code §§ 1250, 1250.2, and 1250.3.
- Any person older than age 64 who would be a "dependent adult" under the above definitions if he or she were between the ages of 18 and 64.

The term "care custodian" means an administrator or an employee of any of the following public or private facilities or agencies, or persons providing care or services for elders or dependent adults, including members of the support staff and maintenance staff [Prob. Code § 21350(c); Welf & Inst. Code § 15610.17]:

- Twenty-four hour health facilities [see Health & Saf. Code §§ 1250, 1250.2, 1250.3].
- Clinics.
- Home health agencies.
- Agencies providing publicly funded in-home supportive services, nutrition services, or other home and community-based support services.
- Adult day health care centers and adult day care.
- Secondary schools that serve 18- to 22-year-old dependent adults and postsecondary educational institutions that serve dependent adults or elders.
- Independent living centers.
- Camps.
- Alzheimer's Disease day care resource centers.
- Community care facilities [see Health & Saf. Code § 1502] and residential care facilities for the elderly [see Health & Saf. Code § 1569.2].
- Respite care facilities.
- Foster homes.
- Vocational rehabilitation facilities and work activity centers.
- Designated area agencies on aging.
- Regional centers for persons with developmental disabilities.
- State Department of Social Services and State Department of Health Services licensing divisions.
- County welfare departments.
- Offices of patients' rights advocates and clients' rights advocates, including attorneys.
- The office of the long-term care ombudsman.
- Offices of public conservators, public guardians, and court investigators.
- Any protection or advocacy agency or entity that is designated by the Governor to fulfill the requirements and assurances of the federal Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000 [see 42 U.S.C. § 15001 et seq.] or the Protection and Advocacy for the Mentally Ill Individuals

Act of 1986 [see 42 U.S.C. § 10801 et seq.], for the protection and advocacy of the rights of persons with mental illness.

- Humane societies and animal control agencies.
- Fire departments.
- Offices of environmental health and building code enforcement.
- Any other protective, public, sectarian, mental health, or private assistance or advocacy agency or person providing health services or social services to elders or dependent adults.

The last item in the preceding list of care custodians is the most significant in light of its broad interpretation by California courts. In Bernard v. Foley, the California Supreme Court held that the statutory definition set out above does not include a professional or occupational limitation and does not provide for a pre-existing personal friendship exception. Thus, the definition includes any person providing care or health services to a dependent adult [ Bernard v. Foley (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 794, 803, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 248, 139 P.3d 1196 ; see also Estate of Odian (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 152, 167, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390 (paid live-in caregiver who provides social services within the meaning of Prob. Code § 21350(a) is a care custodian and is subject to the presumption of undue influence)]. It has also been held that a long-term care ombudsman for a health care facility is a "care custodian" for purposes of the statute during the time he or she serves as ombudsman for a particular "dependent adult," and remains a care custodian within the meaning of the statute even after his or her formal ombudsman relationship with a particular resident has ended, due either to a change in the ombudsman's facility assignment or the fact that the resident has left the facility, when the ombudsman, as a result of his or her fiduciary relationship with the resident, develops a personal relationship with the resident and thereby acquires personal and financial information about the resident [ Estate of Shinkle (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 990, 993, 1007, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 ; overruled in part on other grounds in Bernard v. Foley (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 794, 816, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 248, 139 P.3d 1196 ] .

If a trustee is one of the persons described in Prob. Code § 21350(a), the trustee is subject to removal, whether or not the trustee is also the transferee of a donative transfer made by the settlor, unless, based upon any evidence of the intent of the settlor and all other facts and circumstances, which must be made known to the court, the court finds that it is consistent with the settlor's intent that the trustee continue to serve and that this intent was not the product of fraud, menace, duress, or undue influence [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)]. The trustee is not subject to removal based on this rule if the settlor is related by blood or marriage to, or is a cohabitant, with any the trustee, the person who drafted or transcribed the instrument, or the person who caused the instrument to be transcribed [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(A)], or if, after full disclosure of the relationships of the persons involved, the instrument is approved by the court [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(C)]. Further, the trustee will not be subject to removal under this rule if the trust instrument is reviewed by an independent attorney who counsels the settlor about the nature of the intended trustee designation and signs and delivers to the settlor and the designated trustee a certificate in substantially the form required by Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B) [see § 64A.203].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.38

§ 64A.38 Professional Fiduciaries

[1] Professional Fiduciary

A professional fiduciary is a person who acts as a conservator or guardian for two or more persons at the same time who are not related to the professional fiduciary or to each other by blood, adoption, marriage, or registered domestic partnership [Bus. & Prof. Code 6501 (f)]. A professional fiduciary is also a person who acts as a trustee, agent under a durable power of attorney for health care, or agent under a durable power of attorney for finances, for more than three people or more than three families or a combination of people and families that totals more than three, at the same time, who are not related to the professional fiduciary by blood, adoption, marriage or registered domestic partnership [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f), see Qualifications for Licensure, § 64A.38[4]].

However, the following are exempted from the definition of professional fiduciary, and are not required to obtain a professional fiduciary license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f)(5)]:

- (1) A trust company, as defined by Prob. Code § 83;
- (2) An FDIC-insured institution, or its holding companies, subsidiaries or affiliates;
- (3) Any public agency, including the public guardian, public conservator, or other agency of the State of California or of a county of California or any regional center for persons with developmental disability as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 4620;
- (4) A person who is employed by a trust company, an FDIC-insured institution or its holding companies, subsidiaries or affiliates, or a public agency who is acting in the course and scope of that employment, and in the instance of a public officer of a public agency, acting in the course and scope of official duties;
- (5) Any person whose sole activity as a professional fiduciary is as a broker-dealer, broker-dealer agent, investment adviser representative registered and regulated under the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Corp. Code § 25000 et seq.], the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80b-1 et seq.], or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.], or involves serving as a trustee to a company regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.].

[2] Professional Fiduciaries Bureau

The Professional Fiduciaries Bureau ("Bureau") is created under the Professional Fiduciaries Act and has the duty of enforcing and administering the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6510]. Even though the Bureau is set to become inoperative as of July 1, 2011 and repealed as of January 1, 2012 (unless later statues deletes or extends the dates on inoperability and repeal), upon repeal, the responsibilities and jurisdiction of the Bureau will be transferred and vested in the existing Professional Fiduciaries Advisory Committee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6511]. The Bureau is responsible for administering the licensing and regulatory program established under the Act, approving classes for prelicense and continuing education, and preparing and administering licensing exams [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6518]. The Bureau has adopted a Professional Fiduciaries Code of Ethics ("Code of Ethics") which is provided on the Bureau's internet website and to any person requesting an application for license [see www.fiduciary.ca.gov].

[3] Licensing Requirements

No person may act or hold themselves out to the public as a professional fiduciary unless he or she is licensed as a professional fiduciary under the Professional Fiduciaries Act [Prob. Code § 60.1(b), see Professional Fiduciaries Act Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.]. A superior court may not appoint a person to carry out the duties of a professional fiduciary unless he or she holds a valid, unexpired, unsuspended license as a professional fiduciary under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq. [Prob. Code § 2340]. A court may appoint a person to be a professional fiduciary without a professional fiduciary license if they are exempt from the definition of "professional fiduciary" under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501, or are exempt from the licensing requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530 [Prob. Code § 2340]. Furthermore, every person previously required to register with the statewide registry under Prob. Code § 2850 et seq. prior to January 1, 2007, and every person required to file information with the clerk of the court under Prob. Code § 2340 et seq. is required to obtain a license as a professional fiduciary under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.

Licensing requirements to do not apply to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530(b)-(d)]:

- 1) A licensed attorney;
- 2) A licensed certified public accountant;
- 3) An Internal Revenue Service agent acting within the scope of practice.

All applications for a professional fiduciary license can be obtained online, through the California Department of Consumer Affairs, at <http://www.fiduciary.ca.gov/>[see Qualifications for Licensure, § 64A.38[4]].

[4] Qualifications for Licensure

The Bureau reviews all applications and they will approve those applications that meet the required qualifications [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6536]. The Bureau may also investigate an applicant's qualifications [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6536]. To receive a license as a professional fiduciary, an applicant must meet the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6533(a)-(k)]:

- (a) Be at least 21 years old;
- (b) Be a United States citizen or be legally admitted to the United States;

(c) Have not committed any acts that are grounds for denial of a license under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480, 6536 [see below];

(d) Submit fingerprints as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6533.5 in order to obtain criminal offender record information;

(e) Have completed 30 hours of prelicensing education as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6538;

(f) Have passed the licensing exam under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6539;

(g) Have a least one of the following:

a. A BA or BS degree from a college or university;

b. An AA/AS degree from a college or university and at least five (5) years experience with substantive fiduciary responsibilities working as a professional fiduciary, public agency, or financial institution acting as a conservator, guardian, trustee, personal representative, or agent under a power of attorney; or

c. Experience of not less than three (3) years, prior to July 1, 2008, with substantive fiduciary institution acting as a conservator, guardian, trustee, personal representative, or agent under a power of attorney.

(h) Agree to adhere to the Professional Fiduciaries Code of Ethics [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6520] and to all statutes and regulations;

(i) Consent to the bureau conducting a credit check;

(j) File a completed application;

(k) Submit a nonrefundable application fee.

The Bureau will not issue a license to any applicant who [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6536(a)-(e)];

(a) Does not meet the qualifications for licensure [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6533(a)-(k)];

(b) Has been convicted of a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a fiduciary;

(c) Has engaged in fraud or deceit in applying for a license;

(d) Has engaged in dishonesty, fraud, or gross negligence in performing the functions or duties of a fiduciary;

(e) Has been removed as a fiduciary by a court for breach of trust committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference, or has demonstrated a pattern of negligent conduct, including a removal prior to January 1, 2009, and all appeals have been taken, or the time to file an appeal has expired.

[5] License Renewal

A license is valid for one year and will expire one year after it was issued on the last day of the month in which it was issued [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6541(a)]. A license may be renewed by filing a renewal application, submitting the annual statement, as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561 [see § 64A.38[6]], submitting proof of compliance with continuing education requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6538(b)] (15 hours of approved courses each year), and payment of the renewal fee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6541(b)]. Conduct that would result in a refusal of a license renewal includes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6541(b)]:

- (1) Conviction of a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a fiduciary;
- (2) Fraud or deceit in obtaining a license;
- (3) Dishonesty, fraud, or gross negligence in performing the functions or duties of a professional fiduciary;
- (4) Removal by a court as a fiduciary for breach of a fiduciary duty.

[6] Initial and Annual Statement

A licensee is required to keep complete and accurate records of client accounts and must make them available for audit by the bureau [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6560]. A licensee must file initially and annually thereafter, a statement which contains the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561(a)]:

- (1) His or her business address, phone and fax number;
- (2) Whether or not he or she has been removed as conservator, guardian, trustee or personal representative for cause;
- (3) The case names, court locations and case numbers for all matters where the licensee has been appointed by the court;
- (4) Whether he or she has been found by a court to have breached a fiduciary duty;
- (5) Whether he or she has reassigned or settled a matter in which a complaint has been filed, along with the case number and a statement of the issues and facts pertaining to the allegations;
- (6) Any licenses or professional certificates held;
- (7) Any ownership or beneficial interests in any businesses or other enterprises held by the licensee or by a family member that receives or has received payment from a client of the licensee;
- (8) Whether the licensee has ever filed for bankruptcy or held a controlling financial interest in a business that filed for bankruptcy;
- (9) The name of any persons or entities that have an interest in the licensee's professional fiduciary business;
- (10) Whether the licensee has been convicted of a crime.

The annual statement must be filed with the Bureau 60 days prior to the expiration of the license [Bus. & Prof. Code §

6562].

[7] Suspension, Revocation, Denial and Disciplinary Action

The Bureau has authority to investigate the actions of any professional fiduciary [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6580(a)]. Sanctions may include administrative citations and fines, license suspension, probations or revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6580(b)]. A license may be suspended, revoked, denied or other disciplinary action may be imposed for one or more of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6584]:

- (a) Conviction of any felony or misdemeanor, if the misdemeanor is substantially related to the functions and duties of a professional fiduciary;
- (b) Failure to notify the bureau of a conviction pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6561(a)(10);
- (c) Fraud or misrepresentation in obtaining a license;
- (d) Fraud, dishonesty, corruption, willful violation of duty, gross negligence or incompetence in practice, or unprofessional conduct in, or related to, the practice of a professional fiduciary;
- (e) Failure to comply with, or to pay a monetary sanction imposed by a court for failure to provide timely reports;
- (f) Failure to pay a civil penalty relating to the licensee's professional fiduciary duties;
- (g) The revocation of, suspension of, or other disciplinary action against, any other professional license by the State of California or by another state;
- (h) Violation of this Bus. Prof. Code § 6500 et seq., Probate Code § 4000 et seq., Probate Code § 4600 et seq., Probate Code § 5000 et seq., or any of the statutes, rules, or regulations pertaining to the duties or functions of a professional fiduciary.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.39

§ 64A.39 Duties of Trustees*[1] Administration of Trust

On acceptance of the trust, the trustee has a duty to administer it according to the trust instrument and, except to the extent that the trust instrument provides otherwise, according to the Trust Law [Prob. Code § 16000; see discussions in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.30[1] et seq.].

The trustee has a duty to administer the trust solely in the interest of the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16002(a)]. If the trust has two or more beneficiaries, the trustee has a duty to deal with them impartially and to act impartially in investing and managing the trust property, taking into account any differing interests of the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16003]. Although a trustee has a general duty not to knowingly become the trustee of a trust that is adverse in its nature to the first trust [Prob. Code § 16005; see § 64A.39[2]], a trustee who administers two trusts that are not adverse may sell, exchange, or participate in the sale or exchange of trust property between the two trusts if the sale or exchange is fair and reasonable with respect to the beneficiaries of both trusts [Prob. Code § 16002(b)(1)] and if the trustee gives the beneficiaries of both trusts notice of all material facts related to the sale or exchange that the trustee knows or should know [Prob. Code § 16002(b)(2)]. Further, the provision of services for compensation by a regulated financial institution or its affiliates in the ordinary course of business either to a trust of which it also acts as trustee or to a person dealing with the trust does not violate the trustee's duty of loyalty [Prob. Code § 16015].

[2] Avoiding Conflicts of Interest

The trustee has a duty not to use or deal with trust property for the trustee's own profit or for any purpose unconnected with the trust [Prob. Code § 16004(a); but see Prob. Code § 16220 (trustee may keep property received from settlor or other person even if trustee is personally interested in property) and discussion in § 64A.40[2]]. The trustee may not take part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a)].

The trustee may not enforce any claim against the trust property that the trustee purchased after or in contemplation of appointment as trustee, although the court may allow the trustee to be reimbursed from trust property the amount that the trustee paid in good faith for the claim [Prob. Code § 16004(b)].

A transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary (except an agreement relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee) that occurs during the existence of the trust, or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains, and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary, is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof [Prob. Code § 16004(c); see Evid. Code §§ 605, 606 (presumptions affecting burden of proof)].

The trustee of one trust has a duty not to knowingly become a trustee of another trust that is adverse in its nature to the interest of the beneficiary of the first trust, and a duty to eliminate the conflict or resign as trustee when the conflict is discovered [Prob. Code § 16005].

[3] Dealing With Trust Property

The trustee has a duty to take reasonable steps to take charge of trust property and keep and preserve it [Prob. Code § 16006; see Prob. Code § 16220 (power to collect, hold, and retain trust property); see also Prob. Code § 16220 (trustee may keep property received from settlor or other person even if trustee has personal interest in property)]. The trustee also has a duty to make the trust property productive under the circumstances and in furtherance of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16007].

The trustee must also keep the trust property separate from other property not subject to the trust [Prob. Code § 16009(a)] and see to it that the trust property is designated as property of the trust [Prob. Code § 16009(b)].

The trustee's duties with respect to the management and investment of trust property are subject to the prudent investor rule, which is set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. This rule is discussed in §§ 64A.40[3] and 64A.260[1].

[4] Enforcing Claims and Defending Actions

The trustee has a duty to take reasonable steps to enforce claims that are part of the trust property [Prob. Code § 16010] and to defend actions that may result in a loss to the trust [Prob. Code § 16011; see Prob. Code § 16242 (trustee's power to pay, settle, contest, or release claims)].

[5] Delegation of Duties

The trustee has a duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts that the trustee can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a)]. The trustee may not transfer the office of trustee to another person or delegate the entire administration of the trust to a cotrustee or other person [Prob. Code § 16012(a); see § 64A.39[6]]. If the trustee has properly delegated any matter to an agent, cotrustee, or other person, the trustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person performing the delegated matter [Prob. Code § 16012(b)]. In exercising investment and management functions, however, the trustee is not subject to these rules, but must act in accordance with the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code § 16012(c); see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and § 64A.260[1]].

[6] Cotrustees

Special rules relate to the duties of cotrustees. If a trust has more than one trustee, each trustee has a duty to participate in the administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 16013(a)] and to take reasonable steps to prevent a cotrustee from committing a breach of trust [Prob. Code § 16013(b)]. If a cotrustee has committed a breach of trust, each trustee has a further duty to compel that cotrustee to redress the breach [Prob. Code § 16013(b)].

[7] Skill and Care

The trustee must administer the trust with reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16040(a)]. When taking any action, the trustee must consider the circumstances then prevailing and use the same care, skill, and caution that a prudent person acting in a like capacity would use in the conduct of an enterprise of like character and with like aims to accomplish the purposes of the trust as determined from the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16040(a)].

This rule is known as the prudent person rule. Unless it is expanded or restricted by express provisions in the trust instrument [see Prob. Code § 16040(b)], it governs all aspects of trust administration except investments, which are subject to the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16040(c); see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 (Uniform Prudent Investor Act)]. For discussion of the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.40[3].

If the trust instrument includes express provisions expanding or restricting the trustee's duties under the prudent person rule, the trustee is entitled to rely on the provisions and may not be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16040(b)].

[8] Exercise of Discretionary Powers

The general rule is that a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is not left to the trustee's arbitrary discretion but must be exercised "reasonably" [Prob. Code § 16080]. If the trust instrument confers "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion on a trustee, the trustee is relieved of the duty of acting "reasonably," but still must act in accordance with fiduciary principles and not in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)].

If the trustee is also a beneficiary of the trust, and if the trust permits the trustee, either individually or as co-trustee, to make discretionary distributions of income or principal for his or her own benefit pursuant to a standard, the trustee must exercise the power reasonably and in accordance with the standard, even when the trust instrument uses terms like "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" [Prob. Code § 16081(b)].

Similarly, if the trust permits the trustee to make discretionary distributions of income or principal for his or her own benefit, but does not specify a standard by which the distributions are to be made, the trustee may make distributions only for his or her health, education, support or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514, even when the trust instrument uses terms like "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" [Prob. Code § 16081(c)]. A power to distribute principal or income for a person's health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514 is generally known as an "ascertainable standard." The rule permitting distributions only pursuant to an "ascertainable standard" applies to (1) all trusts executed on or after January 1, 1997, (2) all testamentary trusts created under wills executed on or after January 1, 1997, and (3) any irrevocable trust created under a document executed before January 1, 1997, or any revocable trust executed before that date if the settlor was incapacitated as of that date, unless all parties in interest elect affirmatively not to be subject to the rule [Prob. Code § 16081(e); see Prob. Code § 16081(g) ("party in interest" defined)]. The rule does not apply to any power held by the settlor of a revocable or amendable trust or any power held by a settlor's or testator's spouse who is the trustee of a trust for which a marital deduction has been allowed [see Prob. Code § 21520 ("marital deduction" and "marital deduction gift" defined)]. Further, the rule does not apply if the settlor or testator expressly refers to Prob. Code § 16081(c) and provides in the trust or will that a broader power is conferred on the trustee [Prob. Code § 16081(c)].

[9] Reporting

The trustee has a general duty to keep the beneficiaries reasonably informed about the trust and its administration [Prob. Code § 16060; see Strauss v. Superior Court (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 396, 401, 224 P.2d 726]. This duty includes the duty to communicate to the beneficiary information that is reasonably necessary to enable the beneficiary to prevent or redress a breach of the trust [Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 173, comment c]. However, the duty does not require disclosure of communications protected by the attorney-client privilege [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 201, 207, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716, 990 P.2d 591].

On reasonable request, the trustee must provide a beneficiary with a report of the assets, liabilities, receipts, and disbursements of the trust [Prob. Code § 16061]. The report must include information about the trustee's acts and particulars of the trust administration relevant to the beneficiary's interest, including the terms of the trust [Prob. Code § 16061]. The report need not be given if the trust instrument waives the requirement [Prob. Code §§ 16061, 16064(a)]. However, a waiver in a trust instrument will be ineffectual if there is only one trustee and the trustee is a "disqualified person" [Prob. Code §§ 16062(e), 16064(a); for information on "disqualified persons," see Prob. Code §§ 21350(a), 21350.5, and 21351 and discussion in Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.16 et seq.]. A waiver will also be ineffectual if it is likely that a material breach of the trust has occurred [Prob. Code § 16064(a)]. In this case, the court may compel the trustee to report information about the trust despite the waiver [Prob. Code § 16064(a)].

There is no duty to report to beneficiaries if the trust is revocable and the person holding the power to revoke the trust is still living and capable of revoking it [Prob. Code § 16064(b)]. Similarly, there is no duty to report to a beneficiary who has waived in writing the right to a report [Prob. Code § 16064(c)]. However, a waiver of the right to receive a report may be withdrawn in writing at any time, and a waiver will have no effect on the beneficiary's right to petition the court for a report [Prob. Code § 16064(c); see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(7)].

Finally, there is no duty to report when the beneficiary to whom the report would be given is the same person as the trustee [Prob. Code § 16064(d)].

[10] Accounting

The trustee's duty to account to the beneficiaries is closely related to the trustee's duty to keep the beneficiaries reasonably informed about the trust and its administration [see § 64A.39[9]] and is subject to similar rules. The trustee has a general duty to account to each beneficiary to whom income or principal is required or authorized in the trustee's discretion to be currently distributed [Prob. Code § 16062(a); see Prob. Code § 16063 (contents of accounting)]. However, this duty is subject to exceptions. First, the trustee has no duty to account to the extent that the trust instrument waives accounts [Prob. Code § 16064(a)]. However, a waiver in a trust instrument will be ineffectual if there is only one trustee and the trustee is a "disqualified person" [Prob. Code §§ 16062(e), 16064(d); see § 64A.39[9]; for definition of "disqualified person," see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.16 et seq.], or if it is reasonably likely that the trustee has committed a material breach of the trust [Prob. Code § 16064(a)]. Second, there is no duty to account if the trust is a living trust created by an instrument executed before July 1, 1987 [Prob. Code § 16062(b)]. Third, if the trust is a testamentary trust created by a will executed before July 1, 1987, there is no duty to account unless the trust is removed from continuing court jurisdiction under either Prob. Code §§ 17350-17354 (removal of trusts executed before July 1, 1977, from continuing court jurisdiction) [see discussion in Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.39] or former Prob. Code § 1120.1a [repealed Stats. 1986, ch. 820]. On removal of such a trust from continuing court supervision, the trustee is subject to accounting duties under either Prob. Code § 16062(a) [Prob. Code § 16062(c)] or former Prob. Code § 1120.1a [Prob. Code § 16062(d)], depending on when the trust was removed from continuing court supervision. The duty to account under former Prob. Code § 1120.1a may be satisfied by furnishing an account that satisfies the requirements of Prob. Code § 16063 [Prob. Code § 16062(d)]. Finally, if the trust is revocable and the person holding the power to revoke is competent, the trustee's duty to account, if any, is owed to the person holding the power to revoke and not to the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16064(b); see Prob. Code § 15800 (rights of person holding power to revoke)]. When the settlor of a revocable trust was under the care and custody of a court-appointed conservator, the beneficiaries had no right to an accounting because the trust remained revocable despite the conservatorship [ Johnson v. Kotyck (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 83, 88, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99].

When the trustee has a duty to account, the accountings must be provided [Prob. Code § 16062(a)]:

- At least annually;

- At the termination of the trust; and
- On a change of trustees.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.40

§ 64A.40 Powers of Trustee

[1] In General

Under the Trust Law, the trustee has a broad range of powers that may be exercised without court authorization. These powers include the following [Prob. Code § 16200]:

- The powers conferred by the trust instrument;
- Except as limited in the trust instrument, the powers conferred by statute; and
- Except as limited in the trust instrument, the power to perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the prudent person and prudent investor rules [Prob. Code § 16200(c)]; see Prob. Code §§ 16040(a) (prudent person rule), 16047 (prudent investor rule); see also discussions in §§ 64A.39[7] and 64A.40[3].

The grant of a power to a trustee, whether by the trust instrument, by statute, or by the court, does not in itself require or permit the exercise of the power [Prob. Code § 16202]. In all cases, the exercise of a power by a trustee is, notwithstanding any grant of power, broadly subject to the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16202; see discussions in § 64A.39[7], [8]]; and the court retains discretion in appropriate cases to relieve a trustee from restrictions on the exercise of the trustee's powers set forth in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16201]. Thus, the court retains power to permit deviation from trust restrictions if and to the extent that deviations are made necessary by unforeseen circumstances [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 167; see also Estate of Loring (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 423, 436-437, 175 P.2d 524; Estate of Mabury (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 969, 984-985, 127 Cal. Rptr. 233].

[2] Receiving, Holding, Managing, and Disposing of Property

The trustee has the power to collect, hold, and retain trust property received from a settlor or any other person until the trustee determines, in the trustee's judgment, that the property should be disposed of [Prob. Code § 16220; see Prob. Code § 16006 (duty to take and control trust property) and § 64A.39[3]]. The property may be retained even if it includes property in which the trustee is personally interested [Prob. Code § 16220; but see Prob. Code § 16004(a)].

(trustee may not use or deal with trust property for own profit) and discussion in § 64A.39[2]. Further, the trustee has power to accept additions to the property of the trust from a settlor or any other person [Prob. Code § 16221].

The trustee has limited power to operate a business or other enterprise that forms part of the trust estate. The basic rule is that a business may be operated on a permanent basis only if the trust instrument authorizes (or the court orders) permanent operation [Prob. Code § 16222(b)]. However, this rule does not apply to the leasing of four or fewer residential units, because such leasing is not considered to be "the operation of a business or other enterprise" for this purpose [Prob. Code § 16222(b)]. If the trust instrument does not authorize permanent operation, however, and if the "business" is not the leasing of four or fewer residential units, the trustee has authority to operate the business only for a "reasonable time," pending a sale of the business or a court hearing on an application for authority to operate it permanently [Prob. Code § 16222(c)]. If the trustee has power to operate a business, the trustee also has power to effect incorporation, dissolution, or other changes in the form of the business [Prob. Code § 16222(a)].

With respect to trust property, the trustee also has the following powers, among others:

- To acquire or dispose of property, for cash or on credit, at public or private sale, or by exchange [Prob. Code § 16226].
- To manage, control, divide, develop, improve, exchange, partition, change the character of, or abandon trust property or any interest in trust property [Prob. Code § 16227].
- To encumber, mortgage, or pledge trust property for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust in connection with the exercise of any power vested in the trustee [Prob. Code § 16228].
- To make repairs, alterations, or improvements in buildings or other trust property [Prob. Code § 16229(a)].
- To demolish any improvements [Prob. Code § 16229(b)].
- To raze existing or erect new party walls or buildings [Prob. Code § 16229(c)].
- To subdivide or develop land [Prob. Code § 16230(a)].
- To dedicate land to public use [Prob. Code § 16230(b)].
- To enter into leases (as lessor or lessee) for terms within or extending beyond the term of the trust [Prob. Code §§ 16231, 16232].
- To grant or take options for the acquisition or disposition of any property, whether the options are exercisable within or beyond the term of the trust [Prob. Code § 16233].
- To vote stock and exercise other rights of stock ownership [Prob. Code §§ 16234-16239].
- To insure trust property against damage or loss and to insure the trustee against liability with respect to third persons [Prob. Code § 16240].

[3] Investments

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, a trustee who invests and manages trust assets must comply with the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16046(a)]. A settlor who wishes to expand or restrict the prudent investor rule may do so by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. The trustee is entitled to rely in good faith on any express provisions expanding or restricting the rule and may not be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act, which is a part of the Trust Law, sets forth the terms of the prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. The rule requires the trustee to invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. In satisfying this standard, the trustee must exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16047(a)].

The prudent investor rule permits the trustee to invest in any kind of property or type of investment, or to engage in any course of action or investment strategy, consistent with the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code § 16047(e)]. In this respect the rule is consistent with Prob. Code § 16223, which gives the trustee power to invest in any kind of property, whether real, personal, or mixed. Thus the rule permits investment in investment company shares, mutual funds, index funds, and other modern vehicles for collective investments [Uniform Prudent Investor Act, 25 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 543, 580 (1995)]. However, the rule requires the trustee to diversify the trust's investments unless, under the circumstances, it is prudent not to do so [Prob. Code § 16048; see § 64A.240[1]].

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act applies to all trusts existing on and created after its effective date, which was January 1, 1996 [Prob. Code § 16054]. When applied to trusts existing on the effective date of the Act, it applies only to decisions or actions occurring after that date [Prob. Code § 16054].

For further discussion of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.260[1].

[4] Miscellaneous Powers

The Trust Law also empowers the trustee to do the following:

- Borrow money for any trust purpose to be repaid from trust property [Prob. Code § 16241].
- Pay or contest any claim [Prob. Code § 16242(a)].
- Settle, compromise, arbitrate, or release any claim belonging to the trust [Prob. Code § 16242(b), (c)].
- Pay taxes, assessments, reasonable compensation of the trustee and employees and agents of the trust, and other expenses incurred in the collection, care, administration, and protection of the trust [Prob. Code § 16243].
- Make loans to beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16244(a)].
- Guarantee loans to the beneficiary by encumbrances on trust property [Prob. Code § 16244(b)].
- Pay any sum distributable to a beneficiary to another person for the use or benefit of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16245].
- Distribute property and money in divided or undivided interests and adjust resulting differences in valuation [Prob. Code § 16246].
- Hire persons, including accountants, attorneys, auditors, investment advisers, or other agents, even if they are associated or affiliated with the trustee, to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of administrative duties [Prob. Code § 16247].

- Execute and deliver all instruments that are needed to accomplish or facilitate exercise of the powers vested in the trustee [Prob. Code § 16248].

- Prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings for the protection of trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties [Prob. Code § 16249].

§ 64A.41 Release of Liability

A trustee may not require a beneficiary to relieve the trustee of liability as a condition for making a distribution or payment to, or for the benefit of, the beneficiary, if the trust instrument requires the distribution or payment [Prob. Code § 16004.5(a)]. This provision does not, however, affect the trustee's right to maintain a reserve for reasonably anticipated expenses, to seek a voluntary release or discharge of the trustee's liability from the beneficiary, to require indemnification against a claim by a person or entity (other than a beneficiary) that may reasonably arise as a result of the distribution, to withhold any portion of an otherwise required distribution that is reasonably in dispute, or to seek court or beneficiary approval of an accounting of trust activities [Prob. Code § 16004.5(b)].

 CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
 PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
 A. Preliminary Determinations for Selection and Appointment of Trustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.100

§ 64A.100 Number of Trustees

1. Will needs of trust be adequately served by a single fiduciary?

a. Single trustee will adequately meet needs of most testamentary trusts.

(1) If individual selected to serve as sole trustee is experienced in business or investment matters, trustor may find it unnecessary to seek such experience through appointment of cotrustees.

(2) Vesting duties and responsibilities in single individual or corporation eliminates such problems as:

(a) Need for unanimity of action;

(b) Disagreements among cotrustees; and

(c) Petitions for court instructions [see discussion in § 64A.31[1] et seq.].

(3) Appointment of corporate trustee may indirectly achieve management diversity without necessity for appointment of cotrustees.

NOTE:

Corporate trustees are customarily managed by many persons whose combined experience, expertise, and judgment are at the service of trusts they administer. The trustor should be aware, however, that appointment of a trust company or other corporate trustee does not guarantee that all decisions pertaining to his or her trust will be made by several persons. If the trust is relatively small or uncomplicated, a single trust officer may, in practice, make all (or nearly all) of the decisions relating to it.

b. Appointment of cotrustees may be desirable if:

(1) Combined judgment, knowledge, and reflection of several persons are deemed important; or

NOTE:

Cotrustees may bring greater wisdom and experience to trust than single trustee, even if single trustee is a trust company or other corporate trustee.

(2) Trustor wants benefits of corporate trustee's administration and record-keeping facilities, but desires that specified decisions (such as investment decisions or decisions regarding distributions) be made by a particular individual.

NOTE:

Unless the will provides otherwise, a power vested in two or more trustees may only be exercised by their unanimous action [Prob. Code § 15620]. The duties of cotrustees may, however, be divided or apportioned among them [see discussion in § 64A.360[1][b]; see also § 64A.121, P 15].

If a corporation and an individual are the cotrustees, the corporation will usually insist that it have custody of all moneys, securities, and personal property, keep all records and accounts, and make all payments and distributions.

2. Will appointment of more than one trustee increase costs of trust administration?

NOTE:

Unless the will provides (or the cotrustees agree) otherwise, if the trust has two or more trustees, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services rendered by them [Prob. Code § 15683]. While the designation of more than one trustee need not, in itself, increase the total amount of the compensation, the number of the trustees may indirectly affect the total [see discussion in § 64A.31[2]].

3. Will appointment of more than one trustee result in any tax advantages for trust?

a. Trustee-beneficiary who has power to vest trust corpus or income in himself or herself will be taxed on income unless power is exercisable only with another person [I.R.C. § 678(a)(1)].

b. Assets over which trustee has general power of appointment will be included in trustee's taxable estate [I.R.C. § 2041(a)] unless power can be exercised only in conjunction with another person having a substantial interest in property that is adverse to exercise of power in favor of trustee [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)(ii)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Selection and Appointment of Trustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.101

§ 64A.101 Identity of Trustee or Cotrustees

1. Will corporation or natural person best serve needs of trust?

NOTE:

Trust companies (and banks and savings and loan associations authorized to act as trustees) typically assign six principal reasons why corporate, rather than individual, trustees should be appointed. These are: (1) permanency, (2) experience, (3) impartiality, (4) financial responsibility, (5) necessary facilities, and (6) investment experience and expertise. Each of these factors should be carefully weighed and compared with the personal attention and skills that an individual trustee may be expected to bring to the trust. While some settlors will prefer to have a trust company manage the trust investments and determine the needs of the beneficiaries, others will prefer to have a trusted friend or business associate rather than a nameless corporate officer or employee (or even a committee). An individual trustee may be particularly important if the beneficiaries are likely to require personal attention.

It should be remembered that a fiduciary has the right to select his or her own attorney, regardless of any directive in the will [ Highfield v. Bozio (1922) 188 Cal. 727, 728, 207 P. 242 ]. While individual trustees frequently select attorneys who did not draft the trust instrument, it is the policy of trust companies to select the will drafter. By naming a trust company as trustee, the settlor may thus be certain that his or her own attorney will also be the attorney for the trustee.

2. In deciding whether to appoint a particular natural person or persons as trustee or cotrustees, consider following:

- a. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee willing to serve?

NOTE:

A person named as trustee may reject the appointment [Prob. Code § 15601]; and a person who has accepted the trust may resign [Prob. Code § 15640]. Before drafting any appointment, the testator should determine the prospective trustee's willingness to accept the trust.

b. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee able to perform duties of trustee, which include:

- (1) Holding all assets of trust estate;
- (2) Collecting all income and other payments due trust estate;
- (3) Paying all expenses of trust;
- (4) Making investments;

NOTE:

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, the trustee's investment decisions will be governed by the prudent investor rule set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. To fulfill the standards of this rule, a trustee should have some business or investment knowledge or experience. A business associate of the trustor is often a good choice to fill this position. For discussion of the prudent investor rule, see §§ 64A.40[3], 64A.260[1].

- (5) Protecting and managing trust property;
- (6) Obtaining insurance necessary for protection of trust estate;
- (7) Paying income to beneficiaries entitled to income;
- (8) Preparing and filing required tax returns for trust;
- (9) Preparing and filing required accounts and reports;

NOTE:

The trustee has a general duty to keep the beneficiaries reasonably informed about the trust and its administration [Prob. Code § 16060; see § 64A.39[9]] and to account to each beneficiary to whom income or principal is required or authorized in the trustee's discretion to be currently distributed [Prob. Code § 16062; see § 64A.39[10]].

- (10) Carrying out any special provisions of trust.

c. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee likely to be in good health at expected time of appointment (which may be years after execution of will)?

d. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee under any legal disabilities?

NOTE:

A person who is "unfit" to execute the trust, or who has acquired an interest or become charged with a duty adverse to the interests of a beneficiary, may be appointed as trustee, but such a person is subject to removal by the court after appointment [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(2); see § 64A.30[1]].

e. Where does prospective trustee or cotrustee reside?

NOTE:

Although there is no legal requirement that a trustee appointed under a California trust be a resident of the state [see Scott, The Law of Trusts, vol. II, § 94 (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967)], a nonresident is generally unable to perform the trustee's duties as efficiently as one who resides near the location of the trust assets and the residences of the beneficiaries. Communicating with distant trustees necessarily entails delay, inconvenience, and expense. If the prospective trustee is a nonresident, or may become a nonresident in the future, that fact should be considered.

f. Are persons interested in trust likely to feel any resentment toward prospective trustee or cotrustee?

NOTE:

Since the trustee must often deal actively with the beneficiaries (particularly when the will gives the trustee the power to determine the amount of principal and income that the beneficiaries will receive), personal feelings that may interfere with the administration of the trust should be taken into consideration.

g. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee willing to waive all or part of compensation provided by law?

NOTE:

A trustee is entitled to compensation for services rendered to the trust and to reimbursement for expenses incurred in the administration of the trust. If the trust instrument does not specify the amount of the compensation, it must be "reasonable compensation under the circumstances" [Prob. Code § 15681]. Waiver of all or part of the trustee's compensation may result in substantial savings for the trust estate. A prospective trustee who is willing to serve for little or no compensation, however, may be unfit in other respects (e.g., such a person may have little or no investment knowledge or experience), and the appointment of such a trustee may result in, at best, a false saving. For detailed discussion of the rules relating to the compensation of trustees, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.290[1].

h. Will appointment of particular trustee or cotrustee result in any adverse tax consequences?

(1) If trustee has sole power to vest corpus or income in himself or herself, trustee will be treated as owner for income tax purposes.

NOTE:

A person (other than the settlor) who has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest the corpus or the income of a trust in himself or herself will be treated as the owner of the trust for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 678(a)]. If the power may be exercised only with another person (e.g., a cotrustee), however, the rule does not apply [Treas. Reg. § 1.678(a)-1(b); see § 64A.31[4]].

(2) If trustee has equivalent of general power of appointment over trust assets, those assets may be subject to estate tax in estate of trustee.

NOTE:

If the will gives the trustee the power to invade the principal of the trust for his or her own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)] with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. This result may be avoided only by establishing an "ascertainable standard" [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(c)(2)] or by appointing a cotrustee who has a substantial interest in the property adverse to the holder [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)(ii)]. For further tax rules and considerations relating to the selection and appointment of trustees and cotrustees, see §§ 64A.31[4], 64A.32[1] et seq.

3. In deciding whether to appoint trust company or other corporate trustee as trustee or cotrustee, consider following:

a. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee legally qualified to serve?

NOTE:

A trust company is a corporation, industrial bank, or commercial bank that is authorized to engage in the trust business [Fin. Code § 107; see Fin. Code § 106 ("trust business" defined)]. Various statutes permit corporations other than trust companies to accept appointments as trustee [e.g., Fin. Code § 6515(a) (savings and loan associations), Corp. Code § 5140(k) (nonprofit public benefit corporations)]. For rules and drafting considerations relating to selection of corporate trustees, see § 64A.30[3], [4].

b. Is prospective trustee or cotrustee willing to serve?

NOTE:

A corporate trustee, like an individual trustee, may reject the appointment [Prob. Code § 15601] or resign the office [Prob. Code § 15640]. Since the trustee's compensation is often based on a percentage of the trust assets, many trust companies (and other corporate trustees) require certain minimum total assets before they will accept a trust. Before naming a corporate trustee, the testator and the attorney should determine if the trust assets will meet the particular corporate trustee's minimum requirements.

c. Will any tax advantages result from appointment of corporate trustee [see § 64A.121, P 2(h)]?

4. Should alternate or successor trustee or cotrustees be appointed and, if so, who?

NOTE:

Although the court has power to appoint a trustee or cotrustee when there is a vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)], the vacancy must be filled in the manner provided in the will if it is a practical method, or if the will names the person to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. It is generally good practice to name successors or alternates in the will. A court-appointed trustee may not be as sympathetic to the testator's intentions and the beneficiaries' needs as a trustee personally selected by the testator. Further, a court-appointed trustee is required to post a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3)], while no bond is required of a trustee appointed in the will [Prob. Code § 15602(a)].

When a trust company sells its business, the seller succeeds to the trusts of the seller under all trusts, executorships, administrations, guardianships, agencies, and other fiduciary or representative capacities to the same extent as if the purchaser had originally assumed the fiduciary or representative capacities [Fin. Code §§ 4859(f), 4879.14(e); see Fin. Code § 4877.05]. For this reason, it is not strictly necessary to appoint a successor to a trust company. It is still good practice to do so, however. If the trust company declines to accept the trust or resigns the office, a trustee of the testator's choosing, rather than a trustee appointed by the court, will then become trustee.

B. Preliminary Determinations for Trustee Powers

§ 64A.120 General Administrative Powers

1. Does aggregate value of trust assets indicate that broad or narrow grant of general administrative powers should be made?

NOTE:

Generally, the problems of trust administration are proportional to the size of the trust estate. While this is not invariably true (particular provisions of the trust instrument or special needs of the beneficiaries may complicate the administration of even small trusts), the aggregate value of the trust assets is one factor to consider in determining the extent of the powers to be conferred on the trustee or cotrustees.

a. If value of trust assets is substantial, broad grant of powers may be required.

b. If value of trust assets is modest, narrow grant of powers may be sufficient.

2. Do trust assets have special characteristics that indicate broad or narrow grant of general administrative powers should be made?

a. If, by reason of their nature or special characteristics, trust assets have unusual needs, broad administrative powers may be required, e.g.:

(1) If trust assets include business that trustee will be called on to operate, broad grant of administrative powers will be necessary.

(2) If trust assets include farm or ranch property which trustee will be called on to operate as business, broad grant of administrative powers will be necessary.

(3) If trust assets include interested in closely held corporation, broad grant of administrative powers will be necessary.

NOTE:

If the trust will include a business, a farm, a ranch, or an interest in a closely held corporation, special powers should be conferred on the trustee to sell or otherwise liquidate, or to continue to operate, those assets. For rules and considerations relating to trusts that hold businesses, farms, or interests in closely held corporations, see §§ 64A.280[1], 64A.281[1], and 64A.282[1].

b. If trust assets have no special needs, narrow powers may be sufficient.

3. Does expected duration of trust indicate broad or narrow grant of general administrative powers should be made?

a. If it is contemplated that trust will have relatively long life, or if duration of trust cannot be reasonably anticipated, broad grant of powers may be desirable.

b. If it is contemplated that trust will have a relatively short life (e.g., not more than 10 or 15 years), narrow grant of powers may be sufficient.

NOTE:

A trust that will continue a relatively short time (e.g., 15 or 20 years, or only during the minorities of the settlor's children) may be expected to present fewer administrative problems than a trust that will continue for a more extended period, or a trust whose duration cannot be reasonably anticipated.

4. Does trust have any special purposes or objects that indicate broad or narrow grant of general administrative powers should be made?

a. If trust is designed to achieve special purpose or object, provisions interfering with that special purpose or object should be avoided, e.g.:

(1) Provision interfering with right of surviving spouse to receive trust income will endanger trust designed to take advantage of marital deduction for federal estate taxes.

NOTE:

Because a provision empowering the trustee to acquire or hold unproductive property may give the trustee power to deny income to an income beneficiary, such a provision would, unless modified by the settlor or by statutory rule, disqualify the trust for treatment as a qualified terminable interest marital deduction trust under Internal Revenue Code Section 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii) [see discussion in § 64A.241[1][c]; see also Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.10[4] (discussion of terminable interest rule)].

(2) Provision giving trustee-beneficiary power to invade principal for own benefit, if not limited by "ascertainable standard," may create general power of appointment over trust assets and cause assets to be included in trustee's estate for estate tax purposes.

NOTE:

If the will gives the trustee the power to invade the principal of the trust for his or her own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)] with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)].

For tax considerations generally, see discussion in § 64A.32[1] et seq.; for tax considerations relating to particular administrative powers, see the comments to the appropriate forms.

b. If trust has no special purposes or object, broad powers may safely be granted.

5. Does level of investment skill or experience of prospective trustee or cotrustees indicate broad or narrow grant of administrative powers should be made?

a. If prospective trustee or cotrustees have extensive business or investment skill or experience, testator may safely grant broad administrative powers.

b. If prospective trustee or cotrustees have limited business or investment skill or experience, narrow grant of powers may be required.

NOTE:

Just as the trust should fit the needs of the beneficiaries, it should also fit the capacities of the prospective trustee or cotrustees. If the trustee will be a trust company or other corporate trustee, or an individual who has extensive business and investment experience, the testator may properly give the trustee broad administrative latitude. If, on the other hand, the prospective trustee has little or no business or investment knowledge or experience, or if he or she does not enjoy the unqualified confidence of the testator, restricted powers may be more appropriate.

 CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
 PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
 B. Preliminary Determinations for Trustee Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.121

§ 64A.121 Optional and Alternative Powers and Restrictions on Powers

1. Should trustee be empowered to hold trust assets without regard to usual rule of diversification of investments?

a. Optional provision dispensing with general rule of diversification may be appropriate if:

(1) Trust estate consists principally of one asset (e.g., family business or farm) that testator wishes trustee or cotrustees to continue to operate; or

(2) Trust estate is too small for effective diversification.

b. Provision dispensing with rule will be inappropriate if testator is satisfied with general requirement that trust investments be diversified.

NOTE:

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act generally requires trustees to diversify their investments [see Prob. Code § 16048 and § 64A.260[1]]. However, the Act permits the settlor to expand or restrict the trustee's investment duties by express provisions in the trust instrument and provides that, if the settlor does this, the trustee is entitled to rely on those express provisions and cannot be held liable to a beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

2. Should trustee be empowered to hold or invest trust funds in unproductive property?

NOTE:

The trustee has a duty to make the trust property productive under the circumstances and in furtherance of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16007]. This duty, however, may be varied or even dispensed with by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16000]. Some assets produce little or no income but have excellent prospects for capital appreciation. If the income beneficiaries' needs for current income are modest, investment in assets that hold promise of capital appreciation may be indicated. If, however, the income beneficiaries' needs are such that all (or nearly all) of the trust income must be paid to them on a current basis, trust investments that do not produce current income will clearly be unsuitable, and the testator should do nothing to change the usual rule requiring the trustee to make productive investments. For rules and drafting considerations relating to unproductive investments, see §§ 64.241[1] and 63.264[1].

a. Optional provision permitting trustee or cotrustees to hold or to invest trust funds in unproductive assets may be appropriate if needs of income beneficiaries are modest and testator wishes trustee or cotrustees to increase capital value of trust estate.

b. Provision permitting trustee or cotrustees to hold or acquire unproductive investments should not be included in will if income beneficiaries will need all or nearly all of income of trust on current basis.

3. Should trustee be required to retain specific asset or assets?

a. Optional provision requiring trustee to retain specific asset or assets held by trust estate should be included in will if testator wishes particular asset or assets (e.g., a family business or a farm) to be retained in trust.

b. Provision requiring trustee to retain specific asset or assets will be undesirable unless testator wishes specific asset to be retained in trust estate.

NOTE:

Although the Uniform Prudent Investor Act generally requires trustees to diversify their investments [see Prob. Code § 16048 and § 64A.260[1]], it permits the settlor to expand or restrict the trustee's investment duties by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. It is clearly within the settlor's power to require the trustee to retain a particular asset or assets in the trust estate; however, a provision imposing such a requirement will deprive the trustee of a large measure of investment flexibility and could lead to serious problems should retention of the specified asset or assets become inconsistent with the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [see Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. For discussion, see § 64A.242[1].

4. Should will include provision requiring that trustee conform to prudent investor rule?

a. Optional provision requiring trustee to conform to prudent investor rule should be included in will if trustee wishes to make it clear that standards of rule must be followed.

b. Specific reference to prudent investor rule is not necessary, since rule is statutory and applies to all trusts unless will provides different rule.

NOTE:

Since the prudent investor rule applies to all trusts unless the trust instrument includes express provisions expanding or restricting it [Prob. Code § 16046(b)], it is not necessary to include a provision making it applicable. However, it may be useful to do so, to make it clear to the trustee and other persons interested in the trust that the rule applies.

5. Should trustee be granted broader investment powers than are permitted under prudent person rule?

- a. If testator wishes to expand range of investments permitted under prudent investor rule, will should include optional provision granting trustee broader investment powers.
- b. If expanded range of investments is unnecessary and testator wishes trustee or cotrustee to conform to established standards of prudent person rule, broader investment powers should not be granted.

NOTE:

The prudent investor rule is set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and § 64A.260[1]]. It is widely understood and accepted by courts and financial institutions throughout the United States. Most professional fiduciaries believe that they are not sufficiently protected by investment powers that deviate from the well-accepted provisions of the prudent investor rule, or its substantially similar predecessors, the "prudent man" and "prudent person" rules. The settlor should authorize deviations from the rule only after carefully considering the reasons for doing so.

6. Should will include provision restricting investment powers of trustee or cotrustee?

- a. Investment powers may be restricted by either forbidding or mandating certain investments or types of investments.

NOTE:

The will may either expand or restrict the investment powers of the trustee under the prudent investor rule. It may, for example, require that the trustee or cotrustees invest trust funds only in bonds of "grade AA or better," or it may prohibit investment in common stocks. Although most testators will probably find it advisable to increase rather than restrict the investment powers of the fiduciary, some investors may choose to do the opposite. For discussion, see § 64A.267[1].

- b. Provision restricting investment powers may be appropriate if testator has definite views as to proper investment program to be followed by fiduciaries.

NOTE:

Although some testators have strong investment views and are inclined to instruct the trustee to follow them strictly, it is a rare investor who can see into the future with clarity and anticipate changing economic conditions. A testator who is inclined to tie the fiduciary's investment hands should seriously consider the adverse implications of overly restrictive investment rules [see § 64A.267[1]].

- c. In absence of strong wishes of testator, restrictive investment provision will usually be inadvisable.

NOTE:

Restriction of the trustee's investment powers is generally inadvisable for the same reason that expansion of those powers is often advisable: restriction deprives the trustee of flexibility, while expansion increases flexibility.

7. Should will include provision authorizing self-dealing on part of trustee or cotrustees?

- a. Unless will provides otherwise, trustee is generally prohibited from any personal dealings with trust.

NOTE:

The Trust Law includes numerous prohibitions against self-dealing by trustees. For example, it prohibits trustees from using or dealing with trust property for their own profit [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]; but see Prob. Code § 16220 (trustee may keep property received from settlor or other person even if trustee is personally interested in property)] and from taking part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to that of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. However, it authorizes trustees who are also financial institutions to charge for services provided to the trusts they administer if the services are provided in the ordinary course of business [Prob. Code § 16015], and it also authorizes trustees who are banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, and other financial institutions to deposit trust funds in insured or collateralized accounts in those institutions [see Prob. Code § 16225]. Further, it authorizes the settlor to relieve the trustee of any or all of the rules limiting personal dealings with the trust [see Prob. Code § 16000 (statutory duties binding except to extent trust instrument provides otherwise)]. For a general discussion of statutory rules and drafting considerations relating to self-dealing, see § 64A.268[1].

- b. Will may by clear direction authorize trustee to engage in self-dealing.

NOTE:

The statutory rules against self-dealing [see Prob. Code § 16004] apply only when the trust instrument does not provide otherwise [see Prob. Code § 16000].

- c. Provision authorizing self-dealing may be desirable if fiduciary is likely purchaser of any of trust assets.

NOTE:

If the trust will include an interest in a business held as a partnership or closely held corporation, a surviving partner or shareholder who is also trustee may wish to purchase the trust's interest in the business. If such a purchase would be in the interests of the trust, a provision authorizing self-dealing should be included in the will.

8. Should will include provision authorizing trustee or cotrustee to operate business or farm?

- a. Unless trust instrument provides otherwise, investments in businesses (including farms and ranches operated as businesses) are usually prohibited.

NOTE:

Unless the trust instrument or a court authorizes the trustee to operate a business belonging to the trust estate on a permanent basis, the trustee has power to operate the business only for a reasonable time pending sale of the business or a court hearing on a request for authority to operate the business permanently [Prob. Code § 16222(a), (b), (c)]. In any event, however, the trustee may lease four or fewer residential units belonging to the trust estate on a permanent basis because such a lease is not considered the operation of a business for this purpose [Prob. Code § 16222(b)]. Further, if the trustee has the power to operate a business under a trust created by an instrument executed before July 1, 1987, the business may be operated on a permanent basis [Prob. Code § 16222(d)]. For further consideration of the operation of businesses belonging to the trust, see § 64A.280[1].

b. Provision empowering trustee or cotrustee to operate business, farm, or ranch on permanent basis may be desirable if:

(1) Business or interest in a business constitutes substantial part of trust estate and testator wishes it to be operated after his or her death; or

(2) Farm or ranch constitutes substantial part of trust estate and testator wishes it to be operated after his or her death.

9. Should will include provision permitting trustee to hold stock in closely held corporation?

a. Specific provision is generally necessary to empower trustee to hold stock in small or closely held corporation.

NOTE:

In the absence of express authority in the trust instrument, shares of stock in a closely held corporation probably do not qualify as an investment under the prudent investor rule, and a trustee who receives such shares into a trust is under a duty to dispose of them [see § 64A.282[1]].

b. Provision permitting trustee to hold stock in closely held corporation should be included in will if:

(1) Trust assets will include stock in closely held corporation whose smooth operation (or continued existence) might be imperiled by sudden or substantial changes in stock ownership; and

(2) There are no corporate restrictions on sale or transfer of shares that would prevent their transfer to or ownership by trustee.

NOTE:

The power of a trustee to hold corporate stock may be affected by the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation, by the corporation's right to redeem shares of stock, or by inter vivos buy-and-sell agreements entered into by or among the incorporators or shareholders [see § 64A.281[1]].

12. Should will include provision authorizing trustee to sell, lease, or exchange trust property?

a. Will provision is not strictly necessary since Trust Law grants trustees broad powers of sale, lease, and exchange.

NOTE:

Although the Trust Law gives trustees broad powers to acquire and dispose of property [Prob. Code § 16226], it also requires them to comply with the prudent investor rule, unless the trust instrument contains express provisions expanding or restricting that rule [Prob. Code § 16046 for prudent investor rule, see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and discussion in § 64A.260[1]].

b. Will provision may serve useful purpose in advising trustee and other persons interested in trust that trustee has power to sell, lease, and exchange property.

- c. Will provision may also authorize trustee to purchase trust property for his or her own account.

NOTE:

Even if a sale of trust property would be proper under the prudent investor rule, it is improper for a trustee to purchase trust property for the trustee's own account unless the trust instrument specifically authorizes such a purchase [see Prob. Code § 16004(a)] (trustee may not deal with property for own profit); see also § 64A.300[1].

13. Should trustee or cotrustee be empowered to employ custodians, agents, advisors, and attorneys to assist and advise trustee or cotrustees?

- a. Although will provision authorizing employment of agents is not strictly necessary, it may serve valuable purpose of clarifying trustee's authority to do so.

NOTE:

Although trustees have broad authority to hire accountants, attorneys, auditors, investment advisers, appraisers, and others agents to advise or assist them in the performance of their duties [Prob. Code § 16247], they have a duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts they can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a)]. Further, they have a duty to supervise their agents and employees [Prob. Code § 16012(b)] and to apply the full extent of their skills to the administration of the trust, whether or not there are advisers [Prob. Code § 16014(a)].

- b. Employment of attorneys, agents, and advisors is usually necessary and almost always beneficial.

NOTE:

Nearly every trustee will require legal advice in the administration of the trust and assistance in the preparation of tax returns. In addition, most trustees will benefit from investment counseling or advice. A trustee who is not an attorney may have a duty to seek the advice of an attorney on legal questions encountered in the course of trust administration.

14. Should "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion be conferred on trustee or cotrustee?

- a. Grant of "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion relieves trustee or cotrustee of duty to act "reasonably," but good faith and independent judgment are still required.

NOTE:

"Absolute" discretion means simply that the judgment of the trustee, if exercised in good faith, will control. It will not excuse action in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)]. Whether a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is broad or narrow, its exercise is subject to judicial review [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(5)]. For a general discussion of trust provisions conferring "sole," "absolute," and "uncontrolled" discretion on trustees, see § 64A.340[1].

- b. If prospective trustee or cotrustee is corporation, individual with extensive business or investment experience, or other person who enjoys testator's full confidence, "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion may be appropriate.

- c. If prospective trustee or cotrustee is friend or relative with little or no investment experience, or person whose loyalties to trust may be subject to compromise, "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion will be inappropriate and possibly dangerous.

NOTE:

In determining whether discretion should be "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled," the testator should be guided principally by the confidence (or lack of confidence) he or she reposes in the integrity and skill of the prospective trustee or cotrustee, and his or her willingness to relieve that trustee or cotrustee of the statutory obligations of the prudent person rule [see discussion in § 64A.340[1]].

d. If prospective trustee or cotrustee will also be beneficiary of trust and will have power to invade principal for own benefit, grant of "absolute" discretion may have unfavorable estate tax consequences.

NOTE:

If a will gives the trustee power to invade the principal of the trust for the trustee's own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)], with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. Under Prob. Code § 16081(c), a trustee who has discretion to distribute principal or income for the trustee's own benefit may exercise the discretion only to make distributions for his or her health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514, unless the will or trust specifically refers to the statute and specifies a broader standard [see Prob. Code § 16081(e) (applicable dates of Prob. Code § 16081(c))]. A power to distribute principal or income for a person's health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514 is generally known as an "ascertainable standard." For further discussion of the special rules of Prob. Code § 16081(c), see § 64A.39[8].

15. If there are cotrustees, should powers of trust be divided or allocated?

a. If testator suspects that cotrustees will not work together smoothly and efficiently, or that cotrustees will not be able to reach unanimous decisions as to trust action, trust provision authorizing majority to act may be desirable.

NOTE:

Unless the will provides otherwise, a power vested in two or more trustees may only be exercised by their unanimous action [Prob. Code § 15620]. If cotrustees cannot agree, petitions for instructions [see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(6)] may be necessary.

(1) Provision authorizing majority of cotrustees to bind trust may save time, expense, and inconvenience of petitions for instructions.

NOTE:

If cotrustees cannot agree, and if the trust instrument does not authorize action in the absence of unanimous agreement, the court must be petitioned for instructions [see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(6)].

(2) Majority of cotrustees may be authorized to:

(a) Make only investment decisions for trust; or

(b) Make any decisions for trust, regardless of whether or not related to investment.

(3) Majority of cotrustees may be authorized to:

(a) Take action in any transaction, without regard to amount of obligation incurred; or

(b) Take action only when amount of obligation does not exceed specified dollar limit.

NOTE:

If the will so provides, a majority of the cotrustees may act for the trust only as to transactions that are within a specified dollar limit. If a given transaction exceeds the specified limit, the general requirement of unanimity will still apply.

(4) Provision authorizing majority of cotrustees to bind trust should be included in will only if there will be more than two cotrustees.

NOTE:

When there are only two cotrustees, they will be either unanimous or split equally on any decision, and no majority decision will be possible.

b. If one of prospective cotrustees has special qualifications or experience, that cotrustee may be:

NOTE:

If one of the prospective cotrustees is a trust company or other qualifying corporation, or an individual who has greater investment or business experience, knowledge, or skill than the other prospective cotrustees, the settlor may choose to give that cotrustee the power to make investment decisions for the trust (or to veto investment decisions made by another trustee or cotrustee), while another cotrustee may be given the power to determine payments of principal and income to the beneficiaries. Any division of powers and responsibilities that suits the particular abilities of the proposed cotrustees may be appropriate.

(1) Empowered to perform specific duties relating to those qualifications or experience; or

(2) Given veto power over decisions of other cotrustees.

c. If trust is to include interest in business owned as partnership or closely held corporation, surviving partner or shareholders may be empowered (as cotrustee or "special trustee") to continue operation of business, while remaining powers of trust are assigned to other cotrustee [see § 64A.362[1]].

NOTE:

Placing a testator's share of a business owned as a partnership or a closely held corporation in the trust may jeopardize the successful operation of the business by creating management tensions between the trustee and the surviving owners. If, however, one of the surviving owners is named as a special trustee with power to make investment decisions that affect the business, these tensions may be avoided [see § 64A.361[1]].

d. If one of prospective cotrustees is trust company or other corporate trustee, that cotrustee may be empowered to keep records and accounts, have custody of money, securities, and personal property, and make payments for trust, while individual cotrustee may be given powers of investment.

NOTE:

When a trust company or other qualifying corporation and an individual are cotrustees, the corporation will usually insist that it have custody of all money, securities, and personal property, keep all records and accounts, and make all payments and distributions. This arrangement may comport well with a division of duties among the cotrustees, as another cotrustee may then be given the power to make investment decisions for the trust [see § 64A.361[1]].

(1) Provision may be essential if corporate cotrustee is to accept trust.

NOTE:

If a named trustee or cotrustee is dissatisfied with any provision of the trust instrument, that trustee or cotrustee may decline to act as trustee [see Prob. Code § 15601 (rejection of trust)] or, after accepting the trust, may resign the office [Prob. Code § 15640].

(2) Provision may comport well with provision requiring or authorizing division of duties among cotrustees [see § 64A.121, P 15 (b), (c)].

e. If testator has reason to believe that individual cotrustee may be unable to perform all of required duties, will may authorize that cotrustee to delegate all or part of his or her duties to corporate cotrustee.

(1) Although generally prohibited, delegation of trustee's or cotrustee's duties may be authorized by will.

NOTE:

Trustees have a duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts they can be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a)]. The trust instrument may, however, permit a greater delegation of powers and duties [Prob. Code § 16000; see § 64A.320[1]]. The delegation of the trustee's investment responsibilities is subject to special rules set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code § 16052 and discussion in § 64A.260[1]]. Even when the trustee has properly delegated a matter to an agent, cotrustee, or other person, the trustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person performing the delegated matter [Prob. Code §§ 16012(b), 16052(a)(3)].

(2) Delegation may be advisable if testator suspects that individual cotrustee will be unable or unwilling to carry out duties for temporary period or periods.

(3) Since delegation for anything other than short period may amount to virtual resignation, delegation is not usually in best interests of trust.

(4) Practical alternatives to delegation include provisions:

(a) Authorizing cotrustee to employ agents, advisers, and attorneys to assist and advise cotrustee in administration of trust [see § 64A.320];

(b) Dividing or allocating powers of cotrustees [see §§ 64A.360-64A.363]; and

(c) Designating successor cotrustee to take office if and when designated cotrustee is unable or unwilling to act [see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, §§ 64B.290-64B.292].

f. If cotrustees lack business experience, knowledge, or skill, will may authorize third party (not trustee or cotrustee) to exercise veto power over investment decisions of cotrustees.

NOTE:

The will may provide that the trustee or cotrustees will be subject to the control of another person in specified respects [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 185]. For a general discussion of will provisions empowering third parties to act for the trust and subjecting trustees and cotrustees to the control of third parties, see discussions in §§ 64A.362[1][b] and 64A.363[1][b].

(1) Person on whom power of control is conferred may be person otherwise unconnected with trust.

(2) Power of control may be power:

(a) To compel action by cotrustees; or

(b) To prevent any action taken or proposed to be taken without consent of third party.

g. If a cotrustee is also a trust beneficiary, will may disqualify that person from participating in discretionary decisions relating to his or her beneficial interest.

NOTE:

A trustee may not use or deal with trust property for the trustee's own profit or for any purpose unconnected with the trust [Prob. Code § 16004(a); but see Prob. Code § 16220 (trustee may keep property received from settlor or other person even if trustee is personally interested in property)]; nor may the trustee take part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a); see discussion in § 64A.39[2]; but see Prob. Code §§ 16015 (provision of financial services by financial institution-trustee), 16225 (deposit of trust funds in financial institution-trustee)]. Despite these statutory safeguards, a will provision disqualifying a cotrustee who is also a beneficiary from participating in discretionary decisions relating to his or her own interest may serve a useful purpose. Such a provision will clearly apprise all persons interested in the trust that the cotrustee is forbidden to participate in decisions that affect his or her own interest. It will also obviate the necessity of proving that the cotrustee's interest is actually adverse to that of the trust or its beneficiaries.

§ 64A.141 General Administrative Powers

1. To grant narrow administrative powers to trustee or cotrustee, use:

a. Form in § 64A.220, which includes provisions relating to:

- (1) Retention of assets;
- (2) Investments;
- (3) Management;
- (4) Sales;
- (5) Leases and mineral rights;
- (6) Claims and litigation;
- (7) Borrowing;
- (8) Division and distribution; and

b. One or more of following provisions, if appropriate to trust purposes, trustee, and beneficiaries:

- (1) Form in § 64A.242, which requires trustee to retain specific asset or assets held by trust estate;
- (2) Form in § 64A.267, which restricts trustee's investment powers;

(3) Form in § 64A.363, which gives third party veto power over decisions of trustee.

2. To grant broad administrative powers to trustee or cotrustee, use either of following:

a. Form in § 64A.221, which includes provisions relating to;

- (1) Retention of assets;
- (2) Investments;
- (3) Management of securities;
- (4) Form of ownership of trust property;
- (5) Business interests;
- (6) Sales and exchanges of property;
- (7) Division of trust estate;
- (8) Abandonment of trust assets;
- (9) Options;
- (10) Leases of trust property;
- (11) Property management;
- (12) Development of property;
- (13) Repair, alteration, construction, and demolition;
- (14) Borrowing and encumbering;
- (15) Loans by trustee(s);
- (16) Mineral rights;
- (17) Insurance;
- (18) Enforcement of hypothecations;
- (19) Extending time for payment of obligations;
- (20) Adjustment of claims;
- (21) Litigation;
- (22) Administration expenses;

(23) Employment of attorneys, advisers, and other agents;

(24) Termination of small trust;

(25) Distribution; and

(26) General.

b. Form in § 64A.222, which gives trustee all of the powers conferred on trustees by Prob. Code §§ 16220-16249 and the general grant of authority to act in accordance with the prudent person and prudent investor rules [Prob. Code § 16200(c); see Prob. Code §§ 16040(a) (prudent person rule), 16047 (prudent investor rule)].

C. Drafting Guide for Appointment of Trustee or Cotrustees and Provisions Conferring Administrative Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.142

§ 64A.142 Optional and Alternative Administrative Powers

1. To permit (but not require) trustee to hold trust assets without regard to usual requirement of diversification of investments, use § 64A.240.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustee to hold trust assets without regard to the usual requirement of diversification of investments, see § 64A.121, P 1.

2. To permit (but not require) trustee to hold unproductive property, use principal or optional provision of § 64A.241.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustee to hold unproductive property, see § 64A.121, P 2.

3. To require trustee to retain specific asset or assets held by trust estate, use § 64A.242.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions requiring the trustee or cotrustee to retain specific assets held by trust estate, see § 64A.121, P 3.

4. To require that trustee, when investing trust funds, conform to prudent person rule, use either:

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions specifically adopting the prudent person rule of investments, see § 64A.121, P 4.

a. Form in § 64A.260 (long form); or

b. Form in § 64A.261 (short form).

5. To grant trustee broader investment powers than are permitted under prudent person rule, use § 64A.262.

6. To confer very broad investment powers on trustee and dispense with usual requirement of investment diversification, use § 64A.263.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions conferring broad or very broad investment powers, see § 64A.121, P 5.

7. To permit (but not require) trustee to purchase, acquire, or otherwise invest trust funds in unproductive property, use § 64A.264.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions authorizing investment in unproductive property, see § 64A.121, P 2.

8. To permit (but not require) trustee to invest in investment funds, use § 64A.265.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions authorizing investment in investment funds, see § 64A.121, P 6.

9. To permit (but not require) trustee to invest in life insurance contracts on life of trustee or beneficiaries, use § 64A.266.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions authorizing investment in unproductive property, see § 64A.121, P 2.

10. To restrict trustee's investment powers, use § 64A.267.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions restricting the trustee's or cotrustees' investment powers, see § 64A.121, P 8.

11. To empower trustee to lend or advance trustee's own funds to trust and to purchase from and sell property to trust, use § 64A.268.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions authorizing self-dealing by the trustee or cotrustees, see § 64A.121, P 9.

12. To permit (but not require) trustee to conduct any business received into trust at inception or later acquired as trust investment, use § 64A.280.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustee to operate a business, see § 64A.121, P 10.

13. To permit (but not require) trustee to operate any farm or ranch received into trust at inception or later acquired as trust investment, use § 64A.281.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustee to operate a farm or ranch, see § 64A.121, P 10.

14. To permit (but not require) trustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation, use § 64A.282.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation, see § 64A.121, P 11.

15. To permit (but not require) trustee to sell, lease, or exchange trust property, and, for that purpose, to employ agents, consultants, advisors, and brokers, use § 64A.300.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the sale, exchange, or lease of trust property, see § 64A.121, P 12.

16. To permit (but not require) trustee to employ custodians, agents, advisors, and attorneys to assist and advise trustee in execution of trust, use § 64A.320.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions permitting the trustee or cotrustees to employ attorneys, advisors, and other agents, see § 64A.121, P 13.

17. To confer "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion on trustee, use § 64A.340.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions granting the trustee or cotrustees "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion, see § 64A.121, P 14.

§ 64A.143 Division or Apportionment of Powers Among Cotrustees

1. To divide or allocate powers of cotrustees by providing that, whenever two or more cotrustees are in office, a majority of cotrustees may bind trust, use one or more of following provisions, as appropriate:

a. If testator wishes to authorize majority of cotrustees to make investment decisions (but not other decisions) for trust, use either of following provisions:

(1) First alternative provision of § 64A.360, to authorize majority of cotrustees to make investment decisions without setting any dollar limit on amount of obligation that may be incurred by majority decision; or

(2) Second alternative provision of § 64A.360, to authorize majority of cotrustees to make investment decisions only when amount of obligation incurred does not exceed specified dollar limit.

b. If testator wishes to authorize majority of cotrustees to make any decisions for trust (whether or not related to investment), use either of following provisions:

(1) First alternative provision of § 64A.364, to authorize majority of cotrustees to bind trust estate in any transaction without specifying limit on amount of obligations that may be incurred; or

(2) Second alternative provision of § 64A.364, to authorize majority of cotrustees to bind trust estate only when amount of obligation incurred does not exceed specified dollar limit.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions authorizing a majority of the cotrustees to make decisions for the trust, see § 64A.121, P 15(a); see also §§ 64A.360[1] and 64A.364[1].

2. To divide or allocate powers of cotrustees by assigning investment powers to named cotrustee or cotrustees, use § 64A.361.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions assigning particular powers to named cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64A.121, P 15(b), (d); see also § 64A.361[1].

3. To empower third party (not trustee or one of cotrustees) to make investment decisions for trust, use either of the following provisions:

a. First alternative provision of § 64A.362, to authorize third party to make all investment decisions for trust; or

b. Second alternative provision of § 64A.362, to authorize third party to make investment decisions with respect to specific asset or assets only.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions empowering third parties to act for or control the action of trustees and cotrustees, see § 64A.121, P 15(f); see also §§ 64A.362[1] and 64A.363[1].

4. To grant third party (not trustee or one of cotrustees) veto power over investment decisions of trustee, use § 64A.363.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions granting veto powers to third parties, see § 64A.121, P 15(f); see also § 64A.363[1].

5. To authorize corporate cotrustee to have custody of personal property and maintain records and accounts of trust, use § 64A.365.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions empowering corporate cotrustees to keep records and accounts, have custody of moneys, securities, and personal property, and make payments for trust, see § 64A.121, P 15(d); see also § 64A.365[1].

6. To authorize individual cotrustee to delegate his or her powers and duties to corporate cotrustee, use § 64A.366.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions dividing or allocating the powers of cotrustees, see § 64A.121, P 15(e); see also § 64A.366[1].

7. To disqualify a cotrustee from decisions affecting that cotrustee's own interest, use § 64A.367.

NOTE:

For considerations in the use of provisions disqualifying a cotrustee from participating in discretionary decisions relating to the cotrustee's interest, see § 64A.121, P 15(g); see also § 64A.367[1].

A. Appointment of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.200

§ 64A.200 Appointment of Individual as Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to appoint an individual as trustee. When used, it will be the introductory sentence of that part of the will that establishes the testamentary trust. Two alternative provisions are set forth, one that includes a description of the property to be transferred in trust and another that does not. If the property transferred in trust is not described in this provision, it must be described elsewhere in the will.

For a will provision appointing a trust company or other corporation as trustee, see § 64A.201. For a will provision appointing cotrustees, see § 64A.202. For rules relating to bond requirements for testamentary trustees, see discussion in § 64A.30[1].

[b] Alternate and Successor Trustees

Any trust instrument that names an individual as trustee should also name an alternate or successor trustee. If the will names an alternate or successor trustee, any vacancy in the office of trustee will be filled by the nominated alternate or successor [see Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. If the will does not name an alternate or successor trustee, or if it does not prescribe some practical method for filling a vacancy in the office of trustee, all of the adult beneficiaries may agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company [Prob. Code § 15660(c); see Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined)]. If the will makes no provision for an alternate or successor trustee and the adult beneficiaries do not agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company, the court may appoint a trustee to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)]. However, a court-appointed trustee must post a bond, while a trustee (or successor trustee) named in the will need not do so [Prob. Code § 15602(a)]. A trust company is never required to post a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(e)]. A bond may be an unnecessary expense for the trust estate. Unless the will or the court prescribe otherwise, the cost of the bond must be charged against the trust estate [Prob. Code § 15602(d)].

For a will provision appointing alternate and successor trustees and cotrustees, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts:

Administrative Provisions, § 64B.270. For a will provision authorizing a trustee or cotrustee to designate a successor, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.271. For a will provision providing that the powers of a cotrustee who dies or resigns may be exercised by the remaining cotrustees, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.272.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Appointment of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.201

§ 64A.201 Appointment of Trust Company or Other Corporate Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to appoint a trust company or other corporation as trustee. Two alternative provisions are set forth, one that includes a description of the property to be transferred in trust and another that does not. If the property transferred in trust is not described in this provision, it must be described elsewhere in the will.

For a will provision appointing an individual as trustee, see § 64A.200. For a will provision appointing cotrustees, see § 64A.202. For rules relating to bond requirements for testamentary trustees, see discussion in § 64A.30[1].

[b] Trust Company

Although "banks" are often referred to as trustees, only a bank that is also a "trust company" may serve as a trustee. A trust company is an entity that has qualified to engage in and conduct a trust business in California [Prob. Code § 83; see Fin. Code § 107 ("trust company" defined)]. As used in the Financial Code, the words "trust business" include the business of acting as executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, or trustee under the appointment of any court or the authority of any state or federal law [Fin. Code § 106].

When a trust company sells its business, the seller succeeds to the trusts of the seller under all trusts, executorships, administrations, guardianships, agencies, and other fiduciary or representative capacities to the same extent as if the purchaser had originally assumed the fiduciary or representative capacities [Fin. Code §§ 4859(f), 4879.14(e); see Fin. Code § 4877.05]. For this reason, it is not strictly necessary to appoint a successor to a trust company. It is advisable to do so, however, to provide for the contingency that the trust company may decline to serve as trustee. Any trustee named in a will may reject the trust, either in writing or simply by failing to accept the trust within a reasonable time after learning of the appointment [Prob. Code § 15601]. Many trust companies will decline to serve as trustee unless the trust estate meets the companies' minimum value requirements. Accordingly, before drafting any instrument naming a trust company as trustee, the attorney should consult with the trust company and ascertain its minimum estate value requirements.

[c] Other Corporate Trustee

Various statutes permit corporations other than trust companies to accept appointments as trustee. Included among these are savings and loan associations [Fin. Code § 6515(a)] and nonprofit public benefit corporations [Corp. Code § 5140(k)]. For further rules relating to the appointment of corporate trustees, see discussions in § 64A.30[3], [4].

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Appointment of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.202

§ 64A.202 Appointment of Cotrustees

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to appoint cotrustees. Two alternative provisions are set forth, one that includes a description of the property to be transferred in trust and another that does not. If the property transferred in trust is not described in this provision, it must be described elsewhere in the will.

For a will provision appointing an individual as trustee, see § 64A.200. For a will provision appointing a trust company as trustee, see § 64A.201. For provisions allocating the powers of the trustee among and between cotrustees, see §§ 64A.360-64A.367. For rules relating to bond requirements for testamentary trustees, see discussion in § 64A.30[1].

[b] Cotrustees

[i] In General

The will may appoint one trustee or two or more cotrustees. The Probate Code sets forth certain rules governing cotrustees. First, when there are cotrustees, they may exercise their powers only by unanimous action [Prob. Code § 15620]. Second, if a vacancy occurs in the office of a cotrustee, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust as if they were the only trustees [Prob. Code § 15621]. Third, if a cotrustee is unavailable to perform the duties of the cotrustee because of absence, illness, or other temporary incapacity, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust when necessary to accomplish the purposes of the trust or to avoid irreparable injury to the trust property as if they were the only trustees [Prob. Code § 15622]. However, these rules may be varied by provisions in the trust instrument and, by their terms, apply only when the trust instrument does not provide otherwise [Prob. Code §§ 15620-15622].

[ii] Selection

If cotrustees are appointed, the testator should select trustees who will work together smoothly and efficiently, since the court may remove one or all of the cotrustees whenever it determines that hostility or lack of cooperation among the cotrustees impairs the administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(3)].

A trust company or other qualifying corporation may be one of the cotrustees. When a corporation and an individual are cotrustees, however, the corporation will usually insist that it have custody of all money, securities, and personal property, keep all records and accounts, and make all payments and distributions.

[iii] Settlor's Objectives

Although the settlor's power to appoint cotrustees is unquestioned, the appointment of cotrustees may not be the most practical means of achieving the typical settlor's objectives. Although a settlor may hope that cotrustees will bring greater wisdom to the trust administration than would a single trustee, and may reasonably expect that one cotrustee will serve as a moderating influence on the excesses or failures of another, in practice it is often difficult for cotrustees to work together. Moreover, the appointment of cotrustees will not automatically bring about a division of their duties or responsibilities. For example, if the settlor determines that a trust company should be appointed as trustee because of its stability, safety, office facilities, and experience in the routine duties of trust management, but that a trusted financial advisor should be appointed as cotrustee because of that advisor's investment knowledge and experience, the legal duties of the cotrustees will not be divided according to their respective abilities. The trust company will have as much power to make investment decisions as the financial advisor, and the financial advisor will be equally responsible for the day-to-day administration of the trust. The agreement of both cotrustees will be required for any trust action [Prob. Code § 15620] and both will be responsible to a greater or lesser degree for the actions of the other. A cotrustee may be held liable for negligent inattention to duties, even in the absence of any active participation in the misapplication of trust funds or property by a cotrustee [ Estate of Whitney (1932) 124 Cal. App. 109, 118, 11 P.2d 1107 ; see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 560, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 ; see also discussion in § 64A.31[1]].

[c] Dividing or Allocating Powers as Alternative to Cotrustees

Because of the practical difficulties that frequently plague the administration of trusts by cotrustees, a better solution may be to divide or allocate the duties of the trustee by appointing a principal fiduciary (who may be designated the "Principal Trustee") and conferring one or more of the powers of that fiduciary on a third party (who may be designated an "advisor" or a "Special Trustee"). For provisions splitting the duties of cotrustees, see §§ 64A.360-64A.367. For further rules relating to administration of the trust by more than one trustee, see discussion in § 64A.31[1].

 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Appointment of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.203

§ 64A.203 Certificate of Independent Review (Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B))

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a Certificate of Independent Review. It may be used when the settlor wishes to designate the attorney who drafted the instrument (or any of certain relatives, partners, employees, or cohabitants of that attorney) as the sole trustee of the trust. For a Certificate of Independent Review that may be used when a settlor (or other transferor) wishes to make a donative transfer to a "disqualified person" [Prob. Code § 21351(b)], see Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.240. For additional discussion of the "disqualified person" rules of Prob. Code § 21350, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.15[3] and Ch. 60A, Gifts, § 60A.16.

[b] Attorney Who Drafted Trust Instrument--Appointment as Trustee

The settlor may wish to designate the attorney who prepares the trust instrument as trustee of the trust. If the settlor is related to the attorney by blood or marriage, or if the settlor is a cohabitant of the attorney, there is no reason why the attorney cannot properly act as trustee [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(A)]. Similarly, it is perfectly proper for the attorney to act as trustee if there are to be two or more cotrustees, and the attorney is merely to serve as one of the cotrustees [see Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)]. In other cases, however, the attorney could be subject to removal as trustee if the attorney is the sole trustee and if one of the beneficiaries requests removal [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)].

[c] Removal When Serving As Sole Trustee

A sole trustee is subject to removal as trustee if the trust instrument became irrevocable after January 1, 1994, and if the sole trustee is any of the following [Prob. Code §§ 15642(b)(6), 21350(a)]:

- The person who drafted the instrument.
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or employee of the person who drafted the instrument.

- Any partner or shareholder of any law partnership or law corporation in which the person who drafted the instrument has an ownership interest, and any employee of any such law partnership or law corporation.
- Any person who has a fiduciary relationship with the transferor, including a conservator or trustee, who transcribes the instrument or causes it to be transcribed.
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or employee of a person described in the fourth category immediately above.
- A care custodian of a dependent adult. For discussion of the definitions of the terms "care custodian" and "dependent adult," see § 64A.37[2].
- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, or is a cohabitant with or an employee of a care custodian.

For purposes of this rule, a "person who is related by blood or marriage" to a person means all of the following [Prob. Code § 21350(b)]:

- The person's spouse or predeceased spouse.
- Relatives within the third degree of the person and the person's spouse.
- The spouse of any person who is described in the second category immediately above.

In determining relationships for purposes of this rule, Prob. Code § 6406, which governs the inheritance rights of relatives of the half blood, Prob. Code § 6407, which covers the inheritance rights of afterborn heirs, and Prob. Code §§ 6450-6455, which prescribe rules for determining the relationship of parent and child for purposes of intestate succession, are all applicable [Prob. Code § 21350(b)].

[d] Exceptions to Removal Rule

The Probate Code sets forth explicit exceptions to this general rule of removal. For example, the trustee will not be subject to removal if, after full disclosures of the relationships of the persons involved, the court approves the instrument [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(C)], or if, after the trustee begins to serve, the court finds that it is consistent with the settlor's intent that the trustee continue to serve and that this intent was not the product of fraud, menace, duress, or undue influence [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6), (c)]. For further discussion of these exceptions, see § 64A.37[2].

The trustee will also be shielded from removal if the trust instrument is reviewed by an independent attorney who counsels the settlor about the nature of the intended trustee designation and signs and delivers to the settlor and the designated trustee a certificate in substantially the form required by Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B). This form is the required certificate and is taken verbatim from the form that appears in Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6).

[e] Independent Review and Certification

The attorney who counsels the client and signs the certificate must be independent of the attorney who drafts the trust instrument and whom the client wishes to designate as trustee [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B)]. The independent attorney must be able to advise the settlor impartially and confidentially as to the consequences of designating the first attorney as trustee [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B)].

The independent review and certification may occur before or after the trust instrument has been executed [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B)]. If the written agreement between the independent attorney and the client expressly limits the independent attorney's services to the preparation of a certificate under Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6), including counseling the client before the certificate is prepared, the independent attorney will not be deemed to represent the client for any other purpose [Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B)].

[2] FORM

Certificate of Independent Review (Prob. Code § 15642(b)(6)(B))

CERTIFICATE OF INDEPENDENT REVIEW

I, _____ [name of attorney], have reviewed _____ [name of instrument] and counseled my client, _____ [name of client], fully and privately on the nature and legal effect of the designation as trustee of _____ [name of trustee] contained in such instrument. I am so disassociated from the interest of the person named as trustee as to be in a position to advise my client impartially and confidentially as to the consequences of the designation. On the basis of this counsel, I conclude that the designation of a person who would otherwise be subject to removal under Probate Code Section 15642(b)(6) is clearly the settlor's intent and such intent is not the product of fraud, menace, duress, or undue influence.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to grant general administrative powers to the trustee. It is intended for use in simple trusts in which more lengthy statements of the trustee's administrative powers are not necessary. It is not intended for trusts that hold substantial assets, trusts that are expected to continue for extended periods (i.e., more than 15 or 20 years), trusts that include businesses or farms, trusts that have trust companies as trustees or cotrustees, or marital deduction trusts.

If the trust estate is large, or if it is expected that the trust will continue over an extended period of time, the drafter should adopt the more comprehensive statements of administrative powers contained in either § 64A.221 (granting the trustee broad and extensive powers suitable for large or complex trusts) or § 64A.222 (granting the trustee all of the statutory powers). If the trust is a marital deduction trust, the provisions of the form in Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.212, P 7 (married person's will with marital deduction trust) should be used.

For a provision conferring "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion on the trustee, see § 64A.340. For alternate and optional powers for retention of assets, see §§ 64A.240-64A.242. For alternate and optional investment powers, see §§ 64A.260-64A.268. For alternate and optional business powers, see §§ 64A.280-64A.282. For alternate and optional powers of sale, lease, and exchange, see § 64A.300. For alternate and optional powers for the employment of agents, advisors, and attorneys, see § 64A.320.

[b] Powers of Trustee

[i] In General

The Trust Law confers a broad range of powers on trustees. These powers are automatic in the sense that they may be exercised without court authorization unless they are limited by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(b)]. In addition to the explicit powers conferred by statute [see Prob. Code § 16200(b); see also Prob. Code §§ 16220-16249]

(statutory powers of trustees)], every trustee has the power to perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the prudent person and prudent investor rules [Prob. Code § 16200(c); see Prob. Code §§ 16040(a) (prudent person rule), 16047 (prudent investor rule)]. For discussion of these rules, see §§ 64A.39[7], 64A.40[3]. For a detailed discussion of the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.260[1].

The grant of a power to a trustee, whether by the trust instrument, by statute, or by the court, does not in itself require or permit the exercise of the power [Prob. Code § 16202]. In all cases, the exercise of a power by a trustee, notwithstanding any grant of power, is broadly subject to the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16202; see discussions § 64A.39[7], [8]], and the court retains discretion in appropriate cases to relieve a trustee from restrictions on the exercise of the trustee's powers set forth in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16201; see discussion in § 64A.220[1][c]].

[ii] Drafting Considerations

Strictly speaking, it is not necessary to include all of the powers set forth in this form, since they are also conferred by statute [see § 64A.40[1]]. It is generally good practice, however, to spell out the trustee's powers in full. If the trustee's powers are specified in the will, the trustee will understand them clearly and the beneficiaries will know what to expect from the trustee. In addition, third parties dealing with the trustee will be more readily satisfied as to the trustee's authority, and the expense, inconvenience, and delay occasioned by court proceedings may be reduced or eliminated. The authority of the settlor to vary the powers of the trustee by provisions in the trust instrument is clearly recognized in the Trust Law [see Prob. Code §§ 16000, 16040(b), 16046(b), 16200(b)].

[iii] Retention of Assets

Except as limited in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(b)], the trustee has power to collect, hold, and retain trust property received from a settlor or any other person until, in the judgment of the trustee, disposition of the property should be made [Prob. Code § 16220]. The property may be retained even though it includes property in which the trustee is personally interested [Prob. Code § 16220].

[iv] Investment and Management

The investment and management powers of the trustee are governed by the prudent investor rule, which is set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. Unless the settlor expands or restricts the rule by express provisions in the trust instrument, every trustee who invests and manages trusts assets owes a duty to the beneficiaries to comply with the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16046(a), (b)]. If the trust instrument includes express provisions expanding or restricting the rule, the trustee is entitled to rely on those provisions cannot be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

The prudent investor rule requires the trustee to invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distributions requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. In satisfying this standard, the trustee is required to exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. For general discussion of the prudent investor rule and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, see § 64A.40[3]; see also § 64A.260[1].

Paragraph 2 of this form contains a "short form" statement of the prudent investor rule that is very similar to that appearing in § 64A.261. For a longer form of the prudent investor rule, setting forth the key provisions of the rule as specified by statute, see § 64A.260. Provisions modifying the rule are contained in §§ 64A.262 through 64A.268.

[v] Sales, Exchanges, Leases, Encumbrances, and Options

Under the Trust Law, the trustee has broad powers to sell, exchange, and lease trust property.

First, the trustee's power to hold trust property [see Prob. Code § 16220; see also discussion § 64A.220[1][b][iii]] is subject to the broad qualification that the property may be disposed of when, in the trustee's judgment, disposition would be proper [Prob. Code § 16220]. Second, the trustee has explicit statutory authority to dispose of trust property in a variety of ways. The trustee may acquire or dispose of property, for cash or on credit, at public or private sale, or by exchange [Prob. Code § 16226]; manage, control, divide, develop, improve, exchange, partition, change the character of, or abandon trust property or any interest in trust property [Prob. Code § 16227]; encumber, mortgage, or pledge trust property for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust [Prob. Code § 16228]; demolish any improvements [Prob. Code § 16229(b)] and raze existing party walls or buildings [Prob. Code § 16229(c)] on trust property; subdivide or develop land belonging to the trust estate [Prob. Code § 16230(a)]; enter into leases for any purpose as lessor or lessee with or without the option to purchase or renew and for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust [Prob. Code § 16231]; and grant options involving disposition of trust property, or take options for the acquisition of any property [Prob. Code § 16233].

[vi] Claims and Litigation

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 16200(b)], the trustee has the statutory power to prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings for the protection of trust property and for the protection of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties [Prob. Code § 16249] and to pay, contest, settle, or release any claim by or against the trust, in whole or in part [Prob. Code § 16242]. Conversely, the trustee has a duty to take reasonable steps to enforce claims that are part of the trust property [Prob. Code § 16010] and to defend actions that may result in a loss to the trust [Prob. Code § 16011].

Although the trustee is not required to expend money in pursuit of uncollectible claims [see Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation, § 28.16 (Matthew Bender)], if a claim in favor of the trust is settled for less than the amount due, the trustee may be required to show that more could not have been obtained [ Purdy v. Johnson (1917) 174 Cal. 521, 528, 163 P. 893 ]. The trustee may properly submit claims against the estate to arbitration [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, §§ 178, 192] but must, in appropriate circumstances, take necessary action to collect moneys that are due the trust estate [ Purdy v. Johnson (1917) 174 Cal. 521, 528, 163 P. 893 ]. If litigation is necessary to protect the trust or preserve trust property, it is both the right and the duty of the trustee to employ counsel to prosecute or defend the litigation, and the trustee is entitled to reimbursement out of trust funds for expenses incurred [ Metzenbaum v. Metzenbaum (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 395, 399, 252 P.2d 31 ].

In adjusting claims or commencing or defending litigation, the trustee is subject to the prudent person rule [Prob. Code § 16040; see Prob. Code § 16202 (exercise of trustee's power subject to fiduciary duties); see also discussion § 64A.39[7]].

[vii] Borrowing and Lending

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, the trustee has the power to borrow money for any trust purpose to be repaid from trust property [Prob. Code § 16241]. As a complement of the power to borrow, the trustee also has the power to encumber, mortgage, or pledge trust property for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust in connection with the exercise of any power vested in the trustee [Prob. Code § 16228].

The trustee has the additional power to make loans of trust property to the beneficiary on terms and conditions that the trustee determines are fair and reasonable under the circumstances and to guarantee loans to the beneficiary by encumbrances on trust property [Prob. Code § 16244]. Like other statutory powers, the power to lend money to the beneficiary may be limited (or forbidden) by explicit terms of the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(b)].

[viii] Division and Distribution

Wills often provide for the establishment of multiple trusts (for example, when an equal share of the trust estate is to be held for each of several children). A will may also provide for a partial distribution (e.g., one fourth of the trust estate) when a beneficiary reaches a specified age, or it may call for distribution in fractional shares to multiple beneficiaries. In these cases, the trustee must divide the trust estate. If the estate consists entirely of cash, the division will present no problem. If it consists of real property, stocks, bonds, business interests, or intangibles, the division will present greater difficulty unless the trustee has power to make distributions in divided interests and to adjust resulting differences in valuation.

The Trust Law addresses this problem by empowering the trustee to effect distribution of property and money in divided or undivided interests and to adjust resulting differences in valuation [Prob. Code § 16246]. In making any distribution pursuant to this power, the trustee has the power to make a distribution in kind pro rata or non-pro rata [Prob. Code § 16246]. Like other statutory powers set forth in the Trust Law, the power to make distributions in divided or undivided instruments may be modified (or denied) by the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(b)].

[c] Judicial Relief From Restrictions on Powers

The court has power to permit (or even direct) the trustee to deviate from terms of the trust instrument in appropriate circumstances [see Prob. Code § 16201 (power of court to relieve trustee from restrictions unaffected); see also "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 680 (1986)]. Deviation generally will be permitted if circumstances not known to or anticipated by the settlor would defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the purposes of the trust [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 167(1)]. In such a case, the court may direct or permit the trustee to do acts not authorized (or even forbidden) by the trust instrument if necessary to carry out the purposes of the trust [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 167(1)].

The deviation doctrine is analogous to the cy pres doctrine applicable to charitable trusts [ Stanton v. Wells Fargo Bank etc. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 763, 770, 310 P.2d 1010 ; see discussion in Ch. 69, Charitable Dispositions, § 69.12], though independent of it [ Estate of Loring (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 423, 436-437, 175 P.2d 524 ]. In permitting a deviation, the court authorizes the trustee to do what the testator would have done had the testator anticipated the changed conditions [see Adams v. Cook (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 352, 358-361, 101 P.2d 484 ]. Thus the testator's specific intent is disregarded in order to enforce the testator's general intent [ Estate of Mabury (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 969, 984-985, 127 Cal. Rptr. 233 ].

[2] FORM

General Administrative Powers of Trustee--Short Form

To carry out the purposes of any trust or trusts provided for in this will, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this will, the Trustee(s) shall have, in addition to all the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, the following powers:

Retention of Assets

1. To continue to hold any property and to operate at the risk of the trust estate any business that the Trustee receives or acquires under this trust for as long as the Trustee in the Trustee's judgment deems advisable.

Investment and Management of Trust Property

2. To invest, reinvest, purchase, acquire, exchange, sell, and manage trust property in accordance with the prudent investor rule and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

Sales

3. To sell (for cash or on deferred payments, with or without security), convey, exchange, partition, divide and grant options on trust property.

Leases and Mineral Rights

4. To lease trust property for terms within or beyond the term of the trust and for any purpose, including, but not limited to, the exploration and removal of oil, gas, and other minerals, and to enter into community leases and pooling and unitization agreements.

Claims and Litigation

5. To adjust, settle, compromise, submit to arbitration, or abandon any claims in favor of or against the trust and, at the expense of the trust, to institute, compromise, and defend actions and proceedings.

Borrowing

6. To borrow money, and to hypothecate or encumber trust property by mortgage, deed of trust, or otherwise, to secure the indebtedness of the trust or the joint indebtedness of the trust and any co-owner of trust property.

Division and Distribution

7. On any division or distribution of the trust estate, to make the division or distribution in identical interests, in kind, or partly in kind and partly in money, pro rata, or non-pro rata, or in undivided interests, and for this purpose to sell trust property on the terms and conditions that the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion shall determine.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
B. General Administrative Powers of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.221

§ 64A.221 General Administrative Powers of Trustee--Long Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to confer broad administrative powers on the trustees of large or complex trusts. When used, the form will afford a wide measure of protection for the beneficiaries and allow the trustee discretion to deal with most situations that may be expected to arise in the course of trust administration. The form is designed for use in connection with: (1) trusts that have large total assets, (2) trusts that are expected to continue for more than 15 or 20 years, (3) trusts that have substantial real estate holdings (e.g., an apartment house or similar rental property), (4) trusts that include a business or farm, or (5) trusts that have a corporate trustee or cotrustees.

The provisions of this form are not appropriate for use in every large testamentary trust. They should not be used in a marital deduction trust, for example [for provisions establishing a marital deduction trust, see Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms, § 61.212]. They should not be used if the trustee is a beneficiary of the trust [see discussion in § 64A.32[1]]. In other trusts, the appropriateness of each provision of the form should be considered by the attorney before that provision is included in the will.

For drafting considerations relating to provisions of this form not specifically discussed in this comment, see the comments to the following related forms:

- See § 64A.220[1] for discussion of the power to borrow and lend, to deal with claims against and in favor of the trust estate, and to sell, lease, exchange, manage, and encumber trust assets.
- See § 64A.240[1] for discussion of the power to retain trust assets.
- See § 64A.260[1] for discussion of investment powers.
- See § 64A.280[1] for discussion of powers relating to business interests.

- See § 64A.300[1] for discussion of the power to sell, lease, and exchange trust assets.

[b] Discretion of Trustee

The discretion conferred on the trustee in this form is "simple" or "ordinary," not "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled." When administering the trust, a trustee with "simple" or "ordinary" discretion must act in accordance with the prudent-person rule of Prob. Code § 16040 [Prob. Code § 16040(b); see in § 64A.39[7]] in all matters other than investment and management functions (which are governed by the "prudent investor rule") [Prob. Code § 16040(c); see in § 64A.221[1][d]], whereas a trustee with "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion need not [ American Center for Education, Inc., v. Cavnar (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 476, 497, 145 Cal. Rptr. 736, superseded by statute as stated in Patton v. Sherwood, 152 Cal. App. 4th 339, 152 Cal. App. 4th 339, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289]. However, a trustee with "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion must conform to fiduciary principles and may not act in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)]. For a provision conferring "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion on the trustee, see § 64A.340.

[c] Management of Securities

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 16200(a)], a trustee has power to exercise any voting rights with respect to shares of stock or memberships in any corporation, to waive notices of meetings or give consents to the holding of meetings, and to authorize, ratify, approve, or confirm any action that could be taken by shareholders, members, or property owners [Prob. Code § 16234]. Shares standing in the name of a trustee may be voted by the trustee, either in person or by proxy, but not unless the shares are transferred into the trustee's name [Corp. Code § 702(a)]. In exercising rights relating to shares of stock held in trust, the trustee is subject, as in other investments, to the prudent investor rule of Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 [see Prob. Code § 16202 (exercise of trustee's powers subject to fiduciary duties)].

When there are cotrustees with power to exercise voting rights with respect to shares of stock, the question arises as to what constitutes a binding vote among them. Prob. Code § 15620 states the general rule that, unless otherwise provided in the trust instrument, cotrustees may exercise their powers by unanimous actions only. However, Corp. Code § 704, governing the voting of shares when two or more persons have the same fiduciary relationship respecting the same shares, provides that the act of the majority of the cotrustees is binding. The more specific majority-vote statute, Corp. Code § 704, controls over the general unanimity rule stated in Prob. Code § 15620 [ Edwards v. Edwards (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 599 ]. The majority voting rule can be overcome if the secretary of the corporation is given written notice to the contrary and is furnished with a copy of the trust instrument appointing the fiduciaries and providing for unanimous vote [see Corp. Code § 704]. However, to constitute notice to the contrary, the requirement of unanimity in the voting of shares must be expressly stated in the trust instrument [see Edwards v. Edwards (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 599, 603-604 ].

For optional provisions for dividing or allocating powers of cotrustees, see §§ 64A.360-64A.367.

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, if a trust company is trustee or cotrustee, it may (with the consents of its cotrustees, if any) hold stock or other securities in the name of a nominee or nominees [Fin. Code § 1563]. If a trust company is acting as depositary or custodian for another trustee, it may, with the consent of the other trustee, hold the stock in the name of a nominee or nominees, but the trust company will in any event be liable for any loss occasioned by the acts of the nominee with respect to the stock or other securities so registered [Fin. Code § 1563].

[d] Investment and Management of Trust Assets; Retention of Unproductive Property

The investment and management powers of the trustee ordinarily are governed by the prudent investor rule, which is set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. Unless the settlor expands or restricts the rule by express provisions in the trust instrument, every trustee who invests and manages trusts assets owes a duty to the beneficiaries to comply with the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16046(a), (b)]. If the trust instrument includes express provisions expanding or restricting the rule, the trustee is entitled to rely on those provisions cannot be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

The prudent investor rule requires the trustee to invest and manage the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distributions requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. In satisfying this standard, the trustee is required to exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. For general discussion of the prudent investor rule and the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, see § 64A.40[3]; see also § 64A.260[1].

Paragraph 2 of this form confers very broad investment powers on the trustee. These powers are broader than those conferred by the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and other provisions of the Trust Law. Among other things, the statement of powers in this form waives the requirement of diversification [see Prob. Code § 16048] and permits the trustee to retain unproductive property [see Prob. Code § 16007]. Although such powers can be helpful by providing added flexibility to the trustee, they can also be more dangerous because they increase the potential financial risks to the trust. Accordingly, these provisions should be included only after careful consideration. If the trust drafter would prefer that the standard of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act be substituted, § 64A.260 (prudent investor rule--long form) or § 64A.261 (prudent investor rule--short form) may be substituted for Paragraph 2 if desired.

The Trust Law provides that the trustee has a duty to make the trust property productive "under the circumstances and in furtherance of the purpose of the trust" [Prob. Code § 16007; see Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 181]. Under some circumstances, however, the retention and/or purchase of unproductive assets may benefit the trust estate and the beneficiaries [see discussion in § 64A.241[1][b]]. By authorizing (but not requiring) the trustee to acquire or to retain unproductive property, this form affords the trustee an added measure of investment flexibility. If used in a marital deduction trust, however, the provision will be qualified by the statutory rule that the income beneficiary may require the trustee to make any unproductive property productive or to convert it into productive property within a reasonable time [Prob. Code § 1035(d); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. A provision authorizing retention of unproductive property should not be used if a beneficiary of the trust will also be a trustee or cotrustee [see discussion in § 64A.32[1] et seq.].

[e] Trustee's Dealings With Trust

The trustee has a duty not to use or deal with trust property for the trustee's own profit or for any other purpose unconnected with the trust [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. Similarly, the trustee is prohibited from taking part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. The trustee may not enforce any claim against the trust property that the trustee purchased after or in contemplation of appointment as trustee, but the court may allow the trustee to be reimbursed from trust property the amount that the trustee paid in good faith for the claim [Prob. Code § 16004(b)]. A transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary that occurs during the existence of the trust or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof [Prob. Code § 16004(c); see Evid. Code §§ 605, 606 (presumptions affecting burden of proof)]. However, a trustee may properly retain trust property received from a settlor or any other person, even though it includes property in which the trustee is personally interested [Prob. Code § 16220]. Further, the provision of services for compensation by a regulated financial institution or its affiliates in the ordinary course of business either to a trust of which it also acts as trustee or to a person dealing with the trust does not violate the trustee's duties to the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16015].

The statutory rules against self-dealing and conflicts of interest, like other statutory rules dealing with the trust and trustees, may be varied by provisions of the trust instrument [Prob. Code §§ 16000, 16200(b)]. It has been suggested that a provision in the trust instrument empowering the trustee to lend money to the trust and to buy or sell trust assets may negate the broad statutory prohibitions [see Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed., § 27.16, (Matthew Bender)); see also Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 170, Comment t], although there appears to be no direct California authority to that effect.

[f] Insurance

It is the duty of the trustee to take reasonable steps under the circumstances to keep control of and preserve the trust property [Prob. Code § 16006; see Restatement (2d) of Trusts, §§ 175, 176]. This general duty includes the more particular duty to take reasonable steps to obtain such insurance as is customarily taken by prudent persons [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 176, Comment b(2)]. This insurance will typically include fire insurance, but in appropriate circumstances it also includes liability insurance and insurance against loss of income [see Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed.), § 27.01(3) (Matthew Bender)].

[g] Employment of Advisers, Attorneys, and Agents

The Trust Law gives the trustee the general power to hire persons to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of the trustee's administrative duties. These persons specifically may include, but are not limited to, accountants, attorneys, auditors, investment advisers, appraisers (including probate referees appointed under Probate Code Section 400) [Prob. Code § 16247]. The trustee may employ agents and advisers who are associated or affiliated with the trustee [Prob. Code § 16247].

However, the law imposes limitations on the extent to which the trustee may delegate the trustee's duties and responsibilities to others. In matters other than investment and management functions (which are covered by special rules discussed below) [see Prob. Code § 16012(c)], the trustee has a general duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts that the trustee can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a); see Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 171]. Similarly, the trustee may not transfer the office of trustee to another person, nor delegate the entire administration of the trust to a cotrustee or other person [Prob. Code § 16012(a)]. One California court has interpreted this rule to require the trustee to perform those duties that an average business person, dealing with his or her own property, but with motives similar to those of the settlor, would consider important enough to perform personally [ Powers v. Ashton (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 783, 789, 119 Cal. Rptr. 729]. The trustee also has a duty to apply the full extent of the trustee's skills [Prob. Code § 16014(a)] and, if the settlor in selecting the trustee has relied on the trustee's representation that it has special skills, the trustee is held to the standard of the skills represented [Prob. Code § 16014(b)]. When a trustee has properly delegated a matter to an agent, cotrustee, or other person, the trustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person performing the delegated matter [Prob. Code § 16012(b)].

Special rules apply to the delegation of investment and management functions of the trust [see Prob. Code § 16012(c) (general rule inapplicable)]. Under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and discussion in § 64A.260[1]], a trustee may delegate investment and management functions as prudent under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 16052(a)]. However, the trustee must exercise prudence in selecting an agent, establishing the scope and terms of the delegation, and periodically reviewing the agent's overall performance [Prob. Code § 16052(a)(1)-(3)].

For further discussion of rules relating to agents, advisers, and attorneys, see § 64A.320[1]. For a broad provision empowering the trustee to employ agents, attorneys, and advisers, see § 64A.320.

[2] FORM

General Administrative Powers of Trustee--Long Form

To carry out the purposes of any trust or trusts provided for in this will, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this will, the Trustee shall have, in addition to all the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, the following powers:

Retention of Assets

[For alternative and optional provisions, see §§ 64A.240-64A.242.]

1. To continue to hold any property received into the trust at its inception or subsequently added to it or acquired pursuant to proper authority, if and as long as the trustee, in the exercise of good faith and of reasonable prudence, discretion and intelligence, may consider that retention is in the best interests of the trust or in furtherance of the goals of the trust as determined from this will; such property may include stock in the Trustee, if a corporation, and stock in any corporation controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the Trustee.

Investments

[For alternative investment powers, see §§ 64A.260-64A.268.]

2. To invest and reinvest in every kind of property, real, personal, or mixed, and every kind of investment, specifically including (but not by way of limitation) corporate obligations of every kind, common and preferred stocks (including stock in the trustee, if a corporation), shares of investment trusts and investment companies, bonds, debentures, options, financial futures contracts, commodities futures contracts, forward and leverage contracts, mortgages, deeds of trust, and notes; to retain (in the form in which received or in the form to which it may be changed by reorganization, split-up, stock dividend, or otherwise) any securities or other property the trustee may at any time acquire under this trust; and to purchase or otherwise acquire and to retain, for as long as the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion deems advisable, unproductive property; it being my intention that the trustee shall have full power to invest and reinvest all or any part of the trust estate or funds, without restriction as to the kind or form of investment otherwise permitted or required by law, and without any requirement as to diversification.

Management of Securities

3. To exercise, respecting securities held in the trust estate, all the rights, powers, and privileges of an owner, including, but not limited to, the power to vote, give proxies, and to pay assessments and other sums deemed by the trustee necessary for the protection of the trust estate; to participate in voting trusts, pooling agreements, foreclosures, reorganizations, consolidations, mergers, and liquidations, and in connection therewith to deposit securities with and transfer title to any protective or other committee under such terms as the trustee may deem advisable; to exercise or sell stock subscription or conversion rights; to accept and retain as an investment any securities or other property received through the exercise of any of the forgoing powers, regardless of any limitations elsewhere in this instrument relative to investments by the trustee.

Form of Ownership of Trust Property

4. To hold securities or other trust property in the name of the trustee as trustee under this trust, in the trustee's [or trustees'] own name, in the name of a nominee, or unregistered in a condition under which ownership will pass by delivery.

Business Interests

[For alternate business powers, see §§ 64A.280-64A.282. For alternate powers for retention of assets, see §§ 64A.240-64A.242.]

5. To continue to operate, to sell, or to liquidate, as the trustee shall deem advisable, and at the risk of the trust estate, any business or partnership interest received by the trust estate.

Sales and Exchanges of Property

[For alternate powers of sale, lease, and exchange, see § 64A.300.]

6. To sell, for cash or on deferred payments, at either public or private sale, to exchange, and to convey any property of the trust estate without approval of any court.

Division of Trust Estate

7. On any division of the trust estate into separate shares or trusts, to apportion and allocate the assets of the trust estate in cash or in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind, or in undivided interests, in the manner deemed advisable by the Trustee(s); after any division of the trust estate, to make joint investments with funds from some or all of the several shares or trusts, but to keep separate accounts for each share or trust.

Abandonment of Trust Assets

8. To abandon any trust asset or interest therein, in the discretion of the trustee.

Options

9. To grant an option involving disposition of a trust asset and to take an option for the acquisition of any asset by the trust estate.

Leases of Trust Property

10. To lease any real or personal property of the trust estate, for any purpose, for terms within or extending beyond the duration of the trust.

Property Management

11. To manage, control, improve, and repair real and personal property belonging to the trust estate.

Development of Property

12. To partition, divide, subdivide, assign, develop, and improve any trust property; to make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries, or to adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and to dedicate land or easements to public use with or without consideration.

Repair, Alteration, Construction, and Demolition

13. To make ordinary and extraordinary repairs and alterations in buildings or other trust property; to demolish any improvements, to raze party walls or buildings; and to erect new party walls or buildings, as the trustee deem advisable.

Borrowing and Encumbering

14. To borrow money for any trust purpose from any person, firm, or corporation, including one acting as trustee hereunder, on the terms and conditions deemed proper by the trustee, and to obligate the trust estate for repayment; to encumber the trust estate or any of its property by mortgage, deed of trust, pledge, or otherwise, using procedures to consummate the transaction deemed advisable by the trustee; to replace, renew, and extend any encumbrance and to pay loans or other obligations of the trust estate deemed advisable by the trustee.

Loans by Trustee

15. To lend or advance the Trustee's own funds for any trust purposes to this trust; the loans or advances to bear interest at the then current rate of interest from the date of loan or advancement until repayment, and the principal and interest to constitute a first lien on the entire trust estate until repayment.

Mineral Rights

16. To enter into oil, gas, and other mineral leases, on terms deemed advisable by the trustee; to enter into any pooling, unitization, repressurization, community, or other types of agreements relating to the exploration, development, operation, and conservation of mineral properties; to drill, mine, and otherwise operate for the development of oil, gas, and other minerals; to contract for the installation and operation of absorption and repressuring plants; and to install and maintain pipelines.

Insurance

17. To procure and carry, at the expense of the trust estate, insurance of the kinds, forms, and amounts deemed advisable by the trustee to protect the trust estate and the trustee against any hazard.

Enforcement of Hypothecations

18. To enforce any deed of trust, mortgage, or pledge held by the trust estate, and to purchase at any sale thereunder any property subject to any such hypothecation.

Extending Time for Payment of Obligations

19. To extend the time of payment of any note or other obligation held in the trust estate, including accrued or future interest, in the discretion of the trustee.

Adjustment of Claims

20. To compromise, submit to arbitration, release (with or without consideration), or otherwise adjust claims in favor of or against the trust estate.

Litigation

21. To commence or defend, at the expense of the trust estate, any litigation affecting the trust or any property of the trust estate, as deemed advisable by the trustee.

Administration Expenses

22. To pay all taxes, assessments, and compensation of the trustee, and any other expenses incurred in the collection, care, administration, and protection of the trust estate.

Employment of Attorneys, Advisers, and Other Agents

[For alternate provisions for employment of attorneys and agents, see § 64A.320 ]

23. To employ any attorney, investment adviser, accountant, broker, tax specialist, or any other agent deemed necessary in the discretion of the trustee; and to pay from the trust estate reasonable compensation for all services performed by any of them.

Termination of Small Trust

24. To terminate, in the discretion of the trustee, any separate trust held for an income beneficiary, whenever the fair market value of the separate trust at any time becomes less than _____ [amount, e.g.: $5,000 or $10,000]; and, regardless of the age of the income beneficiary, to distribute the principal and any accrued or undistributed net income to the income beneficiary, or to the income beneficiary's guardian, conservator, or other fiduciary.

Distribution

25. On any partial or final distribution of the trust estate, to apportion and allocate the assets of the trust estate in cash or in kind, or partly in cash and partly in kind, or in undivided interests, in the manner deemed advisable by the trustee; and to sell any property deemed necessary by the trustee to make the distribution.

General

26. With respect to the trust property, funds, and assets, to do all the acts, take all the proceedings, and exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges which an absolute owner of the same property, funds, and assets would have, subject always to the discharge of the fiduciary obligations of the trust; the enumeration of certain powers in this will shall not limit the general or implied powers of the trustee; the trustee shall have all additional powers that may now or hereafter be conferred by law or that may be necessary to enable the trustee to administer the trust in accordance with the provisions of, and subject to any limitations specified in this will.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 B. General Administrative Powers of Trustee

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.222

§ 64A.222 Provision Conferring All Statutory Powers

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give the trustee the specific powers conferred on trustees by Prob. Code §§ 16220-16249, plus the general power to perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the prudent person and prudent investor rules [Prob. Code § 16200(c); see Prob. Code §§ 16040(a) (prudent person rule), 16047 (prudent investor rule)]. Two alternative provisions are set forth. One that sets out the statutory provisions in full and another that specifically refers to the provisions but does not set them out in full.

[b] Statutory Powers

The Trust Law includes numerous provisions that confer specific powers on trustees. These powers are subject in all respects to provisions of the trust instrument, which may limit or even prohibit their exercise [Prob. Code § 16200(b)].

The Trust Law also gives trustees the power to perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the standards of care provided in Prob. Code § 16040 or Prob. Code § 16047 [Prob. Code § 16200(c)]. Prob. Code § 16040(a) states the prudent person rule, under which the trustee is required to administer the trust with the care, skill, and caution under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent person acting in a like capacity would use in the conduct of an enterprise of like character and with like aims to accomplish the purposes of the trust as determined from the trust instrument. Prob. Code § 16047 states the prudent investor rule, under which the trustee is required to invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying the prudent investor rule, the trustee must exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16047(a)].

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, the trustee is subject to the prudent person rule in all aspects of trust administration except the management and investment of trust assets [Prob. Code § 16040(b), (c)]. The trustee's investment and management duties are subject to the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16047].

For discussion of the prudent person rule, see § 64A39[7]. For discussion of the prudent investor rule, see §§ 64A.40[3] and 64A.260[1].

[c] Drafting Considerations

Since the statutory powers are conferred on every trustee unless the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 16200(b)], the trust instrument need not repeat or refer to those powers. In spite of this, it will be advantageous in many cases to restate the statutory powers. If the trustee's powers are broad enough to meet and deal with any problems that may arise in the administration of the trust, the trustee will be able to act quickly, efficiently, and flexibly. A specific restatement of the statutory powers (or an incorporation of those powers by reference) will make it clear to the settlor, the trustee, and the beneficiaries that the trustee's powers include all of the powers set forth in the statutes. Third parties dealing with the trust will be more readily satisfied with the trustee's authority to act in its behalf. Further, a specific statement of (or reference to) the statutory powers will avoid any inference that some other provision of the will was intended to modify or limit one or more of the statutory powers. If the testator resides outside California at the time of his or her death, the statement of or reference to the statutory powers may be particularly useful, inasmuch as the law of the state of death (which may otherwise control the administration of the trust estate) may not authorize powers as broad as those contained in the Trust Law.

Broad powers should not, however, be conferred on all trustees. They should be reserved for trustees with sufficient experience, ability, and integrity to exercise them intelligently and responsibly. If the trustee is an individual with little or no business or investment experience, if the loyalties of the trustee may for any reason be subject to compromise, or if conflicts between the trustee and the beneficiaries are anticipated, the drafter should limit the trustee's powers.

[d] Derivation of Provisions

Each of the paragraphs set forth in the first alternative provision of this form derives from a specific statute or statutes. The following table will assist the attorney in identifying the source of each of the paragraphs:

24. Prob. Code § 16244
25. Prob. Code § 16245
26. Prob. Code § 16246
27. Prob. Code § 16247
28. Prob. Code § 16248
29. Prob. Code § 16249
30. Prob. Code §§ 16040, 16047, 16200(c)

[e] Tax Considerations

Tax considerations may, in some cases, require a substantial limitation of the trustee's administrative powers. Excessively broad powers may, under certain circumstances, result in the loss of significant tax benefits. If, for example, the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction [see I.R.C. § 2056], powers that would permit the trustee to interfere with the surviving spouse's right to trust income by allocating receipts and disbursements between principal and income or by holding overly broad investment powers are potentially dangerous. Under I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)(B)(ii), the surviving spouse must have the right to all income for life, payable at least annually. If the trustee can interfere with the spouse's right to the income of the trust, then the marital deduction may be lost [but see Prob. Code § 21522(a) (if instrument contains marital deduction gift, trustee's powers must be construed to comply with marital deduction provisions of Internal Revenue Code); see also Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions, § 71.20 (California statutes designed to insure that marital deduction gift will comply with Internal Revenue Code requirements)].

Further, if the trustee is a beneficiary, and if the trustee-beneficiary's powers of administration are so broad as to constitute a general power of appointment over the trust principal, the principal may be included in the estate of the trustee upon the trustee's death. If the will gives the trustee the power to invade the principal of the trust for his or her own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)], with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. However, the mere power of management, investment, custody of assets, or the power to allocate receipts and disbursements as between income and principal, exercisable in a fiduciary capacity, whereby the holder has no power to enlarge or shift any of the beneficial interests except as an incidental consequence of the discharge of fiduciary duties, is not a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

[2] FORM

Provision Conferring All Statutory Powers

[First alternative: powers set forth at length:]

To carry out the purposes of the trust(s) provided for in this will, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this will, the trustee shall have, in addition to all other powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, the following powers:

Collecting and Holding Property

1. To collect, hold, and retain trust property received at the inception of the trust or thereafter from any other source until, in the judgment of the trustee, disposition of the property should be made. The property may be retained even though it includes property in which the trustee is personally interested.

Receiving Additions to Trust

2. To accept additions to the property of the trust from any source.

Participating in Business

3. To continue or participate in the operation of any business or other enterprise that is part of the trust property for a reasonable time pending a court hearing on the matter and, for that purpose, to effect incorporation, dissolution, or other changes in the form of the organization of the business or enterprise; and, if authorized by the court, to continue the operation of any such business or enterprise thereafter.

Investments in Obligations of United States Government

4. To invest in obligations of the United States government, directly or in the form of an interest in a money market mutual fund registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. §§ 80a-1-80a-64) or an investment vehicle authorized for the collective investment of trust funds pursuant to Title 12, Section 9.18 of the Code of Federal Regulations, the portfolios of which are limited to United States government obligations maturing not later than five years from the date of investment or reinvestment and to repurchase agreements fully collateralized by United States government obligations.

Deposits

5. To deposit trust funds at reasonable interest in any of the following accounts (including accounts in institutions operated by or that are affiliated with the trustee and accounts that are subject to notice or other conditions respecting withdrawal prescribed by law or governmental regulation) to the extent that the account is insured by a government agency or collateralized:

- (a) An account in a bank;
- (b) An account in an insured savings and loan association;
- (c) An account consisting of shares of an insured credit union.

If authorized by the court, the trustee may deposit trust funds in an account described above in an amount greater than the maximum insured or collateralized amount. Nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the trustee from holding an amount of trust property reasonably necessary for the orderly administration of the trust in the form of cash or in a checking account without interest.

Acquisition and Disposition of Property

6. To acquire or dispose of property, for cash or on credit, at public or private sale, or by exchange.

Management of Property

7. To manage, control, divide, develop, improve, exchange, partition, change the character of, or abandon trust property or any interest therein.

Encumbrances

8. To encumber, mortgage, or pledge trust property for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust in connection with the exercise of any power vested in the trustee.

Repairs and Alterations of Property

9. To make ordinary or extraordinary repairs, alterations, or improvements in buildings or other trust property; to demolish any improvements; and to raze existing or erect new party walls or buildings.

Development of Land

10. To subdivide or develop land; dedicate land to public use; make or obtain the vacation of plats and adjust boundaries; adjust differences in valuation on exchange or partition by giving or receiving consideration; and dedicate easements to public use without consideration.

Leases

11. To enter into a lease for any purpose as lessor or lessee with or without the option to purchase or renew and for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

Mineral Leases

12. To enter into a lease or arrangement for exploration and removal of gas, oil, or other minerals, and to enter into a community oil lease or a pooling or unitization agreement, and for a term within or extending beyond the term of the trust.

Options

13. To grant an option involving disposition of trust property or take an option for the acquisition of any property, either of which may be exercisable beyond the term of the trust.

Voting Rights

14. With respect to any shares of stock of a domestic or foreign corporation, any membership in a nonprofit corporation, or any other property, to vote in person and give proxies to exercise any voting rights with respect to the shares, memberships, or property; to waive notice of a meeting or give consent to the holding of a meeting; and to authorize, ratify, approve, or confirm any action that could be taken by shareholders, members, or property owners.

Payment of Calls and Assessments

15. To pay calls, assessments, and any other sums chargeable or accruing against or on account of securities.

Stock Subscriptions and Conversions

16. To sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights.

Consent to Changes in Form of Business and Voting Trusts

17. To consent, directly or through a committee or other agent, to the reorganization, consolidation, merger, dissolution, or liquidation of a corporation or other business enterprise, and to participate in voting trusts, pooling arrangements, and foreclosures, and in connection therewith, to deposit securities with and transfer title and delegate discretions to any protective or other committee as the trustee may deem advisable.

Holding Securities in Name of Nominee

18. To hold a security in the name of a nominee or in other form without disclosure of the trust so that title to the security may pass by delivery, but the trustee shall be liable for any act of the nominee in connection with the security so held.

Deposit of Securities in Securities Depository

19. To deposit securities in a securities depository, as defined in California Financial Code Section 30004, which is licensed under Financial Code Section 30200 or is exempt from licensing by Financial Code Section 30005 or 30006. The securities may be held by the securities depository in the manner authorized by Financial Code Section 775.

Insurance

20. To insure the property of the trust against damage or loss and to insure the trustee against liability with respect to third persons.

Borrowing Money

21. To borrow money for any trust purpose to be repaid from trust property. The lender may include, but is not limited to, a bank holding company, affiliate, or subsidiary of the trustee.

Payment and Settlement of Claims

22. To pay or contest any claim; to settle a claim by or against the trust by compromise, arbitration, or otherwise; and to release, in whole or in part, any claim belonging to the trust.

Payment of Taxes, Compensation, and Other Expenses

23. To pay taxes, assessments, reasonable compensation of the trustee and of employees and agents of the trust, and other expenses incurred in the collection, care, administration, and protection of the trust.

Loans to Beneficiary

24. To make loans out of trust property to _____[the or any] beneficiary on terms and conditions that the trustee determines are fair and reasonable under the circumstances; and to guarantee loans to _____[the or any] beneficiary by encumbrances on trust property.

Distribution to Beneficiary Under Legal Disability

25. To pay any sum of principal or interest distributable to _____[the or any] beneficiary, without regard to whether the beneficiary is under a legal disability, by paying the sum to the beneficiary or by paying the sum to another person for the use or benefit of the beneficiary.

Nature and Value of Distributions

26. To effect distribution of property and money in divided or undivided interests and to adjust resulting differences in valuation; and to make any distribution in kind pro rata or non pro rata.

Hiring Persons

27. To hire persons, including accounts, attorneys, auditors, investment advisers, appraisers, or other agents, even if they are associated or affiliated with the trustee, to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of administrative duties.

Execution and Delivery of Instruments

28. To execute and deliver all instruments needed to accomplish or facilitate the exercise of the powers vested in the trustee.

Actions and Proceedings

29. To prosecute or defend actions, claims, or proceedings for the protection of trust property and of the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties.

Prudent Person and Prudent Investor Rules

30. To perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the standard of care provided in the prudent person or prudent investor rules, as stated in Probate Code Sections 16040 and 16047 or any successors to those sections.

[OR]

[Second alternative provision: statutory powers referred to but not set forth at length:]

To carry out the purposes of the trust(s) provided for in this will, and subject to any limitations stated elsewhere in this will, the trustee shall have, in addition to all the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by law, all of the powers now or hereafter conferred on trustees by Sections 16220-16249 of the Probate Code of the State of California (or any successors to those sections) and the power to perform any act that a trustee would perform for the purposes of the trust under the standard of care provided in the prudent person or prudent investor rules, as stated in Probate Code Sections 16040 and 16047 or any successors to those sections.

C. Alternate and Optional Powers for Retention of Assets

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.240

§ 64A.240 Provision Waiving Requirement of Diversification

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to hold trust assets without regard to the usual rule of diversification of investments. It should be used whenever the trust estate is small or consists in large part of a single asset and the testator wishes the principal trust asset to be retained and not converted into diversified investments.

For a provision granting the trustee "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion, see § 64A.340. For provisions permitting the trustee to hold unproductive assets, see § 64A.241. For a provision requiring the trustee to retain a specific asset or assets held by the trust estate, see § 64A.242.

[b] Diversification of Investments

[i] General Rule

The trustee's investment powers are governed by the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054], which is a part of the Trust Law. The Uniform Prudent Investor Act applies to all trusts existing on and created after its effective date, which was January 1, 1996 [Prob. Code § 16054]. As applied to those trusts, however, it only governs decisions or actions occurring after the effective date [Prob. Code § 16054]. For a general discussion of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, and the trustee's powers and duties under the act, see § 64A.40[3].

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act provides that in making and implementing investment decisions, the trustee has a duty to diversify the investments of the trust unless, under the circumstances, it is prudent not to do so [Prob. Code § 16048]. Even before the adoption of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, case law in California required trustees to diversify trust investments [see Estate of Collins (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 663, 669, 139 Cal. Rptr. 644].

The rule requiring the trustee to diversify investments prevents the trustee from investing a disproportionately large part of the trust estate in a particular security or type of security [Restatement 2d of Trusts, § 228, Comment a]. Diversification of investments is generally desirable because it minimizes the risk of large losses.

[ii] Effect of Trust Provisions

Although the Uniform Prudent Investor Act generally requires trustees to diversify their investments [see Prob. Code § 16048 and discussion in § 64A.240[1][b][i]], the Act permits the settlor to expand or restrict the trustee's investment duties by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. If the settlor does include express provisions modifying the diversification requirement, the trustee is entitled to rely on those provisions and cannot be held liable to a beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. The settlor may modify or dispense with the diversification requirement either by expressly modifying the requirement, as in this form, or by authorizing (or requiring) the trustee to make or retain specified investments that do not comply with the diversification rule.

[iii] Drafting Considerations

The rule requiring diversification of investments is generally beneficial and should be dispensed with only in special circumstances and only after fully considering the effect of doing so. Diversification is one of the cornerstones of prudent investment policy and will help to ameliorate the effect of other investment mistakes. If the trust's investment portfolio is diversified, a loss sustained in one investment may be balanced by gains in other investments. The benefits of diversification generally increase as the size of the trust estate and the term of the trust increase. While it may be prudent to invest a small trust estate in one or two investments only, it will rarely be prudent to invest a very large trust estate in this way. Similarly, it may be prudent to invest a trust estate in one or two investments for a very short time; but it will rarely be prudent to invest in one or two investments for a very long term.

[iv] Limitations on Effect of Provision

A court may authorize the sale of a trust asset even when the trust instrument dispenses with the requirement of diversification, if circumstances change after the creation of the trust in a manner that would cause its purpose to be defeated if the asset were retained [see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 3, § 190.4; see also Restatement 2d of Trusts, § 167]. Further, a trust provision dispensing with the requirement of diversification will not relieve the trustee of the duty of investing and managing the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [see Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. Such a provision also will not relieve the trustee of the duty of exercising reasonable care, skill, and caution in making and retaining investments [see Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. While it might be prudent at the inception of a trust to hold all or substantially all of the trust's assets in a single large investment, it may later prove to be inappropriate to continue to retain the single investment, and diversification would then become necessary. The Trust Law generally empowers the court to relieve the trustee from restrictions on the exercise of powers under the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16201].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

C. Alternate and Optional Powers for Retention of Assets

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.241

§ 64A.241 Provision Permitting Trustee to Hold Unproductive Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to hold unproductive property. The form includes a principal provision and an optional provision. The optional provision may be added to the principal provision if any trust subject to the provision is a marital deduction trust [see § 64A.241[1][c]].

For a provision permitting the trustee to purchase, acquire, or otherwise invest in unproductive property, see § 64A.264. For a provision permitting (but not requiring) the trustee to hold assets without regard to the usual rule of investment diversification, see § 64A.240. For a provision requiring the trustee to retain a specific asset or assets held by the trust, see § 64A.242. For a provision granting the trustee "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion, see § 64A.340.

[b] Unproductive Investments

The trustee has a duty to make the trust property productive under the circumstances and in furtherance of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16007; see Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 181; Scott, The Law of Trusts (Little, Brown & Co. 3d ed. 1967), vol. 3, § 240]. This rule codifies the substance of Section 181 of the Restatement (Second) of Trusts [Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 665 (1986)]. The duty to make trust property productive, like other duties imposed by statute, may be varied or even dispensed with by provisions of the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16000]. For example, the trust instrument may require the trustee to hold certain unproductive property in the trust estate and/or give possession of the property to a beneficiary at a later date. Such a provision would override the trustee's general duty to make the trust property productive [18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 665 (1986)]. The trust instrument may also give a beneficiary a right to occupy a home that forms part of the trust estate. Such a provision would relieve the trustee of the duty to make the home productive, or to convert it into other productive assets [18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 665 (1986)].

Depending on the goals of the trust, the circumstances of the beneficiaries, and the trustee's investment skills and experience, the retention of assets that do not currently produce income may benefit the trust under some circumstances. In other circumstances, an investment program geared toward acquisition of such investments may be indicated [see § 64A.264[1][b]]. If the principal goal of the trust is to provide current support for income beneficiaries, it would make little sense to leave any substantial part of the trust estate in unproductive assets. If, however, the current needs of the income beneficiaries are modest and the principal goal of the trust is to increase the size of the corpus for the eventual benefit of the remainder beneficiaries, the retention of at least some unproductive assets may be indicated.

Market conditions and tax considerations may also influence the decision to retain unproductive assets or convert them into income-producing property. If, for example, the market price of an asset received into the trust estate at its inception is depressed but prospects for a rise in price are good or reasonable, it may well be to the advantage of the trust estate to continue to hold the asset. Since any appreciation in the value of a capital asset will ordinarily be recognized only on sale of the asset [see I.R.C. § 1222], retention of the asset and postponement of the recognition for a period of time may (depending on other circumstances of the trust) be advantageous. By authorizing (but not requiring) the trustee to retain unproductive assets, this form gives the trustee sufficient flexibility to take advantage of whatever circumstances, in the trustee's judgment, will result in the greatest benefit to the trust estate.

[c] Tax Considerations

A trust provision empowering the trustee to acquire or hold unproductive property effectively gives the trustee the power to deny income to the income beneficiary. For this reason, such a power will disqualify a trust from eligibility for the federal estate tax marital deduction either as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5; see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7; see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], unless the trust requires, or permits the surviving spouse to require, that the trustee either make the property productive or convert it within a reasonable time [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4) (power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (power of appointment rules for determining lifetime income interest also apply to QTIP trusts)]. To protect against inadvertent loss of the marital deduction by virtue of the preceding rule, California has enacted Prob. Code § 21524(c), which provides that, if a marital deduction gift is made in trust, the surviving spouse has the right, among other things, to require that the trustee make unproductive marital deduction property productive or convert it into productive property within a reasonable time. However, Prob. Code § 21524(c) does not apply if the terms of the trust expressly or by implication make it inapplicable [Prob. Code § 21502(a)]. For this reason, it is strongly recommended that the optional language in this provision be included whenever a marital deduction trust is involved, despite the fact that it simply restates the statutory rule. Besides clarifying the testator's intent, inclusion of this language in the trust itself will help assure that the trustee and the trust beneficiaries will understand the nature of their powers with respect to unproductive property without recourse to the statute.

For additional discussion of the marital deduction and marital deduction trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Trustee to Hold Unproductive Property

The trustee shall have the power to retain or acquire unproductive or underproductive property [optional language for marital deduction trusts]; provided, however, that as to any assets of the _____ (Power of Appointment or QTIP) Trust, my _____ (husband or wife) shall have the right, by delivery of a written instrument to the trustee, to require the trustee to make unproductive or underproductive property productive, or to convert it to productive property, within a reasonable time following receipt of the request].

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

C. Alternate and Optional Powers for Retention of Assets

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.242

§ 64A.242 Provision Requiring Trustee to Hold Specific Asset or Assets

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to retain a specific asset or assets held by the trust estate. It should be used only when the testator wishes a particular asset or assets, such as a family business, farm, or other specified property, to be retained in the trust.

For a provision permitting the trustee to hold assets without regard to the usual rule of investment diversification, see § 64A.240. For a provision permitting the trustee to hold unproductive assets, see § 64A.241. For a provision permitting the trustee to purchase, acquire, or otherwise invest in unproductive property, see § 64A.264. For a provision granting the trustee "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion, see § 64A.340.

[b] Direction to Retain Particular Asset or Assets

The prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and discussion in § 64A.40[3]] generally requires the trustee to diversify the investments of the trust unless, under the circumstances, it is prudent not to do so [Prob. Code § 16048]. However, the settlor may expand or restrict the prudent investor rule by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(a); see § 64A.240[1]]. The settlor may, for example, direct the trustee to hold a particular asset or assets, and forbid the trustee to sell those assets for the purpose of achieving investment diversification. When the trust instrument includes a provision such as this, the trustee is entitled to rely on it and cannot be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

[c] Use Provision With Caution

This provision dispenses with the usual rule of investment diversification by requiring the trustee to hold a specified asset or assets as part of the trust estate. Since diversification is one of the cornerstones of prudent investment policy, this provision should be used only in rare cases and only when the settlor is firmly convinced that its advantages to the trust and the beneficiaries will clearly outweigh its disadvantages.

This provision will deprive the trustee of much of the flexibility necessary to make prudent investment decisions. However, it will not relieve the trustee of the duty of investing and managing the trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [see Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. It also will not relieve the trustee of the duty to exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution in making and retaining investments [see Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. If, at some time after the trust becomes effective, holding the stated asset or assets in the trust estate proves to be incompatible with the stated purposes or distribution requirements of the trust, diversification could become necessary despite the terms of this provision.

[2] FORM

§ 64A.260 Prudent Person Rule--Long Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to state that, in investing trust assets, the trustee must comply with the terms of the prudent investor rule. Since the prudent investor rule applies to all trusts unless the trust instrument includes express provisions expanding or restricting it [Prob. Code § 16046(b)], it is not necessary to include this provision in the will. However, it may be useful to do so to make it clear to the trustee and other persons interested in the trust that the rule applies.

For a short form of the prudent investor rule, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.411[2].

[b] Prudent Investor Rule

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act, which forms a part of the Trust Law, sets forth the terms of the prudent investor rule in California [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. The basic terms of the prudent investor rule are stated in Prob. Code § 16047(a), which requires the trustee to invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. Prob. Code § 16047(a) also provides that in satisfying this standard, the trustee must exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution.

For a general discussion of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.40[3].

[c] Trustee's Investigation and Review

The prudent investor rule requires the trustee to make a reasonable effort to ascertain facts relevant to the investment and management of trust assets [Prob. Code § 16047(d)]. Within a reasonable time after accepting a trusteeship or receiving trust assets, the trustee has a duty to review the trust assets and make and implement decisions concerning the retention and disposition of assets, in order to bring the trust portfolio into compliance with the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust, and with the requirements of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code § 16049]. Compliance with the prudent investor rule is determined in light of the facts and circumstances existing at the time of a trustee's decision or action and not by hindsight [Prob. Code § 16051].

[d] Investment Costs

In investing and managing trust assets, the trustee may only incur costs that are appropriate and reasonable in relation to the assets, overall investment strategy, purposes, and other circumstances of the trust [Prob. Code § 16050].

[e] Circumstances to Be Considered

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act provides that the trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust [Prob. Code § 16047(b)]. To the extent that they are relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries, the following circumstances are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets under the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16047(c)]:

- General economic conditions.
- The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio.
- The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them;
- Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

[f] Delegation of Investment Responsibilities

The trustee may delegate investment and management functions as prudent under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 16052(a)]. However, the trustee must exercise prudence in selecting an agent, establishing the scope and terms of the delegation, and periodically reviewing the agent's overall performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation [Prob. Code § 16052(a)].

A trustee who delegates investment functions in accordance with the rules stated above generally will not generally be liable to the beneficiaries or to the trust for the decisions or actions of the agent to whom the function was delegated [Prob. Code § 16052(c)]. However, the trustee may be held liable for the agent's acts in any of the following circumstances [Prob. Code §§ 16041(b), 16052(c)]:

- If the trustee directs the acts of the agent.
- If the trustee delegates to the agent authority to perform an act that the trustee is under a duty not to delegate.

- If the trustee does not use reasonable prudence in the selection or retention of the agent.
- If the trustee does not periodically review the agent's overall performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation.
- If the trustee conceals the act of the agent.
- If the trustee neglects to take reasonable steps to compel the agent to redress a wrong when the trustee knows of the agent's wrongful acts or omissions.

When an agent performs a delegated function, the agent has a duty to exercise reasonable care to comply with the terms of the delegation [Prob. Code § 16052(b)]. By accepting the delegation of a trust function from the trustee of a trust that is subject to the law of California, an agent submits to the jurisdiction of the California courts [Prob. Code § 16052(d)].

[g] Standard Drafting Terms

Some standard terms are commonly used in trust instruments to describe or limit the trustee's investment authority. For example, a trust instrument may authorize the trustee to make "investments permissible by law for investment of trust funds," "legal investments," or "authorized investments." Trust instruments often provide that the trustee may invest trust funds under the "prudent man rule," the "prudent trustee rule," the "prudent person rule," or the "prudent investor rule" [see Prob. Code § 16053]. Alternatively, trust instruments may authorize the trustee to make investment decisions "using the judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence exercise in the management of their own affairs, not in regard to speculation but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income as well as the probable safety of their capital" [see Prob. Code § 16053]. Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, when these or comparable terms are used in the instrument, the trustee will have the power to make any investment or follow any investment strategy permitted under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code § 16053].

[2] FORM

Prudent Person Rule--Long Form

The Trustee shall invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the Trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution. The Trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets and courses of action must be evaluated not in isolation, but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole, and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust. Among the circumstances that are appropriate to consider in investing and managing trust assets are the following, to the extent relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

- (1) General economic conditions.
- (2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation.
- (3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies.
- (4) The role that each investment or course of action plans within the overall trust portfolio.

- (5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital.
- (6) Other resources of the beneficiaries known to the trustee as determined from information provided by them.
- (7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital.
- (8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

The trustee may invest in any kind of property of type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the standards set forth in this provision or the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, as set forth in California Probate Code Sections 16045-16054 or any successor sections.

D. Alternate and Optional Investment Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.262

§ 64A.262 Provision Conferring Broad Investment Powers on Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to give the trustee broader investment powers than are permitted under the prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. For a long form of the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.260. For a short form of the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.261. For a provision granting the trustee "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion, see § 64A.340.

[b] Settlor's Power to Expand or Restrict Prudent Person Rule

The Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054] authorizes the settlor to expand or restrict the prudent investor rule by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. If the settlor does modify the prudent investor rule, the trustee is entitled to rely on the express provisions of the trust instrument and cannot be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

When a trust instrument confers broad investment discretion on the trustee, the extent to which the settlor intended to expand the scope of the trustee's powers is subject to interpretation. A trust instrument that grants the trustee the power to make investments "in his discretion" or "in her discretion" does not ordinarily permit the trustee to make investments that would not be permitted under the prudent investor rule [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 227, Comment u]. Although a settlor may, by a clear statement in the trust instrument, authorize the trustee to invest in speculative securities or in other assets that would, under the prudent investor rule, be "improper," any provision purporting to grant the trustee such authority will be strictly construed against an enlargement of the permissible scope of investments [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 227, Comment u].

While a provision conferring broad investment powers on the trustee may be sufficient to expand the scope of the prudent investor rule, it will not relieve the trustee of the general duty to exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution in making investments, or to consider the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [

see Prob. Code § 16047(a). Many trust companies and other corporate trustees feel that they are not sufficiently protected by investment powers that significantly exceed the terms and scope of the prudent investor rule and will adhere to the well-established rule despite a provision in the trust instrument granting broader powers.

[c] Use Provision With Caution

The prudent investor rule is designed to protect trust estates from improvident trust administration and to assure the beneficiaries that their interests will be protected by a reasonable investment program. The testator should authorize a deviation from the rule only after carefully considering the reasons for doing so and concluding that the advantages of the proposed deviation clearly outweigh its disadvantages.

§ 64A.264 Provision Permitting Trustee to Invest in Unproductive Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to purchase, acquire, or otherwise invest in unproductive property. For a provision permitting (but not requiring) the trustee to hold unproductive property, see § 64A.241.

[b] Investment in Unproductive Property

Although the trustee generally has a duty to make the trust property productive [Prob. Code § 16007; see § 64A.241[1]], the trust instrument may relieve the trustee of that duty, in whole or in part [Prob. Code § 16000]. Some assets produce little or no income but have excellent prospects for capital appreciation. Depending on the goals of the trust, the circumstances of the trust beneficiaries, and the trustee's investment skills and experience, the acquisition and retention of assets that do not currently produce income may, in appropriate circumstances, benefit the trust and the trust beneficiaries. If the principal purpose of the trust is to provide current support for income beneficiaries, then it will make little sense to invest all or a substantial part of the trust estate in unproductive assets. If, on the other hand, the principal goal of the trust is to increase the size of the corpus for the eventual benefit of the remainder beneficiaries, an investment program that includes the purchase of at least some unproductive assets may be indicated.

[c] Tax Caution

Since a provision empowering the trustee to acquire or hold unproductive property may give the trustee power to deny income to an income beneficiary, such a provision would, unless modified by the trust instrument or statutory rule, disqualify the trust for treatment as a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(ii)]. For further consideration of the tax consequences of investments in unproductive property, see the discussion in § 64A.241[1][c].

Provision Permitting Trustee to Invest in Unproductive Property

When investing, reinvesting, purchasing, acquiring, exchanging, selling, and managing property of the trust(s) provided for in this will, the Trustee may, in the trustee's discretion, acquire (by exchange, purchase, or otherwise) and may retain and hold unproductive property.

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.265

§ 64A.265 Provision Permitting Trustee to Invest in Investment Funds

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to invest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, mortgage participations, regulated investment companies, and other investment funds.

[b] Investment Funds

The widespread use of mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, investment companies, mortgage participations, and other similar investment vehicles has, in recent years, raised the question as to whether such investments are permissible under the prudent investor rule. Investments of this kind were at one time condemned as improper delegations of the trustee's discretionary power to select investments for the trust [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 3, § 227.9A]. By statute, a majority of the states have authorized fiduciaries to invest in stocks or other securities of investment management companies [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 3, § 227.9A].

In California, unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, every trustee has the statutory power to invest "in any kind of property," consistent with the standards of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act and the other provisions of the Trust Law governing the duties of trustees [Prob. Code § 16047(e)]. The Probate Code broadly defines "property" to include "anything that may be the subject of ownership" [Prob. Code § 62; see 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 798 (1986) (definition of "property" in Prob. Code § 62 supersedes definition of "property" in former Civ. Code § 2261(f), repealed eff. July 1, 1987)]. In light of this definition and the broad standards applied in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, it is clear that investment funds are now a permitted investment provided they meet the other standards and requirements stated in the Act [see Uniform Prudent Investor Act, 25 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 543, 580 (1995)]. Nevertheless, the inclusion of this provision may still serve a useful purpose by making clear that the testator specifically intends that these types of investments be permitted [see Prob. Code § 16046(c) (testator's power to expand or restrict trustee's statutory investment powers)], in order to preclude any argument by a beneficiary that such an investment would not be "reasonably suited to the trust" within the meaning of Prob. Code § 16047(b) or would be inappropriate in light of any of the specific factors listed in Prob. Code § 16047(c) [see discussion in § 64A.260[1][e]].

Provision Permitting Trustee to Invest in Investment Funds

The Trustee is authorized, in the Trustee's discretion, to invest or reinvest in mutual funds, money market funds, investment trusts, regulated investment companies, market funds or index funds, and in any shares or securities of any such funds or companies, which persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire for their own account.

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.266

§ 64A.266 Provisions Permitting Trustee to Invest in Life Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to invest in life insurance contracts on the life of the trustee or the beneficiaries. The form consists of a principal provision and an optional provision. The optional provision may be added to the principal provision if the will is to include a marital deduction trust. Although these provisions are not strictly necessary, since investments in life insurance contracts are permitted by statute [see discussion in § 64A.266[1][b][i]], they may serve a useful function by clearly apprising the trustee and other persons interested in the trust that such investments may be made.

[b] Life Insurance as Trust Investment

[i] In General

Investment of trust funds in life insurance contracts was condemned at one time on the ground that life insurance contracts do not produce current income for the trust [see discussion in § 64A.241[1][b]]. In the absence of specific authorization in the trust instrument, or in a statute, trustees traditionally have been prohibited from investing in insurance contracts [Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed.), Ch. 29, Powers and Duties of Trustees (Cont.) Investments, § 29.02 [5]] (Matthew Bender). In 1968, the California legislature removed any impediment to such investments by including life insurance, endowment, and annuity contracts issued by legal reserve companies authorized to do business in California within the definition of "property" as that word was used in the prudent person rule [see former Civ. Code § 2261(f), repealed eff. July 1, 1987]. This definition of "property" was not included in the version of the prudent investor rule adopted as part of the Trust Law [see Prob. Code § 16040], or the prudent investor rule subsequently adopted as part of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. However, the Uniform Prudent Investor Act gives trustees broad latitude with respect to investments by authorizing them to invest trust assets in "any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with" the Probate Code standards governing the duties of trustees [Prob. Code §

16047(e)]. These standards require, among other things, that the trustee's investment and management decisions must be evaluated not in isolation, but "in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust" [Prob. Code § 16047(b)]. Currently, the Probate Code broadly defines "property" to include "anything that may be the subject of ownership" [Prob. Code § 62]. The California Law Revision Commission recommendation proposing the Trust Law reveals that the Probate Code definition of property was deemed broad enough to include the prudent person rule definition [see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 798 (1986)]. Thus, life insurance, endowment, and annuity contracts are permissible investments under the Trust Law, as long as they meet the general standard stated above and the other specific circumstances stated in the prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code § 16047(c) and discussion in § 64A.260[1][e]]. Nevertheless, the inclusion of this form may still serve a useful purpose by making clear that the testator specifically intends that investments in life insurance be permitted [see Prob. Code § 16046(c) (testator's power to expand or restrict trustee's statutory investment powers)], in order to preclude any possible argument by a beneficiary that such an investment would not be "reasonably suited to the trust" within the meaning of Prob. Code § 16047(b).

[ii] Tax Considerations

Unfavorable tax consequences may result if the trustee purchases life insurance on the life of the trustee or a beneficiary. Under I.R.C. § 2042(2), the proceeds of a policy of life insurance will, for estate tax purposes, be included in the estate of any person who has any "incidents of ownership" over the policy, whether exercisable alone or in conjunction with any other person. Thus, if the trustee has "incidents of ownership" over a life insurance policy owned by the trust, the policy may be subject to estate tax in the estate of the trustee [In Re Estate of Lumpkin (5th Cir. [T.C.] 1973) 474 F.2d 1092, 1097-1098 ].

The courts have taken different views as to what "incidents of ownership" are sufficient to require federal estate taxation of the policy in the estate of the person who holds the "incidents." The Fifth Circuit has required federal estate taxation of a policy of life insurance even when the trustee had no beneficial interest in the trust [ In Re Estate of Lumpkin (5th Cir. [T.C.] 1973) 474 F.2d 1092, 1097-1098 ], although the Second Circuit [ Estate of Skifter v. C.I.R. (2d Cir. [T.C.] 1972) 468 F.2d 699, 702 ] and the Sixth Circuit [ Estate of Fruehauf v. Commissioner (1970) (6th Cir. [T.C.] 1970) 427 F.2d 80, 86 ] have held that the trustee does not have "incidents of ownership" unless the trustee can exercise them for the trustee's own benefit.

[2] FORM

Provisions Permitting Trustee to Invest in Life Insurance

The Trustee shall have the power to acquire and to maintain as a trust asset a life insurance policy on the life of any person, issued by any company and in any amount that the Trustee(s) shall deem advisable, and to exercise all rights of ownership granted in such policies.

[Add optional provision if trust is a marital deduction trust:]

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

D. Alternate and Optional Investment Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.267

§ 64A.267 Provision Restricting Trustee's Investment Powers

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to restrict the trustee's investment powers. For a provision expanding the trustee's investment powers, see § 64A.262. For provisions adopting the prudent investor rule as the standard of investment, see §§ 64A.260 and 64A.261.

[b] Restricted Investment Powers

[i] Statutory Authority

The prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and discussion in § 64A.260[1]] authorizes the settlor to expand or restrict the prudent investor rule by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. If the settlor does this, the trustee is entitled to rely on the express provisions and cannot be held liable to beneficiaries for doing so in good faith [Prob. Code § 16046(b)]. Although settlors will most often find it advisable to increase the trustee's investment flexibility by expanding the powers granted to the trustee, some settlors may choose to do the opposite.

[ii] Use Provision With Caution

Restriction of the trustee's investment powers is generally inadvisable for the same reason that expansion of those powers is often advisable: restriction deprives the trustee of flexibility, while expansion increases flexibility. Although some settlors have definite investment views and are inclined to instruct the trustee to follow them strictly, it is a rare investor who can see into the future with clarity and anticipate changing economic conditions. High quality government and corporate bonds were at one time considered safe, prudent, and provident investments, but changing economic conditions proved that even fixed-income, "blue-chip" securities are subject to market fluctuations and consequent capital erosion [see Stanton v. Wells Fargo Bank etc. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 763, 310 P.2d 1010 (settlor provided that trustee could invest only in AA bonds)].

Although the courts may relieve a trustee from restrictions on the exercise of powers under the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16201], they will do so only in extraordinary cases. The court will not authorize a deviation merely because the original directions were misguided or because changing economic conditions reduced their effectiveness [ Stanton v. Wells Fargo Bank etc. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 763, 771-776, 310 P.2d 1010 ]. The court may modify the trust in an emergency to permit that which the court believes the settlor would have permitted had the settlor anticipated the emergency, but only in the clearest of cases [ Leonardini v. Wells Fargo Bank (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 9, 12-13, 280 P.2d 81 ]. A modification will be granted only if there has been a change in circumstances that would justify a deviation from the original terms of the trust, a showing that the change was unforeseen by the settlor, and a further showing that compliance with the original terms would defeat the principal purpose of the trust [ Crocker-Citizens National Bank v. Younger (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 202, 212, 93 Cal. Rptr. 214, 481 P.2d 222 ]. Whether or not judicial modification is finally forthcoming, the time, expense, and inconvenience required by the litigation necessary to obtain it must, in any case, be considered a strong deterrent to any trustor who is inclined to severely restrict the trustee's investment powers.

PART IV. FORMS

D. Alternate and Optional Investment Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.268

§ 64A.268 Provisions Permitting Trustee's Own Dealings With Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to empower the trustee to lend or advance the trustee's own funds to the trust and to purchase from and sell property to the trust. The form includes a principal provision and two optional provisions that may be added if desired. The first requires that the market value of any assets sold, purchased, or leased by or to the trustee be determined by independent appraisal. The second authorizes the trustee to make loans to beneficiaries, provided the rates of interest are fair and reasonable.

[b] Prohibition Against Personal Dealings With Trust

The Trust Law includes broad rules prohibiting trustees from dealing personally with the trust or the trust assets. For example, the trustee is prohibited from using or dealing with trust property for the trustee's own profit [Prob. Code § 16004(a); but see Prob. Code § 16220 (trustee may keep property received from settlor or other person even if trustee is personally interested in property)] and from taking part in any transaction in which the trustee has an interest adverse to that of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. The trustee may not enforce any claim against the trust property that the trustee purchased after or in contemplation of appointment as trustee (although the court may allow the trustee to be reimbursed from trust property for the amount that the trustee paid in good faith for the claim) [Prob. Code § 16004(b)]. Any transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary (except an agreement relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee) that occurs during the existence of the trust, or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains, and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary, is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. An exception is recognized, however, when a regulated financial institution (or one of its affiliates) provides services for compensation in the ordinary course of business either to a trust of which it also acts as trustee or to a person dealing with the trust. In such a case, there is no violation of the rules against self-dealing [Prob. Code § 16015].

[c] Deposits in Accounts of Financial Institution Serving As Trustee

Notwithstanding the broad rules prohibiting trustees from dealing personally with the trust assets [see § 64A.268[1][b]], the Trust Law authorizes trustees to deposit trust funds in certain accounts in financial institutions operated by or affiliated with the trustees [Prob. Code § 16225]. The accounts may be in banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, or like organizations [Prob. Code § 16225; see Prob. Code § 40 ("financial institution" defined)]. The accounts must be either insured or collateralized [Prob. Code § 16225(a)]. If they meet this requirement, however, the court may authorize the trustee to deposit trust funds in an amount greater than the maximum insured or collateralized amount [Prob. Code § 16225(d)].

[d] Trust Instrument May Authorize Personal Dealings

The trust instrument may relieve the trustee of any or all of the rules prohibiting personal dealings with the trust [see Prob. Code § 16000 (statutory duties binding except to extent trust instrument provides otherwise); see also Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed.), Ch. 26, Who May Be a Trustee --Capacity--Tenure--Succession (Matthew Bender)]. Thus, the trust instrument may empower the trustee to sell trust property to himself or herself personally, to purchase property from the trust estate, to borrow from the trust, or otherwise to deal personally with the trust property [Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 170, Comment t]. Although trust provisions empowering self-dealing by the trustee have been widely criticized [Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed.), Ch. 27, Duties of Trustees, § 27.16 (Matthew Bender)], they have been sanctioned by court decisions in many jurisdictions [see "Validity and construction of trust provision authorizing trustee to purchase trust property," 39 A.L.R. 3d 836 (1971)]. No reported California decision has approved or disapproved such provisions, although the fact that they have been sustained in other jurisdictions would indicate that they are likely to be upheld in California.

[e] Obligation of Good Faith

Even when the trust instrument authorizes self-dealing, however, the trustee must act in good faith [see "Validity and construction of trust provision authorizing trustee to purchase trust property," 39 A.L.R. 3d 836, 842 (1971)] and must not take unfair advantage of the trust or the beneficiaries [see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 170.9].

[f] Drafting Considerations

The testator may find a provision like the one set forth below to be desirable if the trustee is a likely purchaser of any of the assets of the trust. If the trust includes an interest in a business, a surviving partner or shareholder may wish to purchase the trust's interest in the business. The provision set forth below will authorize such a purchase.

[2] FORM

Provisions Permitting Trustee's Own Dealings With Trust

The Trustee is authorized from time to time to lend or to advance the Trustee's own funds to the trust for any trust purpose, with interest at rates then prevailing, and to receive security for any such loans in the form of pledges, hypothecations, mortgages, deeds of trust, encumbrances, or otherwise. The Trustee is further authorized from time to time to purchase assets of the trust at a price not less than their fair market value, to sell assets to the trust at a price not more than their fair market value, and to exchange assets with the trust at a price equal to their fair market value. The Trustee is further authorized from time to time to lease assets to or from the trust for their fair rental value.

[Optional provision: independent appraisal of assets]

The fair market value of any assets sold, purchased, or leased by or to the Trustee pursuant to this paragraph shall be determined by independent appraisal.

[Optional provision: loans to beneficiaries at reasonable rates]

The Trustee is further authorized to make secured or unsecured loans to any beneficiary, or to the estate of any beneficiary, provided the rates of interest thereon are fair and reasonable.

§ 64A.280 Provision Permitting Trustee to Conduct Business*[1] Comment*[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to conduct any business that is received into the trust at its inception or acquired later as a trust investment. It confers broad powers on the trustee and is a longer form of the shorter business interests provision set forth in § 64A.221. For a provision permitting the trustee to operate any farm or ranch received into the trust at its inception or acquired later as a trust investment, see § 64A.281. For a provision permitting the trustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation, see § 64A.282.

[b] Operation of Business by Trustee*[i] In General

The risks of operating a business are generally greater than the risks of other more conventional investments. For this reason, special rules restrict the power of trustees to operate (or participate in the operation of) trust-owned businesses.

[ii] Businesses Received as Part of Trust Estate

The Trust Law grants trustees limited power to operate businesses received as part of the trust estate. The basic rule is that a business may be operated on a permanent basis only if the trust instrument authorizes (or the court orders) permanent operation [Prob. Code § 16222(b)]. However, this rule does not apply to the leasing of four or fewer residential units, because such leasing is not considered to be "the operation of a business or other enterprise" for this purpose [Prob. Code § 16222(b)]. If the trust instrument does not authorize permanent operation, and if the "business" is not the leasing of four or fewer residential units, the trustee has authority to operate the business only for a "reasonable time" pending sale or a court hearing on an application for authority to operate it permanently [Prob. Code § 16222(c); but see Prob. Code § 16222(d) (rule inapplicable if trustee has power to operate business under trust created by instrument executed before July 1, 1987)]. If the trustee has power to operate a business, the trustee also has power to effect incorporation, dissolution, or other changes in the form of the business [Prob. Code § 16222(a); see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 3, § 230.4].

[iii] New Businesses

The authority of the trustee to invest in a new business (as opposed to a business received as part of the trust estate) is even more limited. The court has no power to authorize such an investment independent of authority in the trust instrument [see Prob. Code § 16222; see also Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 230, Comment m; "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 682 (1986) (under Prob. Code § 16222, trustee may continue business but not enter into new business)]. Even without court authorization, however, the trustee may invest in a new business if power to do so is conferred in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(a); see Restatement (2d) of Trusts, § 230, Comment m].

[iv] Drafting Considerations

A trust provision specifically empowering the trustee to continue the operation of a business may be desirable whenever a business or an interest in a business constitutes a substantial part of the trust estate and the settlor wishes it to be operated after his or her death. Authority to incorporate a business will not be implied from a general power to continue the operation of a business, but the trust instrument may properly confer that power on the trustee [Nossaman & Wyatt, Trust Administration and Taxation (Rev. 2d ed.), Ch. 28, Powers and Duties of Trustees--(Cont.) Various Powers, § 28.09 (Matthew Bender)]. Although the power to borrow is necessarily incidental to the power to operate a business and is therefore implied from an express testamentary power to continue a business [ Purdy v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Assn. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 298, 302303, 40 P.2d 481 ], it will be advantageous to include express authority for borrowing in any provision authorizing the operation of a business.

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Trustee to Conduct Business

(a) The Trustee is authorized to continue to hold, operate, sell, [add, if desired: purchase, acquire, invest or reinvest in,] or liquidate any business or any interest in any business, whether organized as a sole proprietorship, general partnership, limited partnership, corporation, or otherwise, on the terms, for the time, and in the manner that the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, deem advisable. Any such operation, sale, [add, if desired: purchase, acquisition, investment, reinvestment,] or liquidation, in good faith, shall be at the risk of the trust estate and without liability on the part of the Trustee for any resulting losses. The Trustee is further authorized to incorporate any business or any interest in any business which may at the inception of the trust or at any time thereafter become an asset of the trust estate and hold the stock as an asset of the trust estate, or sell, or grant options on any such stock. The Trustee is further authorized to borrow money for any purpose related to the holding, operating, sale, [add, if desired: purchase, acquisition, investment or reinvestment in,] or liquidation of any business or any interest in any business pursuant to this paragraph, and to employ officers, managers, directors, employees, or agents in its management or operation, including elected directors or officers.

(b) In addition to the powers expressly conferred on the Trustee in this paragraph, the Trustee shall have any additional powers that may be reasonable and necessary to enable the Trustee to carry out the provisions of this paragraph, subject to any limitations that may be provided for in this will.

(c) [Add, if desired: The Trustee shall receive reasonable compensation for any services performed pursuant to the terms of this paragraph, in the amounts and at the times that the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion shall determine.]

§ 64A.281 Provision Permitting Trustee to Operate Farm or Ranch

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to permit (but not to require) the trustee to operate any farm or ranch received into the trust at its inception or later acquired as a trust investment. For a provision permitting (but not requiring) the trustee to conduct any business received into the trust at its inception or later acquired as a trust investment, see § 64A.280. For a provision permitting (but not requiring) the trustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation, see § 64A.282.

[b] Operation of Farm or Ranch by Trustee

Since the operation of a farm or ranch is analogous to the operation of a business, the trustee's authority to operate a farm or ranch is generally subject to the same limitations as the trustee's authority to hold or deal with other business assets [see Estate of King (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 354, 121 P.2d 716; see also Logan, "Estate Planning: The Special Problems of the Farmer in Dispositions by Will," 32 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 329 (1960)]. The operation of a farm or ranch, like the operation of other businesses, generally entails greater risk for the trust estate than more conventional investments. For this reason, the power of trustees to operate these entities has traditionally been restricted. For a general discussion of the power of trustees to operate businesses received as part of the trust estate (and statutory limitation on that power), see § 64A.280[1].

The trustee's authority to invest in a new business (as opposed to a business received as part of the trust estate) is even more limited. The court has no power to authorize such an investment independent of authority in the trust instrument [see Prob. Code § 16222; see also discussion in § 64A.280[1][b][ii]]. Even without court authorization, however, the trustee may invest in a new business if power to do so is conferred in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16200(a)].

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Trustee to Operate Farm or Ranch

(a) The Trustee is authorized to continue to hold, operate, sell, [add, if desired: purchase, acquire, invest or reinvest in,] or liquidate any farming or ranching property, or any interest in any farming or ranching property, whether organized as a sole proprietorship, general partnership, limited partnership, corporation, or otherwise, on the terms, for the time, and in the manner that the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, deem advisable. Any such operation, sale, [add, if desired: purchase, acquisition, investment, reinvestment,] or liquidation, in good faith, shall be at the risk of the trust estate and without liability on the part of the Trustee for any resulting losses.

(b) In addition to the powers expressly conferred on the trustee in this paragraph, the Trustee shall have such further and additional powers as may be reasonable and necessary to enable the Trustee to carry out the provisions of this paragraph, including the power to rent or lease land, equipment, or livestock, for cash or on shares; to purchase, sell, exchange, or acquire tools, machinery, equipment, supplies, services, farm products, livestock, and timber; to repair, improve, construct, and demolish buildings and structures of all types; to clear, drain, terrace, and fertilize the land; to install irrigation systems; to employ soil conservation and other practices to conserve, improve, and maintain the fertility and productivity of the soil; to protect, manage, and improve any timber and forest on the property; to engage in livestock and crop production, including (but not limited to) the raising, purchase, and sale of any and all types of livestock and farm or ranch products; to perform all acts necessary or appropriate to participate in and cooperate with any governmental agricultural program; to receive all payments, proceeds, and benefits under any governmental program; and to employ the methods of carrying on the farming or ranching operations that are in common use by other landowners in the area where the farming or ranching property or interest is located.

(c) [Add if desired: The Trustee is further authorized to incorporate any farming or ranching property or any interest in any farming or ranching property that may at the inception of the trust or at any time thereafter become an asset of the trust estate and hold the stock as an asset of the trust estate, or sell, or grant options on such stock. The Trustee is authorized to borrow money for any purpose related to the holding, operating, sale, [purchase, acquisition, investment or reinvestment in,] or liquidation of any farming or ranching property or any interest in any farming or ranching property pursuant to this Paragraph, and to employ officers, managers, directors, employees, or agents in its management or operation, including elected directors or officers.]

(d) [Add if desired: In addition to any other compensation to which the Trustee shall be entitled for services rendered to the trust, the Trustee shall receive reasonable compensation for any services performed pursuant to the terms of this paragraph, in the amounts and at the times that the Trustee in the Trustee's discretion shall determine.]

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
E. Alternate and Optional Business Powers

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.282

§ 64A.282 Provision Permitting Trustee to Hold Corporate Stock

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation. It will be particularly useful if the stock is in a small corporation whose smooth operation (or continued existence) might be imperiled by sudden or substantial changes in stock ownership. For a provision permitting the trustee to conduct any business received into the trust at its inception or later acquired as a trust investment, see § 64A.280.

[b] Holding Stock in Closely Held Corporation

The trustee's duties with respect to the management and investment of trust property are subject to the prudent investor rule, which is set forth in the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054]. The prudent investor rule requires the trustee to invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust [Prob. Code § 16047(a)]. In satisfying this standard, the trustee must exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution [Prob. Code § 16047(a)].

The prudent investor rule permits the trustee to invest in any kind of property or type of investment or engage in any course of action or investment strategy consistent with the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [Prob. Code § 16047(e)]. However, it also requires the trustee to diversify the investments of the trust unless, under the circumstances, it is prudent not to do so [Prob. Code § 16048].

The trustee would have the power to hold stock in a closely held corporation even without a special trust provision if a prudent investor would hold that stock, considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust, and if holding the stock would not violate the trustee's duty to diversify trust investments [Prob. Code §§ 16047(a), 16048]. However, the Uniform Prudent Investor Act specifically authorizes the settlor to expand the prudent investor rule by express provisions in the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16046]. This form is such a provision. If the trustee relies on the provision in good faith, the trustee cannot be held liable to any beneficiary for doing so [Prob. Code § 16046(b)].

This provision empowers the trustee to hold stock in a closely held corporation, but it does not require the trustee to do so. The Trust Law makes it clear that the grant of a power to a trustee, whether by the trust instrument, by statute, or by the court, does not in itself require or permit the exercise of the power [Prob. Code § 16202]. In all cases, the exercise of a power by a trustee is subject to the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16202]. This means, at the least, that the exercise of the power is subject to the prudent investor rule, which requires the trustee to administer the trust with reasonable care, skill and caution under the circumstances then prevailing, and to use the same care, skill, and caution that a prudent person acting in a like capacity would use in the conduct of an enterprise of like character and with like aims to accomplish the purposes of the trust as determined from the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16040(a)].

For further discussion of the prudent investor rule, see §§ 64A.40[3] and 64A.260[1]. For further discussion of the prudent investor rule, see § 64A.39[7].

[c] Will Provisions Authorizing Operation of Business

If the testator wishes the trustee to operate a business or participate in the operation of a closely held corporation, the will should clearly instruct the executor not to sell the business or shares of stock. For directions to the executor with respect to holding, operating, selling, or liquidating a business or an interest in a business owned by the testator, see Ch. 65, Executors, § 65.241. For will provisions making gifts of business property, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, §§ 63.460-63.465.

[d] Restrictions on Transfer of Stock

The power of a trustee to hold corporate stock may be affected by the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation, by the corporation's right to redeem shares of stock, or by inter vivos buy and sell agreements entered into by or among the incorporators or shareholders. The articles of incorporation may set reasonable restrictions on the right to transfer or hypothecate shares of any class or classes or series of corporate stock, but no restriction will be binding with respect to shares issued before the adoption of the restriction unless the holders of the shares voted for the restriction [Corp. Code § 204(b)]. The bylaws may contain any provision not in conflict with the law or with the articles of incorporation, including any provision setting reasonable restrictions on the transfer of shares [Corp. Code § 212(b)(1)]. In addition, the corporation may reserve the right to redeem shares of its stock [see Corp. Code §§ 166, 509]. For further discussion of restrictions on the transfers of shares of stock, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.264[1] and Ch. 4, Bylaws, §§ 4.244[1], 4.245[1]. For a discussion of buy and sell agreements, see Ch. 8D, Buy-Sell Agreements, § 8D.10 et seq.

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Trustee to Hold Corporate Stock

It is my wish that the Trustee continue to hold any stock of _____ [name of corporation,] hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the corporation," received by the Trustee or later added to the trust estate. This provision will not prohibit the Trustee from selling any or all of that stock if the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, deems sale to be in the best interests of the trust estate; but inasmuch as I believe that retention of the stock will be beneficial to the trust estate, I specifically authorize its retention.

In the event that the shares of stock in the corporation held by the trustee constitute a majority of the total outstanding shares of the voting stock of the corporation, I authorize the Trustee to use the Trustee's control to continue the business of the corporation in such a manner and for such a time as the Trustee may deem advisable and in the best interests of the trust estate. In the discretion of the trustee, the kind of business in which the corporation is engaged may from time to time be changed and the scope and nature of its activities may be enlarged or diminished, or it may be dissolved and its assets liquidated. The Trustee shall have with respect to the business of the corporation and the stock of the corporation owned by the Trustee all of the powers that I would have if personally present and acting.

The Trustee is authorized (but not required) to vote the stock of the corporation in such a way as to elect the Trustee or one or more employees of the Trustee as a member or members of the board of directors of the corporation. The management of the corporation and the actual conduct of the business operations of the corporation may be delegated to such persons as the board of directors shall direct. I recommend (but do not direct) that the active conduct of the business of the corporation be committed to those persons who are in charge of its operations at the time of my death.

The Trustee shall incur no liability for misconduct, mismanagement, or negligence on the part of any employee of a business, any employee or partner of a partnership, or any director, officer, or employee of the corporation who is not also an officer or employee of the Trustee. In the absence of actual notice to the contrary, the Trustee may accept as correct and rely on financial and other statements as to the condition and operation of the corporation rendered from time to time by any accountant for or in behalf of the corporation. The corporation shall be regarded as an entity separate from the trust and the trust estate, and no accounting as to the operations of the business of the corporation shall be required to be made.

[Add if desired: The services rendered by the trustee under the provisions of this paragraph, or otherwise in connection with the management of the corporation or the continuation of its business, shall be deemed extraordinary services, for which the Trustee shall be entitled to extra compensation out of the trust estate.]

F. Alternate and Optional Powers of Sale, Lease, and Exchange

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.300

§ 64A.300 Provision Permitting Trustee to Sell, Lease, or Exchange Trust Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit (but not require) the trustee to sell, exchange, or lease trust property, and, for that purpose, to employ agents, consultants, advisers, and brokers. For a provision requiring the trustee to retain a specific trust asset or assets, see § 64A.242. For a provision authorizing the trustee to employ agents, advisers, and attorneys, see § 64A.320.

[b] Sales and Exchanges of Trust Property

[i] In General

Under the Trust Law, trustees are broadly invested with power to acquire or dispose of property, for cash or on credit, at public or private sale, or by exchange [Prob. Code § 16226]. When selling property, however, trustees must act in accordance with the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code § 16040(b); Prob. Code § 16202 (exercise of trustee's powers subject to fiduciary duties)]. In general, the prudent person rule permits the trustee to sell trust property whenever sale is necessary or proper to enable the trustee to carry out the purposes of the trust and when the power is not expressly or impliedly forbidden by the trust instrument [see Church v. Church (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 696, 700, 105 P.2d 640]. In every case, however, the trustee must exercise independent judgment as to the propriety of a sale, and it is improper to delegate the decision to another [Prob. Code § 16012 (duty not to delegate); see Estate of Talbot (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 309, 317, 320, 296 P.2d 848].

[ii] Self-Dealing

Even if a sale of trust property would be proper under the prudent investor rule [see Prob. Code § 16040; see also discussion in § 64A.300[1][b]], it is improper for a trustee to purchase trust property for the trustee's own account unless the trust instrument specifically authorizes such a purchase [Prob. Code § 16004(a) (trustee may not deal with property for own profit); see Estate of Howard (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 535, 536, 284 P.2d 966 ; see also § 64A.268[1]. When a sale to the trustee is challenged, the court will refuse to consider whether the transaction benefited the beneficiaries, since the rule prohibiting a trustee from dealing personally with trust property is absolute [see Toedter v. Bradshaw (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 200, 208, 330 P.2d 688] .

[c] Employment of Agents and Advisers

The Trust Law broadly empowers trustees to hire persons, including accountants, attorneys, auditors, investment advisers, appraisers (including probate referees appointed under Prob. Code § 400), and other agents, to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of the trustee's administrative duties [Prob. Code § 16247]. These persons may be hired even if they are associated or affiliated with the trustee [Prob. Code § 16247]. However, the trustee may not blindly rely on the advice of any of these persons, inasmuch as the trustee has a duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts that the trustee can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a)] and, whenever the trustee has properly delegated a matter to an agent or other person, the trustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person performing the delegated matter [Prob. Code § 16012(b)]. In any event, the trustee must apply the full extent of the trustee's skills to the administration of the trust, whether or not there are advisers [Prob. Code § 16014(a)].

For further considerations relating to the employment of agents, advisers, and attorneys, see § 64A.320[1].

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Trustee to Sell, Lease, or Exchange Trust Property

The Trustee shall have the power to grant, convey, liquidate, grant options on, sell (for cash or on deferred payments, with or without security), exchange, partition, divide, and improve trust property, and to lease trust property for terms within or beyond the term of the trust and for any purpose, including, but not limited to, the exploration and removal of oil, gas, and other minerals, and to enter into community leases and pooling and unitization agreements. To carry out the purposes of the powers conferred on the Trustee in this paragraph, the Trustee shall have the further power to employ agents, consultants, advisers, and brokers, and to pay them from the trust estate reasonable compensation for all services performed on behalf of the trust. [Add, if desired: Any compensation paid to any agents, consultants, advisers, or brokers pursuant to the terms of this paragraph shall not decrease the compensation to which the Trustee is entitled.]

§ 64A.320 Provision Authorizing Trustee to Employ Agents, Advisors, and Attorneys

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to permit the trustee to employ custodians, agents, advisors, and attorneys to assist and advise the trustee in the execution of the trust. For a provision permitting the trustee to sell, exchange, or lease trust property, and, for that purpose, to employ agents, consultants, advisors, and brokers, see § 64A.300.

[b] Employment of Advisors, Attorneys, and Agents

Trustees have broad statutory authority to employ accountants, attorneys, auditors, investment advisors, appraisers (including probate referees appointed under Prob. Code § 400), and other agents, to advise or assist them in the performance of their duties [Prob. Code § 16247]. However, a trustee may not rely blindly on the advice of any agent, and must exercise independent judgment with respect to important decisions. Under the Trust Law, the trustee has a duty not to delegate to others the performance of administrative acts that the trustee can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a); see Prob. Code § 16012(c) (rule not applicable to investment and management functions)], and, if a power has been delegated, the trustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person to whom the power has been delegated [Prob. Code § 16012(b)]. Under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act [see Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054 and discussion in § 64A.260[1]], a trustee may delegate investment and management functions as prudent under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 16052(a)]. However, the trustee must exercise prudence in selecting an agent, establishing the scope and terms of the delegation, and periodically reviewing the agent's overall performance [Prob. Code § 16052(a)(1)-(3)].

H. Alternate and Optional Provisions for Discretion

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.340

§ 64A.340 Provision Conferring "Sole," "Absolute," or "Uncontrolled" Discretion on Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to confer "sole," "absolute," or "uncontrolled" discretion on the trustee. It should be used only after careful consideration of the legal rules relating to trustee discretion and the permissible scope of broad or permissive grants of discretionary powers. The form consists of a principal provision and an optional provision. The optional provision may be added to the principal provision if it is intended to give a trustee who is also a beneficiary a power to take or distribute income or principal for the trustee's own benefit without regard to whether that income or principal is for the trustee-beneficiary's health, education, support, or maintenance.

For trust provisions conferring simple or ordinary discretion on the trustee, see §§ 64A.220 and 64A.221.

[b] Discretion of Trustee

[i] Effect of Provision Granting "Absolute," "Sole," or "Uncontrolled" Discretion

Unless the trust instrument provides that the trustee's discretion is to be "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled," a discretionary power conferred on a trustee is presumed not to be left to the arbitrary discretion of the trustee, but must be exercised reasonably [Prob. Code § 16080]. In making investments, a trustee with "absolute" discretion is relieved of the obligation to act in accordance with the prudent investor rule [ American Center for Education, Inc., v. Cavnar (1978), 80 Cal. App. 3d 476, 497, 145 Cal. Rptr. 736, superseded by statute as stated in Patton v. Sherwood, 152 Cal. App. 4th 339, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1011] and is not required to conform to the standard of "reasonableness" [ Estate of Friedman (1979), 94 Cal. App. 3d 667, 670, 156 Cal. Rptr. 597]. Such a trustee must, however, conform to fiduciary principles and is forbidden to act in bad faith or to disregard the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)].

A grant of "absolute discretion" to a trustee means simply that the judgment of the trustee, if exercised in good faith, will control [ Estate of Gross (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 563, 567, 31 Cal. Rptr. 281 ], but it will not excuse bad faith or failure to exercise any judgment at all [ Copley v. Copley (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 284, 178 Cal. Rptr. 842 ]. In all cases, whether the discretionary power conferred on the trustee is broad or narrow, it is subject to review by a court of competent jurisdiction [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(5)].

[ii] Effect of Provision on Trustee Who Is Also Beneficiary of Trust

Under Prob. Code § 16081(c), a trustee who has discretion to distribute principal or income for the trustee's own benefit may exercise the discretion only to make distributions for his or her health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514, unless the will or trust specifically refers to the statute and specifies a broader standard [see Prob. Code § 16081(e) (applicable dates of Prob. Code § 16081(c))]. A power to distribute principal or income for a person's health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of I.R.C. §§ 2041 and 2514 is generally referred to as an "ascertainable standard." For further discussion of the special rules of Prob. Code § 16081(c), see § 64A.39[8]. For the adverse tax consequences of giving a trustee-beneficiary a power that is not subject to an "ascertainable standard," see § 64A.340[1][c].

This provision contains optional language removing the statutory limitations imposed by Prob. Code § 16081(c). That language should not be included without careful evaluation of the potential adverse tax consequences.

[c] Drafting Considerations

In determining whether the trustee's discretion should be made "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled", the testator should be guided in large measure by the testator's level of confidence in the integrity and skill of the proposed trustee. If the trustee is to be a corporate trustee, a close and trusted family friend, an experienced financial advisor, or some other person who enjoys the unqualified confidence of the testator, there will ordinarily be little reason to restrict the trustee's investment powers to the prudent investor rule, and the testator may wish the trustee to have the broader investment latitude that flows from a grant of "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion. If, however, the trustee is to be a family member who has little or no investment experience, or a person whose loyalties to the trust or concern for the welfare of the beneficiaries may, for any reason, be subject to compromise, the testator may wish to retain the prudent investor rule and withhold a grant of "absolute," "sole," or "uncontrolled" discretion.

In any event, whether or not the will includes broad discretionary powers, the trustee will be required to act in accordance with fiduciary principles and forbidden to act in bad faith or in disregard of the purposes of the trust [Prob. Code § 16081(a)].

Before adopting the optional provision of this form, which grants a trustee-beneficiary absolute discretion to take trust income or principal for himself or herself whether or not it is for his or her health, education, support, or maintenance, the testator and the drafter should consider the adverse tax consequences of such a provision. If a will gives the trustee power to invade the principal of the trust for the trustee's own benefit, and if the power is not limited by an "ascertainable standard," the trustee may be deemed to hold a general power of appointment over the trust assets [see I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)], with the result that they will be included in the trustee's estate for estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. For further discussion of the tax consequences of such a power, see discussion in § 64A.32[2].

[2] FORM

Provision Conferring "Sole," "Absolute," or "Uncontrolled" Discretion on Trustee

Any provision of this will that grants to or confers on the Trustee(s) any discretion with respect to any power or duty is intended and shall be deemed to confer sole, absolute, and uncontrolled discretion on the Trustee(s).

[Optional provision permitting beneficiary-trustee to take income for own benefit; do not include without careful consideration of potential adverse tax consequences: ]

The discretion conferred by this will shall extend to the power to take or distribute trust income or principal to or for the Trustee's own benefit, up to the maximum extent permitted by this will; and, in exercising such discretion for the Trustee's own benefit, the trustee shall not be limited to distributions for the health, education, support, or maintenance of the trustee. Any limitations contained in California Probate Code Section 16081(c) (or any successor statute) on the power of a Trustee or Co-Trustee to make distributions to or for the Trustee's own benefit shall not apply to any such power conferred by this will.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to divide or allocate the powers of cotrustees by providing that, whenever two or more cotrustees are in office, investment decisions for the trust may be made by a majority of the cotrustees. Two alternative provisions are illustrated. The first provides that a majority of the cotrustees may make investment decisions in any transaction, without specifying a limit on the amount of the obligation that may thereby be incurred. The second provides that a majority of the cotrustees may make such decisions only when the amount of the obligation incurred thereby does not exceed a specified limit.

For a provision dividing or allocating the powers of cotrustees by assigning investment powers to a named cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64A.361. For a provision empowering a third party to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.362. For a provision conferring a veto power on a third party (or "Special Trustee"), see § 64A.363.

[b] Dividing or Allocating the Powers of Cotrustees

Because of practical difficulties that inhibit the efforts of many cotrustees to administer trusts effectively [see discussion in § 64A.202[1][b][i] et seq.], the testator may wish to consider one of several alternate provisions that divide the duties of the cotrustees.

Generally, when there are cotrustees, all must unite in any action to bind the trust property, but unanimity is not required if the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 15620]. The trust instrument may dispense with the requirement by providing, among other things, that the powers of the trust may be exercised by a majority of the trustees [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), § 194]. In this provision, the testator dispenses with the requirement of unanimity by providing that, in making investment decisions, a majority of the cotrustees may bind the trust estate.

This provision will be most useful if there are more than two cotrustees. When there are only two cotrustees, they will be either unanimous or split equally on any decision, and no majority decision will be possible. If the trustees cannot agree, and if the trust instrument does not authorize action by a majority of the cotrustees, the only practical solution is to petition the court for instructions [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(6)].

The trust instrument may set a dollar limit on transactions in which a majority of the cotrustees may bind the estate. If the transaction is within the specified limit, a majority of the cotrustees is competent to act. If the transaction exceeds the specified limit, the general requirement of unanimity applies.

[2] FORM

Provisions Authorizing Majority of Cotrustees to Make Investment Decisions for Trust

[First alternative: no dollar limit on decisions:]

At any time that more than two Cotrustees are in office, any decision to retain, sell, purchase, acquire, exchange, hypothecate, mortgage, encumber, or grant or acquire an option or options on any trust assets, or to make any other investment decision or decisions for the trust, may be made by a majority of the Cotrustees then in office. Any such decision shall be binding upon the trust and may be relied upon by third parties in dealing with it.

[Second alternative: dollar limit on decisions:]

At any time that more than two Cotrustees are in office, any decision to retain, sell, purchase, acquire, exchange, hypothecate, mortgage, encumber, or grant or acquire an option or options on any trust assets, or to make any other investment decision for the trust, may be taken by a majority of the Cotrustees then in office, if the decision does not obligate the Cotrustees or the trust to expend more than _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $1,000.00] for each such decision. Any investment decision taken by a majority of the Cotrustees in accordance with the provisions of this Paragraph which does not obligate the Cotrustees or the trust to expend more than _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $1,000.00] shall be binding upon the trust and may be relied upon by third parties in dealing with it.

§ 64A.361 Provisions Assigning Investment Powers to Named Cotrustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to divide or allocate the powers of cotrustees by assigning investment powers to a named cotrustee or cotrustees. For provisions authorizing investment action by a majority of the cotrustees, see § 64A.360. For a provision empowering a third party to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.362. For a provision conferring a veto power on a third party, see § 64A.363.

[b] Dividing Powers Among Cotrustees

The general rule requiring that all cotrustees must unite in any action to bind the trust estate is discussed in § 64A.360[1]. The trust instrument may dispense with the requirement of unanimity by, among other things, authorizing any one of several trustees to exercise a specified power [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), § 194] or by providing that specified powers will be exercised by one trustee and other powers by another [ Crocker-Citizens National Bank v. Younger (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 202, 211, 93 Cal. Rptr. 214, 481 P.2d 222 ; see Scott, The Law of Trusts (Third edition, Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 185; see also Cohan, "Splitting Powers Between Fiduciaries," 8 Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. 588, 590 (1973)]. A testator may wish to name a trust company or other corporate trustee as cotrustee with a trusted friend or family member, but wish the friend or family member to make investment decisions. The provision set forth below may be used to vest such power in a named individual.

[c] Drafting Considerations

This provision (or one of the provisions set forth in the forms in § 64A.362 or 64A.363) may be useful in a variety of business situations. If, for example, an interest in a business owned as a partnership (or as a closely held corporation) is to be placed in the trust, the testator may wish the surviving partner or shareholders to continue the operation of the business [for rules relating to the operation of businesses or interests in businesses held by trusts, see § 64A.280[1]]. Placing the testator's share in trust may jeopardize the successful operation of the business by creating management tensions between the trustee and the surviving owners. If, however, one of the surviving owners is named as a special trustee with power to make any and all investment decisions that affect the business, these tensions may be avoided. If a sole proprietorship business, a farm, or oil, gas or mineral interests are to be placed in the trust, the trustor may well wish to designate an experienced and knowledgeable person, perhaps a business associate, to make decisions regarding those assets, while designating another individual, or a corporate trustee, to carry on the usual business of trust administration and recordkeeping.

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

I. Optional Provisions Dividing or Allocating Powers of Cotrustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.362

§ 64A.362 Provisions Empowering Special Trustee to Make Investment Decisions

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to empower a third party (referred to in this form and comment as a "Special Trustee") to make investment decisions for the trust. Two alternative forms are set forth, one that empowers the third party to make all investment decisions for the trust, and another that empowers the third party to make decisions only with respect to specific assets.

For provisions authorizing investment decisions to be made by a majority of the cotrustees, see § 64A.360. For a provision assigning investment powers to a named cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64A.361. For a provision conferring a veto power on a third party (or "special trustee"), see § 64A.363.

[b] Conferring Trust Powers on Third Parties

The practical difficulties that cotrustees frequently encounter in the administration of trust estates may be overcome by the simple expedient of empowering a third party to make certain decisions for the trust. Although such a third party will not be designated as a trustee in the same sense that the principal trustee or cotrustees are designated, he or she will exercise duties similar to those of a trustee and, unless the power conferred is a "beneficial power" [see discussion in § 64A.362[1][c]], will be subject to all of the rules that govern trustees.

The power of a settlor to confer powers on persons other than the named trustee follows from the settlor's power to define and limit the powers of all of the trustees. If the settlor may name two or four or a score of cotrustees and define the powers of each [see discussions in §§ 64A.360[1][b] and 64A.361[1][b]], the trustor may name one trustee (the "principal trustee") to exercise all of the usual trustee powers (except those granted to a third party) and may designate a third party (the "special trustee") to execute specially designated powers. If, under the terms of the trust, a third party has the power to control the action of the trustee in certain respects, the trustee must act in accordance with the exercise of that power [see Vale v. Union Bank (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 330, 336, 151 Cal. Rptr. 784 (power to direct investments conferred on committee)], unless the exercise violates the terms of the trust or a fiduciary duty owed by the third party [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 185]. If the settlor, for example, empowers a third party to decide when trust property will be sold, the principal trustee may sell property only when the third party directs the sale, and any other sale will subject the principal trustee to damages for breach of trust [ Corbett v. Benioff (1932) 126 Cal. App. 772, 776-776, 14 P.2d 1028 ].

[c] Beneficial and Fiduciary Powers

A power that is granted to a third party may be a "beneficial power" or a "fiduciary power". A power is "beneficial" if its exercise will benefit the holder or a specifically designated beneficiary or beneficiaries only [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 185, Comment c; see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 185]. For example, the power of a beneficiary to direct the sale or retention of a residence in which the beneficiary resides is a "beneficial" power. If the power is "beneficial," the holder is not subject to the ordinary obligations of fiduciaries, and the only rule regulating exercise of the power is that it must be exercised in compliance with the terms of the trust [Cohan, "Splitting Powers Between Fiduciaries," 8 Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. 588, 591 (1973)].

A power is "fiduciary" if its exercise will benefit the beneficiaries of the trust generally [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 185, Comment c]. If the power is "fiduciary," then the holder must act as a trustee would under similar circumstances [Cohan, "Splitting Powers Between Fiduciaries," 8 Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. 588, 592 (1973)].

Whether a power is "beneficial" or "fiduciary" is to be determined from the intention of the settlor as manifested in the trust instrument. Since this intention is subject to interpretation, it is recommended that the will drafter clearly state the testator's intentions in the matter.

[d] Tax Considerations

Just as the selection of a trustee or cotrustees may have significant tax implications, the appointment of a special trustee may have tax consequences for the trust and the beneficiaries. If a power vested in a special trustee who is also a beneficiary is deemed a power of appointment, the assets subject to the power may be included in the special trustee's estate for federal tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(a)]. Administrative powers typically granted to a testamentary trustee will not, however, constitute a power of appointment. The mere power of management, investment, custody of assets, or the power to allocate receipts and disbursements between income and principal, exercisable in a fiduciary capacity, whereby the holder has no power to enlarge or shift any of the beneficial interests except as an incidental consequence of the discharge of fiduciary duties, is not a power of appointment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)].

Appointment of a trustee who is a beneficiary may also result in the loss of the income tax advantages of a trust. Although a trust is ordinarily deemed a separate entity for income tax purposes [I.R.C. § 641], the income may be taxed to the trustee if the trustee has a power exercisable solely by himself or herself to vest the corpus or the income of any portion of the trust in himself or herself [I.R.C. § 678].

For a more detailed discussion of the tax consequences of the selection of trustees, cotrustees, and special trustees, see discussion in § 64A.32[1] et seq.

[2] FORM

Provisions Empowering Special Trustee to Make Investment Decisions

[First alternative: special trustee to make all investment decisions]

I appoint _____ [name of special trustee] as the Special Trustee of this trust and give _____ [him or her or it] the sole and exclusive power to direct _____ [name of principal trustee] in writing, from time to time, to retain, sell, lease, exchange, hypothecate, mortgage, encumber, or grant options on any property of the trust estate, and to invest and reinvest funds of the trust estate in such property as _____ [name of special trustee] shall determine. _____ [Name of principal trustee] shall promptly comply with all such written directions and shall incur no liability to any interested party for following [or for failing to act in the absence of] the same. _____ [Name of special trustee] shall hold this power in a fiduciary capacity and shall be subject to the same duties, obligations, and liabilities that apply to the exercise of power by a trustee.

[Second alternative: special trustee to make decisions with respect to specific asset]

I appoint _____ [name of special trustee] as the Special Trustee of this trust and give _____ [him or her or it] the sole and exclusive power to direct the operation, management, and control of _____ [describe asset over which special trustee will have investment control] only. For the purpose of successfully carrying out that operation, management, and control, I further give _____ [name of special trustee] the sole and exclusive power to direct _____ [name of principal trustee] in writing, from time to time, to retain, sell, lease, exchange, hypothecate, mortgage, encumber, or grant options on _____ [describe asset as to which special trustee will have investment control], or any part thereof. _____ [Name of principal trustee] shall promptly comply with all such written directions and shall incur no liability to any interested party for following [or for failing to act in the absence of] the same. _____ [Name of special trustee] shall hold the power granted in this Paragraph in a fiduciary capacity and shall be subject to the same duties, obligations, and liabilities that apply to the exercise of power by a trustee.

PART IV. FORMS

I. Optional Provisions Dividing or Allocating Powers of Cotrustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.363

§ 64A.363 Provision Conferring Veto Power on Special Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to give a third party veto power over investment decisions of the trustee. For provisions authorizing a majority of the cotrustees to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.360. For a provision assigning investment powers to a named cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64A.361. For provisions empowering a third party to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.362.

[b] Veto Powers in Special Trustees

One solution to the practical difficulties that cotrustees frequently encounter in the administration of trust estates is to give a third party power to veto decisions of the trustee or cotrustees. Although the third party will not be designated as a trustee in the same sense as the principal trustee or cotrustees, he or she will exercise duties similar to those of a trustee and, unless the power conferred is a "beneficial power" [see discussion in § 64A.362[1][c]], will be subject to all of the rules that govern trustees.

The settlor has the power to provide that the trustee or cotrustees will be subject to the control of another in specified respects [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 185]. The person on whom the power of control is conferred may be a beneficiary, one of the cotrustees, or a third person who is otherwise unconnected with the trust [for rules relating to the exercise of "beneficial" and "fiduciary" powers, see discussion in § 64A.362[1][c]].

The extent of the power conferred depends entirely on the trust instrument. It may be a power to compel action by the trustee or to veto certain acts, as in the case of a provision that the trustee may make no investment or sell no property without the consent of the designated person [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. 2, § 185; see Estate of Gilmaker (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 627, 629, 21 Cal. Rptr. 585, 371 P.2d 321].

[2] FORM

Provision Conferring Veto Power on Special Trustee

The Trustee shall make no investment, reinvestment, sale, lease, or exchange, nor shall the Trustee grant or take any option on any trust property, unless the Trustee first gives written notice to _____ [name of special trustee], Special Trustee, of each proposed investment, reinvestment, sale, lease, exchange, or option [add, if desired:, except that the Trustee may invest any trust funds awaiting investment in a savings account or accounts or in a money market fund]. On receipt of written notice of any proposed investment, reinvestment, sale, lease, exchange, or option, the Special Trustee shall promptly notify the Trustee in writing of the Special Trustee's approval or disapproval of the same. If the written notice has been given by certified mail addressed to the Special Trustee at the Special Trustee's last known address, and if the Trustee has not received notice of the Special Trustee's approval or disapproval of the proposed action within _____ [specify number, e.g.: 10] days from the date of mailing of the written notice by certified mail, then the Special Trustee shall be deemed to have approved the proposed investment, reinvestment, sale, lease, exchange, or option.

If _____ [name of special trustee] shall at any time be unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as Special Trustee, _____ [name of alternate special trustee] shall become Special Trustee and shall exercise all of the rights and powers herein conferred on the Special Trustee. If both _____ [name of special trustee] and _____ [name of alternate special trustee] are, at any time, unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as Special Trustee, then the Trustee shall exercise the investment powers conferred on the Trustee by this instrument and by any applicable provisions of law without the necessity of first obtaining the approval of the Special Trustee. The Trustee shall not be liable to any interested party for failure to take action disapproved by the Special Trustee. The Special Trustee shall hold the powers conferred by this Paragraph in a fiduciary capacity and shall be subject to all of the duties, obligations, and liabilities that apply to the exercise of power by a Trustee.

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.364

§ 64A.364 Provisions Authorizing Majority of Cotrustees to Bind Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that, whenever two or more cotrustees are in office, action taken by a majority of the cotrustees will bind the trust. Two alternative provisions are illustrated. The first provides that a majority of the cotrustees may bind the trust estate in any transaction, without specifying a limit on the amount of the obligation that may be incurred. The second provides that a majority of the cotrustees may bind the trust only when the amount of the obligation incurred does not exceed a specified limit.

For provisions authorizing a majority of the cotrustees to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.360.

[b] Dividing or Allocating the Powers of Cotrustees

[i] In General

Because of practical difficulties that inhibit the efforts of many cotrustees to administer trusts effectively [see discussions in § 64A.202[1][b][i] et seq.], the testator may wish to consider one of several alternative provisions that divide, allocate, or apportion the powers and duties of the cotrustees.

[ii] Statutory Rules

Generally, when there are cotrustees, all must unite in any action to bind the trust property, but unanimity is not required if the trust instrument provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 15620]. The testator may dispense with the requirement of unanimity by providing, among other things, that the powers of the trust may be exercised by a majority of the cotrustees [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. III, § 194].

[iii] Drafting Considerations

In this form, the testator dispenses with the requirement of unanimity by providing that a majority of the cotrustees may bind the trust estate. The form will be most useful if there are more than two cotrustees. When there are only two cotrustees, they will be either unanimous or split equally on any question, and a majority decision will not be possible. If the trustees do not agree, and if the trust instrument does not authorize action by a majority of the cotrustees, the only practical solution is to petition the court for instructions [see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(6)].

The testator may set a dollar limit on transactions in which a majority of the cotrustees may bind the estate. If the transaction is within the specified limit, a majority of the cotrustees will be competent to act. If the transaction exceeds the specified limit, the general requirement of unanimity will apply.

Majority of Cotrustees to Bind Trust

[First alternative: no dollar limit on transactions]

At any time that more than two Cotrustees are in office, any action taken by a majority of the Cotrustees shall be binding upon the trust and may be relied upon by third parties in dealing with it.

[OR]

[Second alternative: dollar limit on transactions]

At any time that more than two Cotrustees are in office, a majority of those Cotrustees shall have the power to bind the trust in any transaction obligating the Trustees to expend _____ [specify amount, e.g.: $1,000] or less. Any transaction obligating the Trustees to expend more than _____ [restate amount, e.g.: $1,000] shall be approved by all of the Trustees.

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that any corporate trustee who is acting as a cotrustee will have custody of all money, securities, and other personal property belonging to the trust estate, maintain all records and accounts for the trust, receive all receipts, and make all necessary payments, disbursements, and distributions.

For provisions authorizing a majority of the cotrustees to bind the trust, see § 64A.364.

[b] Custody of Personal Property and Corporate Records

Because of the obligations imposed on them by federal and state regulatory statutes, most banks, trust companies, and other corporate trustees, when acting as cotrustees, insist that they alone have custody of personal property belonging to the trust and keep all records of the trust. The form set forth below may be incorporated in the will to clearly apprise any individual acting as a cotrustee of the corporate trustee's rights and duties in this respect.

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

I. Optional Provisions Dividing or Allocating Powers of Cotrustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.366

§ 64A.366 Delegation of Powers and Duties of Individual Cotrustee to Corporate Cotrustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to authorize an individual cotrustee to delegate his or her powers and duties to a corporate cotrustee.

[b] Delegation of Powers and Duties of Cotrustees

[i] In General

The Trust Law forbids a trustee or cotrustee from delegating the entire administration of the trust to a cotrustee or any other person [Prob. Code § 16012(a); see Prob. Code § 16012(c) (rule not applicable to investment and management functions)]. The Trust Law also provides that if a trustee or cotrustee has delegated a matter to a cotrustee or other person, the trustee or cotrustee has a duty to exercise general supervision over the person performing the delegated matter [Prob. Code § 16012(b)]. However, these rules are not applicable if the trust instrument "provides otherwise" [Prob. Code § 16000]. By authorizing an individual cotrustee to delegate all or any of the cotrustee's powers to a corporate trustee, this provision "provides otherwise."

[ii] Alternatives to Delegation

A cotrustee's delegation of all the cotrustee's powers and duties may not be in the best interests of the trust. In fact, a delegation of substantially all of the trustee's duties may amount to a virtual resignation from office. Various alternatives are available to permit a division or allocation of the duties of the cotrustees without authorizing a delegation.

If, for example, the testator wishes to permit a cotrustee to seek and rely on advice or counsel, the cotrustee may be authorized to employ agents, advisors, and attorneys to assist and advise him or her in the administration of the trust. If the testator wishes one of the cotrustees to make investment decisions for the trust while another cotrustee attends to the ministerial functions of trust administration, the powers of the cotrustees may be divided or allocated among them in various ways. For a provision authorizing a trustee to employ agents, advisors, and attorneys, see § 64A.320[2]. For provisions assigning investment powers to a named cotrustee, see § 64A.361[2]. For provisions empowering a special trustee to make investment decisions for the trust, see § 64A.362[2]. For provisions conferring a veto power on a special trustee, see § 64A.363[2]. For provisions authorizing a majority of the cotrustees to bind the trust, see § 64A.364[2]. For provisions empowering a corporate cotrustee to have custody of personal property and maintain records and accounts for the trust, see § 64A.365[2].

[iii] Drafting Considerations

This form permits an entire delegation of the cotrustee's powers and duties. It may be useful if the testator contemplates that an individual trustee may, for a temporary period or periods, be unable or unwilling to carry out the duties of the trust. In such an event, the cotrustee could temporarily delegate his or her powers or responsibilities. If it is contemplated that an individual trustee will be permanently unable to carry out the duties of the trust, a provision for appointment of a successor cotrustee, to take office if and when the earlier cotrustee is unable or unwilling to act as cotrustee, will be more appropriate. For provisions appointing trustees and cotrustees, and providing for appointing of successors, see §§ 64A.200-64A.202. For provisions authorizing the appointment of alternate and successor trustees, see Ch. 64B, Testamentary Trusts: Administrative Provisions, § 64B.270-64B.272.

§ 64A.367 Provision Disqualifying Cotrustee From Decisions Affecting Cotrustee's Own Interest

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to disqualify a cotrustee who is also a beneficiary of the trust from participating in discretionary decisions relating to the cotrustee's interest in the trust.

[b] Duty of Loyalty

[i] Statutory Rules

Although there is no legal bar to the appointment of a beneficiary as trustee, a trustee-beneficiary is subject to certain restrictions that do not apply to other trustees. For example, a trustee may not use or deal with the trust property for his or her own profit, or for any other purpose unconnected with the trust [Prob. Code § 16004(a)]. Further, a trustee (or any agent for a trustee) may not take part in any transaction concerning the trust in which the trustee (or any person for whom the trustee acts as agent) has an interest, present or contingent, adverse to that of the beneficiaries, except when consent is obtained from the beneficiaries [Prob. Code §§ 16004(a), 16463]. If a trustee acquires any interest, or becomes charged with any duty, adverse to the interest of the beneficiary of the trust, the trustee must immediately inform the beneficiary of that interest or duty, and may at once be removed from office [Prob. Code § 15642(b) (grounds for removal of trustee); Prob. Code § 16002 (duty of loyalty); Prob. Code § 16004 (duty to avoid conflict of interest)]. For a general discussion of the trustee's duty of loyalty to the trust and to the beneficiaries, see discussions in § 64A.39[1] et seq.

[ii] Will Provisions

Although statutory safeguards are available to prevent a trustee from acting adversely to the interests of the trust or its beneficiaries, a will provision disqualifying a cotrustee who is also a beneficiary from participating in discretionary decisions relating to the cotrustee's own interest in the trust may serve a useful purpose. First, it will clearly apprise persons interested in the trust that a cotrustee may not participate in any decision that will affect the trustee's own interest. Second, it will obviate the necessity of proving that the cotrustee's interest is actually adverse to that of the trust or the beneficiaries of the trust.

[2] FORM

Cotrustee Prohibited From Participating in Decisions Affecting Own Interest

Any other provision of this will to the contrary notwithstanding, no cotrustee who is a beneficiary of any trust established under this will shall participate in any discretionary decision relating to his or her distributive share of the income or principal of the trust. The decision of the other cotrustees shall control in all such cases.

CHAPTER 64A TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: TRUSTEE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS

I. Optional Provisions Dividing or Allocating Powers of Cotrustees

24-64A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64A.368

§ 64A.368 Provision Requiring Unanimous Action Among Cotrustees When Voting Shares

[1] Comment--Use of Form

[a] In General

This provision may be used to require unanimous action to vote shares when there are two or more cotrustees in office.

[b] Statutory Rule of Majority Action in Voting Shares

The power to exercise voting rights with respect to shares of stock is one of the administrative powers usually granted to a trustee [see § 64A.221]. When there are two or more cotrustees with these powers, the question arises as to what constitutes a binding vote among them. Prob. Code § 15620 states the general rule that, unless otherwise provided in the trust instrument, cotrustees may exercise their powers by unanimous actions only. However, Corp. Code § 704, governing the voting of shares when two or more persons have the same fiduciary relationship respecting the same shares, provides that the act of the majority of the cotrustees is binding. As the more specific statute governing the voting of shares, Corp. Code § 704 controls over the general unanimity rule for cotrustees stated in Prob. Code § 15620 [ Edwards v. Edwards (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 599, 602-603, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 ].

[c] Will Provision Overcoming Majority-Action Rule

The majority voting rule can be overcome if the secretary of the corporation is given written notice to the contrary and is furnished with a copy of the instrument appointing the fiduciaries and providing for unanimous vote [see Corp. Code § 704]. To constitute notice to the contrary, the requirement of unanimity in the voting of shares must be expressly stated in the instrument; an instrument that is silent on the issue will not trigger the default unanimity rule under Prob. Code § 15620 for purposes of voting shares [see Edwards v. Edwards (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 599, 603-604, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 ].

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers miscellaneous operational provisions for testamentary trusts. These include provisions relating to the determination of principal and income, declaring the testator's intentions to favor the income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries, defining the trustee's power to accept additions to the trust from third parties, providing for vacancies in the trusteeship, establishing rules for the determination of the trustee's or cotrustees' compensation, empowering the income beneficiary to move the place of trust administration by changing trustees, and specifying the law that will govern questions relating to the validity, construction, interpretation, and administration of the trust.

Provisions relating to the payment and distribution of income and principal are covered in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions . Provisions relating to the selection, appointment, and general administrative powers of trustees are covered in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions .

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.30

§ 64B.30 Determination of Principal and Income

Testamentary trusts frequently require the trustee to pay the income of the trust to one or more persons (the income beneficiaries) for a period of time and thereafter to distribute the trust principal or corpus to another person or persons (the remainder beneficiaries). The income beneficiaries are entitled to the net income during the period specified in the trust. Net income is determined by subtracting expenditures properly chargeable to income from receipts properly allocable to income [Scott, The Law of Trusts, vol. III, § 233 (3d ed. 1967)]. Whether a particular receipt is treated as income or principal, or a particular expenditure charged against income or corpus, may significantly affect the respective interests of the income and remainder beneficiaries. For this reason, it is important for the trustee to have clear and easily applied rules for the allocation of receipts and disbursements to principal and income.

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.31

§ 64B.31 Uniform Principal and Income Act

[1] Scope and Application

In California, the allocation of trust receipts and expenditures to income and principal is governed by the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code § 16320-16375], which is part of the Trust Law [Prob. Code § 15000 et seq.]. The Act generally applies to all trusts existing on or after January 1, 2000, except as otherwise expressly provided in the Act or in the trust or will [Prob. Code § 16339].

[2] Definitions

To apply the rules of the Uniform Principal and Income Act, a number of commonly used terms are defined as follows:

- "Accounting period" means a calendar year, unless another 12-month period is selected by a fiduciary. It also includes a portion of a calendar year or 12-month period that begins when an income interest begins, or ends when an income interest ends [Prob. Code § 16322].
- "Fiduciary" means a personal representative or trustee [Prob. Code § 16324].
- "Income" means money or property received by a fiduciary as a current return from a principal asset. It also includes a portion of receipts from a sale, exchange, or liquidation of a principal asset as provided under Prob. Code §§ 16350-16367 [Prob. Code § 16324].
- "Income beneficiary" means a person to whom net income of a trust is or may be payable [Prob. Code § 16325].
- "Income interest" means the right of an income beneficiary to receive all or part of net income, whether the distribution is required or within the trustee's discretion [Prob. Code § 16326].
- "Mandatory income interest" means the right of an income beneficiary to receive net income which the trust requires the fiduciary to distribute [Prob. Code § 16327].

- "Net income" means the total receipts allocated to income during an accounting period minus the disbursements made from income during the accounting period, plus or minus transfers under this chapter to or from income during the accounting period. During any period in which the trust is administered as a unitrust [see Prob. Code §§ 16336.4-16336.6], "net income" means the unitrust amount, if this amount is no less than 3 percent and no more than 5 percent of the fair market value of the trust assets, whether determined annually or averaged on a multiple year basis [Prob. Code § 16328].

Note that the current version of the Uniform Principal and Income Act, unlike its predecessor [see former Prob. Code § 16303 (b) (repealed effective January 1, 2000)], does not contain a specific definition of "principal." However, as discussed in § 64B.31[5], Prob. Code § 16355 and various other sections of the Act delineate in detail those assets that are to be allocated to principal under the Act.

[3] Basic Rules for Determination of Principal and Income

In allocating receipts and disbursements to principal and income, and with respect to any other matter within the Uniform Principal and Income Act, a fiduciary is to be guided by certain fundamental principles specified in the Act [Prob. Code § 16335]:

- A fiduciary must administer a trust in accordance with the terms of the trust, even if the trust's terms contradict provisions of the Act [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)].
- A fiduciary may administer a trust in accordance with a discretionary power given by the trust, even if this produces a result contrary to a result required or permitted by the Act. The fact that a contrary result occurs creates no inference that a fiduciary has improperly exercised its discretion [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(2)].
- A fiduciary must administer the trust in accordance with the terms of the Act if the trust does not include a different provision or does not grant the fiduciary a discretionary power of administration [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(3)].
- In exercising a discretionary power of administration, whether granted by a trust or the Act, the fiduciary must administer the trust impartially, except when the trust expresses an intention that the fiduciary favor one or more of the beneficiaries. The exercise of discretion in accordance with the Act is presumed to be fair and reasonable to all beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16335(b)].

The Act sets forth numerous specific rules to allocate particular categories of receipts and disbursements. Some items are allocated directly to income [see § 64B.31[4]], whereas others are allocated directly to principal [see § 64B.31[5]]. Other items are subject to more complex apportionment or allocation rules under which certain portions or elements are allocated to income, and others to principal [see § 64B.31[6]].

[4] Items Included in Income

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides for the following items to be allocated to income:

- Amounts received as rent of real or personal property, including payments for cancellation or renewal of a lease. Note that an exception exists in the case of security deposits and deposits of future rent, which are to be added to principal, held subject to the terms of the lease, and are unavailable for distribution to a beneficiary until the lessee's contractual obligations have been satisfied with respect to that amount [Prob. Code § 16356].

- Subject to any contrary rules in Prob. Code §§ 16361-16367, interest on a monetary obligation to the trust [Prob. Code § 16357(a)].
- Proceeds from an insurance contract covering against loss of occupancy or other use by an income beneficiary, loss of income, or lost income from a business [Prob. Code § 16358(b)].
- All ordinary expenses incurred in administering, managing, and preserving the trust property, and in distributing income, specifically including interest, ordinary repairs, regularly recurring taxes assessed against principal, and expenses of a proceeding or other matter that primarily concerns the income interest [Prob. Code § 16370(c)].
- All recurring insurance premiums covering the loss of a principal asset or loss of income from use of the asset [Prob. Code § 16370(d)].
- In an eminent domain proceeding, an award made for the loss of income with respect to an accounting period during which a current income beneficiary had a mandatory income interest [Prob. Code § 16355(d)].

[5] Items Included in Principal

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides for the following items to be allocated to principal:

- Except when allocated to income under other provisions of the Act, assets received from a transferor during the transferor's lifetime, a decedent's estate, a trust with a terminating income interest, or a payee under a contract naming the trust or its trustee as beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16355(a)].
- Subject to any contrary rules in Prob. Code §§ 16350-16367, money or other property received from the sale, exchange, liquidation, or change in form of a principal asset, including realized profit [Prob. Code § 16355(b)].
- Amounts recovered from third parties to reimburse the trust for disbursements from principal, or for other reasons not based on the loss of income [Prob. Code § 16355(c)].
- Proceeds from property taken by eminent domain, except an award made for the loss of income with respect to an accounting period during which a current income beneficiary had a mandatory income interest [Prob. Code § 16355(d)].
- Net income received in an accounting period during which there is no beneficiary to whom a trustee may or must distribute income [Prob. Code § 16355(e)].
- A refundable deposit for leased real or personal property [Prob. Code § 16356; see § 64B.31[4]].
- Proceeds from a life insurance policy or other contract in which the trust is named as beneficiary, including a contract that insures trust property against damage, destruction, or loss of title [Prob. Code § 16358(a)].
- "Derivatives"; that is, contracts and/or financial instruments that give a trust the right or obligation to participate in some of all changes in the price of a tangible or intangible asset or group of assets, or changes in a rate, an index of prices or rates, or other market indicator for an asset or a group of assets.

To the extent that these items are not accounted for as receipts from a business entity [see Prob. Code § 16352], receipts from and disbursements with respect to these items will generally be allocated to principal [Prob. Code § 16366(a), (b)].

- Amounts received for granting options to buy trust property (whether or not the trust owns the property when the option is granted) or permitting another person to sell property to the trust, amounts expended in acquiring an option to buy property for the trust or to sell an asset owned by the trust, and any gain or loss realized upon the exercise of an option, including an option granted to a settlor of the trust for services rendered. Note that the trustee or other owner of the asset must be required to deliver the asset if the option is exercised [Prob. Code § 16366(c)].
- Trustee's compensation for that is calculated based on principal as a fee for acceptance, distribution, or termination of the trust, and disbursements made to prepare property for sale [Prob. Code § 16371(a)(2)].
- Payments on the principal of a trust debt [Prob. Code § 16371(a)(3)].
- Expenses of proceedings primarily concerning principal [Prob. Code § 16371(a)(4)].
- Premiums paid on insurance policies of which the trust is the owner and beneficiary, other than recurring premiums on insurance covering the loss of a principal asset or the loss of income from or use of the asset [Prob. Code § 16371(a)(5); see Prob. Code § 16370(d)].
- Estate, inheritance, and other transfer taxes [Prob. Code § 16371(a)(6)].
- Disbursements relating to environmental matters [see Prob. Code § 16371(a)(7)].

[6] Items Apportioned Between Principal and Income

Various trust assets and expenses are subject to more complicated allocation rules under which certain elements or portions are allocated to income, and others to principal. A list of assets falling into these categories is included below. For more detailed discussion of the apportionment or allocation rules applicable to these classes of assets or expenses, see the appropriate form comments cited below.

- Receipts from a corporation, partnership, limited liability company, or other business entity [see Prob. Code § 16350; see also § 64B.208[1]].
- Amounts received as a distribution from a trust or decedent's estate (other than an interest in an investment entity) in which the trust has an interest other than a purchased interest. These receipts generally take the character they had in the distributing trust or estate; distributions of principal will be allocated to principal and distributions of income will be allocated to income [Prob. Code § 16351].
- Amounts connected with operating a business or other activity, if the trustee determines it is in the trust's best interest to account separately for the business instead of accounting for it as part of the trust's general accounting records. If the trustee maintains separate accounts for the business, the trustee has specific discretionary powers with respect to the allocation of expenses and receipts to income or principal [see Prob. Code § 16352; see also § 64B.210[1]].
- Amounts received from the sale or redemption of an obligation to pay money. Subject to any contrary rules in Prob. Code §§ 16361-16367, if the amounts are due within one year of its purchase or acquisition, any amount received in excess of the purchase price is allocated to income. Otherwise, the entire amount is allocated to principal [Prob. Code § 16357(b)].

- Dividends from an insurance policy. These receipts are allocated to income if premiums are paid from income, and principal if premiums are paid from principal [Prob. Code § 16358(a)].
- Pensions, annuities, individual retirement accounts, stock bonus or ownership plans, and similar items [see Prob. Code § 16361; see also § 64B.204[1]].
- "Liquidating assets"; that is, assets whose value will diminish or terminate because the asset will only produce receipts for a limited duration [see Prob. Code § 16362; see also § 64B.204[1]].
- Natural resources [see Prob. Code § 16363; see also § 64B.204[1]].
- Merchantable timber and related products [Prob. Code § 16364; see § 64B.204[1]].
- "Asset-backed securities"; that is, assets whose value is based on the right it gives the owner to receive distributions from the proceeds of the financial assets that provide collateral for the security (other than business entity income [see Prob. Code § 16350] or payments from pension, profit sharing, and related plans [see Prob. Code § 16361]) [Prob. Code § 16367(a)]. If a trust receives a payment from interest or other current return and from other proceeds of the collateral financial assets, the trustee must allocate to income the portion of the payment that the payer identifies as being from interest or other current return, and allocate the balance of the payment to principal. If a trust receives one or more payments in exchange for the trust's entire interest in an asset-backed security in one accounting period, the trustee must allocate the payments to principal. If a payment is one of a series of payments that will result in the liquidation of the trust's interest in the security over more than one accounting period, the trustee must allocate 10 percent of the payment to income and the balance to principal [Prob. Code § 16367].
- Regular compensation for a trustee, investment advisor, or custodian, and expenses for accountings, judicial proceedings or other matters involving both income and remainder interests. These disbursements are divided evenly between principal and income, unless the court orders a different allocation [Prob. Code §§ 16370(a), (b), 16371(a)(1)].
- Income taxes. These are allocated based on the nature of the receipts as principal or income, notwithstanding the characterization as "income" taxes [see Prob. Code § 16374].

[7] Apportionment at Beginning and End of Income Interest

An income beneficiary is entitled to net income from the date when the income interest begins, which is the date specified in the trust or, if no date is specified, the date an asset becomes subject to a trust or successive income interest [Prob. Code § 16345(a)]. An asset becomes subject to a trust on the date the asset is transferred, if during the transferor's life, on the date of a testator's death, even if there is an intervening period of administration for the testator's estate, or on the date of an individual's death, if the asset is transferred because of that individual's death [Prob. Code § 16345(b)]. An asset becomes subject to a successive income interest the day after the preceding income interest ends, even if there is an intervening period of administration to wind up the preceding income interest [Prob. Code § 16345(c)].

Income receipts or disbursements not subject to Prob. Code § 16340(a) (special rules applicable to decedent's estate following decedent's death, or after income interest in trust ends) are applied to principal if the due date is prior to the date an income interest begins, and income if the due date occurs on or after the date the income interest begins [Prob. Code § 16346(a), (b)]. A receipt or disbursement is due on the date that payment is required. If no such date is stated, there is no due date [Prob. Code § 16346(c)]. If the due date is not periodic or there is no due date, the income receipt or disbursement is treated as accruing day to day, and allocated accordingly between principal and income [Prob. Code § 16346(b)].

When a mandatory income interest ends, the beneficiary of that interest, or that person's estate, is entitled to "undistributed income", meaning net income received before the end of the income interest. There is no entitlement to income that is due or has accrued, but that has not been received, or net income that has been added or is required to be added to principal by the trust [Prob. Code § 16347].

[8] Accounting and Adjustments by Trustee

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides other rules relating to accounting or adjusting between principal and income. If a trustee determines that the best interests of all beneficiaries would be served, it may account separately for a business or other activity rather than including it in the trust's general accounting [Prob. Code § 16352; see § 64B.210[1]].

A trustee may transfer a reasonable amount from income to principal to cover depreciation. However, no depreciation adjustment may occur if the depreciating property is held or available for the personal use of a beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16372; see § 64B.203[1]].

In consideration of various principal disbursements, a trustee may transfer an appropriate amount from income to principal to reimburse principal or provide a reserve for future principal disbursements [Prob. Code § 16373(a)]. The principal disbursements justifying this adjustment include the following [Prob. Code § 16373(b)]:

- An amount chargeable to income but paid by principal because it is unusually large.
- A capital improvement to a principal asset.
- Disbursements made to prepare property for rental.
- Periodic payments on an obligation secured by a principal asset, to the extent that any adjustment for depreciation is less than the periodic payment.
- Disbursements related to environmental matters.

These adjustments may be made over the course of multiple accounting periods, and may continue through successive income interests [Prob. Code § 16373].

A fiduciary also may make adjustments between principal and income to offset consequences from elections on tax matters, transactions or distributions involving the trust, or ownership of an entity by the trust [Prob. Code § 16375(a)].

A fiduciary's election to deduct a principal expenditure for income tax purposes rather than estate tax purposes can cause an increase in estate tax liability to principal, because of a reduction in the marital or charitable contribution deduction. Under these circumstances, the trusts, estates, or beneficiaries who gained the income tax benefit must reimburse principal for the increase in estate taxes, in proportional shares equal to the income tax benefit gained. [Prob. Code § 16375(b)].

[9] Trustee's General Power of Adjustment

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides a trustee with a general power to make adjustments between principal and income, to the extent the trustee considers necessary, under specified circumstances [Prob. Code § 16336]. This general power of adjustment is available only when each of the following conditions has been satisfied [Prob. Code § 16336(a)]:

- The trustee invests and manages trust assets under the prudent investor rule [Prob. Code §§ 16045-16054; see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.40[3], 64A.260[1]].
- The trust describes the amount that shall or may be distributed to a beneficiary by referring to the trust's income.
- The trustee determines that complying with other conditions set forth in the trust or the Act will preclude the trustee from administering the trust impartially.

The power of adjustment is discretionary, and the trustee cannot be held liable for failing to adjust or even consider an adjustment [Prob. Code § 16336(h)]. In a proceeding with respect to a trustee's exercise or nonexercise of the power of adjustment, the sole remedy is to direct, deny, or revise an adjustment between principal and income [Prob. Code § 16338].

[10] Limitations on General Power of Adjustment

The trustee may not make any adjustment [Prob. Code § 16336(b)]

- That would jeopardize an estate or gift tax marital deduction.
- That would reduce the actuarial value of an income interest granted by a person seeking a gift tax exclusion (thereby causing an increased value for the remainder interest).
- That would change the amount payable to a beneficiary under a unitrust or annuity trust.
- If it would adjust an amount permanently set aside for charitable purposes, unless both principal and income are so set aside.
- If possessing or exercising the power could cause someone to be treated as owner of all or part of the trust for income tax purposes.
- If possessing or exercising the power could cause all or part of the trust to be included in the taxable estate of someone with the power to remove and/or appoint a trustee.
- If the trustee is a beneficiary of the trust.

If one of these last three conditions applies to a co-trustee, another co-trustee to whom the prohibition does not apply may exercise the power to adjust, unless otherwise prohibited by the trust or Act [Prob. Code § 16336(c)].

The trustee also may not make any adjustment during any period in which the trust is administered as a unitrust [Prob. Code § 16336(b)(8); see Prob. Code §§ 16336.4-16336.6].

[11] Release of General Power of Adjustment

A trustee may release the power to adjust if the trustee believes that possessing or exercising the power could deprive the trust of a tax benefit or impose a tax burden, including but not limited to the benefits or burdens described in Prob. Code § 16336(b) [Prob. Code § 16336(d)]. The release may be permanent or for a specified period, including the life of an individual [Prob. Code § 16336(e)].

[12] Limitations on General Power of Adjustment in Trust Instrument

A trust that limits the power of a trustee to make an adjustment between principal and income does not affect the application of Prob. Code § 16336 unless it is clear from the trust that it is intended to deny the trustee the power of adjustment [Prob. Code § 16336(e)]. For a trust provision limiting the trustee's power of adjustment under Prob. Code § 16336, see § 64B.201A.

[13] Factors Considered in Exercising General Power of Adjustment

In deciding whether and to what extent to exercise the power of adjustment, the trustee may consider, among other factors, any of the following [Prob. Code § 16336(g)]:

- The nature, purpose, and expected duration of the trust.
- The intent of the settlor.
- The identity and circumstances of the beneficiaries.
- The needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation and appreciation of capital.
- The assets held in trust; the extent to which they consist of financial assets, interests in closely held properties, tangible and intangible personal property, or real property; the extent to which an asset is used by a beneficiary; and whether an asset was purchased by the trustee or received from the settlor.
- The net amount allocated to income under other statutes and the change in value of the principal assets, which the trustee may estimate when market values are not readily attainable.
- Whether and to what extent the trustee may invade principal or accumulate income, and the extent to which such powers have been exercised.
- The effects of inflation or deflation, and the actual and anticipated effects of economic conditions on principal and income.
- The anticipated tax consequences of an adjustment.

[14] Spouse's Right to Require Productive Property

If a marital deduction is allowed for all or part of a trust whose assets fail to provide the spouse with sufficient income, and the trustee fails to adjust for the lack of income pursuant to Prob. Code § 16336, then the spouse may require the trustee to either make the property productive, convert it into productive property, or make adjustments under Prob. Code § 16336 [Prob. Code § 16365].

[15] Notice of Proposed Action

[a] In General

When making allocations to principal or income, a trustee may further insulate himself or herself from liability by using an optional notice of proposed action procedure [Prob. Code § 16337], similar to that used under the Independent Administration of Estates Act [see Prob. Code § 10580 et seq.]. A trustee may give notice of proposed action regarding a matter governed by the Probate Code provisions relating to trustee powers [Prob. Code § 16200 et seq.] or by the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code § 16320 et seq.]. For purpose of the notice provisions, a "proposed action" includes a course of action or a decision not to take action [Prob. Code § 16500]. A trustee is not required, however, to use this notice procedure before taking any action [Prob. Code § 16504]. Moreover, these notice provisions do not preclude the application or assertion of any other rights or remedies available to an interested party regarding an action to be taken or not taken by the trustee [Prob. Code § 16500].

A trustee who elects to provide notice of a proposed action must mail notice to each of the following [Prob. Code § 16501(a)]:

- A beneficiary who is receiving, or is entitled to receive, income under the trust, including a beneficiary who is entitled to receive income at the trustee's discretion.
- A beneficiary who would receive a distribution of principal if the trust were terminated at the time the notice is given.

If the beneficiary is a minor or an incompetent adult, the notice must be served on the guardian or conservator of the beneficiary's estate [see Prob. Code § 16503(b)].

A trustee who elects to use the notice procedure is not required to give notice to the following persons:

- A person who consents in writing to the proposed action. The consent may be executed at any time before or after the proposed action is taken [Prob. Code § 16501(b)].
- A beneficiary who is known to the trustee, but who cannot be located after reasonable diligence, or who is unknown to the trustee [Prob. Code § 16501(c)].

The trustee may not use a notice of proposed action with respect to any of the following actions [Prob. Code § 16501(d)]:

- Allowance of the trustee's compensation.
- Allowance of compensation for the trustee's attorney.
- Settlement of accounts.
- Preliminary and final distributions and discharge.
- Sale of trust property to the trustee or the trustee's attorney.
- Exchange of trust property for property of the trustee or the trustee's attorney.
- Grant to the trustee or the trustee's attorney of an option to purchase trust property.
- Allowance, payment, or compromise of a claim of the trustee or the trustee's attorney against the trust.

- Compromise or settlement of a claim, action, or proceeding by the trust against the trustee or the attorney for the trust.
- Extension, renewal, or modification of the terms of a debt or other obligation of the trustee or the trustee's attorney, owing to or in favor of the trust.

[b] Content of Proposed Notice

The notice of proposed action must state that it is given under Prob. Code § 16502, and must include all of the following [Prob. Code § 16502]:

- The trustee's name and mailing address.
- The name and telephone number of a person who may be contacted for additional information.
- A description of the proposed action and an explanation of the reasons for the action.
- The time within which objections to the proposed action can be made, which must be at least 45 days from the date the notice is mailed.
- The date on or after which the proposed action may be taken or is effective.

[c] Objection to Proposed Action

A beneficiary may object to a proposed action by mailing a written objection to the trustee at the address, and within the time, specified in the notice [Prob. Code § 16503(a)]. A trustee is not liable to a beneficiary for a proposed action if the trustee does not receive a timely, written objection from the beneficiary. If no beneficiary entitled to notice objects, the trustee is not liable to any current or future beneficiary with respect to the proposed action [Prob. Code § 16503(b)]. If the trustee receives a timely written objection, the trustee or a beneficiary may petition the court to have the proposed action taken as proposed, taken with modifications, or denied. In the proceeding, a beneficiary who objects to the proposed action has the burden of proving that the action should not be taken. A beneficiary who has not objected to the proposed action is not estopped from opposing the action in the proceeding [Prob. Code § 16503(c)].

[d] Decision Not To Implement Proposed Action

If the trustee decides not to implement the proposed action, the trustee must give the beneficiaries notice of this decision and the reasons for it. The trustee's decision not to implement a proposed action does not itself give rise to liability to any current or future beneficiary. A beneficiary may petition the court to have the action taken, and has the burden of proving that the trustee should take the action [Prob. Code § 16503(d)].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.32

§ 64B.32 Declaration of Testator's Intention

The Probate Code provides general rules for the interpretation of wills, trusts, and other instruments [see Prob. Code §§ 21101-21140]. The first and most important of these rules is that the intention of the transferor as expressed in the instrument controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. Accordingly, the other rules apply only when the intention of the transferor is not otherwise indicated by the instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(b)]. However, these provisions do not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)]. In analyzing the terms of a trust created by a will, the court's function is to ascertain the testator's intention as expressed in the will and, to the extent possible, give it effect [Estate of Karkeet (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 277, 281, 14 Cal. Rptr. 664, 363 P.2d 896; Estate of Stokley (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 461, 467, 166 Cal. Rptr. 587 (intent of settlor of inter vivos trust will control allocations to principal or income)].

Since the typical testamentary trust gives the trustee wide discretion with respect to investments, income payments, and determination of questions of income and principal, the manner in which particular determinations are made may depend in large part on an interpretation of the testator's intentions with respect to the income beneficiaries and the remainder beneficiaries. If the will evidences the testator's intention to favor the income beneficiaries over the remainder beneficiaries, the trustee's power with respect to investments, allocation of income, invasion of principal, and other administrative duties will properly be exercised in favor of the income beneficiaries. If the will evidences the testator's intention to favor the remainder beneficiaries, the trustee and the court will be guided accordingly in carrying out and enforcing the other provisions of the trust instrument [see Getty v. Getty (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 996, 105 Cal. Rptr. 259 (inter vivos trust instrument showed settlor's intention to favor remainder beneficiaries)].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.33

§ 64B.33 Additions to Trust by Third Parties

After a testamentary trust has been established by one member of a family, other family members sometimes choose to make additions to it. By doing so, they avoid the necessity of establishing a new trust, selecting a new trustee, and determining all the terms and provisions that must govern the operation and administration of the new trust. The Probate Code authorizes additions to previously established trusts, prescribes rules for determining their validity, and lays down certain principles under which the assets comprising such additions must be administered. For a general discussion of those rules and principles, see discussion § 64B.250[1][c].

Unless the will provides otherwise, property devised to a previously created trust becomes part of the trust to which it is given and must be administered and disposed of in accordance with the first trust instrument, including any amendments made before or after the death of the testator (regardless of whether the amendments were made before or after execution of the testator's will) [Prob. Code § 6300].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.34

§ 64B.34 Vacancy in Trusteeship

[1] Circumstances Causing Vacancy

The Trust Law describes eight circumstances under which the office of trustee will be deemed to be vacant. These are:

- If the person named as trustee rejects the trust [Prob. Code § 15643(a); see Prob. Code § 15601(a) and discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.35].
- If the person named as trustee cannot be identified or does not exist [Prob. Code § 15643(b)].
- If the trustee resigns or is removed [Prob. Code § 15643(c); see Probate Code Section 15640 and discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.36; see also Prob. Code § 15642 and discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.37].
- If the trustee dies [Prob. Code § 15643(d)].
- If a conservator or guardian of the person or estate of an individual trustee is appointed [Prob. Code § 15643(e)].
- The trustee is the subject of an order for relief in bankruptcy.
- If a trust company's charter is revoked or its powers are suspended (providing the revocation or suspension is to be in effect for a period of 30 days or more) [Prob. Code § 15643(g)].
- If a receiver is appointed for a trust company (if the appointment is not vacated within a period of 30 days) [Prob. Code § 15643(h)].

[2] How Vacancy Is Filled

If the will specifies a practical method for filling the vacancy (or if it names a person to fill the vacancy), the vacancy must be filled as provided in the will [Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. If the will makes no provision for filling the vacancy, all of the adult beneficiaries may agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company [Prob. Code § 15660(c); see Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined)]. If the adult beneficiaries do not agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company, the court may appoint a trustee to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)]. Although the selection of a trustee is entrusted to the discretion of the court, the court must give consideration to the wishes of any beneficiary who is 14 years of age or older [Prob. Code § 15660(d)].

If the trust provides for more than one trustee, the court, in its discretion, may appoint the original number or any lesser number of cotrustees [Prob. Code § 15660(d)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.35

§ 64B.35 Compensation of Trustees

[1] When Specified in Trust Instrument

If the trust instrument provides for the trustee's compensation, the trustee is entitled to be compensated in accordance with the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15680(a)]. Notwithstanding the provisions of the trust instrument and except as provided in Prob. Code § 15688 (Public Guardian Compensation), the court, upon proper showing, may fix or allow greater or lesser compensation if the trustee's duties are substantially different from those contemplated when the trust was created [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(1)], if compensation in accordance with the trust would be inequitable or unreasonably low or high [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(2)], or if other extraordinary circumstances call for equitable relief [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(3)]. However, an order fixing or allowing greater or lesser compensation can apply only prospectively to actions taken in administration of the trust after the order is made [Prob. Code § 15680(c)].

[2] When Not Specified in Trust Instrument

If the trust instrument does not specify the trustee's compensation, the trustee is entitled to reasonable compensation under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 15681]. There is no inflexible rule for determining the reasonableness of compensation, and when a trustee is entitled to reasonable compensation the actual amount depends largely on the individual circumstances of the case [see Estate of McLaughlin (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 462, 467-468, 274 P.2d 868 ; see also § 64B.292[1]]. Although the trustee's determination of its fee is subject to its fiduciary duties [see discussions in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.39[1] et seq.], the court usually will not upset the trustee's determination unless it was not made in good faith or is outside the bounds of reasonable judgment [see Horowitz, Uniform Trustee's Powers Act, 41 Wash. L. Rev. 1, 7, 22 (1966); see also Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law, 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 532 n.78 (1986)].

[3] When Trustee Is Attorney

A trustee who is also the attorney for the trustee generally may not receive dual compensation. The Trust Law provides that a trustee who is also an attorney may receive only the trustee's compensation provided in the trust instrument (or otherwise provided for in the Trust Law) or compensation for legal services performed for the trustee, but not both [Prob. Code § 15687(a)]. Similarly, no parent, child, sibling, or a spouse of a person who is a trustee, and no law partnership or corporation whose partner, shareholder, or employee is serving as a trustee is permitted to receive any compensation for legal services performed for the trustee unless the trustee waives compensation or unless the trustee obtains approval for the right to dual compensation as specified below [Prob. Code § 15687(a)]. However, the rules prohibiting dual compensation do not apply if the trustee is related by blood or marriage to, or is a cohabitant with, the settlor [Prob. Code § 15786(c)]. These rules apply only to services rendered on or after January 1, 1994 [Prob. Code § 15687(f)].

Any waiver of these provisions is contrary to public policy and void [Prob. Code § 15687(e)]. Thus, dual compensation may not be assured simply by providing in the trust instrument that the attorney-trustee will be entitled to dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(a)] or by waiving the rule against dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(e)]. However, dual compensation may be received if, after full disclosure of the nature of the compensation and the relationship of the trustee to all persons receiving compensation, the court approves the compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(a), (d)(1); see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(21)]. It may also be received if the trustee gives 30 days advance notice to the beneficiaries and any other persons entitled to notice [see Prob. Code § 17203]. During that period, the persons receiving the notice may object to the dual compensation by giving the trustee written notice or by filing a petition asking the court to disapprove the dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(d)(2)]. If the trustee receives an objection during the 30-day period and still wishes to receive dual compensation, the trustee must file a petition for court approval of the compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(d)(2); see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(21)].

[4] Apportionment Among Cotrustees

Unless the trust instrument provides or cotrustees agree otherwise, if the trust has two or more trustees, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services rendered by them [Prob. Code § 15683; for further discussion of the compensation of cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.31[2]].

[5] Effect of Breach of Trust

If a trustee commits (or threatens to commit) a breach of trust, the trustee's compensation, on application of a beneficiary or cotrustee, may be reduced or denied entirely [Prob. Code § 16420(a)(7)]. It is generally within the court's discretion to determine whether a trustee who has committed a breach of trust is entitled to receive compensation and, if so, how much [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 243, comment c]. In exercising its discretion, the court will consider the following [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 243, comment c]:

- Whether or not the trustee acted in good faith.
- Whether the breach was intentional, negligent, or without fault.
- Whether the breach related to the management of the whole trust or only a part.
- Whether the breach occasioned any loss and whether the loss has been made good.
- Whether the trustee's services, notwithstanding the breach, were of value to the trust.

For a general discussion of the duties and obligations of trustees, see discussions in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.39[1] et seq.

[6] Court's Power to Order Periodic Payments

The court may fix an amount of periodic compensation under Prob. Code §§ 15680 and 15681 [see § 64B.35[1], [2]] to continue for as long as the court determines is proper [Prob. Code § 15682]. Additionally, a court has the authority to order the beneficiaries of a trust to pay attorney fees incurred by the trustee in completing and defending an accounting prior to completion of a trust accounting [ Kasperbauer v. Fairfield, (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 785, 795 ; 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 494] .

[7] Reimbursement of Expenditures

In addition to compensation, a trustee is entitled to repayment out of the trust property for expenditures that were properly incurred in the administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 15684(a)]. Even if the expenditures were not properly incurred in the administration of the trust, the trustee is entitled to repayment out of the trust property if and to the extent that the expenditures actually benefited the trust [Prob. Code § 15684(b)].

If litigation is necessary to preserve the trust, the trustee is entitled to reimbursement for his or her expenditures from the trust. However, if the litigation is specifically for the trustee's benefit, the trustee must bear his or her own costs, and is not entitled to reimbursement [ Terry v. Conlan (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1461, 1464, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 (trustee who did not participate in litigation as neutral trustee to defend trust and protect its assets, but rather to pursue her own interests and those of her siblings to detriment of other beneficiary, was required to bear her own costs)]. If the litigation does not involve a challenge to the existence of the trust, but is a dispute over who will control and benefit from it, the trustee is not entitled to reimbursement because no matter who prevails in the litigation, the trust will remain intact, and the trustee's only participation in the litigation should be that of a neutral party [ Terry v. Conlan (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1461, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603] .

[8] Equitable Lien

A trustee who has made advances for the protection of the trust has an equitable lien on the trust property to secure repayment of those advances, plus interest [Prob. Code § 15685, see Kasperbauer v. Fairfield, (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 785, 795 ; 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 494 (trustee had right to indemnification for expenses reasonably incurred in defending accounting)]. An "equitable lien" is a right to have specific property applied in whole or in part to payment of a particular debt or class of debts [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), 483]. It differs from a "legal lien" in that it is not good as against a transferee of trust property who gives fair consideration for the property without knowledge of the lien [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 244, comment c; see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law", 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 535, 656 (1986)]. The effect of the lien is to give the trustee a security interest in the trust property and to relieve the trustee of any obligation to transfer the trust property to the beneficiary (or to a transferee of the beneficiary) until the trustee is paid, or until the trustee's right to payment is otherwise secured [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 244, comment c]. In addition to the lien for repayment of advances, the trustee has an equitable lien for payment of expenses, losses, and liabilities sustained in the administration of the trust or because of ownership or control of any trust property [Prob. Code § 15685].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.36

§ 64B.36 Bonds

There is no general requirement that the trustee of a California trust post a bond. The Trust Law [Prob. Code §§ 15000-18201] provides that a trustee is not required to give a bond to secure performance of the trustee's duties unless any of the circumstances specified in Prob. Code § 15602(a) occur. Thus, a bond will be required only if:

- The trust instrument requires a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(1)];
- The court finds a bond to be necessary to protect the interests of the beneficiaries or other persons having an interest in the trust (notwithstanding the trust instrument waives the bond) [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(2)]; or
- An individual who is not named as a trustee in the trust instrument is appointed as a trustee by the court [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3)].

The court may excuse the requirement of a bond, reduce or increase the amount of the bond, release a surety, or permit the substitution of another bond with the same or different sureties [Prob. Code § 15602(b)]. However, the court may not excuse the requirement of a bond for an individual who is not named as a trustee in the trust instrument that the court appoints as trustee, except under compelling circumstances. A request by all of the adult beneficiaries of a trust that the bond be waived for this individual constitutes a compelling circumstance [Prob. Code § 15602(b)].

Whether or not the trust instrument requires a bond, a trust company [see Fin. Code § 107; Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined); see also discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.30[3]] may not be required to give a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(e)].

There is no special requirement that an out-of-state trustee post bond, and no appellate cases impose such a requirement. Thus, the criteria specified in Prob. Code § 15602 will govern the court's determination of whether or not to require a bond from an out-of-state trustee.

If a bond is required, it must be in the amount and with the sureties and liabilities ordered by the court [Prob. Code §

15602(c)]. Except as otherwise provided in the trust instrument or ordered by the court, the cost of the bond is a charge against the trust [Prob. Code § 15602(d)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.37

§ 64B.37 Exculpatory Clauses

[1] In General

Under specified circumstances, a trustee may be liable to the beneficiaries for the acts or omissions of agents [see Prob. Code § 16401], for breaches committed by cotrustees [see Prob. Code § 16402], or for the acts or omissions of predecessor trustees [see Prob. Code § 16403]. Trust instruments sometimes include provisions intended to limit trustees' liability for breach of trust or to excuse trustees from some liability that the law imposes on them. These provisions are commonly referred to as "exculpatory clauses."

Under the Trust Law, a trust provision relieving the trustee of liability for breach of trust will be effective for that purpose unless the breach was committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference to the interests of the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(1)]; or unless the breach resulted in a profit to the trustee [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(2)]. The rule rendering exculpatory clauses ineffective to relieve a trustee of liability for any profit that the trustee may have derived from a breach is founded in the public policy rule that a trustee should never profit from a breach of trust [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 222, comments b and c; see also "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 715 (1986)].

[2] Provision Releasing Trustee from Liability for Account or Other Written Report if Beneficiary Fails to Object Within Specified Period

A provision in a trust instrument that releases the trustee from liability if a beneficiary fails to object to an item in an interim or final account or other written report within a specified time period is effective only if all of the following conditions are met [Prob. Code § 16461(c)]:

- The account or report sets forth the item.
- The period specified in the trust instrument for the beneficiary to object is not less than 180 days.
- Written notice in 12-point boldface type is provided to the beneficiary with the account or report in the following form:

NOTICE TO BENEFICIARIES

YOU HAVE _____ [180 days or the period specified in the trust instrument, whichever is longer] FROM THE RECEIPT OF THIS ACCOUNT OR REPORT TO MAKE AN OBJECTION TO ANY ITEM SET FORTH IN THIS ACCOUNT OR REPORT. ANY OBJECTION YOU MAKE MUST BE IN WRITING; IT MUST BE DELIVERED TO THE TRUSTEE WITHIN THE PERIOD STATED ABOVE; AND IT MUST STATE YOUR OBJECTION. YOUR FAILURE TO DELIVER A WRITTEN OBJECTION TO THE TRUSTEE WITHIN THE PERIOD STATED ABOVE WILL PERMANENTLY PREVENT YOU FROM LATER ASSERTING THIS OBJECTION AGAINST THE TRUSTEE. IF YOU DO MAKE AN OBJECTION TO THE TRUSTEE, THE THREE-YEAR PERIOD PROVIDED IN SECTION 16460 OF THE PROBATE CODE FOR COMMENCEMENT OF LITIGATION WILL APPLY TO CLAIMS BASED ON YOUR OBJECTION AND WILL BEGIN TO RUN ON THE DATE THAT YOU RECEIVE THIS ACCOUNT OR REPORT.

A provision in a trust instrument that provides for a period of less than 180 days to object to an item in an account or report is ineffective to release the trustee from liability. However, a trustee of a trust created by an instrument with an ineffective period may elect to be governed by Prob. Code § 16461(c), except that "180 days" must be substituted in the notice form above for the ineffective period [Prob. Code § 16461(d)].

A beneficiary who fails to object in writing to an account or report that complies with the above requirements within the specified valid period is barred from asserting any claim against the trustee regarding an item that is adequately disclosed in the account or report. An item is "adequately disclosed" if it provides sufficient information so that the beneficiary knows of the claim or reasonably should have inquired into the existence of the claim [Prob. Code § 16461(e); see Prob. Code § 16460(a)(1)].

The trustee is not released from liability as to any claim based on a written objection made by a beneficiary, if the objection is delivered to the trustee within the specified effective period. If a beneficiary files a written objection to an account or report that complies with the requirements of Prob. Code § 16461(c) within the specified, valid period that concerns an item that affects any other beneficiary of the trust, any affected beneficiary may join in the objection anytime within the specified, valid period or while resolution of the objection is pending, whichever is later [Prob. Code § 16461(f)]. This provision is not intended to establish a class of beneficiaries for actions on an account and report, or to provide that the action of one beneficiary is for the benefit of all beneficiaries. It does not create a duty for any trustee to notify beneficiaries of objections or resolution of objections [Prob. Code § 16461(f)].

When a beneficiary has filed a written objection to an account or report that complies with the requirements of Prob. Code § 16461(c) within the specified, valid period, a supplemental written objection may be delivered in the same manner as the objection not later than 180 days after receipt of the account or report, or no later than the period specified in the trust instrument, whichever is longer [Prob. Code § 16461(g)]. If proper notice has been given and a beneficiary has not made a timely objection, the trustee is not liable for any other claims adequately disclosed by any item in the account or report [Prob. Code § 16461(i)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.38

§ 64B.38 Choice of Law

[1] Conflict of Laws

If a trust has significant contacts with two or more states, it may be difficult to determine which state's law will govern questions relating to the validity of the trust, how the trust instrument should be interpreted or construed, and which state's courts will exercise administrative supervision over it. If a will is executed in California, for example, by a testator who dies while a resident of Arizona, and if the trust includes real property located in Illinois and personal property located in Arizona, the question arises whether the law of California, Arizona, or Illinois, or some combination of the laws of those states, will properly be applied to the trust. All questions of this kind must be determined in accordance with conflict of laws rules and statutes that relate to testamentary and inter vivos trusts.

Insofar as a trust consists of real property, the law of the situs of the property has traditionally been applied to determine all questions of validity [ Campbell--Kawannanakoia v. Campbell (1907) 152 Cal. 201, 206-207, 92 P. 184 ; see Hutchinson v. Hutchinson (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 12, 18-19, 119 P.2d 214] . Insofar as the trust consists of personal property, the law of the state having the most significant relationship to the trust is generally applied [Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), § 270(b)]. Whether the law of a particular state will or will not be applied to a question of validity is, however, a difficult question to answer, even under recognized conflict of law principles, for the courts have frequently been influenced by practical rather than theoretical considerations. One factor that may affect the resolution of such a question, for example, is whether the application of a particular law would or would not uphold the validity of the trust. Since the testator is presumed not to have intended that the trust be invalid, if the law of one state would validate the trust while that of another would invalidate it, the courts frequently choose to apply the law of the state that would uphold it [Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), § 270, Comment d].

[2] Testator's Direction

The intention of a testator as expressed in the will usually (although not always) governs the resolution of conflict of law questions relating to testamentary trusts. The general conflict of laws rule is that if a will contains a clear choice of law direction and if the direction can be effectuated without violating public policy, it will control the determination of all conflict of law questions, except those relating to the validity of the will or the trust [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. V, § 555; see Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), §§ 268(1), 269(b)(i), 271(a), 273(a), 275, 277(1)]. With respect to the validity of the trust, the intention of the testator is a significant although not always controlling factor, since various and sometimes contradictory conflict of law principles must be applied to any question of the validity of a will or of a trust.

[3] California Statutes

In California, two statutes govern the resolution of conflict of laws questions relating to wills, including wills that establish trusts. Prob. Code § 6113 specifies a choice of law rule relating to the validity of wills, and Prob. Code § 21103 specifies a choice of law rule relating to the interpretation of wills.

Prob. Code § 6113 provides that a written will is valid if its execution complies with any of the following [Prob. Code § 6113]:

- Prob. Code § 6110 (relating to the execution of witnessed wills [see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, §§ 63.710[1]-63.712[1] and 63.730[1]-63.732[1]]);
- Prob. Code § 6111 (relating to holographic wills);
- Prob. Code §§ 6380-6390 (relating to the execution of international wills [see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.750[1]]);
- The law at the time of execution of the place in which the will is executed; or
- The law of the place in which at the time of execution or at the time of death the testator is domiciled, has a place of abode, or is a national.

Prob. Code § 6113 applies whether or not the will was executed in California ["Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession," 16 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 2302, 2397 (1982)]. The statute is based on Uniform Probate Code § 2-506 ["Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession," 16 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 2302, 2397 (1982)]. Following the example of the Uniform Probate Code, Prob. Code § 6113 permits the probate in California of certain wills executed outside the state. Such wills must be in writing, but otherwise are valid if they meet the requirements for execution of the law of the place in which the will is executed (when it is executed in another state or country) or the law of the testator's domicile, abode, or nationality at either the time of execution or at the time of death [Comment to Uniform Probate Code § 2-506, Uniform Probate Code, Official 1982 Text with Comments, pp. 57-58 (6th ed., West Publishing Co., 1982)].

Prob. Code § 21103 provides that the meaning and legal effect (i.e., the interpretation or construction) of a disposition in a will must be determined by the local law of a particular state selected by the testator in the will, unless the application of that law would be contrary to any of the following:

- The rights of the surviving spouse in community and quasi-community property;
- Any other public policy of California otherwise applicable to the disposition; or
- The family protection provisions of the Probate Code [see Prob. Code § 6500 et seq.].

This statute is based on Uniform Probate Code Section 2-602 [see "Tentative Recommendation Relating to Wills and Intestate Succession," 16 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 2302, 2400 (1982) (discussing former Prob. Code § 6141, the predecessor to Prob. Code § 21103)]. Following the example of the Uniform Probate Code, Prob. Code § 21103 permits a testator to select the law of a particular state for purposes of interpreting the will, without regard to the location of the property covered by the will, and requires the courts to accept the designation unless it is contrary to public policy [Comment to Uniform Probate Code § 2-602, Uniform Probate Code, Official 1982 Text with Comments, p. 64 (6th ed., West Publishing Co., 1982)].

For further discussion of choice-of-law designations in wills, see § 64B.331[1].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.39

§ 64B.39 Judicial Supervision

Under the Trust Law, most California trusts are not subject to the continuing supervision of the superior court. Only trusts created by wills executed before July 1, 1977 (and not incorporated by reference in a will on or after July 1, 1977) [Prob. Code § 17300(a)], and trusts created by wills which expressly provide that they will be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court [Prob. Code § 17300(b)] are subject to the continuing supervision of the court in which the decedent's estate was administered [Prob. Code § 16301; but see Prob. Code §§ 17350-17354 (procedure for removing trust from continuing supervision)].

To require continuing jurisdiction, a will must clearly express the testator's intent that the trust be supervised by the court [ Estate of Goddard (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 340, 344, 203 Cal. Rptr. 623 (decided under former Prob. Code § 1120(a), repealed eff. July 1, 1987)]. A standard clause to the effect that the trustee "shall receive reasonable compensation to be fixed by the Court for its services" is not, in itself, sufficient to require continuing jurisdiction [ Estate of Goddard (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 340, 343-344, 203 Cal. Rptr. 623 ].

Trusts that are subject to continuing supervision are governed by the provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17300-17354. If the trust is an inter vivos trust, or if the trust is a testamentary trust created after July 1, 1977, and the will creating it does not provide that it will be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court, then the trust is subject to the "intermittent intervention" (or "disputed-related") provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210 [see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 577 ("intermittent intervention scheme" discussed)].

The principal difference between the continuing jurisdiction provided for in Prob. Code §§ 17300-17304 and the "intermittent intervention" (or "dispute-related") provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210 is that the latter are invoked only when one of the persons interested in the trust petitions the court for an order. In the absence of such a petition, the court exercises no supervision over the trust.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.100

§ 64B.100 Determination of Principal and Income

1. Should will adopt all provisions of Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375]?

NOTE:

The Act is a comprehensive statute that includes rules for the determination of most questions of principal and income, including rules governing the allocation to principal or income of specific receipts and expenses. For a general introduction to the Act, see § 64B.31[1] et seq. For discussions of specific rules embodied in the Act, see §§ 64B.203[1]-64B.211[1].

a. Provisions of Act will adequately serve needs of most trusts.

b. Requiring trustee to conform to ascertainable standards of Act may help to avoid uncertainties and disputes among persons interested in trust.

NOTE:

If the will adopts the Act, the trustee and other persons interested in the trust may rely on the legislative history and judicial interpretation of the Act to determine its application to specific receipts or expenses.

c. Requiring trustee to conform to rules of Act may avoid unfavorable tax consequences of broad grant of discretion.

NOTE:

Unfavorable income or estate tax consequences may result if (1) the trustee has broad power to allocate receipts or disbursements to principal or income and the power is not subject to reasonable limitations, or (2) a trustee who is also a beneficiary possesses a broad power to allocate principal or income. This is because property subject to a general power of appointment is subject to estate tax in the estate of the person who holds the power [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2)], and a broad power to shift the beneficial enjoyment of the trust may be deemed a general power of appointment for this purpose [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1)]. Further, a trust interest intended to qualify for the marital deduction as a life estate plus power of appointment or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust may fail to qualify for the deduction if the surviving spouse does not have the right to receive all of the income from the trust (or a portion of the trust) payable at least annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)]. For a general discussion of the tax implications of broad trustee discretion to determine questions of principal and income, see § 64B.200[1][c][i] et seq.

d. Will provision adopting Act is not necessary to its application.

NOTE:

The provisions of the Act will apply to the trust in absence of any contrary terms of the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(3)].

2. Should will contain any provisions expanding or restricting Act's rules governing allocation of receipts or expenditures to principal or income?

NOTE:

The trust may vary the rules of the Act in whole or in part [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. The testator may prescribe a comprehensive set of rules for the determination of principal and income questions or, depending on the needs of the trust and the beneficiaries, establish rules for specific principal and income problems only.

a. Should will grant trustee broad discretion to allocate receipts and expenditures to principal or income?

(1) Broad discretion will give trustee flexibility to meet unanticipated needs of income and remainder beneficiaries as and when needs arise.

(2) Since broad discretion will enable trustee to shift benefits of trust, it should not be granted if trustee is also beneficiary.

NOTE:

If a trustee who is also a beneficiary possesses a broad power to allocate receipts or disbursements to principal or income, the power may cause the trust corpus to be included in the trustee-beneficiary's estate [see I.R.C. § 2041(a); see also §§ 64B.200[1][c][ii], 64B.201[1][d]].

(3) Since broad discretion may interfere with right of surviving spouse to receive all income of trust, it should not be granted if trust is designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment trust or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust.

NOTE:

A broad power to allocate receipts or disbursements to principal or income may disqualify the trust for the estate tax marital deduction. The trust instrument must give the surviving spouse substantially the degree of beneficial enjoyment of trust property during his or her life that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(1)]. The rules to be applied by the trustee in allocating receipts and expenses between income and corpus must be considered in relation to the nature and expected productivity of the trust assets, the nature and frequency of occurrence of the expected receipts, and any provisions as to change in the form of investments [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(3)]. For general discussion of the marital deduction, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions .

b. Should will permit, require, or forbid trustee to establish reserve for depreciation?

NOTE:

A reserve for depreciation is an account used to recover the cost of an asset by writing off a portion of the cost over the life of the asset, or by some other acceptable method [Black's Law Dictionary 1308 (6th ed. 1990)].

(1) Provision either requiring or forbidding trustee to establish reserve for depreciation will limit trustee's discretion and may avoid unfavorable tax consequences of broad discretion.

NOTE:

If the trustee has unlimited discretion to establish or not to establish a reserve for depreciation, the trustee's power may be deemed a general power of appointment and subject the appointive assets to federal estate tax in the estate of the trustee [see §§ 64B.200[1][c][i], [ii], and 64B.203[1][b][ii]].

(2) Trustee is not required to set aside reserve for depreciation unless required by will [Prob. Code § 16372].

(3) Unless will provides otherwise, trustee has discretion to establish reserve for depreciation.

NOTE:

The Act does not prohibit a trustee from establishing (or from maintaining a previously established) reserve for depreciation [Prob. Code § 16372].

(4) Requiring reserve for depreciation will serve interests of remainder beneficiaries by requiring trustee to preserve trust principal [see § 64B.203[1][b][i]].

(5) Failure or refusal to establish reserve will favor interests of income beneficiaries by giving them benefits of income from depreciable property without requiring that portion of income be withheld and allocated to depreciation reserve.

c. Should will require trustee to allocate receipts from natural resources, including timber and other depreciating or "liquidating" assets, according to a formula?

(1) Act sets forth rules for allocation to principal and income of receipts from natural resources [see § 64B.204[1][b]].

(2) Will may limit trustee's discretion by prescribing specific rules favoring either income or remainder beneficiaries.

d. Should will authorize trustee to purchase bonds at premiums and either require that premiums be amortized or provide that amortization is not required?

NOTE:

The Act permits the trustee to purchase bonds at premiums but prohibits the trustee from amortizing the premiums [Prob. Code § 16357(a)]. The will may either require amortization or provide that amortization is not required [see discussion § 64B.205[1][b][i]].

(1) If trustee purchases bonds at premiums and does not amortize, principal will be impaired.

NOTE:

When a bond is purchased at a premium, the face value is less than the principal used to acquire it. If no provision is made to amortize the premium (i.e., set aside a portion of the interest earned by the bond and allocate it to a principal account), the income beneficiaries will benefit at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries.

(2) Provision requiring amortization will serve interests of remainder beneficiaries by insuring preservation of principal.

(3) Provision requiring amortization will protect trustee against any charge that, by purchasing bonds at premium, trustee is improperly impairing principal of trust.

(4) Provision absolving trustee who is also beneficiary of duty to amortize bond premiums will give trustee power to shift benefits of trust with possible adverse tax consequences.

NOTE:

If the trustee is also a beneficiary of the trust, any property over which the beneficiary has a general power of appointment (or the equivalent of a general power of appointment) will be included in the beneficiary's estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2041(a); see §§ 64B.200[1][c][ii] and 64B.205[1][b][iii]].

e. Should will authorize trustee to purchase bonds at discount and either require trustee to accumulate discounts to interest or provide that accumulation is not required?

NOTE:

The Act permits the trustee to purchase bonds at discounts, and requires a total accumulation occurs when the bonds are redeemed within one year of purchase, and no accumulation occurs when the bonds are held for a longer period [Prob. Code § 16357].

(1) Will may provide that, if bonds are purchased at discount, discounts either must or may not be accumulated and distributed as income to beneficiaries.

NOTE:

When bonds are purchased at a discount, remainder beneficiaries benefit and income beneficiaries suffer unless some provision is made for accumulation to income.

(2) If testator wishes to favor remainder beneficiaries, will may provide that trustee need not accumulate bond discounts.

(3) If trust is designed to qualify for marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, will should require accumulation, as right of surviving spouse to receive all income should not be disturbed [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2); see § 64.211].

f. Should will provide that income earned during administration of testator's estate will be treated as principal?

NOTE:

Unless the will provides otherwise, income earned during administration of a testator's estate by property subject to a testamentary trust may have to be distributed to the testamentary trustee and not made available for use by the executor [see Prob. Code §§ 16340, 16341; see also Prob. Code §§ 12000-12007 (rules governing entitlement to interest and income during administration); for detailed consideration of right to income from devised property during administration of testator's estate, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.532[1]]. If the assets of the trust are the principal assets of the estate, depriving the executor of the use of the income earned by assets during administration may unnecessarily impede the administration of the estate. The will may, however, avoid this potential problem by providing that income earned by the testator's estate during administration will be treated as principal and thus be available for the executor's use [see Prob. Code §§ 12000 (rules governing right to interest and income accruing during administration apply only when intention of testator not otherwise indicated by will), 16335(a) (rules applicable unless will provides otherwise); see also § 64B.207[1]].

g. Should will grant trustee discretion to apportion stock dividends and liquidating dividends or distributions between principal and income?

NOTE:

The Act requires the trustee to allocate distributions of shares of stock, including distributions in the form of stock splits and stock dividends, as well as liquidating dividends, to principal [Prob. Code § 16350; for a general discussion of the statutory rules relating to corporate distributions, see § 64B.208[1][b][i]]. Some corporations, however, issue stock or liquidating dividends over extended periods, while at the same time paying no ordinary dividends. Requiring the trustee to allocate such dividends to principal would adversely affect the interests of many beneficiaries. If it appears that the trust will include substantial holdings of securities that are likely to pay stock dividends or liquidating distributions without distributing ordinary cash dividends, the testator may choose to give the trustee discretion to allocate such dividends or distributions between principal and income.

h. Should will require trustee to allocate distributions from capital gains made by mutual funds or real estate investment trusts to income?

NOTE:

The Act requires the trustee to allocate distributions from ordinary income made by regulated investment companies (mutual funds) and qualified real estate investment trusts (REITs) to income. All other distributions from such companies or trusts, including distributions from capital gains, depreciation, or depletion, must be allocated to principal [Prob. Code § 16350; see § 64B.209[1][b][i]]. This rule may, however, be varied or negated by the will [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)].

(1) If trust assets will include mutual funds whose principal investment objectives are capital growth, statutory rule will favor remainder beneficiaries at expense of income beneficiaries.

NOTE:

Mutual funds whose principal investment objectives are capital growth commonly distribute capital gains that are many times larger than their ordinary income distributions. If the trust will include substantial holdings of the shares of such a fund, or if the trustee is authorized to invest in or retain the shares of such a fund, the testator may require the trustee to allocate all or part of the capital gains distributions to income.

(2) If trust is designed to qualify for marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment or QTIP trust, provision requiring trustee to allocate all or part of capital gains distributions to income may save deduction.

NOTE:

An interest passing in trust will not satisfy the requirement that the surviving spouse be entitled for life to all of the income from the trust payable annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)] if the primary purpose of the trust is to safeguard the trust property without providing the spouse with the required beneficial enjoyment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(5)]. However, the interest will qualify even if the trustee has the power to allocate or apportion receipts and disbursements between income and corpus, if the power to do so is subject to reasonable limitations [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. Requiring the trustee to allocate capital gains distributions to income may provide the surviving spouse with the requisite degree of enjoyment.

(3) If trust will not include substantial holdings of growth-oriented mutual funds, provision varying statutory rule will not be necessary.

i. Should will specify depreciation and accounting rules for any business or other activity that will be operated by the trustee for the trust?

NOTE:

A trustee who operates a business or other activity may account for that business or activity separate and apart from the trust's general accounting records [Prob. Code § 16352(a)]. Whether or not a trustee accounts for a business or other activity separately, there is discretion but no requirement for a depreciation reserve or particular accounting method [see Prob. Code §§ 16352(b), 16372]. The testator may wish to either require or forbid depreciation, and may prescribe the methods used for depreciation and accounting.

j. Should will establish rules for charging trustee's compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs to principal or income?

(1) Will may provide that all trustee compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs must be charged entirely to principal or entirely to income.

(2) Will may provide that all regular trustee compensation and all ordinary attorneys' fees and courts costs must be charged to income and all other compensation, fees, and costs to principal.

(3) Will may provide that attorneys' fees and courts costs will be charged to income for matters primarily concerning income and to principal for matters primarily concerning principal, with all other compensation, fees, and costs charged entirely to principal or entirely to income.

k. Should will include provision restricting or eliminating trustee's general power to make adjustments to income and principal under Prob. Code § 16336 [see § 64B.202].

NOTE:

The Uniform Principal and Income Act grants trustees the general discretionary power to make adjustments between principal and income, to the extent the trustee considers necessary, under specified circumstances [Prob. Code § 16336; for detailed discussion of this power, see § 64B.31[9] et seq.]. The statutory prerequisites for exercise of this power, coupled with the limitations on its exercise, appear to minimize the likelihood that trustees can apply it in a manner that would be inequitable to any of the trust beneficiaries. Nevertheless, circumstances may arise in which the attorney may deem it appropriate to restrict this power still further, or even eliminate it. When this is the case, any provision limiting this power should be carefully drafted and include a specific reference to Prob. Code § 16336(a), because the statute requires that any trust limiting the trustee's power to make adjustments between principal and income does not affect the trustee's power to make adjustments under Prob. Code § 16336 unless it is clear from the trust that it is intended to deny this power to the trustee [Prob. Code § 16336(f)].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.101

§ 64B.101 Declaration of Testator's Intention

1. Should will include statement of testator's intention to favor income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries?

NOTE:

Since the intention of the testator as expressed in the will controls the legal effect of all dispositions in the will [Prob. Code § 21102(a)], a statement of the testator's intentions to favor either the income beneficiaries or the remainder beneficiaries will be of help in interpreting and construing provisions of the will. If the words of the will are clear, the testator's intention will be derived solely from them [ Estate of Hill (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 812, 816, 29 Cal. Rptr. 814 ; see § 64B.230[1][b][iii]].

a. If trust gives trustee discretion with respect to investments, payments of income to income beneficiaries, determination of income and principal, or other matters, statement of testator's intentions to favor income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries may help trustee and court determine how discretion should be exercised.

b. If will gives trustee no discretion, statement of testator's intention to favor income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries is not necessary.

2. Will special tax needs of trust or of income or remainder beneficiaries be served by declaration of testator's intentions?

a. If trust is designed to qualify for federal estate tax marital deduction as lifetime income plus power of appointment or QTIP trust [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)], statement favoring income beneficiary may help to protect deduction [see discussion in § 64B.230[1][b][iii]]

].

b. If trust is charitable remainder annuity trust or charitable remainder unitrust, statement favoring income beneficiaries should not be included in will.

NOTE:

A remainder interest passing to a qualified charity is deductible for federal estate tax purposes only if it is a qualified charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust [I.R.C. § 2055(e)(2)(A)]. Payments to a noncharitable income beneficiary (e.g., a surviving spouse), under a charitable remainder annuity trust must be a sum certain [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A)], and payments to such a beneficiary under a charitable remainder unitrust must be a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the assets [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]; see § 64B.230[1][b][ii].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.102

§ 64B.102 Additions to Trust by Third Parties

1. Should will include provision either authorizing or prohibiting additions to trust from sources other than testator?

NOTE:

Unless the will provides otherwise, property devised to a previously created trust is not deemed to be held under a testamentary trust of the second testator but becomes part of the trust to which it is given and must be administered and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the first trust instrument or will, including any amendments to the first instrument or will made before or after the death of the second testator (regardless of whether the amendments were made before or after the execution of the second testator's will) [Prob. Code § 6300].

a. If it is likely that other members of testator's family will make additions to trust, will may include provision authorizing additions.

b. Additions to previously created trust will save time, inconvenience, and expense by obviating need for new trustee and new trust instrument.

c. Additions to previously created trust may effect long-term savings by making it possible to administer all of family's assets as single trust.

2. Will special tax needs of trust, income beneficiaries, or remainder beneficiaries be served by provision authorizing or prohibiting additions to trust?

NOTE:

Additions to a trust may have estate or generation-skipping transfer tax consequences. If the person making the addition retains the right to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property or its income (or if the person making the addition has such a right under terms of the first trust instrument), the property will be included in that person's estate for federal estate tax purposes [I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2); see discussion in § 64B.250[1][d]]. If the trust to which the assets are added distributes the assets (or income earned from those assets) to a beneficiary who is assigned to a generation that is two or more generations below that of the transferor, the transfer may trigger imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611, 2612; see also discussion in § 64B.250[1][e]].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.103

§ 64B.103 Vacancies in Trusteeship

1. Should will provide for filling vacancy in office of trustee or cotrustee?

NOTE:

Since an alternate or successor trustee will, upon taking office, exercise all of the powers and be subject to all of the duties and obligations of the original trustee, similar considerations should govern the selection of an alternate or successor trustee. For a general discussion of the legal qualifications of trustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.30 et seq. For a general examination of tax considerations in the selection of cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.32[1] et seq.

a. Will provision designating alternate or successor trustee or cotrustees will:

- (1) Avoid time, inconvenience, and expense of judicial proceedings for appointment of successor;
- (2) Save expense of bond premiums for successor; and

NOTE:

A court-appointed trustee is required to post a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3)], while there is no similar statutory requirement for a successor trustee appointed in the will. The court may not excuse the requirement of a bond for an individual who is not named as a trustee in the trust instrument that the court appoints as trustee, except under compelling circumstances. A request by all of the adult beneficiaries of a trust that the bond be waived for this individual constitutes a compelling circumstance [Prob. Code § 15602(b)].

(3) Insure that person or corporation acceptable to testator will serve as alternate or successor trustee or cotrustee.

b. If will makes no provision for filling vacancy, court may appoint trustee.

NOTE:

If the will specifies a practical method for filling a vacancy (or if it names a person to fill the vacancy), the vacancy must be filled as provided in the will [Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. If the will makes no provision for filling the vacancy, all of the adult beneficiaries may agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company [Prob. Code § 15660(c); see Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined)]. If the adult beneficiaries do not agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company, the court may appoint a trustee to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)].

2. Should will provide for alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees?

a. Will may provide for vacancy by:

(1) Appointing successor trustee by name;

(2) Authorizing designated trustee or cotrustee to name successor; or

(3) Providing that powers of cotrustee who dies or resigns may be exercised by remaining cotrustees.

NOTE:

Unless otherwise provided in the trust instrument, if a vacancy occurs in the office of a cotrustee, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust as if they were the only trustees [Prob. Code § 15621; see § 64B.272[1]].

b. Since trust may continue for many years, testator should designate alternate and successor trustees who will be able and willing to serve over full life of trust.

c. Corporate trustee may be suitable successor, since it will normally continue in existence well beyond lifetimes of natural persons interested in trust.

d. Even when corporate trustee is original trustee, will should designate successor, as corporate trustee may decline to serve or resign office [see discussions in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.30[3] et seq.].

e. Original trustee named in will should be empowered to name successor if:

(1) Testator reposes confidence in judgment and integrity of original trustee; or

(2) Testator believes it is preferable to postpone selection of successor until later time and believes original trustee will make wise selection.

NOTE:

A power in a trustee to designate a successor does not constitute an impermissible delegation of the powers of the trust [ Estate of Kessler (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 383, 388, 261 P.2d 27 ; see discussion in § 64B.271[1][b]].

f. Will may provide that power of cotrustee who is unable or unwilling to act will survive to remaining cotrustees, if testator either:

NOTE:

Since the powers of a cotrustee who dies or resigns will pass to the surviving cotrustees in the absence of will provision [Prob. Code § 15621], such a provision is not necessary. Nevertheless, it may still be useful to apprise those concerned with trust that the cotrustee's powers will survive.

- (1) Is unwilling to appoint successor in will or to empower trustee or cotrustee to name successor; or
- (2) Believes duties of trust can be successfully exercised by survivors.

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.104

§ 64B.104 Compensation of Trustees

1. Should will provide for compensation of trustee?

a. Will provision will control determination of all ordinary, but not extraordinary, compensation.

NOTE:

If the trust instrument provides for the trustee's compensation, the trustee is entitled to be compensated in accordance with the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15680(a)]. However, the court may fix or allow greater or lesser compensation if the duties of the trustee are substantially different than those contemplated when the trust was created, if compensation in accordance with the terms of the trust would be inequitable or unreasonably low or high, or if other extraordinary circumstances call for equitable relief [Prob. Code § 15680(b)]. Any order fixing or allowing greater or lesser compensation will apply only prospectively to actions taken in administration of the trust after the order is made [Prob. Code § 15680(c)]. Further, a trustee who is an attorney is not entitled to dual compensation as trustee and as attorney for the trustee unless prior court approval is obtained for the arrangement [see Prob. Code § 15687]. For further discussion of trustee compensation, see § 64B.290[1].

b. If will makes no provision for compensation, trustee and cotrustees are entitled to reasonable compensation to be determined by court.

2. If will provides for compensation of trustees or cotrustees, what provision should be made?

a. Will may provide that trustee or cotrustees will receive:

- (1) Fixed amount as compensation;
- (2) Percentage of corpus as compensation; or
- (3) Reasonable compensation.

b. If there are cotrustees, will may provide that:

- (1) Corporate cotrustee (if any) will be compensated as if it were sole trustee and individual cotrustee will receive no compensation, or merely nominal compensation; or
- (2) Compensation will be divided between corporation and individual cotrustees according to formula.

NOTE:

Unless the trust instrument provides (or the cotrustees agree) otherwise, when there are two or more cotrustees, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services they have rendered [Prob. Code § 15683].

c. As alternative to compensation, will may provide bequest in lieu of compensation.

NOTE:

If the will makes a bequest to a person who is also appointed as trustee, it is a question of interpretation whether the bequest is intended to be in addition to or in lieu of the trustee's regular compensation [see discussion in § 64B.295[1][b]].

Tax considerations may affect a testator's decision to provide compensation for a trustee or to make a bequest to the trustee in lieu of compensation. A sum received as a bequest will be free of federal income taxation [I.R.C. § 102(a)] but subject to estate taxation [see I.R.C. § 2031], while trustee compensation is subject to income tax [see I.R.C. § 61(a)(1) (gross income defined)]. For discussion, see § 64B.295[1][c].

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.105

§ 64B.105 Bonds and Exculpatory Clauses

1. Should will include provision waiving bond of trustee or cotrustees?

a. If trustee is appointed in will, waiver may not be necessary.

NOTE:

Bonds usually are not required if the trustee is named in the will. A bond will be required of a trustee named in the will only if the will requires a bond, the court finds a bond is necessary to protect the interests of the beneficiaries or other persons having an interest in the trust (even though it is waived in the will), or an individual who is named as a trustee in the will is appointed as a trustee by the court [Prob. Code § 15602(a)].

The court may excuse the requirement of a bond, reduce or increase the amount of the bond, release a surety, or permit the substitution of another bond with the same or different sureties [Prob. Code § 15602(b)]. However, the court may not excuse the requirement of a bond for an individual who is not named as a trustee in the trust instrument that the court appoints as trustee, except under compelling circumstances. A request by all of the adult beneficiaries of a trust that the bond be waived for this individual constitutes a compelling circumstance [Prob. Code § 15602(b)]. For further discussion of trustee bonds, see § 64B.310[1].

b. Bond will not be required of trust company.

NOTE:

A trust company is never required to give a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(e); see § 64B.310[1]].

c. Will should waive bond only when testator has confidence in honesty, integrity, and competence of proposed trustee or cotrustees.

d. Will provision waiving bond will save expense of annual bond premiums.

NOTE:

Except as otherwise provided in the trust instrument or ordered by the court, the cost of a bond will be charged against the trust [Prob. Code § 15602(d)].

2. Should will include exculpatory provisions?

a. Ordinarily, trustee will be liable for:

(1) Violation of any duty that trustee owes to beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16400];

(2) Act or omission of agent employed by trustee in administration of trust, if act or omission would be breach of trust if committed by trustee personally and if [Prob. Code § 16401(b)]:

(a) Trustee directs act of agent;

(b) Trustee delegates to agent authority to perform act that trustee is under duty not to delegate;

NOTE:

A trustee has a duty not to delegate to others the performance of acts that the trustee can reasonably be required to perform personally [Prob. Code § 16012(a)].

(c) Trustee does not use reasonable prudence in selection or retention of agent;

(d) Trustee does not periodically review agent's overall performance and compliance with terms of delegation;

(e) Trustee conceals act of agent; or

(f) Trustee neglects to take reasonable steps to compel agent to redress wrong when trustee knows of agent's acts or omissions.

b. Exculpatory provision in will may relieve trustee of liability:

(1) To trust or trust beneficiaries but not to third parties;

NOTE:

Since exculpatory provisions are effective to relieve trustees of liability for breach of trust only [see Prob. Code § 16461(a)], and since a breach of trust consists of a violation of a duty that the trustee owes to a beneficiary and not to a third party [Prob. Code § 16400], an exculpatory provision will be ineffective to relieve the trustee of any liability the trustee may have to a third party [see discussion in § 64B.311[1][c]].

(2) If act or omission was not intentional, in bad faith, grossly negligent, or recklessly indifferent to interests of beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(1)]; and

(3) If trustee did not profit from act or omission [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(2)].

c. Exculpation of corporate trustee is usually unnecessary.

NOTE:

Since corporate trustees (banks and trust companies) hold themselves out as professional trustees, they should be prepared to accept the risks of liability for breach of fiduciary duties. Accordingly, there is little reason to relieve them of liability.

d. Relieving trustee of liability for good faith reliance on advice of attorneys and other advisers is usually advisable.

NOTE:

A fiduciary who is not an attorney would normally be derelict if he or she did not employ the services of an attorney, and a fiduciary who exercises reasonable care in selecting an attorney will not be absolutely bound by the attorney's dereliction, but is only required to act with the degree of prudence and diligence with which a person of ordinary judgment would be expected to act when conducting his or her own affairs of a like nature [ Estate of Barbikas (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 452, 459, 341 P.2d 32 ; see § 64B.311[1]].

e. Prospective trustee or cotrustee may require reasonable protection from liability before accepting trust.

NOTE:

Since any person named as trustee may reject the trust [Prob. Code § 15601] or resign the office [Prob. Code § 15640], capable potential trustees may refuse to serve unless they are protected against claims arising out of their acts or omissions.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE

A. Preliminary Determinations for Operational Provisions of Testamentary Trust

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.106

§ 64B.106 Administration

1. Should will include provision empowering beneficiary to move place of trust administration by changing trustee?

a. Provision authorizing beneficiary to move place of administration will be desirable if:
(1) Principal beneficiary may at future time move to some place distant from residence or office of trustee; and

(2) Frequent contact between principal beneficiary and trustee is necessary because:
(a) Trustee has discretionary powers that affect distribution of principal or income and that require personal knowledge of beneficiary's needs;

(b) Principal beneficiary is cotrustee of trust;

(c) Will requires trustee to consult with principal beneficiary; or

(d) Other requirements of trust necessitate frequent consultations between principal beneficiary and trustee.

b. Provision authorizing beneficiary to move place of trust administration will be undesirable if:

(1) There are multiple beneficiaries whose interests are approximately equivalent and no chief beneficiary whose interests predominate; or

(2) Testator wishes particular attorney or firm of attorneys to act as attorney for trustee, regardless of beneficiary's place of residence.

NOTE:

If the principal beneficiary's new residence is distant from the office of the attorney for the trustee, it may be impossible or difficult for the attorney to continue to represent the trustee after a change of the place of administration. Further, a new trustee in a new place of administration will have the right to select a new attorney, since every fiduciary has the right to select his or her own attorney [ Highfield v. Bozio (1922) 188 Cal. 727, 728, 207 P. 242 ; Estate of Ogier (1894) 101 Cal. 381, 385-386, 35 P. 900] .

c. Moving place of administration within California will be unnecessary if sole trustee will be corporate trustee having other offices near principal beneficiary's new residence.

NOTE:

Many trust companies and other qualified corporate trustees have offices throughout California. If the principal beneficiary's new residence is within the state, the office in charge of the trust may be changed without changing the trustee.

2. Should will include choice of law provision?

a. If trust has no significant contacts with states other than California, choice of law provision will probably be unnecessary.

b. If will has significant contacts with other states or countries, testator should decide whether choice of law provision will be useful.

(1) Selection of law that will govern meaning and legal effect of dispositions made by will will be given effect by courts.

NOTE:

The meaning and legal effect of a disposition in a will must be determined by the local law of a particular state selected by the testator in the will, unless the application of that law would be contrary to: (1) the rights of the surviving spouse to community and quasi-community property; (2) any other public policy of California; or (3) the family protection provisions of the Probate Code [Prob. Code § 21103; see Prob. Code §§ 6500-6615 (family protection provisions); see also discussion in § 64B.331[1][b][iii]].

(2) Selection of law that will govern validity of will or trust will probably not be given effect by courts.

NOTE:

California law prescribes the conditions under which a written will is valid, and does not authorize the testator to select the law that will determine validity. A written will is valid if its execution complies with: (1) California law relating to witnessed wills; (2) California law relating to holographic wills; (3) California law relating to international wills; or (4) the law of the place where, at the time of execution or at the time of death, the testator is domiciled, has a place of abode, or is a national [Prob. Code § 6113; see discussion in § 64B.331[1][b][iii]].

c. Choice of law provision may be advisable if:

(1) Testator and will drafter know provision of law of particular jurisdiction that will vitally affect trust or its administration;

(2) Testator and will drafter believe that choice of law provision will head off difficult, time-consuming, and costly conflict of laws disputes among persons interested in trust; or

(3) Testator and will drafter believe that choice of law provision will promote smooth and efficient administration of trust by clearly apprising persons interested in trust of law that will be applicable to questions of construction and administration.

d. If choice of law provision is included in will, testator may limit choice to law:

(1) As of time of execution of will;

(2) As of time of death; or

(3) Otherwise.

NOTE:

The law of the designated state may change after the will is executed. To prepare for this possibility, the choice of law provision may be limited to the law at the time of execution of the will, at the time of the testator's death, or otherwise. But this may make it difficult to accurately determine the applicable law when, at some time in the future, a conflict of law question arises.

e. Choice of law provision will generally be inadvisable if neither testator nor will drafter knows any particular provision of law that will affect meaning or legal effect of dispositions of will or provisions of trust.

f. Choice of law provision may deprive courts of flexibility to fashion appropriate solutions to choice of law problems that neither testator nor will drafter can foresee at time will is executed.

3. Should will require that trust be subject to continuing judicial supervision?

NOTE:

Trusts created by wills executed after July 1, 1977, are not subject to continuing court jurisdiction unless the will expressly provides otherwise [see Prob. Code § 17300; see also § 64B.39].

a. Not requiring continuing judicial supervision will generally save time, money, and expense for all concerned [see Estate of Parrette (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 157, 162, 211 Cal. Rptr. 313 ; see also § 64B.332[1]].

b. Will provision expressly requiring that trust be subject to continuing jurisdiction of superior court may be used if:

(1) Testator feels that persons interested in trust are likely to be litigious or may disagree as to administration of trust; or

(2) Testator lacks full confidence in experience, skill, or integrity of prospective trustee.

NOTE:

Although continuing judicial supervision may mitigate some of the excesses of a trustee who lacks business experience, investment skill, or integrity, it should not be regarded as a crutch for such a trustee. If the testator believes that the prospective trustee is, for any continuing reason, unable to properly carry out the duties of the trust, another trustee should be selected.

- c. Will provision requiring continuing jurisdiction will not provide measurably greater judicial protection for trust.

NOTE:

Continuing jurisdiction of the superior court is not essential to restrain wayward or recalcitrant trustees or settle disputes among or between trustees, cotrustees, income beneficiaries, and remainder beneficiaries. The "intermittent intervention" (or "dispute-related") provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210 also provide for court supervision of trustees and cotrustees, although that supervision is exercised only upon petition by a trustee or beneficiary [Prob. Code § 17200(a)].

§ 64B.120 Determination of Principal and Income

1. To provide that principal and income will be determined in accordance with Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act, use § 64B.200.
2. To grant trustee broad power to determine what is principal and what is income, use § 64B.201.
3. To eliminate trustee's general power to make adjustments to principal and income under Prob. Code § 16336, use § 64B.201A.

NOTE:

This provision should be used sparingly. For discussion, see §§ 64B.202[1] and 64B.31[9] et seq.

4. To provide for a depreciation reserve, use appropriate alternative provision of § 64B.203:
  - a. To require that trustee establish a reasonable reserve for depreciation, use first alternative provision;
  - b. To authorize, but not require, trustee to establish reserve, use second alternative provision; or
  - c. To forbid trustee from establishing reserve, use third alternative provision.
5. To require trustee to allocate receipts from natural resources held by trust, or from trust property subject to depletion, to principal or income, use appropriate alternative provision of § 64B.204:
  - a. To require trustee to allocate all receipts according to single, fixed formula, use first alternative provision; or

b. To require trustee to allocate receipts according to formulas that vary with type of resource, use second alternative provision.

6. To authorize trustee to purchase bonds at premiums and either to require or not require trustee to amortize premiums, use basic provision of § 64B.205 and appropriate additional clause of same form:

a. To require that all premiums on bonds be amortized, use first additional clause;

b. To provide that premiums need not be amortized, use second additional clause; or

c. To require amortization only when bonds are purchased at more than certain percentage of par value, use third additional clause.

7. To authorize trustee to purchase bonds at discounts and either to require or not require trustee to periodically accumulate discounts to income, use basic provision of § 64B.206 and appropriate additional clauses of the same form:

a. To require that all discounts on bonds be accumulated to income, use first additional clause;

b. To provide that discounts will not be accumulated to income, use second additional clause; or

c. To require accumulation only when bonds are purchased at less than certain percentage of par value, use third additional clause.

8. To require trustee to treat income earned during administration of testator's estate as principal, use appropriate alternative provision of § 64B.207:

a. To require trustee to treat income earned from all probate assets as principal, use first alternative provision; or

b. To require trustee to treat income on all assets except specific bequests or devises as principal, use second alternative provision.

9. To grant trustee discretion to apportion stock dividends and liquidating dividends or distributions between principal and income, use § 64B.208.

10. To require trustee to allocate all distributions from capital gains made by mutual fund or real estate investment trust (REIT) to income, use § 64B.209.

11. To establish depreciation and accounting rules for business or farm that will be operated by trustee for trust, use § 64B.210.

12. To establish rules for charging trustee's compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs to principal or income, use appropriate alternative provision of § 64B.211:

a. To provide that all trustee compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs must be charged entirely to principal or entirely to income, use first alternative provision;

b. To provide that all regular trustee compensation and all ordinary attorneys' fees and courts costs must be charged to income and all other compensation, fees, and costs to principal, use second alternative provision; or

c. To provide that attorneys' fees and court costs will be charged to income for matters primarily concerning income and to principal for matters primarily concerning principal, with all other compensation, fees, and costs charged entirely to principal or entirely to income, use third alternative provision.

 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.200

§ 64B.200 Principal and Income to Be Determined in Accordance With Uniform Principal and Income Act

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require that all questions regarding what is principal and income of a trust be determined in accordance with the Uniform Principal and Income Act.

[b] Uniform Principal and Income Act

[i] In General

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] is a comprehensive statute that provides for the allocation of the receipts and expenditures of trust estates to principal or income. Although the Act became effective January 1, 2000, it generally applies to trusts created before as well as after its enactment [Prob. Code § 16339]. For a general discussion of the provisions of the Act, see § 64B.31[1] et seq. A parallel law, the California Legal Estates Principal and Income Law [Civ. Code §§ 731-731.15] provides for the allocation to principal and income of the receipts and expenditures of legal estates.

[ii] Advantages

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides for most problems that may be expected to arise in the determination of principal and income in trust estates. It establishes general principles for the allocation of trust receipts and expenditures to income or principal, but permits the will to establish different rules. For a general discussion of the principles of the Act, see § 64B.31[1] et seq.

Requiring the trustee to conform to the ascertainable standard of the Act may help to avoid uncertainties and disputes among the persons who are interested in the trust. In addition, it may help to avoid unfavorable tax consequences that might result from the grant of broad discretion to the trustee [see § 64B.200[1][c][i] et seq.]. In certain areas, however, the Act confers wide discretion on the trustee. Because broad discretion may result in adverse tax consequences for some trusts, it may sometimes be advisable, even when the will adopts the Act, to further limit the trustee's authority to determine principal and income.

[c] Tax Considerations

[i] In General

Tax consequences must be carefully considered whenever the attorney drafts a clause authorizing or requiring the trustee to determine what is principal and what is income. In general, it will be advisable to limit the trustee's discretion to determine principal and income if the trust is sensitive to adverse tax consequences. A trust is sensitive to adverse tax consequences if the trustee (or one of the cotrustees) is also a beneficiary of the trust or if the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction.

If the trustee is also a beneficiary of the trust, care should be taken to avoid granting the trustee powers that amount to a general power of appointment, since this will cause property subject to the power to be included in the trustee's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(a); see also § 64B.200[1][c][ii]]. If the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, the trustee should not have power to interfere with the surviving spouse's right to receive all of the income from the trust payable annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)]. A broad power to allocate receipts or disbursements to principal or income may disqualify the trust for the estate tax marital deduction if the power is not subject to reasonable limitations [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5); Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4); see also Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rules to QTIP trusts); § 64B.200[1][c][iii]].

Provisions limiting the trustee's discretion to allocate receipts and expenditures to principal or income are set forth in §§ 64B.204-64B.211.

[ii] Trustee Who Is Also Beneficiary

For federal estate tax purposes, the estate of any person will include the value of property over which that person had a general power of appointment at the time of his or her death or as to which that person at any time exercised or released a general power of appointment [I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (applies to powers created after October 21, 1942)]. The term "general power of appointment" includes a power that is exercisable in favor of the holder, the holder's estate, the holder's creditors, or the creditors of the holder's estate [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)]. It does not include the following:

- A power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of any person that is limited by an "ascertainable standard" relating to that person's health, education, support, or maintenance [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(A)]; or
- A power exercisable by the holder only in conjunction with another person who is either the creator of the power or a person having a substantial adverse interest in the power [I.R.C. § 2041(b)(1)(C)]; for a discussion of the advantages of appointing cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.202[1]].

The risk that a power to allocate receipts and expenditures to principal and income will be deemed a general power of appointment is not great, since the regulations provide that such a power will not be deemed a general power of appointment if it is exercisable in a fiduciary capacity and does not include a power to enlarge or shift beneficial interests except as an incident to the discharge of fiduciary duties [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1)]. If, however, the power to allocate exceeds the customary fiduciary duties of a trustee, or if it includes a power to enlarge or shift beneficial interests, there is a danger that the power will be deemed a general power of appointment [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)(1)]. Recognizing this danger, the prudent drafter will seek to limit the discretion of a trustee who is also a beneficiary. One way in which the discretion of such a trustee may be limited is by requiring the trustee to allocate receipts and disbursements in accordance with the Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act. This form will accomplish that purpose.

The trustee's discretion may be further limited in the following ways:

- The trustee may be required (or forbidden) to establish a reserve for depreciation [see § 64B.203];
- The trustee may be required to allocate proceeds from natural resources or property subject to depletion to income according to a formula [see § 64B.204]; or
- The trustee may be forbidden to buy premium bonds unless the premiums are amortized [see § 64B.205].

If the distinction between principal and income is irrelevant to the dispositive scheme of the trust, then it is immaterial whether or not the trustee has discretion to allocate receipts between income and principal. The distinction between principal and income is immaterial, for example, if all trust income is required to be accumulated and paid out together with and in the same manner as the principal, or if the trustee is required to pay the beneficiary either a fixed annual sum (with or without a cost-of-living adjustment) or a fixed percentage of the total assets of the trust.

[iii] Marital Deduction Trusts

If the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust or a qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, the surviving spouse must be entitled to receive all of the trust income, payable annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (life estate plus power of appointment trust)]. The Treasury Regulations provide that a trustee's power to determine the allocation or apportionment of receipts and disbursements between income and corpus will not disqualify the interest passing to the spouse if the power is subject to reasonable limitations [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)], nor will the interest be disqualified if the entire terms of the instrument are such that the local courts will impose reasonable limitations upon the exercise of the powers [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)].

A prudent drafter will take precautions to assure that the marital deduction will not be impaired by any power given to the trustee. Limitations on the authority of the trustee to allocate receipts and disbursements to principal and income will help to preserve the estate tax marital deduction. Among others, the following limitations may be appropriate for this purpose:

- A provision requiring (or forbidding) the trustee to establish a reserve for depreciation [see § 64B.203].
- A provision requiring the trustee to allocate proceeds from natural resources or property subject to depletion to income according to a formula [see § 64B.204].
- A provision forbidding the trustee to buy premium bonds unless the premiums are amortized [see § 64B.205].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.201

§ 64B.201 Broad Power to Determine What Is Principal and What Is Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the trustee broad power to determine principal and income. For a provision requiring that all questions of principal and income be determined in accordance with the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16373], see § 64B.200.

[b] Testator's Authority to Grant Broad Power

When the will provides for the determination of a question of principal and income, that provision governs, despite any contrary provision of the Uniform Principal and Income Act [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)].

[c] Advantages of Broad Power

Although the Uniform Principal and Income Act is comprehensive, it does not provide for every situation that may arise in the determination of principal and income. The Act does not adequately provide for certain contingencies, and in other respects its provisions may be inappropriate for particular trust purposes.

Under the Act, an amount received as income on an obligation to pay money, such as a bond, is allocated to income without any amortization [Prob. Code § 16357(a)]. An amount received from the sale or redemption of an obligation is allocated entirely to principal, except when the sale or redemption occurs within one year of acquisition, in which case the excess is allocated to income [Prob. Code § 16357(a)]. The power to vary from these provisions in allocating receipts from bonds or other obligations can sometimes best protect the interests of competing beneficiaries. For a discussion of amortization of bond premiums, see § 64B.205[1]. For a discussion of accumulation for bond discounts, see § 64B.206[1].

The Act does not provide for the allocation of a "personal profit" made by a former trustee and recovered by a subsequent trustee. In appropriate cases, such a profit should be allocated to principal or to income [see Harris, Allocation and Apportionment in a Private Trust Between Principal and Income, 9 Okla. L. Rev. 269 (1956)].

If the trust assets include a closely held business, problems of the determination of principal and income may be difficult. Granting the trustee broad power to determine what is principal and what is income may help avoid disputes in such cases. For a discussion of the problems of holding closely held businesses in a trust, see Frimmer, Beneficiaries' Rights to Distributions When Business Interests Are Held in Trust, 16 Real Prop., Prob. & Tr. J. 359 (1981).

[d] Tax Considerations

Before any provision granting the trustee broad discretion to determine principal and income is included in the will, the drafter should carefully consider the tax consequences. It is usually advisable to limit the trustee's discretion to determine principal and income if the trust is sensitive to adverse tax consequences [see § 64B.200[1][c][ii]].

The broad power conferred by this form will be inappropriate in most marital deduction trusts and in most trusts in which the trustee (or one of the cotrustees) is also a beneficiary. A broad power to determine principal and income may give the trustee power to shift the benefits of the trust among and between income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries and, if the trustee (or one of the cotrustees) is also a beneficiary, cause the assets subject to the power to be included in the trustee's estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041; see also § 64B.200[1][c][ii]]. Further, a broad power to determine principal and income, unless subject to reasonable limitations, may interfere with the right of a surviving spouse to receive all of the income from the trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)] and thus disqualify it for the federal estate tax marital deduction [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. See § 64B.200[1].

[2] FORM

Broad Power to Determine What Is Principal and What Is Income

Determination of Principal and Income

(a) In the determination of all matters with respect to what is principal and what is income of the trust estate, and in the apportionment and allocation of receipts and expenditures between principal and income accounts, the Trustee, except as otherwise specifically provided in this will, shall have the power, exercisable in the Trustee's discretion, to determine what is principal and what is income of the trust estate, to apportion and allocate receipts, expenditures, and other charges between principal and income, and to amortize out of or to charge to income premiums paid on the purchase of bonds or other obligations.

(b) The Trustee shall have the power to establish a reserve for depreciation or to make any charge for depreciation against income, but shall not be required to do so. If the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, establishes a reserve for depreciation, the Trustee shall have the power to fund the reserve by appropriate charges against income. Any reserve for depreciation shall be established on such assumptions as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall determine. No inference of imprudence or partiality shall arise from the fact that the Trustee, in the exercise of the discretion and power conferred on the Trustee in this paragraph, has allocated a receipt or expenditure in a manner contrary to any provision of the California Uniform Principal and Income Act.

(c) If the trust is a member of a partnership, the Trustee may (but shall not be required to) accept, with respect to the partnership interest of the trust, any accounting method or methods used by the partnership, regardless of whether or not those accounting methods include depreciation reserves, regardless of the assumptions on which any such reserves may be based, and regardless of whether or not those accounting methods are consistent with the accounting methods used by the Trustee with respect to other property of the trust.

(d) Except insofar as the Trustee exercises the power conferred on the Trustee under this paragraph, and except insofar as otherwise provided in this will, all matters relating to the determination of principal and income shall be governed by provisions of the California Uniform Principal and Income Act from time to time existing.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.202

§ 64B.202 No Power to Make Adjustments Between Income and Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision eliminating the authority of a trustee to make adjustments to income and principal under the general adjustment powers granted by Prob. Code § 16336, which is part of the Uniform Principal and Income Act.

[b] Trustee's General Power to Make Adjustments Between Principal and Income

The Uniform Principal and Income Act grants trustees the general discretionary power to make adjustments between principal and income, to the extent the trustee considers necessary, under specified circumstances [Prob. Code § 16336]. For a detailed discussion of this power, see § 64B.31[9] et seq. The statutory prerequisites for exercise of this power, coupled with the limitations on its exercise, appear to minimize the likelihood that trustees can apply it in a manner that would be inequitable to any of the trust beneficiaries.

Nevertheless, circumstances may arise in which the settlor may want to restrict this power still further, or even eliminate it. For example, a beneficiary may be entitled to the greater of a unitrust amount or income, with no power in the trust to invade principal for the beneficiary's benefit. The settlor in such a case may view the unitrust amount as a floor and the income as a ceiling, and want to assure that the beneficiary will get no less or more than the amount determined by that range. In a case such as that, this form may be used. Practitioners should note that such circumstances are likely to occur infrequently.

[c] Drafting Issues

When the power granted by Prob. Code § 15336 is to be limited or eliminated, any provision limiting this power should be carefully drafted and include a specific reference to Prob. Code § 15336, because the statute requires that any trust limiting the trustee's power to make adjustments between principal and income does not affect the trustee's power to make adjustments under Prob. Code § 15336 unless it is clear from the trust that it is intended to deny this power to the trustee [Prob. Code § 15336(f)].

[2] FORM

No Power to Make Adjustments Between Income and Principal

No Power to Make Adjustments to Income and Principal

Under no circumstances shall the trustee exercise any of the powers provided under Probate Code Section 16336 regarding making adjustments between income and principal.

 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.203

§ 64B.203 Reserve for Depreciation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for a depreciation reserve. Three alternative provisions are illustrated. The first requires that the trustee establish a reasonable reserve for depreciation. The second authorizes the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, to establish such a reserve, but does not require that the trustee do so. The third forbids the trustee from establishing such a reserve.

For a provision requiring the trustee to set aside a reserve for depreciation of trust property used in the operation of a business or other activity, see § 64B.210.

[b] Reserve for Depreciation

[i] Statutory Rules

A reserve for depreciation is an account used to recover the cost of an asset by writing off a portion of the cost over the life of the asset, or by some other acceptable method [Black's Law Dictionary 1308 (6th ed. 1990)]. Under the Uniform Principal and Income Act, a trustee may, but is not required to, transfer a reasonable amount from income to principal to cover depreciation [Prob. Code § 16372(b)]. However, no depreciation adjustment may occur under the Act when the depreciating property is held or available for the personal use of a beneficiary, or during the administration of a decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 16372(b)]. The trustee must use "generally accepted accounting principles" to compute depreciation [Prob. Code § 16372(b)].

[ii] Advantages of Requiring Reserve

The will may vary the statutory rules relating to reserves for depreciation [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. In general, the establishment of a reserve for depreciation will serve the interests of the remainder beneficiaries by preserving trust principal [see § 64B.203[1][b][i]]. Failure to establish such a reserve ordinarily will favor the interests of the income beneficiaries, since it will give the beneficiaries the benefits of current income from depreciable property without requiring that a portion of the income be withheld and allocated to a depreciation reserve for the benefit of the remainder beneficiaries.

The creation of a reserve for depreciation will not render the depreciable property ineligible for the federal estate tax marital deduction. The regulations provide that property in a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust will qualify for the marital deduction despite a reserve for depreciation [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(3) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)].

The marital deduction will be preserved if the effect of the trust is to give the surviving spouse substantially the same degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust property during his or her life that the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(1) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)]. To ensure that this provision will not be interpreted as interfering with the surviving spouse's right to receive all of the income at least annually [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)], this form includes language drawn from the regulation which may be added to the principal provision if the trust is a marital deduction trust. While this language is not essential to preservation of the marital deduction, it will be useful as an expression of the testator's intention that the principal provision is not to jeopardize the deduction.

[2] FORM

Reserve for Depreciation

Reserve for Depreciation

[First alternative provision: trustee required to establish reserve]

Any other provision of this will to the contrary notwithstanding, the Trustee shall be required to establish reasonable reserves for depreciation of all income-producing real and personal property and of all capital improvements and extraordinary repairs. Further, the Trustee shall from time to time charge to income a reasonable reserve for depletion of all depletable natural resources, including, but not limited to, oil, gas, and mineral and timber property [add, if trust is designed to qualify for marital deduction as lifetime income /power of appointment or qualified terminable interest (QTIP) trust:, provided, however, that with respect to the marital deduction trust established under Paragraph _____ of this will, the Trustee shall at all times provide the income beneficiary with substantially the same degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust property as the principles of the law of trusts accord to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust].

[OR]

[Second alternative provision: trustee authorized but not required to establish reserve]

Any other provision of this will to the contrary notwithstanding, the Trustee shall have the power, exercisable in the Trustee's discretion, to determine whether or not to establish a reserve or reserves for depreciation or to make any charge or charges for depreciation against all or any portion of the income of the trust estate, including any income realized through use of any portion of the trust estate employed in the conduct of a business by the Trustee. The Trustee shall not be required to establish any such reserve or reserves, but if the Trustee decides to establish such a reserve or reserves, they shall be established in the amounts the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, determine. [Add, if trustor wishes trustee to favor either income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries: Provided, however, that it is my express intention and wish, and I hereby direct, that the Trustee shall, in the exercise of the discretion conferred on the Trustee by this Paragraph, primarily benefit _____ (the income beneficiaries or the remainder beneficiaries or name specific person or persons to be primarily benefited).

[OR]

[Third alternative provision: trustee forbidden to establish reserve]

The Trustee shall not under any circumstances charge any income account or accounts of the trust for depreciation of any property held in the trust estate.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.204

§ 64B.204 Allocation of Receipts From Natural Resources, Timber, or Liquidating Assets

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to allocate receipts from natural resources held by the trust or from trust property that is subject to depletion according to principal and income in accordance with a prescribed formula. Two alternative provisions are illustrated. The first may be used to require that the trustee allocate all receipts according to a single, fixed formula. The second may be used to require the trustee to allocate receipts according to formulas that vary with the type of resource.

For a provision requiring that all questions of principal and income be determined in accordance with the Revised Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16300-16315], see § 64B.200. For a provision granting the trustee broad power to determine principal and income, see § 64B.201. For provisions respecting reserves for depreciation, see § 64B.203.

[b] Statutory Rules Governing Receipts From Natural Resources, Timber, or Liquidating Assets

[i] In General

The Uniform Principal and Income Act sets forth rules for allocations of receipts from minerals or other natural resources [Prob. Code § 16363], timber and related products [Prob. Code § 16364], and other "liquidating assets" [Prob. Code § 16362]. These rules accord different treatment to those respective assets, and are discussed separately below.

[ii] Minerals and Other Natural Resources

Receipts from minerals and other natural resources are allocated as follows [Prob. Code § 16363]:

- A nominal bonus, nominal delay rental, or nominal annual rent is allocated to income.
- Production payments are allocated to income to the extent provided in the agreement creating the production payments, with the balance allocated to principal.
- Amounts received from water are allocated to income if the water is renewable, and principal if the water is not renewable.
- If royalties, shut-in-well payments, take-or-pay payments, bonuses, or delay rentals are more than nominal, 90 percent is allocated to principal, and the balance to income.
- For receipts from a working interest or any other interest not described above, 90 percent is allocated to principal, and the balance to income.

These rules apply regardless of when extraction began [Prob. Code § 16363(c)].

If a trust owned an interest in minerals, water or other natural resources on January 1, 2000, the trustee may allocate receipts from the interest as provided above, or in the manner reasonably used by the trustee prior to that date [Prob. Code § 16363 (d)]. Receipts acquired after January 1, 2000, must be allocated only as provided above [Prob. Code § 16363 (d)].

[iii] Timber and Related Products

Receipts from timber and related products are generally allocated to income to the extent that the amount of timber removed from the land does not exceed the growth of timber, and to principal to the extent that the amount of timber removed exceeds the growth of timber, or are from the sale of standing timber [Prob. Code § 16364(a)]. The allocations also apply when the receipts are from a lease of timberland, or a contract to cut timber from trust land [Prob. Code § 16364(a)(3)]. To the extent that advance payments, bonuses, and other payments are not allocated pursuant to these rules, they are allocated to principal [Prob. Code § 16364(a)].

In determining the allocation of net income, the trustee must transfer a reasonable amount from income to principal for depletion [Prob. Code § 16364(b)]. These rules apply regardless of when the harvesting of timber began [Prob. Code § 16364(c)].

If a trust owned an interest in timberland on January 1, 2000, the trustee may allocate net receipts from the sale of timber as provided above, or in the manner reasonably used by the trustee prior to that date [Prob. Code § 16364 (d)]. Net receipts acquired after January 1, 2000, must be allocated only as provided above [Prob. Code § 16364 (d)].

[iv] Liquidating Assets

"Liquidating asset" means an asset whose value will diminish or terminate because the asset is expected to produce receipts for a period of limited duration [Prob. Code § 16362(a)]. It includes a leasehold, patent, copyright, royalty right, and right to receive payments under an arrangement that does not provide for interest payments on the unpaid balance [Prob. Code § 16362(a)]. It does not include a fixed term payment [Prob. Code § 16361], minerals or other natural resources [Prob. Code § 16363], timber and related products [Prob. Code § 16364], derivatives [Prob. Code § 16366], asset-backed securities [Prob. Code § 16367], or any asset for which the trustee establishes a reserve for depreciation under Prob. Code § 16372 [Prob. Code § 16362(a)].

A trustee must allocate 10 percent of receipts from liquidating assets to income, and the balance to principal [Prob. Code § 16362(b)].

[c] Trust Provisions

The trust instrument may vary the statutory rules for allocation of receipts to principal and income [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. Although the statutory rules do set forth fairly comprehensive rules for allocation of receipts from natural resources, timber, or other liquidating, the testator may wish to vary these rules to favor either income beneficiaries or remainder beneficiaries.

The form set forth below may be tailored to fit the testator's specific needs and intentions by specifically providing what percentage of receipts from particular property will be allocated to income and what percentage will be allocated to principal.

A similar result may be accomplished by providing in the will for accumulation of some of the trust income, by directing the trustee to dispose of wasting assets held by the trust, or by requiring or forbidding the trustee to establish a reserve for depreciation [see § 64B.203].

[2] FORM*Allocation of Receipts From Natural Resources, Timber, or Liquidating Assets*Allocation of Receipts From Natural Resources, Timber, or Liquidating Assets

[First alternative provision: single formula for allocation]

The Trustee shall allocate to income all receipts from interests in minerals or other natural resources, timber and related products, and other liquidating assets (as defined in Probate Code Section 16362), to the extent that those receipts do not exceed _____ [specify percentage, e.g., 5 percent] per annum of the fair market value of the property, determined as of the "valuation date." As used in this paragraph, the "valuation date" is the date on which the last of the following events occurs:

- (a) The principal is established;
- (b) The property is acquired; or
- (c) If the resource is discovered after the events described in (a) and (b), the property is put into commercial use.

[OR]

[Second alternative provision: allocation according to type of resources]

For purposes of this provision, "depleting property" shall include interests in minerals or other natural resources, timber and related products, and other liquidating assets. The Trustee shall allocate receipts from depleting property to principal and income as follows:

- (a) Receipts received under a lease of land having or believed to have depleting property shall be allocated _____ [specify allocation formula, e.g., 95 percent to income and 5 percent to principal];
- (b) Receipts from all production payments shall be apportioned _____ [specify allocation formula, e.g., 80 percent to income and 20 percent to principal]; and

(c) Receipts from royalties, bonuses, and working or net profit arrangements shall be allocated _____ [specify allocation formula, e.g., 95 percent to income and 5 percent to principal].

 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.205

§ 64B.205 Power to Purchase Bonds at Premium

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to authorize the trustee to purchase bonds at premiums and, further, to either require the trustee to amortize the premiums out of interest or to provide that amortization is not required. The form consists of a basic provision and three additional clauses, one of which should be added to the basic provision. The first additional clause may be added to the basic provision if the testator wishes to require that all premiums on bonds be amortized. The second additional clause may be added if the testator does not wish to require amortization. The third may be added if the testator wishes to require amortization only when bonds are purchased at more than a specified percentage of par value. For discussion of the use of these three alternatives, see § 64B.205[1][b][ii], [iii].

For a provision authorizing the trustee to purchase bonds at a discount, see § 64B.206.

[b] Purchase of Bonds at Premium

[i] Statutory Provisions

Although the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] permits the trustee to purchase bonds at a premium, it prohibits the trustee from making any provision for amortization of bond premiums [Prob. Code § 16357(a)]. If the trustee purchases a bond at a premium, trust principal will be impaired, since the amount that the trustee will receive upon maturity of the bond will be less than the principal used to acquire it. If no provision is made to amortize the premium; that is, to set aside a portion of the interest earned by the bond and allocate it to a principal account, the income beneficiaries will benefit at the expense of the remainder beneficiaries.

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules as to amortization of bond premiums [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. A will provision clearly setting forth the trustee's authority and duties with respect to bond premiums may be useful. A provision empowering the trustee to purchase bonds at a premium will be desirable if the testator is not concerned about preserving trust principal for the remainder beneficiaries and wishes to give the trustee authority to maximize trust income. Such a provision will preclude objections from the remainder beneficiaries that a trustee who purchases bonds at a premium is not properly preserving trust principal.

If, on the other hand, the testator wishes the trust principal to be preserved for the remainder beneficiaries, the will may require the trustee to amortize any premiums paid for bonds. There are two general ways in which the will may require that bonds may be amortized. It may require that all bond premiums be amortized, or it may require only that premiums over a certain percentage of par value be amortized. The latter provision will give the trustee somewhat more flexibility than the former by permitting some premium purchases that do not trigger the amortization requirement.

[iii] Tax Considerations

A provision absolving the trustee in whole or in part of the duty to amortize bond premiums [see the second and third additional clauses of this form] may be suitable in some trusts. However, it should not be used if the trustee is also a beneficiary of the trust, since the power to buy bonds at premiums without any duty to amortize the premiums will give the trustee significant power to shift or alter the benefits of the trust. A trustee-beneficiary who has the power to shift or alter the benefits of the trust will be deemed to have a general power of appointment over the trust assets, with the result that the assets will be included in the beneficiary's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes [see I.R.C. § 2041(a)(2) (general powers of appointment created after October 21, 1942)]. For purposes of this rule, the term "power of appointment" includes all powers that are in substance and effect powers of appointment, regardless of the nomenclature used in creating them [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)]. Although powers that cannot substantially affect the beneficial enjoyment of the trust property or income are not powers of appointment for this purpose [Treas. Reg. § 20.2041-1(b)], the right to purchase bonds at premium without any duty to amortize the premiums can substantially favor the income beneficiaries over the remainder beneficiaries and, if the power is exercisable in favor of the holder (i.e., a trustee-beneficiary), constitute a general power of appointment.

[2] FORM

Power to Purchase Bonds at Premium

Power to Purchase Bonds at Premium

The Trustee shall have the power to purchase bonds at such premiums as the Trustee shall, in the Trustee's discretion, deem advisable.

[If all premiums are to be amortized:]

Any premium paid by the Trustee for any bond shall, however, be periodically repaid to principal out of the interest received on the bond, in a reasonable manner, as the Trustee shall determine or, to the extent necessary, out of the proceeds of the sale or other disposition of the bond.

[Or, if trustee is to be permitted but not required to amortize premiums:]

The Trustee shall not be required to repay to the principal of the trust any portion of the premium on any bond, regardless of the fact that on the maturity of the bond, or on its sale or other disposition before maturity, any loss or gain on the bond may fall on or inure to the principal of the trust.

[Or, if trustee is to be required to amortize premiums only when bonds are purchased at more than a stated percentage of par value:]

Any premium paid by the Trustee for any bond purchased at more than _____ [specify percentage, e.g., 103 percent] of its par value shall, however, be periodically repaid to principal out of the interest received on the bond, in a reasonable manner, as the Trustee shall determine or, to the extent necessary, out of the proceeds of the sale or other disposition of the bond. The Trustee shall not be required to repay any portion of the premium on any other bond.

§ 64B.206 Power to Purchase Bonds at Discount

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to authorize the trustee to purchase bonds at discounts and, in addition, to require the trustee to periodically accumulate the discounts to income, or to provide that accumulation is not required. The form consists of a basic provision and three additional clauses. The first additional clause may be added to the basic provision if the testator wishes to require that all discounts on bonds be accumulated to income. The second may be added if the testator does not wish to require accumulation, and the third may be added if the testator wishes to require accumulation only when bonds are purchased at less than a specified percentage of par value.

For a provision authorizing the trustee to purchase bonds at a premium, see § 64B.205.

[b] Purchase of Bonds at Discount

[i] Statutory Provisions

A bond is "discounted" when the price at which it is purchased (or sold) is less than the price at which it was issued (variously referred to as "face" value, "par" value, "maturity" value, or "redemption" value). When a bond is acquired at a discount, the increment represented by the difference between the purchase price and the redemption value will benefit the remainder beneficiaries at the expense of the income beneficiaries. When a trustee adjusts for this disparity, the discount is said to be "accumulated to income." A discount is "accumulated to income" when a part of the discount is set aside to be distributed to the income beneficiary as income.

Under the Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375], an amount received from the redemption of a bond is allocated entirely to principal, except when the redemption occurs within one year of acquisition, in which case the excess is allocated to income [Prob. Code § 16357(a)]. Thus, a total accumulation occurs when a bond is redeemed within one year of purchase, and no accumulation occurs when the bond is held for a longer period.

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules as to accumulation of bond discounts [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. If the testator wishes the income beneficiaries to receive all or substantially all of the income of the trust, a provision requiring accumulation of bond discounts to income should be included in the will. Further, if the trust is designed to qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust, accumulation to income should be required, since the right of the surviving spouse to all of the income of such a trust must be assured [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2)(application of rule to QTIP trusts); see also § 64B.200[1][c][iii]]. For the same reason, any provision relieving the trustee of the duty, in whole or in part, of accumulating bond discounts to income, should not be included in a marital deduction trust. Accordingly, neither the second nor the third additional clause set forth below should be used if the trust is a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust or a QTIP trust. For a general discussion of statutory rules and drafting considerations relating to marital deduction trusts, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

[2] FORM*Power to Purchase Bonds at Discount*Power to Purchase Bonds at Discount

The Trustee shall have the power to purchase bonds at such discounts as the Trustee, in the Trustee's discretion, shall deem advisable.

[Add, if all discounts are to be accumulated to income:]

Any discount on any bond purchased by the Trustee shall, however, _____ [periodically or, if trust is a marital deduction trust, annually, or at more frequent intervals,] be accumulated to income as interest in such a reasonable manner as the Trustee shall determine and, to the extent necessary, paid out of the proceeds of the sale, redemption, or other disposition of the bond, or out of principal.

[Or, if no accumulation is to be required:]

The Trustee shall not be required to accumulate to income any discount on any bond purchased by the Trustee, regardless of the fact that, on the sale, redemption, or other disposition of the bond, a gain or increase may inure to the benefit of the principal of the trust.

[Or, if accumulation is to be required only when bonds are purchased at less than a certain percentage of par value:]

Any discount on any bond purchased by the Trustee at less than _____ [specify percentage, e.g., 97 percent] of its par value shall, however, be accumulated periodically as interest in such a reasonable manner as the Trustee shall determine and, to the extent necessary, paid out of the proceeds of the sale, redemption, or other disposition of the bond, or out of principal.

§ 64B.207 Income Earned During Administration of Testator's Estate to Be Treated as Principal

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to treat income earned by trust property while the testator's estate is in probate and before it is distributed to the trustee as principal of the trust estate. The form includes two alternative provisions. The first may be used to require the trustee to treat income earned during probate by all trust assets as principal. The second may be used to require the trustee to treat income earned by all assets except specific devises as principal.

[b] Income on Trust Property During Probate Administration

[i] In General

Property devised to a trustee will frequently earn income during the period of probate administration, i.e., while it is in the hands of the executor and before it has been distributed to the trustee. Depending on the circumstances of the estate, probate administration may continue (and distribution of trust assets to the trustee may be delayed) for many months after the testator's death [see Prob. Code §§ 11640(a) (final distribution may be ordered when estate is in condition to be closed), 12200 (time limits on petition for final distribution); see also Ch. 65, Executors § 65.41[9]]. Proper allocation (and ultimate distribution) of income earned by trust property during probate administration will be determined by rules set forth in the Probate Code or, if the testator chooses to vary those rules, by a will provision addressing the question.

[ii] Probate Code Rules

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] provides rules for allocating income from property subject to a testamentary trust. The right to collect this income depends on the nature of the gift [see Prob. Code § 21117 (rules governing classifications of devises); see also Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.351[1][b]]. For a detailed discussion of the Probate Code rules governing the right to income accruing during a decedent's estate, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.532[1] et seq.

Recipients of specifically given property receive all net income from the specifically given property, which is determined by including all receipts or disbursements with respect to the property, regardless of whether they occurred before or after the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 16340(a)(1)]. The personal representative must make a reasonable provision for amounts that he or she believes the estate may become obligated to pay after distribution of the property, but may not reduce receipts on account of expenditures actually paid or required to be paid by a third party [Prob. Code § 16340(a)].

Recipients of a pecuniary amount will only receive interest if the principal amount is not distributed within one year [Prob. Code §§ 12003, 16340(b)]. However, interest on a general pecuniary gift distributable under a trust was not payable when the trust was created before the effective date of a prior version of Prob. Code § 16340(b) [Remsen v. Lavacot (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 421, 429, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612]. After deducting for expenses of administration and other estate obligations, the remaining net income is distributed to all other beneficiaries in proportional shares equal to their fractional interests in undistributed principal assets [Prob. Code §§ 16340, 16341].

If, as is often the case, the trust is funded with a specific or a residuary devise, the trustee and not the executor will be entitled to income earned by the property during administration. This may impede efficient administration of the estate by denying the executor income needed for administration. If, for example, the estate consists almost entirely of a parcel of income-producing real property that is devised in trust, the trustee (and ultimately the beneficiaries) will be entitled to all of the income and the executor will be entitled to none. Payment of the testator's debts and expenses of administration may present difficulties in such a case.

[iii] Will Provision

The will may vary the statutory rules discussed above [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. The form set forth below is designed to obviate the difficulties described above by providing that income during administration will be treated as principal and not income. If treated as principal, the income will be subject to administration in the hands of the executor and not distributable under the statutory rules to the trustee.

This form will not deprive an otherwise qualified interest of the benefits of the estate tax marital deduction. Although the marital deduction rules require that all of the income from the entire interest be paid to the surviving spouse annually, or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7)(B)(ii)(I)], an interest passing to the surviving spouse is not disqualified merely because the spouse is not entitled to the income from estate assets for the period before distribution of those assets by the executor, unless the executor is, by the decedent's will, authorized or directed to delay distribution beyond the period reasonably required for administration of the decedent's estate [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(9) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)].

Income Earned During Estate Administration to Be Treated as Principal

[First alternative provision: income on all probate assets to be treated as principal]

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.208

§ 64B.208 Discretion to Apportion Stock Dividends and Liquidating Dividends or Distributions Between Principal and Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to grant the trustee discretion to apportion stock dividends and liquidating dividends or distributions between principal and income. For a form requiring the trustee to allocate to income all distributions from capital gains made by a mutual fund or a real estate investment trust (REIT), see § 64B.209.

[b] Corporate Distributions

[i] Statutory Rules

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] provides rules for allocating receipts from an "entity," which includes a corporation, partnership, limited liability company, regulated investment company, real estate investment trust, and common trust fund [Prob. Code § 16350(a)]. Except as otherwise provided, money received from an entity is allocated to income [Prob. Code § 16350(b)]. However, the following items are specifically allocated to principal [Prob. Code § 16350(c)]:

- Property other than money.
- Money received in exchange for some or all of a trust's interest in the entity.
- Money received in partial or total liquidation of the entity.
- Money received from a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust if considered a capital gain dividend for federal income tax purposes.

Money is received in partial liquidation to the extent indicated by the entity, or if the total amount of money and property received by all owners, collectively, in a distribution or series of related distributions, is greater than 20 percent of the entity's gross assets, as shown by its year-end financial statements immediately preceding the initial receipt. If that receipt was allocated between December 2, 2004 and July 18, 2005, the trustee is not liable for allocating the receipt to income, as long as the amount received by the trustee, when considered together with the amount received by all owners, collectively exceeds 20 percent of the entity's gross assets, but the amount received by the trustee does not exceed 20 percent of the entity's gross assets [Prob. Code § 16350(d)(1)]. Money is not received in partial liquidation to the extent that it does not exceed the income tax liability the trustee or beneficiary must pay for taxable income from the distributing entity [Prob. Code § 16350(d)(2)].

A trustee may rely on a statement made by an entity about the source or character of a distribution if the statement is made at or near the time of distribution [Prob. Code § 16350(e)].

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules relating to corporate distributions [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. Allocating stock dividends and most liquidating dividends or distributions to principal may, in particular situations, adversely affect the income beneficiaries. Some corporations issue stock dividends over extended periods while at the same time paying no ordinary dividends. The income beneficiaries of a trust with large holdings of the stock of such corporations would receive little income and the remainder beneficiaries would receive all of the benefits of the dividends unless the will contains some provision to the contrary. If it appears that the trust will include substantial holdings of securities that are likely to pay stock dividends or liquidating distributions without distributing ordinary cash dividends, the testator may choose to give the trustee discretion to allocate such dividends or distributions between principal and income.

An alternative means of providing for such a contingency would be to empower the trustee, in the trustee's discretion, to make principal payments to the income beneficiaries. For forms authorizing or directing the trustee to make payments out of principal, see Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, §§ 64.240-64.245.

[2] FORM

Discretion to Apportion Stock Dividends and Liquidating Dividends or Distributions Between Principal and Income

Apportionment of Stock and Liquidating Dividends Between Principal and Income

The Trustee is authorized, in the Trustee's discretion, to apportion stock dividends and liquidating dividends or distributions between principal and income. It is my wish, without limiting the Trustee's discretion, that the Trustee allocate the above items to income, except to the extent that the Trustee determines that to do so would substantially impair the principal of the trust.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.209

§ 64B.209 Capital Gains Distributions From Mutual Funds, Regulated Investment Companies, and Real Estate Investment Trusts to Be Allocated to Income

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require the trustee to allocate to income all distributions from capital gains made by a mutual fund or a real estate investment trust (REIT).

[b] Capital Gains Distributions

[i] Statutory Rules

The Uniform Principal and Income Act provides rules for allocating receipts from an "entity," which includes a regulated investment company, real estate investment trust, and common trust fund [Prob. Code § 16350(a)]. Except as otherwise provided, money received from an entity is allocated to income [Prob. Code § 16350(b)]. For discussion of these rules, see § 64B.208[1][b][i].

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules as to allocation between principal and income of capital gains dividends [see Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. In some cases, a contrary will provision may be desirable to protect the interests of the income beneficiaries.

The investment objectives of a particular fund may be growth of principal, production of income, stability, or any combination of growth, income, and stability. Investments by a mutual fund may be primarily in common stocks, bonds, convertible bonds, preferred stocks, specialized investments, or any combination of stocks, bonds, or specialized investments. It is not uncommon for a mutual fund whose principal objective is growth to distribute capital gains that are many times larger than its ordinary income distributions. If the trust will include shares in such a fund, or if the trustee is authorized to invest in or retain the shares of such a fund, the testator may deem it appropriate to require the trustee to allocate all capital gains distributions to income. This form will achieve that objective.

[iii] Tax Considerations

An interest passing in trust to a surviving spouse will not qualify for the estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] if the trustee has the power, directly or indirectly, to accumulate income, or if the corpus consists substantially of property that is not likely to be income-producing during the surviving spouse's lifetime and the spouse cannot compel the trustee to convert it to income-producing property [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f)(6) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)]. Property that is not likely to produce income should not be held in a lifetime income plus power of appointment or QTIP trust unless other provisions of the trust give the surviving spouse the substantial enjoyment of the property or unless the surviving spouse has the power to compel the trustee to convert it to income-producing property. Requiring the trustee to allocate capital gains distributions to income may provide the surviving spouse with the requisite degree of enjoyment [see Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)].

[2] FORM

Capital Gains Distributions From Mutual Funds, Regulated Investment Companies, and Real Estate Investment Trusts to Be Allocated to Income

Capital Gains Distributions From Mutual Funds and Real Estate Investment Trusts to Be Allocated to Income

The Trustee shall allocate to income all distributions from capital gains made by any mutual fund and all distributions from capital gains made by any regulated investment company or real estate investment trust as defined in the Internal Revenue Code.

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.210

§ 64B.210 Depreciation and Accounting Rules for Business or Other Activity Operated by Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to establish depreciation and accounting rules for a business or other activity (including a farm) that will be operated by the trustee for the trust. Specifically, the form may be used to require the trustee to set aside a reserve from trust income for the depreciation of property used in the operation of the business or other activity and, further, to follow specified accounting rules to determine the income of the business or other activity.

For a provision authorizing the trustee to conduct a business, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64.280. For a provision authorizing the trustee to operate a farm or a ranch, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64.281. For a provision authorizing the trustee to hold corporate stock, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.282. For general provisions relating to reserves for depreciation of trust property, see § 64B.203.

[b] Depreciation and Accounting for Business

[i] Statutory Provisions

A trustee who operates a business or other activity may account for that business or activity separate and apart from the trust's general accounting records [Prob. Code § 16352(a)]. The activities for which a trustee may account separately include the following [Prob. Code § 16352(c)]:

- Retail, manufacturing, service, and other traditional business activities.
- Farming.

- Raising and selling livestock or other animals.
- Managing rental properties.
- Extracting minerals or other natural resources.
- Timber operations.
- Investments in derivatives (that is, contracts and/or financial instruments that give a trust the right or obligation to participate in some of all changes in the price of a tangible or intangible asset or group of assets, or changes in a rate, an index of prices or rates, or other market indicator for an asset or a group of assets) [see Prob. Code § 16366].

Whether or not a trustee accounts for a business or other activity separately, there is discretion, but no requirement, for a depreciation reserve or the use of a particular accounting method [see Prob. Code §§ 16352(b), 16372].

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules relating to depreciation of business or farm property and prescribing accounting rules for the operation of businesses or farms [Prob. Code § 16335(a)(1)]. For a general discussion of statutory rules and drafting considerations relating to depreciation of trust property, see § 64B.203[1][b][i] et seq. Whenever it is contemplated that the trustee will continue the operation of a business or other activity, the testator and the will drafter should carefully analyze the accounting methods presently being used in the business or farm and determine whether the will should contain directions that differ from those of the Uniform Principal and Income Act.

[2] FORM

Depreciation and Accounting Rules for Business or Other Activity Operated by Trustee

Depreciation and Accounting Rules for Business

(a) The Trustee shall set aside a reserve from trust income for depreciation, using the method indicated below, with regard to property used in the operation of any business and shall determine the net profits or income of any business by the trust in accordance with the following methods:

- (1) Depreciation: _____ [e.g., straight-line];
- (2) Inventories: _____ [e.g., first in and first out];
- (3) Investment credit: _____ [e.g., full immediate credit];
- (4) Property taxes: _____ [e.g., proration over county's fiscal year];
- (5) Overall accounting method: _____ [e.g., percentage of completion method].

(b) For purposes of this provision, "business" shall mean any or all of the following activities:

- (1) Retail, manufacturing, service, and other traditional business activities;
- (2) Farming;

- (3) Raising and selling livestock or other animals;
- (4) Managing rental properties;
- (5) Extracting minerals or other natural resources;
- (6) Timber operations; and
- (7) Investments in derivatives, as defined in Probate Code Section 16366.

 PART IV. FORMS
 A. Determination of Principal and Income

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.211

§ 64B.211 Allocation of Trustee's Compensation, Attorneys' Fees, and Court Costs

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to establish rules for charging trustee's compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs to principal or to income. The form includes three alternative provisions. The first alternative provision may be used to provide that all trustee compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs must be charged entirely to principal or entirely to income. The second alternative provision may be used to provide that all regular trustee compensation and all ordinary attorneys' fees and court costs must be charged to income and all other compensation, fees, and costs to principal. The third alternative provision may be used to provide that attorneys' fees and courts costs will be charged to income for matters primarily concerning income and to principal for matters primarily concerning principal, with all other compensation, fees, and costs charged entirely to principal or entirely to income.

For a provision authorizing the trustee to employ agents, advisers, and attorneys, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.320.

[b] Trustee's Compensation, Attorneys' Fees, and Court Costs

[i] Statutory Rules

The Uniform Principal and Income Act [Prob. Code §§ 16320-16375] establishes rules for allocating various disbursements between principal and income. The trustee's compensation, fees for investment advisors or custodial services, and expenses for accountings, judicial proceedings, or other matters involving both income and remainder interests are divided evenly between principal and income, unless otherwise ordered by the court [Prob. Code §§ 16370, 16371]. Expenses for proceedings or other matters concerning primarily an income interest are allocated to income, while expenses for proceedings primarily concerning principal are allocated to principal [Prob. Code §§ 16370, 16371].

[ii] Will Provisions

The will may vary the statutory rules for charging the trustee's compensation, attorneys' fees, and court costs to principal or income [Prob. Code §§ 16335(a)(1), 16312]. The trustee's regular compensation and the attorneys' fees and court costs incurred on periodic accountings to the court are among the largest items of expense incurred on a regular basis by typical testamentary trusts. If no special provision is made in the will, these items will be charged equally to principal and income. Such an allocation may or may not fit the plan of a particular testator. A testator who is concerned with the maximization of income may wish, for example, that such items be charged entirely to principal. On the other hand, a testator who is more concerned with the preservation of principal may wish that they be charged to income, so that they will not erode the trust principal. This form permits the testator to direct the source out of which these expenses are to be paid.

[iii] Tax Considerations

If the trust is designed to qualify for the marital deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) trust [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)], any provision that shifts a burden from trust principal to income should be viewed with caution, since it may interfere with the right of the surviving spouse to receive all of the income from the trust payable annually [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5) (life estate plus power of appointment trust); see also I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)(B)(i)(II), (ii) (QTIP trust)] and thereby disqualify the interest passing to the surviving spouse from the marital deduction. A trust provision that impairs the interests of the income beneficiary and favors the remainder beneficiaries may potentially disqualify the interest passing to the surviving spouse.

A grant of administrative powers to the trustee will not disqualify an interest passing in trust unless the grant of powers evidences the intention to deprive the surviving spouse of the required beneficial enjoyment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. An interest is not disqualified if the entire terms of the instrument are such that the local courts will impose reasonable limitations on the exercise of the powers. Among the powers which, if subject to reasonable limitations, will not disqualify the interest passing in trust is the power to allocate or apportion receipts and disbursements between income and corpus [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(4)]. However, an interest is disqualified if the primary purpose of the trust is to safeguard the trust property without providing the spouse with the required beneficial enjoyment [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(5)]. A trust will be disqualified under this rule if it provides for the accumulation of trust income, either directly or indirectly [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f)(5)]. For general discussion of the marital deduction, see Ch. 71, Marital Deduction Trust Provisions.

CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Declaration of Testator's Intention

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.230

§ 64B.230 Testator's Intention to Favor Income Beneficiaries Over Remainder Beneficiaries

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to declare the testator's intention to favor the current income beneficiaries designated in the will over subsequent income or remainder beneficiaries. For a provision declaring the testator's intention to favor the remainder beneficiaries over the income beneficiaries, see § 64B.231.

[b] Intention of Testator

[i] Words of the Will

The Probate Code provides general rules for the interpretation of wills, trusts, and other instruments [see Prob. Code §§ 21101-21140]. The first and most important of these rules is that the intention of the transferor as expressed in the instrument controls the legal effect of the dispositions made in the instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(a)]. Accordingly, the other rules apply only when the intention of the transferor is not otherwise indicated by the instrument [Prob. Code § 21102(b)]. However, these provisions do not limit the use of extrinsic evidence, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, to determine the testator's intention [Prob. Code § 21102(c)].

[ii] Drafting Considerations

The typical testamentary trust gives the trustee wide discretionary latitude with respect to investments of trust property, payments of income to income beneficiaries, determination of income and principal, and other matters. How this discretion is exercised by the trustee and supervised by the court may depend in large part on an interpretation of the intentions of the testator. If the will clearly evidences the testator's intention to favor the income beneficiaries over the remainder beneficiaries, the trustee's discretionary power with respect to investments, allocation of income, invasion of principal, and other administrative duties will properly be exercised in favor of those beneficiaries. If, on the other hand, the will evidences the testator's intention to favor the remainder beneficiaries over the income beneficiaries, the trustee and the court will be guided accordingly in carrying out and enforcing the other provisions of the trust instrument.

Although an expression of the testator's intentions in this regard will be useful in many situations, such an expression will be most helpful only in trusts in which the trustee is given discretion. In the rare case in which the trustee has no discretionary authority, such an expression will have little effect, since the trustee's powers and duties will have been narrowly prescribed by other provisions of the will.

[iii] Tax Considerations

This provision should not be used with a charitable remainder annuity trust [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)] or a charitable remainder unitrust [see I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)]. A remainder interest passing to a qualified charity is deductible for federal estate tax purposes only if it is a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust [I.R.C. § 2055(e)(2)(A)]. Payments to a noncharitable income beneficiary, e.g., a surviving spouse, under a charitable remainder annuity trust must be a sum certain [I.R.C. § 664(d)(1)(A)], and payments to such a beneficiary under a charitable remainder unitrust must be a fixed percentage of the net fair market value of the assets [I.R.C. § 664(d)(2)(A)]. For a general discussion of split-interest trusts, charitable annuity remainder trusts, and charitable remainder unitrusts, see Ch. 74, Split-Interest Charitable Trusts .

If the trust is designed to qualify for the federal estate tax marital deduction as a lifetime income/power of appointment [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5)] or qualified terminable interest property (QTIP) [see I.R.C. § 2056(b)(7)] trust, a statement of the testator's intention to favor the income beneficiary (the surviving spouse) may help to protect the deduction. A trust will qualify for the deduction as a lifetime income plus power of appointment or a QTIP trust if the surviving spouse is entitled for life to all of the income, payable annually or at more frequent intervals [I.R.C. § 2056(b)(5), (7); see Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)]. The intentions of the testator as expressed in the will may be of critical importance in determining whether the surviving spouse is entitled to receive all of the income payable at least annually [see Prob. Code §§ 21502(a), 21524(b), (d)]. The regulations provide that a lifetime income plus power of appointment trust will satisfy the income requirements of the statute if its effect is to give the surviving spouse substantially that degree of beneficial enjoyment of the trust property during the surviving spouse's lifetime that the law of trusts accords to a person who is unqualifiedly designated as the life beneficiary of a trust [Treas. Reg. §§ 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)]. The requisite degree of enjoyment is given only if it is the testator's intention, as manifested by the terms of the trust instrument and the surrounding circumstances, that the trust should produce for the surviving spouse the income rights accorded by the law of trusts, or that the spouse should have such use of the trust property as is consistent with the value of the trust corpus and its preservation [Treas. Reg. § 20.2056(b)-5(f) (lifetime income/power of appointment trusts), 20.2056(b)-7(d)(2) (application of rule to QTIP trusts)].

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to declare the testator's intention to favor the remainder beneficiaries over the income beneficiaries designated in the will. For a provision declaring the testator's intention to favor the current income beneficiaries over subsequent beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries, see § 64B.230[1].

[b] Drafting Caution

A declaration of the testator's intention to favor the interests of the remainder beneficiaries over the interests of the income beneficiaries could drastically affect the rights of income beneficiaries if the trustee has wide discretionary authority to determine their needs and to apply amounts of income for their benefit. Therefore, this form should not be used if the trustee has such discretion.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 C. Additions to Trust by Third Parties

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.250

§ 64B.250 Additions by Third Parties Permitted

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to authorize the trustee to accept additions to the trust from sources other than the estate of the testator. For a provision prohibiting the trustee from accepting any such additions, see § 64B.251.

[b] Drafting Considerations

Although a will provision empowering the trustee to accept additions to the trust is not strictly necessary [see § 64B.250[1][c]], such a provision may nevertheless serve a useful purpose by making it clear to the trustee and beneficiaries that additions are permitted.

[c] Statutory Rules Governing Additions to Trusts

The Trust Law empowers trustees to accept additions to the property of their trusts from the original settlors or from any other persons [Prob. Code § 16221], and the Uniform Testamentary Additions to Trusts Act [Prob. Code §§ 6300-6303] sanctions testamentary additions to trusts previously established by the testator or some other person [Prob. Code § 6300]. An addition may be made to either an inter vivos or a testamentary trust, but in the case of a testamentary trust the trust must have been created by the valid last will of a person who predeceased the testator [Prob. Code § 6300]. A devise to a previously created trust is not invalid because the trust is amendable or revocable, or both, or because the trust was amended after the execution of the will or the death of the testator making the addition [Prob. Code § 6300].

Unless the will provides otherwise, property devised to a previously created trust becomes part of the trust to which it is given and must be administered and disposed of in accordance with the first trust instrument, including any amendments made before or after the death of the testator (regardless of whether the amendments were made before or after execution of the testator's will) [Prob. Code § 6300; see Prob. Code § 82(a)(1) ("trust" includes addition to trust); see also discussion in § 64B.33].

[d] Estate Tax Considerations

If the person making the addition is also a trustee or cotrustee of the trust, or holds a power of appointment over the trust assets, the added assets may be included in the person's estate for federal estate tax purposes. Under I.R.C. § 2036(a)(2), if a person transfers property but retains the right (either alone or in conjunction with another person) to designate those who will possess or enjoy the transferred property or its income, the property will be included in the person's gross estate. A right to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property will be deemed to have been retained if the property is transferred to a trust under which such a right exists, even if the right was not reserved in the instrument of transfer [see State Street Trust Company v. United States (1st Cir. [Mass.] 1959) 263 F.2d 635, 637 (father transferred property to trusts created by children)]. A right to designate those who will possess or enjoy the property exists whenever there is a power to shift substantially the economic benefits of a trust between the income beneficiaries and remaindermen [State Street Trust Company v. United States (1st Cir. 1959) 263 F.2d 635, 639 (broad investment discretion in cotrustees); see Treas. Reg. § 20.2036-1(b)(3)].

[e] Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax Considerations

An addition to a trust may also have generation-skipping transfer tax consequences. If the trust to which the assets are added distributes the assets (or income earned from those assets) to a beneficiary who is assigned to a generation that is two or more generations below that of the transferor, the transfer may trigger imposition of the generation-skipping transfer tax [see I.R.C. §§ 2601, 2611, 2612]. It is important to note that portions of a trust that are attributable to transfers from different transferors will be treated as separate trusts for purposes of determining the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax [I.R.C. § 2654(b)(1)]. Further, substantially separate and independent shares of different beneficiaries in a trust will be similarly treated as separate trusts [I.R.C. § 2654(b)(2)]. For a general consideration of the generation-skipping transfer tax, see discussions in Ch. 64, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions, § 64.40[1].

§ 64B.251 Additions by Third Parties Prohibited

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to prohibit the trustee from accepting additions to the trust from sources other than the estate of the testator. For a provision permitting the trustee to accept such additions, see § 64B.250.

[b] Prohibiting Additions to Trust

Although additions to a trust may be advantageous under certain circumstances [see § 64B.250[1]; see also discussion in § 64B.33], they may generate adverse tax consequences under other circumstances [see discussions § 64B.250[1][d] et seq.].

A will provision specifically empowering the trustee to accept additions to the trust is not essential, since every trustee has this power unless the will provides otherwise [Prob. Code § 16221; see Prob. Code § 16200(b)]. Conversely, however, a will provision forbidding the trustee to accept additions is necessary if the testator wishes to prohibit additions. This form will accomplish the latter purpose.

 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 D. Vacancies in Trusteeship

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.270

§ 64B.270 Appointment of Alternate and Successor Trustees and Cotrustees by Testator

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to appoint alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees to serve in the event that the trustees or cotrustees appointed in the will are unable or unwilling to serve or to continue to serve. For provisions appointing trustees and cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.200-64A.202. For a provision authorizing the trustee or cotrustee designated in the will to appoint a successor trustee or cotrustee, see § 64B.271. For a clause providing that, if any cotrustee named in the will is unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as cotrustee, the powers of the trust may be exercised by the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64B.272.

[b] Appointment of Alternate and Successor Trustees

[i] Statutory Rules

Vacancies in the trusteeship may occur from a variety of causes. If the person named as trustee rejects the trust [Prob. Code § 15643(a)], cannot be identified [Prob. Code § 15643(b)], or does not exist [Prob. Code § 15643(b)], there will be a vacancy. If a trustee who has accepted the trust resigns [Prob. Code § 15643(c)], is removed from office [Prob. Code § 15643(c)], or dies [Prob. Code § 15643(d)], a vacancy will also occur. Other less obvious causes of vacancy are the appointment of a conservator or guardian of the person or estate of an individual trustee [Prob. Code § 15643(e)], or the trustee is the subject of an order for relief in bankruptcy [Prob. Code § 15643(f)], and the revocation of the charter of (or appointment of a receiver for) any trust company that is serving as trustee [Prob. Code § 15643(g), (h)].

Under the Trust Law, if the will specifies a practical method for filling a vacancy, or if it names a person to fill the vacancy, the vacancy must be filled as provided in the will [Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. If the will makes no provision for filling the vacancy, all of the adult beneficiaries may agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company [Prob. Code § 15660(c)]; see Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined). If the adult beneficiaries do not agree that the vacancy be filled by a trust company, the court may appoint a trustee to fill the vacancy [Prob. Code § 15660(d)]. If the trust provides for more than one trustee, the court may, in its discretion, appoint the original number or any lesser number of cotrustees [Prob. Code § 15660(d)]. Although the selection of a trustee is entrusted to the discretion of the court, the court must give consideration to the wishes of any beneficiary who is 14 years of age or older [Prob. Code § 15660(d)].

[ii] Will Provisions

Whenever a will appoints an individual as trustee or cotrustee, it is advisable to name an alternate or successor trustee or trustees to act in the event the first trustee is unable or unwilling to serve or to continue to serve. Such an appointment will serve three valuable purposes. First, it will obviate the necessity for judicial proceedings for the appointment of a successor trustee or cotrustee. Second, it will avoid the expense of premiums for the bonds that must be posted by court-appointed trustees and cotrustees [see Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3) (individual trustee not named in will must post bond except under compelling circumstances), Prob. Code § 15602(a)(1), (2) (no bond unless required by will or court order); Prob. Code § 15602(e) (no bond required of trust company)]. Third, it will insure that a trustee acceptable to the testator will serve in that capacity.

The form set forth below designates two alternate or successor trustees, but may be modified to provide for any number deemed desirable by the attorney and the testator.

The typical testamentary trust will continue for many years. For this reason, alternate and successor trustees able and willing to serve over the full life of the trust should be designated. An aged person, or a person whose health is poor, ordinarily should not be named as an alternate or successor trustee. Many testators and will drafters name corporate trustees as alternate and successor trustees because the corporate trustees may be expected to continue in existence well beyond the lifetimes of the natural persons who are interested in the trust. Even when a corporate trustee is designated, however, it may be advisable to name an alternate or successor, since the corporate trustee may decline to serve or resign the office.

Unless the trust instrument provides otherwise, the powers conferred on the original trustee can properly be exercised by successors to the original trustee [Restatement (Second) of Trusts (1959), § 196] since, in the absence of a contrary direction in the instrument, the powers of the trust attach to the office rather than to the trustee [ Estate of Canfield (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 443, 447, 181 P.2d 732]. This form makes it clear that the successor trustee has the same powers, rights, discretions, obligations, and immunities as the original trustee. If, for any reason, the testator wishes to restrict the rights or powers of a successor in any, the form should be modified accordingly.

§ 64B.271 Trustee or Cotrustee Authorized to Designate Successor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to empower a trustee or cotrustee named in the will to appoint a successor or alternate trustee or cotrustee to serve in the event the first trustee or cotrustee is unable or unwilling to serve. For provisions appointing trustees and cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.200-64A.202. For a provision appointing alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees by name, see § 64B.270. For a clause providing that, if any cotrustee named in the will is unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as cotrustee, the powers of the trust may be exercised by the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees, see § 64B.272.

[b] Power of Trustee to Appoint Successor

The will may empower the trustee to designate an alternate or successor trustee [Prob. Code § 15660(b)]. Such a power does not constitute a delegation of the powers or discretion of the trustee, but rather provides a method, in addition to appointment by the testator or by the court, whereby a trustee may be appointed if the original trustee fails to qualify or becomes unable to serve [ Estate of Kessler (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 383, 388, 261 P.2d 27 ].

The general rule is that the authority of a trustee to name a successor will be strictly construed ["Trustee's appointment of associate or successor trustee under powers of trust instrument," 57 A.L.R. 2d 887, 889 (1958)] . When a provision in a will empowers the trustee to name a successor, however, and the provision is duly followed, the successor takes under the will and derives the power to act from the act of the testator, precisely as though the successor had been originally named therein ["Trustee's appointment of associate or successor trustee under powers of trust instrument," 57 A.L.R. 2d 887, 889 (1958)] .

If _____ [the Trustee or any Cotrustee] named in this will is, for any reason, unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee], _____ [he or she or it] may decline to accept or resign the office and appoint an alternate or successor _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee] to carry out the terms and provisions of _____ [the trust or all of the trusts] provided for in this will, with the same powers, rights, discretions, obligations, and immunities as the original _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee]. Any such appointment may be made only by an instrument in writing signed by the original _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee] and delivered to each adult income beneficiary, the parent or guardian of each minor income beneficiary, and the _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee] being appointed.

§ 64B.272 Powers of Cotrustee Who Dies or Resigns May Be Exercised by Remaining Cotrustees

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that if any cotrustee named in the will is unable or unwilling to act or to continue to act as cotrustee, the powers of the trust may be exercised by the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees.

For provisions appointing trustees and cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.200-64A.202. For a provision appointing alternate or successor trustees or cotrustees by name, see § 64B.270. For a provision authorizing a trustee or cotrustee designated in the will to appoint a successor trustee or cotrustee, see § 64B.271. For provisions dividing or allocating the powers of cotrustees, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, §§ 64A.360-64A.363.

[b] Surviving Cotrustees

Unless the will provides otherwise, if a vacancy occurs in the office of a cotrustee, the remaining cotrustee or cotrustees may act for the trust as if they were the only trustees [Prob. Code § 15621; see Drinkhouse v. Birch Ranch & Oil Co. (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 923, 927-928, 219 P.2d 45; Restatement (Second) of Trusts (1959), § 195]. Whether or not the trust will survive to the remaining trustees depends upon the terms of the trust instrument, which are controlling [Estate of Tourny (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 501, 505, 316 P.2d 763].

While a will provision authorizing surviving cotrustees to exercise the powers of a cotrustee who withdraws from the trust is not strictly necessary, it may serve the useful purpose of apprising those concerned with the trust that the powers will survive.

 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 E. Compensation of Trustees

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.290

§ 64B.290 Fixed Amount as Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to provide that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed annual amount as compensation for their services. For a provision establishing the trustee's compensation as a percentage of the trust corpus, see § 64B.291. For a provision entitling the trustee to reasonable compensation, see § 64B.292. For a clause providing that a corporate cotrustee will be compensated as if it were sole trustee and that an individual cotrustee will receive no compensation, or nominal compensation, see § 64B.293. For a clause providing for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee, see § 64B.294. For a bequest in lieu of compensation, see § 64B.295. For a termination or "wind-up" fee, see § 64B.296.

[b] Compensation of Trustees

[i] In General

The general rule is that the trustee's compensation is to be determined in accordance with the provisions, if any, of the trust instrument [Prob. Code § 15680(a)]. However, this general rule is subject to important qualifications. First, the trustee's compensation may be reduced or denied entirely if a trustee commits (or threatens to commit) a breach of trust [Prob. Code § 16420(a)(7)]. Second, the court may allow greater or lesser compensation if the trustee's duties are substantially different from those contemplated when the trust was created [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(1)], if compensation in accordance with the trust would be inequitable or unreasonably low or high [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(2)], or if other extraordinary circumstances call for equitable relief [Prob. Code § 15680(b)(3)]. However, an order fixing or allowing greater or lesser compensation can apply only prospectively to actions taken in administration of the trust after the order is made [Prob. Code § 15680(c)].

If the trust instrument does not specify the trustee's compensation, the trustee is entitled to reasonable compensation under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 15681]. Although the trustee may fix and pay its compensation without first obtaining a court order [Prob. Code § 16243; see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 655 (1986)], the court, on petition of the trustee or any beneficiary, may review and fix the amount [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(9)]. Further, the court may in appropriate cases fix an amount of periodic compensation to continue for as long as the court determines proper [Prob. Code § 15682].

A trustee who is also the attorney for the trustee generally may not receive dual compensation for serving as trustee and for acting as attorney for the trustee [Prob. Code § 15687(a)], even when the trust instrument authorizes dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(a)] or waives the rule against dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(e)]. However, dual compensation is permissible if the trustee is related by blood or marriage to, or is a cohabitant with, the settlor [Prob. Code § 15687(c)], or if the court approves the compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(a),(d)(1)]; see Prob. Code § 17200(b)(21). Dual compensation may also be received if the trustee gives 30 days advance notice to the beneficiaries and any other persons entitled to notice and, within that period, no objection is received to the dual compensation [Prob. Code § 15687(d)(2)]. For further discussion of the rules limiting dual compensation of trustees and attorneys, see § 64B.35[3].

[ii] Amount

There is no inflexible rule for determining the reasonableness of compensation, and when a trustee is entitled to reasonable compensation the actual amount depends largely on the individual circumstances of the case [see Estate of McLaughlin (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 462, 467-468, 274 P.2d 868; see discussion in § 64B.35[2]]. Factors that may be considered in determining reasonableness include the income of the trust; the success or failure of the trustee's administration; any unusual skill or experience the trustee may have brought to his or her work; the fidelity or disloyalty displayed; the amount of risk and responsibility assumed; the time consumed in carrying out the trust; the custom in the community as to allowances to trustees by settlors or courts and as to charges exacted by trust companies and banks; whether the work done is routine or involves skill and judgment; and any estimate the trustee has given of the value of the trustee's own services [ Estate of McLaughlin (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 462, 467-468, 274 P.2d 868 ].

[iii] Local Guidelines

In some counties, the courts have established percentage guidelines for the determination of reasonable trustees' fees [for further discussion of percentages and percentage guidelines, see § 64B.291[1][b][i] et seq.]. In Marin County, for example, one-half of one percent of the principal value plus 10 to 15 percent of the income usually will be considered a reasonable fee if the trustee is actively managing an income-producing trust [Marin County Rules of Probate Practice, § 1407(d)]. If the income-producing property is actively managed real estate, the Marin County rules indicate that a reasonable fee will normally be about three-quarters of one percent of the corpus. If the corpus is a mixture of different types of income-producing properties, a reasonable fee in Marin will normally be a combination of the above percentages [Marin County Rules of Probate Practice, § 1407(d)]. In San Francisco, ordinary fees for trustees must not exceed 1 percent of the value of real estate actually managed by the trustee, eight-tenths of one percent of the first $400,000 of market value of the remaining assets, and three-quarters of 1 percent of the balance [San Francisco County Probate Policy Manual, § 13.02(b)]. Alternatively, a fee of six percent of income may be allowed in the court's discretion in San Francisco [San Francisco County Probate Policy Manual, § 13.02(b)].

Not every locality has local guidelines. For example, percentage guidelines formerly in effect in the Los Angeles County Superior Court have been abandoned. In Los Angeles County, the test is simply whether the fee is reasonable in view of the work done, the size of the estate, and all the circumstances of the case [Marshall, California Probate Procedure (4th ed., Parker & Son Publications, Inc., 1985), vol. I, § 1728].

[iv] Corporate Trustees

It is customary for corporate trustees to establish fee schedules [see Miller, "Survey of California Corporate Fiduciary Fees and Practices," Estate Planning, Trust & Prob. News, vol. 6. No. 5 (Summer/Fall 1985), 18-22]. In addition to percentages, some corporate fee schedules include minimum sizes of trusts that will be accepted, minimum annual fees, one-time "start-up" or "acceptance" fees, and one-time termination or "wind-up" fees [for a general discussion of termination or "wind-up" fees, see § 64B.296[1][b]; for a will provision providing for a termination fee to be paid to the trustee upon termination of its duties as trustee, see § 64B.296]. Before appointing any corporate trustee, the testator and the will drafter should contact the prospective trustee's trust department to determine its policy with respect to fee percentages, minimum trust sizes, minimum annual fees, "wind-up" fees, and any other fees or charges that may be incurred by the trust.

Deregulation of the bank and savings and loan industries has introduced a large measure of competition to the trust business, with the result that the trust policies of banks and savings and loan associations now differ widely and change frequently. While some statewide banks impose high minimum-size requirements (ranging from as little as $50,000 to as much as $500,000), other smaller institutions impose none. Some institutions that do not impose minimum-size requirements, however, impose minimum annual fees (ranging from as little as $500 to as much as $2,500) which make it economically prohibitive for very small trusts to be committed to their care. While some institutions impose miscellaneous fees and charges (such as "acceptance" or "wind-up" fees), others do not.

The investment duties required of the trustee may also affect the fees charged by a corporate trustee. Many corporate trustees will charge less for assets which are invested only in common trust funds. If the testator is concerned about minimizing the fees charged by a corporate trustee, the will drafter should inquire of the prospective corporate trustee if reduced fees are available for trusts that require limited investment activity on the part of the trustee [see Miller, "Survey of California Corporate Fiduciary Fees and Practices," Estate Planning, Trust & Prob. News, vol. 6. No. 5 (Summer/Fall 1985), 18-22].

In Estate of Taylor [(1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 16, 21-22, 85 Cal. Rptr. 474], a corporate trustee sought and was granted a higher fee than that provided for in the will upon a showing that trustee fee schedules customarily used in the community provided for higher compensation. The will fixed the trustee's compensation as one-quarter of 1 percent of the value of the corpus. A corporate trustee sought and was granted three-quarters of 1 percent upon testimony that its currently disseminated fee schedule called for compensation of three-quarters of 1 percent, that this rate was competitive and in line with those of other corporate trustees in the community, and that no competent trustee would undertake the trust for less than the larger fee [ Estate of Taylor (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 16, 21-22, 85 Cal. Rptr. 474].

[v] Extraordinary Services

The compensation provided for in the trust instrument will usually cover only "ordinary" services. If and when the trustee renders "extraordinary" services, the trustee may be entitled to additional compensation [see Prob. Code § 15680(b); see also discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][i]]. "Ordinary" services are those which trustees usually and customarily render on a continuing basis; "extraordinary" services are those which are not usually rendered by trustees, or are rendered only in unusual circumstances [see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., Little, Brown & Co., 1967), vol. III, § 242.2]. Neither the cases nor the statutes comprehensively define "ordinary" or "extraordinary" services; however, the Probate Code offers examples of services which, when performed by executors and administrators, will be deemed "extraordinary" and for which extra compensation may be awarded. Although not directly applicable to services rendered by trustees, these examples are illustrative of the kind of services that are deemed extraordinary. They include sales or mortgages of real or personal property; contested or litigated claims against the estate; preparation of estate, income, sales or other tax returns; adjustment, litigation, or payment of taxes; litigation in regard to the estate or estate property; and carrying on a business [Prob. Code § 902].

[vi] Apportionment Among Cotrustees

Unless the trust instrument provides (or the cotrustees agree) otherwise, when there are two or more cotrustees, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services they have rendered [Prob. Code § 15683].

[c] Reimbursement of Expenses

In addition to compensation, a trustee is entitled to repayment out of the trust property for expenditures that were properly incurred in the administration of the trust [Prob. Code § 15684(a)]. Even if the expenditures were not properly incurred in the administration of the trust, the trustee is entitled to repayment out of the trust property if and to the extent that the expenditures actually benefited the trust [Prob. Code § 15684(b)].

If litigation is necessary to preserve the trust, the trustee is entitled to reimbursement for his or her expenditures from the trust. However, if the litigation is specifically for the trustee's benefit, the trustee must bear his or her own costs, and is not entitled to reimbursement [ Terry v. Conlan (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1461, 1464, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 (trustee who did not participate in litigation as neutral trustee to defend trust and protect its assets, but rather to pursue her own interests and those of her siblings to detriment of other beneficiary, was required to bear her own costs)]. If the litigation does not involve a challenge to the existence of the trust, but is a dispute over who will control and benefit from it, the trustee is not entitled to reimbursement because no matter who prevails in the litigation, the trust will remain intact, and the trustee's only participation in the litigation should be that of a neutral party [ Terry v. Conlan (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1445, 1461, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 ] .

Further, a trustee who has made advances for the protection of the trust has an equitable lien on the trust property to secure repayment of those advances, plus interest [Prob. Code § 15685]. The effect of this lien is to relieve the trustee of any obligation to transfer the trust property to the beneficiary until the trustee is paid or his or her right to payment is otherwise secured [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 244, Comment c and discussion in § 64B.35[8]].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 E. Compensation of Trustees

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.291

§ 64B.291 Percentage of Principal as Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to fix the trustee's compensation at a percentage of the trust corpus. For a clause providing that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed amount as compensation, see § 64B.290. For a provision entitling the trustee to reasonable compensation, see § 64B.292. For a clause providing that a corporate cotrustee will be compensated as if it were sole trustee and that an individual cotrustee will receive no compensation, or compensation in a nominal amount, see § 64B.293. For a clause providing for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee, see § 64B.294. For a bequest in lieu of compensation, see § 64B.295. For a termination or "wind-up" fee, see § 64B.296.

[b] Compensation As a Percentage

[i] Court Guidelines

Percentage guidelines for the determination of trustees' fees have been established by some courts in California [see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][iii]] and are often employed by corporate trustees in determining their compensation [see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][iv]]. When percentage guidelines are used, they vary considerably, depending on the type of property held by the trust and the expected difficulty of administration.

[ii] Variable Percentages

The percentages may vary from as little as one-half of one percent to as much as a full percent, and the base may be either the value of the trust principal or the annual income of the trust. Alternatively, compensation may be equal to a percentage of the value of the principal plus a percentage of the annual income. In one California county, for example, the percentage guidelines established by the probate court call for trustee compensation of one-half of 1 percent of the value of the trust principal plus 10 to 15 percent of the annual income, if the trust is an income-producing trust. If the income-producing property is actively managed real estate, the same court's guidelines call for compensation equal to three-quarters of 1 percent of the value of the trust principal. In another county, the probate court's percentage guidelines limit the maximum fees to 1 percent of the value of real estate actually managed by the trustee, plus eight-tenths of 1 percent of the first $400,000 of market value of the remaining assets and three-quarters of 1 percent of the balance. In the alternative, the same court's guidelines provide that compensation may be equal to 6 percent of the annual income of the trust. The fees charged by corporate trustees are often equal to three-quarters of 1 percent of the value of the trust principal [ Estate of Taylor (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 16, 21-22, 85 Cal. Rptr. 474 ; for a general consideration of percentage guidelines for the determination of trustees' fees, see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][iii]].

[iii] Annual Revaluations of Principal

It is customary for corporate trustees to revalue the trust principal on a yearly basis for the purpose of determining their compensation; and it is proper for the court, in determining the amounts of that compensation, to consider the custom [ Estate of Guasti (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 612, 616-617, 256 P.2d 629 ].

Compensation of Trustee(s)

_____ [The Trustee or Each of the Trustees] shall be entitled to receive _____ percent of the fair market value of the principal of the trust estate, as determined on an annual basis, during each calendar year for all ordinary services rendered as _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee] in behalf of the trust provided for in this will, and to reasonable additional compensation for any extraordinary services rendered, all without court order.  CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 E. Compensation of Trustees

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.292

§ 64B.292 Reasonable Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that the trustee or cotrustees will receive reasonable compensation for their services as trustees. If the prospective trustee or cotrustee is a corporate trustee (such as a bank or trust company), the form may be used to provide that the trustee or cotrustee will receive reasonable fees to be determined in accordance with its standard fee schedule as that schedule exists from time to time. For a general discussion of the compensation of corporate trustees, see § 64B.290[1][b][iv].

For a clause providing that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed amount as compensation, see § 64B.290. For a provision establishing the trustee's compensation as a percentage of the trust corpus, see § 64B.291. For a clause providing that a corporate cotrustee will be compensated as if it were sole trustee and that an individual cotrustee will receive no compensation, or nominal compensation, see § 64B.293. For a clause providing for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee, see § 64B.294. For a bequest in lieu of compensation, see § 64B.295. For a termination or "wind-up" fee, see § 64B.296.

For a general discussion of trustee compensation, see § 64B.290[1].

[b] Reasonable Compensation

[i] In General

What constitutes reasonable compensation will vary according to the circumstances of each case, and the court has wide discretion to determine the amount [ Estate of McLaughlin (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 462, 468, 274 P.2d 868 ; for a consideration of factors properly considered in determining reasonable compensation, see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][ii].

[ii] Advantages

A will provision allowing the trustee reasonable compensation will, in appropriate circumstances, serve the interests of both the trustee and the trust estate. Such a provision will avoid the rigidity of a fee schedule, which may be unfair to the trustee (or to the trust) if investment conditions change significantly. A trustee may have a greater incentive to serve the best interests of the trust if the trustee knows that, in any event, the compensation received will be adequate. Reasonable compensation may, in some cases, be less than either a fixed fee or a fee determined by the percentage method, thus resulting in savings for the trust.

[iii] Disadvantages

If the will provides simply that the trustee will receive reasonable compensation, and if the trustee and the beneficiaries do not agree as to what is reasonable under the circumstances, it may be necessary to seek a court determination of the amount. Although a trustee may fix and pay its compensation without first obtaining a court order [Prob. Code § 16243; see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 655 (1986)], the court, on petition of the trustee or any beneficiary, may fix the amount [Prob. Code § 17200(b)(9)]. Further, the court may in appropriate cases fix an amount of periodic compensation to continue for as long as the court determines proper [Prob. Code § 15682]. Providing for a fixed fee may help to avoid the necessity for seeking a court determination and save the trust estate the time, expense, and inconvenience attendant upon judicial proceedings.

[iv] Compensation in Accordance With Trustee's Standard Fee Schedule

The necessity of seeking a judicial determination of the amount of the trustee's fee may also be avoided by providing that the trustee will receive a reasonable fee to be determined in accordance with the trustee's standard schedule of trustee fees.

Nearly every corporate trustee maintains and disseminates a standard schedule of trust fees [for a general discussion of the compensation of corporate trustees, see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][iv]]. A will provision basing the trustee's compensation on its own fee schedule will have several distinct advantages. First, it will provide a convenient method for precisely determining the amount of the trustee's fees. Second, it will assure the trustee and the other persons interested in the trust that the fee will be reasonable. Third, it will automatically be acceptable to the trustee, since it will be based on the trustee's own schedule.

It should be remembered that a person named as trustee in the trust instrument may reject the trust [Prob. Code §§ 15601, 15643(a)] and that a trustee who has accepted the trust may resign [Prob. Code §§ 15640, 15643(c)]. Compensation that is acceptable to the trustee may help to assure that a competent trustee will continue to serve.

[2] FORM*Reasonable Compensation*Compensation of Trustee(s)

_____ [The Trustee or Each of the Trustees] shall be entitled to receive reasonable compensation for all ordinary services rendered as _____ [Trustee or Cotrustee] in behalf of the trust provided for in this will [add, if trustee will be corporate trustee: to be determined in accordance with the Trustee's standard schedule of trust fees from time to time existing], and to reasonable additional compensation for any extraordinary services rendered, all without court order.

§ 64B.293 Corporate Cotrustee to Be Compensated as if It Were Sole Trustee; Individual Cotrustee to Receive No Compensation or Nominal Fee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that a corporate cotrustee will be compensated as if it were the sole trustee of the trust, and that an individual cotrustee will receive no compensation or nominal compensation. For a clause providing that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed amount as compensation, see § 64B.290. For a provision establishing the trustee's compensation as a percentage of the trust corpus, see § 64B.291. For a provision entitling the trustee to reasonable compensation, see § 64B.292. For a clause providing for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee, see § 64B.294. For a bequest in lieu of compensation, see § 64B.295. For a termination or "wind-up" fee, see § 64B.296.

[b] Apportionment of Compensation Between Cotrustees

Unless the trust instrument provides (or the cotrustees agree) otherwise, when there are two or more cotrustees, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services they have rendered [Prob. Code § 15683]. Problems of apportionment frequently arise when one of the cotrustees is a corporate trustee, e.g., a bank or trust company. Since corporate trustees almost invariably have custody of all money, securities, and other personal property of the trust estate, maintain all records and accounts for the trust, receive all receipts, and make all necessary payments, disbursements, and distributions [see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.365], they usually expect the same compensation that a sole trustee would receive. Some corporate trustees strongly suggest that the will include a provision entitling them to such compensation. This form provides that the corporate cotrustee will receive the same compensation as a sole trustee. In addition, it provides that the individual trustee named in the trust will receive no compensation or, in the alternative, nominal compensation. An individual trustee may be willing to serve without compensation, or with merely nominal compensation, if he or she is a family member or an income or remainder beneficiary under the trust.

A trustee who does not receive compensation will be held to the same standards as a trustee who does receive compensation, since the standard of care required of trustees is not affected by whether or not they receive any compensation [Prob. Code § 16041].

Corporate Cotrustee to Receive Same Compensation as if It Were Sole Trustee

For its services as cotrustee in behalf of the trust provided for in this will, _____ [name of corporate cotrustee] shall receive the same compensation that it would receive if it were acting as the sole Trustee.

_____ [name of individual cotrustee] shall receive _____ [no compensation or specify nominal amount, e.g., the sum of $150 annually] for _____ [his or her] services as cotrustee.

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee. For a clause providing that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed amount as compensation, see § 64B.290. For a provision establishing the trustee's compensation as a percentage of the trust corpus, see § 64B.291. For a provision entitling the trustee to reasonable compensation, see § 64B.292. § 64B.295 Bequest in Lieu of Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to make a bequest in lieu of compensation. The form includes two alternative provisions. The first alternative provision describes the bequest to be made. The second refers to a bequest made in another paragraph of the will. For a clause providing that the trustee or cotrustees will receive a fixed amount as compensation, see § 64B.290. For a provision establishing the trustee's compensation as a percentage of the trust corpus, see § 64B.291. For a provision entitling the trustee to reasonable compensation, see § 64B.292. For a clause providing that a corporate cotrustee will be compensated as if it were sole trustee and that an individual cotrustee will receive no compensation, or nominal compensation, see § 64B.293. For a clause providing for a fractional division of compensation between a corporate cotrustee and an individual cotrustee, see § 64B.294. For a termination or "wind-up" fee, see § 64B.296.

For a general discussion of trustee compensation, see § 64B.290[1].

[b] Bequest in Lieu of Compensation

If the will makes a bequest to a person who is also appointed as trustee, it is a question of interpretation whether the bequest is intended to be in addition to or in lieu of the trustee's regular compensation [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 242, comment f]. It is also a question of interpretation whether the bequest is intended to be unconditional or conditioned upon the trustee either qualifying as trustee or completely performing the duties of the office. In the absence of evidence of a different intention, the inference is that a bequest to a trustee is not conditional [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 242, comment f].

[c] Tax Considerations

Tax considerations may affect a testator's decision to provide compensation for a trustee or to make a bequest to the trustee in lieu of compensation; and, if a bequest is made, similar considerations may affect the decision to make the bequest conditional or unconditional.

A gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance is not subject to income tax [I.R.C. § 102(a)], while compensation received for services as trustee is, like other compensation for personal services, subject to tax [I.R.C. § 61(a)(1) (gross income defined)]. Similarly, an unconditional bequest is not subject to income tax, while a bequest that is conditional upon the performance of services will be subject [see cases discussed below].

In United States v. Merriam [(1923) 263 U.S. 179, 44 S. Ct. 69, 68 L. Ed. 240], the will made large bequests to each of five named individuals. In another part of the same will, the testator appointed the same individuals as co-executors of his estate and cotrustees of the trusts provided for in the will, stating that the bequests were in lieu of all compensation or commissions to which the named individuals would otherwise be entitled as executors or trustees. The United States Supreme Court held that the bequests were not subject to income tax, since qualification as co-executors and cotrustees, and not actual service in that capacity, was the only condition of the bequests. The test was not whether the testator gave the legacies for services, but whether the legatees had to perform the services in order to earn the bequests [United States v. Merriam (1923) 263 U.S., 179, 68 L. Ed. 3d 240, 44 S. Ct. 69; see Bank of New York v. Helvering (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1943) 132 F.2d 773, 774].

In Ream v. Bowers (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1927) 22 F.2d 465, the will provided that "my executors shall each be paid and shall each receive in full payment for all commissions, percentages, and allowances by statute or otherwise, for acting as executors ... the sum of $50,000." The court held that the $50,000 was directed to be paid for personal services, was not a bequest, and was subject to income tax [ Ream v. Bowers (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1927) 22 F.2d 465, 468 ]. In Bank of New York v. Helvering [(2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1943) 132 F.2d 773], the will named two individuals of advanced age as trustees of the testator's estate and gave to each five percent of the principal of the estate and five percent each year upon the income "in lieu of statutory commissions." The court held that the payments received were bequests and not taxable compensation, since the trustees did not have to serve, but only to qualify, in order to receive the original five percent [ Bank of New York v. Helvering (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1943) 132 F.2d 773, 775 ]. The circumstances of each case will dictate the correct interpretation to be given to the will provision [ Bank of New York v. Helvering (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1927) 132 F.2d 773, 775 ].

When deciding whether to make a bequest in lieu of compensation and, if a bequest is made, whether to make the bequest conditional or unconditional, the tax needs and liabilities of the trust and the trustees should be considered. If a bequest in lieu of compensation is conditioned upon actual service as trustee, the bequest will be taxable to the trustee and deductible to the trust. If the bequest is unconditional, it will not be taxable to the trustee. It will, however, be included in the gross estate for federal estate tax purposes and will not be deductible to the trust [see cases discussed above]. The parties should therefore consider income tax brackets of the estate and all trustees.

 PART IV. FORMS
 E. Compensation of Trustees

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.296

§ 64B.296 Termination Fee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide for a "termination fee," to be paid to the trustee upon termination of its duties as trustee. The amount of the fee is a percentage of the value of the trust principal. For will provisions providing for the trustee's compensation for services as trustee, see §§ 64B.290-64B.295. For a general discussion of trustee compensation, see § 64B.290[1].

[b] Termination Fee

When a trustee's duties are terminated for some reason other than failure to perform his or her duties properly, the trustee is ordinarily entitled to special compensation, often referred to as a "wind-up," "termination," or "distribution" fee [see Estate of Baird (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 343, 348-349, 287 P.2d 372 ]. Some corporate trustees charge such fees as a matter of policy [see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b]]. The purpose of this fee is to compensate the trustee for "winding up" the trust affairs and transferring the assets to the new trustee, or to the other person or persons entitled to the assets under terms of the trust.

Although it may be difficult for the testator to anticipate the proper amount of a "wind-up" or "termination" fee, failure to make any provision for the trustee's compensation upon termination could force the withdrawing trustee to petition the court for compensation. To avoid the time, expense, and inconvenience of such a petition, it is recommended that the will include a provision for a termination fee, to be expressed as a percentage of the trust corpus at the time of termination.

[2] FORM

Termination Fee

Termination Fee

If, at any time, the duties of the Trustee shall be terminated for any reason other than the failure of the Trustee properly to perform those duties, the Trustee shall be entitled to receive, out of the principal of the trust estate, a fee to compensate the Trustee for the termination of its services, for winding up the affairs of the trust, and for delivering the trust assets and records to a successor Trustee or Cotrustees, or to any other person or persons who may be entitled to receive them under the terms of this will. This fee shall be equal to _____ [specify percentage, e.g.: three-quarters of one] percent of the fair market value of all of the trust principal at the time of termination, and shall be in addition to any other compensation which the Trustee shall be entitled to receive for its services as Trustee.

 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 F. Bonds and Exculpatory Clauses

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.310

§ 64B.310 Waiver of Bond

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to waive the requirement that the trustee file a bond. The form includes two alternative provisions. The first alternative may be used to waive a bond of any trustee or cotrustee, whether named in the will, appointed by the court, or appointed in the manner provided for in the will. The second may be used to waive a bond unless a timely demand for a bond is made by a beneficiary.

[b] Trustee Bonds

Under the Trust Law [Prob. Code §§ 15000-18201], there is no general requirement that the trustee of a California trust post a bond to secure the performance of his or her duties. A bond will be required, however, if the trust instrument requires one [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(1)], if the court finds a bond necessary to protect the interests of the beneficiaries or other persons having an interest in the trust [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(2)], or if an individual who is not named as trustee in the trust instrument is appointed as trustee by the court [Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3); see discussion in § 64B.36]. The court may excuse the requirement of a bond, reduce or increase the amount of the bond, release a surety, or permit the substitution of another bond with the same or different sureties [Prob. Code § 15602(b)]. However, the court may not excuse the requirement of a bond for an individual who is not named as a trustee in the trust instrument that the court appoints as trustee, except under compelling circumstances. A request by all of the adult beneficiaries of a trust that the bond be waived for this individual constitutes a compelling circumstance [Prob. Code § 15602(b)]. Under no circumstances will a trust company [see Fin. Code § 107; Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined); see also discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.30[3]] be required to give a bond [Prob. Code § 15602(e)]. Even when the law requires a bond, the requirement may be waived if all the beneficiaries and creditors consent and there are no minor or unascertained beneficiaries [ Estate of Shapiro (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 731, 733-734, 181 P.2d 117 ].

Since a bond generally is an unnecessary expense, a provision waiving bond will be desirable in most circumstances. If the testator does not have sufficient confidence in the integrity of the prospective trustee to waive a bond for that trustee, a trustee in whom the testator reposes greater confidence probably should be appointed. However, a bond will insure that the beneficiaries will have added protection in the event of a breach of the trust, which may result from negligent acts or omissions as well as from intentional wrongdoing or dishonesty. If a bond is required, the premium is a proper charge against the trust estate and need not be borne by the trustee personally [Prob. Code § 15602(d)]. Whether or not a bond should be waived is a matter that should be determined under the circumstances of each case.

If the testator does not choose to provide that a bond will never be required, the will may provide that a bond will not be required unless demanded by a beneficiary. If this provision is adopted, the option to require a bond of a particular trustee or cotrustee may be exercised by one or more of the persons who are most interested in the trust. The second alternative provision set forth below will accomplish this object.

Waiver of Bond

Waiver of Bond

[First alternative: no bond required.]

No bond shall be required of any trustee of the trust provided for in this will, whether named in this will, appointed by the court, or appointed in the manner provided for in this will.

[OR]

[Second alternative: No bond required unless demanded by beneficiary.]

No bond shall be required of any trustee of the trust(s) provided for in this will, whether named in this will, appointed by the court, or appointed in the manner provided for in this will, unless demanded by one or more of the income or remainder beneficiaries in the manner set forth in this paragraph. If written demand for a bond is delivered by any beneficiary to any trustee within _____ [specify time, e.g., 10 days] after petition for appointment of that trustee is filed with the court, or all or any part of the trust estate is distributed to that trustee, whichever shall first occur, that trustee shall be required to give a bond in the form and amount required of an administrator of a decedent's estate.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
 PART IV. FORMS
 F. Bonds and Exculpatory Clauses

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.311

§ 64B.311 Provision Relieving Trustee of Liability For Acts and Omissions of Agents and Attorneys

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This provision may be used to relieve the trustee of liability for the acts of attorneys, agents, or advisers employed by the trustee if reasonable care was used in their selection. For provisions relieving the trustee of liability for the trustee's own acts or omissions, see § 64B.312. For a provision authorizing the trustee to employ agents, attorneys, and advisers, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.320.

[b] Liability of Trustee for Acts of Agents and Employees

[i] Liability to Beneficiaries

The circumstances under which trustees may be held liable to beneficiaries for acts or omissions of agents employed by the trustees in the administration of their trusts are spelled out in the Trust Law. First, the act or omission of which the beneficiary complains must be one that would constitute a breach of the trust if committed by the trustee personally [Prob. Code § 16401(b); see Prob. Code § 16400 (breach of trust is violation of any duty trustee owes to beneficiary)]. Second, the trustee may be held liable for an act or omission of an agent only in one or more of the following situations [Prob. Code § 16401(b)]:

- If the trustee directs the act of the agent.
- The trustee delegates to the agent the authority to perform an act that the trustee is under a duty not to delegate.
- The trustee does not use reasonable prudence in the selection or retention of the agent.
- The trustee does not periodically review the agent's overall performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation.

- The trustee conceals the act of the agent.
- The trustee neglects to take reasonable steps to compel the agent to redress the wrong in a case in which the trustee knows of the agent's acts or omissions.

Whether a trustee has acted reasonably in selecting, retaining, supervising, or otherwise exercising the trustee's responsibilities with respect to an agent depends upon application of the prudent person rule [Prob. Code § 16040(a)]; see "Recommendation Proposing the Trust Law," 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 707 (1986); see also discussion in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.39[7]].

[ii] Liability to Third Parties

The trustee's liability to third persons is governed by different rules. In general, trustees are not personally liable to third persons on contracts entered into in their fiduciary capacities unless they fail to reveal their representative capacities or identify their trusts in the contract [Prob. Code § 18000(a)]; but see Prob. Code § 18000(b) (rule applies only to contracts entered into on or after July 1, 1987)]. A trustee is personally liable to third persons for obligations arising from ownership or control of trust property or for torts committed in the course of administration of the trust only if the trustee is personally at fault [Prob. Code §§ 18001, 18002]. To meet this burden, the party seeking to impose personal liability on the trustee must demonstrate that the trustee intentionally or negligently acted or failed to act in a manner that establishes personal fault [ Haskett v. The Villas at Desert Falls (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 864, 877-878, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 ].

Special rules exempt cotrustees from liability to third persons if they do not join in exercising powers held by three or more cotrustees [Prob. Code § 18003] or if they dissent from certain actions taken by their cotrustees [Prob. Code § 18003(b)].

Regardless of whether or not the trustees are personally liable, third persons may assert contract, property, or tort claims against the trustees in their representative capacities [Prob. Code § 18004]. Third parties may proceed against the trustee's personal assets only if the trustee is personally liable on the claim [ Haskett v. The Villas at Desert Falls (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 864, 880, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 ]. Any question of liability as between the trust estate and the trustee personally may be determined by the court on petition of any trustee or beneficiary [Prob. Code § 18005; see Prob. Code § 17200(b)].

[c] Exculpatory Provisions

An exculpatory provision in a trust instrument will be effective to relieve a trustee of liability for breach of trust [Prob. Code § 16461(a)]. Since exculpatory provisions are effective to relieve trustees of liability for breach of trust only [see Prob. Code § 16461(a)], and since a breach of trust consists of a violation of a duty that the trustee owes to a beneficiary and not to a third party [Prob. Code § 16400], it follows that an exculpatory provision will be ineffective to relieve the trustee of any liability the trustee may have to a third party. Further, an exculpatory provision will not relieve a trustee of liability for a breach of trust committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference to the interests of the beneficiaries [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(1)]; nor will such a provision relieve a trustee of liability for any profit that the trustee derives from a breach of trust [Prob. Code § 16461(b)(2)].

Although exculpatory clauses are widely recognized and enforced [see Restatement (Second) of Trusts, vol. 3, Appendix, § 222, Reporter's Notes], they are strictly construed [Restatement (Second) of Trusts, § 222, comment a]. An exculpatory clause will be effective to relieve a trustee of liability only to the extent to which it is clearly provided that the trustee will be excused [ Corbett v. Benioff (1932) 126 Cal. App. 772, 776, 14 P.2d 1028 ].

[2] FORM*Provision Relieving Trustee of Liability For Acts and Omissions of Agents and Attorneys*Limitation on Liability of Trustee

The Trustee may rely on information or advice given by any custodian, investment adviser, accountant, attorney, or other agent or adviser employed by the Trustee for the purpose of assisting the Trustee in the proper management and administration of the trust. The Trustee shall not be personally liable for any neglect, omission, or wrongdoing of any custodian, investment adviser, accountant, attorney, or any other agent or adviser so employed, provided that reasonable care was exercised in his or her selection.

§ 64B.312 Provision Relieving Trustee of Liability for Trustee's Own Acts and Omissions

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to relieve the trustee of liability for the trustee's own acts and omissions. Two alternative provisions are included. The first may be used to relieve the trustee of liability for any act or omission that was not committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference to the interests of the beneficiaries, and from which the trustee did not derive a profit. The second may be used to relieve the trustee of liability for any act or omission that results from good faith reliance on the opinions of attorneys employed by the trustee.

For a provision permitting the trustee to employ custodians, agents, advisers, and attorneys to assist and advise the trustee in the execution of the trust, see Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.320.

[b] Related Provision

This form is to be distinguished from the form in § 64B.311, which also refers to attorneys and agents, although for a different purpose. The form in § 64B.311 is designed to relieve the trustee of liability for the acts and omissions of agents and attorneys. This form is designed to relieve the trustee of liability for the trustee's own acts and omissions. The second alternative provision of this form mentions attorneys, but only for the purpose of excusing the trustee from liability for the trustee's own acts or omissions.

For liability of the trustee for losses occasioned by the acts or omissions of agents, attorneys, or advisers, see discussion in § 64B.311[1][b]. For the effect of exculpatory provisions on the trustee's liability, see discussion in § 64B.311[1][c].

[c] Importance of Provision

Since any person appointed as a trustee may decline to accept the appointment [Prob. Code §§ 15601(a), 15643(a)] or resign the office after accepting it [Prob. Code §§ 15640, 15643(c)], a capable person may refuse to serve as trustee unless he or she is protected against claims of personal liability arising out of his or her acts or omissions as trustee. The law relating to trusts is complex, and a prospective trustee may well demand and expect reasonable freedom from personal liability while serving on behalf of the trust. It is reasonable to expect freedom from liability while acting in good faith or in reliance on the opinions of attorneys employed to assist the trustee in the property execution of the trust. This form confers that freedom.

Provision Relieving Trustee of Liability for Trustee's Own Acts and Omissions

Limitation on Liability of Trustee

[First alternative: trustee not liable for act or omission that is not committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference to interests of beneficiaries, and from which trustee does not derive profit.]

The Trustee shall not be liable to any beneficiary, to any heir of mine, to any heir of any beneficiary, or to the trust estate for any act or omission of the Trustee, except an act or omission that is committed intentionally, with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with reckless indifference to the interests of any beneficiary of the trust, or an act or omission from which the trustee derives a profit.

[OR]

[Second alternative: trustee not liable for act or omission that results from good faith reliance on opinions of attorneys.]

The Trustee may consult with any attorney or attorneys employed by the Trustee in connection with the trust or any matter or matters related to its execution, management, or administration; and, provided reasonable care was used in their selection, the opinion or opinions of those attorneys shall be full and complete authorization and protection to the Trustee for any act or acts taken or not taken. The Trustee shall not be liable to any beneficiary, to any heir of mine, to any heir of any beneficiary, or to the trust estate, for any act or omission of the Trustee that results from good faith reliance on, and is in accord with, any such opinion or opinions.

§ 64B.330 Provision Empowering Beneficiary to Move Place of Trust Administration by Changing Trustee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to empower a beneficiary to move the place of trust administration by changing the trustee.

[b] Moving Trust Administration

[i] Practical Difficulties

If the sole or principal beneficiary of a testamentary trust moves from the community in which the trust is administered to a new location, it may be convenient also to move the trust administration to the new location. Such a move may be particularly desirable if the trustee has discretionary powers with regard to the amount of income to be paid to the income beneficiary or the will requires the trustee to consult the beneficiary with regard to investments or other matters. Such a move may also be desirable if the beneficiary is a cotrustee, if the principal asset of the trust is stock in a closely held corporation, other shares of which are held by the beneficiary, or if there are other complications which require that the beneficiary and the trustee consult frequently.

However, moving the place of administration will not facilitate continuing contact between the income beneficiary and the trustee if the trustee is still located in the old place of administration. In addition, changing the place of administration will not automatically effect a change of attorneys for the trust, since the trustee has the sole right to choose the attorney who represents the trust [see In re Ogier (1894) 101 Cal. 381, 385, 35 P. 900 (attorney for executor)].

[ii] Without Court Order

If the trustee is a corporate trustee such as a bank or trust company that has offices in different locations in the state, and if the beneficiary's new place of residence is within the State of California, administration of the trust may be transferred from one office of the corporate trustee to another without court order. Changes of this kind are frequently made at the request of trust beneficiaries. Whether a corporate trustee will grant the beneficiary's request to move the trust administration from one office to another will depend in part on whether there are other beneficiaries, whether the trust requires the trustee to consult frequently with the beneficiary who seeks to move the place of administration, and whether it would be practicable for the attorney for the trustee to continue serving in that capacity after a transfer.

If the trust is not subject to continuing court jurisdiction [see Prob. Code § 17300; see also discussion in § 64B.330[1][b][iii]], a court order is not required to move the place of administration.

[iii] With Court Order

Trusts created by wills executed before July 1, 1977 (and not incorporated by reference in wills executed after that date), and trusts created by wills that expressly provide that they are subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court, may be transferred from one county to another only pursuant to court order [see Prob. Code § 17304 (contents of petition for order, formalities required for order, and effects of transfer)]. For a general discussion of the statutory rules governing wills subject to continuing jurisdiction of the superior court [Prob. Code §§ 17300-17354], see § 64B.39.

[iv] To Another Jurisdiction Outside California

The Trust Law contains special rules relating to the transfer of trusts from California to another jurisdiction [Prob. Code §§ 17400-17405] and from another jurisdiction to California [Prob. Code §§ 17450-17457]. Unlike the rules pertaining to the transfer of trusts from one county to another within California [see Prob. Code § 17304; see discussion in § 64B.330[1][b][iii]], these rules apply to all trusts, whenever executed and whether or not they are subject to continuing court jurisdiction [Prob. Code § 17400]. Court orders are required to transfer these trusts from one state to another [Prob. Code §§ 17401, 17451; see Prob. Code §§ 17400-17457 (contents of petitions for orders, rules relating to notice, hearings, and orders, and effects of transfer); see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .].

[v] Will Provisions

Notwithstanding the statutory rules relating to transfer, the will may prescribe another method for transfer [see Prob. Code §§ 17400(b), 17450(b)]. Since in many situations it is not clear where a trust is located, it would be unnecessarily time-consuming and expensive to require judicial proceedings for transfer whenever a transfer is sought [see 18 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 501, 585 (1986)]. Accordingly, it will generally be desirable to prescribe a nonjudicial method of transfer.

[c] Corporate Trustee

This form provides for the selection of a corporate trustee as the new trustee. While the will may properly empower the beneficiary to select an individual trustee, it is recommended that the new trustee be a corporate trustee. Selection of a corporate trustee will serve four purposes. First, it will relieve the new trustee of the necessity and expense of posting a bond [see Prob. Code § 15602(e) (no bond required of trust company); see also Prob. Code § 15602(a)(3), (b) (individual trustee not named in will must post bond except under compelling circumstances)]. Second, it will assure that the new trustee will be competent and financially responsible. Third, it will insulate the beneficiaries from pressure from friends and relatives to appoint one of them as trustee. Fourth, it will avoid possible income and estate tax problems that might arise if a person interested in the trust was appointed as trustee [see I.R.C. § 678(a) (income taxed to trustee with power to vest corpus or income in himself or herself), I.R.C. § 2041(a) (property subject to general power of appointment included in estate of holder); see also discussions in Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Trustee Provisions, § 64A.32[2], [4]].

This form can be modified to provide for the appointment of an individual trustee if the testator and the attorney, after consideration, believe that such an appointment would be in the best interests of the trust and the beneficiaries or if the trust is too small to be accepted by a corporate trustee. Some corporate trustees customarily refuse to accept the administration of trusts that do not meet their minimum assets requirements [see discussion in § 64B.290[1][b][iv]].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 64B TESTAMENTARY TRUSTS: ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS
PART IV. FORMS
G. Administration

24-64B California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 64B.331

§ 64B.331 Choice of Law Provision

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to provide that the validity, construction, interpretation, and administration of all trusts provided for in the will will be governed by the law of a designated jurisdiction.

[b] Testamentary Trusts and Conflict of Laws

[i] In General

In most cases, it is a simple matter to determine the state whose law will determine questions relating to the validity, interpretation, and administration of a testamentary trust. If, for example, the will is executed in California, the testator dies domiciled in California, all of the trust property is located in California, and the trustee is a resident of California, the law of California will clearly determine all questions relating to the trust in the absence of a will provision to the contrary.

The result may be less clear if the trust has significant contacts with other jurisdictions, if the testator dies a resident of some state other than California, or if some of the trust assets are located in other states or even other countries. In such a case, it may be more difficult to determine which law will apply.

[ii] Testator's Intention

The testator's intention will usually (but not always) govern the resolution of conflict of law questions relating to the trust. The general rule is that if the testator's intention can be determined from the will and if effectuation of that intention would not violate public policy, it will control all questions except those relating to the validity of the will or the trust [Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., 1967), vol. V, § 555; see Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), §§ 268(1), 269(b)(i), 271(a), 273(a), 275, 277(1)]. As to the validity of the trust, the intention of the testator is a significant although not always controlling factor.

The validity of a trust interest in personal property will generally be determined by the law of the testator's domicile at the time of death [Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), § 269], while the validity of a trust interest in real property will be determined by the law of the situs [Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), § 278]. The validity of a trust interest in personal property will, under the general rule, be determined by the law designated by the testator, if the designation is not invalid under the strong public policy of the state of the testator's domicile at death, and if the designated state has a substantial relation to the trust [Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), § 269(b)]; for an extended consideration of the conflict of laws rules relating to testamentary trusts, see Scott, The Law of Trusts (3d ed., 1967), Volume V, Chapter 14, and Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971), Volume 2, Chapter 10.

[iii] California Statutes

Two California statutes specifically pertain to conflict of laws questions involving wills executed after January 1, 1985. Prob. Code § 6113 establishes rules for determining the validity of wills, including wills that establish trusts. Prob. Code § 21103 specifies circumstances under which a testator may designate the law that will govern questions relating to the meaning and legal effect of testamentary dispositions.

Prob. Code § 6113 provides that a will is valid if its execution complies with (1) California law relating to the execution of witnessed wills [see Prob. Code § 6110; see also Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.750[1]]; (2) California law relating to the execution of holographic wills [see Prob. Code § 6111]; (3) California law relating to the execution of international wills [see Prob. Code §§ 6380-6390; see also Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.750[1]]; or (4), under certain circumstances, the law of another jurisdiction. A will is valid under the law of another jurisdiction if:

- The execution of the will complies with the law at the time of execution of the place where the will is executed [Prob. Code § 6113(b)]; or
- The execution of the will complies with the law of the place where, at the time of execution or at the time of death, the testator is domiciled, has a place of abode, or is a national [Prob. Code § 6113(c)].

Prob. Code § 21103 provides that the meaning and legal effect of a disposition in a will must be determined by the local law of a particular state selected by the testator in the will, unless the application of that law would be contrary to any of the following:

- The rights of the surviving spouse to community and quasi-community property;
- Any other public policy of California; or
- The family protection provisions of the Probate Code [see Prob. Code §§ 6500-6615 (family protection provisions)].

For a general discussion of choice of law questions relating to wills, including a discussion of the legislative background of Prob. Code §§ 6113 and 21103, see § 64B.38[1] et seq.

[c] Drafting Considerations

[i] Designating Law of Another Jurisdiction

Opinions differ as to whether the will should or should not include a choice of law provision.

A choice of law provision will sometimes be advisable if the testator is aware of a provision of the law of a particular jurisdiction that will vitally affect the legal meaning or effect of a provision of the trust (e.g., a different limit on perpetuities than the law of California allows, different rules as to omitted heirs, different definitions of the words "representation" or "per stirpes," or different rules as to disinheritance or ademption of bequests). In such a case, a choice of law provision may serve the valuable purpose of heading off difficult, time-consuming, and costly conflict of laws disputes among the persons interested in the trust. Further, it may promote the smooth and efficient administration of the trust by clearly apprising the trustee and other persons interested in the trust of the law that will apply to questions of construction and administration.

As a practical matter, however, the testator or attorney will rarely, if ever, be familiar with the law of a designated jurisdiction other than California, much less whether it would be advantageous or disadvantageous to the trust. Moreover, a direction to apply the law of a particular jurisdiction may deprive the courts of the flexibility necessary to fashion appropriate and equitable solutions to unanticipated problems. An inflexible choice of law rule may force unanticipated and undesirable results by depriving the courts of the considerable latitude afforded by modern conflicts of law rules.

There is also a risk that the law of the designated jurisdiction will change after the will is executed. To avoid this risk, the choice of law provision may be limited to the law of the designated jurisdiction at the time of execution of the will, or at the time of the testator's death. This may make it difficult, however, to accurately determine the applicable law if and when a conflict of law question arises.

[ii] Designating California Law

If the will is drafted and executed in California, it ordinarily will make sense to designate the law of California as governing law. The attorney who drafts a will executed in California by a California domiciliary presumably will be familiar with the applicable provisions of California law and will draft the will with those provisions in mind. If, for example, the word "representation" (or the equivalent phrase, "per stirpes") is used in the will, the attorney will be familiar with the California definition of representation [see Prob. Code § 246] and will have used the word in the sense indicated by the California statute (which may or may not be the same as the word is used in the law of another jurisdiction). Similarly, if the will includes a disinheritance clause, the California attorney will have drafted the clause to comply with the California rules governing disinheritance [for a general discussion of the California law of disinheritance, see Ch. 63, Will Provisions, § 63.650[1]], which may or may not correspond to the disinheritance law of another jurisdiction. Therefore, when the will has been drafted in California, is executed in California by a California domiciliary, and its material provisions correspond to the California law of wills, it is advisable (if any choice of law provision is to be included in the will) to choose the law of California, rather than that of any other jurisdiction.

[2] FORM

Governing Law

The validity, construction, interpretation, and administration of the trust provided for in this will shall be governed by the law of _____ [jurisdiction; e.g., the State of California] in force _____ [from time to time or at the time of execution of this will or at the date of my death].

§ 64B.332 Provision Requiring Continuing Judicial Supervision of Trust

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a will provision that may be used to require that the trust be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court. It should be included in the will only if the trustee feels that the prospective trustee lacks the skill, experience, or integrity necessary to properly administer the trust without continuing judicial supervision.

[b] Continuing Judicial Supervision of Testamentary Trusts

[i] In General

In California, most trusts are not subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court. Under the Trust Law, only trusts created by wills executed before July 1, 1977 (and not incorporated by reference in a will on or after July 1, 1977) [Prob. Code § 17300(a)], and trusts created by wills that expressly provide that they will be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court [Prob. Code § 17300(b)] are subject to continuing supervision by the court in which the decedent's estate was administered [but see Prob. Code §§ 17350-17354 (procedure for removing trust from continuing supervision)]. All other trusts (that is, all inter vivos trusts and all testamentary trusts created after July 1, 1977, by wills that do not provide that they will be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court) are free of continuing supervision.

The principal difference between continuing jurisdiction and the "intermittent intervention" provisions is that the latter are invoked only when a person interested in the trust petitions the court for an order. In the absence of a petition, the court exercises no supervision over the internal affairs of a trust that is subject only to the "intermittent intervention" provisions. Conversely, when a trust is subject to continuing jurisdiction, the trustee must petition the court before taking any action relating to the internal affairs of the trust [Prob. Code § 17301; see Prob. Code § 17200(b) (petitions concerning internal affairs of trust)]. For further discussion of continuing judicial supervision of trusts, see § 64B.39.

[ii] Will Provisions

To require continuing judicial supervision, a will must clearly express the testator's intent that the trust be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court [Prob. Code § 17300(b); Estate of Goddard (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 340, 344, 203 Cal. Rptr. 623]. A standard clause to the effect that the trustee "shall receive reasonable compensation to be fixed by the Court for its services" is not, in itself, sufficient to require continuing jurisdiction [Estate of Goddard (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 340, 343-344, 203 Cal. Rptr. 623].

An even clearer expression of the testator's intention will be required to show that the testator intended the trust to be free of the "intermittent intervention" provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210. Although a will clause providing that "neither the original trustee nor any successor trustee shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the court administering the estate" will be sufficient to remove the trust from the continuing jurisdiction provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17300-17354, it will not be sufficient to remove the trust from the "intermittent intervention" (or "disputed-related") provisions of Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210 [Estate of Parrette (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 157, 165, 211 Cal. Rptr. 313 (decided under former Prob. Code §§ 1120-1133; repealed effective July 1, 1987)]. The words "jurisdiction of the court administering the estate" reveal an intention only to dispense with the continuing jurisdiction of the court in which the estate was administered, and not to limit all judicial power over the trust so that persons who wish to enforce any of its provisions must resort to the time-consuming and burdensome procedure of commencing civil actions [Estate of Parrette (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 157, 165, 211 Cal. Rptr. 313].

[iii] Advantages and Disadvantages

Continuing judicial supervision of a testamentary trust will usually be costly, burdensome, and unnecessary [Estate of Parrette (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 157, 162, 211 Cal. Rptr. 313], inasmuch as the "intermittent intervention" provisions [Prob. Code §§ 17200-17210] ordinarily will adequately protect those interested in the trust. However, some testators may insist that the trustee will be subject to continuing jurisdiction. For example, if the trustee lacks significant experience in business or investment, is the kind of person who might easily be imposed upon by others, or has interests that may conflict with those of the income or remainder beneficiaries, or if there are any other potential causes for dispute among or between the trustee and the beneficiaries, the testator may decide that continuing judicial supervision will serve the best interests of the trust.

[2] FORM*Provision Requiring Continuing Judicial Supervision of Trust*Trust Subject to Continuing Court Jurisdiction

Any other provision of this will to the contrary notwithstanding, the trust(s) provided for in this will shall be subject to the continuing jurisdiction of the superior court as provided in California Probate Code Sections 17300-17354.

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers executors of wills. The Legal Background discusses general concepts related to administration of decedents' estates and personal representatives of decedents. It also discusses qualifications of executors and legal rules relating to the nomination and compensation of executors, their powers, duties, and liabilities, and when bonds are required of persons named in wills as executors. Finally, it outlines the differences between supervised and independent administration of decedent's estates. The forms include will provisions for the nomination of executors and coexecutors and for the delegation of authority to nominate executors, as well as provisions relating to executors' bonds, powers to act, compensation, and liability.

For detailed coverage of the appointment of executors and the administration of decedents' estates, see California Probate Practice (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.30

§ 65.30 Administration of Decedents' Estates

[1] In General

When a person dies, title to the person's property passes to the person or persons to whom it is devised in the person's last will or, in the absence of such a devise, to the person's heirs as prescribed in the laws governing intestate succession [Prob. Code § 7000; see Prob. Code §§ 6400-6455 (intestate succession)]. Whether the person died with a will (i.e., testate) or without a will (i.e., intestate), the person's property is subject to administration [see Prob. Code § 7000 et seq. (administration of decedents' estates)] and, under rules set forth in the Probate Code, to the payment of debts [see Prob. Code § 9000 et seq. (creditor claims), 11400-11467 (payment of debts)], expenses of administration [see Prob. Code §§ 11401(b) ("debt" includes an expense of administration), 11420(a)(1) (priority for payment of expenses of administration)], and any family allowance that may be payable out of the assets of the estate [Prob. Code § 7001; see Prob. Code §§ 6540-6545 (family allowance)]. For the purpose of effectuating administration, the personal representative [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]] and succeeding headings] has the right (and the duty) to take possession or control of all of the property, real and personal, tangible and intangible, to be administered in the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 9650(a)(1)].

The process of collecting and preserving the decedent's assets, paying the decedent's debts, and distributing the decedent's assets to the persons legally entitled to distribution is called "administration" [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), at 41]. Administration of decedents' estates is sometimes referred to as "probate administration" or, less formally, as "probate." In its most technical sense, however, "probate" refers to the process whereby the last will of a decedent is proved valid or invalid [see Prob. Code §§ 8200-8272 (probate of wills); Swift v. Superior Court (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 358, 360-361, 247 P.2d 6 (petition for probate of will)]. In less formal usage, "probate" refers to any of a number of distinct proceedings authorized and regulated by the Probate Code, such as probate of wills [see Prob. Code §§ 8200-8272], supervision of guardians [see Probate Code § 1500] and conservators [see Prob. Code § 1800 et seq.], administration of decedents' estates [see Prob. Code § 7000 et seq.], and judicial supervision of trusts [see Prob. Code § 17000 et seq.], both testamentary and inter vivos.

[2] Jurisdiction of Superior Court

The superior court has jurisdiction of all proceedings under the Probate Code concerning the administration of decedents' estates [Prob. Code § 7050]. The court in proceedings under the Probate Code is a court of general jurisdiction. The court, or a judge of the court, has the same power and authority with respect to the proceedings as otherwise provided by law for a superior court, or a judge of the superior court [Prob. Code § 800; see Code Civ. Proc. § 128 (statutory powers of court)]. It is the practice in virtually all superior courts in California to refer to the superior court when sitting in probate as "the probate court" [see Copley v. Copley (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 97, 107, 145 Cal. Rptr. 437 (superior court is "probate court" when sitting in exercise of its probate jurisdiction)].

Before the enactment of Prob. Code § 7050 (operative July 1, 1989), the appellate courts held that proceedings for administration of a decedent's estate were proceedings in rem [ Copley v. Copley (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 97, 106-107, 145 Cal. Rptr. 437 ] and that, in the exercise of its in rem jurisdiction, the superior court could conclusively determine claims against estate assets [ Estate of Bissinger (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 756, 764, 36 Cal. Rptr. 450, 388 P.2d 682 ] but it could not resolve personal claims between the estate and third persons [ Schlyen v. Schlyen (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 361, 372-373, 273 P.2d 897 ; Estate of Lagios (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 459, 462, 173 Cal. Rptr. 506 ]. In its notes to Prob. Code § 7050, the California Law Revision Commission states that the section was intended to preserve the division of business among different departments of the superior court but to reject the limitation on the powers of the probate court cited in the earlier appellate decisions [Recommendation Relating to Rules of Procedure in Probate, 19 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 941 (1988)].

[3] When Administration Is Not Necessary

Many (perhaps even most) decedents' estates are not subject to administration. This is because many classes of property are not subject to administration. First, the right to ownership of (or succession to) certain types of assets are determined by the contracts or other instruments under which the assets were created, and not by the wills of their owners. Included in this class of property are joint tenancy assets, multiple-party accounts [see Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.], assets held in trust with a designated beneficiary, life insurance on the decedent's life when the decedent's estate is not the beneficiary, retirement plans with beneficiaries other than the decedents' estates, United States Savings Bonds, and assets held in trust. Second, property passing to a surviving spouse is subject to administration only at the election of the surviving spouse [see Prob. Code § 13500 et seq.]. Third, by special statutory provisions, certain small estates may be distributed without the necessity of either administration or probate of the will of the decedent [see Prob. Code § 13000 et seq. (collection or transfer of small estate without administration); see also § 65.33[1]]. Thus administration of a decedent's estate ordinarily is necessary only when the decedent's estate includes assets that (1) do not pass by terms of a contract or other instrument to designated survivors, (2) do not pass to a surviving spouse, and (3) exceed statutory limits for summary administration procedures.

§ 65.31 Supervised Administration

Administration of a decedent's estate is said to be "supervised" if it is subject to continuing supervision by the probate court [see Prob. Code § 10401 ("court supervision" defined)]. Supervised administration, which is governed by Prob. Code § 9600 et seq., is distinguished from "independent" administration, which is governed by Prob. Code §§ 10400-10592 [see § 65.32]. If the estate is subject to supervised administration, the personal representative must petition the court for authority or instructions before certain actions may be taken in the course of administration, management, investment, disposition, care, protection, operation, or preservation of the estate [Prob. Code § 9611(a)]. Unless the Probate Code specifically provides or requires a proceeding to obtain court authorization, the powers of the personal representative may be exercised without court authorization, instruction, approval, or confirmation [Prob. Code § 9610]. Even when court authorization is not required, however, the personal representative may seek court authorization, instruction, approval, or confirmation before or after taking any act [Prob. Code § 9610].

The Probate Code permits certain estates to be administered with a minimum of court supervision under the Independent Administration of Estates Act [Prob. Code § 10400 et seq.]. A personal representative who has authority to administer an estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act is free to take many actions without court supervision that otherwise could be taken only under court supervision. The personal representative must give notice to affected persons before taking certain kinds of actions, and if an interested person objects, the action may be taken only under court supervision. § 65.33 Summary Administration

[1] In General

Statutory provisions permit some estates (generally small estates) to be transferred without formal administration [see Prob. Code §§ 13000-13210]. Transfer of an estate without formal administration is generally referred to as "summary administration." Summary administration may be accomplished by filing affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury), or by obtaining court orders, under the following circumstances:

- An affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury) furnished to the holder of property will be sufficient to effect transfer of personal property without administration if the total value of all of the decedent's property (real and personal) in California does not exceed $100,000 and if at least 40 days have elapsed since the decedent's death [Prob. Code §§ 13100, 13101; see Prob. Code §§ 13100-13116].
- A court order may be obtained to transfer real property to the persons entitled to the property if the total estate in California is not over $100,000 and at least 40 days have elapsed since the decedent's death [Prob. Code §§ 13151, 13152; see Prob. Code §§ 13150-13158].
- An affidavit in the form prescribed by the Judicial Council filed in the superior court [Prob. Code § 13200] and a certified copy of the affidavit recorded with the county recorder [Prob. Code § 13202] will be sufficient to effect the transfer of real property in California not exceeding $10,000 in value if at least six months have elapsed since the decedent's death [Prob. Code §§ 13200, 13203; see Prob. Code §§ 13000-13210].

Certain kinds of property must be excluded in determining whether the total value of the decedent's property exceeds $100,000 for this purpose. The excluded property includes joint tenancy property, property in which the decedent held only a life estate, property held by the decedent in a revocable trust or multiple-party account, registered vehicles, mobile homes, truck campers, and vessels, amounts due the decedent for service in the United States armed forces, and up to $5,000 of compensation owing to the decedent from other employment [Prob. Code § 13050]. The person or persons to whom the property will be transferred will be determined by the decedent's will, if any, [Prob. Code §

13006(a)] or by the laws of intestate succession if there is no will [Prob. Code § 13006(b); see Prob. Code §§ 6401, 6402 (intestate shares of surviving spouse and other heirs)].

For more detailed discussion of the rules under which summary administration is available, reasons why summary administration may or may not be desirable, and forms for affidavits, declarations under penalty of perjury, and court petitions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 440, Probate: Is Probate Necessary? (Matthew Bender); see also California Probate Practice (Matthew Bender).

[2] Property Passing to Decedent's Surviving Spouse or Registered Domestic Partner

Property that passes to a surviving spouse, either by will or by the laws of intestate succession, may be transferred or "set aside" to the decedent's surviving spouse with or without administration [Prob. Code § 13500 (no administration necessary); Prob. Code § 13502 (surviving spouse may elect to administer all or part of property)]. The surviving spouse has a right to deal with real property passing to him or her if at least 40 days have elapsed since the death of the decedent spouse [Prob. Code § 13540] and if, within that time, no other person has recorded a notice claiming an interest in the property under the decedent's will [Prob. Code § 13541]. In addition, the statutes prescribe an affidavit procedure for the collection of salary or other compensation owed to the deceased spouse [see Prob. Code §§ 13600-13606] and a simplified judicial procedure for the transfer of other property [see Prob. Code §§ 13650-13660].

A surviving spouse may elect to administer all or a part of the property transferred from the decedent spouse to avoid personal liability for the decedent's debts. If a surviving spouse receives property from a decedent spouse and the property is not administered, the surviving spouse will be personally liable for debts of the decedent [Prob. Code § 13550]. However, the liability will be limited to the total amount of the property received from the decedent spouse and not exempt from enforcement of a money judgment, less the amount of any liens or encumbrances against that property [Prob. Code § 13551].

Beginning January 1, 2005, these provisions also apply with respect to the surviving registered domestic partner of a decedent. A surviving registered domestic partner, following the other partner's death, has the same rights, protections, and benefits, and is subject to the same responsibilities, obligations, and duties under law that are granted to and imposed on a surviving spouse [Fam. Code § 297.5(c); see Fam. Code § 297.5(j) (when necessary to implement statutory rights of domestic partners, gender-specific terms referring to spouses must be construed to include domestic partners)].

[3] Small Estate Set-Aside

A court order may be obtained assigning personal property (wherever located) and real property (located in California) to the decedent's surviving spouse and minor children (even if there is a conflicting will) if the net value of the decedent's estate does not exceed $20,000 [Prob. Code § 6602; see Prob. Code §§ 6600-6615]. In determining whether to assign personal property to a surviving spouse or minor children under this provision, the court must consider the needs of the spouse and children, liens and encumbrances on the decedent's property, creditors' claims, the needs of heirs or devisees, and the intent of the decedent with respect to the property in the estate [Prob. Code § 6609(b)]. The court may refuse to assign property if it determines that it would be inequitable to do so under the circumstances of the particular case [Prob. Code § 6609(a)].

Beginning January 1, 2005, these provisions also apply with respect to the surviving registered domestic partner of a decedent. A surviving registered domestic partner, following the other partner's death, has the same rights, protections, and benefits, and is subject to the same responsibilities, obligations, and duties under law that are granted to and imposed on a surviving spouse [Fam. Code § 297.5(c); see Fam. Code § 297.5(j) (when necessary to implement statutory rights of domestic partners, gender-specific terms referring to spouses must be construed to include domestic partners)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.34

§ 65.34 Ancillary Administration

[1] In General

Ancillary administration is administration of a decedent's estate in a state in which the decedent left property but in which he or she was not domiciled at the time of death [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), p. 78; see Prob. Code § 12501 ("ancillary administration" defined)]. It is a probate proceeding in a nondomiciliary state made necessary by the existence of property belonging to the decedent in the nondomiciliary state. The power of a state to require that property within its borders be subject to local administration flows from the state's plenary power to regulate the ownership of property subject to its jurisdiction [see Estate of Clark (1905) 148 Cal. 108, 112, 82 P. 760; Estate of Glassford (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 181, 188, 249 P.2d 908; see also Civ. Code § 755 (property in California governed by California law)].

The Probate Code contains rules governing ancillary administration in California of the estates of decedents who die domiciled in other states or countries [see Prob. Code §§ 12510-12542]. Under those rules, the will of a nondomiciliary decedent [see Prob. Code § 12505 ("nondomiciliary decedent" defined)] that is admitted to probate in California has the same force and effect as the will of a person who dies while domiciled in the state [Prob. Code § 12524].

Administration of property owned by a nondomiciliary decedent is called "ancillary" only to distinguish it from the administration of property owned by a domiciliary decedent. Ancillary administration is wholly independent of any administration in the domiciliary state and proceeds according to the same rules as the administration of other estates [Richards v. Blaisdell (1909) 12 Cal. App. 101, 110, 106 P. 732; see Prob. Code §§ 12524 (will admitted to probate under ancillary administration provisions of Probate Code has same force and effect as will of domiciliary), 12530 (ancillary administration of nondomiciliary's estate in California subject to all estate administration provisions of Probate Code)].

[2] In California

The mere presence in California of property owned by a nondomiciliary decedent is sufficient to justify ancillary administration in California [Richards v. Blaisdell (1909) 12 Cal. App. 101, 110, 106 P. 732; see Prob. Code § 7001 (decedent's property subject to administration under Probate Code except as otherwise provided by law); see also Prob.

Code §§ 7051 (venue in case of domiciliary), 7052 (venue in case of nondomiciliary)]. It is not necessary to show that there are local creditors, or even that the local property requires care or preservation [ Richards v. Blaisdell (1909) 12 Cal. App. 101, 110, 106 P. 732 ].

If the nondomiciliary decedent left a will that has been admitted to probate in another state or country, the will is entitled to automatic recognition in California [see Prob. Code § 12521; see also discussion] if the requirements of Prob. Code §§ 12520-12524 are satisfied. A will admitted to probate in another state or country will satisfy the requirements of Prob. Code §§ 12520-12524 if all of the following conditions are satisfied:

- It was admitted in accordance with the laws of the other state or country [Prob. Code §§ 12522, 12523(a)];
- The determination of the other state or country was based on a finding that at the time of death the decedent was domiciled in that state or country [Prob. Code §§ 12522(a), 12523(a)(1)];
- All interested parties were given notice and an opportunity for contest in the proceedings in the other state or country [Prob. Code §§ 12522(b), 12523(a)(2)]; and
- The determination in the other state or country is final [Prob. Code §§ 12522(c), 12523(a)(3)].

Automatic recognition of a nondomiciliary will may be obtained by filing a petition for probate of the will under Prob. Code § 12521. The petition must include the will (or an authenticated copy of the will) [Prob. Code § 12521(a)(1)] and an authenticated copy of the order admitting the will to probate in the other state or foreign nation [Prob. Code § 12521(a)(2); see Prob. Code § 12521(b) ("authenticated copy" must satisfy requirements of Evid. Code §§ 1530-1532); see also Evid. Code §§ 1530-1532 (proof of official writings and recorded writings)]. If an authenticated copy of the order admitting the will to probate is not produced, other evidence of the establishment or proof of the will in accordance with the law of the other state or nation may be offered [Prob. Code § 12521(a)(2)].

If all of the requirements of Prob. Code §§ 12520-12524 are satisfied, the court must admit the will to probate in California (and it may not permit a contest or revocation of the probate), unless the will was admitted to probate in a foreign nation under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law [Prob. Code § 12523(b)]. In the latter case, the court may refuse to admit the will even if it satisfies the other requirements of Prob. Code §§ 12520-12524 [Prob. Code § 12523(b)]. The will of a nondomiciliary admitted to probate in California under the simplified procedure outlined above has the same force and effect as the will of a domiciliary that is admitted to probate [Prob. Code § 12524].

If the requirements of Prob. Code §§ 12520-12524 are not met, the nondomiciliary's will is not entitled to automatic recognition in California, but it may be offered for probate under the ordinary procedures established for probate of the wills of domiciliary decedents [Prob. Code § 12520(b); see Prob. Code §§ 8000-8577 (opening estate administration)].

[3] Alternative Procedures

Alternative procedures for the collection and distribution of property left in California by a nondomiciliary decedent are available under California law. These includes various procedures that are individually and collectively referred to as "summary" administration [see Prob. Code §§ 6600-6615 (small estate set-asides), 13100-13116 (collection or transfer of personal property by affidavit if gross value of property in California not over $100,000), 13150-13158 (court order determining succession to real property if gross value of property in California not over $100,000), 13200-13210 (collection by affidavit of real property not over $10,000 in value)]. The sister state personal representative of a nondomiciliary decedent may collect personal property belonging to the decedent and located in California by using the affidavit procedure available for the use of successors of domiciliary decedents if the gross value of the decedent's real and personal property in California does not exceed $100,000 [Prob. Code § 12570; see Prob. Code §§ 13100-13116]. Under this procedure, the sister state representative must wait at least 40 days after the decedent's death [Prob. Code § 13100]. The representative may then proceed, without initiating ancillary administration proceedings [see Prob. Code § 13108(a) (procedure available only if no administration proceedings conducted or pending)], to collect money due the decedent, receive tangible personal property of the decedent, or have debts, obligations, rights, or other choses in action belonging to the decedent transferred to the decedent's successor [Prob. Code §§ 12570, 13100]. This may be done by furnishing the holder of the money, property, or chose in action an affidavit setting forth specified information [see Prob. Code § 13101(a) (contents of affidavit)]. The affidavit must, among other things, disclose the name of the decedent's successor [Prob. Code § 13101(a)(7); see Prob. Code § 13006 ("successor" defined)] and state that no other person has a right to the interest of the decedent in the described property [Prob. Code § 13101(a)(9)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
 CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
 PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.35

§ 65.35 Personal Representatives

[1] In General

For the purpose of carrying out the administration of a decedent's estate, the decedent's personal representative has the right (and the duty) to take possession or control of all of the property, real and personal, tangible and intangible, to be administered in the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 9650(a)(1)]. As used in the Probate Code, the term "personal representative" includes an executor [see § 65.35[2]], an administrator [see § 65.35[3]], an administrator with the will annexed [see § 65.35[5]], a special administrator [see § 65.35[4]], a successor personal representative, and any person who performs substantially the same function under the laws of another jurisdiction governing the person's status [Prob. Code § 58(a)]. No person has any power to administer a decedent's estate until the person is appointed personal representative and the appointment becomes effective. Appointment of a personal representative becomes effective when the person appointed is issued letters [Prob. Code § 8400(a); see Prob. Code § 52 ("letters" defined)].

[2] Executors

An executor is a personal representative [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]] who is nominated by the will of a decedent and appointed by the court to carry out the provisions of the decedent's will and dispose of the decedent's property according to law [see Prob. Code §§ 8400(a) (no power to administer estate until appointed), 8420 (appointment of person named as executor in will); Black's Law Dictionary 511 (5th ed. 1979)]. On appointment and qualification, an executor is entitled to the issuance of letters testamentary [see Prob. Code § 52 ("letters" defined)].

The person named as executor in the decedent's will has the right to appointment as personal representative [Prob. Code § 8420]. The executor need not be named in the will, however. If it appears by the terms of the will that the testator intended to commit the execution of the will and the administration of the estate to a particular person, that person is entitled to appointment in the same manner as if named as executor [Prob. Code § 8421]. Although it is generally true that a personal representative (including an executor) has no power to administer the estate until appointed by the court [Prob. Code § 8400(a)], a person named as executor in the will may, before appointment, pay funeral expenses and take necessary measures for the maintenance and preservation of the estate [Prob. Code § 8400(b)]. An executor is properly referred to as "executor of the will of " or "executor under the will of " the named decedent, rather than as "executor of the estate."

[3] Administrators

An administrator is a personal representative [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]] who is appointed by the court to administer and settle the estate of an intestate decedent [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed., 1979), p. 43; see Prob. Code § 8460 (if decedent dies intestate, court must appoint administrator)]. An administrator differs from an executor in that the latter is nominated by the will of the decedent while the former acquires his or her right to appointment by statutory provision. In the usual case, the court appoints a relative of the decedent as administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 8461 (order of priority for appointment), 8462 (limitations on priority of surviving spouse or domestic partner [see Prob. Code § 37], relative of decedent, or relative of predeceased spouse)]. In appropriate circumstances, however, the court may appoint the nominee of a person entitled to appointment [Prob. Code §§ 8465, 8466; see Estate of Garrett (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864 (surviving spouse's nominated son, had priority over decedent's daughter in obtaining letters of administration under Prob. Code § 8461 when the past filing of a dissolution action by surviving spouse was dismissed for lack of prosecution, resulting in surviving spouse having priority under Prob. Code § 8463, as well as her son, as nominee, under Prob. Code § 8465)]. If several persons have equal priority for appointment as administrator, the court may appoint one or more of them, or if the persons who have priority are unable to agree, the court may appoint the public administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 7600-7666 (public administrators); see also § 65.35[6]] or a disinterested person having a statutory claim to appointment [Prob. Code § 8467]. If no person having priority claims appointment as administrator, the court may appoint any person who claims appointment [Prob. Code § 8468].

[4] Special Administrators

A special administrator is a personal representative [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]] who is appointed to take possession and control of an estate until some other person is appointed to administer it [O'Bryan v. Superior Court (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 490, 494, 116 P.2d 49; see Prob. Code §§ 8540-8547 (special administrators)]. A special administrator's powers and duties are typically limited, in contrast to those of a general administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 58(b) ("general personal representative" excludes special administrator), 8546(a)(powers of special administrator cease on issuance of letters to general personal representative), (b)(duty of special administrator to deliver property to general personal representative); but see Prob. Code § 8545(a) (when proper, court may grant special administrator same powers as general personal representative)], which are typically plenary, or unlimited. If the circumstances of an estate require the immediate appointment of a personal representative, the court may appoint a special administrator to exercise the powers that may be appropriate under the circumstances for the preservation of the estate [Prob. Code § 8540(a)].

The function of the special administrator is essentially stopgap; that is, the special administrator acts only when there is no other person to take charge of the estate, or when appointment of the person or persons entitled to take charge of the estate has been delayed for some reason [O'Bryan v. Superior Court (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 490, 494, 116 P.2d 49; In re Estate of Heaton (1904) 142 Cal. 116, 117-118]. Special administrators are most commonly appointed when there is a will contest and the right of the person named in the will to act as executor is unresolved, although they may also be appointed under other special circumstances.

In appointing a special administrator, the court must ordinarily give preference to the person entitled to appointment as personal representative, whether that person is named in the will of a testate decedent as executor [see Prob. Code §§ 8420-8425 (executors); see also § 65.200[1][b]] or is a person entitled to appointment as administrator of the estate of an intestate decedent [see Prob. Code §§ 8460-8468 (administrators); see also § 65.35[3]]. A special administrator may be appointed at any time, with or without notice [Prob. Code § 8541(a)] and on any terms the court may direct [Prob. Code § 8540(b)].

A special administrator may be appointed for a specified term or merely to perform a particular act or acts [Prob. Code § 8540(b)]. When the appointment is to perform a particular act, the letters of the special administrator [see Prob. Code § 52 ("letters" defined)] must include a notation of the particular act the special administrator was appointed to perform [Prob. Code § 8542(c)]. Unless the court limits the authority of the special administrator, he or she will have power to take possession of the decedent's property and preserve it from damage, waste, and injury, to collect claims, to commence and maintain or defend suits, and to sell perishable property [Prob. Code § 8544(a)]. Power to perform other acts may be conferred on the special administrator by the court [Prob. Code §§ 8544(b), 8545]. The special administrator's powers cease on issuance of letters to a general personal representative [Prob. Code § 8546(a)].

[5] Administrators With the Will Annexed

An administrator with the will annexed is an administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 8460-8468 (administrators); see also § 65.35[3]] who is appointed to take charge of the estate of a testate, rather than intestate, decedent. An administrator with the will annexed must be appointed if a person dies with a will that does not name an executor, or if the sole executor or all of the executors named in the will waive the right to appointment or for any reason are unwilling or unable to act [Prob. Code § 8440; see Prob. Code § 8522(a) (duty of court to appoint successor personal representative when vacancy occurs and there are no other personal representatives)]. An administrator with the will annexed is typically appointed when the executor named in the will dies or becomes disabled before the testator's death. An administrator with the will annexed may also be appointed if the person named as executor in the will does not petition for appointment [see Prob. Code § 8001 (waiver of appointment by unexcused failure to petition within 30 days after learning of testator's death)].

Persons entitled to appointment as administrator have the same right to appointment as administrator with the will annexed [Prob. Code § 8441(a); see Prob. Code §§ 8461-8464 (order of priorities for appointment of administrators); see also § 65.35[3]]. Similarly, persons entitled to appointment as administrator have the right to nominate administrators with the will annexed [Prob. Code § 8441(a); see Prob. Code § 8465 (nomination of administrator by persons entitled to appointment)]. A person who takes under the will has priority over a person who does not, but the court in its discretion may give priority to a person who does not take under the will if the person is entitled to a statutory interest that is a substantially greater portion of the estate than the devise to the person who takes under the will and the priority appears appropriate under the circumstances [Prob. Code § 8441(b)]. A person who takes more than 50 percent of the value of the estate under the will, or the nominee of a person or several persons who together take more than 50 percent of the value of the estate under the will, has priority over other persons who take under the will [Prob. Code § 8441(b)].

An administrator with the will annexed ordinarily has the same authority over the decedent's estate that an executor named in the will would have [Prob. Code § 8442(a)]. If, however, the will confers a discretionary power or authority on an executor that is not conferred by law and the will does not extend the power or authority to other personal representatives, the power or authority will not be deemed to be conferred on an administrator with the will annexed unless the court in its discretion authorizes the exercise of the power or authority [Prob. Code § 8442(b)]. On appointment and qualification, an administrator with the will annexed is entitled to the issuance of letters of administration with the will annexed [see Prob. Code § 8405 (form of letters)].

[6] Public Administrators

The public administrator is a county officer [see Gov. Code § 24000(l)] who performs a governmental function [Estate of Miller (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 588, 593-594, 55 P.2d 491] and discharges duties and exercises powers prescribed by statute [see Gov. Code §§ 27440-27443.5; Prob. Code §§ 7600-7666]. Under the Probate Code, the public administrator has a duty to take preliminary steps to protect the property of certain decedents who die without next of kin and to petition for appointment as personal representative of the decedents' estates [see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]] if no person having higher priority petitions [see Prob. Code §§

7600-7604 (taking temporary possession or control of property), 7620-7624 (appointment of public administrator as personal representative)].

When a person dies in a hospital, convalescent hospital, or board and care facility without known next of kin, the public administrator has a duty to take possession or control of any property of the decedent that is subject to loss, injury, waste, or misappropriation until a personal representative is appointed [Prob. Code §§ 7600.5, 7601(a); but see Prob. Code § 7601(b) (public administrator not liable for failing to take possession of control of property beyond his or her ability)]. In such a case, the public administrator must make a prompt search for any other property of the decedent and for a will or instructions for disposition of the decedent's remains [Prob. Code § 7602(a)]. If a will is found, the public administrator must deliver it to the clerk of the superior court within 30 days and mail a copy to the person named as executor, if the executor's whereabouts are known, and, if not, to a beneficiary named in the will [Prob. Code §§ 7602(b), 8200(a)]. If instructions for dispositions of the decedent's remains are found, the public administrator must promptly deliver the instructions to the person who has the right to control disposition of the remains as provided in the Health and Safety Code [Prob. Code § 7602(c); see Health & Safety Code § 7100 (right to control disposition of remains)].

The public administrator is required to petition for appointment as personal representative if no person having higher priority has petitioned and the total value of the property in the decedent's estate exceeds $100,000, or if, for any other reason, the public administrator determines that a petition would be proper [Prob. Code § 7620(a), (b)]. The public administrator must accept appointment as personal representative whenever ordered to do so by the court, whether or not the appointment results from the public administrator's petition [Prob. Code § 7620(c); see Prob. Code § 7621(b) (appointment on court's own motion)].

When appointed as personal representative, the public administrator generally has the same powers and is subject to the same duties as other personal representatives [Prob. Code §§ 7621(a) (appointment and letters), 7622(a) (duty to administer estate in same manner as personal representative generally)]. The public administrator is entitled to the same compensation as other personal representatives [Prob. Code § 7622(b)] and may receive additional compensation [see Prob. Code § 7623(a) ("additional compensation" defined)] if another person having priority for appointment has, after notice, refused to petition, or if he or she has appointed after the resignation or removal of another personal representative [Prob. Code § 7623(b)]. Letters may be issued to "the public administrator" of the county without naming the public administrator [Prob. Code § 7621(c)].

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.36

§ 65.36 Qualifications of Executor

[1] In General

Subject to statutory restrictions, a testator has the right to select any person to be executor of his or her will [Prob. Code § 8420; Estate of Shimum (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 436, ; Estate of Fiddymont (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 72, ; see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined)]. The fact that a person has been nominated as executor is evidence of the confidence reposed in that person by the testator [ Estate of Buchman (1954), 123 Cal. App. 2d 546 ]. Statutory grounds for disqualification of a properly nominated executor are few, and the courts have no power to add additional grounds not set forth in the statutes [ Estate of Berry (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 621, 624 ].

[2] Age

A person is not competent to act as executor (or as any other personal representative) if the person is under the age of majority [Prob. Code § 8402(a)(1); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]]. In California, the age of majority is 18 years [see Fam. Code § 6500]. If a person named as executor is under 18 when the testator dies, the court may appoint another personal representative to administer the estate until the minor reaches 18 [Prob. Code § 8242]. If the will names another executor, the other person may be appointed and may administer the estate until the minor reaches 18, at which time the minor may be appointed as coexecutor [Prob. Code § 8424(a)]. If the will does not name another executor, another person may be appointed as administrator with the will annexed [see Prob. Code §§ 8440-8442; see also § 65.35[5]] or as special administrator [see Prob. Code §§ 8540-8547 (special administrators); see also § 65.35[4]], but the court may revoke the appointment when the minor reaches 18 and appoint the minor as executor [Prob. Code § 8424(b)].

[3] Ability and Fitness

A person is not competent to act as executor (or as any other personal representative) if the person is subject to a conservatorship of the estate or is otherwise incapable of executing or unfit to execute the duties of the office [Prob. Code § 8402(a)(2); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]]. A conservator of the estate may be appointed for any adult who is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or to resist fraud or undue influence [Prob. Code §§ 1800, 1801; for discussion, see Ch. 66, Conservatorships ].

[4] Grounds for Removal

A person is not competent to act as executor (or as any other personal representative) if the person would be subject to removal from the office under Prob. Code § 8502 [Prob. Code § 8402(a)(3); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]]. An executor (or other personal representative) is subject to removal from office under Prob. Code § 8502 for any of the following causes:

- The executor has wasted, embezzled, mismanaged, or committed a fraud on the estate, or is about to do so [Prob. Code § 8502(a)];
- The executor is incapable of properly executing the duties of the office, or is otherwise not qualified for appointment as personal representative [Prob. Code § 8502(b)];
- The executor has wrongfully neglected the estate, or has long neglected to perform any act as personal representative [Prob. Code § 8502(c)];
- Removal is otherwise necessary for protection of the estate or interested persons [Prob. Code § 8502(d)]; or
- Any other cause provided by statute [Prob. Code § 8502(d)].

The former rule that the grounds for disqualification of an executor before appointment are distinct from the grounds for removal of an executor after appointment [see Estate of Backer (1985) 164 Cal. app. 3d 1159, 1162-1163, 211 Cal. Rptr. 163] was abrogated in 1989 by the repeal of former Prob. Code §§ 401 and 521 and the enactment of current Prob. Code Section § 8402(a)(3). Under the new section (operative July 1, 1989), the grounds for denying an appointment are identical to the grounds for removing an incumbent [Recommendation Relating to Opening Estate Administration, 19 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports (1988) p. 829]. This change in the law was intended to save needless court proceedings and avoid unnecessary complications in the administration of the estate that sometimes resulted from application of the old rule [Recommendation Relating to Opening Estate Administration, 19 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports (1988) p. 795].

[5] Residence

Although a person who is not a resident of the United States is generally disqualified from appointment as personal representative [Prob. Code § 8402(a)(4); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also § 65.35[1]], this rule does not apply to a person named as executor or successor executor in the decedent's will [Prob. Code § 8402(b)]. There is no requirement that any personal representative be a resident of California [ Estate of Kelley (1920) 182 Cal. 81, 82, 186 P. 1041 ], or even that the executor's oath of office be executed in the state [ Adams v. Sharp (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 775, 778 ]. Executors who do not reside in California are, however, subject to rules that do not apply to residents.

First, a nonresident who accepts appointment as executor is deemed to have irrevocably appointed the Secretary of State as his or her attorney for the purpose of accepting service of process and other notices in any action or proceeding against the nonresident with respect to the estate or arising out of acts or omissions of the nonresident in that capacity [Prob. Code § 8572 (rule applicable to personal representatives generally); see Prob. Code §§ 8574 (manner of service on Secretary of State), 8575 (proof of service), 8576 (legal effect of service)]. Second, a nonresident executor must sign and file with the court a statement of his or her permanent address and update the statement whenever the address changes [Prob. Code § 8573; see Prob. Code § 8577(a) (failure to file and update statement are grounds for removal from office)]. Finally, the court in its discretion may require a nonresident executor to post a bond, even if the will waives the requirement of a bond [Prob. Code § 8571; see Prob. Code §§ 8480-8488 (bond requirements); see also § 65.40].

A resident executor who, after appointment, moves his or her residence outside California is subject to the same rules and requirements as a person who is a nonresident when appointed [Prob. Code § 8570 (rule applicable to personal representatives generally)].

[6] Trust Company

A trust company may be appointed to act as an executor in the same manner as an individual [Prob. Code § 300; see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also Fin. Code § 107, Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined)]. A trust company is an entity that has qualified to act as executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, conservator, trustee, or other fiduciary in California [Prob. Code § 83 ("trust company" defined); see Fin. Code §§ 106 ("trust business" defined), 107 ("trust company" defined)].

If the will nominates a trust company as executor and the trust company later sells its business and assets to another trust company, the court may (and to the extent required by Division 1 of the Banking Law [Fin. Code § 99 et seq.] it must) appoint the successor trust company as executor [Prob. Code § 8423]. The same rule applies when the trust company nominated in the will merges with or is succeeded by another trust company [Prob. Code § 8423].

A trust company that is appointed as executor may not be required to give a bond, even if a bond is required by the will [Prob. Code § 301(a); see Prob. Code §§ 8480-8488 (bond requirements); see also § 65.40]. Trust companies are, however, subject to special requirements for liability, oaths, and affidavits set forth in the Financial Code [Prob. Code § 301(b); see Fin. Code §§ 1540-1547, 1587].

Some (although not all) large commercial banks and industrial banks and industrial banks in California maintain trust departments and are legally qualified to act as trust companies, as are certain title insurance companies [see Fin. Code § 107; see also Ch. 64A, Testamentary Trusts: Payment and Distribution Provisions ].

§ 65.37 Nomination of Executor

Although the process whereby a testator names a person to act as executor is commonly referred to as "appointment," a will provision naming an executor is properly a "nomination" rather than an "appointment." The testator "nominates" the executor, and the court (if the nomination is approved) "appoints" the executor [see Prob. Code § 8400 et seq. (appointment of personal representative)].

The nomination of a testator is a testamentary act and, as such, must be part of a valid will [for the requisites of valid wills, see Prob. Code § 6100 et seq.; see also Ch. 61, Will Drafting and Complete Will Forms]. The Probate Code generally uses the words "named" or "named in the will" to refer to the nomination of an executor [see, e.g., Prob. Code §§ 8420 (right to appointment as executor), 8423 (appointment of successor trust company)]. It is settled, however, that no particular language is required to nominate an executor [ Estate of Parker (1927) 202 Cal. 138, 142, 259 P. 431 ]. The code itself provides that, if a person is not named as executor in a will but it appears by terms of the will that the testator intended to commit the execution of the will and the administration of the estate to the person, the person is entitled to appointment in the same manner as if named in the will [Prob. Code § 8421].

 CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
 PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.38

§ 65.38 Direction or Recommendation in Will That Executor Employ Particular Attorney

A will provision naming a specific attorney as attorney for the executor, or directing the executor to consult and employ a particular attorney in all matters relating to the probate of the will and the administration of the estate, is advisory only and not binding on the executor [ In re Ogier (1894) 101 Cal. 381, 386, 35 P. 900 ; Highfield v. Bozio (1922) 188 Cal. 727, 728, 207 P. 242 ]. The attorney for the executor represents the executor, not the estate [see Goldberg v. Frye (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1258, 1267, 266 Cal. Rptr. 483 (attorney for administrator)]; and the office or position of "attorney of an estate" is not recognized by the law [ In re Ogier (1894) 101 Cal. 381, 385, 35 P. 900 ]. An executor, like any other person, has the right to select his or her own attorney [ Highfield v. Bozio (1922) 188 Cal. 727, 729, 207 P. 242 ]. However, an executor may respect a will provision requesting that the executor employ a particular attorney. Under appropriate circumstances, such a provision may safely be added to the will, provided the testator understands that the direction is not binding.

DIVISION IV: WILLS AND TRUSTS
CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.39

§ 65.39 Compensation of Executors

[1] Statutory Fees

Executors, like other personal representatives, are entitled to compensation for their services. If the will does not specify the amount of the compensation [see § 65.39[3]], it will be determined according to a statutory schedule [see Prob. Code § 10800]. The statutory schedule determines the compensation according to the total value of the estate accounted for, as follows [Prob. Code § 10800(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.707 (for proceedings commenced after June 30, 1991, law in effect on date of court's order awarding statutory compensation determines amount of that compensation)]:

- Four percent on the first $100,000;
- Three percent on the next $100,000;
- Two percent on the next $800,000;
- One percent on the next $9,000,000;
- One half of 1 percent on the next $15,000,000;
- A reasonable amount to be determined by the court for all amounts above $25,000,000.

For purposes of computing the statutory compensation, the total amount of the estate accounted for is deemed to be the total appraisal value of the inventory, plus gains over appraisal value on sales, plus receipts, less losses over appraisal on sales [Prob. Code § 10800(b)]. No deduction is allowed for encumbrances or other obligations on estate property [Prob. Code § 10800(b)].

A petition for statutory commissions or attorney's fees must state the amount of statutory compensation that is payable, and set forth the estate accounted for and the calculation of statutory compensation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.705(a)]. If an account has been waived, the final report of administration must list the information required by law, including information as to creditors' claims, sales, purchases or exchanges of assets, changes in the form of assets, assets on hand, whether the estate is solvent, detailed schedules of receipts and gains or losses on sale (if an amount other than the amount of the inventory and appraisal is used as a basis for calculating fees or commissions), costs of administration (if reimbursement of these costs is requested), the amount of any fees or commissions paid or to be paid, and the calculation of these fees or commissions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 7.705(b), 7.550]. If the report is accompanied by a request for statutory commissions or fees, the basis for their computation must be included in the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.705(b)].

The court may authorize an allowance of statutory fees or commissions on account before approval of the final account and decree of final distribution [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.701]. Any allowance before settlement of the final account must be low enough to avoid the possibility of overpayment and must be (1) based on the estimated amount of statutory compensation payable on the estate determined as of the date of the petition for allowance, (2) in proportion to the work actually performed, and (3) based on a detailed description of the ordinary services performed and remaining to be performed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.701].

The award of statutory fees is not discretionary. The representative is entitled to those fees as a matter of right, and the fact that the estate is large and its administration relatively simple does not diminish the right [ Estate of Getty (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 455, 466, 191 Cal. Rptr. 897 ]. The court has discretion, however, on hearing a petition for final distribution of the estate, to reduce the executor's compensation in an appropriate amount if the time taken for administration of the estate exceeds the time required by the Probate Code or prescribed by the court and if the court determines that the time taken was within the control of the executor and not in the best interest of the estate or interested persons [Prob. Code § 12205; see Prob. Code § 48 ("interested person" defined)].

The statutory compensation is intended to cover all of the services that the executor has a duty to perform [ Estate of Billings (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 426, 430, 278 Cal. Rptr. 439 ]. The executor may not hire other persons to perform those services and expect that the compensation of the other persons will be paid out of the estate. Rather, compensation for those services must be deducted from the executor's statutory compensation. Whether the executor had a duty to perform services actually performed by others, and whether the executor's statutory compensation should be reduced by the amount of the compensation paid to the others, are ordinarily questions to be determined in the discretion of the trial court [ Estate of Billings (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 426, 430-432, 278 Cal. Rptr. 439 ].

The personal representative may not pay or receive, and the attorney for the personal representative may not receive, statutory commissions or fees, or fees for extraordinary services, in advance of a court order authorizing their payment [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.700(a)]. In addition to removing the personal representative and imposing any other sanctions authorized by law against the personal representative or the attorney, the court may surcharge the personal representative for payment or receipt of statutory commissions or fees, or fees for extraordinary services, in advance of a court order authorizing their payment [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.700(b)].

[2] For Extraordinary Services

In addition to statutory compensation based on the value of the estate accounted for, executors are entitled to additional compensation for "extraordinary services" [Prob. Code § 10801(a); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also §§ 65.41, 65.42]. Extraordinary services are generally those beyond or in addition to the common or ordinary services rendered by the representative.

A petition for extraordinary compensation must include, or be accompanied by, a statement of the facts on which the petition is based, which must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.702]:

- Show the nature and difficulty of the tasks performed.

- Show the results achieved.
- Show the benefit of the services to the estate.
- Specify the amount requested for each category of service performed.
- State the hourly rate of each person who performed services and the hours spent by each of them.
- Describe the services rendered in sufficient detail to demonstrate the productivity of the time spent.
- State the estimated amount of statutory compensation to be paid by the estate, if the petition is not part of a final account or report.

Extraordinary compensation ordinarily will not be awarded unless the services benefit the estate. Thus the representative is not entitled to extraordinary compensation for services that were not properly part of the administration of the estate [ Estate of Tubbs (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 305, 308, 186 P.2d 7 ] or that were made necessary by the representative's own mistake [ Estate of Coberly (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 46, 51, 202 P.2d 306 ].

The following is a nonexclusive list of activities for which the personal representative may be awarded extraordinary compensation [ Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.703(b) ]:

- Selling, leasing, exchanging, financing, or foreclosing real or personal property.
- Carrying on the decedent's business if necessary to preserve the estate or under court order.
- Preparing tax returns.
- Handling audits or litigation connected with tax liabilities of the decedent or the estate.

The following is a nonexclusive list of activities for which the personal representative's attorney may be awarded extraordinary compensation [ Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.703(c) ]:

- Legal services in connection with the sale of property held in the estate.
- Services to secure a loan to pay estate debts.
- Litigation undertaken to benefit the estate or protect its interests.
- Defense of the personal representative's account or defense of a will that is contested after its admission to probate.
- Successful defense of a will that is contested before its admission to probate or successful defense of a personal representative in a removal proceeding.
- Extraordinary efforts to locate estate assets.
- Litigation in support of the attorney's request for extraordinary compensation when prior compensation awards are not adequate compensation under all of the circumstances.
- Coordination of ancillary administration.

■ Accounting for a deceased, incapacitated, or absconded personal representative under Prob. Code § 10953.

Extraordinary legal services may include the services of a paralegal acting under an attorney's direction and supervision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.703(e)]. A request for extraordinary legal fees for a paralegal's services must: (1) describe the paralegal's qualifications (including education, certification, continuing education, and experience); (2) state the hours the paralegal spent and the hourly rate requested for the paralegal's services; (3) describe the services the paralegal performed; (4) state why it was appropriate to use the paralegal's services in the particular case; and (5) demonstrate that the total amount requested for the attorney's and paralegal's extraordinary services does not exceed the amount appropriate if the attorney had performed the services without the paralegal's assistance [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.703(e)].

The allowance of extraordinary compensation is a matter of discretion with the trial court [ Estate of Fulcher (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 710, 718, 44 Cal. Rptr. 861 ], and in the absence of abuse, the trial court's discretion will not be interfered with on appeal [ Estate of Downing (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 256, 266, 184 Cal. Rptr. 511 ]. The trial court's discretion includes discretion to determine whether the character of the services is such that it warrants extra compensation and, if it is, how much that extra compensation should be [ Estate of Downing (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 256, 266, 184 Cal. Rptr. 511 ; Estate of Scherer (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 133, 142, 136 P.2d 103 ].

[3] Will Provisions

Wills do not usually provide for the compensation of the executor, although the Probate Code explicitly authorizes them to do so [see Prob. Code § 10802; see also Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined) and § 65.35]. If the will makes provision for the executor's compensation, the specified sum must be the full compensation for the executor's services [Prob. Code § 10802(a)]. The executor is not also entitled to claim extraordinary compensation [ Estate of Runyon (1899) 125 Cal. 195, 197, 57 P. 783 ; see Estate of Van Every (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 164, 165, 153 P.2d 614 (attorneys' fees); see also § 65.39[2]].

However, the executor may petition the court to be relieved from a will provision setting his or her compensation [Prob. Code § 10802(b)]; and, if the court determines that it is to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the persons interested in the estate, the court may make an order authorizing greater compensation than the will allows [Prob. Code § 10802(d)].

Any contract between an executor or administrator and an heir or devisee for a higher compensation than that allowed by the will or by statute is void [Prob. Code § 10803].

[4] When There Are Coexecutors

When there are two or more executors (whether the executors serve simultaneously or consecutively), the executor's compensation must be apportioned among them. If they cannot agree among themselves how the compensation should be apportioned, the court will apportion it for them [Prob. Code § 10805; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.704(a)]. Apportionment is required for extraordinary compensation as well as statutory compensation [Prob. Code § 10805; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.704(a)]; see Dobbins v. Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 64, 67, 136 P.2d 572 ].

[5] When Attorney Is Executor

Attorneys for executors are also entitled to compensation for their services. The statutory provisions regulating the compensation of attorneys are substantially the same as those regulating the compensation of executors. A statutory fee schedule determines the ordinary compensation of the attorney for the executor, and the schedule is identical to the statutory schedule for the compensation of personal representatives [see Prob. Code §§ 10800(a) (personal representatives), 10810(a)(attorneys); see also § 65.39]. If the attorney renders extraordinary services, the court may allow the attorney additional compensation for those services in an amount the court determines to be just and reasonable [Prob. Code § 10811(a); for extraordinary compensation of executor, see Prob. Code § 10801(a); § 65.39[2]]. An attorney may also claim extraordinary compensation for services performed by a paralegal under the attorney's direction and supervision [Prob. Code § 10811(b)]. Moreover, an attorney may agree to perform extraordinary service on a contingent fee basis if the agreement to do so is in writing, complies with Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147, is approved by the court, and the court determines that the agreement is just and reasonable, to the estate's advantage, and in the best interests of the persons who are interested in the estate [Prob. Code § 10811(c)].

A will may make provision for the compensation of the attorney for the executor. If it does so, the compensation provided by the will will ordinarily be the full and only compensation to which the attorney is entitled [Prob. Code § 10812(a)]. However, the attorney may petition the court to be relieved from the will provision [Prob. Code § 10812(a), (b)]; and, if the court determines that it is to the advantage of the estate and in the best interest of the persons interested in the estate, it may make an order authorizing greater compensation for the attorney [Prob. Code § 10812(c)(5)]. Any agreement by the executor to pay the attorney higher compensation than that allowed by the statutes is void [Prob. Code § 10813]. If there are two or more attorneys, the compensation must be apportioned among them according to the services actually rendered by each, or as they may agree among themselves [Prob. Code § 10814].

An attorney who serves as an executor cannot generally claim compensation both as executor and as attorney for the executor [see Prob. Code § 10804; In re Estate of Parker (1926) 200 Cal. 132, 137, 251 P. 907]. The reason for this rule is that an executor is a fiduciary, and a fiduciary should not be permitted to make a profit by employing himself or herself in a matter related to his or her trust [ Estate of Thompson (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 613, 614-615, 328 P.2d 1; Estate of Hart (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 634, 639, 22 Cal. Rptr. 495 ]. However, compensation as an executor as well as for services rendered as attorney for the executor may be obtained if the court specifically approves the compensation in advance and finds that the arrangement is to the advantage, benefit, and best interests of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 10804]. An executor who is an attorney may properly employ another attorney to render legal services for the estate. If the executor elects to act as his or her own attorney, however, the general rule is that he or she is not entitled to attorneys' fees for doing so unless prior court approval is obtained [Prob. Code § 10804; Estate of Thompson (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 613, 614-615, 328 P.2d 1; Estate of Parker (1926) 200 Cal. 132, 135-136, 251 P. 907]. An attorney cannot waive his or her fees as executor and thereafter claim attorneys' fees, since the rule against awarding attorneys' fees to an executor is based on public policy [ Estate of Hart (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 634, 639, 22 Cal. Rptr. 495 ].

The rule that an executor who is an attorney may not receive compensation as executor and as attorney for the executor (unless prior court approval is obtained) applies notwithstanding any provision in the decedent's will [Prob. Code § 10804; see Estate of Thompson (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 613, 615-617, 328 P.2d 1 (in absence of statutory provision or compelling policy reason to the contrary, when testamentary document expressly provides for both executor's and attorney's fees to same person, full force and effect should be given to testamentary direction); for will provision authorizing an attorney to receive compensation both as executor and as attorney, see § 65.445]. However, an attorney may receive compensation for services as executor and the attorney's law firm may receive compensation for legal services for the executor on proof that they have agreed that the executor will not share in any part of the attorneys' fees [ Estate of Parker (1926) 200 Cal. 132, 137, 251 P. 907 ]. If the record is silent about whether the executor will share in the attorneys' fees, sharing is presumed [ Estate of Parker (1926) 200 Cal. 132, 138, 251 P. 907 ]. Although these rules are somewhat negated by the statutory provision authorizing dual compensation for an executor who is also the attorney for the executor (by obtaining prior court approval for such an arrangement) [see Prob. Code § 10804], to establish that the attorney will not share in the law firm's compensation, a written agreement to that effect should be filed with the court.

CHAPTER 65 EXECUTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

24-65 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 65.40§ 65.40 Bonds[1] When Required

The general rule is that every personal representative is required to give a bond approved by the court [Prob. Code § 8480(a); see Prob. Code § 58(a) ("personal representative" defined); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 995.210(a) (undertaking may be given in place of bond)]. The bond must be for the benefit of interested persons and conditioned on the personal representative's faithful execution of the duties of his or her office according to law [Prob. Code § 8480(b); see Prob. Code § 48 ("interested person" defined)]. If the person appointed as personal representative fails to give the required bond, letters may not be issued [Prob. Code § 8480(c); see Prob. Code § 52 ("letters" defined)].

A bond is not required, however, if the will waives the requirement of a bond [Prob. Code § 8481(a)(1)]. Similarly, a bond is not required if all of the beneficiaries waive the requirement of a bond and their written waivers are attached to the petition for the appointment of the personal representative [Prob. Code § 8481(a)(2); see Prob. Code § 24 ("beneficiary" defined)]. Even if the beneficiaries waive the bond however, a bond will be required if the will requires one [Prob. Code § 8481(a)(2)].

Notwithstanding the waiver of a bond by the will or by all of the beneficiaries, the court may require that a bond be given, either before or after issuance of letters, if it finds good cause to require one [Prob. Code § 8481(b)].

When there are two or more personal representatives, the court may require a separate bond from each or a joint and several bond from both. If a joint bond is furnished, the liability on the bond is joint and several [Prob. Code § 8480(a)].
