DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers state and federal law regarding the performance of services by an independent contractor. The legal background defines the term "independent contractor" for various state and federal purposes and examines the factors considered in determining whether a worker is an independent contractor or an employee. It discusses the types of services that are usually performed by independent contractors, situations in which the distinction between "independent contractor" and "employee" is important, and the advantages and disadvantages of using independent contractors rather than employees. In addition, the legal background discusses the significant consequences of improperly designating employees as independent contractors, particularly the tax consequences.

The transaction guide provides checklists for determining whether a worker is an employee or independent contractor, a checklist for structuring the work relationship with an independent contractor, and a guide to drafting agreements with independent contractors. The forms include a sample contract with an independent contractor and an agreement between an agency acting as a general contractor and an independent contractor acting as a subcontractor to perform services for a third party. Also included are official forms used by state and federal agencies in performing an audit of a particular worker's status.

For discussion of related topics, see Ch. 16, Starting a New Business; Chs. 85, Employment Agreements, and 86, Agreements for Professional Services; and Ch. 92, Service Contracts . CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Independent Contractors Under California Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.10

§ 84.10 "Independent Contractor" Defined

An "independent contractor" is a person who, in rendering services, exercises an independent employment or occupation and is under the control of the person for whom services are performed only with respect to the result of the work and not as to the means by which it is accomplished. The primary element, therefore, that establishes a worker as an independent contractor is that the person for whom services are rendered has no right of control over the manner and means of accomplishing the result [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337 ; see Lab. Code § 3353 ("independent contractor" defined for purposes of workers' compensation)]. The right of the person for whom services are rendered to exercise control, rather than the actual exercise of that right, is the determinative factor [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] .

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Independent Contractors Under California Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.11

§ 84.11 Factors Considered in Determining Whether Person Is Independent Contractor or Employee

[1] In General

In determining whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee, the following factors, based on the common law of agency, are considered [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]:

- The extent of control that the one who ordered the work may, by the terms of the agreement, exercise over the details of the work.
- Whether or not the one performing the work is engaged in a distinct occupation or business.
- Whether in the particular locality the kind of work involved is usually done under the direction of the person for whom the work is performed or by a specialist without supervision.
- The skill required in the particular occupation.
- Whether the person for whom work is performed or the person performing the work supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work.
- The length of time for which the person is engaged.
- Whether or not regular working hours are set by the person for whom work is performed.
- Whether payment is by the hour or month or for the job.
- Whether or not the person performing the work is engaged full time by one person.

- Whether or not the work is performed in a specific area or over a fixed route.

- Whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the person for whom the work is performed.

- Whether the parties believe they are creating an independent contract or an employer-employee relationship.

- Whether or not the person who ordered the work is in business.

- Whether or not the services are terminable without cause at the will of the person for whom the work is performed.

- Whether or not under the terms of the agreement the work may be delegated.

These factors are discussed in greater detail in [3] through [11], below.

In a case concerning the ownership of a copyright, the United States Supreme Court affirmed the use of the Restatement factors listed above in determining whether a person is an employee or an independent contractor under the common law of agency [see Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid (1989) 490 U.S. 730, 752, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 .]

[2] Weight of Factors

Whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee is generally a question of fact [Rogers v. Whitson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 662, 672, 39 Cal. Rptr. 849] . When conflicting inferences may reasonably be drawn, the determination of the jury, court, or administrative body will not be disturbed on appeal, if supported by substantial evidence [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indust. Rel. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] . However, if only one inference may reasonably be drawn from the facts, the question is one of law [Fleming v. Foothill-Montrose Ledger (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 681, 684, 139 Cal. Rptr. 579 ; see Isenberg v. California Emp. Stab. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 34, 40-41, 180 P.2d 11] .

In determining whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee, the most important question is which party has the right to control the manner and means by which the work is accomplished [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . If the person engaging the services of the other has the authority to exercise complete control over the details of performing the work, an employer-employee relationship exists [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . If, on the other hand, the person performing the work has the right to control the manner and means by which the work is accomplished and is under the control of the person engaging his or her services only with respect to the desired result, the relationship is one of independent contractor [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337] .

In some cases, courts have viewed the right to control the means by which the work is accomplished as the most significant test of the employment relationship and the other factors as secondary considerations [see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; Isenberg v. California Emp. Stab. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 34, 39, 180 P.2d 11] . In other cases, courts have examined some or all of the other factors not as independent secondary elements, but as questions bearing on the issue of control [see Press Publishing Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1922) 190 Cal. 114, 119-120, 210 P. 820 .] The California Supreme Court has cautioned against a too-rigid application of the control factor and endorses consideration of secondary factors as well [see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indust. Rel. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

When conflicting inferences may be drawn from the facts, the decision of the lower court will be upheld on appeal [Grant v. Woods (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 647, 652, 139 Cal. Rptr. 533] . Hence, one person may be classified as an independent contractor, while a person engaged in similar work under similar conditions for a different employer may be classified as an employee. In addition, aside from the issue of control over the manner and means of performing the work, it is difficult to anticipate what weight a court will accord to the various other factors that are examined in resolving the question of whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee. An attorney drafting a "borderline" contract cannot be assured that use of the terminology of independent contractor will be upheld in the event of litigation. The label given to the relationship by the parties in an agreement is not dispositive [see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] . Rather, the parties' label for their relationship will be ignored if their actual conduct establishes a different relationship [Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-13, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327 (employer's control over every detail of workers' performance supported trial court's conclusion that workers were employees, not independent contractors, despite contractual recitations that manner and means of performing work were within workers' discretion)]. Accordingly, in an independent contractor agreement, it is essential to carefully draft the provisions that a court will consider most important in determining what type of relationship exists. For a drafting guide to an agreement with an independent contractor, see Section 84.120. For a form of independent contractor agreement, see Section 84.200.

[3] Right to Control Manner and Means of Work

The right to control the manner and means by which the work is performed is the most important consideration in determining whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . However, complete surrender of control by the person for whom work is performed is not essential to a finding of independent contractor status [Bates v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1958) 156 Cal. App. 2d 713, 718, 320 P.2d 167] . The person for whom work is performed may retain a certain measure of control directed toward securing satisfactory results without creating the relationship of employer- employee [Pylon, Inc. v. Olympic Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 643, 653, 77 Cal. Rptr. 72] . Thus, the fact that a contract requires that the work be performed with care and skill does not of itself transform an independent contractor into an employee [see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment e]. For example, a demand that independent contractors comply with applicable safety regulations does not transform a principal into an employer responsible for furnishing a safe workplace [Smith v. AC and S, Inc. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 77, 91, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 (citing Stanford v. City of Ontario (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 870, 878, 101 Ca. Rptr. 97, 495 P.2d 425)]. On the other hand, the fact that a certain amount of freedom is inherent in the nature of the work does not require that one be characterized as an independent contractor [Durae v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 691, 700, 23 Cal. Rptr. 902] .

In determining which party has the right to control the manner and means of performing the work, courts examine how much independent judgment is left to the person performing the work with respect to each task that must be undertaken in accomplishing the result. One case, for instance, involved contracts between television writers and a television producer. The television writers worked on their own time, at their own expense, in their own way, with their own instrumentalities, and at a place of their own selection. A distinct contract was executed for the writing of each teleplay. The employment terminated when the play was completed, and a writer could be compelled by the producer only to make two drafts of a teleplay. After the contract became operative, however, the desires, suggestions, requests, and directions of the producer's staff were, in effect, commands with which the writers had to comply, unless they could convince the producer that the suggested changes were inappropriate. Failure to comply resulted in forfeiting future employment. The trial court found that the writers were employees and the California Supreme Court affirmed [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 946, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975] .

In another case, a model performed two hours work for a photographer. The model found work through an agent, who billed for the model's services, collected the payments, deducted his own fee, and sent the balance to the model. The model was found to be an employee of the photographer because the photographer controlled the model's every movement, dress, hours, and place of work, and could fire him for disobedience [Zaremba v. Miller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 5, 169 Cal. Rptr. 688] .

A person who engages an independent contractor, however, may exercise a certain measure of control toward securing satisfactory results. For example, a mining company contracted with lessees to produce ore from various portions of its properties. Although the mining company was to have no part in the selection, employment, or direction of the lessee's employees, the lessee agreed to discharge any employee whom the mining company's superintendent designated as objectionable. The tramming, hoisting, storage, and milling operations of the ore produced by the lessee were to be carried out in accordance with schedules set by the company. In addition, the mining company reserved the right to enter the leased area to inspect work done in both underground and milling operations for the purpose of determining the grade of ore being mined, the size and location of veins, and the efficiency of milling operations. The court held that control of the manner and means of performing the work was vested in the lessee and, hence, that the lessee was an independent contractor [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 36-46, 168 P.2d 686] .

[4] Custom of Community

The custom of the community as to the control ordinarily exercised in a particular occupation is relevant to the determination of whether the person performing the work is an independent contractor or an employee [Isenberg v. California Emp. Stab. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 34, 37, 180 P.2d 11] . Custom, combined with the skill required in the occupation, may be of nearly conclusive weight. Thus, unskilled labor is customarily performed by employees. Moreover, if the occupation is one that is ordinarily considered an incident of the business establishment or a function of the regular members of the staff of the person for whom services are rendered, the implication is that the relationship is one of employer-employee [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment i]. In contrast, independent truckers with their own trade association were deemed independent contractors based in part on industry recognition of the independent truckers as being engaged in a distinct occupation [see State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Brown (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 188, 203, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98] .

[5] Effect of State Licensing Requirements

The fact that an independent authority, such as the state government, regulates the conduct of the person performing the work does not negate a finding that the person for whom services are rendered exercises sufficient control to create an employer-employee relationship [Drillon v. Industrial Accident Com. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 346, 354-356, 110 P.2d 64 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment i]. Indeed, Lab. Code § 2750.5 creates a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing services for which a contractor's license is required, or performing those services for a person who is required to obtain a contractor's license, is an employee rather than an independent contractor [Lab. Code § 2750.5; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (Contractors' State License Law)]. The presumption ordinarily is conclusive if the worker does not possess a valid contractor's license [Lab. Code § 2750.5; see Sanders Constr. Co. v. Cerda (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 430, 433-436, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911 (under Lab. Code § 2750.5, general contractor is treated as employer of unlicensed subcontractor's employees, who may assert wage claim against general contractor); but see Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1004, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 (notwithstanding presumption established by Lab. Code § 2750.5, one who misrepresents self as licensed contractor is estopped from asserting that unlicensed status makes him or her employee)]. Applying this presumption, the California Supreme Court has held that an unlicensed worker hired to remodel a homeowner's house, who became injured on the job, cannot be an independent contractor in the eyes of the law and is instead deemed the homeowner's employee at law for purposes of rendering him or her eligible for workers' compensation benefits under the homeowner's insurance policy [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146] . It remains an open question, however, whether an unlicensed worker will be deemed a homeowner-hirer's employee under Lab. Code § 2750.5 so as to impose vicarious tort liability on the homeowner for the worker's conduct that results in the worker's own injury [Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 913, 920, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 (because no applicable statute created special duty owed by employer to employee, it was unnecessary to decide whether unlicensed worker was homeowner-hirer's employee at law under Lab. Code § 2750.5 so as to impose vicarious liability on homeowner for worker's death caused by worker's own conduct)].

There is also a rebuttable presumption that a physician who enters into a contract for the performance of health services on behalf of a licensed primary care clinic is an independent contractor [Lab. Code § 2750.6]. For unemployment insurance purposes, "employment" does not include professional services performed by a consultant working as an independent contractor. Moreover, there is a rebuttable presumption that services provided by an individual engaged in work requiring specialized knowledge and skills, including doctors and dentists, are rendered by an independent contractor. This rebuttable presumption does not apply to one who enters into a contract with a recipient of professional services if the contract establishes an employer-employee relationship. However, the existence of a contract between a nonprofit primary care clinic and a health care practitioner does not mean that there is an employer-employee relationship if the agreement stipulates that the professional services are rendered by a person acting as an independent contractor, not as an employee [Unemp. Ins. Code § 656].

[6] Ownership of Tools and Instrumentalities

Ownership of tools and instrumentalities also bears on the question of control. The fact that the person performing the work supplies the tools is some evidence that he or she is an independent contractor [see, e.g., State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Brown (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 188, 203 (truckers had made significant capital investment in the trucks)]. If, on the other hand, the person for whom the work is performed supplies the tools, he or she is likely to instruct the worker as to their use, and, therefore, the implication is that the relationship is one of employer-employee [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment k; but see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 954, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 (ownership of tools of little importance when service to be performed is intellectual endeavor)].

[7] Period of Employment and Manner of Payment

The period of employment and the method of payment are relevant in determining the amount of control exerted by the person for whom the work is performed. The shorter the period of employment, the less likely it is that the person performing the work will subject himself or herself to control as to details, and the more likely it is that the job will be considered the job of the person performing the work, as opposed to the job of the person for whom the work is performed. This is particularly true if payment is for the job rather than by the hour. If, however, the work is not skilled, or if the person for whom the work is performed supplies the tools and instrumentalities, the person performing the work may be considered an employee [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment j].

[8] Place Where Work Is Performed

The fact that the work is done on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed points toward an employer-employee relationship. This implication is strengthened if the person performing the work agrees to abide by general rules for the regulation of the conduct of employees [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment l; but see Pylon, Inc. v. Olympic Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 643, 652-653, 77 Cal. Rptr. 72 (general supervisory right to control work does not defeat independent contractor status)].

The fact that the work is performed on the employer's premises, however, is not determinative. Not only may the other relevant factors outweigh this (for example, supplying one's own tools or working according to one's own method), but the nature of the work may require that it be performed on the premises of the person for whom the services are rendered [see California Emp. Stab. Com. v. Morris (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 812, 819-820, 172 P.2d 497 (real estate salesperson); Walder v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 473, 474-475, 193 P.2d 60 (carpenter); Los Flores School Dist. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 180, 183-185, 56 P.2d 581 (painter)].

[9] Persons for Whom Services Are Performed

If an individual performs the same type of work for many persons, the implication is that he or she is an independent contractor [see Yamaoka v. Diemer (1950) 15 Cal. Comp. Cases 77] . On the other hand, devoting one's full time to performing work for one person points towards an employer-employee relationship [Brown v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1917) 174 Cal. 457, 461, 163 P. 664] .

[10] Belief and Practices of Parties

The belief of the parties as to whether the person performing the work is an independent contractor or an employee is relevant to the determination, but is not conclusive [see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 954, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment m]. The intent of the parties is considered, but the label given to the relationship by the parties in an agreement is not dispositive [see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] . Rather, the parties' label for their relationship will be ignored if their actual conduct establishes a different relationship [Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-13, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327 (employer's control over every detail of workers' performance supported trial court's conclusion that workers were employees, not independent contractors, despite contractual recitations that manner and means of performing work were within workers' discretion)]. Custom in the community [see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment i] and whether or not the person for whom the services are rendered has deducted withholding taxes, obtained workers' compensation insurance, or paid unemployment insurance taxes [see Mission Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 211, 225, 176 Cal. Rptr. 439] are pertinent inquiries in this regard.

[11] Right to Terminate Work Relationship

The right of the person for whom services are rendered to discharge the worker at will without cause is strong evidence in support of an employment relationship [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . The power of the person for whom the work is performed to terminate the relationship at any time is incompatible with the full control of the work usually exerted by an independent contractor [Press Publishing Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1922) 190 Cal. 114, 119-120, 210 P. 820] . However, the right of discharge alone is not conclusive evidence that a person performing work for another is an employee [Bohanon v. James McClatchy Pub. Co. (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 188, 204, 60 P.2d 510] . Thus, an independent contractor agreement can properly include an at-will clause giving the parties the right to terminate the agreement without cause, and such a clause does not by itself change the independent contractor relationship into an employer-employee relationship [Varisco v. Gateway Sci. & Eng'g, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1107-1108, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 393 (worker was not controlled by hirer, and agreement provided mutual right to terminate, which was consistent with independent contractor relationship)].

On the other hand, while an at-will employee may quit at any time without incurring liability [see Lab. Code § 2922], an independent contractor is legally obligated to complete the contract [Baugh v. Rogers (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 200, 206-207, 148 P.2d 633] . Therefore, the presence of a contract requiring completion of certain tasks raises the implication that the person is an independent contractor.

An independent contractor often has employees. Those employees may not be treated as employees of the other party to the contract (the principal). The independence arising from the contractual relationship between the contractor and the principal implicitly shields those employees from being subject to supervision or direction by the principal. For example, insurance companies commonly engage insurance agents as independent contractors to sell insurance policies. If such an independent agent has employees, the insurance company is not entitled to impose common terms of employment on those employees, such as an obligation to preserve the company's trade secrets (identities of policyholders, for example) or an obligation not to solicit the company's existing customers to do business with a competitor. Such activity by the company would amount to a violation of the agency contract [Patricia Adkins Ins. Agency, Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 526, 533, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 882] .

§ 84.12 Rebuttable Presumption for Unemployment Insurance Purposes

For the purpose of determining eligibility for unemployment insurance, the Unemployment Insurance Code provides a rebuttable presumption that services rendered by specified individuals engaged in work requiring specialized knowledge and skills attained through completion of recognized courses of instruction or experience are provided by these individuals as independent contractors. This rebuttable presumption applies to accountants, architects, attorneys, dentists, engineers, physicians, and the various types of physical, chemical, natural, and biological scientists. It does not apply, however, to a person who enters into an employment contract with the recipient of that person's professional services that establishes an employer-employee relationship [Unemp. Ins. Code § 656].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Independent Contractors Under California Law

§ 84.14 Simultaneous Status as Independent Contractor and Employee

A person may simultaneously be an employee and an independent contractor either with respect to one person who engages his or her services (depending on the duties being performed at a given time) [Guth v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 762, 765-767, 112 P.2d 969] or with respect to two or more persons [General Acc. Fire & Life Assur. Corp. Ltd. v. Industrial Acc. Comm. (1938) 3 Cal. Comp. Cas. 17, 18-19].

In addition, a person may simultaneously be an employee for one purpose, and an independent contractor for another purpose. For example, a real estate salesperson, for the purpose of administering the real estate law, is the employee and agent of the broker. For the purpose of establishing tort liability, a broker is liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the tortious acts of sales personnel during the course and scope of business because of that agency relationship [see Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 890, 895, 192 Cal. Rptr. 637] . However, a real estate salesperson is not an employee for the purpose of workers' compensation [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 650] or for the purpose of federal employment taxes [see I.R.C. § 3508]. In any case, the minimum wage law is not applicable to real estate salespersons, either because they are specifically excluded from coverage as "outside salespersons" [see Lab. Code § 1171] or because they are independent contractors under the traditional common law control rule [see Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 890, 897, 192 Cal. Rptr. 637] .

CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Independent Contractors Under California Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.15

§ 84.15 Importance of Distinction Between Independent Contractor and Employee

[1] Overview

Whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor can have important legal ramifications in a number of respects. For example, as discussed in [2] and [3], below, an individual's status as an employee or an independent contractor determines whether the person hiring him or her is required to provide workers' compensation benefits or make contributions for unemployment insurance. Furthermore, an individual's status as employee renders the employer potentially liable to third party's for the individual's torts under the doctrine of respondeat superior [see [2]-[4], below].

Employees of an independent contractor are not considered employees of the person or entity hiring the independent contractor (for example, the owner or lessor of the premises where the work is done). Hence, a landowner generally is not held liable for injuries to or negligence of the employee of a contractor [see Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 743-744, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52 ; State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 526, 529-530, 116 P.2d 173 ; see also Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; but see Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659, 674, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495, 123 P.3d 931 (hirer as landowner may be independently liable to contractor's employee if it knows or reasonably should know of concealed pre-existing hazardous condition on its premises, contractor does not know and could not reasonably ascertain condition, and landowner fails to warn contractor)]. Nor is the hirer of a contractor liable for the injury of an independent contractor working for the contractor [see Michael v. Denbeste Transportation Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1095, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777 (Privette doctrine, which limits the circumstances under which an injured employee of an independent contractor can sue the hirer of that contractor, is applicable where the injured party is an independent contractor who was working for a contractor)]. Similarly, a general contractor is generally not held liable with respect to a subcontractor's employee [Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 743-744, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52] .

[2] Workers' Compensation

Under the Workers' Compensation Act [see Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.], an employer is liable, without regard to negligence, for any injury proximately causing disability or death to an employee [see Lab. Code § 3351 (definition)] and arising out of and in the course of employment, with limited exceptions [Lab. Code § 3600; see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(4)-(10) (exceptions)]. Every individual or business entity (excluding the state) served by employees must either obtain workers' compensation insurance or secure a certificate of consent to self-insure from the Director of Industrial Relations [Lab. Code § 3700]. The right to recover workers' compensation is generally the exclusive remedy of an employee against an employer for injury or death [see Lab. Code §§ 3602, 5300].

For workers' compensation purposes, an "independent contractor" is a person who renders service for a specified compensation for a specified result, under the control of the principal as to the result of the work only and not as to the means by which the result is accomplished [Lab. Code § 3353]. An independent contractor is not covered by workers' compensation laws, because workers' compensation applies only to "employees" [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)], and therefore may bring a tort action for a work-related injury against a person who has engaged his or her services.

The person for whom services are rendered has the burden of proving that the injured person was an independent contractor rather than an employee [Johnson v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 ; see Lab. Code §§ 3357 (presumption of employee status), 5705]. In determining the status of the injured person, the key determination is whether the principal exercised "all necessary control" over the operation [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 355-360, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (harvest workers were employees, since defendant employer exercised pervasive control over farming operation as a whole, including all necessary control over harvest operation); JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1064-1066, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563 (drivers hired by courier service were employees despite employer's lack of control over manner in which drivers covered their territories, because employer retained all necessary control over operation as whole, by obtaining clients in need of courier services and providing necessary workers to perform those services)]. In addition to the tests outlined in § 84.11[1], a court may also consider the following [Johnson v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 ; see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 352-354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] :

- The purpose of the workers' compensation statute and the intention of the legislature.
- The persons sought to be protected.
- Whether the injured person is or is not of a class of persons generally intended to be protected.
- Whether there are any specific statutory exclusions.
- The relative bargaining positions of the parties mentally, economically, and educationally.

When a person is injured while performing work for another, various factors may enter into the attempt to characterize him or her as either an independent contractor or an employee. First, an independent contractor may sue for greater damages than might be awarded for the same injury under the Workers' Compensation Act. On the other hand, a person who suffers a work-related injury might prefer to be classified as an employee in order to collect the amount guaranteed for that type of injury under the workers' compensation scheme. Second, the Act imposes liability on the employer without regard to negligence [Lab. Code § 3600]. The defenses of assumption of risk and contributory/comparative negligence, and the fellow-servant rule, are inapplicable [Lab. Code § 3708; see Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465 (holding defense of comparative negligence unavailable to employer under Workers' Compensation Act)]. In a suit for negligence brought by an independent contractor against a person engaging his or her services, however, these affirmative defenses are available.

Because employees of independent contractors have workers' compensation coverage by virtue of that employment, the hirer of an independent contractor ordinarily is not liable to an employee of the contractor for injuries caused by the negligence of the contractor [Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1244-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617 (no liability under negligent hiring theory); Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 267, 955 P.2d 504 (no liability under "peculiar risk" doctrine even when hirer fails to require that special precautions be taken to avert peculiar risks of work); Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 (no liability under "peculiar risk" doctrine)]. However, the hirer may be liable if the hirer's own conduct contributes to an injury suffered by the contractor's employee [Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659, 674, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495, 123 P.3d 931 (hirer as landowner may be independently liable to contractor's employee if it knows or reasonably should know of concealed pre-existing hazardous condition on its premises, contractor does not know and could not reasonably ascertain condition, and landowner fails to warn contractor); McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 219, 225, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868 (hirer liable for negligently furnishing unsafe equipment); Hooker v. Department of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 212, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853 (hirer liable based on exercise of retained control over safety conditions at work site that affirmatively contributed to injury suffered by contractor's employee)].

For further discussion of coverage issues pertaining to workers' compensation law, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 20 (Matthew Bender); California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender); and Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chs. 3, 4 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Unemployment Insurance

Every individual or entity that pays one or more employees [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 621 (definition)] wages in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter must contribute to the California Unemployment Fund [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 675; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 2602(a)]. A principal, however, does not have to contribute to the fund for services rendered by an independent contractor [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . Therefore, for the purposes of unemployment insurance, it is beneficial to hire an independent contractor rather than an employee. If an unemployment insurance tax is assessed, the burden of proof is on the person engaging the services of another to prove that the person performing work is an independent contractor and, therefore, that the tax has been assessed illegally [Isenberg v. California Emp. Stab. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 34, 37-38, 180 P.2d 11] .

For discussion of the statutory rebuttable presumption for unemployment insurance purposes that services rendered by certain types of professional persons are provided by those persons as independent contractors, see § 84.13. For further discussion of the meaning of the terms "employer" and "employee" for unemployment insurance purposes, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 80 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Respondeat Superior

Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is vicariously liable (i.e., without regard to the employer's own lack of negligence or fault) to third parties for injuries caused by the torts of an employee acting within the scope of employment [see Civ. Code § 2338; Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 959-960, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988] . On the other hand, one who engages an independent contractor is not, as a general rule, vicariously liable for the torts of the contractor or the contractor's employees while acting within the scope of the contract [Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508] . There are some exceptions to this rule, particularly in the case of nondelegable duties or intrinsically dangerous work [see Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 ; Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 743, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52] . The exceptions to the general rule notwithstanding, when a third party attempts to hold a person who has engaged the services of another liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior, it is to the latter's advantage to contend that the relationship with the tortfeasor is one of independent contractor [see, e.g., Armato v. Baden (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 885, 897-899, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 (rejecting claim by former patient of medical group, in action alleging negligent treatment by group's physician assistant, that conduct of independent contractor doctors for medical group created "ostensible partnership" with group making them jointly liable)].

For more detailed discussion of tort liability under the respondeat superior doctrine, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 8 (Matthew Bender) and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 30 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Wage and Hour Laws

For most California wage and hour laws to be applicable to a worker, an employment relationship must exist [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11010 et seq.]. No employment relationship exists if the person performing services is an independent contractor [see Grubb & Ellis Co. v. Spengler (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 890, 897-898, 192 Cal. Rptr. 637] . Therefore, independent contractors are not subject to most California laws regarding work hours, overtime compensation, and minimum wages, and business owners are afforded more flexibility in making arrangements regarding work that is to be performed by independent contractors.

For detailed discussion of the scope of coverage of California and federal wage and hour laws, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 1 (Matthew Bender). For additional discussion of coverage under federal wage and hour laws, see Leader, Wages and Hours: Law and Practice, Ch. 2 (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Independent Contractors Under California Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.16

§ 84.16 Problems With Using Independent Contractor Status as Subterfuge

[1] In General

In determining whether a person performing work is an independent contractor or an employee, courts will look beyond the language of the contract or agreement to the substance of the relationship between the parties [Grant v. Woods (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 647, 654, 139 Cal. Rptr. 533 ; Pacific Lbr. Co. v. Ind. Acc. Com. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 410, 422, 139 P.2d 892 ; see § 84.11]. In general, the key factor in this determination is whether the employer has the right of control over the worker's methods and results [see Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] . Employers who seek to skirt requirements of employment and tax laws by treating employees as independent contractors risk penalties, fines, and imprisonment for violations [see[2]-[5], below].

[2] Failure to Secure Workers' Compensation Insurance

It is a misdemeanor for an employer who knows (or because of his or her knowledge or experience is reasonably expected to know) of the obligation to secure the payment of workers' compensation to fail to secure that payment [Lab. Code § 3700.5]. Ordinarily, the right to recover workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for an employee against an employer for injury or death on the job [see Lab. Code §§ 3602, 5300]. However, an injured employee or his or her dependents may sue for damages against an employer who fails to secure payment of workers' compensation as if the workers' compensation laws did not apply [Lab. Code § 3706]. In addition, a stop order prohibiting the use of employee labor will be served on an employer who has failed to secure the payment of workers' compensation. The stop order will be effective until the employer secures the payment of workers compensation [Lab. Code § 3710.1]. The employer must also pay an employee affected by a work stoppage for time lost, not to exceed 10 days [Lab. Code § 3710.1].

Regarding independent contractors, this situation may arise when an injured or killed "independent contractor," for whom the employer has not secured workers' compensation coverage, is determined to be an employee by a government audit [see § 84.210 (EDD Form DE 1870)].

[3] Failure to Pay Employment Taxes

Most California employers must pay unemployment and employment training taxes based on wages paid to employees [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 976.6 (effective until Jan. 1, 2002), 977]. In addition, employers must withhold and contribute income and state disability insurance taxes from employees' wages [Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 986, 1110, 13020(a)]. These taxes are assessed based on employee wages, not compensation paid to independent contractors [see, e.g., Garrison v. State of California (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 820, 824, 149 P.2d 711 (unemployment taxes)]. Employers are subject to past taxes, injunctions, fines, and imprisonment for failing to withhold and pay these employment taxes when due [see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2101-2122.5, 13002].

A business whose labor is performed solely by independent contractors is not subject to these tax laws. However, if the independent contractors are reclassified as employees following a government audit [see § 84.210], the business will have to comply with these employment tax requirements, and is subject to liability for past failures to do so.

[4] Failure to Comply With Wage and Hour Laws

As discussed in § 84.15[5], most California wage and hour laws do not apply to independent contractors. However, if the independent contractors are reclassified as employees following a government audit [see § 84.210], the business is likely to be held in past violation of labor laws and wage orders, and subject to civil penalties, injunctions, and criminal fines and imprisonment [see Lab. Code 1194-1199].

For a discussion of civil and criminal penalties and other enforcement procedures under California and federal wage and hour laws, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 5 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Failure to Comply With Occupational Safety and Health Laws

California occupational safety and health laws protect employees, not independent contractors [see Lab. Code §§ 3300, 6304, 6304.1]. Employers are subject to injunctions, fines, and imprisonment for failing to maintain safe working places and conditions for their employees [see Lab. Code §§ 6323, 6423-6436]. Accordingly, a business whose labor is performed solely by independent contractors is not covered by OSHA laws. However, if the independent contractors are reclassified as employees following a government audit [see § 84.210], the business will have to comply with OSHA requirements, and is subject to liability for past failures to comply. For further discussion of workplace safety and health laws, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Independent Contractors Under Federal Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.30

§ 84.30 Federal Tax Considerations

[1] Liability for Federal Taxes

For federal tax purposes, a worker's characterization as an employee or an independent contractor has significant implications. An employer must withhold and remit federal income tax, FICA tax (Social Security), and FUTA tax (unemployment) on compensation paid to employees [see I.R.C. §§ 3101, 3301, 3402]. However, an employer need not withhold and remit these taxes on amounts paid to independent contractors. It is therefore an advantage to structure jobs so that workers can be treated as independent contractors rather than employees.

[2] "Independent Contractor" Defined

A person is generally an "independent contractor" if he or she is subject to control or direction merely as to the result to be accomplished, and not as to the means and methods for accomplishing the result [Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c)(2)]. An important factor in determining whether the worker is an independent contractor is a finding that he or she is operating his or her own business, assuming the risk of loss, and offering services to the general public [see Rev. Rul. 74-412, 1974-2 C.B. 332]. Accordingly, individuals engaged in the pursuit of an independent trade, business, or profession, such as doctors, lawyers, dentists, and construction contractors, are independent contractors [Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c)(2)]. For a list of factors to consider in determining whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor for federal income tax purposes, see [4], below.

[3] "Employee" Defined

[a] In General

Under the Internal Revenue Code, an "employee" is anyone who has the status of employee under the usual common-law rules applicable to the employer-employee relationship [I.R.C. § 3121(d)(2); see Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c); see also § 84.11 (common law factors)]. A person is generally an employee if the person for whom services are performed has the right to control and direct the person who performs the services. This control includes not only the result to be accomplished by the work, but also the manner in which the result is accomplished. The right to discharge is an important factor indicating that an employer-employee relationship exists [Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c)(2)]. In difficult cases, the determination of whether a person is an employee or independent contractor depends on the particular circumstances of the case [Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c)(3)]. If the relationship of employer and employee exists, the parties' designation or description of the relationship as anything else is immaterial, and the IRS will reclassify the worker accordingly [Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(a)(3)].

[b] Statutory Employees and Statutory Nonemployees

Some individuals are classified by statute as employees or nonemployees for federal tax purposes. For FICA purposes, all of the following are statutorily deemed "employees" if they are under a contract of service that contemplates they will perform substantially all services personally: (1) corporate officers, (2) agent-drivers and certain commission-drivers, (3) full-time insurance salespersons, (4) certain home workers, (5) traveling or city salespersons, and (6) any individual who performs services that are included under an agreement entered into under 42 U.S.C. § 418 (voluntary agreements with Commissioner of Social Security for coverage of state and local workers) [I.R.C. § 3121(d)(1), (3), (4)]. For FUTA purposes, only agent-drivers, certain commission-drivers, and traveling and city salespersons are considered statutory employees [I.R.C. § 3306(i)].

Qualified real estate agents and direct sellers [see I.R.C. § 3508(b) (definitions)] are statutorily deemed nonemployees, and compensation paid to them is not subject to income tax withholding or FICA or FUTA taxes [I.R.C. § 3508(a)].

[4] Factors Employed in Determining Status

With the exception of statutory employees and statutory nonemployees [see [3][b], above], the determination of whether a particular relationship is an independent contractor or employment relationship is on a case-by-case basis. In general, an individual is an employee for federal employment tax purposes if he or she has the status of an employee under common law rules applicable to employment relationships [see I.R.C. §§ 3121(d), 3306(i), 3401(c)]. The Treasury Regulations provide guidelines for determining that status [see Treas. Reg. §§ 31.3121(d)-1(c), 31.3306(i)-1, 31.3401(c)-1].

Many factors must be considered in determining whether a worker is an independent contractor. The key factor is whether the employer has the right to control and direct the individual performing the services, both as to the result to be accomplished and the means by which the result is accomplished. In Revenue Ruling 87-41 , the IRS identified the 20 factors, listed below, that help indicate whether sufficient control is present to establish an employment relationship. Revenue Ruling 87-41 applies specifically to certain technical jobs in the computer industry, but its method of analysis, and the factors used in making the status determination, apply to all work situations. The relative importance of each factor will vary depending on the particular occupation and the factual context [Rev. Rul. 87-41]:

(1) Is the worker required to comply with others' instructions about when, where, and how to work?

(2) Is the worker required to be trained?

(3) Are the worker's services integrated into the business operation?

(4) Must the worker's services be rendered personally by the worker?

(5) Does the person for whom services are performed hire, supervise, and pay assistants?

(6) Does a continuing relationship exist between the worker and the person for whom services are performed?

(7) Are the worker's hours set by the person for whom services are performed?

(8) Must the worker devote substantially full time to the business?

(9) Must the work be performed on the premises of the person for whom services are performed?

(10) Must the worker perform the work in a particular order or sequence?

(11) Must the worker submit oral or written reports?

(12) Is the worker paid on a periodic basis, such as by the hour, week, or month?

(13) Does the person for whom services are performed normally pay the worker's business and travel expenses?

(14) Does the person for whom services are performed furnish the worker's tools?

(15) Does the worker invest in the facilities used to perform the services?

(16) Can the worker realize a profit or loss as a result of performing the services?

(17) Can the worker perform services for more than one person or firm at a time?

(18) Can the worker make his or her services available to the general public?

(19) Does the person for whom services are performed have the right to discharge the worker?

(20) Does the worker have the right to end his or her relationship with the person for whom services are performed?

Positive responses to items (1) through (14) and (19) tend to indicate that an employment relationship exists. Positive responses to items (15) through (18) and (20) tend to indicate that an independent contractor relationship exists [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296]. For further discussion of the application of these factors, see Section 84.110[2].

The parties to an independent contractor agreement contract for a particular relationship, not a particular status. The fact of the relationship, and not the terms of the agreement, results in the status of independent contractor or employee. The parties may designate the status of the relationship in the agreement, but the IRS is not bound by the label the parties give to the relationship [see, e.g., Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(a)(3)].

Employers who fail to withhold and pay federal taxes from employee wages as a result of improperly treating employees as independent contractors are liable to the IRS for the full amount of unpaid taxes of both the employer and employee, penalties, and interest [see I.R.C. §§ 3509, 6672]. Willful violators are also subject to criminal fines and imprisonment [see I.R.C. §§ 7201-7206]. This generally occurs a result of an IRS tax audit [see § 84.211 [1]] and subsequent reclassification of independent contractors as employees, based on IRS evaluation of the relevant factors [see [4], above]. In certain circumstances, liability may be abated [see I.R.C. §§ 3402(d), 3509], or tax adjustments may be made without paying interest [see I.R.C. § 6205(a)]. On request, the IRS will determine whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor [see § 84.211 (IRS Form SS-8)].

[6] Safe Haven Rules

Several safe havens work to minimize the uncertainties taxpayers face concerning treatment of workers as employees or independent contractors. For example, under the "Section 530" safe haven, a worker who has consistently not been treated as a common-law employee for any period beginning after 1977 will not be reclassified as an employee if (1) the taxpayer did not treat the worker as an employee; (2) the taxpayer filed all required federal tax returns for the period (including providing Form 1099 to the worker); (3) the taxpayer had a reasonable basis for not treating the worker as an employee; and (4) the taxpayer did not treat similarly situated workers as employees [Pub. L. No. 95-600, 95th Cong., 2nd Sess., § 530(a), 92 Stat. 2885; see Rev. Proc. 85-18, 1985-1 C.B. 518 (implementation)]. Compliance with Section 530 relieves the employer of liabilty for all employment taxes under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code [see I.R.C. §§ 3101-3509] for the relevant period [Pub. L. No. 95-600, 95th Cong., 2nd Sess., § 530(c)(1), 92 Stat. 2886]. Other relief programs are available [see I.R.C. §§ 3402(d), 3509, 6521]. For further discussion of safe havens, see Bender's Federal Tax Service, Volume 4, Topic B:17, Income and Employee Tax Withholding.

[7] Business Expenses

[a] In General

An independent contractor may deduct all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during a tax year in carrying on a trade or business, including salaries and other compensation for personal services actually rendered, travel expenses while away from home in the pursuit of the trade or business, and rental or other payments for property in which the contractor has neither title nor equity [I.R.C. § 162(a); see I.R.C. § 212; but see I.R.C. § 280A (disallowance of deduction)]. For detailed discussion of the deductibility of business expenses, see Bender's Federal Tax Service, Volume 6, Topic G, Business Expenses, Deductions and Credits.

[b] Home Office Deduction

In general, no deduction is allowed, even if otherwise allowed by the Internal Revenue Code, for maintenance of a dwelling unit [see I.R.C. § 280A(f) ("dwelling unit" defined)] used by an individual taxpayer as a residence during the tax year [I.R.C. § 280A(a); see I.R.C. § 280A(d) (use of dwelling unit as residence)]. However, this disallowance rule is subject to exceptions for permitted business use of the residence. The exception limits the maximum deduction to the income derived from the qualified use, less deductions otherwise allowable [I.R.C. § 280A(c)]. "Permitted business use" includes the portion of the dwelling unit exclusively used on a regular basis as the principal place of business, as a place of business that is used by patients, clients, or customers in meeting or dealing with the taxpayer in the normal course of his or her trade or business, or a separate structure not attached to the dwelling unit, used in connection with the taxpayer's trade or business [I.R.C. § 280A(c)(1)]. For discussion of what constitutes qualifying "exclusive use" on a "regular basis," see Bender's Federal Tax Service, Volume 6, Topic G:9, Residential Property Used for Business and Vacation Homes.

In determining whether a home office was the principal place of business under Internal Revenue Code Section 280A(c)(1)(A), the United States Supreme Court held that the two primary considerations are (1) the relative importance of the activities performed at each business location, and (2) the time spent at each place. The place where goods and services are delivered must be given great weight in determining the place where the most important functions are performed. This determination depends on the particular facts of each case [Commissioner v. Soliman (1993) 506 U.S. 168, 93 Daily Journal D.A.R. 528, 530] . The Court indicated that, in many instances, no principal place of business may exist, and the IRS should not strain to conclude that a home office qualifies as a principal place of business simply because no other place qualifies [Commissioner v. Soliman (1993) 506 U.S. 168, 93 Daily Journal D.A.R. 528, 531] . If an independent contractor cannot meet these stated criteria, no deduction for a home office under Internal Revenue Code Section 280A(c)(1)(A) is available, even if maintenance of the home office is essential to the contractor's trade or business [see Commissioner v. Soliman (1993) 506 U.S. 168, 93 Daily Journal D.A.R. 528, 531] .

If a deduction is sought for use of a residence as a place of business that is used by patients, clients, or customers in meeting or dealing with the taxpayer in the normal course of his or her trade or business [see I.R.C. § 280A(c)(1)(B)], the deduction is allowed whether or not the home office is also the principal place of business [Commissioner v. Soliman (1993) 506 U.S. 168, 93 Daily Journal D.A.R. 528, 530] .

[8] Reporting Amounts Paid to Independent Contractors

[a] Filing Return With IRS

Any person who, in the course of his or her trade or business, pays $600 or more for services received from another person during a calendar year must file an information return with the IRS [see I.R.C. §§ 6041(a), 6041A(a)]. Payments made to service providers who are not employees must be made on Form 1099-MISC [see § 84.212]. Payments required to be reported include fees, commissions, and other compensation for services rendered, including fees for professional services, fees to independent contractors, and payments for materials used in rendering services [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G].

Form 1099-MISC must be provided to the IRS by March 1 of the year following the calendar year in which payment was made [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G].

For further discussion of filing requirements regarding information returns, see Bender's Federal Tax Service, Chapter P:3, Filing Requirements--Information Returns.

[b] Providing Statement to Payee

Every person required to file a return with the IRS [see [a], above] must also provide the payee named in the return with a written statement containing the name and address of the person required to file the return and the aggregate amount of payments made [I.R.C. § 6041(d)]. The statement may be a copy of the return filed with the IRS or a separately prepared statement. In either case, the preparer must inform the recipient that the information is being provided to the IRS [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G].

The statement must be provided to the payee by January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which the return was required to be filed [I.R.C. § 6041(d)].

§ 84.31 Considerations Regarding Federal Wage and Hour Laws

An employment relationship must exist for the Federal Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219] to be applicable to a worker [see Rutherford Food Corp. v. McComb (1947) 331 U.S. 722, 723-729, 67 S. Ct. 1473, 91 L. Ed. 1772] . Persons who are not employees are not covered by the FLSA [Walling v. Portland Terminal Co. (1947) 330 U.S. 148, 152, 67 S. Ct. 639, 91 L. Ed. 809] . Independent contractors are not "employees" under the FLSA, and therefore are not subject to its provisions, affording business owners increased flexibility [Rutherford Food Corp. v. McComb (1947) 331 U.S. 722, 729, 67 S. Ct. 1473, 91 L. Ed. 1772] . DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Independent Contractors Under Federal Law

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.32

§ 84.32 Relationship Between Independent Contractor Status and Ownership of Copyright

[1] Author of Copyrighted Work

Under the federal Copyright Act [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 101-914], copyright in a protected work vests in the author of the work [17 U.S.C. § 201(a)]. Absent an agreement about copyright ownership or an employment relationship resulting in a "work made for hire" [see [2], below], an independent contractor will normally be the author of a work created for a principal, and will therefore own the copyright in the work when created. It is likely that the person for whom any copyrightable work is created would want to require in the agreement with the independent contractor that the contractor assign his or her rights in any copyrightable works to the principal [see § 84.200 [2], P 7.01]. Although independent contractor agreements sometimes provide that any works created by the contractor will be deemed "works made for hire," giving the "employer" immediate ownership of copyright [see 17 U.S.C. § 201(b)], use of this term is discouraged [see [3], below].

[2] Author of "Work Made for Hire"

A "work made for hire" is a work prepared by an employee within the scope of his or her employment, or a specially ordered or commissioned work pursuant to a written, signed agreement [see 17 U.S.C. § 101]. The employer or other person for whom a work was prepared is considered the author for copyright ownership purposes of a "work made for hire." Unless the parties have otherwise agreed in a signed writing, the person for whom the work was prepared owns all rights comprised in the copyright [17 U.S.C. § 201(b)]. While this type of arrangement might seem useful in an agreement with an independent contractor, use of the term "work made for hire" can raise the undesirable implication of an employer-employee relationship [see [3], below].

To determine whether a work is made for hire, a court must first use principles of general common law of agency to determine whether the work was prepared by an employee or an independent contractor. After making this determination, the court then applies the appropriate subsection of Section 101 of the Copyright Act [Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 751, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1989) ; see 17 U.S.C. § 101].

[3] Consequence of Improper Designation of Work as "Work Made for Hire"

The types of works included within the term "work made for hire" are specifically enumerated. A work made for hire is (1) a work prepared by an employee within the scope of his or her employment, or (2) a work specially ordered or commissioned pursuant to a written, signed agreement for use in a collective work, as part of a motion picture, as a translation, as a supplementary work, as a compilation, as an instructional text, as a test, as answer material for a test, or as an atlas [17 U.S.C. § 101]. If the work created is described as a "work made for hire," and does not fit in one of the categories of specially ordered or commissioned works, use of that term creates an undesirable implication of an employer-employee relationship. The United States Supreme Court has indicated that in determining whether an employment relationship exists, the general common law of agency is used [see Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 741, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1989)] . Accordingly, if the agreement states or implies that a work made for hire has been created, the implication is that an employer-employee relationship exists [see Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 743, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1989) (works by employees and commissioned works by independent contractors viewed as separate entities)].

§ 84.40 Advantages of Using Independent Contractors

The advantages of engaging the services of an independent contractor as opposed to an employee include the following:

(1) The person for whom work is performed is not required to pay unemployment insurance taxes [see I.R.C. § 3306(c), (i); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 675, 976; Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 2602(a)].

(2) The person for whom work is performed is not required to pay Social Security (FICA) taxes [see I.R.C. § 3111].

(3) The person for whom work is performed need not withhold taxes from an independent contractor's compensation [see I.R.C. §§ 3102, 3401(a); Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020; see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13005, 13009].

(4) The person for whom work is performed generally is not liable for the torts of an independent contractor under the doctrine of respondeat superior [see Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 ; see also § 84.15[4]].

(5) The relationship with the independent contractor may be terminated for reasons specified in the agreement [see Mountain Meadow Creameries v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 123, 127, 76 P.2d 724] .

(6) The employer need not furnish tools, instrumentalities, or a work place for the independent contractor.

§ 84.41 Disadvantages of Using Independent Contractors

The disadvantages of engaging an independent contractor as opposed to an employee include the following:

(1) Although a person engaging the services of an independent contractor may exert some supervisory control over the details of performing the work [see Pylon, Inc. v. Olympic Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 643, 653, 77 Cal. Rptr. 72] , he or she does not enjoy total control.

(2) Because of the lack of control over the independent contractor's work methods, it is difficult to monitor the progress of the work or to ensure ahead of time that work will be completed on schedule.

(3) A person who discharges an independent contractor for reasons other than those specified in the agreement commits breach of contract.

(4) A person who engages the services of an independent contractor is subject to tort liability for injuries or death to the independent contractor during the course of the contract.

(5) A person who engages the services of an independent contractor does not necessarily enjoy the contractor's exclusive services.

(6) In situations where numerous independent contractors are routinely utilized, the employer is not assured of uniformity in the quality of work.

CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Considerations in Deciding Whether to Use Independent Contractors

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.42

§ 84.42 Utilizing Independent Contractors in Labor Disputes

[1] California Law

Under California law, a person who advertises for or seeks employees through newspapers, posters, letters, or otherwise, or who solicits or communicates by letter or otherwise with persons to work at a shop, plant, or establishment while a strike, lockout, or other trade dispute is in active progress, must mention explicitly in the advertisement, solicitation, or communication that a strike, lockout, or other labor disturbance exists [Lab. Code § 973]. Failure to comply with this requirement is a misdemeanor [Lab. Code § 974]. While the statute refers to advertisement for or solicitation of "employees," the class of persons it is intended to protect is the workers solicited [see People v. Smith (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 777, 782, 284 P.2d 203] .

Therefore, to avoid possible liability under Labor Code Sections 973 and 974, a person advertising for or soliciting independent contractors while a strike, lockout, or other trade dispute is in progress should mention explicitly in the advertisement, solicitation, or communication that a labor disturbance exists.

[2] Federal Law

The National Labor Relations Act [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 151-169] provides that when employees are members of an existing bargaining unit, an employer's refusal to bargain collectively with the employees' representatives is an unfair labor practice [29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(5)]. The "contracting out" of work previously performed by members of an existing bargaining unit is a subject about which the National Labor Relations Act requires employers and the employees' representatives to bargain collectively [Fibreboard Corp. v. NLRB (1964) 379 U.S. 203, 209, 85 S. Ct. 398, 13 L. Ed. 2d 233] .

However, after a strike has begun, an employer is under no duty to offer to bargain about a decision to hire replacements for strikers, even on a permanent basis [National Labor Rel. Bd. v. Mackay Radio & T. Co. (1938) 304 U.S. 333, 345-346, 58 S. Ct. 904, 82 L. Ed. 1381] . A decision to subcontract, taken at the time an economic strike occurs, and made for the purpose of keeping a plant operating, does not constitute a failure to bargain as required by the National Labor Relations Act [Hawaii Meat Company v. N.L.R.B. (9th Cir. 1963) 321 F.2d 397, 399-400 ; see 29 U.S.C. §

158(a)(5)]. For further discussion, see T. Kheel, Labor Law, Chapter 20, Mandatory Bargaining Subjects: Hours and Other Terms and Conditions of Employment (Matthew Bender).

B. Preliminary Determinations

§ 84.110 Tests for Determining Independent Contractor or Employee Status

[1] California Law

NOTE:

The following factors are considered by California courts in determining whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee. The amount of control that the person for whom the work is performed may exercise over the manner and means of accomplishing the result is considered the determinative factor. In evaluating this factor, courts consider whether the person for whom the work is performed directs the actions of the person performing the work, in which case there is an employment relationship, or whether the details of accomplishing the work are left to the independent judgment of the person performing the work, in which case there is a contract relationship. The other factors are secondary and are not by themselves determinative [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975] . On request, the Employment Development Department (EDD) will perform an audit of an actual working relationship to determine if a particular worker is an employee or independent contractor [see § 84.210 (EDD Form DE 1870)].

1. Does person for whom work is performed dictate which tasks must be performed to accomplish result and how each task should be done, or is this left to judgment of person performing work?

NOTE:

The primary factor that establishes one as an independent contractor is that the person for whom services are rendered has no right of control over the manner and means of accomplishing the result [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337 ; see Lab. Code § 3353 ("independent contractor" defined)].

2. Is person performing work engaged in distinct occupation or business?

NOTE:

If the person performing the work is engaged in a distinct occupation or business, this is a factor indicating that he or she is an independent contractor [see Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] .

3. Is specific type of work in that locality usually done by independent contractor or employee?

NOTE:

The custom in the community has some weight in determining whether a person engaged in a particular occupation is an independent contractor or an employee [Isenberg v. California Emp. Stab. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 34, 37, 180 P.2d 11] .

4. How much skill is required?

NOTE:

The more skill that is required, the more likely the person is to be classified as an independent contractor [see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 356-357, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment i].

5. Will person engaging services or person performing work supply tools, instrumentalities, and place of work?

NOTE:

The fact that the person performing the work supplies the tools is some evidence that he or she is an independent contractor. If, on the other hand, the person for whom the work is performed supplies the tools, the implication is that the relationship is one of employer and employee [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment k].

6. For how long will person's services be engaged?

NOTE:

If the person's services are engaged for a long period of time with regular hours, this indicates that he or she is an employee [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment j].

7. Will payment be by job or by time period?

NOTE:

If payment is by job, the implication is that the relationship is one of independent contract. If payment is by the hour, the implication is that the relationship is one of employment [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment j].

8. Is work part of regular business of person engaging services?

NOTE:

If the work is part of the regular business of the person for whom the work is performed, this implies that the person doing the work is an employee [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment h].

9. Is person engaging services in business?

NOTE:

If the person engaging the services of the other is in business, the implication is that the relationship is one of employer-employee [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220(2)(j)].

10. Is person performing work engaged by one or several persons?

NOTE:

If an individual performs the same type of work for numerous persons, the implication is that he or she is an independent contractor [Yamaoka v. Diemer (1950) 15 Cal. Comp. Cases 77, 77] . Devoting one's full time to one person points towards an employer-employee relationship [Brown v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1917) 174 Cal. 457, 461, 163 P. 664] .

11. Is work to be performed in specific area or over fixed route?

NOTE:

If work is to be performed in a specific area or over a fixed route, this implies that the person performing the work is an employee [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment h].

12. May work be delegated?

NOTE:

An agreement between the parties that the work cannot be delegated indicates an employer-employee relationship [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment h].

13. May services be terminated at will or only under certain specified conditions?

NOTE:

The right of the person for whom services are performed to discharge at will without cause is strong evidence in support of an employment relationship [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 954, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975] .

14. Will person engaging services withhold taxes from compensation, obtain workers' compensation insurance, or contribute to unemployment fund?

NOTE:

Whether the person for whom the services are performed has deducted withholding taxes, obtained workers' compensation insurance [see Westerfield v. Industrial Acc. Comm. (1940) 5 Cal. Comp. Cases 205, 206] , or paid unemployment insurance taxes [see Mission Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 211, 225, 176 Cal. Rptr. 439] is relevant to determining the status of the person performing the work [see § 84.16].

15. Do parties believe they are creating relationship of employer-employee or of principal-independent contractor?

NOTE:

The belief of the parties about whether the person performing the work is an independent contractor or an employee is relevant to the determination, but is not conclusive [see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 954, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220, Comment m].

[2] Federal Law

NOTE:

As under California law, the key federal factors in determining a worker's status are (1) whether the employer has the right to control and direct the individual performing the services, and (2) whether the employer has the right to discharge the worker [see Treas. Reg. § 31.3121(d)-1(c)(2)]. The IRS has identified 20 factors that help indicate whether sufficient control is present to establish an employment relationship. The relative importance of each factor will vary depending on the particular occupation and the factual context [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296].

Positive responses to Paragraphs 1 through 14 and 19 tend to indicate that an employment relationship exists. Positive responses to Paragraphs 15 through 18 and 20 tend to indicate that an independent contractor relationship exists [see Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296]. On request, the IRS will perform an evaluation of whether a particular worker is an employee or independent contractor [see § 84.211 (IRS Form SS-8)].

1. Is worker required to comply with others' instructions about when, where, and how to work?

NOTE:

A worker who is required to comply with others' instructions is ordinarily an employee. This control factor is present if the person for whom the services are performed has the right to require compliance with instructions [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

2. Is worker required to be trained?

NOTE:

A worker who is trained by working with a more experienced employee, by correspondence, by attending meetings, or other methods is ordinarily an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

3. Are worker's services integrated into business operation?

NOTE:

A worker whose services are integrated into the business operation is ordinarily an employee. If the success of the business depends on the performance of certain services, the workers who perform those services are necessarily subject to control by the owner of the business [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

4. Must worker's services be rendered personally by worker?

NOTE:

If the worker's services must be rendered personally, the person for whom services are performed is interested in the methods used as well as the results, indicating a high degree of control [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

5. Does person for whom services are performed hire, supervise, and pay assistants?

NOTE:

If the person for whom services are performed hires, supervises, and pays assistants, this shows control over employees. However, if one worker hires, supervises, and pays the other assistants pursuant to a contract in which the worker agrees to provide materials and labor, and in which the worker is responsible only for a particular result, this indicates independent contractor status [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

6. Does continuing relationship exist between worker and person for whom services are performed?

NOTE:

A continuing relationship indicates an employment relationship, even if work is performed at frequent, irregular intervals [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

7. Are worker's hours set by person for whom services are performed?

NOTE:

Fixed hours normally indicate an employment relationship because of the high degree of control [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] .

8. Must worker devote substantially full time to business?

NOTE:

A worker who must devote substantially full time to a business is likely to be an employee. An independent contractor is usually free to work when and for whom he or she chooses [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

9. Must work be performed on premises of person for whom services are performed?

NOTE:

If the work must be performed on the premises, that shows control, indicating an employment relationship. Work done off the premises indicates freedom from control, although the importance of this factor depends on the nature of the services performed [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

10. Must worker perform work in particular order or sequence?

NOTE:

If the work must be performed in a particular order or sequence, that shows that the worker is not free to follow his or her own pattern of work, and is therefore an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296].

11. Must worker submit oral or written reports?

NOTE:

A requirement that a worker submit regular or written reports to the person for whom services are performed indicates a degree of control [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

12. Is worker is paid on periodic basis, such as by hour, week, or month?

NOTE:

Payment by the hour, week, or month tends to show an employment relationship, as long as this payment method is not simply a convenient way of paying a lump sum agreed to be the total cost of the job. Payment made by the job or on a straight commission indicates that the worker is an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

13. Does person for whom services are performed normally pay worker's business and travel expenses?

NOTE:

If the person for whom services are performed pays for business and travel expenses, the worker is ordinarily an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

14. Does person for whom services are performed furnish worker's tools?

NOTE:

The furnishing of tools, materials, and other equipment by the person for whom services are performed tends to indicate that the worker is an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

15. Does worker invest in facilities used to perform services?

NOTE:

Investment by the worker in facilities that are not normally maintained by employees, such as building rental payments, indicates that the worker is an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

16. Can worker realize profit or loss as result of performing services?

NOTE:

A worker who can realize a profit or suffer a loss as a result of his or her services is generally an independent contractor. Risk of economic loss due to significant investments or a bona fide liability for expenses indicates the worker is an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

17. Can worker perform services for more than one person or firm at same time?

NOTE:

If a worker performs services for multiple persons or firms at the same time, he or she is likely to be an independent contractor. However, a worker who performs services for more than one person may be an employee of each person, especially when the persons are part of the same service arrangement [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

18. Can worker make his or her services available to general public?

NOTE:

A worker who makes his or her services available to the general public on a regular and consistent basis is generally an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

19. Does person for whom services are performed have right to discharge worker?

NOTE:

The right of the person for whom services are performed to discharge a worker is strong evidence of an employment relationship. An employer exercises considerable control over the employee by the threat of dismissal, causing the employee to obey the employer. On the other hand, an independent contractor cannot be fired as long as he or she produces results that meet the contract specifications [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

20. Does worker have right to end his or her relationship with person for whom services are performed?

NOTE:

If a worker has the right to end his or her relationship with the person for whom services are performed at any time without incurring liability, that tends to indicate an employment relationship [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.111

§ 84.111 Structuring Work Relationship

1. Do parties contemplate that person performing services will be classified as independent contractor or employee [see § 84.110]?

2. Would it be more advantageous to person procuring services to have person performing services classified as independent contractor or employee?

a. Advantages of independent contractors [see § 84.40]:

(1) Person engaging services of independent contractor is not required to pay unemployment insurance taxes [see I.R.C. § 3306(c), (i); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 675, 976, 2602(a)].

(2) Person engaging services of independent contractor need not withhold taxes from independent contractor's compensation [see I.R.C. §§ 3102, 3401(a); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13020, 13005, 13009].

(3) Person engaging services of independent contractor is not required to pay Social Security (FICA) taxes [see I.R.C. § 3111].

(4) Person engaging services of independent contractor need not secure workers' compensation [see Lab. Code § 3700].

(5) Person engaging services of independent contractor generally is not liable for independent contractor's torts under respondeat superior [see Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 ; see also § 84.15[4]].

(6) Services may be terminated for reasons specified in contract [see Mountain Meadow Creameries v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 123, 127, 76 P.2d 724] .

(7) Person engaging services of independent contractor need not furnish tools, instrumentalities, or work place.

b. Disadvantages of independent contractors [see § 84.41]:

(1) Person engaging services of independent contractor may not control details of performing work [Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686] .

(2) Person engaging services of independent contractor may not easily monitor progress of work or ensure ahead of time that work will be completed on schedule.

(3) Person who discharges independent contractor for reasons other than those specified in contract commits breach of contract.

(4) Person who engages services of independent contractor is subject to tort liability for injuries to or death of independent contractor during course of contract.

(5) Person who engages services of independent contractor does not necessarily enjoy independent contractor's exclusive services.

(6) Person routinely engaging services of numerous independent contractors is not guaranteed continuity in quality of work.

3. If work relationship is structured as contemplated by parties, will it be possible to obtain the desired classification?

NOTE:

For lists of factors indicating whether the person performing services is likely to be classified as an independent contractor or an employee for federal or state purposes, see Section 84.110. On request, the IRS will perform an evaluation of whether a particular worker is an employee or independent contractor and give a ruling [see § 84.211* (IRS Form SS-8)]. This ruling can be requested before commencement of the relationship. For California purposes, no advance ruling procedure exists, but on request, the Employment Development Department (EDD) will evaluate an existing working relationship [see § 84.210* (EDD Form DE 1870)].

4. If independent contractor status is preferable, can any features of work relationship be modified to achieve independent contractor status:

NOTE:

In order to answer this question, the attorney must consider the circumstances surrounding the services to be rendered, as well as the various factors considered in classifying an individual as an independent contractor or an employee.

a. Reducing overall control over methods used to perform work.

b. Providing that person performing work will be responsible for delivering finished product meeting stated specifications.

c. Providing that work will be performed at place of independent contractor's choosing, not at workplace of person procuring services.

NOTE:

If the independent contractor is required to pay for a workplace, supplies, or materials furnished by or obtained from the person for whom the services are to be performed, that fact may be regarded as indicative of an employer-employee relationship [Smith v. Department of Employment (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 206, 212, 132 Cal. Rptr. 874] .

d. Providing that person performing work will supply his or her own tools, materials, and equipment (for increased compensation, if necessary).

e. Providing that person performing work may hire employees and delegate duties as he or she sees fit.

f. Ensuring person procuring services does not have right to discharge worker at will.

5. If classification of worker is questionable, is it worth risks to person engaging services?

NOTE:

For a discussion of minimizing risks by having a classification audit performed, see Paragraph 3 NOTE, above. On audit, the issue is always whether a person treated by an employer as an independent contractor is in fact an employee and should be reclassified, never the reverse. For discussion of the consequences of reclassification, see Sections 84.16 and 84.30[5].

a. Liability for failing to obtain workers' compensation insurance [see § 84.16[2]; see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender)].

b. Liability for failing to pay employment training and unemployment insurance taxes [see §§ 84.16 [3], 84.30[1], [5]; see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 564, Unemployment Insurance (Matthew Bender)].

c. Liability for failing to withhold income tax, disability tax, and Social Security tax from employees' wages [see §§ 84.16[3], 84.30[1], [5]].

d. Liability for negligence of person performing work under doctrine of respondeat superior [see Civ. Code § 2338; see also § 84.15[4]].

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
C. Drafting Guide

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.120

§ 84.120 Drafting Guide to Agreements With Independent Contractors

NOTE:

This guide is intended as an aid for drafting an agreement between an independent contractor and the person for whom services will be performed [see § 84.200*]. However, it can also be used to draft an agreement between an independent contractor and an employment agency. For a form designed to be to used in this situation, see Section 84.201.

[1] Introductory Provisions

1. Specify date of agreement.

2. State name of each party to agreement.

3. State address of each party.

4. Identify parties.

NOTE:

The independent contractor agreement illustrated in Section 84.200 [2] identifies the parties as "Client" and "Independent Contractor." Use of the term "Employer" instead of "Client" is not recommended, as it creates the undesirable implication that an employer-employee relationship is intended.

5. Specify term of agreement [see § 84.200[2], P 1.01].

[2] Services to Be Rendered by Independent Contractor

1. Describe services to be rendered by independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 2.01].

NOTE:
The description of the services to be rendered should specify the desired end product of the independent contractor's work, rather than the individual tasks to be performed. This is important in that a detailed description of the tasks to be performed could be construed as instructions to the person performing the work. Such a construction would defeat the parties' intention of creating an independent contractor relationship because control of the manner and means of performing the work would be deemed vested in the person for whom the work was performed [see § 84.11[3]*].

2. Specify that contractor will determine method, details, and means of performing services [see § 84.200[2], P 2.02].

3. State clearly that contractor has status of independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 2.03].

4. State that independent contractor is responsible for paying his or her own income tax [see § 84.200[2], P 2.04].

5. If appropriate, include provision authorizing contractor to employ assistants to perform services [see § 84.200[2], P 2.05].

[3] Compensation of Independent Contractor

1. Include provision specifying how independent contractor will be compensated [see § 84.200[2], P 3.01].

a. Flat rate for services.

b. Hourly or per diem compensation.

NOTE:
Payment by the hour, week, or month generally indicates an employment relationship, unless this payment method is simply a convenient way of paying a lump sum agreed to as the total cost of a job. Payment made by the job or on a straight commission indicates that the worker is an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] . For this reason, it is prudent to structure payment on other than on a periodic basis.

c. Retainer.

d. Payment by commission.

e. Contingent fee.

f. Percentage.

g. Royalty.

2. Include provision specifying manner of payment and dates on which compensation is due [see § 84.200[2], P 3.02].

3. If appropriate, include provision governing vacation, illness, and leaves of absence.

4. If appropriate, include provision governing reimbursement of expenses incurred by independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 3.03]:

NOTE:

If the person for whom services are performed pays for business and travel expenses, this shows a significant degree of control over costs, and the worker is likely to be classified as an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] . Therefore, the parties may wish to include payment for expenses simply as part of the total fee, and not separately itemized and reimbursed as expenses.

On the other hand, making the contractor responsible for payment of expenses places a certain amount of economic risk on the contractor. Risk of economic loss due to significant investments or a bona fide liability for expenses indicates the worker is an independent contractor [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296].

a. Reimbursement for specified items and expenses.

b. Reimbursement for all items and expenses reasonably incurred.

c. Requirement that independent contractor furnish receipts or other documents substantiating expenses.

d. Requirement that person for whom services are being performed make specified sum available for business expenses.

[4] Obligations of Independent Contractor

1. Include provision governing time required to be spent by independent contractor in performance of duties, such as:

a. Requirement that minimum number of hours per week or month be devoted to work [see § 84.200[2], P 4.01].

b. Agreement that independent contractor need not devote entire work time to services required by agreement [see § 84.200 [2], P 4.01].

c. Specific hours during which work is to be performed [see § 84.200[2], P 4.03].

2. Specify that relationship between independent contractor and person for whom work is to be performed is nonexclusive, allowing independent contractor to work for others [see § 84.200[2], P 4.02].

3. Specify place where independent contractor will render services, either [see § 84.200[2], P 4.03]:

a. Place specified by person for whom services are to be performed; or

NOTE:

Requiring that the work be done on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed points toward an employer-employee relationship [see Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299 ; see also § 84.11[8]]. However, certain types of services, such as housepainting, can only be done on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed.

b. Any location selected by independent contractor.

4. Specify which party will furnish tools and instrumentalities to be used in performing work, either:

a. All tools and instrumentalities to be furnished by independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 4.04];

b. All tools and instrumentalities to be furnished by party for whom services will be performed; or

NOTE:

Although it is not determinative, if the person for whom the work is performed supplies the tools and instrumentalities, this implies that the relationship is one of employer and employee [see Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299 ; see also § 84.11[6]].

c. Each party to furnish specifically itemized tools and other materials.

5. Include any other appropriate provisions governing manner of performance, such as:

a. Provision requiring adherence to general rules, regulations, and policies of person for whom services are to be performed.

b. Provision requiring submission of written reports to person for whom services are to be rendered.

NOTE:

Requiring a worker to submit regular or written reports to the person for whom services are performed indicates a degree of control, making it more likely the worker will be classified as an employee [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299] .

6. Include provision requiring independent contractor to procure workers' compensation coverage for contractor's employees and agents [see § 84.200[2], P 4.05].

7. Include provision indemnifying person for whom services are to be rendered against losses caused by acts or omissions of independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 4.06].

8. Include provision listing qualifications and skills of independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 4.07].

9. Include provision indemnifying person for whom services are to be rendered against losses caused by independent contractor's false representations regarding qualifications and skills [see § 84.200[2], P 4.08].

10. Include provision prohibiting independent contractor from assigning duties or obligations under agreement without prior written consent [see § 84.200[2], P 4.09].

NOTE:

This type of provision may give the person for whom services are performed such a degree of control that an employment relationship will be established.

11. If appropriate, include provision prohibiting independent contractor from competing with person for whom services are to be performed [see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

[5] Obligations of Person for Whom Services Are to Be Performed

1. Include provision requiring that person for whom services are to be performed cooperate with independent contractor [see § 84.200 [2], P 5.01].

2. If appropriate, include provisions requiring that person for whom services are to be performed provide:

a. Workplace [see § 84.200[2], P 5.02].

NOTE:
If the work is done on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed, this is a factor pointing toward an employer-employee relationship [see Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 299 ; see also § 84.11[8]]. However, certain types of services, such as housepainting, can only be done on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed.

b. Any other specified items agreed on by the parties.

3. If desired, include provision prohibiting assignment of contract without independent contractor's consent [see § 84.200[2], P 5.03].

[6] Termination of Agreement

1. Include provision specifying when agreement will terminate, such as:

a. Termination at end of specified term if not renewed before that time [see § 84.200[2], P 6.01].

b. Termination on completion of all work called for by contract [see § 84.200[2], P 6.01].

c. Termination by either party on written notice [see § 84.200[2], P 6.01].

NOTE:
An independent contractor agreement can properly include an at-will clause giving the parties the right to terminate the agreement without cause, and such a clause does not by itself change the independent contractor relationship into an employer-employee relationship [Varisco v. Gateway Sci. & Eng'g, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1107-1108, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 393 (worker was not controlled by hirer, and agreement provided mutual right to terminate, which was consistent with independent contractor relationship)].

2. Include provision for automatic termination of agreement on occurrence of specified events [see § 84.200[2], P 6.02], such as:

a. Bankruptcy or insolvency of either party.

b. Sale of either party's business.

c. Death of either party.

d. Other events on which parties wish agreement to terminate automatically.

3. Include provisions giving parties right to terminate agreement for material breach of contract, such as [see § 84.200[2], P 6.03]:

a. Failure to pay independent contractor compensation due.

b. Failure to complete services specified in agreement.

c. Independent contractor's material breach of any representation or agreement regarding qualifications and skills.

d. Material breach of any representation or agreement contained in agreement.

e. Other situation constituting material breach.

[7] Property Rights of Parties

1. If appropriate, include provision specifying rights of parties to copyrights, inventions, and patents:

a. Rights assigned by independent contractor to person for whom work is performed [see § 84.200[2], P 7.01].

b. Ownership by person for whom work is performed [see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

NOTE:
Use of this type of provision is discouraged, as property created by the contractor for another person may be considered a "work made for hire" [see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work made for hire" defined)]. A work made for hire, by definition, is created by an employee for an employer, except in limited enumerated circumstances [17 U.S.C. §§ 101, 201(b); see Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 741, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1989)] . Accordingly, if the agreement states or implies that a work made for hire has been created, the implication is that an employer-employee relationship exists.

c. Ownership by independent contractor [see ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

2. If appropriate, include provision governing ownership of confidential information, such as [see § 84.200[2], P 7.02]:

a. Trade secrets.

b. Customer lists.

c. Other property.

NOTE:
For forms regarding ownership and use of trade secrets, customer lists, and similar property, see Chapter 85, Employment Agreements **.

3. If appropriate, include provision prohibiting independent contractor from soliciting customers and employees of person for whom work is performed [see § 84.200[2], P 7.03].

[8] General Provisions

1. Include provision specifying manner of giving notice [see § 84.200[2], P 8.01].

2. State that contract contains entire agreement of parties [see § 84.200[2], P 8.02].

3. If desired, provide for modification of contract only by written agreement [see § 84.200[2], P 8.02].

4. Provide that agreement will be severable in event of partial invalidity [see § 84.200[2], P 8.03].

5. Specify manner of payment of funds due to deceased independent contractor [see § 84.200[2], P 8.04].

6. If desired, include provision for arbitration of disputes arising under agreement [see § 84.200[2], P 8.05].

7. If desired, include provision for liquidated damages [see § 84.200[2], P 8.06].

8. Include provision for award of attorneys' fees [see § 84.200[2], P 8.07].

9. Specify governing law [see § 84.200[2], P 8.08].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Agreements for Independent Contractor Services

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.200

§ 84.200 Agreement for Performance of Services by Independent Contractor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a basic agreement between an independent contractor and the party for whom the independent contractor will perform specified services. It is intended as a general drafting aid and will require modification according to the particular circumstances and the intentions of the parties. To avoid characterizing the parties as "Employer" and "Employee," which could contribute to an undesirable finding of an employment relationship, this form uses the terms "Contractor" and "Client."

[b] Drafting Considerations

An attorney drafting an independent contractor agreement must exercise care that its terms establish as clearly as possible that the person performing the work is an independent contractor, not an employee. Due to the inconsistent manner in which courts and the IRS have weighed the various relevant factors [see § 84.110], an attorney drafting a "borderline" contract cannot be assured that the terminology of an independent contract will be upheld in the event of litigation [see § 84.11[2]].

[c] Control Over Performance of Work

The most important consideration in creating or preserving independent contractor status is to vest control of the manner and means of accomplishing the result in the person performing the work [see Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 ; see also § 84.11[3]]. The other factors weighed in determining whether an independent contract or an employer-employee relationship exists are considered secondary elements and are discussed in the legal background [see §§ 84.11, 84.30[4]].

Paragraph 2.02 of this form expressly vests control of the method, details, and means of performing the services in the independent contractor. Because the right to control is the key factor in creating independent contractor status, if litigation or a tax audit should occur, this type of provision is helpful in demonstrating the parties' intention to create independent contractor status. Paragraph 2.05 is intended to reinforce this provision by providing that the contractor may employ assistants and giving the contractor sole control over their activities.

[d] Place Where Work Is to Be Performed

Paragraph 4.03 of this form provides that the contractor will perform the work on the premises of the person engaging his or her services, and Paragraph 5.02 requires that the person for whom the work is being performed will make work space available.

Performing work on the premises of the person for whom the services are rendered is a factor tending to show an employment relationship rather than an independent contract [see § 84.11[8]]. However, this factor alone is not determinative, and therefore does not necessarily defeat independent contractor status [see California Emp. Stab. Com. v. Morris (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 812, 819-820, 172 P.2d 497 (real estate salespersons); Walder v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 473, 474-475, 193 P.2d 60 (carpenter); Los Flores School Dist. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 180, 183-185, 56 P.2d 581 (painter)]. These provisions might be used when the nature of work or the convenience of the parties requires that the work be performed only on the premises of the person for whom the work is performed, such as in a contract for the painting of a building. When the contractor will perform the work in his or her own workplace, the contract should contain a provision to that effect.

[e] Other Factors in Determining Status

For further discussion of the factors that are considered when determining whether a particular worker is an employee or an independent contractor, see Sections 84.11 and 84.30[4]. For a checklist of these factors, see Section 84.110.

[f] Ownership of Intellectual Property

This form provides that the independent contractor will assign the rights to any new developments, copyrights, patents, or other intellectual property to the person for whom services are performed [see [2], P 7.01, below]. The form intentionally avoids providing that the contractor is creating a "work made for hire" [see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work made for hire" defined)]. A work made for hire, by definition, is created by an employee for an employer, except in limited enumerated circumstances [17 U.S.C. §§ 101, 201(b); see Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 741, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1989)] . Accordingly, if the agreement states or implies that a work made for hire has been created, the implication is that an undesirable employer-employee relationship exists. For this reason, it is advisable to avoid use of the term "work made for hire," and provide either that the independent contractor will assign his or her rights to the person for whom services are performed (as in this form), or that the independent contractor will retain all or specified proprietary rights [see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

For further discussion of copyright considerations when drafting an agreement with an independent contractor, see Section 84.32.

The term "expenses" includes [e.g., costs of travel, telephone bills, supplies, and the services of subcontractors]. Contractor will provide Client with receipts for all expenses [add if applicable: in excess of $25].

[Continue with the following:]

ARTICLE 4. OBLIGATIONS OF CONTRACTOR

Minimum Amount of Service

4.01. Contractor agrees to devote a minimum of _____ hours per month to performing the above-described services.

Non-Exclusive Relationship

4.02. Contractor may represent, perform services for, and contract with as many additional clients, persons, or companies as Contractor, in _____[his or her] sole discretion, sees fit.

Time and Place of Performing Work

[Use if contractor may choose place of work:]

4.03. Contractor may perform the services under this agreement at any suitable time and location _____[he or she] chooses.

[OR]

[Use if nature of work requires that contractor work at client's premises:]

4.03. Contractor will perform the services under this agreement on Client's premises [specify time, e.g., during Client's regular business hours or between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M each weekday]. The services must be performed on Client's premises and during these hours because [specify, e.g., the painting of Client's house can only be performed during daylight hours when Client is not at home].

Tools, Materials, and Equipment

4.04. Contractor will supply all tools, materials, and equipment required to perform the services under this agreement.

Workers' Compensation

4.05. Contractor agrees to provide workers' compensation insurance for Contractor's employees and agents and agrees to hold harmless and indemnify Client for any and all claims arising out of any injury, disability, or death of any of Contractor's employees or agents.

Liability Insurance

4.06. Contractor agrees to maintain a policy of insurance in the minimum amount of $ _____ to cover any negligent acts or omissions committed by Contractor or Contractor's employees or agents during the performance of any duties under this agreement. Contractor further agrees to indemnify and hold Client free and harmless from any and all claims arising from any such negligent act or omission.

[OR]

Limited Liability

4.06. Contractor will not be liable to Client, or to anyone who may claim any right due to a relationship with Client, for any acts or omissions in the performance of services under the terms of this agreement or on the part of the employees or agents of Contractor unless those acts or omissions are due to willful misconduct. Client will indemnify and hold Contractor free and harmless from any obligations, costs, claims, judgments, attorneys' fees, and attachments arising from, growing out of, or in any way connected with the services rendered to Client under the terms of this agreement, unless Contractor is judged by a court of competent jurisdiction to be guilty of willful misconduct.

Contractor's Qualifications

4.07. Contractor represents that _____[he or she] has the qualifications and skills necessary to perform the services under this agreement in a competent, professional manner, without the advice or direction of Client. This means Contractor is able to fulfill the requirements of this agreement. Failure to perform all the services required under this agreement constitutes a material breach of the agreement. Contractor has complete and sole discretion for the manner in which the work under this agreement will be performed.

Indemnity

4.08. Contractor agrees to indemnify, defend, and hold Client free and harmless from all claims, demands, losses, costs, expenses, obligations, liabilities, damages, recoveries, and deficiencies, including interest, penalties, attorneys' fees, and costs, that Client may incur as a result of a breach by Contractor of any representation or agreement contained in this agreement.

Assignment

4.09. Neither this agreement nor any duties or obligations under this agreement may be assigned by Contractor without the prior written consent of Client.

ARTICLE 5. OBLIGATIONS OF CLIENT

Cooperation of Client

5.01. Client agrees to comply with all reasonable requests of Contractor [add if applicable: and provide access to all documents reasonably] necessary to the performance of Contractor's duties under this agreement.

[Use if contractor will work at client's premises:]

Place of Work

5.02. Client agrees to furnish space on Client's premises for use by Contractor while performing the above-described services.

[Continue with the following:]

Assignment

5.03. Neither this agreement nor any duties or obligations under this agreement may be assigned by Client without the prior written consent of Contractor.

ARTICLE 6. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

Expiration of Agreement

6.01. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this agreement, this agreement will continue in effect [specify length corresponding with that set forth in P 1.01, e.g., for a period of _____ (specify) _____ (months or years) or until the services provided for in this agreement have been fully and completely performed] and shall then terminate unless renewed in writing by both parties.

[OR]

Termination on Notice

6.01. Notwithstanding any other provision of this agreement, either party may terminate this agreement at any time by giving [specify reasonable notice based on type of services to be rendered by contractor, e.g., 30 days'] written notice to the other party. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this agreement, this agreement will continue in force [specify length corresponding with that set forth in P 1.01, e.g., for a period of _____ (specify) _____ (months or years) or until the services provided for in this agreement have been fully and completely performed].

[Continue with the following:]

Termination on Occurrence of Stated Events

6.02. This agreement will terminate automatically on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(a) Bankruptcy or insolvency of either party.

(b) Sale of the business of either party.

(c) Death of either party.

_____ [specify other event on which agreement will terminate, e.g., Assignment of this agreement by either party without the consent of the other party].

Termination for Default

6.03. If either party defaults in the performance of this agreement or materially breaches any of its provisions, the non-breaching party may terminate this agreement by giving written notification to the breaching party. Termination will take effect immediately on receipt of notice by the breaching party or five days after mailing of notice, whichever occurs first. For the purposes of this paragraph, material breach of this agreement includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(a) Client's failure to pay Contractor any compensation due within 30 days after written demand for payment.

(b) Contractor's failure to complete the services specified in _____ [Paragraph 2.01, above or the Description of Services].

(c) Contractor's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in Paragraph 4.07.

(d) Client's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in this Agreement.

(e) _____ [specify other situation constituting material breach].

ARTICLE 7. PROPRIETARY RIGHTS

New Developments

7.01. Contractor agrees that all designs, plans, reports, specifications, drawings, inventions, processes, and other information or items produced by Contractor while performing services under this agreement will be assigned to Client as the sole and exclusive property of Client and Client's assigns, nominees, and successors, as will any copyrights, patents, or trademarks obtained by Contractor while performing services under this agreement. On request and at Client's expense, Contractor agrees to help Client obtain patents and copyrights for any new developments. This includes providing data, plans, specifications, descriptions, documentation, and other information, as well as assisting Client in completing any required application or registration.

Confidential Information

7.02. Any written, printed, graphic, or electronically or magnetically recorded information furnished by Client for Contractor's use are the sole property of Client. This proprietary information includes, but is not limited to, customer requirements, customer lists, marketing information, and information concerning Client's employees, products, services, prices, operations, and subsidiaries.

Contractor will keep this confidential information in the strictest confidence, and will not disclose it by any means to any person except with Client's approval, and only to the extent necessary to perform the services under this agreement. This prohibition also applies to Contractor's employees, agents, and subcontractors. On termination of this agreement, Contractor will return any confidential information in _____[his or her] possession to Client.

Non-Solicitation

7.03. For a period of [specify, e.g., two years] following the termination of this agreement, Contractor will not do either of the following: (1) call on, solicit, or take away any of Client's customers or potential customers Contractor became aware of as a result of performing services under this agreement; or (2) solicit or hire away any of Client's employees or contractors Contractor became aware of as a result of performing services under this agreement.

ARTICLE 8. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

8.01. Any notices required to be given under this agreement by either party to the other may be effected by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices must be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change the address by giving written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally will be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices will be deemed communicated as of [e.g., the day of receipt or the fifth day after mailing, whichever occurs first].

Entire Agreement of the Parties

8.02. This agreement supersedes any and all agreements, either oral or written, between the parties with respect to the rendering of services by Contractor for Client and contains all of the representations, covenants, and agreements between the parties with respect to the rendering of those services. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not contained in this agreement, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement will be valid or binding. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in a writing signed by the party to be charged.

Partial Invalidity

8.03. If any provision of this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions will continue in full force and effect without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Payment of Moneys Due Deceased Contractor

8.04. If Contractor dies before completing the services under this agreement, any moneys due Contractor from Client under this agreement as of the date of death will be paid to the Contractor's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

Arbitration

8.05. Any controversy between the parties to this agreement involving the construction or application of any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement will, on the written request of one party served on the other, be submitted to arbitration. The arbitration will comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act, Sections 1280 through 1294.2 of the California Code of Civil Procedure.

The parties will each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If those two persons are unable to agree, then they will select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision will be final and conclusive on both parties. The cost of arbitration will be borne in a proportion the arbitrators determine.

[OR]

8.05. Any controversy or claim arising out of or relating to this agreement or the breach of the agreement will be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association. Judgment on the award rendered by the arbitrators may be entered in any court having jurisdiction over the award.

[Continue with the following:]

[Use to provide for liquidated damages:]

Liquidated Damages

8.06. The parties agree that in the event of a breach of this agreement by either party, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damage and, therefore, the breaching party will pay to the non-breaching party as liquidated damages and not as a penalty the sum of $ _____, which represents a reasonable compensation for the loss incurred because of the breach.

[Continue with the following:]

Attorneys' Fees

8.07. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law], including an action for declaratory relief, is brought to enforce or interpret the provisions of this agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, which may be set by the court in the same action or in a separate action brought for that purpose, in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled.

Governing Law

8.08. This agreement will be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 84 INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Agreements for Independent Contractor Services

§ 84.201 Contract Between Agency-General Contractor and Subcontractor

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between an agency acting as a general contractor, and an independent contractor acting as a subcontractor, to perform services for a third party. The agency will then contract with the third party to provide the services, and the subcontractor will perform the work. This form is illustrative only, and individual provisions may be modified, omitted, or added to reflect the particular circumstances and the intentions of the parties. This form should not be used if the agency charges the subcontractor a fee [see Civ. Code § 1812.504(a); see also [b], below].

[b] Employment Agency Contracts

An employment agency that charges a subcontractor/jobseeker a fee or other consideration, directly or indirectly, for procuring work must comply with the applicable provisions of the Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services Act [Civ. Code §§ 1812.501(a), 1812.504(a); see Civ. Code §§ 1812.500-1812.533]. Any person who provides babysitting or domestic employment for others must also comply with the Act [see Civ. Code § 1812.502(a)]. The Act requires that the agency give a written contract containing specified disclosures to each jobseeker [Civ. Code § 1812.504(a)].

However, if the employment fee is paid by a third party (the employer) and not the subcontractor/jobseeker, the Act does not apply [see Civ. Code § 1812.501(a)]. Because this form does not comply with the requirements of the Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services Act, it should be used only by an agency that charges fees exclusively of the party for whom work will be performed. It should not be used by an agency that charges the subcontractor/jobseeker a fee, or an agency that provides babysitting or domestic employment for others [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.501(a), 1812.502(a)]. For further discussion and a form of contract that meets the requirements of the Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services Act, see Chapter 92, Service Contracts . If the independent contractor will contract directly with the party for whom the services are to be performed, use the form illustrated in Section 84.200 instead of this form.

An attorney drafting a contract between an agency and a subcontractor must exercise caution to ensure that the terms of the agreement do not characterize the subcontractor as an employee of the person for whom services will be rendered. To avoid characterizing the parties as "Employer" and "Employee," which could contribute to an undesirable finding of an employment relationship, this form uses the terms "Agency" and "Subcontractor." Other terms can be used, as long as they do not indicate an employment relationship.

The principal drafting requirement to help avoid reclassification of an independent contractor as an employee is to vest control of the manner and method of performing the work in the contractor [see Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 ; see also § 84.11 [3]]. The factors considered in determining whether an independent contract or an employer-employee relationship exists are discussed in Sections 84.11 [1] and 84.30[4].

[2] FORM

Contract Between Agency-General Contractor and Subcontractor

CONTRACT FOR SERVICES

This Agreement is made on _____[date], between _____[name of agency] ("Agency"), with a principal place of business at _____[address], and [name of subcontractor] ("Subcontractor"), an independent contractor, with a principal place of business at _____[address].

[Continue with the following:]

Date for Payment of Compensation

[For a flat rate contract, include the following provision:]

3.02. For services rendered under this agreement, Agency agrees to pay Subcontractor the sum set forth in Paragraph 3.01 of this agreement _____[e.g., on completion of work or at the rate of $15,000 per month, payable on the first day of each month, until the entire sum has been paid or$ _____ on the commencement of this agreement and the balance in monthly installments of $ _____, payable on the first day of each month].

[OR]

[For an hourly or per diem contract, include the following provision:]

3.02. Subcontractor will submit to Agency a statement of services rendered at the end of each month. Agency agrees to pay the amount due to Subcontractor for services within 15 days of receipt of the statement.

[Continue with the following:]

Payment of Expenses

[Use if subcontractor will pay for expenses:]

3.03. Subcontractor will be responsible for all expenses incurred in performing services under this agreement.

[OR]

[Use if agency will reimburse subcontractor for expenses:]

3.03. Agency will reimburse Subcontractor for all reasonable expenses incurred in performing services under this agreement. The term "expenses" includes [e.g., costs of travel, telephone bills, supplies, and the services of sub-subcontractors]. Subcontractor will provide Agency with receipts for all expenses [add if applicable: in excess of $25].

[Continue with the following:]

ARTICLE 4. OBLIGATIONS OF SUBCONTRACTOR

Minimum Amount of Service

4.01. Subcontractor agrees to devote a minimum of _____ hours per month to performing the above-described services.

Non-Exclusive Relationship

4.02. Subcontractor may represent, perform services for, and contract with as many additional agencies, clients, persons, or companies as Subcontractor, in _____[his or her] sole discretion, sees fit.

Time and Place of Performing Work

[Use if subcontractor may choose place of work:]

4.03. Subcontractor may perform the services under this agreement at any suitable time and location _____[he or she] chooses.

[OR]

[Use if nature of work requires that subcontractor work at premises of agency's principal:]

4.03. Subcontractor will perform the services under this agreement on premises of Agency's principal [specify time, e.g, during principal's regular business hours or between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M. each weekday], as specified in the contract between Agency and Agency's principal. The services must be performed on these premises and during these hours because [specify, e.g., the painting of the principal's house can only be performed during daylight hours when the principal is not at home].

Tools, Materials, and Equipment

4.04. Subcontractor will supply all tools, materials, and equipment required to perform the services under this agreement.

Workers' Compensation

4.05. Subcontractor agrees to provide workers' compensation insurance for Subcontractor's employees and agents and agrees to hold harmless and indemnify Agency for any and all claims arising out of any injury, disability, or death of any of Subcontractor's employees or agents.

Liability Insurance

4.06. Subcontractor agrees to maintain a policy of insurance in the minimum amount of $ _____ to cover any negligent acts or omissions committed by Subcontractor or Subcontractor's employees or agents during the performance of any duties under this agreement. Subcontractor further agrees to indemnify and hold Agency free and harmless from any and all claims arising from any such negligent act or omission.

[OR]

Limited Liability

4.06. Subcontractor will not be liable to Agency, or to anyone who may claim any right due to a relationship with Agency, for any acts or omissions in the performance of services under the terms of this agreement or on the part of the employees or agents of Subcontractor unless those acts or omissions are due to willful misconduct. Agency will indemnify and hold Subcontractor free and harmless from any obligations, costs, claims, judgments, attorneys' fees, and attachments arising from, growing out of, or in any way connected with the services rendered to Agency under the terms of this agreement, unless Subcontractor is judged by a court of competent jurisdiction to be guilty of willful misconduct.

Subcontractor's Qualifications

4.07. Subcontractor represents that _____[he or she] has the qualifications and skills necessary to perform the services under this agreement in a competent, professional manner, without the advice or direction of Agency. This means Subcontractor is able to fulfill the requirements of this agreement. Failure to perform all the services required under this agreement constitutes a material breach of the agreement. Subcontractor has complete and sole discretion for the manner in which the work under this agreement will be performed.

Indemnity

4.08. Subcontractor agrees to indemnify, defend, and hold Agency free and harmless from all claims, demands, losses, costs, expenses, obligations, liabilities, damages, recoveries, and deficiencies, including interest, penalties, attorneys' fees, and costs, that Agency may incur as a result of a breach by Subcontractor of any representation or agreement contained in this agreement.

Assignment

4.09. Neither this agreement nor any duties or obligations under this agreement may be assigned by Subcontractor without the prior written consent of Agency.

ARTICLE 5. OBLIGATIONS OF AGENCY

Cooperation of Agency

5.01. Agency agrees to comply with all reasonable requests of Subcontractor necessary to the performance of Subcontractor's duties under this agreement.

Procurement of Contracts

5.02. Agency agrees to exert a reasonable effort to procure contracts for Subcontractor [describe type of work subcontractor seeks, e.g., involving bricklaying work] and capable of being performed by Subcontractor.

Assignment

5.03. Neither this agreement nor any duties or obligations under this agreement may be assigned by Agency without the prior written consent of Subcontractor.

ARTICLE 6. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT

Expiration of Agreement

6.01. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this agreement, this agreement will continue in effect [specify length corresponding with that set forth in P 1.01, e.g., for a period of _____ (specify) _____ (months or years) or until the services provided for in this agreement have been fully and completely performed] and shall then terminate unless renewed in writing by both parties.

[OR]

Termination on Notice

6.01. Notwithstanding any other provision of this agreement, either party may terminate this agreement at any time by giving [specify reasonable notice based on type of services to be rendered by contractor, e.g., 30 days'] written notice to the other party. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this agreement, this agreement will continue in force [specify length corresponding with that set forth in P 1.01, e.g., for a period of _____ (specify) _____ (months or years) or until the services provided for in this agreement have been fully and completely performed].

[Continue with the following:]

Termination on Occurrence of Stated Events

6.02. This agreement will terminate automatically on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(a) Bankruptcy or insolvency of either party.

(b) Sale of the business of either party.

(c) Death of either party.

_____ [specify other event on which agreement will terminate, e.g., Assignment of this agreement by either party without the consent of the other party].

Termination for Default

6.03. If either party defaults in the performance of this agreement or materially breaches any of its provisions, the non-breaching party may terminate this agreement by giving written notification to the breaching party. Termination will take effect immediately on receipt of notice by the breaching party or five days after mailing of notice, whichever occurs first. For the purposes of this paragraph, material breach of this agreement includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(a) Agency's failure to pay Subcontractor any compensation due within 30 days after written demand for payment.

(b) Subcontractor's failure to complete the services specified in _____ [Paragraph 2.01, above or the Description of Services].

(c) Subcontractor's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in Paragraph 4.07.

(d) Agency's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in this Agreement.

_____ [specify other situation constituting material breach].

ARTICLE 7. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

7.01. Any notices required to be given under this agreement by either party to the other may be effected by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices must be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change the address by giving written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally will be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices will be deemed communicated as of [e.g., the day of receipt or the fifth day after mailing, whichever occurs first].

Entire Agreement of the Parties

7.02. This agreement supersedes any and all agreements, either oral or written, between the parties with respect to the rendering of services by Subcontractor for Agency and contains all of the representations, covenants, and agreements between the parties with respect to the rendering of those services. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not contained in this agreement, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement will be valid or binding. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in a writing signed by the party to be charged.

Partial Invalidity

7.03. If any provision of this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions will continue in full force and effect without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Payment of Moneys Due Deceased Subcontractor

7.04. If Subcontractor dies before completing the services under this agreement, any moneys due Subcontractor from Agency under this agreement as of the date of death will be paid to the Subcontractor's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

7.05. Any controversy between the parties to this agreement involving the construction or application of any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement will, on the written request of one party served on the other, be submitted to arbitration. The arbitration will comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act, Sections 1280 through 1294.2 of the California Code of Civil Procedure.

The parties will each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If those two persons are unable to agree, then they will select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision will be final and conclusive on both parties. The cost of arbitration will be borne in a proportion the arbitrators determine.

[OR]

7.05. Any controversy or claim arising out of or relating to this agreement or the breach of the agreement will be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association. Judgment on the award rendered by the arbitrators may be entered in any court having jurisdiction over the award.

[Continue with the following:]

[Use to provide for liquidated damages:]

Liquidated Damages

7.06. The parties agree that in the event of a breach of this agreement by either party, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damage and, therefore, the breaching party will pay to the non-breaching party as liquidated damages and not as a penalty the sum of $ _____, which represents a reasonable compensation for the loss incurred because of the breach.

[Continue with the following:]

Attorneys' Fees

7.07. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law], including an action for declaratory relief, is brought to enforce or interpret the provisions of this agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees, which may be set by the court in the same action or in a separate action brought for that purpose, in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled.

Governing Law

7.08. This agreement will be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

§ 84.210 Determination of Employment Work Status for Purposes of California Employment Taxes and Personal Income Tax Withholding [EDD Form DE 1870]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This California Employment Development Department (EDD) form [Form DE 1870] is to be used by businesses who would like to obtain a determination as to whether a worker is an employee for purposes of California unemployment insurance, employment training tax, state disability insurance, and personal income tax withholding.

The form can be obtained from any Employment Tax Customer Service Office of the EDD or online from the EDD website. On completion, the form should be returned to the EDD at the following address:

State of California,
Employment Development Department
Audit Section, MIC 94
P.O. Box 826880, Sacramento, CA 94280-0001.

The form should be completed for one individual who is representative of the class of workers whose status is in question. If a written determination is desired for any other class of workers, a separate form should be completed.

[b] Factors Used in Making Determination

Under the common law of agency, a variety of factors are considered in determining whether a person is an independent contractor or an employee [Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43-44, 168 P.2d 686 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220; see also § 84.11[1]]. In evaluating a worker's status, the key determination is whether the principal has the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing a desired result. The principal's right to discharge at will, without cause, is strong evidence of that right to control [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. If it cannot be determined whether the principal has the right of control, the EDD will take the following factors into consideration [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(a)]:

- Whether the worker is engaged in a separate occupation or business.
- Whether this kind of work in the locality is usually done under the direction of a principal without supervision.
- The skill required in performing the work.
- Whether the worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work.
- The length of time for which the work is performed.
- The method of payment, whether by time, piece rate, or by job.
- Whether the work is a part of the regular business of the principal.
- Whether the parties believe they are creating an independent contract or an employer-employee relationship.
- The extent of actual control exercised by the principal over the manner and means of performing service.
- Whether the principal is engaged in business or whether the services are being performed for the principal's benefit as an individual.

28-84 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 84.211

§ 84.211 Determination of Employee Work Status for Purposes of Federal Employment Taxes and Income Tax Withholding [IRS Form SS-8]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an official questionnaire used to evaluate whether a particular worker is or was an employee. It is used for purposes of federal employment taxes and income tax withholding. Form SS-8 may be completed and submitted by either a business or a worker seeking a determination of the worker's status. It can be obtained from any Internal Revenue Service (IRS) office. When completed, the form should be returned to the IRS district director. In addition, the IRS may ask a business or worker to complete this form. In that case, the form should be returned to the IRS office that provided the form [IRS Form SS-8, Instructions].

[b] IRS Ruling Procedure

The IRS will rule on the status of a worker when an employer cannot clearly determine whether the worker is an employee or independent contractor, even with the aid of common law agency factors and tests [see § 84.110 [2]] and IRS rulings [IRS Pub. 937, Business Reporting, Employment Taxes, Information Returns, p. 3]. Information gathered from employers and workers on Form SS-8 is used to make that determination. Information must be provided concerning the services of one person selected as the representative of the class of workers whose status is in question. A ruling made about one worker applies to other workers of the same class if the facts are not materially different from those of the worker on whose status the ruling is made. When a ruling is sought for more that one class of worker, a separate Form SS-8 must be provided for one worker of each class whose status is typical of that class [IRS Form SS-8, Instructions]. The IRS will not rule on the status of a worker without a site inspection.

For a list of factors the IRS will consider in making a determination on a worker's status, see Section 84.30[4].

PART IV. FORMS
B. Tax Forms

§ 84.212 Miscellaneous Income [IRS Form 1099-MISC]

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an official IRS information return for reporting payments made to nonemployees for services rendered. It should be prepared by a person for whom services are rendered by an independent contractor. It is used to report payments of $600 or more to the IRS and to the independent contractor [see[b], [c], below]. Form 1099-MISC can be obtained from any IRS office.

[b] Persons Required to File Return With IRS

Any person who, in the course of his or her trade or business, pays $600 or more for services received from another person during a calendar year must file an information return with the IRS [see I.R.C. §§ 6041(a), 6041A(a)]. Payments made to service providers who are not employees must be made on Form 1099-MISC. Payments required to be reported include fees, commissions, and other compensation for services rendered, including fees for professional services, fees to independent contractors, and payments for materials used in rendering services [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G].

Form 1099-MISC must be provided to the IRS by March 1 of the year following the calendar year in which payment was made [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G]. Form 1096 is used to transmit Forms 1099 to the IRS.

For further discussion of filing requirements regarding information returns, see Bender's Federal Tax Service, Chapter P:3, Filing Requirements--Information Returns.

[c] Providing Statement to Payee

Every person required to file a return with the IRS [see [b], above] must also provide the payee named in the return with a written statement containing the name and address of the person required to file the return and the aggregate amount of payments made [I.R.C. § 6041(d)]. The statement may be a copy of the return filed with the IRS or a separately prepared statement. In either case, the preparer must inform the recipient that the information is being provided to the IRS [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G].

The statement must be provided to the payee by January 31 of the year following the calendar year in which the return was required to be filed [I.R.C. § 6041(d)].

[d] Information Required to be Provided

The information required to be provided on Form 1099-MISC for payments to independent contractors includes [see Instructions for Forms 1099, 1098, 5498, and W-2G]:

(1) The names, addresses, and taxpayer identification numbers of the payer and payee.

(2) Amounts of any backup withholding tax.

(3) Amounts paid as nonemployee compensation, including fees, commissions, prizes, awards, and other forms of compensation for services rendered to the payer's trade or business.

(4) State income tax withheld, the name of the state, and the payer's state tax identification number (this state tax information is optional).

[e] Filing Information Return With Franchise Tax Board

Under California law, a person who pays compensation of $600 or more to an independent contractor must provide a copy of Form 1099-MISC to the Franchise Tax Board (FTB) and to the payee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 18002, 18002.2]. Copy 1 of Form 1099-MISC is to be filed with the FTB, accompanied by the state transmittal form, Form 596. For further discussion, see California Taxation 2d, Chapter 21, Administrative Procedures.

This chapter covers the elements and uses of written employment agreements other than collective bargaining agreements. The Legal Background discusses the employment relationship and employment contracts in general. The forms include formal written employment agreements and contract provisions with pertinent explanatory comment for use in most situations in which employment agreements are required or desirable.

This chapter covers only those aspects of the employer-employee relationship that ordinarily affect the content of employment contracts or are generally governed by contract terms. Thus, state and federal statutes regulating working conditions, workers' compensation requirements, and the like, which ordinarily have little or no direct effect on the contents of a written employment contract, are not discussed in detail in this chapter. For an overview of these subjects, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers . Similarly, the forms in this chapter include provisions for employee participation in pension and profit-sharing plans, but the instruments that discussed in Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits . For an employment agreement between a professional corporation and a professional person such as an attorney or physician (typically used in connection with the incorporation of a professional practice), and related benefit provisions, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations . For detailed discussion of California and related federal employment laws, see Wilcox, California Employment Law (Matthew Bender).

Independent contractors are not employees. Thus, the employment agreements in this chapter generally are not suitable for use in engaging the services of independent contractors, although some of the individual provisions may be incorporated into agreements with independent contractors without altering the character of the independent contractor relationship. For coverage of the law governing independent contractors, and general forms for agreements with independent contractors, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors .

Several other chapters cover specialized agreements with various types of independent contractors. Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts and Ch. 87A, Athlete Agents , contain agreements for entertainment-related services, including the services of entertainers, agents, personal managers, and athletes' agents. Agreements between professionals (attorneys, consultants, advisors, analysts, and accountants) and their clients for services are set forth in Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services . Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts , discusses home improvement and swimming pool contracting and home solicitation contracts. Ch. 90A, State Government Contracts , and Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts , cover federal, state, and local government contract practices and procedures. Ch. 91, Contracts With Sales Representatives , covers agreements with manufacturers' or suppliers' agents, distributors, consignees, and commission merchants. Ch. 92, Service Contracts , deals with contracts for product servicing and for personal services.

Finally, this chapter discusses contract law only in the context of specific provisions and problems encountered in employment contracts. For general coverage of contract law, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

§ 85.10 Classification of Worker as Employee

[1] Definitions of "Employer" and "Employee"

[a] Common-Law Definitions

An "employer" for purposes of the common law is generally defined as any person engaged in any business or enterprise who has one or more persons in service under any oral or written, express or implied appointment, contract of hire, or apprenticeship [Lab. Code § 350(a)]. One becomes an "employer" by hiring a person to perform any type of service, whether for the benefit of the hirer or for a third person [see Lab. Code § 2750]. "Employing" includes any type of contracting for the services of an employee [Lab. Code § 350(c)]. An "employee" is any person who renders actual service in any business for an employer [Lab. Code § 350(b)], that is, any person who is hired to do something for the benefit of the employer or a third person [see Lab. Code § 2750].

More than a mere hiring is required to create an employment relationship, however. Depending on the circumstances, a person who has been hired could be classified as an independent contractor rather than as an employee [see § 85.10[3]]. The distinction between an independent contractor and an employee has important tax and insurance consequences for the employer [see § 85.10[3][a]]. The key factor in an employer-employee relationship is the employer's right to control and direct the activities of the employee or the manner or method in which the work is performed, whether exercised or not [see Industrial Indem. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 130, 135, 156 P.2d 926 ; see also Clackamas Gastroenterology Assocs., P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 444-450, 123 S. Ct. 1673, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615 (common law element of control is "principal guidepost" in determining whether employment relationship exists between professional corporation and shareholder-director for purposes of Americans With Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5))]. The employer-employee relationship is created when the person employed to render a service remains entirely under the control and direction of the employer [Oxford v. Signal Oil & Gas Co. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 403, 408, 90 Cal. Rptr. 700 ; see Crooks v. Glens Falls Indem. Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 113, 121, 268 P.2d 203] .

Although the common law makes "control" a key factor in establishing an employer-employee relationship, an individual corporate agent who exercises control over the wages, hours, or working conditions of a corporate employee does not thereby become an "employer" who is personally liable for unpaid wages. It is well established that corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of a corporation cannot be held liable for a breach of the corporation's contractual or statutory duty to pay wages [Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1087, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483, 116 P.3d 1162 (in absence of statutory provision specially defining "employer," common law tests for employment and liability of corporate agents apply in interpreting Lab. Code § 1194, which provides employee cause of action for unpaid minimum wage); Jones v. Gregory (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 798, 803-805, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 581 (unlike federal Fair Labor Standards Act, California statutes governing duty to pay wages look to common-law definition of employer, which precludes personal liability for corporate agents)].

[b] Definitions for Workers' Compensation Purposes

For workers' compensation purposes, "employer" includes every person that has any natural person in service [see Lab. Code § 3300]. "Employee," for purposes of workers' compensation, means every person in the service of an employer under any appointment, contract of hire, or apprenticeship, whether express or implied, oral or written, and whether lawful or unlawful [Lab. Code § 3351], including certain employment trainees, domestics, and persons engaged to create copyrightable works for hire [Lab. Code § 3351.5], but excluding certain other persons [see Lab. Code § 3352]. For instance, a person performing community service as punishment for a traffic offense is also an employee for workers' compensation purposes [Arriaga v. County of Alameda (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1055, 1062-1063, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116, 892 P.2d 150] . For detailed discussion of what constitutes an employment relationship for purposes of workers' compensation law, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Ch. 3, Employment Relationships Covered by Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender).

For unemployment and disability compensation purposes, an "employer" is an employing unit that employs one or more employees [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 675] or commissions a work for hire [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 686]. An "employing unit" is any individual or organization that has in its employ one or more individuals performing services for it [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 135]. "Employment" means service performed by an employee for wages or under any contract of hire [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 601; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 601.5, 625, 629-655].

"Employees" include any individuals who qualify as employees under common-law rules [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(b)], certain other specifically designated individuals [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(1)], and persons hired to perform services for wages or under contract or commissioned to produce works for hire [Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(d)]. Persons who have an investment in the facilities used in connection with the performance of their services are not considered employees for unemployment and disability compensation purposes [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(2)].

Whether an individual or entity is the employer of a particular employee for unemployment and disability compensation purposes is ordinarily determined under the common-law rules that define the employer-employee relationship for general purposes [Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(a)]. However, special statutory rules apply in determining whether a particular worker is the employee of a temporary services employer or a leasing employer [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(a)]. A "temporary services employer" or a "leasing employer" is an employing unit that contracts with clients or customers to supply workers to perform services for the client or customer and performs all of the following functions [Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(b)]:

- Negotiates with clients or customers for such matters as time, place, and type of work, working conditions, and quality and price of the services.

- Determines assignments or reassignments of workers, even though workers retain the right to refuse specific assignments.

- Retains the authority to assign or reassign a worker to other clients or customers when a worker is determined unacceptable by a specific client or customer.

- Assigns or reassigns the worker to perform services for a client or customer.

- Sets the rate of pay of the worker, whether or not through negotiation.

- Pays the worker from its own account or accounts.

- Retains the right to hire and terminate workers.

If a temporary services employer or a leasing employer contracts to supply a worker to a client or customer, the temporary services employer or leasing employer is the employer of the worker [Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(c)].

If an employee is lent from one employer to another, and the direction and control of the manner and means of performing the services is transferred to the second employer, then the lending employer continues to be the employer of the worker so long as the lending employer continues to remunerate the worker, whether or not reimbursed by the second employer. If the second employer remunerates the worker for services performed, then the second employer is the employer for purposes of the remuneration paid, regardless of whether the lending employer also remunerates the employee [Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(d)].

[d] Definitions for Fair Employment Purposes

For purposes of the Fair Employment and Housing Act, "employer" generally includes persons who regularly employ five or more persons, as well as persons acting as an employer's agent [see Gov. Code § 12926(d); see also Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158, 1162-1173, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, 177 P.3d 232 (supervisor or other individual is not personally liable for participation in retaliation prohibited by Act); Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 647, 663, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 (supervisor, although acting as agent of employer, cannot be held individually liable for discriminatory conduct that violates Act)]. For purposes of the Act, a parent corporation is not treated as an employer of its subsidiary's employees unless the two corporations form an "integrated enterprise," based on interrelation of operations, common management, centralized control, and common ownership or financial control [Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 737-741, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (centralized control of labor relations is most important factor); see Lambert v. Ackerley (1999) 180 F.3d 997, 1011-1012 (en banc)(for purposes of federal Fair Labor Standards Act, individual who exercises control over corporate employer may be treated as employer)].

The Fair Employment and Housing Act definition of "employer" generally excludes any religious association or corporation not organized for private profit [Gov. Code § 12926(d); see Gov. Code § 12926.2(a) ("religious corporation" refers to corporations formed under Corp. Code § 9110 et seq. (Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law) or under Corp. Code § 10000 et seq., as well as to foreign nonprofit religious corporations); see also McKeon v. Mercy Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 325-331, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 (nonprofit religious organization need not be incorporated at all to qualify for FEHA exemption under Gov. Code § 12926(d), which is available to unincorporated associations as well as to corporations)]. Nevertheless, for most purposes a religious association or corporation is treated as an employer subject to the Act with respect to persons employed to perform nonreligious duties at a health care facility operated by the association or corporation for the provision of health care that is not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation [Gov. Code § 12926.2(c)]. Even at such a health care facility, however, a religious corporation is exempt from the Act in the employment (including promotion) of an individual of a particular religion or in the application of particular religious beliefs in any work connected with the provision of health care [Gov. Code § 12926.2(d)].

A nonprofit public benefit corporation created to provide health care on behalf of a religious organization under the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 5110 et seq.] is also exempt from the Act with respect to the employment (including promotion) of an individual of a particular religion in an executive or pastoral-care position connected with the provision of health care [Gov. Code § 12926.2(e)]; and the corporation may restrict employment (including promotion) in any or all employment categories to individuals of a particular religion [Gov. Code § 12926.2(f)(1)]. However, the corporation is subject to the Act in all other respects [Gov. Code § 12926.2(f)(1)].

"Employee" under the Act is defined to exclude only individuals employed by their parents, spouse, or child or persons employed under a special license in a nonprofit sheltered workshop or rehabilitation facility [see Gov. Code § 12926(c)].

Generally, compensation of some sort is indispensable to the formation of an employment relationship; accordingly, a volunteer worker ordinarily is not an "employee" for purposes of the Fair Employment and Housing Act [Mendoza v. Town of Ross (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 625, 634-637, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 452] .

PRACTICE TIP:

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has promulgated enforcement guidelines in which it states that the equal employment laws apply to a broad category of "employees," including temporary employees and leased employees and excluding only bona fide independent contractors. Employers of these individuals may find that they now have to actively defend administrative charges brought against them by individuals who are not their "employees" for all other purposes, whereas previously they could have had such charges dismissed simply by informing the agency that the claimant was not an employee [see EEOC Notice 915.002, Enforcement Guidance: Application of EEO Laws to Contingent Workers Placed by Temporary Employment Agencies and Other Staffing Firms, 12/3/97]. Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst.

[2] Employee Distinguished From Agent

There is a close similarity between the services rendered by an employee and those rendered by an agent. An agent is a person who represents another person (the principal) in dealings with third persons [Civ. Code § 2295]. The same person can act as both employee and agent [Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 500 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1328, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 ; Ingle v. Bay Cities Transit Co. (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 283, 286, 164 P.2d 508]. However, an agent need not be an employee, and not all employees are agents. Thus, an employee who is not authorized to represent the employer in dealings with third persons is not an agent [see Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1328, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 ; Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205-206, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; Wallace v. Sinclair (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 220, 230, 250 P.2d 154 ; Civ. Code § 2295].

Most of the rules relating to the authority, duties, and liabilities of the respective parties apply equally to employees and agents. The rules set forth in the Restatement of Agency that are generally applicable to principal and agent in the creation of the relationship, ability to delegate authority, and capacity of the parties, also apply to employer and employee [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 25; see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 2 cmt. d].

[3] Employee Distinguished From Independent Contractor

The classification of a worker as an employee or as an independent contractor has important consequences for both the employer and the worker. For example, an employer is required to withhold income tax and make unemployment insurance and Social Security contributions for employees, but not for independent contractors [see I.R.C. §§ 3102, 3111, 3401(a), 306(c); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 675, 976, 2602, 2652, 13005]. Further, under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer may be vicariously liable for torts committed by an employee against third parties, but a person who hires an independent contractor generally is not vicariously liable for the torts of the contractor [Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508] . Thus, the hirer of an independent contractor ordinarily is not liable to an employee of the contractor for injuries caused by the negligence of the contractor [Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1244-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617 (no liability under negligent hiring theory); Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 267, 955 P.2d 504 (no liability under "peculiar risk doctrine" even when hirer fails to require that special precautions be taken to avert peculiar risks of work); Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 (no liability under "peculiar risk doctrine")]. However, the hirer may be liable if the hirer's own conduct contributes to an injury suffered by the contractor's employee [Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659, 674, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495, 123 P.3d 931, 2005 Cal. LEXIS 13684 (hirer as landowner may be independently liable to contractor's employee if it knows or reasonably should know of concealed pre-existing hazardous condition on its premises, contractor does not know and could not reasonably ascertain condition, and landowner fails to warn contractor); McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 219, 225, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868 (hirer liable for negligently furnishing unsafe equipment); Hooker v. Department of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 212, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853 (hirer liable based on exercise of retained control over safety conditions at work site that affirmatively contributed to injury suffered by contractor's employee)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Failure to correctly classify workers may have significant economic consequences for an employer. In addition to administrative exposure, employers may risk disqualification of ERISA plans and may be required to pay those employees back benefits including the increase they might have realized had they been eligible for stock options or employee stock purchase plans [see Vizcaino v. Microsoft Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 120 F. 3d 1006, 1010-1014]. Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst.

[b] Relevant Factors

[i] Common-Law Factors

An independent contractor generally is one who, in rendering services, exercises an independent occupation and deals with the "employer" only with respect to the results of the work, not the means by which it is to be accomplished. The chief factor in determining that one is an independent contractor is that the employer of an independent contractor has no right of control over the mode of performing the work involved [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337], while the key element of the employer-employee relationship is that the employer has the right to control and direct the activities of the employee [see Industrial Indem. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 130, 135, 156 P.2d 926].

Under particular circumstances, determining whether a person is an employee or an independent contractor can be difficult. At common law, the following factors are all relevant in making the determination, [see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220(2) & cmt. h; Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; Empire Star Mines Co. v. California Employment Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43-44, 168 P.2d 686 ; see also Ch. 84, Independent Contractors]:

- The extent of control which, by the terms of the agreement, the one who ordered the work may exercise over the details of the work.

- Whether the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business.

- Whether in the particular locality the kind of work involved is usually done under the direction of the person for whom the work is done or by a specialist without supervision.

- The skill required in the particular occupation.

- Whether the instrumentalities, tools, and place of work are supplied by the employer or the worker.

- The length of time for which the person is employed.

- Whether regular working hours are set by the person for whom work is performed.

- Whether payment is by the hour or month or for the job [see Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485-1486, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 (payment by job, small amount of payment, and failure to withhold taxes are indicative of independent contractor status but are not dispositive if other factors are indicative of employee status)].

- Whether the person performing the work is engaged full time by one person.

- Whether the work is performed in a specific area or over a fixed route.

- Whether the work is a part of the regular business of the person for whom the work is performed.

- Whether the parties believe they are creating a hirer-independent contractor relationship or an employer-employee relationship.

- Whether the person who ordered the work is in business.

- Whether the services are terminable without cause at the will of the person for whom the work is performed but see Varisco v. Gateway Sci. & Eng'g, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1107-1108, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 393 (independent contractor agreement can properly include at-will clause giving parties mutual rights to terminate agreement without cause, and such clause does not by itself change independent contractor relationship into employer-employee relationship)]

- Whether under the terms of the agreement the work may be delegated.

Different government agencies may apply slightly different definitions and tests in determining whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor, depending on the purpose for which the determination is made [see, e.g., Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296 (20 factors used by IRS to determine whether taxpayer is employee); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1 (10 factors considered in determining whether individual is employee for purposes of state income-tax withholding)]. For discussion of factors considered by the Internal Revenue Service, see [ii], below. For discussion of factors considered by the California Employment Development Department, see [iii], below.

[ii] IRS Factors

In determining employee status for federal income tax purposes, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) recognizes that, as under common law, the critical element of an employer-employee relationship is the employer's right to control the means as well as the result of the employee's services [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296, 298] . In determining the existence of sufficient control, the IRS has identified 20 relevant factors. The degree of importance of each factor varies depending on the factual context in which the services are performed. The 20 factors are as follows [Rev. Rul. 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 296]:

Instructions:

if the employer has the right to require the worker to comply with the employer's instructions, the worker ordinarily will be deemed an employee.

- Training: if the employer trains the worker (for example, by assigning an experienced worker to work with the worker, by corresponding with the worker, or by requiring the worker to attend meetings), that indicates that the employer wants the services performed in a particular manner.

- Integration: integration of the worker's services into the business operations of the employer generally shows that the worker is subject to the employer's direction and control.

- Services rendered personally: if the services are to be rendered personally, presumably the employer is interested not only in the results of the work but also in the methods used to accomplish the work.

- Hiring, supervising, and paying assistants: if the employer hires, supervises, and pays assistants, that generally shows that the employer controls the workers on the job. On the other hand, if one worker hires, supervises, and pays assistants under a contract that requires the worker to provide labor and materials and under which the worker is responsible only for the results of the work, the worker ordinarily will be deemed an independent contractor.

- Continuing relationship: a continuing relationship between the employer and the worker indicates an employee relationship.

- Set hours of work: the establishment of set hours of work is a factor indicating control by the employer.

- Requirement of full-time work: if the worker must devote essentially full time to the employer's business, that indicates control by the employer.

- Working on employer's premises: if the work is performed on the employer's premises, that indicates control by the employer, especially if the work could be done elsewhere. However, work done off-premises does not by itself mean that the worker is not an employee. The importance of this factor depends on the nature of the service involved and whether an employer generally would require such services to be performed on the employer's premises. For example, control over the place of work is indicated when the employer has the right to direct that the worker travel a designated route, cover a territory within a certain time, or to work at specific places as required.

- Order or sequence of work: if the employer has the right to set the order or sequence of services to be performed by the worker, that indicates that the employer has the right of control.

- Reports: a requirement that the worker submit oral or written reports to the employer indicates a degree of control by the employer.

- Payment by hour, week, or month: periodic payments generally indicate that the worker is an employee, unless the method of payment is just a convenient way of paying off a lump sum agreed upon as the cost of a job. Payment by the job or on a straight commission generally indicates that the worker is an independent contractor.

- Payment of business or travel expenses: if the employer ordinarily pays the worker's expenses, the worker is ordinarily an employee.

- Furnishing tools and materials: the furnishing of tools, materials, and other equipment by the employer tends to show that the worker is an employee.

- Significant investment: an investment made by the worker in facilities that are used to perform services and that are not typically maintained by employees tends to show that the worker is an independent contractor. Conversely, a lack of such investment tends to show that the worker is an employee.

- Realization of profit or loss: if the worker can realize a profit or loss as a result of his or her services, the worker generally is an independent contractor; if the worker cannot realize such a profit or loss, he or she is an employee.

- Working for multiple employers: if a worker performs more than minimal services for more than one employer at a time, that generally indicates that the worker is an independent contractor. However, a worker may be employed by more than one employer, especially where the employers are part of the same service arrangement.

- Offering services to general public: a worker who makes his or her services available to the general public on a regular and consistent basis usually is an independent contractor.

- Right to discharge: the right to discharge a worker indicates that the worker is an employee.

- Right to terminate: if the worker has a right to terminate his or her relationship with the employer at any time without incurring liability, that indicates that the worker is an employee.

[iii] EDD Factors

The California Employment Development Department (EDD) has formulated its own test for determining whether a worker is an employee for state income-tax withholding purposes. Under the EDD test, if the employer has the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the desired result of the worker's services, then the worker is an employee. The employer's right to discharge the worker at will without cause is strong evidence of such control by the employer [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1]. If it cannot be determined whether the employer has such control, the following 10 factors are to be considered in determining whether the worker is an employee [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(a)]:

- Whether the worker is engaged in a separately established occupation or business from that of the employer [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(7)].

- The kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of an employer without supervision.

- The skill required in performing the services and accomplishing the desired result. Unskilled workers usually are employees [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(2)].

- Whether the employer or the worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and place of work. This factor is irrelevant, however, in determining whether the worker is an employee for purposes of personal income-tax withholding [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(1), (4)].

- The length of time for which the services are performed, to determine whether the performance is an isolated event or continuous in nature [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(3)].

- The method of payment, whether by the time, a piece rate, or by the job.

- Whether the work is part of the regular business of the employer [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(6)].

- Whether the parties believe they are creating an employer-employee relationship [see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-1(b)(5)].

- The extent of actual control exercised by the employer over the manner and means of performing the services.

- Whether the employer is engaged in a business enterprise or whether the services are being performed for the benefit or convenience of the employer as an individual.

The EDD has issued regulations applying the foregoing guidelines to specific kinds of occupations or industries, including artists [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-5], amateur athletic officials [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-10], the real estate industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304.2], the home health-care industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304.3], the computer services industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-4], the newspaper distribution industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-6], the product demonstrator industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-7], the security dealer industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-8], and the language interpreter industry [22 Cal. Code Reg. § 4304-9].

[iv] Workers' Compensation Factors

In determining whether a hiree is an employee or independent contractor for purposes of the requirement that an employer provide workers' compensation insurance [see Lab. Code § 3700], the common-law emphasis on the hirer's degree of control over the details of the work in the determination of an employment relationship remains significant [see [1], above]. However, it is not the only factor to be considered in the workers' compensation context, because the question of a hiree's status must be considered in light of the history and remedial and social purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351-356, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1062-1063, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563 ; see Lab. Code § 3600 et seq.].

The policies behind the Workers' Compensation Act are not concerned with whether an employer should be liable for an injury caused by a hiree (typically the focus of a common-law inquiry), but rather whether the employer should be required to insure against an injury to the hiree [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 352-353, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1063, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] . Accordingly, in the workers' compensation context, the nature of the work and the overall arrangement between the parties must be examined to determine whether they come within the history and fundamental purposes of the Act [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 353-354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543 (fundamental purposes of Workers' Compensation Act are (1) to ensure that cost of industrial injuries will be part of cost of goods rather than burden on society; (2) to guarantee prompt, limited compensation for employee's work injuries, regardless of fault, as inevitable cost of production; (3) to spur increased industrial safety; and (4) to insulate employer from tort liability for employee's injuries); JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1063, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] . To accomplish its goal of comprehensive coverage of injuries in employment, the Act defines "employment" broadly in terms of "service [to] an employer" and by including a general presumption that any person "performing service for the alleged employer" is a covered employee [Lab. Code §§ 3351, 5507(a); see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations

(1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1063, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] .

Thus, in the workers' compensation context, the relevant factors in determining whether a hiree is an employee include the following [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1064 n.14, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] :

- Whether there is a right to fire at will without cause.
- Whether the one performing services is engaged in a distinct occupation or business.
- The kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the principal or by a specialist without supervision.
- The skill required in the particular occupation.
- Whether the principal or the worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work.
- The length of time for which the services are to be performed.
- The method of payment, whether by the time or by the job.
- Whether the work is a part of the regular business of the principal.
- Whether the parties believe they are creating an employer-employee relationship.
- Whether the classification of independent contractor is bona fide and not a subterfuge to avoid employee status.
- The hiree's degree of investment other than personal service in his or her own business and whether the hiree holds himself or herself out to be in business with an independent business license.
- Whether the hiree has employees.
- The hiree's opportunity for profit or loss depending on his or her managerial skill.
- Whether the service rendered is an integral part of the alleged employer's business.

The individual factors are not to be applied mechanically as separate tests. They are intertwined, and each factor's weight may depend the particular combination of circumstances in a given case [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 354-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1063-1064, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] .

The nondispositive nature of the control factor in the workers' compensation context was illustrated by the California Supreme Court in a case in which the Court concluded that the particular hirees were employees and not independent contractors. The Court found that the hirees were employees even though the employer did not exercise significant control over the details of the work, which was the growing and harvesting of cucumbers for the production of pickles. The minimal degree of control that the employer exercised over the details of the work was not considered dispositive, because the work did not require a high degree of skill and was an integral part of the employer's business. The employer was thus determined to be exercising all necessary control over the operation as a whole [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 355-360, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

Similarly, a court of appeal concluded that drivers hired by a courier service were employees, despite the employer's lack of control over the manner in which the drivers covered their territories and the drivers' written acknowledgment of independent contractor status. The court found that the functions performed by the drivers--pickup and delivery of papers or packages and driving in between--did not require a high degree of skill, and the functions constituted the integral heart of the employer's courier-service business. By obtaining the clients in need of the service and providing the workers to conduct it, the employer retained all necessary control over the operation as a whole [JKH Enters., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1064-1066, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563 (noting that employer was corporation formed as subterfuge to avoid effects of previous stop work order issued against predecessor sole proprietorship that had not secured workers' compensation insurance)].

[c] Employee-Independent Contractor Distinction in Particular Industries

[i] Persons Working for or as Building Contractors

There is a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing services for which a license is required under the Contractors License Law (or who is performing such services for a person who is required to obtain such a license) is an employee rather than an independent contractor [Lab. Code § 2750.5; see Sanders Constr. Co. v. Cerda (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 430, 433-436, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911 (under Lab. Code § 2750.5, general contractor is treated as employer of unlicensed subcontractor's employees, who may assert wage claim against general contractor)]. The burden of proof for establishing independent contractor status is met if the person can satisfactorily show that:

- The individual has the right to control and discretion as to the manner of performance of the contract for services in that the result of the work and not the means by which it is accomplished is the primary factor bargained for [Lab. Code § 2750.5(a)];

- The individual is customarily engaged in an independently established business [Lab. Code § 2750.5(b)];

- The individual's independent contractor status is bona fide and not a subterfuge to avoid employee status. Good faith is evidenced by the presence of cumulative factors such as substantial investment other than personal services in the business, holding out to be in business for one's self, and bargaining for a contract to complete a specific project for compensation by project rather than by time. It is also shown by supplying the tools used in the work (other than tools normally provided by employees), hiring employees, performing work that is not ordinarily in the course of the principal's work, performing work that requires a particular skill, or holding a license under the Business and Professions Code. Other factors are the intent of the parties that an independent contractor relationship exists or that the relationship is not terminable at will, but gives rise to an action for breach of contract if terminated [Lab. Code § 2750.5(c)].

In addition, the person performing the services must possess a valid contractor's license as a condition to having independent-contractor status [Lab. Code § 2750.5]. Thus, if a worker does not possess a valid contractor's license, the presumption of employee status ordinarily is conclusive [Lab. Code § 2750.5]. However, notwithstanding the presumption, a worker who misrepresents himself or herself as a licensed contractor will be estopped from asserting that his or her unlicensed status makes him or her an employee [Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1004, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294] .

If the statutory presumption is not rebutted, a property owner who hires an unlicensed building contractor will be the presumptive employer not only of the contractor, but also of the workers hired by the building contractor, at least for purposes of workers' compensation eligibility [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581] . However, for purposes of claiming workers' compensation benefits, a worker does not qualify as a presumptive employee unless he or she has worked for the employer at least 52 hours during the 90 calendar days preceding the date of the work-related injury (or, in the case of a cumulative injury, the date of the last employment) [Lab. Code § 3352(h)]. Thus, a worker hired by an unlicensed building contractor and injured on the job will not be deemed an employee of the property owner if the worker has worked less than 52 hours on the owner's property. In such a case, however, the worker may have worked enough hours for the unlicensed contractor to qualify as a presumptive employee of the contractor [Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581] .

It remains an open question, however, whether an unlicensed worker will be deemed a homeowner-hirer's employee under Lab. Code § 2750.5 so as to impose vicarious tort liability on the homeowner for the worker's conduct that results in the worker's own injury [Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 913, 920, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 (because no applicable statute created special duty owed by employer to employee, it was unnecessary to decide whether unlicensed worker was homeowner-hirer's employee at law under Lab. Code § 2750.5 so as to impose vicarious liability on homeowner for worker's death caused by worker's own conduct)].

There is a rebuttable presumption that a licensed physician and surgeon who enters into a contract to perform health services on behalf of a licensed primary care clinic [see Health & Safety Code § 1204(a)] is an independent contractor rather than an employee [Lab. Code § 2750.6].

[4] Employee Distinguished From Partner

A partnership generally is an association of two or more persons to carry on a business for profit as co-owners [Corp. Code § 16101(9)]. Unlike the employer-employee relationship, a partnership is characterized by a community of interest in a particular business and a sharing of profits from that business [People v. Park (1978) 151 Cal. Rptr. 146] . "Community of interest" implies joint participation in management, control, profits and losses of the business [Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386, 235 P.2d 113] . For further discussion of partnership, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships .

§ 85.11 Obligations of Employee

[1] Duty to Comply With Employer's Directions

An employee must substantially comply with those directions of the employer that concern the services to be performed, unless obedience to the direction is impossible, unlawful, or would impose new and unreasonable burdens on the employee [Lab. Code § 2856]. It has been held that while the employee will be protected from harsh treatment, the employee must nevertheless obey the employer's orders in all matters that cannot be considered a departure from the contract [May v. New York Motion Picture Corp. (1920) 45 Cal. App. 396, 402-403, 187 P. 785] . Thus, for example, an order requiring an actress to report to the studio each morning at 8:30 was held not unreasonable [May v. New York Motion Picture Corp. (1920) 45 Cal. App. 396, 405-409, 187 P. 785] . On the other hand, an order forbidding an actress from leaving the employer's studio for lunch hour was held unreasonable, so that disobedience did not constitute a breach [Mason v. Lyl Productions (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 79, 84-85, 69 Cal. Rptr. 769, 443 P.2d 193] .

[2] How Duties Are to Be Performed

The employee must perform the work in accordance with the methods and rules that govern at the place of performance, unless it is otherwise directed by the employer, or it is impractical to do so, or it would obviously be injurious to the employer for the employee to do so [see Lab. Code § 2857]. An employee must exercise a reasonable degree of skill, unless before employing him or her the employer had notice of his or her lack of skill [Lab. Code § 2858]. The employee must use all the skill he or she possesses to the extent required to perform the job specified by the employer [Lab. Code § 2859].

[3] Accounting of Transactions and Delivery of Things Received

On demand, an employee must render to the employer a full and honest account of all transactions that occurred in the course of the employment as often as is reasonable. However, the employee must give prompt notice to the employer of everything received for the employer's account without any prior demand from the employer [see Lab. Code § 2861], even though the employee need not actually deliver those things until demanded by the employer and need not send them to the employer from a distance by a method involving greater risk than their retention by the employee unless that is required by the employer [see Lab. Code § 2862].

[4] Duty to Give Preference to Employer's Business

An employee has a duty to serve the employer faithfully during working hours [see Charles T. Powner Co. v. Smith (1928) 91 Cal. App. 101, 102, 266 P. 833] . If an employee has any business to transact on his or her own account similar to that entrusted to him or her by the employer, the employee must always give preference to the employer's business [Lab. Code § 2863].

An employee must devote his or her efforts to the employer's interests and may not engage in any business that is detrimental to the employer's business [see Western Electro-Plating Co. v. Henness (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448, 4 Cal. Rptr. 434] .

§ 85.12 Obligations of Employer

[1] Payment of Wages

"Wages" is the broad term used by the Labor Code to denote all types of compensation due an employee from an employer for labor performed [Lab. Code § 200(a)]. "Wages" include not only the periodic monetary earnings of an employee but also other benefits to which the employee is entitled as part of his or her compensation, including vacation pay and severance pay [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 780, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122 ; Triad Data Servs., Inc. v. Jackson (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 10, 200 Cal. Rptr. 418] .

Wages earned are generally due and payable twice a month. Payment for work performed up to the 15th day of any month must be made between the 16th and 26th day of the month; payment for work performed between the 16th and last day of the month must be made between the first and 10th day of the following month [Lab. Code § 204(a)].

Alternatively, an employee may be paid on a weekly basis, on a regular day designated by the employer in advance of the rendition of services as the regular payday. Wages for work performed by a weekly-paid employee during any calendar week and prior to or on the regular payday must be paid not later than the regular payday falling during the following calendar week; wages for work performed by the employee during any calendar week and subsequent to the regular payday must be paid not later than seven days after the regular payday falling during the following calendar week [Lab. Code § 204b].

Executive, administrative, and professional personnel generally may be paid once a month within seven days of the close of their monthly payroll period. If these personnel (as defined in the Fair Labor Standards Act [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1); see also McGuire v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 460, 462-464 (exemption for executive, administrative, and professional employees applies only if employee is paid on salary basis, without significant likelihood of pay reduction for disciplinary reasons or because of variations in quality or quantity of work performed)]) are subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act because they are employed in interstate commerce, their salaries may be paid once monthly on or before the 26th day of the month during which the work was performed [see Lab. Code §§ 204(a), 204.2]. If an executive, administrative, or professional employee is not subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act, is not covered by a collective bargaining agreement, is paid monthly remuneration that does not include overtime pay, and is paid within seven days of the close of his or her monthly payroll period, there is no requirement for semimonthly payment or payment on or before the 26th day of the month during which the work was performed [Lab. Code § 204c].

Special requirements apply to the payment of wages to employees of a temporary service employer that provides workers for its clients or customers [see Lab. Code § 201.3(a)(1),(2) ("temporary services employer" defined)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client, that employee's wages are due and payable no less frequently than weekly, regardless of when the assignment ends, and wages for work performed during any calendar week are due and payable not later than the regular payday of the following calendar week [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(1)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client on a day-to-day basis, the employee's wages are due and payable at the end of each day, regardless of when the assignment ends, if (1) the employee reports to or assembles at the office of the temporary services employer or other location; (2) the employee is dispatched to a client's worksite each day and returns to or reports to the office of the temporary services employer or other location on completion of the assignment; and (3) the employee's work is not executive, administrative, professional, or clerical [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(2)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client engaged in a trade dispute, that employee's wages are due and payable at the end of each day, regardless of when the assignment ends [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(3)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client and is discharged by the temporary services employer or leasing employer, wages are due and payable as provided in Labor Code Section 201 (see [2][a], below) [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(4)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client and quits his or her employment with the temporary services employer, wages are due and payable as provided in Labor Code Section 202 (see [2][a], below) [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(5)]. If an employee of a temporary services employer is assigned to work for a client for over 90 consecutive calendar days, the foregoing requirements do not apply unless the temporary services employer pays the employee weekly [Lab. Code § 201.3(b)(6)]. A temporary services employer who violates the foregoing requirements is subject to the civil penalties provided for in Labor Code Section 203 (see [2][a], below) and to any other penalties available at law [Lab. Code § 201.3(c)].

[2] Payment of Wages on Termination of Employment

[a] Wages Generally

If an employer discharges an employee, the wages earned and unpaid at the time of discharge ordinarily are due and payable immediately [Lab. Code § 201(a)]. "Discharge," in this context, occurs not only when an employee is involuntarily terminated from an ongoing employment relationship, but also when an employee is released after completing the particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired [Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 82-94, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218] .

If the discharge is part of a group layoff by reason of the termination of seasonal employment in the curing, canning, or drying of any variety of perishable fruit, fish, or vegetables, payment will be deemed "immediate" if it is made within a reasonable time, not to exceed 72 hours, as necessary to compute and pay the wages. In such a case the employer must mail the payment if the employee has requested payment by mail and has designated a mailing address [Lab. Code § 201(a)].

Special provisions apply to the payment of a discharged state employee's accumulated vacation and leave time that was earned by working overtime. The state employee may elect to have such accumulated "compensating time" deferred to the following calendar year or paid into the employee's state-sponsored supplemental retirement plan [Lab. Code § 201(b), (c)].

If an employee resigns and does not have a definite term of employment specified in a written contract, the wages earned and unpaid at the time of resignation generally are due and payable within 72 hours of resignation [Lab. Code § 202(a)]. However, if the employee has given at least 72 hours' notice of his or her intention to resign, the wages earned and unpaid at the time of resignation are payable at the time of resignation [Lab. Code § 202(a)]. An employee who resigns without giving 72-hour notice is entitled to payment by mail if he or she so requests and designates a mailing address. In such a case, the time of mailing will be considered the time of payment [Lab. Code § 202(a)]. Special provisions apply to the payment of a quitting or retiring state employee's accumulated vacation and leave time that was earned by working overtime. The state employee may elect to have for such accumulated "compensating time" deferred to the following calendar year or paid into the employee's state-sponsored supplemental retirement plan [Lab. Code § 202(b), (c)].

An employer that willfully fails to comply with the foregoing requirements for the payment of wages on an employee's termination, or that imposes an abatement or reduction on those wages, is liable for post-termination wages as a penalty. Such post-termination wages accrue until they are paid or until the employee commences an action to recover them, up to a maximum of 30 days [Lab. Code § 203]. This "waiting time" penalty is computed by calculating the employee's daily wage rate, which is then multiplied by the number of days of nonpayment, up to 30 days. Thus, the penalty can exceed one month's wages, because the unpaid wages continue to accrue not only on days that the employee might have worked, but also on nonworkdays. This method of calculating the penalty furthers public policy by providing a strong disincentive to employers who are reluctant to make timely payment of wages due on termination of employment [Mamika v. Barca (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 487, 491-494, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 (although limited to 30 days, penalty can exceed one month's wages; wrong targeted by statute is delay in payment, which continues on nonworkdays as well as workdays as long as payment is not made)].

The requirement that earned, unpaid wages be paid on termination or resignation [Lab. Code §§ 201, 202] is not violated by an employee incentive compensation plan under which employees can elect to receive, in lieu of a portion of their compensation, shares of company stock with restricted rights during a vesting period, with forfeiture of the restricted stock on an employee's resignation or termination for cause before the stock fully vests [Schachter v. Citigroup, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 610, 618-623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 9-13, 218 P.3d 262, 268-271 (because restricted stock had value--immediately exercisable voting and dividend rights, and contingent rights of full ownership--employee's bargained-for wages had been paid in full, and forfeiture of unvested shares did not constitute denial of compensation)].

If an employment contract provides for paid vacations and an employee's employment is terminated before he or she takes the vacation time that has vested to that date, all vested vacation pay must be paid at the final rate of pay pursuant to the contract or the employer's policy concerning eligibility or time served [Lab. Code § 227.3; see Owen v. Macy's, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 (Lab. Code § 227.3 does not require that employer provide its employees with any paid vacation at all; rather, statute imposes certain requirements "whenever" employer provides vacation benefits)].

An employment contract or an employer's policy may not provide for the forfeiture of vested vacation time upon termination [Lab. Code § 227.3]. An employer may adopt a policy of deducting from a salaried employee's vacation-leave bank whenever the employee takes four hours off; such a policy does no more than regulate the timing of the exempt employee's use of vacation time [Conley v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co., (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 260, 269-270, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] . A contract or an employer's policy that allows an employee to accumulate vacation time and take it whenever the employee chooses is not considered to exact a forfeiture, so long as the employer does not require the employee to "use or lose" accrued vacation.

It is an open question whether a terminated employee's action to recover compensation for vested but unused vacation time is subject to the statute of limitations for claims based on statutory liability, or the statutes of limitations for contract claims [Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568, 1577, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166 (finding it unnecessary to decide which statute of limitations applied, because complaint had been filed within all potentially applicable limitation periods); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337(1) (written contracts--four years), 338(a)(liability created by statute--three years), 339(1)(oral contracts--two years); but see Sequeira v. Rincon-Vitova Insectaries, Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 632, 634, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264 (applying four-year limitation for actions based on written contract, Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1))].

Whichever statute of limitations governs the time for suing to recover vested vacation, the courts of appeal are split on the question whether the statute also should be applied to limit the years for which vested vacation must be paid upon termination. The Second District has held that if the employment relationship was governed by a written contract, the four year statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)] would limit the right to vacation pay to that which vested within four years prior to the termination of the employment relationship [Sequeira v. Rincon-Vitova Insectaries, Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 632, 637, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264] . The Fifth District, in contrast, has held that the statute of limitations only limits the time for filing suit after accrual of the terminated employee's cause of action (i.e., the employer's failure to pay vested vacation upon termination). Under the Fifth District's view, the limitations period should not also be applied "in reverse" to limit the years for which vested vacation may be claimed. Rather, because "all vested vacation shall be paid to [a terminated employee] as wages" [Lab. Code § 227.3], the Fifth District holds that there is no limit on the years of vested, unused vacation time that a terminated employee may claim [Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568, 1577-1583, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166] . The Fifth District's analysis seems preferable. The First District's view--that claims for vacation time vested more than four years prior to the date of termination are barred as "stale" claims [see Sequeira v. Rincon-Vitova Insectaries, Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 632, 637, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264] --ignores the general principle that a statute of limitations does not begin to run until the cause of action accrues (which, in this context, could not happen before the termination of employment) [see Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568, 1582-1583, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166] .

[3] Liability for Losses and Expenses

Employers are liable for the losses of their employees that are caused by the employer's lack of ordinary care [Lab. Code § 2800]. The employer cannot assert assumption of risk or the fellow servant rule in defending any action for those losses, and the employee's contributory negligence cannot bar recovery although it can diminish the amount of the employee's recovery [Lab. Code § 2801]. The personal representative of an employee whose death results from the lack of ordinary or reasonable care of the employer or any of its employees can bring an action for wrongful death [Lab. Code § 2803].

An employer must indemnify its employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by the employee in direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties or obedience to the directions of the employer. This obligation to indemnify applies even if the directions of the employer are unlawful, unless the employee at the time of obeying the directions believed them to be unlawful [Lab. Code § 2802(a)]. However, the duty to indemnify does not arise when the employee's conduct, though alleged to be in the scope of employment, is so unusual or startling that it would be unfair to include indemnification in the employer's cost of doing business [Devereaux v. Latham & Watkins (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1583, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 (citing Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 619, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143)].

Expenses subject to indemnification include attorneys' fees incurred by the employee not only in defending against claims arising from the employee's discharge of duties, but also in proceedings against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification [Lab. Code § 2802(c); O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local #856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1157, 1160-1161, 158 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2908] . For this purpose, a claim against an employee arises from the employee's discharge of duties if (1) the employee's actions giving rise to the claim are within the scope of employment; and (2) the claim is proven to be unfounded, that is, without merit [O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local #856 (9th Cir.

1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158-1160, 158 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2908 (third party's claim against employee is unfounded as matter of law if third party dismisses claim with prejudice; that dismissal was part of settlement did not mean claim had merit, since settlement did not include any admission of liability by employee)].

When an employee has recurring business expenses subject to reimbursement, several methods of reimbursement are permissible. Under the "actual expense method," the employee maintains records of actual expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of employment tasks, and the employer issues a reimbursement separate from the employee's regular compensation. This is the most accurate method, but it can be burdensome for both the employer and the employee. For example, if the employee is required to use his or her own automobile for business purposes, under the actual expense method, the employee must keep detailed records of expenditures for fuel, maintenance, repairs, insurance, registration, and depreciation and must apportion those expenses between personal and business uses of the automobile; then, the employer must make a determination of whether each of those expenses was reasonably necessary [see Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 478-479, 169 P.3d 889] . For this reason, few employers use the actual expense method to determine reimbursement for work-required use of employees' own automobiles. Instead, many employers use the "mileage reimbursement method," under which, the employee need only keep a record of the miles driven to perform job duties, and the employer reimburses the employee a predetermined amount per mile. Many employers use the mileage rate calculated by the Internal Revenue Service based on national average expenses for fuel, maintenance, repairs, depreciation, and insurance [see Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479, 169 P.3d 889] . The mileage reimbursement method is inherently less accurate than the actual expense method, and if the employee can show that the reimbursement amount paid as a mileage reimbursement is less than the actual expenses necessarily incurred, the employer must make up the difference [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-480, 169 P.3d 889] .

Another method of reimbursement is to use a lump-sum payment. Under this method, the employee need not submit any information; the employer simply pays a fixed amount as reimbursement for the employee's recurring automobile expenses (or other expenses subject to reimbursement). A lump-sum reimbursement may take various forms and have various labels, such as "per diem" or (in the automobile-reimbursement context) "car allowance" or "gas stipend." Lump-sum reimbursement is permissible so long as the amount paid is sufficient to provide full reimbursement for actual expenses necessarily incurred. Thus, if the employee can show that the lump sum is less than the actual expenses necessarily incurred, the employer must make up the difference [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 480-481, 169 P.3d 889] . A lump-sum reimbursement need not be segregated from the employee's other compensation and may take the form of an increase to the employee's base salary or commissions, so long as the employer provides a method or formula to identify what part of the combined compensation amount is intended to provide expense reimbursement [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 481-484, 169 P.3d 889] . For a form of a contractual provision calling for lump-sum reimbursement of business expenses, see § 85.412.

If the employee brings an action against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification, an award for the reimbursement of the employee's expenditures or losses must carry interest at the same rate as judgments in civil actions, accruing from the date on which the employee incurred the expenditures or losses [Lab. Code § 2802(b)]. For further discussion, see § 85.460[1][b].

These statutory obligations cannot be waived by the parties [Lab. Code § 2804]. Thus, an agreement between an employer and employee for reimbursement by a method that approximates the employee's actual expenses (e.g., a mileage reimbursement or a lump-sum reimbursement) does not relieve the employer of the statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement, and such an agreement does not preclude the employee from suing to recover full reimbursement [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-481, 169 P.3d 889] . A contract provision in which an employee releases "any and all" claims against the employer does not encompass nonwaivable statutory protections such as the employee indemnity protection described above [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 950-955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 292-296, 189 P.3d 285 (because provision releasing "any and all" claims does not waive employee's right to indemnity under Lab. Code § 2802(a), it is not void under Lab. Code § 2804)].

§ 85.20 Nature of Employment Contracts

[1] Applicable Law

An "employment contract" is a contract by which an employer engages an employee to do something for the benefit of the employer or a third person [Lab. Code § 2750; see Civ. Code § 1549 ("contract" is an agreement to do or not do something)]. Employment contracts give rise to legally enforceable obligations [see Civ. Code §§ 1427, 1428] and are governed by the rules applicable to any other type of contract [Reynolds Elec. Etc. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 429, 433, 55 Cal. Rptr. 248, 421 P.2d 96] . For discussion of contract requirements generally, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

The rules for the interpretation of contracts generally apply to the interpretation of employment contracts [Restatement (Second) of Agency § 32]. An employment contract is considered to be made in the light of, and to incorporate, the provisions of existing law [Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Superior Court (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 481, 486, 171 P.2d 21] . Terms will be implied in an express employment contract only when (1) the express terms of the contract fail to cover necessary matters, so that the contract cannot be effectively performed in the absence of the implied term; and (2) the term sought to be implied is not inconsistent with an express term of the contract [Stevens v. National Broadcasting Co. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 886, 890, 76 Cal. Rptr. 106] .

[2] Express and Implied Contracts

An employment contract is either express or implied [see Civ. Code § 1619]. An express employment contract is one whose terms are expressed in words [Civ. Code § 1620], either in writing or orally [see Civ. Code § 1622; see also § 85.22]. An implied contract is one the existence and terms of which are manifested by conduct [Civ. Code § 1621]. Given the fundamental nature of the employment relationship, and the fact that its essential elements [see § 85.21[2]] are such that they are ordinarily agreed on at the commencement of employment rather than manifested solely by conduct, an employment contract that was entirely implied would be highly unusual. A far more common situation is the existence of implied terms in an express oral or written employment contract.

An implied contract must be founded on the agreement of the parties as ascertained from the circumstances. The law implies that a party made such an agreement as, under the circumstances, he or she should have made, applying the principles of honesty, justice, and fairness [Silva v. Providence Hospital of Oakland (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 762, 773, 97 P.2d 798 (dictum)]. An implied agreement on a contract term may be shown by the acts and conduct of the parties, interpreted in the light of the subject matter and the surrounding circumstances [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 (implied promise of continued employment); see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 680, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . For example, in determining whether the parties have impliedly promised that employment will continue absent good cause to terminate it, such facts as the personnel policies or practices of the employer or the industry, the employee's length of service, any conduct of the employer assuring the employee of continued employment or indicating the contrary, any promotions or praise given the employee, any criticism by the employer, and any evidence tending to negate such an implied promise can be considered [Youngman v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 240, 246-247, 74 Cal. Rptr. 398, 449 P.2d 462 ; Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 680-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; but see Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 (raises and promotions natural incidents of employment over a substantial length of time and do not in themselves change "at-will" status to an agreement to discharge only for cause)].

[3] Term of Contract

Employment contracts are categorized as being either for a specified term or "at will." Employment for a specified term is employment for a designated period greater than one month [Lab. Code § 2922].

A specified-term contract can provide for employment for any length of time. However, employment contracts for specified terms usually are made for periods of less than seven years, because generally no contract to render personal services (other than a contract of apprenticeship) can be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the commencement of service under it [Lab. Code § 2855]. If the contract is for personal services in the production of phonorecords in which sound is first fixed (that is, if the employee is a recording artist), the seven-year limit on enforcement does not apply until the employee gives the employer written notice that the employee will no longer render service after a stated date [Lab. Code § 2855(b)(1); see Code Civ. Proc § 1020 (service of notice); 17 U.S.C. § 101]. For detailed coverage of recording industry contracts, see Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts .

[b] "At-Will" Contract

The great majority of employment contracts have no specified term. Such a contract is presumed to be terminable at the will of either party on notice to the other [Lab. Code § 2922]. "Termination at will" means that either party can terminate the employment for any reason or no reason at all, provided that the reason is not in violation of law [Wilson v. Red Bluff Daily News (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 87, 90 ; see also Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1147-1154, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 294-300, 95 P.3d 513 (although third party generally incurs no liability to employer for soliciting or hiring at-will employee, liability may be imposed if third party engaged in independently wrongful act that induced at-will employee to leave employer); cf. Toscano v. Greene Music (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 685, 694-695, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (employee may recover damages under equitable theory of promissory estoppel against third party who induces employee to terminate at-will employment in reliance on unfulfilled job offer)].

The employment of a corporate officer without a specified term of employment is subject to essentially the same at-will presumption that applies to employees generally [Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108-1110, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; see Corp. Code § 312(b)]. A corporation retains the authority to enforce at-will employment contract provisions through bylaws, resolutions, and express contracts with individual officers [Bell v. Superior Court

The power to unilaterally terminate an at-will employment contract includes the power to modify the terms of the contract, for example, by demoting the employee or reducing the employee's wage. In effect, any such modification is a termination of the original contract and an offer of a new, unilateral employment contract under the modified terms [DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634-639, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300] .

The presumption that a contract with no specific term is terminable at will may be overcome by evidence that the parties expressly or impliedly agreed the employer's power to terminate would be limited in some way, such as employment for an indefinite term with a requirement that termination can be based only on good cause [DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 ; see Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 324-326, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] . Whether the parties have made an implied contract not to terminate except for good cause is a question of fact [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] .

A number of factors are considered when ascertaining the existence and content of an employment agreement and whether the employee had a reasonable expectation that he or she would not be discharged except for cause. Those factors include consideration; any express contract terms; the employer's personnel policies and practices, including written employee handbooks; the employee's length of service; the entire relationship of the parties, including the employer's actions or communications reflecting assurances of continued employment; and industry practices [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Thus, for example, facts establishing lengthy duration of employment; proper performance; commensurate compensation; the existence of an implied agreement against termination in the absence of good cause based on longevity, promotions, praise, pay increases and bonuses; and the employer's policy acknowledging an obligation to deal fairly and in good faith have been held to be sufficient to overcome the presumption of at-will employment [Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 ; Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1110-1111, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787] .

On the other hand, at least two courts of appeal have held that several years of favorable performance evaluations, merit-based salary increases, and general assurances that the employee has a future with the company are insufficient to create a triable issue of fact as to whether there is an implicit agreement to change the at-will nature of employment [Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield W., Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 798, 817-819, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 (summary judgment for employer was appropriate, despite evidence offered by employee, based on statutory presumption and express statement of at-will employment in employee handbook); Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1275-1277, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (positive performance reviews, commendations, salary increases, and vague assurances of future employment were simply natural occurrences for long-time employee, and were insufficient to overcome statutory presumption, which was supported by express statements of at-will employment in employee handbook and in employee's signed job application)]. Similarly, an employer's grant of a bonus payable on a specified future date, provided the employee is still employed on that date, does not constitute a promise of continued employment [Kelly v. Stamps.com, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1102-1103, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240] . In such a situation, however, if the employer terminates the at-will employment for an unlawfully discriminatory reason, the employee may claim breach of the promise to pay the bonus, with the employee's performance excused because of the discriminatory termination [Kelly v. Stamps.com, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1103, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240] .

Although the statutory presumption of at-will employment [Lab. Code § 2922] may be overcome by an implied agreement, the parties cannot have a valid express contract and a valid implied contract that contradict each other. The express term is controlling even if it is not contained in an integrated contract. For example, in one case a written employment agreement clearly and unambiguously stated that the employment was at will and that only an affirmative act by the employer's board of directors could change the at-will nature of the employment. The court of appeal held that any contrary oral statements by the employee's supervisor could not create an implied agreement in the face of the written provision directly addressing that issue. That result was not changed by the fact that the supervisor's oral assurances were made subsequent to the signing of the written agreement. The supervisor's assurances could not serve as a modification of the contract, because the written agreement expressly limited the manner in which modifications could be made [Starzynski v. Capital Pub. Radio, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 33, 37-39, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 ; see Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 943-947, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 (express contractual provision for at-will employment precludes existence of implied agreement to contrary)]. Similarly, another court of appeal held that an express contractual provision that the employer "is an 'at will' employer" is sufficient to establish at-will employment, and the provision cannot be overcome by proof of implied contrary understanding. Moreover, the contract need not expressly state that the employee is "at will" or that the employer can fire the employee without good cause [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603-605, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565].

An employment contract stating that the employment is "at will" and terminable "at any time" unambiguously creates an at-will employment relationship, even if it does not also state that termination can be without cause. Because there is no ambiguity about the at-will nature of the employment, additional contractual provisions regarding a probationary period and annual reviews ordinarily will not expressly or impliedly create a right to be terminated only for cause [Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668] .

If the employment contract expressly provides for at-will employment, an action for fraudulent inducement of an employment contract may not be maintained on the basis of an alleged false representation regarding the duration of employment; in such a case the employee will be unable to show justifiable reliance on the false representation [Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668] . However, the employee may have a cause of action for fraudulent inducement to accept employment based on false representations about other aspects of the employment, such as compensation terms [Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 606, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565] .

The ability to terminate an employment contract at will is limited by statute in some cases and emerging public policy considerations in others. For discussion, see § 85.24[2].

§ 85.21 Essential Elements of Employment Contract

[1] Formation of Contract

Both offer and acceptance are essential to the formation of employment contracts [see Reynolds Elec. Etc. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 429, 433, 55 Cal. Rptr. 248, 421 P.2d 96] . Like other types of contracts, they must be consented to by parties capable of contracting [see Civ. Code §§ 1556-1558 (capacity of parties), 1565-1589 (consent)] and have a lawful object [see Civ. Code §§ 1595-1599] among other matters [see Civ. Code § 1550]. In addition, sufficient consideration [see Civ. Code §§ 1605-1615] is essential [Civ. Code § 1550]. In some cases, an employment contract must be written to be valid; for further discussion of this issue, see § 85.22.

PRACTICE TIP:
Employers should proceed with caution in bringing actions against employees for breach of contract. Employees who would not otherwise be likely to bring a wrongful termination, discrimination, or tort claim may be induced to bring such claims in their defense. The result is a much more expensive suit than a straightforward breach of contract claim. Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst.

[2] Essential Terms

An employment contract need not detail every condition of the employment. The fact that the parties fail to provide for particular terms and conditions of the employer-employee relationship does not render the contract invalid for uncertainty. The essential terms of an employment contract are the parties, the time and place of employment, the compensation, and the general category of employment (i.e., the duties of the employee) [Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1967) 68 Cal. 2d 7, 17, 64 Cal. Rptr. 440, 434 P.2d 992 (oral agreement)].

[3] Typical Employment Contract Provisions

An employment contract that contains only the essential terms [see [2], above] would not be a very useful document. In additional to the essential terms, provisions typically used in employment contracts to govern the employer-employee relationship can be generally characterized as relating to the following:

- Term of employment--defining the period of employment and including the mutual agreement of the parties to employ and to be employed.

- Duties of the employee--including the employee's job title, a description of his or her duties, provisions relating to change of duties, change in place of performance of duties, time required to be spent in performance of duties, manner of performance, uniqueness of the employee's services, and provisions limiting the employee's authority (such as provisions prohibiting the employee from binding the employer without the employer's written consent).

- Compensation of the employee--providing not only for a base salary or commission or both, sick pay, paid vacations and leaves of absence, death benefits, withholding of taxes and other deductions, and payment of deferred compensation, but also for changes in the rate of compensation either upon periodic review, in the form of cost of living increases, or computed under other formulae.

- Incentives--including both short-term and long-term, such as annual stock, cash, or other bonus plans; profit-sharing plans; stock options; appreciation rights; performance share awards; and other incentives, such as an option permitting the employee to purchase the employer's business under specified conditions.

- Employee benefits--fringe benefits such as medical, dental, and life insurance, and use of company-provided transportation or facilities.

- Reimbursement of expenses incurred by the employee--provisions governing reimbursement of business expenses and moving expenses paid or incurred by the employee.

- Property rights of the parties--provisions governing the rights of the parties to inventions, patents, trade secrets, customer lists, and other property, and preserving confidential information.

- Obligations of the employer--provisions describing any obligation that the parties agree should be imposed on the employer other than for employee compensation.

- Obligations of the employee--including noncompetition obligations, provisions governing continued employment beyond the initial contractual period, and protecting the employer against losses caused by the employee.

- Termination of employment--provisions detailing grounds for termination for cause (including death or disability, for example), permitting termination without cause (i.e., at-will employment), or governing voluntary termination by the employee; and provisions specifying the effect of termination (including its effect on employee compensation and rights to severance pay). Although an employment is presumed to be terminable at the will of either party unless otherwise agreed [Lab. Code § 2922], the better practice is to include an express provision preserving the right to terminate at will, at any time and without cause, if that is what the parties intend [cf. Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668 (employment contract stating that employment was "at will" and terminable "at any time" unambiguously created at-will employment relationship, even though it did not also state that termination could be without cause)].

- Resolution of disputes--provisions for arbitration, mediation, or another form of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) of all or only specifically defined disputes, waiver of court enforcement of matters subject to ADR, and reservation of employer's right to an injunction in disputes involving competitive activities or breach of confidentiality by the employee. For detailed coverage of arbitration, mediation, and other types of ADR, including contractual provisions for each type of ADR, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 30, Alternative Dispute Resolution , through Ch. 38, Reference (Matthew Bender).

The fact that an employment contract which contains the essential elements [see [2], above] leaves other terms unstated does not render the contract invalid for uncertainty. Later agreement on the unspecified terms does not rescind the original contract; a later alteration of the details of a contract which leaves undisturbed its general purpose is a modification rather than a rescission of the contract [Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1967) 68 Cal. 2d 7, 17, 64 Cal. Rptr. 440, 434 P.2d 992 (oral agreement)].

Nevertheless, a properly drafted employment contract should include specific provisions regarding any situation that might reasonably be expected to arise. Doing this will tend to result in better employer-employee relations by reducing misunderstandings over the terms of the employment, and may help avoid the expenses of litigation.

[5] Special Requirements for Minor's Employment Contract

Although minors can enter into employment contracts, most such contracts are subject to the minor's power to disaffirm them [see Fam. Code § 6700] either before majority or within a reasonable time afterwards [Fam. Code § 6710]. However, a minor cannot disaffirm a contract to render any of the following types of services if the contract has been approved by the superior court of the county in which the minor resides or is employed or in which any party to the contract has its principal California office [see Fam. Code §§ 6750, 6751]:

- Artistic or creative services (rendered either directly or through a third party such a personal services corporation) as an actor, actress, dancer, musician, comedian, singer, stunt person, voice-over artist, or other performer or entertainer, or as a songwriter, musical producer or arranger, writer, director, producer, production executive, choreographer, composer, conductor, or designer [Fam. Code § 6750(a)(1)].

- Services as a participant or player in a sport [Fam. Code § 6750(a)(3)].

If the minor is employed or agrees to render any of the foregoing services directly for any person or entity, that person or entity is considered the minor's employer [Fam. Code § 6750(b)(1)]. If the minor's services are being rendered through a third-party individual or personal services corporation (a "loan-out company"), the person or entity to which that third party is providing the minor's services is considered the minor's employer [Fam. Code § 6750(b)(2)]. If the minor renders services as an extra, background performer, or in a similar capacity through an agency or service that provides one or more of those performers for a fee (a "casting agency"), the agency or service is considered the minor's employer [Fam. Code § 6750(b)(3)].

A parent or guardian entitled to the physical custody, care, and control of a minor entering into one of these contracts must provide a certified copy of the minor's birth certificate to the other parties to the contract [Fam. Code § 6752(a) (guardian must also provide certified copy of court document appointing him or her as minor's legal guardian)]. Fifteen percent of the minor's gross earnings under such a contract must be set aside by the employer in trust for the benefit of the minor (a "Coogan Trust Account") [Fam. Code §§ 6752(b)-(i), 6753; see Fam. Code § 6750(c) (minor's "gross earnings" defined)].

For forms used in petitioning for court approval of a contract for the services of a minor [see Fam. Code § 6751(b)], see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 365, Minors: Contract Actions, §§ 365.180, 365.181 (Matthew Bender).

Minors must obtain work permits prior to full-time [Educ. Code §§ 49130-49135] or part-time [Educ. Code §§ 49110-49119] employment [but see Lab. Code §§ 1308, 1310 (employment of minors in entertainment and allied industries)]. Permits to employ are also required [see Educ. Code §§ 49110, 49111, 49113, 49130]. In general, the employment of a minor cannot supplant compulsory school attendance [see Educ. Code §§ 48200, 48400; Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1]. For coverage of the law governing the employment of minors, the work permit requirements, minors' involvement in workers' compensation proceedings, and state and federal standards for minors' working conditions, see Ch. 100B, Contracts and Employment of Minors .

[1] Deciding Whether to Have Written Employment Contract

The general rule is that an employment contract must be in writing if application of the statute of frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] would render it invalid [see [2], below]. Certain types of commission contracts must also be in writing [Lab. Code § 2751; see [3], below]. Moreover, one way to satisfy the "equal dignities rule," which requires that any employee who acts as an agent for the employer must have written authority to enter into a contract that is legally required to be written [Civ. Code § 2309], is to include such authority in a written employment contract [see [4], below].

Because at-will employment contracts generally are not within the statute of frauds [White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345] , there is usually no need for rank-and-file employees to have individual written employment contracts. In such cases, the usual procedure is for the employee to sign an acknowledgment of "at-will" status and any applicable nondisclosure agreements [see §§ 85.440, 85.510 (forms)]. Traditionally, complete written employment agreements have been used for upper level employees and technical staff, whose compensation arrangements and other employment terms are relatively complex and individualized. It is also generally advisable that any temporary employees (i.e., those with a limited term of employment) sign employment agreements, to ensure that there is no confusion about the temporary nature of their employment.

[2] Statute of Frauds

[a] Contract Not to Be Performed Within One Year

A contract that by its terms is not to be performed within a year from the time of its making is invalid ("within the statute of frauds") unless the contract or a memorandum thereof is in writing and signed by the party to be charged, or by that party's agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); but see Civ. Code § 1624(b) ("qualified financial contract," as defined, need not be in writing if certain requirements are met)]. However, an oral employment agreement is valid ("not within the statute of frauds") unless, under its terms, the employee cannot possibly perform it completely within one year from the making of the contract [see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 343, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345] .

If a termination of employment is authorized by the contract language used by the parties, a termination is permissible and the exercise of the right of termination is not a breach of the contract. If a termination is not a contract breach, it is performance; if the contract can be terminated within one year, the contract is outside the statute of frauds [Plumlee v. Poag (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 541, 551, 198 Cal. Rptr. 66 ; see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal.2d 336, 343-344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345] . This narrow interpretation of the statute of frauds has been affirmed by the California Supreme Court. The court stated that to bring an employment contract within the statute of frauds, the contract must appear to be necessarily incapable of performance within one year. The applicability of the statute of frauds must be analyzed prospectively, based on the intentions of the parties and the terms of the agreement at the time when the agreement was made [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 674-675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

The foregoing rule removes most at-will employment contracts from the statute of frauds. An oral contract of employment that the parties agreed could be terminated at will by either party but that otherwise would have required more than one year to perform has been held not within the statute and hence enforceable because it was terminable at any time. Similarly, an oral contract for "permanent" employment is not within the statute of frauds and thus is valid since it can conceivably be performed within one year by termination at the will of either party [White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345].

A contingency in an oral agreement of employment for one year that may extend the period of employment for more than one year does not invalidate the contract under the statute. Hence, an oral agreement between an employer and its employee for the latter's services for one year, in which the parties also agreed that the employer was to have an option to extend the contract for additional terms of one year each for six successive years at increasing rates of compensation, has been held enforceable [Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 753, 759, 161 P.2d 217] .

[b] Contract Involving Sale or Purchase of Real Estate

An agreement authorizing or employing an agent to purchase or sell real estate for compensation or a commission comes within the statute of frauds and is unenforceable unless it is in writing or there is the prescribed note or memorandum [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4); see Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 566, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170] . An agreement for the sale of real property or for leasing real property for a period longer than one year, if made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, is invalid unless the agent's authority is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3)]. This requirement may be important, for example, in the case of an employee who is authorized to represent an employer with respect to the execution of leases or deeds.

[3] Certain Commission Contracts

When an employer who does not have a permanent and fixed place of business in California enters into an employment contract for services to be rendered in California by the employee and the method of compensating the employee involves commissions, the contract must be in writing and must set forth the method by which the commissions are computed and paid. Moreover, the employer must give the employee involved a signed copy of the contract and obtain a receipt therefor from the employee. "Commission," for this purpose, does not include productivity bonuses or bonus and profit-sharing plans, unless there has been an offer by the employer to pay a fixed percentage of sales or profits as compensation for work to be performed [Lab. Code § 2751]. Any employer who fails to comply with these requirements is liable to the employee in a civil action for triple damages [Lab. Code § 2752].

[4] Authority to Enter Into Contracts That Must Be Written

Under the "equal dignities" rule, the authority of an agent to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing [Civ. Code § 2309]. Although any form of valid written authority will suffice, one method of satisfying this requirement is to provide such authority in the employment contract.

The equal dignities rule requires written authority if the employee will be authorized to enter into contracts on behalf of the employer that cannot by their terms be performed within a year from the making of the contract [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); but see Civ. Code § 1624(b) ("qualified financial contract," as defined, need not be in writing if certain requirements are met)] or involve a special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another Civ. Code § 1624(a)(2); but see Civ. Code § 2794 (exceptions)]. Written authority is also required if the employee will enter into contracts on behalf of the employer that involve leases for periods longer than one year or sales of real property or interests therein [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3), (4)] or authorize or employ an agent to buy or sell real estate for compensation or a commission [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)], or if the contract is not to be performed within the promisor's lifetime [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(5)]. Written authority is necessary if the employee will enter into contracts on behalf of the employer that constitute agreement by a real estate purchaser to pay a debt secured by the property [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(6)] or if the contract is for the sale of goods for a price of $500 or more [see Com. Code § 2201; but see Com. Code § 2201(4) ("qualified financial contract," as defined in Civ. Code § 1624(b), need not be in writing if certain requirements are met)] or for the payment of commissions by an out-of-state employer [see Lab. Code § 2751]. Additionally, certain contracts, promises, undertakings, or commitments to lend money or to grant or extend credit, in an amount greater than $100,000, must be in writing [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(7); see § 85.111].

An initial lack of written authority can be cured by a written ratification [see Civ. Code § 2310; see also McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 256 n.5, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902] . Since it is a relatively simple matter for an employer to ratify the actions of an employee after the fact, the "equal dignities rule" has been invoked primarily by employers attempting to disavow contracts entered into on their behalf by their employees rather than by third parties attempting to invalidate such contracts. Nevertheless, as a matter of prudent practice, counsel should advise an employer-client either to use employment agreements that specify the extent of the employee's authority to execute contracts and bind the employer, or to provide another form of written authorization. Failure to do this can lead to uncertainty over the employee's authority on the part of third parties as well as the employee.

An employer may be estopped to raise the equal dignities rule against a contracting third party if the employer, by its own conduct, lulls the third party into believing that the person acting on its behalf had written authority to enter the contract, or had no need of written authority [see Kerner v. Hughes Tool Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 924, 934, 128 Cal. Rptr. 839] . The equal dignities rule also does not apply when the agent's authority is ministerial rather than discretionary, when the agent signs the contract in the presence and at the direction of the principal, or when the agent is an executive officer of the principal [see McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 256 n.5, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902] .

[5] Estoppel to Assert Statute of Frauds

Under the doctrine of promissory estoppel, a promise that the promisor should reasonably expect to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on the part of the promisee and that does induce such action or forbearance is binding if injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise [see Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 413, 333 P.2d 757] . The doctrine precludes reliance on the statute of frauds as a defense against an oral contract of employment when the promisor represents by words or conduct that he or she will stand by his or her oral agreement and the promisee, in reliance on the representation, changes his or her position to his or her detriment [Associated Creditors' Agency v. Haley Land Co. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 610, 617, 49 Cal. Rptr. 1 (oral agreement to transfer liquor license if promisee would sell its bar and work in promisor's premises)].

§ 85.23 Enforcement of Employment Contract

[1] Enforcement by Employer

No contract to render personal service (other than a contract of apprenticeship) may be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the commencement of service under the contract [Lab. Code § 2855(a); see Lab. Code § 2855(b) (exception for certain recording industry contracts); see also Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts]. Even if otherwise enforceable, a contract to render personal services is generally not enforceable by specific performance [Civ. Code § 3390(1), (2)]. However, a court may grant an injunction to prevent the breach of a contract to perform a service of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it peculiar value, and the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law, provided that the agreed minimum compensation meets statutory requirements [see Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)].

[2] Enforcement by Employee

[a] Action for Violation of Contract

An employee whose employer has violated or threatens to violate the terms of the employment contract may seek rescission of the contract and recovery in quantum meruit of the reasonable value of past services less any amounts received from the employer. In such a case, the employee's recovery may exceed the contractual compensation, except that for services for which compensation is apportioned by the contract, the employee is entitled to receive the contractual compensation and no more [Lessing v. Gibbons (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 598, 607, 45 P.2d 258] . The employee may also bring an action for damages, the proper amount of which is the contractual compensation for the entire period of service less the amount which the employee has earned or with reasonable effort might have earned from other employment [Downs v. Sherry (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5, 202 P.2d 101] .

An unpaid employee or former employee has a cause of action for recovery of the amount due [Percival v. National Drama Corp. (1919) 181 Cal. 631, 633, 185 P. 972 ; Haggerty v. Warner (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 468, 475, 252 P.2d 373 ; see Lab. Code § 218 (individual wage claimant may file civil action to recover wages due, either directly or through assignee)]. An employer must pay all compensation that has been earned up to the time that the employer-employee relationship is terminated [Lab. Code §§ 201, 202; see Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 82-94, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218 (employee is "discharged" for purposes of Lab. Code § 201 not only when employee is involuntarily terminated from ongoing employment relationship, but also when employee is released after completing particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired)] without setoff for any debts owed by the employee [Barnhill v. Robert Saunders & Co. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6, 177 Cal. Rptr. 803] . If the employee is entitled to share in profits under the terms of the employment contract, the employer has a duty to account to the employee for that share [Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 751, 177 P.2d 931 ; see Restatement (Second) of Agency §§ 455-463].

In addition to the foregoing amounts, an employee may be entitled to double damages. It is a misdemeanor for any person to directly or indirectly influence, persuade, or engage another to change from one place to another (to, from, or within California) for employment purposes by means of knowingly false representations concerning, for example, the kind, character, existence, or duration of work or the amount of compensation [Lab. Code §§ 970, 971]. The employee may recover an award of double the damages caused by a misrepresentation that violates this prohibition [Lab. Code § 972; see Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1521-1523, 273 Cal. Rptr. 296 , disapproved on other grounds by Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 394, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668] .

In any action brought for the nonpayment of wages, the court must award interest on all due and unpaid wages, at an annual rate of 10 percent, accruing from the date the wages were due and payable [Lab. Code § 218.6; see Civ. Code § 3289(b)]. The statute imposing this interest requirement is to be applied retroactively; thus, interest must be awarded at the statutory rate even as to unpaid wages that became payable before the statute was enacted [Bell v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1146-1150, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306 ; see Lab. Code § 218.6 (eff. Jan. 1, 2001)].

In an action brought by an employee or former employee to recover unpaid wages, fringe benefits, or health and welfare or pension contributions, the court generally must award the prevailing party reasonable attorneys' fees and costs, if any party has requested attorneys' fees and costs at the initiation of the action [Lab. Code § 218.5; see On-Line Power, Inc. v. David Mazur (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 1085-1086, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 698 (fees under Lab. Code § 218.5 are available not just in action to recover unpaid hourly wages, but also in action by executive to recover unpaid salary); see also Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 609-610, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 (interpreting similar "prevailing party" language in Gov. Code § 12965(b) as authorizing fee award to plaintiff who does not obtain favorable judgment but whose lawsuit was catalyst motivating defendant to provide primary relief sought)]. This provision does not apply, however, in an action to recover the unpaid balance of the legal minimum wage or overtime compensation. Rather, in an action for minimum wages or overtime pay, a prevailing employee is entitled to attorneys' fees and costs, but if the employer prevails, the employer has no right to recover attorneys' fees [Lab. Code §§ 218.5, 1194(a); Earley v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1420, 1426-1431, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 57] . Punitive damages are not available, however, for a violation of the wage laws [see Brewer v. Premier Golf Props. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1243, 1252, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 225 ("[P]unitive damages are not recoverable when liability is premised solely on the employer's violation of the Labor Code statutes that regulate meal and rest breaks, pay stubs, and minimum wage laws.")].

Aside from the foregoing provisions, under the Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 [see Lab. Code § 2698 et seq.], a civil penalty to be assessed and collected for a violation of the Labor Code [see Lab. Code § 2699.5; see, e.g., Lab. Code § 2699 (civil penalty for failure to pay less than minimum wage)] may be recovered through a civil action brought by an aggrieved employee on behalf of himself or herself and other current or former employees [Lab. Code § 2699(a); see Lab. Code § 2699.3 (procedures for employee's civil action); see Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 1001-1005, 195 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937 (plaintiff has standing to bring action under Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 only if plaintiff suffered injury from unlawful action, so labor union lacks standing to sue as assignee or association of injured members); see also Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 975, 980-988, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 (employee's representative action under Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 need not satisfy class-action requirements)]. Any employee who prevails in such an action will be entitled to an award of reasonable attorney's fees and costs, and the employee will ordinarily be entitled to retain 25 percent of any civil penalties recovered [Lab. Code § 2699(g), (i), (j)]. An enforcement action under this provision may be combined with other remedies the employee may have under state or federal law [Lab. Code § 2699(g)].

[c] Claim Filed With Labor Commissioner

An employee who has not been paid wages may file a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, which is headed by the Labor Commissioner [Lab. Code § 98]. The Labor Commissioner may investigate the claim, conduct a hearing, and make an award [Lab. Code §§ 98, 98.1]. If the award is not appealed, the superior court may enter judgment on the award [Lab. Code § 98.2(d), (e)]. If the award is appealed to the superior court, the matter will be tried by the court de novo [Lab. Code § 98.2(a)]. A wage claimant's right to appeal and obtain a de novo trial applies whenever the Labor Commissioner has conducted a hearing on the wage claim (sometimes called a "Berman" hearing), even if the commissioner's award consists of a dismissal of the wage claim for lack of jurisdiction, based on a finding that the claimant is not an employee. Under the statutory scheme, the commissioner's refusal to accept a wage claim in the first instance would not be subject to appeal, and the claimant's remedy in such a case would be to file a civil lawsuit rather than an appeal. However, such a summary dismissal can be made by the commissioner only within 30 days after the filing of the wage claim; thereafter, the commissioner must conduct a Berman hearing and issue an order, decision or award that will be subject to de novo appeal [Post v. Palo/Haklar & Associates (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 942, 948-951, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671, 4 P.3d 928 ; see Lab. Code §§ 98, 98.1, 98.2(a)].

If the employer appeals the commissioner's award to the superior court, the employer must post an appeal bond in the amount of the award [Lab. Code § 98.2(b)]. On the employer's appeal, the commissioner will provide counsel for the employee at the de novo trial, if the employee is not contesting any part of the award and cannot afford counsel [Lab. Code § 98.4]. At the de novo trial, the court has discretion to allow the employee to raise new wage claims not raised in the Berman hearing. In deciding whether to allow such new claims, the trial court will weigh considerations such as whether the new claims are sufficiently related to the claims raised before the Labor Commissioner, whether the interests of judicial economy will be served, and whether the employer will be prejudiced [Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Prods., Inc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1094, 1118] . Similarly, the employer is not bound by the defenses it raised in the Berman hearing, and it may abandon, change, or add defenses not raised before the Labor Commissioner [Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Prods., Inc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1094, 1118 ; Jones v. Basich (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518-519, 222 Cal. Rptr. 26] .

If the party that sought review in superior court is unsuccessful at the de novo trial, the superior court must order that party to pay the costs and attorneys' fees incurred by the other parties [Lab. Code § 98.2(c); Lolley v. Campbell (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 367, 372-379, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571, 48 P.3d 1128 (indigent employee represented without charge by Labor Commissioner has nevertheless "incurred" fees within meaning of Lab. Code § 98.2(c))]. For this purpose, an employee is "successful" at the de novo trial if the court awards an amount greater than zero [Lab. Code § 98.2(c) (legislative intent to overrule Smith v. Rae-Venter Law Group (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 345, 370, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516, 58 P.3d 367 , which held that "successful" appellant must obtain judgment more favorable than administrative award)]. The statute authorizing the recovery of attorney's fees incurred in a "civil action" for unpaid minimum wages or legal overtime compensation [see Lab. Code § 1194(a)] does not apply in the context of an administrative Berman hearing, which is not a "civil action" [Sampson v. Parking Serv. 2000 Com, Inc. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 212, 217-230, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595 (civil action is one filed in court)].

The Labor Commissioner may also prosecute a civil action to recover wages on behalf of an employee who cannot afford counsel [Lab. Code § 98.3(a)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Employment Contracts

§ 85.24 Termination of Employment Contract

[1] Contract for Specified Term

Any employment contract for a specified term is terminated by expiration of the term stated in the contract [Lab. Code § 2920]. A premature termination may be justified at any time that the employee commits a willful breach of duty in the course of his or her employment, habitually neglects his or her duty, or demonstrates continued incapacity to perform it [Lab. Code § 2924]. In addition, termination of such a contract can be justified if the contract specifies the conditions under which termination can occur and those conditions do occur [see R.J. Cardinal Co. v. Ritchie (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 124, 143, 32 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; see also Pecarovich v. Becker (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 309, 317-318, 248 P.2d 123] .

If premature and unjustified termination takes place, since the employment relationship is contractual [Lab. Code § 2750; see § 85.20], the wrongfully discharged employee may sue for damages for breach of contract [see Westwater v. Grace Church (1903) 140 Cal. 339, 341, 73 P. 1055] .

[2] Contract at Will

[a] Generally Terminable for Any or No Reason

An employment contract that has no specified term is presumed to be terminable at the will of either party on notice to the other [Lab. Code § 2922; see § 85.20[3][b]]. However, the fact that an employment contract is terminable at will does not give the employer the absolute right to terminate it in all cases. Restrictions on the employer's right to terminate the contract may be imposed by statute [see [b], below], by public policy [see [c], below], or by express or implied contractual provisions [see [d], below].

[b] Statutory Limitations on Terminability

A number of statutes expressly prohibit discharge or discipline of an employee on various specific grounds. For example, under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], an employer generally may not discharge an employee based on factors such as race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation (or based on a perception that an employee has, or is associated with one who has, any of those characteristics) [Gov. Code §§ 12926(m), 12940(a); see Gov. Code § 12941 (use of salary as criterion when terminating employees may constitute age discrimination if use of that criterion adversely affects older workers)]. For purposes of FEHA antidiscrimination provisions, "age" refers to age 40 or above [Gov. Code § 12926(b)]. "Sex" includes, but is not limited to, pregnancy, childbirth, medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth, and gender [Gov. Code § 12926(p)]. "Gender" means an employee's or applicant's actual sex or the employer's perception of the employee's or applicant's sex, including the employer's perception of the employee's or applicant's identity, appearance, or behavior, whether or not that identity, appearance, or behavior is different from that traditionally associated with the employee's or applicant's sex at birth [Gov. Code § 12926(p); Penal Code § 422.76]. However, FEHA does not prevent an employer from requiring an employee to adhere to reasonable workplace appearance, grooming, and dress standards that are not precluded by other provisions of state or federal law, as long as the employer allows an employee to appear or dress consistently with the employee's gender identity [Gov. Code § 12949].

Discrimination in violation of FEHA is an unlawful employment practice that may be enjoined under the Unfair Competition Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.] if it provides the employer with a competitive advantage. For example, an employer that practices age discrimination may have an unfair competitive edge over employers that comply with FEHA. Therefore, an employee who is the victim of age discrimination may sue to enjoin the employer from engaging in unlawful age discrimination [Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 788-790, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477] .

The Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act (CFRA), which is part of FEHA, prohibits covered employers from discharging employees for exercising the right to take family care and medical leave under CFRA [Gov. Code § 12945.2(l)(1); see Dudley v. Department of Transp. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261-265, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (recognizing cause of action for retaliation in violation of CFRA); but see Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 939-943, 118 Cal. Rptr.2d 822 (CFRA's guaranty of reinstatement after family care and medical leave does not preclude employer from terminating employee as part of workforce reduction)]. However, an employer may terminate an employee who misuses leave and is untruthful about it [McDaneld v. Eastern Mun. Water Dist. Bd. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 702, 705-708, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 (employee who took leave to care for father spent substantial amount of leave time playing golf and working on lawn sprinklers)].

An employee may not be discharged for attending jury duty [Lab. Code § 230(a)], for attending court as a witness in compliance with a subpoena or other court order [Lab. Code § 230(b)], or for engaging in political activity [Lab. Code §§ 1101, 1102].

An employer may not discharge an employee who is a victim of domestic violence or sexual assault for taking time off from work to obtain or attempt to obtain judicial relief (such as a temporary restraining order, restraining order, or other injunctive relief) to help ensure the health, safety, or welfare of the victim or his or her child [Lab. Code § 230(c); see Lab. Code § 230(h) ("domestic violence" is defined by Fam. Code § 6211; "sexual assault" is any crime set forth in Penal Code §§ 261, 261.5, 262, 265, 266, 266a, 266b, 266c, 266g, 266j, 267, 269, 273.4, 285, 286, 288, 288a, 288.5, 289, 311.4)]. Further, no employer with 25 or more employees may discharge an employee who is a victim of domestic violence or sexual assault for taking time off from work for any of the following purposes [Lab. Code § 230.1(a)]:

- To seek medical attention for injuries caused by domestic violence or sexual assault;

- To obtain services from a domestic violence shelter, program, or rape crisis center as a result of domestic violence or sexual assault;

- To obtain psychological counseling related to an experience of domestic violence or sexual assault; or

- To participate in safety planning and take other actions to increase safety from future domestic violence or sexual assault, including temporary or permanent relocation.

The right to time off for these purposes may be exercised if the employee gives the employer reasonable advance notice of the intention to take time off. But if advance notice is not feasible, the employee must provide the employer, within a reasonable time after the absence, with a certification (such as a police report or court or medical records) documenting that the employee was a victim of domestic violence or sexual assault or has appeared in court [Lab. Code §§ 230(d), 230.1(b)].

An employer may not discharge an employee for taking time off from work to attend judicial proceedings related to a crime perpetrated against the employee, a member of employee's immediate family, the employee's domestic partner [see Fam. Code § 297 et seq.], or the domestic partner's child, if the crime is a serious or violent felony [see Penal Code §§ 667.5(c), 1193.7(c)] or a violation of a felony provision of law proscribing theft or embezzlement [Lab. Code § 230.2(a), (b), (f), (g)]. For this purpose, the employee's "immediate family" includes the employee's spouse, child, stepchild, brother, stepbrother, sister, stepsister, mother, stepmother, father, and stepfather [Lab. Code § 230.2(a)(1)]. To be entitled to time off for this purpose, the employee must give the employer a copy of the notice of each scheduled proceeding that is provided to the crime victim by the agency responsible for providing notice, unless advance notice is not feasible. If advance notice is not feasible or an unscheduled absence occurs, the employer may not take any action against the employee if the employee, within a reasonable time after the absence, provides the employer with documentation evidencing the judicial proceeding from (1) the court or government agency setting the hearing, (2) the district attorney or prosecuting attorney's office, (3) or the victim/witness office that is advocating on behalf of the victim [Lab. Code § 230.2(c)].

An employer with 50 or more employees may not discharge an employee who is a volunteer firefighter for taking time off to engage in fire or law enforcement training [Lab. Code § 230.4].

An employee who has custody of a child may not be discharged for taking off up to 40 hours a year to participate in the child's school or day-care activities, if the employer has at least 25 employees at the same location [Lab. Code § 230.8].

An employer may not discharge an employee as a result of a single garnishment [Lab. Code § 2929].

An employee may not be discharged for complaining about occupational safety matters [Lab. Code §§ 6310(a)(1), 6311], for instituting or testifying in any proceeding concerning his or her rights [Lab. Code § 6310(a)(2)], or for participating in a lawfully established occupational health and safety committee [Lab. Code § 6310(a)(3); see Lab. Code § 6401.7]. Similarly, an employee may not be discharged or disciplined for reporting or refusing to engage in illegal activity [Lab. Code § 1102.5(a)-(c); see Lab. Code § 1102.5(e) (public employee's disclosure to employing agency qualifies for protection); see also Gardenhire v. Housing Auth. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 236, 241-243, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893] , or for reporting industrial injuries [Lab. Code § 132a].

An employee may not be discharged or subjected to adverse employment action for opposing discriminatory conduct that violates the Fair Employment and Housing Act, or filing a complaint, testifying, or assisting in a formal proceeding relating to such conduct under the Act [Gov. Code § 12940(h)]. Under this provision, for example, an employee's refusal to follow a supervisor's order that he or she reasonably believes to be discriminatory is a protected activity. Accordingly, the employer may not retaliate by discharging the employee or taking an adverse employment action against the employee on the basis of the employee's refusal to follow the order, when the employer knows that the employee believes the order to be discriminatory, even if the employee does not explicitly state that he or she believes the order to be discriminatory [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1043, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123] . In this context, an "adverse employment action" is any action that materially affects the terms and conditions of employment [Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036, 1052-1054, 1059, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 (in determining whether employee has been subjected to treatment that materially affects terms and conditions of employment, it is appropriate to consider totality of circumstances and to consider acts taking place outside limitations period if sufficiently linked to acts within limitations period)].

For a detailed listing and discussion of statutes expressly limiting the grounds for termination and discipline of employees, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

[c] Employee's Action for Wrongful Termination

[i] Basis and Elements of Action

An employer may not terminate an employment contract, even an at-will contract, if doing so would violate public policy [Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 170, 176, n.11, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 ; Petermann v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 188, 344 P.2d 25] . Public policy imposes limits to prevent the threat of termination from resulting in actions taken that are harmful to the public [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 665, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Newman v. Emerson Radio Corp. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 973, 975-976, 258 Cal. Rptr. 592, 772 P.2d 1059 ; Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 172, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330] .

To establish that an employer violated public policy, the plaintiff employee must demonstrate the following:

- The termination implicated a fundamental public policy that is well established, as expressed in a constitutional provision or a statute [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 887-890, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157] . The public policy allegedly violated must derive from constitutional or statutory authority; reliance on judicial or other nonlegislative sources is insufficient to support this cause of action [Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1094, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680] . However, an important public policy embodied in administrative regulations that are authorized by statute is considered to be supported by the statutory provisions [Green v. Ralee Engineering Company (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 71-72, 80-90, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (regulations issued by Federal Aviation Administration pursuant to Federal Aviation Act, 49 U.S.C. § 40101 et seq.)]; and

- The policy involved benefits the public at large, rather than a purely personal or proprietary interest of the particular employer or employee [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 889-890, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 668-670, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

There are four categories of employee conduct that are protected by the fundamental public policy rule [Green v. Ralee Engineering Company (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 76, 80-90, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 ; Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 887-889, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157] :

- Refusing to violate a statute or administrative regulations authorized by statute.

- Performing an obligation imposed by statute or by administrative regulations authorized by statute.

- Exercising a constitutional or statutory right or privilege.

- Reporting an alleged violation of a statute of public importance or of administrative regulations authorized by the statute.

Thus, for example, public policy protects an employee who is terminated because he or she refuses to commit a crime, reports criminal activity, or discloses other illegal, unethical, or unsafe practices [see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 665, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see, e.g., Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 176, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 (employee refused to participate in employer's illegal price fixing)].

Similarly, an employee may not be discharged from a job as an inspector of airplane components in retaliation for complaining to the employer that the employer's inspection practices violated regulations issued by the Federal Aviation Administration pursuant to the Federal Aviation Act [Green v. Ralee Engineering Company (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80-83, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 ; see 49 U.S.C. § 40101 et seq.]. On the other hand, a claim that an employer committed fraud against an employee in discharging the employee does not involve fundamental public policy, since the claim is essentially a private dispute that does not seek to vindicate a broader public interest [Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1186, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8] .

[ii] Limitations on Public Policy

When a plaintiff relies on a statutory prohibition to support a common-law tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, the common-law claim is subject to statutory limitations affecting the nature and scope of the statutory prohibition [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 904, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157] . Thus, a public policy cause of action cannot be stated against an employer if the employer is expressly exempt from the statute on which the public policy is based [Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135-136, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074] . For example, if an employer is exempt from FEHA'S substantive age discrimination prohibition because the employer has fewer than five employees [see Gov. Code §§ 12926(d), 12940(a)], an employee who is terminated because of his or her age cannot base a claim of wrongful discharge on a violation of the public policy embodied in FEHA [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 892-894, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; see LeBourgeois v. Fireplace Mfrs., Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1056-1057, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 (individual supervisor cannot be sued for wrongful discharge in violation of policy embodied in FEHA, since nonemployer supervisors are exempt from liability under FEHA)]. In such a case, however, the employee may rely on alternative sources of fundamental public policy in support of the claim of wrongful discharge [Phillips v. St. Mary Reg'l Med. Ctr. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-238, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (although employer was expressly exempt from FEHA, plaintiff alleging race and sex discrimination could rely on Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., and on Cal. Const., art. I, § 8, as sources of public policy to support claim of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy)].

The plaintiff need not personally benefit from the public policy that he or she seeks to enforce [see, e.g., Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1149, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (employee protested failure to pay overtime wages to other employees)]. In addition, the public policy that is alleged to have been contravened must be a policy about which reasonable persons can have little disagreement [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 668, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 28-29, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 (no consensus as to employee drug testing cases)]. The public policy also must be firmly established at the time of termination [Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 887-889, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 668, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 29, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Thus, a wrongful-discharge claim cannot be based on a fundamental public policy created by a statute that was enacted after the plaintiff's termination [Silo v. CHW Med. Found. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1110, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 (employer cannot be held liable for violating public policy that was not manifest at time alleged tort was committed); Phillips v. St. Mary Reg'l Med. Ctr. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 229, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770] . However, a long-established general public policy can be sufficient to support a wrongful discharge claim even though a statute enacted after the plaintiff's termination addresses the specific kind of conduct involved in the plaintiff's case [Casella v. Southwest Dealer Servs., Inc. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1127, 1138-1143, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 445 (claim that plaintiff was terminated because he reported employer's participation in car dealers' fraudulent scheme was viable because scheme violated long-established policy of Penal Code § 487, which prohibits theft by misrepresentation, even though another statute specifically proscribing car dealers' scheme was enacted after plaintiff's termination)].

In some cases, a fundamental public policy is counterbalanced by another fundamental public policy so as to shield the employer from liability for discharging the employee. For example, the California Supreme Court has held that the public policy against religious discrimination in employment [see Cal. Const., art. I, § 8] must be qualified by the public policy of permitting religious employers considerable discretion to choose employees who will not interfere with their religious mission or message [see U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const., art. I, § 4]. Construing the two policies together, along with the FEHA's formerly unqualified general exemption for religious employers [see Gov. Code § 12926(d); now see Gov. Code § 12926.2(c) (effective January 2000, FEHA exemption for religious employers generally does not apply to persons employed to perform nonreligious duties at health-care facilities that are not restricted to adherents of religion that established employer)], the Court stated that it could not find a fundamental and substantial public policy prohibiting a religious employer from terminating an employee because of the employee's objectionable religious speech in the workplace [Silo v. CHW Med. Found. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1108-1109, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162] .

[iii] Activities Protected by Public Policy

Termination of an employee for exercising rights protected by law is a violation of public policy. Rights protected by law include the right to a safe workplace [Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 298-300, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 (protests against smoking in workplace based on Lab. Code § 6310 definition of safe workplace); see Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Industries of Cal., Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 109, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (employee is protected against discharge for complaining in good faith about working conditions he or she reasonably believes to be unsafe, whether or not they actually are unsafe)]; the right to organize [see Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 796-797, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 ; see also Lab. Code § 923]; and the right to prompt payment of wages, free from the employer's withholding of pay [see Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 201, 202, 216, 221, 222, 223, 224, 1175; Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020]. Similarly, terminating an employee for refusing to sign an employment agreement that contains an illegal noncompetition covenant is a violation of public policy [D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 (except as provided by statute, any contract that restrains anyone from engaging in any lawful profession, trade, or business is to that extent void); see also Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 901-908, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (noncompetition covenant is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 even if covenant is part of employee's sale of shares in corporate employer, unless corporate goodwill is component of sale price under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601); Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 (noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless it falls within one of statutory exceptions provided by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5); but see Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1429-1430, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (antisolicitation covenant may be enforceable if designed to protect employer's confidential, proprietary, or trade-secret customer information); Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 n.4, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 289 n.4, 189 P.3d 285 ("[W]e do not here address the applicability of the so-called trade secret exception to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600], as Edwards does not dispute that portion of his agreement or contend that the provision of the noncompetition agreement prohibiting him from recruiting Andersen's employees violated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600].")]. The termination of an employee for exercising a constitutional or statutory right does not violate public policy, however, unless the termination undermines a clearly mandated policy embodied in the provision from which that right emanates. For example, an employer may terminate an at-will employee for refusing to drop a lawsuit against the employer's customer, even though access to courts is guaranteed by the federal and state Constitutions, because there is no clearly mandated policy against such a termination [Jersey v. John Muir Med. Ctr. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 820-829, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807] .

An in-house counsel may state a claim for termination in violation of public policy if he or she alleges and proves that his or her acts in reporting certain regulatory violations by his or her employer were required by the Code of Professional Responsibility, which is a reflection of public policy. Even though an attorney-client relationship is usually severable by a client at will, in-house counsel is dependent on a single employer and entitled to the same protections as other executive employees [General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1173, 1182, 1192, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] . When the in-house attorney's conduct in reporting the employer-client's malfeasance is ethically permissible, but not mandatory, the Court suggested that the viability of a claim for termination in violation of public policy would depend on an analysis of whether (1) similar conduct by a nonattorney would support a claim for termination in violation of public policy, and (2) whether statutes or ethical rules permit departure from the usual requirement of client confidentiality to permit the "nonfiduciary" conduct [General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] . However, a former in-house counsel's wrongful termination suit must be dismissed if it cannot be fully established without the public disclosure of confidential information protected by the attorney-client privilege [General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1190, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 ; Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 308-315, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] . For this purpose, "public disclosure" does not include the plaintiff's disclosure of employer confidences to his or her own attorney, if they are relevant to the wrongful termination suit [Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 308-315, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] .

[iv] Drug Testing

Under California law, an employer may require preemployment drug tests and take illegal drug use into consideration in making employment decisions [Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 882-883, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200] .

The Compassionate Use Act of 1996 (Proposition 215) [Health & Safety Code § 11362.5] does not establish a public policy against terminating employees who use marijuana for medical purposes. The Act does provide an exemption from criminal liability under two specific California statutes for a person who possesses or cultivates marijuana for medical purposes on the recommendation or approval of a physician [Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(d) (providing defense against prosecution under Health & Safety Code §§ 11357, 11358 for person who possesses or cultivates marijuana for medical purposes on recommendation or approval of physician)]. However, marijuana possession remains illegal under federal law, even for medical use [21 U.S.C. §§ 812, 844(a); Gonzales v. Raich (2005) 545 U.S. 1, 26-29, 125 S. Ct. 2195, 162 L. Ed. 2d 1] . Moreover, the Compassionate Use Act is limited in scope: it merely exempts medical users and their primary caregivers from criminal liability under two specified state statutes. Nothing in the Act's text or history indicates that the electorate intended the Act to articulate any policy concerning marijuana in the employment context, let alone a fundamental public policy requiring employers to accommodate marijuana use by employees [Ross v. RagingWire Telecomms., Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 931-933, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 391-393, 174 P.3d 200] .

It is not clear whether a termination based on a refusal to submit to a random drug test may form the basis of a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy [compare Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096-1098, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280 , with Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17-19, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] . In Semore v. Pool, the court held that when a private sector employee is terminated for refusing to take a random drug test, the ex-employee may invoke the public policy exception to the at-will termination doctrine to assert a violation of the constitutional right of privacy [Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096-1098, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280] . The California Constitution's privacy guarantee [see Cal. Const. art. I, § 1] reaches both governmental and nongovernmental conduct [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17-19, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 ; Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1043, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194] . The court saw the right of privacy as constituting a fundamental societal interest and a legitimate public policy concern, rather than a right that solely benefits the individual. The assertion of the constitutional right of privacy is an assertion of a fundamental principle of public policy that is sufficient to state a cause of action for wrongful termination [Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096-1098, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280] .

In contrast, in Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co., the court held that the right to privacy is, by its very name, a private right, not a public one [Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 28, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] . The court relied on the rationale set forth in Foley, which explained that the absence of a distinctly public interest is apparent if the employer and employee expressly agree that the employee has no duty to take the disputed action and no public policy would render the agreement void [Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 28, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Stated differently, if the employer and employee can lawfully make an agreement as to the disputed action, a termination based on a violation of the agreement cannot be said to violate a fundamental duty imposed on all employees for the protection of the public interest [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 670-671 n.12, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . The court in Luck concluded that, under the Foley standard, a termination based on a refusal to submit to urinalysis does not violate public policy [Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 28, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618] .

In a case decided after Semore and Luck, the California Supreme Court held that, for a nongovernmental defendant to violate the constitutional right of privacy, the plaintiff must show (1) a legally protected privacy interest, (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy, and (3) a serious invasion of the privacy interest [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 35-37, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . Even if the plaintiff makes this showing, the invasion of a privacy interest is not a violation of the state constitutional right to privacy if the invasion is justified by a competing interest; the respective interests are subject to a "balancing test" [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . The Court rejected the contention that every assertion of a privacy interest under the state constitution must be overcome by a "compelling interest" [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34-35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . Presumably, the test set forth in Hill will be applied to any particular employment situation, and the respective interests of the employer and employee will be balanced. If the result of the balancing test favors the employer, the employee cannot prevail on a contract cause of action because the failure to submit to testing constitutes insubordination and good cause for termination [Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1101 n.8, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280] .

One California court of appeal has held that when the employer has clearly violated the law or public policy in terminating an employee, but the employee is later found to have committed misconduct that would have resulted in a justifiable termination had it been known, the discovery of such misconduct does not necessarily preclude the plaintiff from all relief [Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 617-618, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642] . However, in a case involving a violation of the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the trial court must address both the employer's violation and the employee's misconduct in assessing damages to be awarded to the employee [McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 358-362, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 (termination in clear violation of ADEA; back pay award was not precluded, but discovery of employee misconduct in removing company property precluded reinstatement and front pay remedies)]. Citing the U.S. Supreme Court's decision, a California court of appeal has held that even if the employer presents after-acquired evidence that would have justified termination of the employee, it remains a question of fact whether the employer would have actually terminated the employee on the basis of the after-acquired evidence. Thus, depending on the circumstances of the particular case, a jury might reasonably find that the employee would have been subjected to less-harsh disciplinary action, or no adverse action at all. In such a case the trial court would be justified in refusing to bar or reduce the plaintiff's recovery of damages for the wrongful termination [Thompson v. Tracor Flight Sys., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1172-1174, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (record, including after-acquired evidence, supported jury's finding that employee had not engaged in wrongdoing that would have resulted in termination)]. In any case, after-acquired evidence is admissible to support the employer's originally proffered reason for termination [Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-13, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762 (when employee alleges unlawful discrimination after termination for purported inability to perform job, employer may offer after-acquired evidence to establish that employee was in fact unable to do job)].

If an employee who is disqualified from employment by government-imposed requirements nevertheless obtains a job by misrepresenting the pertinent qualifications, the employee will have no recourse for an alleged wrongful termination of employment [Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 638-639, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 ; see, e.g., Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 845, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (because federal law prohibits employers from knowingly hiring or continuing to employ unauthorized aliens, employee's misrepresentation of his or her entitlement to work in United States goes to heart of employment relationship and deprives employee of any right to complain about termination); see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a), (b), (e), (f) (Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986); see also Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271, 283-284 (federal immigration policy embodied in Immigration Reform and Control Act precludes award of back pay under National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., to undocumented alien who had never been legally authorized to work in United States)]. However, in such a case the employee's misrepresentation does not void the employment contract; it merely renders it voidable should the employer seek to rescind it. While employed, the employee is entitled to all the protections available under employment law. Therefore, the employee is not barred from pursuing federal or state employment discrimination claims that are not tied to the employee's discharge. The employer will not be permitted to escape the consequences of discriminatory conduct that is not caused or justified by the employee's misrepresentation [Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 842, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12] .

The statutory provisions applicable to discrimination claims made by undocumented aliens embody the principle that an employer may not escape the consequences of discrimination if it is not caused by the employee's misrepresentation. These provisions declare that all protections, rights, and remedies available under California law, except any reinstatement remedy prohibited by federal law, are available to all individuals who are or have been employed in California, regardless of immigration status [Civ. Code § 3339(a); Gov. Code § 7285(a); Lab. Code § 1171.5(a)]. Thus, for purposes of enforcing California labor, employment, and civil rights laws, a person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability, although the remedy of reinstatement will not be available to an unauthorized alien [Civ. Code § 3339(b); Gov. Code § 7285(b); Lab. Code § 1171.5(b)]. Further, in proceedings or discovery undertaken to enforce California labor, employment, and civil rights laws, no inquiry may be made into a person's immigration status unless the person seeking to make the inquiry has shown by clear and convincing evidence that the inquiry is necessary in order to comply with federal immigration law [Civ. Code § 3339(b); Gov. Code § 7285(b); Lab. Code § 1171.5(b)].

If a statute, such as the Fair Employment and Housing Act [see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.] provides an administrative process for the resolution of grievances, exhaustion of those administrative remedies is a precondition to bringing a civil suit on a statutory cause of action, but not for seeking judicial relief on a common-law tort claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy [Palmer v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 904, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] .

On the other hand, if an employer establishes an internal grievance mechanism, a failure to exhaust those internal remedies precludes a subsequent nonstatutory civil action [Palmer v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 903-906, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] . Similarly, an employer's internal remedy generally must be exhausted before the employee sues under a statutory provision that does not contain its own administrative remedy [see Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 333-335, 106 P.3d 976 (public employee must exhaust employer's internal remedy before suing for retaliation for statutorily protected "whistleblowing" activity under Lab. Code § 1102.5, which is silent on administrative remedy or exhaustion requirement)]. The exhaustion of internal grievance procedures is required not because of any contractual obligation but because of compelling policy considerations. If an employer is given the opportunity quickly to determine through the operation of its internal procedures that it has committed error, it may be able to minimize, and sometimes eliminate, any monetary injury to the employee by immediately reversing its initial decision. An employee should not be permitted to increase damages by forgoing available internal remedies. Moreover, an exhaustion requirement reflects the courts' recognition of the "expertise" of the employer's quasi-judicial tribunal, permitting it to adjudicate the merits of the plaintiff's claim in the first instance [Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 327-328, 106 P.3d 976 (requirement that internal remedy be exhausted serves salutary function of mitigating damages, recognizes quasi-judicial tribunal's expertise, and promotes judicial economy by unearthing relevant evidence and providing record should there be judicial review of case); Palmer v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 905, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] .

An employer will be equitably estopped from asserting a defense that the employee failed to exhaust the employer's internal administrative remedy if the employer's actions negligently or intentionally led the employee to believe that no administrative recourse was available [Shuer v. County of San Diego (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 476, 486-487, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 776] . Moreover, exhaustion of an employer's internal procedures is not a prerequisite for a civil action asserting a claim under the FEHA or another statutory scheme that contains its own exhaustion prerequisite. Thus, an employee who has exhausted the FEHA administrative process and obtained a right-to-sue letter from the DFEH need not also exhaust internal administrative procedures provided by the employer prior to filing an FEHA claim in superior court [Schifando v. City of Los Angeles (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1074, 1082, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457, 79 P.3d 569] . Similarly, an employee who asserts both FEHA claims and related nonstatutory claims for wrongful termination in violation of public policy need not exhaust the internal administrative remedy provided by the employer with respect to those nonstatutory claims before filing a civil action, if the resolution of those claims would have a preclusive impact on the FEHA claim [Williams v. Housing Auth. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 708, 727-731, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374] . However, if the employee elects to pursue an employer's internal administrative process to a decision that is of a sufficiently judicial character to support collateral estoppel, the employee must pursue that process to completion, including exhausting any available judicial avenues for reversal of adverse findings. A failure to do so will result in any quasi-judicial administrative findings having binding, preclusive effect in later judicial proceedings [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88, 113, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026] .

[vii] Contractual Restrictions on Wrongful Termination Action

A contractual provision that shortens the statute of limitations for a wrongful-termination action is not unconscionable and will be enforced if it provides for a reasonable limitations period, even if it is a nonnegotiable adhesive provision [see Soltani v. Western & S. Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1042-1045 (contractual six-month limitation reasonable under standard of unconscionability used by California Supreme Court in analyzing mandatory arbitration clause in Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669); but see Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 1992-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P69877, 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 117-118, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (arbitration agreement imposing six-month period for asserting any statutory or common-law claim was unconscionable under Armendariz standard)]. However, a nonmutual contractual provision requiring that an employee give the employer 10 days' notice before filing suit is unconscionable and will not be enforced to bar an employee's action, at least if the provision is unaccompanied by a corresponding requirement to exhaust intra-company grievance procedures [Soltani v. Western & S. Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1045-1047 (10-day period not justified, because it is too short to allow employer to investigate or attempt to resolve claim, and it does not prevent stale claims, because 10-day period not measured from accrual of claim)].

[i] Agreement to Terminate Only for Good Cause

If the employer and employee have made an express or implied covenant to terminate only for good cause, the statutory presumption of at-will employment does not apply [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 324, 115 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 4002, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see Lab. Code § 2922]. The employee may maintain a civil action for breach of the contract by showing that the termination was not for a fair and honest reason regulated by the good faith of the employer [Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 100, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 ; Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 329, 115 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 4002, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] . Similarly, in an appropriate case an employee may maintain a cause of action based on breach of an implied agreement not to demote without good cause [see Scott v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 463-464, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834] .

An implied covenant not to terminate without good cause may be found where the employer's conduct gives rise to an implied promise that it will not act arbitrarily in dealing with its employees [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] . In addition, an employee's length of service, when taken together with the employer's employment policies or regulations, can operate as a form of estoppel that would preclude the discharge of that employee without good cause [see Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 456, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722 ; Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108-1110, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787] . Longevity alone is not the determining factor in finding an implied agreement to terminate only for good cause; however, longevity of service is relevant to show the duration of the existence of other conduct pointing to the existence of such an agreement [see Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries, Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1151, 37 Cal. Rptr 2d 718] .

A contractual provision for a performance review after 12 months employment is not by itself sufficient to overcome the presumption of at-will employment, especially if other circumstances show that the parties contemplated at-will employment [Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 969-970, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (employee signed employment application confirming that employment would be at will and acknowledged receipt of employee manual with express at-will provision)]. Thus, when an employment contract expressly provides that the employment is "at will" and terminable "at any time," there is no ambiguity about the at-will nature of the employment, and any additional contractual provisions regarding a probationary period and annual reviews do not expressly or impliedly create a right to be terminated only for cause [Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668] .

What constitutes "good cause" to terminate employment depends on the circumstances of each case [Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hospital Dist. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 898-900, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617] . However, the general meaning of the right to terminate for "good cause" is the right to terminate on reasonable grounds that are assigned in good faith [R.J. Cardinal Co. v. Ritchie (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 124, 146, 32 Cal. Rptr. 545] . "Good cause" may consist of factors unrelated to an employee's performance, such as the business decision to divest or close part of an employer's business operations [see Joanou v. Coca-Cola Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 96, 99-100] . If the employee is a manager or holds a confidential position, the employer is given substantial latitude in exercising its judgment on the question of good cause to terminate the employee [Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 100-101, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412] .

For further discussion of what constitutes "good cause" for termination of employment, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

A covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied in every employment contract [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 683, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] . The covenant generally obligates each party to a contract not to do anything to prevent the other party from receiving the benefits of the contract [Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 751-754, 177 P.2d 931] .

The precise nature and extent of the duty imposed by the covenant of good faith and fair dealing depends on the contract and the parties' justified expectations [Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 818, 157 Cal. Rptr. 482, 598 P.2d 452] . A breach of the covenant in an employment contract is established whenever the employer engages in bad faith action extraneous to the contract, combined with an intent to frustrate the employee's enjoyment of contract rights [see, e.g., Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 (employer hired employee, caused employee to sever former employment and move across country, and then terminated employee before employee commenced new job; employer's conduct also governed by doctrine of promissory estoppel)]. A termination may constitute a breach of this covenant if, for example, the employer asserts the existence of good cause for termination without probable cause and without a good faith belief that good cause exists [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc., (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 770, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195] . A finding that an employee was discharged solely for instituting a lawsuit against the employer also has been held to provide substantial support for a finding of bad faith [Khanna v. Microdata Corp. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 250, 263-264, 215 Cal. Rptr. 860] .

However, the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, standing alone, is not sufficient to impose a good cause requirement for the termination of an at-will employee. The implied covenant only acts to protect the parties' right to receive the benefits of their agreement, and in an at-will relationship there is no agreement to terminate only for good cause [Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 698 n.39, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield W., Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 798, 819-820, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 (if there is no underlying contract or agreement changing at-will nature of employment, there is no good faith duty to terminate only for good cause)].

If the contract conditions the continuation of employment on the employer's continued satisfaction with the employee's performance, the employer's dissatisfaction must be exercised in good faith. This rule applies regardless of whether a reasonable person would have been dissatisfied. The good faith determination of the employer that it is dissatisfied is conclusive on the employee [Tiffany v. Pacific Sewer Pipe Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 700, 703, 182 P. 428 ; Crillo v. Curtola (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 263, 271, 204 P.2d 941] .

If an employer breaches the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in an employment contract, the employee's remedy is a civil suit for breach of the contract. The employee cannot assert a tort cause of action and therefore cannot recover damages, such as punitive damages, that would be available only in a tort action [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 88-102, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 698 n.39, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373] .

For further discussion of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in employment contracts, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

§ 85.30 Taxation of Employee's Income

Payment of cash compensation for personal services results in the realization of ordinary income to the employee [I.R.C. § 61(a)]. "Gross income" includes compensation for services, including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items [I.R.C. § 61(a)(1)]. If the employee is a cash-basis taxpayer, as is the usual case with individuals, the compensation is recognized and taxable in the year it is actually paid to or is constructively received by the employee, even if it is an advance payment that is required to be repaid to the employer if the employee does not render the services that entitle him or her to that compensation [see U.A. Lavery (1945) 5 T.C. 1283, 1289 , aff'd, 158 F.2d 859 (7th Cir. [T.C.] 1946)] .

Compensation is considered "constructively" received when it is made unqualifiedly subject to the employee's demand for payment, even if actual receipt is postponed by the employee until a later year [Hyland v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (2d Cir. [T.C.] 1949) 175 F.2d 422, 424] . It is the fact that the time of receipt of the compensation was within the employee's control that determines the time when compensation is includible in income [see Ross v. Commissioner (1st Cir. [T.C.] 1948) 169 F.2d 483, 491]. Under certain circumstances, recognition of income may be avoided on the receipt of compensation. Advance payments of commissions, when repayable if unearned, are treated as loans and are not considered income until actually earned [Rev. Rul. 69-465].

The compensation package offered an employee often consists of noncash elements in addition to a salary or wage. Noncash compensation may be attractive to both the employer and employee for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that many types of benefits do not result in taxable income to the employee, and it may be more economical for the employer to provide such benefits rather than pay the employee a larger amount of cash compensation.

The cost of employer-paid group-term life insurance, up to $50,000, is not taxable to the employee. However, the proportionate cost of the premiums paid by the employer for coverage in excess of $50,000 is includible in the employee's income [I.R.C. § 79(a)]. For further discussion, see § 85.351[1][b].

The Internal Revenue Code excludes from income the cost of services of a type ordinarily provided to the public if provided to the employee at no substantial additional cost [I.R.C. § 132(a)(1), (b)], discounts offered to employees [I.R.C. § 132(a)(2), (c)], fringe benefits that are de minimis [I.R.C. § 132(a)(4)], qualified transportation fringe benefits [I.R.C. § 132(a)(5), (f)], qualified moving expense reimbursement [I.R.C. § 132(a)(6), (g)], qualified retirement planning services [I.R.C. § 132(a)(7), (m)], qualified military base realignment and closure fringe benefits [I.R.C. § 132(a)(8), (n)], and on-premises athletic facilities [see I.R.C. § 132(j)]. Also excluded are working condition fringes [I.R.C. § 132(a)(3), (d)], defined as property or services provided to the employee to the extent that, if the employee paid for them, the payments would be deductible as trade or business expenses [see I.R.C. § 162] or as depreciation [see I.R.C. § 167].

Amounts received through accident or health insurance are not included in an employee's income to the extent that those amounts are attributable to employer contributions not includible in the employee's gross income or paid by the employer [I.R.C. § 104(a)(3)]. The employee is not taxed on the amounts reimbursed or directly paid by the employer for medical expenses incurred by the employee [see I.R.C. § 105(b)], except for medical reimbursement payments made to "highly compensated employees" under a plan that is a "discriminatory employee benefit plan" [see I.R.C. § 89].

The value of meals or lodging furnished to the employee and family can be excluded from the employee's gross income if provided for the employer's convenience. This exclusion applies to meals furnished on the employer's premises or lodging on those premises when required as a condition of employment [I.R.C. § 119(a)].

If the employee has a deferred compensation arrangement, the inclusion of the compensation in the employee's gross income may be delayed until it is actually received, if the arrangement meets the requirements for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan [see I.R.C. § 409A]. For detailed discussion of the requirements for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, see § 85.320[1][c].

§ 85.31 Compensation Deduction for Employer

[1] Requirements for Deduction

An employer reporting his or her income on the cash basis of accounting must actually make payment to the employee to be allowed the deduction [I.R.C. § 162; Martinus & Sons v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (9th Cir. [B.T.A.] 1940) 116 F.2d 732, 733 ; see Anthony P. Miller, Inc. v. Commissioner of Int. Rev. (3d Cir. [T.C.] 1947) 164 F.2d 268, 270 , cert. denied, 333 U.S. 861 (1947)] . If the employer is on the accrual basis of accounting, the compensation deduction is generally allowable at the time compensation is earned by the employee [Martinus & Sons v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (9th Cir. [B.T.A.] 1940) 116 F.2d 732, 733] .

If the taxpayer-employer and an employee are "related taxpayers" [see I.R.C. § 267(b) (definition)] at the end of the taxpayer's taxable year, and the payment to the employee is not includible in his or her gross income for that year (by reason of the accounting method used by the employee), the taxpayer's compensation deduction may be taken only as of the day on which the amount paid is includible in the employee's income [see I.R.C. § 267(a)(2)].

If the employee's compensation is deferred, the employer generally may not deduct the amount of deferred compensation until it is included in the employee's gross income [I.R.C. § 404(a)(5)]. The inclusion of the compensation in the employee's gross income may be delayed until it is actually received, if the deferred compensation arrangement meets the requirements for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan [see I.R.C. § 409A]. For detailed discussion of the requirements for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, see § 85.320[1][c].

[2] Reasonableness of Compensation

Reasonable compensation is deductible by the employer [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1)]. The test of deductibility is whether the payments are reasonable and made purely for services [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-7(a)]. Whether compensation is reasonable for this purpose is a question of fact. The courts have looked at such things as the amounts paid by similar enterprises for like services, the type and extent of services rendered by the employee, the scarcity of qualified employees for the position, the prior earning capacity of the employee, the peculiar characteristics of the employer's business, and the general economic conditions of the period in determining whether an employee's compensation is reasonable [Charles McCandless Tile Service v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1970) 422 F.2d 1336, 1338, 191 Ct. Cl. 108] . The courts have also considered the employee's particular abilities, the employer's need for a person with those abilities, and the demands of the job. Other factors considered are (1) the employer's previous salary policies; (2) the profits, sales, and payment of dividends by the employer; (3) total compensation paid to the particular employee in previous years; and (4) time and energy devoted to the work as well as the past record, training, and experience of the particular employee [see Lucas v. Ox Fibre Brush Co. (1930) 281 U.S. 115, 117-118, 50 S. Ct. 273, 74 L. Ed. 733 (dictum)].

Even if a payment is found to be reasonable, it will not be deductible to the extent that it is in reality a distribution of earnings rather than compensation for services rendered. Thus, for example, when return on equity is conspicuous by its absence, the purported compensation necessarily contains a distribution of corporate earnings that is not deductible compensation [see McCandless Tile Service v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1970) 422 F.2d 1336, 1339-1340, 191 Ct. Cl. 108]. Similarly, a combination of salaries and commissions paid to officer-shareholders of a closely-held corporation could be viewed as arrangements for drawing off corporate profits rather than compensation for personal services actually rendered. Substantial increases in compensation in a year in which sales increased only slightly warranted an inference that compensation was based on other factors than compensation for personal services rendered [see United States v. Giles Industries, Inc. (Ct. Cl. 1974) 496 F.2d 556, 563, 204 Ct. Cl. 202] .

[3] Treatment of Bonuses

Bonuses to employees are deductible when they are made in good faith for services actually rendered [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-9]. However, compensation in the form of bonuses is more suspect than regular compensation, especially if paid in relation to stock holdings or if paid after the year end when earnings are known and the bonus absorbs substantially all of the corporate earnings. The fact that bonuses are paid in direct relation to the employee's holdings in the company as a shareholder are not necessarily fatal [see Safety Engineering & Supply Co. v. United States (D.C. Ala. 1965) 65-2 U.S.T.C. P 9721 , aff'd, 374 F.2d 885 (5th Cir. 1967)] . However, while a bonus paid to a non-shareholder may be reasonable, the same bonus paid to a large shareholder-officer might not be because a bonus incentive might be unnecessary to call forth that person's best efforts [see Giles Industries, Inc. v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1974), 563, 204 Ct. Cl. 202].

[4] Treatment of Contingent Compensation

Contingent compensation is deductible if [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-7(b)(2)]:

- The contingent compensation was bargained for between the employer and employee;
- The formula for the contingent compensation was determined before services are rendered; and
- The contingent compensation was not influenced by considerations other than securing services of the employee.

d. Matters requiring exercise of employee's discretion.

10. Limitations on employee's personal conduct desired by employer, such as:

a. Off-duty business activities.

b. Passive personal investments in competing businesses.

c. Need for morality clause in contract.

d. Need for provision permitting search of employee's person and effects in contract.

e. Need for personal appearance and grooming clause in contract.

11. Amount and nature of salary and other compensation arrangements for salaried personnel [see Paragraph 11, below for questions concerning commission compensation]:

a. Prevailing salaries for similar services in area for similarly situated organizations.

NOTE:
The employer should be asked to obtain this type of information from a local association of employers if it has not already determined the amount and nature of the salary and compensation arrangements it desires to make.

b. Employer's capacity to pay.

c. Frequency of payment.

d. Basis for future adjustments.

12. Amount and nature of commission and drawing-account arrangements, if employee will be nonsalaried personnel (such as salesperson):

a. Prevailing arrangements for similar services in area for similarly situated organizations.

NOTE:
See NOTE to P 10(a), above.

b. Employer's capacity to pay.

c. Frequency of payment.

d. Drawing account to be minimum compensation or deducted from net commissions due.

e. Basis for commissions (e.g., net sales dollar volume after returns and adjustments for defective products or services).

13. Continuation of salary or drawing account during periods of disability.

a. Conditions precedent, such as:

(1) Length of service.

(2) Prior record of productivity or other standard.

(3) Position with employer at time of disability.

b. Rate or amount.

c. Cut-off point:

(1) End of contract term; or

(2) When disability becomes permanent.

14. Arrangements for deferred compensation, including:

a. Conditions precedent:

(1) Employment until specified age.

(2) Earlier retirement by mutual consent.

(3) Continued profitability.

(4) Establishment and maintenance of reserve fund or annuity to cover deferred obligation.

b. Annual rate or amount.

15. Bonus plans.

a. Basis, for example:

(1) Productivity; or

(2) Net or operating profitability.

b. Type:

(1) Cash bonuses.

(2) Stock bonuses, either restricted or nonrestricted.

16. Profit-sharing plans:

a. Basis, e.g.:

(1) Net profit.

(2) Net profit in excess of specified dollar amount.

(3) Net profit a specified percent in excess of prior year.

b. Formula for determination of net profit.

c. When payment is to be made.

d. Entitlement if termination occurs prior to time for payment.

17. Stock option plans.

a. Basis for award [see P 15(a), above].

b. Type of stock:

(1) Common.

(2) Preferred.

(3) Units consisting of combination of common or preferred stock and warrants.

18. Fringe benefits, such as:

a. Office and administrative or secretarial support.

b. Automobile, with or without:

(1) Periodic replacement by employer, and, if so, how often.

(2) Gasoline and oil paid by employer.

(3) Maintenance paid by employer.

(4) Insurance paid by employer.

c. Business expense allowances:

(1) Use of employer's credit card.

(2) Entertainment fund.

(3) Expense account.

d. Life insurance.

e. Health and accident insurance.

f. Medical payment insurance.

g. Dental care coverage.

h. Eye care coverage.

19. Annual vacation.

20. Sick leave with pay.

21. Death benefits payable to employee's surviving spouse or estate.

22. Severance pay.

23. Ownership or disposition of employee's inventions, writings, or creations.

a. Assignment to employer with or without royalties payable to employee; or

b. Title retained by employee.

24. Payments to be made upon transfer within or outside of United States:

a. Moving expenses.

b. Transportation of employee and employee's spouse and children.

c. Purchase of employee's residence.

25. Grounds or methods for termination of contract by employer:

a. Willful breach.

b. Habitual neglect of duties.

c. Dishonesty, fraud, misrepresentation, or other acts of moral turpitude.

d. Notice of termination.

e. Failure to meet specified profit standard.

f. Death of employee or employer, if applicable.

g. Employee's physical or mental disability.

h. Garnishment of employee's wages (in excess of first garnishment).

26. Effect of merger, transfer of assets, or dissolution of employer on employment contract.

27. Right of employee to terminate contract.

28. Requirement that employee qualify for surety bond.

29. Requirement that employee submit to periodic physical examination.

§ 85.110 Relationship Between the Parties

NOTE:

The attorney who is employed to draft an employment contract should first consider what the relationship between the parties is or should be, and whether it might be better from the standpoint of the client to limit the relationship to one other than that of employer-employee.

1. Determine whether potential employment situation is more like independent contractor relationship than employer-employee relationship, judged by following factors that indicate independent contractor status [see § 85.10[3]].

NOTE:

An affirmative answer to the following questions tends to indicate an independent contractor relationship. For complete coverage of these factors (and appropriate agreements, if necessary) see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors .

a. Can hirer do without control of day-to-day function of hiree?

NOTE:

Control is the major determinant of one's status as an employee or independent contractor. The hirer of an independent contractor has no right of control over the mode of performance [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337] , while an employer has the right to control and direct the activities of an employee [see Industrial Indem. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 130, 135, 156 P.2d 926] .

b. Is hiree engaged in distinct occupation or business?

c. Is work usually done by a specialist without supervision?

d. Are tools and place of work supplied by hiree?

e. Is contemplated work likely to be one-time?

f. Are irregular working hours contemplated?

g. Will payment be by the job?

h. Will hiree be engaged part time?

i. Can hiree delegate performance to others?

2. If hiree could conceivably be classified as independent contractor, determine whether it is to employer's advantage that hirer should be classified as independent contractor rather than employee, considering following matters:

a. Income tax withholding.

NOTE:
Income taxes need not be withheld from compensation of independent contractor [I.R.C. § 3401(a); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 13020, 13009].

b. Payment of unemployment insurance taxes.

NOTE:
Unemployment insurance taxes need not be paid for independent contractor [see I.R.C. § 3306(c), (i); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 2602(a)].

c. Tort liability for acts of employees.

NOTE:
A hirer is generally not liable for the torts of an independent contractor [see Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508] .

d. Ability to terminate relationship.

NOTE:
The independent contractor relationship is subject to termination in accordance with the independent contractor's contract [see Mt. Meadow, Etc. v. Indus. Acc. Comm. (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 123, 127, 76 P.2d 724] . The "at will" employer-employee relationship is subject to termination under the terms of the contract between the parties or upon notice in most cases [Lab. Code § 2922]. Certain types of terminations, including those in contravention of public policy and those in violation of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing, are excepted [see § 85.24[2][c], [d]]. A contract for a specified term is subject to termination on various statutory grounds or the terms of the contract [see § 85.24[1]].

e. Need or ability of employer to furnish tools and workplace.

NOTE:
The hirer of independent contractor need not furnish capital, tools, or work place, while the employer generally does.

f. Need of employer to protect intellectual property.

NOTE:
Since an independent contractor may have simultaneous projects for competitive entities, the hirer's ability to control access to confidential information may be compromised.

g. Cost.

NOTE:
Even taking into account the cost of benefits, independent contractors may be more expensive than hiring an employee.

3. Consider whether partnership or joint venture be more suitable relationship [see Ch. 15, General Partnerships].

4. Ascertain whether contemplated relationship is that of professional rendering services to client [see Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services].

5. Determine whether contemplated relationship is that of professional employed by his or her professional corporation [for employment contract, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

6. If individual is to act in representative capacity:

a. Consider whether granting that person power of attorney would suffice to accomplish parties' objectives [see Ch. 98, Powers of Attorney].

b. Consider whether individual should be given authority to act as employer's agent.

7. Assess employer's need for this particular employee, in order to determine negotiating position regarding various contractual provisions.

28-85 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 85.111

AUTHOR: by Edward Baskauskas, J.D. Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., Practice Consultant

§ 85.111 Need for Written Employment Contract

1. Determine whether Statute of Frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] requires employment contract to be in writing.

a. Consider whether contemplated contract will provide that it is not be performed within one year from the time of its making.

NOTE:
Such a contract is invalid unless it or a memorandum thereof is in writing and signed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1)].

b. Consider whether contemplated contract will be such that it cannot possibly be performed within one year.

NOTE:
Such a contract is within the statute of frauds if, under its terms, the employee cannot possibly perform it completely within one year from the making of the contract [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 343, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345] . For discussion, see § 85.22[2][a].

c. Determine whether parties intend employment to be terminable at will.

NOTE:
An oral contract at will, even one that requires more than one year to perform, is enforceable because it is terminable at any time [White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 ; see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1)]. An oral contract for "permanent" employment is valid since it can conceivably be performed within one year by termination at the will of either party [White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 ; see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1)].

d. Determine whether contract will specify term of one year or less, with option for extension.

NOTE:

Such a contract is not invalid under the statute of frauds, even if oral [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 753, 759, 161 P.2d 217] .

e. Determine whether employee will act as employer's agent in sale of real property, or in lease for period longer than one year.

NOTE:

This type of agreement, if made by an agent of the party sought to be charged, is invalid unless the agent's authority is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3), (4)].

2. Ascertain whether contract contemplates commission compensation to be paid by out-of-state employer for work performed in California.

NOTE:

Such a contract must be written and must set forth the method by which the commissions are computed and paid [Lab. Code § 2751].

3. Determine whether contract will give employee authority to enter into contracts that must be written, such as following:

NOTE:

The authority of an agent to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing [Civ. Code § 2309]. One way of providing this written authority is to state it in the employment contract itself. It may, however, be provided in any other valid written form. Lack of written authority can also be cured by ratification after the fact [see Civ. Code § 2310; see also McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 256 n.5, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902] . For additional discussion, see § 85.22[4].

a. Contracts that cannot by their terms be performed within a year from their making [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); but see Civ. Code § 1624(b) ("qualified financial contract," as defined, need not be in writing if certain requirements are met)].

b. Contracts that involve promise to answer for another person's debt, default, or miscarriage [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(2)].

NOTE:

See Civ. Code § 2794 for a list of suretyship obligations that need not be in writing see also Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity .

c. Contracts that involve [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3), (4)]:

(1) Leases for periods longer than one year of real property or interests therein; or

(2) Sales of real property or interests therein.

d. Contracts that are not to be performed within promisor's lifetime [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(5)].

e. Contracts that constitute agreement by real estate purchaser to pay debt secured by the property [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(6)].

f. Contracts, promises, undertakings, or commitments to lend money or to grant or extend credit, in amount greater than $100,000, made by person engaged in business of lending or arranging for lending of money or extending credit [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(7)].

NOTE:
This requirement does not apply to those transactions primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. Contracts, promises, undertakings, or commitments to loan money secured solely by residential property consisting of one to four dwelling units are considered to be made for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(7)].

g. Contracts for sale of goods for $500 or more [Com. Code § 2201; but see Com. Code § 2201(4) ("qualified financial contract," as defined in Civ. Code § 1624(b), need not be in writing if certain requirements are met)].

h. Contracts for payment of commissions by out-of-state employer [Lab. Code § 2751].

4. Even if contract need not be written, consider whether it would be advantageous to client to specify any of following in writing:

NOTE:
Since many employers are reluctant or unwilling to use written agreements, they should be apprised of reasons that affirm the need for them. Some or all of the following should be in writing in order to make specific and memorialize the bargain of the parties and avoid the need for litigation that might arise in the absence of specificity. If only a few of the following items need to be memorialized in writing, counsel should consider having the employee execute a simple, stand-alone document acknowledging or agreeing to each of the particular items. This can be done in an offer letter that requires the employee's written assent. For example, it is common practice for rank-and-file employees simply to sign an acknowledgment of at-will status and a nondisclosure agreement to protect the employer's confidential business information [see §§ 85.440, 85.443, 85.511].

a. Term of employment.

b. Duties of employee.

c. Compensation to be paid.

d. Benefits to be given.

e. Details of profit-sharing and/or bonus plans to be offered.

f. Methods of allocating the burden of business expenses between employer and employee.

g. Property rights of the parties to:

(1) Patents or copyrights on works created by employee during employment.

(2) Trademarks.

(3) Trade secrets, including:
(a) Customer lists.

(b) Processes or formulas.

(c) Business methods.

(d) Business plans.

(e) Unregistered patentable inventions.

(f) Unregistered copyrightable creations.

h. Protection of employer from competitive activities of employee during term of employment.

i. Protection of employer from unfair competition by employee during or after term of employment.

j. Other obligations of parties.

k. Grounds and procedures for terminating contract.

5. Ascertain whether employee requires written agreement to:

a. Guarantee employment to him or her as one of employer's organizers or principals (whether employer is a corporation, professional corporation, association, or partnership).

b. Protect employee who is a minority shareholder of closely held corporation from freeze-out.

c. Ensure job security for specific period.

d. Ensure specific compensation and or retirement provisions.

e. Protect his or her rights to intellectual property not created with employer's assets or during on-duty hours.

6. Consider whether employer needs employment agreement as means of:

a. Controlling employee.

b. Ensuring availability of employee's skill or knowledge during term of employment.

c. Ensuring continuing availability of employee's knowledge and assistance after employment.

NOTE:
For example, the employee may be needed to participate in patent prosecutions regarding patents with which he or she was involved during the term of the employment contract.

7. Determine whether need for writing is outweighed by any of following disadvantages:

a. Time and expense of preparing written employment agreement for each employee.

b. Possibility that specificity of formal contract may unduly limit employer, by taking away flexibility in dealing with employee.

8. Consider whether some document other than employment agreement might serve employer's purpose; for example:

a. Offer letter requiring employee's written assent.

b. Written acknowledgment of employer's at-will policy.

c. Written agreement of nondisclosure of trade secrets.

d. Written assignment of intellectual property rights concerning projects worked on by employee in course of employment.

9. Consider having employment agreement incorporate by reference certain matters that are fully set forth in employer policy documents or handbooks.

§ 85.112 Corporate, Partnership, or Association Formalities Necessary for Entry Into Employment Agreement

1. If corporation, partnership, or association ("organization") is to be employer, determine whether its basic organizational documents (i.e., articles or partnership agreement or bylaws) contain provisions governing or bearing on:

a. Appointment (including election or selection) of officers.

b. Employment of other personnel.

c. Duties of officers or other employees.

d. Compensation of officers or other employees.

e. Tenure of officers or other employees.

2. Determine whether bylaws or other basic organizational documents contain any other provision governing or bearing on:

NOTE:
Basic organizational document provisions bearing on these subjects may have an influence on the description of or limitations on the duties of its officers as well as on other terms of an employment contract.

§ 85.120 Drafting Guide for Employment Contracts

NOTE:

In approaching the task of drafting an employment contract, counsel should first ascertain the client's desires with respect to the basic subjects the contract should cover. §§ 85.100 and 85.101 list the basic subjects common to most contract situations. For discussion of the essential elements and terms of employment contracts, see § 85.21.

This Drafting Guide indicates the various provisions covering particular elements of an employment contract and indicates their location. This will aid counsel in finding the particular provision, whether it is located within a complete form [see §§ 85.200-85.231*] or one of the separate provisions [see §§ 85.240-85.551*].

[1] Introductory Matters

1. Specify date and place of agreement.

NOTE:

The date and place is commonly set forth above the signature block as "Executed on _____ [date], at _____ [place]."

2. Include designation of parties and their addresses.

NOTE:

This information is commonly set forth in an introductory paragraph at the beginning of a contract [see § 85.200*].

a. Name of each party.

b. Address of each party.

c. Designation of parties as "employer" and "employee."

d. Description of employer as corporation, partnership or sole proprietor.

3. Consider including recitals of such matters as [see § 85.223]:

a. Employer's trade or business.

b. Employer's reasons for employing the employee, e.g.:
(1) Employee's special skill, background, or expertise.

(2) Employee's position as major shareholder, principal, or partner of employer.

4. State that employer hires employee and employee accepts employment [see § 85.200, Section 1.01].

NOTE:
This type of statement is generally included in the provision specifying the term of the contract, but may be separately stated.

[2] Term of Contract

1. If contract is to be for a specified period:

a. State that employer employs employee and that employee accepts employment for specified period [see § 85.200, Section 1.01].

NOTE:
This period should be greater than one month and less than seven years [Lab. Code §§ 2922, 2855; see § 85.200[1][c]].

b. Specify dates on which period of employment begins and ends [see § 85.200, Section 1.01].

c. If contract is to be renewable for additional periods, specify method, length of renewal period, and conditions to which renewal is subject, e.g. [see § 85.200, Section 1.02]:

(1) Automatically.

(2) For succeeding terms of stated length.

(3) Subject to specified condition (e.g., unless either party gives notice to the other within specified time before expiration of any term of intention not to renew).

d. Consider including provision defining "employment term" as entire period of employment of employee by employer [see § 85.200, Section 1.03].

e. Consider providing that contract is subject to earlier termination under other provisions [see § 85.201, Section 1.02].

2. If contract is to be at will, state that employer employs employee and that employee accepts employment, but do not specify any period [see § 85.210, P 1].

3. If desired, specify that employment is for employee's lifetime [see § 85.240].

4. If seasonal employment is involved [see § 85.241]:

a. Include provision describing term as stated number of months each year beginning and ending on specified dates.

b. State whether employee has right to be employed elsewhere during remainder of year.

c. Specify that employee is entitled to payment for each month of actual employment.

5. Whether contract is for specified term or at will, consider stating that it is subject to termination as provided elsewhere in the contract [see § 85.201, Section 1.02].

[3] Duties of Employee

NOTE:
Duties are to be distinguished from obligations. The former describe the way in which the work is to be conducted; the latter (which are outlined in [10], below) cover legal or ethical requirements.

1. Set forth title of employee [see § 85.200, Section 2.01].

2. Describe employee's duties:

a. In general terms; or

b. With greater particularity but with qualifications such as:

NOTE:
A provision that attempts to describe an employee's duties in detail should avoid the trap of literal interpretation that would limit the scope of the employee's duties too narrowly and thus unduly limit the rights of the employer by qualifying the description.

(1) Phrase stating that the duties include, without limitation, those described; or

(2) Clause stating that in addition to duties described, employee will do such other work as may be assigned, subject to instructions, directions, and control of employer [see § 85.222, Section 2.02]; or

(3) Clause stating that duties include such other work as may be required in connection with employer's business [see § 85.210, P 3].

(4) Clause stating that duties are to be conducted in accordance with employer's policies as established by management [see § 85.211, Section 2.01].

c. Consider using one of following provisions governing duties of specific categories of employees:

(1) President or chief executive officer of an organization [see § 85.200, Section 2.01].

(2) Vice president, secretary-treasurer, or other senior executive [see § 85.201, Section 2.01].

(3) Mid-level or department manager [see § 85.210, P 3].

(4) Retail store branch manager [see § 85.211, Section 2.01].

(5) Salesperson with assigned territory [see §§ 85.220, Section 2.01; 85.250, eighth alternative].

(6) Technician (e.g., an engineer) [see § 85.221, Section 2.01].

(7) Computer programmer [see § 85.222, Section 2.01].

(8) Employee of temporary help agency [see § 85.223, § 2].

(9) Appraiser [see § 85.250, first alternative].

(10) Bookkeeper [see § 85.250, second alternative].

(11) Consultant [see §§ 85.231, 85.250, third alternative].

(12) Investigator [see § 85.250, fourth alternative].

(13) Inventor [see § 85.250, fifth alternative].

(14) Service manager [see § 85.250, sixth alternative].

(15) Person hired to recruit other employees or to establish a sales or service organization [see § 85.250, seventh alternative].

3. Set forth limitations on employee's exercise of duties:

a. For chief executive officer, specify matters requiring consent of board of directors for actions by chief executive officer [see § 85.200, Section 2.02].

b. For other senior executives, specify that employee's exercise of duties is subject to direction of superior officer and or board of directors [see § 85.201, Section 2.01].

4. Consider stating name or title of person to whom employee reports [see § 85.210, P 3].

5. State place where duties are to be performed:

a. Initial place of employment [see §§ 85.221, Section 2.01(b); 85.222, Section 2.01(c)].

NOTE:
For a provision assigning a salesperson to a particular territory, see § 85.220, Section 2.02.

b. Reserve employer's right to transfer employee [see § 85.275].

NOTE:
For a provision permitting the employer to change a salesperson's assigned territory, see § 85.220, Section 2.03.

6. Consider including promise by employee to make his or her advice and counsel available to employer after retirement, in capacity of consultant [see § 85.200, Section 2.08].

a. Require employee to give priority to employer's business [see § 85.200, Section 2.03(a)].

b. Require employee:

(1) Not to engage in any competing or conflicting business pursuits or any business, commercial, or professional nature services of the type provided to employer without employer's prior consent [see § 85.200, Section 2.03(b)]; and/or

(2) Not to engage in other pursuits except for non-conflicting non-competitive pursuits during off-duty hours and off-premises [see § 85.272].

c. Consider allowing expenditure of reasonable amounts of time for specified outside activities (e.g., educational, charitable, or professional activities) [see § 85.200, Section 2.03(b)].

d. Consider allowing passive personal investments or conduct of private business affairs and if used, consider adding conditions that [see § 85.200, Section 2.03(c)]:

(1) Activities may not materially interfere with required services.

(2) Investments or private business be limited to those not in competition with employer.

8. Include provision requiring employee to perform loyally and conscientiously all duties and obligations specified in contract [see § 85.270].

9. Consider adding or using, in lieu of duties provision, a provision stating that employee's duties will be those determined from time to time by employer [see § 85.260].

NOTE:
Although it is generally best to set forth in the employment contract the duties to be performed by the employee, the provision suggested here has the advantage of giving the employer complete freedom in determining the duties to be performed by the employee.

10. Consider adding provisions governing changes in duties:

a. Requiring employee to perform other duties as assigned at later date [see § 85.261].

b. Reserving employer's right to assign employee to performance of duties that differ from those originally assigned [see § 85.262].

c. Allowing parties to modify duties upon mutual consent [see § 85.263].

d. Permitting change of duties when employee becomes disabled [see § 85.264].

11. Consider use of provision requiring employee's performance to be rendered to employer's satisfaction [see § 85.271].

12. Consider including agreement that employee has neither right nor authority to contract on behalf of employer without employer's written consent [see § 85.273].

NOTE:

Although this type of provision makes it clear to the employee that he or she has no authority to make any legal commitments on behalf of the employer without the employer's express written consent, the attorney for the employer should make it clear to the client that this provision is binding only as between the employer and the employee, and is not necessarily binding between the employer and third persons. Regardless of any provision in the employment agreement, the employer can be bound by unauthorized commitments made by the employee if the employee had ostensible authority to do so. For discussion, see § 85.273[1][b].

13. Include provision requiring employee to adhere to employer's rules, policies and procedures [see § 85.274].

NOTE:

This type of provision should be used at least in contracts under which non-executive personnel are employed, if not all employment agreements, in order to make it clear that there are rules to which the employee must adhere. For discussion, see § 85.274[1][c].

14. If appropriate, specify length of employee's work day and week [see § 85.276].

NOTE:

This type of provision should be included in the employment contract when the parties wish to guard against future misunderstandings by precisely defining the number of hours the employee must devote to the employer's business each week.

[4] Compensation

1. Specify employee's initial compensation:

NOTE:

Executive compensation may include deferred compensation, profit sharing, stock options, and cash or stock bonuses. Generally, executive compensation is directly related to company profits in order to give the executive the incentive necessary for success of the organization. For a thorough discussion, see Cavitch, Tax Planning for Corporations and Shareholders, Ch. 5, Methods of Compensating the Executive (Matthew Bender). The compensation for general employees, and to some extent, for executives as well, can be based on the going rate for similar employees in the area.

a. Annual salary [see § 85.200, Section 4.01(a)]:
(1) In terms of lump sum per annum.

NOTE:
If the agreement is for the employment of a person to a position outside the United States, it should specify that the salary is payable in United States dollars, either directly to the employee or by deposit to the employee's credit in a bank designated by the employee. It should also state that if the employee desires payment in the currency of the place of employment, payment will be made at the then current rate of exchange [see § 85.212, P 5].

(2) Payable on specified schedule.

b. Commission payments:

(1) Specified percentage of net sales [see § 85.220, Section 3.01; see also § 85.311].

(2) With provision for:

(a) Drawing account [see § 85.220, Section 3.04; see also § 85.312]; or

(b) Salary in addition to commission [see § 85.314].

(3) Include definition of "net sales" [see § 85.220, Section 3.02].

(4) Specify when commissions are deemed earned [see § 85.220, Section 3.03].

(5) Set forth terms governing payment of commissions on sales to customers initially procured by employee [see § 85.313].

2. If appropriate, use provision for payment of salary plus commission [see § 85.314]:

a. Base salary plus commission on sales; or

b. Base salary plus commission if sales exceed specified level or quota.

3. Provide for changes in salary:

a. Annual increases in salary [see §§ 85.200, Section 4.01(b) (chief executives); 85.201, Section 4.01(b) (senior executives); see also § 85.530]:

(1) In sole discretion of person or body named as having authority to determine increases

[see § 85.302].

(2) Indicating approximately when increases can be expected.

b. Periodic cost of living adjustment [see § 85.301].

4. If deferred compensation is to be provided for, specify:

a. Subject to condition that employee remain with employer until specified age, or earlier retirement with consent of parties [see §§ 85.200, Section 4.02, 85.201, Section 4.02, 85.320 (fixed annuity)].

b. Amount of compensation expressed as:

(1) Percentage of compensation employee is receiving at specified date (usually date of retirement) [see § 85.321,]; or

(2) Lump sum [see § 85.201, Section 4.02(a)].

c. Payment schedule (usually equal monthly installments).

d. How long payments are to continue [see § 85.322 (predetermined sum payable over specified term)].

e. Whether, and if so, how, payments are to continue after employee's death [see § 85.201, Section 4.02(b)].

5. If salary is to continue during disability, specify [see § 85.200, Section 4.03]:

a. Agreement to pay stated percent of employee's annual salary.

b. Payment schedule.

c. Period during which payments will continue.

6. Include employee's promise that if part of employee's compensation is disallowed as income tax deduction for employer, employee will repay that portion [see § 85.200, Section 4.05].

7. Consider providing for severance pay in event employee's services are terminated for reasons other than cause [see §§ 85.221, Section 4.02, 85.343].

8. If compensation is to be expressed in terms of hourly wage, provide for payment of hourly wage [see § 85.290].

9. If overtime work is to be separately compensated, provide for overtime compensation [see § 85.291].

10. If employee starts in training position, include provision for compensation during training period [see § 85.303].

11. Consider use of provision guaranteeing payment of pension [see § 85.323].

12. Consider death benefit provisions:

a. Lump sum payment to surviving spouse or person to be designated by employee [see § 85.324]; or

b. Annuity to surviving spouse or lump sum to estate [see § 85.325].

c. Continuing salary to surviving spouse for balance of employment term [see § 85.326].

13. Provide for vacation pay [see § 85.340].

NOTE:
Vacation pay can be provided for in either the compensation or benefits portion of an employment contract.

14. Provide for sick leave with pay [see § 85.200, Section 6.02].

NOTE:
Sick leave with pay can be provided for in either the compensation or benefits portion of an employment contract. If the employer provides compensated sick leave, the employer must permit the employee to use his or her accrued sick leave, in an amount not less than the sick leave that would be accrued during six months at the employee's then-current rate of entitlement, to attend to an illness of the employee's child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner [Lab. Code § 233(a)]. An employer's absence-control policy violates this requirement if it counts sick leave taken for this purpose as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, or suspension [Lab. Code § 234].

15. Consider specifying which holidays employee can take with pay [see § 85.341].

16. If employee is in armed forces reserve or national guard, consider including provision for military training leave [see § 85.342].

[5] Employee Fringe Benefits

NOTE:
While vacation, sick leave, holiday, severance, and military leave pay might be considered benefits, they are also compensation items and, thus, are included in [4], above.

1. Provide for health care benefits [see § 85.350].

a. Under health and accident insurance plan; or

b. Under employer's self-insured plan.

c. With provision for notice of discontinuation of any coverage.

2. Provide for group-term life and accidental death and dismemberment insurance [see § 85.351].

3. Consider including provision under which employee will receive compensation upon premature death or dissolution of employer [see § 85.352]:

a. Uninsured payment from individual employer's estate or other employer's cash assets upon dissolution (with individual employer's promise to make adequate provision in his or her will to cover obligation); or

b. Funded by insurance on life of individual employer.

4. If appropriate, include provision for automobile:

a. State who will be responsible for supplying automobile [see § 85.200, Section 6.03(a); see also § 85.220, Section 7.01].

b. Specify when replacements will be made if supplied by employer [see § 85.200, Section 6.03].

c. Specify who will be responsible for maintenance [see § 85.200, Section 6.03(b)].

d. Specify who will be responsible for purchase and maintenance of insurance [see § 85.200, Section 6.03(c), 85.20, Section 7.02].

e. Specify termination if employee has suspended license.

5. For executive employee, consider provision for life insurance policy paid by employer [see § 85.200, Section 6.06].

[6] Employee Incentives

NOTE:

Employee incentives take the form of cash or stock bonuses (i.e., compensation payable in definite amounts), profit-sharing (i.e., additional compensation expressed as a percentage of net profits), or "buy-in" guarantees (i.e., provisions permitting the employee to purchase an interest in the business).

1. Consider use of cash bonus:

a. Based on profitability (either gross receipts or net profits) [see § 85.360]; or

NOTE:

Deducting the employer's expenses from its gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of a supplemental profit-sharing program does not run afoul of the statutory and regulatory prohibitions against deducting or recapturing unauthorized amounts from wages [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as the employees' regular wages are not subject to any unauthorized deductions for the employer's operating expenses [*Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 8909, at *34-56] .

b. Simple cash bonus in lump sum [see § 85.361]:

(1) Based on length of service.

(2) Payable after completion of specified term.

(3) Payable at end of employment year if employee remains an employee until that time.

c. Cash bonus payable at end of year, with proration if contract terminated prior to end of year [see § 85.362].

2. Consider use of cash and stock bonus combination [see § 85.381].

3. Consider straight stock bonus:

a. Stock bonus with stock valued at fair market value [see § 85.380, second alternative]; or

b. Restricted stock bonus [see § 85.382].

4. Consider provision agreeing to include employee as participant in employee stock ownership plan established by employer [see § 85.380, second alternative].

5. Consider profit-sharing provisions:

a. Profit-sharing as sole compensation based on performance measured by net profits of employer or branch managed by employee [see § 85.370].

b. Profit-sharing based on performance:

(1) Profits in excess of specified sum [see § 85.200, Section 5.01(a)]; or

(2) Profits that exceed net profits from prior year by specified percentage [see § 85.200, Section 5.01(a)].

(3) Subject to:
(a) Loss of entitlement upon termination of contract before end of entitlement year [see § 85.200, Section 5.01(b)]; or

(b) Discretionary adjustment upon termination of contract before end of entitlement year [see § 85.371].

(4) With right of employee to examine employer's books [see § 85.371].

c. Decreasing share of each level of profits as profits increase, in addition to salary [see § 85.372].

6. Consider use of stock options:

a. Incentive stock option agreement granting employee right to purchase stock for fair market value of stock when option is granted [see § 85.383].

b. Option granted at commencement of employment [see § 85.384]:

(1) Granting employee right to purchase specified amount of stock in lots at stated price.

(2) With right to exercise unexercised rights if terminated.

c. Options granted during each year of employment to purchase stock subject to resale to employer upon termination [see § 85.385].

7. If employee had stock options prior to employment contract, consider use of provision for continuation of those stock option rights [see § 85.386].

8. Consider use of provision giving employee right to purchase an interest in employer's business:

a. Provision giving employee an option to purchase specified interest after completion of stated number of years of employment [see § 85.400].

b. Agreement giving employee an option to purchase business upon employer's death or decision to sell [see § 85.401].

[7] Reimbursement of Expenses Incurred by Employee

1. Include provision for reimbursement of business expenses:

NOTE:
If the agreement is for the services of an employee outside the United States, the business expense clause should state whether reimbursement is to be made in United States dollars or local foreign currency [see § 85.212, P 11].

a. Consider defining "business expenses" as those specified in agreement or in employer's rules, policies and procedures [see § 85.220, Section 4.04].

b. Require employee to maintain substantiating records and submit them to employer [see § 85.410; see also § 85.220, Section 4.03].

2. Consider use of provision requiring employee use of employer credit cards to extent possible for business expenses [see § 85.411].

3. Consider provision for payment to employee of specified amount periodically to cover business expenses (as an alternative to provisions for reimbursement of business expenses) [see § 85.412].

4. Define "business expenses" as those specified in employer's rules, policies and procedures [see § 85.413].

5. Provide for reimbursement of moving expenses:

NOTE:
For pertinent provisions to include in the contract employing a person for a position outside the United States, see § 85.212, P 6.

a. Consider use of provision reimbursing employee for all deductible moving expenses [see § 85.420]; or

b. Consider limiting reimbursement of moving expenses to costs of moving employee and family and their household goods and personal effects to new work location [see § 85.421]; or

c. Provide only that transferred employee's moving expenses will be paid if authorized in advance by the employer [see § 85.421]; or

d. Provide for payment of specified amount of moving expenses of new employee [see § 85.422].

[8] Property Rights of Parties

1. If employee is hired to perform research and development work, include provision:

a. Assigning inventions of employee to employer [see § 85.430]; and/or

b. Excluding specified inventions from coverage of employment agreement [see § 85.433].

2. If desired, include provision for payment of royalties to employee on inventions assigned to employer [see § 85.431]:

a. Percentage royalty; or

b. Varying percentage royalty.

3. If employee retains ownership of inventions, consider provision giving employer perpetual royalty-free license for use thereof [see § 85.432].

4. If employee will have access to employer's trade secrets, include provisions restricting employee's use of those secrets:

NOTE:
For extensive discussion of an employer's rights in trade secrets, see § 85.440[1]. Provisions restricting an employee's use, misappropriation, or misuse of an employer's trade secrets can be combined into one provision [see § 85.200, Section 2.07] or separated into distinct provisions [see §§ 85.440, 85.471].

a. State that during course of employment, employee will have access to and become acquainted with employer's trade secrets, and include general description [see § 85.440, P (a); see also § 85.200, Section 2.07(a)].

NOTE:
For an alternate provision describing an employer's trade secrets, see § 85.441.

b. Specify that all files, records, documents, and other items pertinent to the particular contract situation are and remain employer's property and limit employee's ability to remove them from employer's premises [see § 85.440, P (b); see also § 85.200, Section 2.07(d)].

c. Set forth employee's promise and agreement not to misuse, misappropriate, or disclose employer's trade secrets [see § 85.451, P (c); see also § 85.200, Section 2.07(b)].

d. Include employee's agreement not to engage in unfair competition with respect to employer's trade secrets [see § 85.471; see also § 85.200, Section 2.07(c)]:

(1) Employee's acknowledgment and agreement that sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of employer's trade secrets constitute unfair competition.

(2) Employee's promise and agreement not to engage in any unfair competition with employer either:
(a) During term of agreement; or

(b) At any time thereafter.

5. Protect employer's customer lists from unfair competition by:

NOTE:
These provisions are specifically designed for use in agreements with salespersons. See Paragraph 6, below, for a description of a similar provision for use in other types of employment situations.

a. Defining customer lists as employer's trade secrets, stating that unauthorized use constitutes unfair competition, and stating employee's promise not to engage in unfair competition [see § 85.472, P (a)].

b. Restraining employee from soliciting employer's customers following termination of employer-employee relationship [see § 85.472].

c. Restraining employee from soliciting employer's other employees following termination of employer-employee relationship [see § 85.472].

d. Specifically providing that all records and books relating to customers of employer and/or transactions encountered in conduct of employment [see § 85.442]:

(1) Are employer's exclusive property; and

(2) Are to be returned to employer upon termination of employment.

6. Include provision requiring employee to return to employer all of employer's property upon termination of employment or when requested by employer [see § 85.450].

7. If employee's name is to be used, or is likely to be used, in employer's name, include provision governing use of employee's name as part of employer's trade name or trademark [see § 85.451]:

NOTE:
This type of provision is commonly included in agreements between a professional corporation and one of the principals; however, it may be used by any employer whose name will include the name of the employee.

a. Grant employer right to use employee's name in its trade name or trademark.

b. Limit use of employee's name in connection with any other enterprise.

[9] Obligations of Employer

1. If desired, state that employer will provide employee with compensation, incentives, benefits, and business expense reimbursement specified elsewhere [see § 85.200, Section 3.01].

NOTE:
Use of this type of provision is not essential; however, when an agreement is divided into separate articles, as are most of the forms in this chapter, obligations such as compensation, incentives, benefits, and business expense reimbursement are generally found in other articles, while certain statutory and other unclassified obligations of employers are stated in the article entitled "Obligations of Employer."

2. If appropriate, include employer's promise to provide employee with private office, stenographic help, office equipment and supplies, and other facilities and services, suitable to employee's position and adequate for performance of employee's duties [see § 85.200, Section 3.02].

3. Include provision obligating employer to indemnify employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by employee as direct result of discharge of employee's duties on employer's behalf [see § 85.460; see also § 85.200, Section 3.03].

4. Include provision permitting employee to examine books relating to compensation, if agreement permits employee to share in profits or otherwise appropriate [see § 85.461; see also § 85.220, Section 6.02 (salesperson's contract)].

5. If employee is hired for overseas position, specify employer's obligation to maintain workers' compensation insurance [see § 85.212, P 8].

[10] Obligations of Employee

1. Prohibit competitive activities on part of employee against employer during term of employment [see § 85.470; see also § 85.200, Section 2.04].

NOTE:
Certain activities, such as ownership of minor stockholdings in competing businesses, might be construed as competitive activities and should be specifically excluded from the general prohibition against competition. Thus, § 85.470 excludes such minor interests.

2. Include provision prohibiting employee from engaging in unfair competition after termination of employment [see § 85.471].

NOTE:
This type of provision is commonly used as part of a provision designed to protect the property rights of the employer to its trade secrets [see [8], above]. However, it can be stated separately in the contract article governing the obligations of the employee.

3. Consider use of provision for liquidated damages for breach of noncompetition clause [see § 85.473].

NOTE:
Although a liquidated damages provision may seem attractive as a deterrent to the employee, it can have undesirable effects on the employer; for discussion, see § 85.473[1][c].

4. Set forth provision indemnifying employer from losses caused by employee's negligence or misconduct [see § 85.480].

5. Include provision requiring employee to be covered by surety bond [see § 85.481]:

NOTE:
This type of provision should be used when an employee will handle substantial sums of money that belong either to the employer or to customers of the employer in order to protect the employer from any loss caused by wrongful acts of the employee.

a. Either require employee to:
(1) Qualify for bond and pay bond premiums; or

(2) Furnish bond and pay bond premiums.

b. Specify that failure of employee to qualify for bond within specified period will result in termination.

6. If desired, include provision requiring employee to make deposit as security for his or her performance [see § 85.481].

7. If appropriate to protect key personnel or for policy reasons, require employee to undergo regular physical examination [see § 85.490].

8. If necessary to protect employer's goodwill and ability to maintain profitable operation, consider including "morality clause" [see § 85.491].

9. If necessary to protect employer from theft or other illegal activities on part of employee, consider inclusion of grant of permission by employee to search his or her person and effects, including desk, locker, e-mail and voicemail [see § 85.492].

10. If employee is hired for overseas position, specify employee's liability for payment of United States and foreign taxes [see § 85.212, P 7].

11. If employee is a salesperson, consider including requirement that employee:

a. Assist in collection of sums due from customers [see § 85.220, Section 2.06].

b. Submit periodic written reports [see § 85.220, Section 2.07].

12. If employee must be licensed or certified to perform his or her job, include:

a. Provision requiring current licensing or certification as a condition of continued employment.

b. Provision specifying whether employer or employee will pay licensing fees and costs of any mandatory continuing education associated in maintaining license.

[11] Termination of Employment

1. Consider use of provision for termination only for [see § 85.500]:

NOTE:
This type of provision states the three grounds for termination of an employment contract for a specified term [Lab. Code § 2924] and is therefore appropriate for inclusion in any such contract. Since a contract that has no specified term can be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other [Lab. Code § 2922], this provision is not appropriate for inclusion in contracts at will.

a. Breach of duty.

b. Neglect of duty.

c. Continued incapacity to perform.

2. Alternatively, consider use of provision for termination based on any of the statutory grounds [see § 85.501]:

NOTE:
This type of provision states all of the statutory grounds for termination of an employment contract, whether for a specified term or at will [Lab. Code §§ 2920-2924].

a. Death of employee.

b. Loss by employee of legal capacity.

c. Loss by employer of legal capacity to contract.

d. Willful breach of duty by employee in course of employment, unless waived by employer.

e. Habitual neglect by employee of employment duties, unless waived by employer.

f. Continued incapacity on part of employee to perform duties, unless waived by employer.

g. Willful or permanent breach of obligations of employer to employee under agreement, unless waived by employee.

h. Death or dissolution of employer or any partner in business operated by employer.

i. Circumstances making continuation of employment impossible or impracticable.

NOTE:
For provisions spelling this ground out in greater detail, see §§ 85.520-85.523, see also Paragraph III(K)(7), below.

3. Consider use of provision for termination upon good faith dissatisfaction of employer [see § 85.502; see also § 85.220, Section 2.09 (employment continues as long as services are satisfactory)].

4. If employee is in top-level managerial position, consider provision terminating agreement for failure to meet specified profit standard and designating termination as one for cause [see § 85.200, Section 8.02].

5. Consider including provision for termination at employer's option if employee becomes permanently disabled [see § 85.503].

6. If appropriate, include provision stating when garnishment of employee's wages constitutes grounds for termination [see § 85.504].

NOTE:
Generally, this type of provision should not be necessary in the case of top- or mid-level executives or managerial personnel; nor would it be practical for use with respect to an employee whose services are needed, regardless of his or her personal problems. However, counsel may find cases in which the employer may desire to limit the administrative burden caused by garnishments, in which case this provision could be used.

Use of this provision is limited by law. The mere threat of garnishment is not grounds for discharge. Moreover, no employer may discharge an employee because the employee's wages have been subjected to garnishment for the payment of one judgment. Any contravening provision of an employment contract is void as against public policy [Lab. Code § 2929(b)].

7. Include provision for termination upon notice from terminating party to other party [see § 85.510; see also § 85.200, Section 8.06].

8. Consider use of provisions for termination upon extinction of subject matter of employment contract:

a. Termination on discontinuance of employer's business [see § 85.520].

b. Termination on revocation or suspension of employer's liquor license [see § 85.521].

c. Provision governing termination upon merger, transfer of assets, or dissolution of corporate employer [see § 85.522].

d. Provision governing termination in event of bankruptcy or similar proceeding involving other party [see § 85.523].

9. Provide for effect of termination:

a. Consider use of provision that employee's right to compensation (other than vested rights) ends as of date of termination [see § 85.530]; or

b. Consider use of provision stating which rights to compensation are forfeited upon termination [see § 85.531]; or

c. Consider "golden parachute" provision, i.e., agreement to pay terminated executive specified number of years annual salary at rate of compensation current in year of termination [see § 85.200, Section 8.05].

[12] Effect of Breach of Contract

1. Consider use of provision for liquidated damages in event that employee refuses to work or to continue to work for employer as agreed [see § 85.540].

2. Consider use of provision stating that [see § 85.200, Section 2.05]:

a. Services to be performed are of special character that gives them peculiar value.

b. Loss of services cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in action at law.

c. Employee expressly agrees that employer is entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent or remedy breach of contract by employee.

[13] Arbitration or Other Resolution of Disputes

1. Consider use of provision under which either party may request arbitration of matters in controversy [see § 85.550].

2. Alternatively, consider use of provision for compulsory arbitration of matters in controversy [see § 85.551].

3. Consider providing for other forms of alternative dispute resolution, such as mediation.

NOTE:
For detailed coverage of arbitration, mediation, and other types of alternative dispute resolution (ADR), including forms of contractual provisions for each type of ADR, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 30, ADR: Using Alternative Dispute Resolution through Ch. 38, ADR: Reference (Matthew Bender).

[14] General Provisions

1. Specify manner of giving notice to the other party [see § 85.200, Section 9.01].

NOTE:

For discussion of this type of provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

2. Provide for attorneys' fees and costs [see § 85.200, Section 9.03].

NOTE:
For discussion of this type of provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

3. State that contract contains entire agreement of the parties [see § 85.200, Section 9.04]

NOTE:
For discussion of this type of provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

4. Provide for modification of contract only by subsequent written agreement [see § 85.200, Section 9.05].

NOTE:
For discussion of such modifications, see § 85.21[4].

5. Specify the effect of any waiver [see § 85.200, Section 9.06].

6. Provide for event that part of contract is declared invalid, either [see § 85.200, Section 9.07]:

NOTE:
For discussion of this type of provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

a. Remaining provisions of contract to continue in full force and effect [see Civ. Code § 1670.5(a) (if contract contains unconscionable provision, court may sever or limit application of that provision, and enforce remainder of contract)].

b. Invalid provision to be deemed amended as court or arbitrator finds reasonable.

NOTE:
Generally, the courts lack the power to reform unenforceable contract provisions (as opposed to merely severing or limiting them). However, if an employment agreement contains a clause in which the parties expressly agree to allow the court or an arbitrator to sever or modify any unreasonable or unenforceable provisions, the arbitration provision as so modified may be enforceable [Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-746, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] .

7. State that California law governs agreement [cf. Olinick v. BMG Entertainment (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1296-1300, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268 (enforcing choice-of-law and forum-selection provisions subjecting all causes of action arising from employment agreement to New York law and jurisdiction of New York courts); see § 85.200, Section 9.08].

NOTE:
For discussion of this type of provision, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

8. Provide for payment of sums due deceased employee [see § 85.200, Section 9.09].

9. Include provision governing assignment of contract by employee, if appropriate.

NOTE:

In most cases, contracts for personal services can be performed only by the contracting employee. It is obviously appropriate in such contracts to prohibit assignment by the employee. A provision that prohibited assignment of a newspaper dealer's contract "voluntarily, by operation of law, or otherwise" has been held enforceable and the phrase "by operation of law" has been held to mean that the contract did not survive the employee's death [Miller v. San Francisco Newspaper Agency (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 315, 317, 210 Cal. Rptr. 159] .

§ 85.121 Drafting Guide for Agreements Continuing Employment

[1] Agreement Continuing Previous Employment

1. Draft new agreement to employ and be employed rather than continuing on under former agreement [see § 85.230, P 1].

2. Include new term unless contract is at will [see § 85.230, P 1].

3. Specify terms of employment, either:

a. Draft entirely new agreement; or

b. State that parties agree to continue under former agreement except for specified changes, stating that specified provision of former agreement is amended to read as set forth immediately below that statement [see § 85.230, P 2].

[2] Agreement Employing Former Officer as Consultant

1. Designate parties [see § 85.230].

a. Name of each party.

b. Address of each party.

c. Designation of party as either "employer" or "employee."

d. Description of employer as corporation, partnership or sole proprietor.

2. Add recitals if desired [see § 85.223]:

a. Employer's trade or business.

b. Employer's reasons for employing employee:
(1) Employee's special skill, background, or expertise.

(2) Employee's position as major shareholder, principal, or partner of employer.

(3) Other reasons.

3. State that employer hires employee and employee accepts employment [see § 85.231, P 1].

4. Specify employment period [see § 85.231, P 1]:

a. Specified term;

NOTE:
This period generally should be greater than one month and less than seven years [Lab. Code §§ 2922, 2855]. It may specify the dates on which the period of employment begins and ends.

b. Employee's lifetime [see § 85.240]; or

c. At will.

5. Describe duties of consultant [see § 85.231, P 2].

6. Set forth salary agreed upon between parties [see § 85.231, P 3(a)].

7. Specify method of increasing salary [see § 85.231, P 3(b)].

8. Include prohibition against competitive activity and unfair competition [see § 85.231, P 4].

9. State whether merger, transfer of assets, or dissolution of employer will or will not terminate agreement [see § 85.231, P 4].

§ 85.122 Drafting Guide for Apprentice Agreements

NOTE:

An "apprentice" is a person who is at least 16 years of age and who has entered into a written apprentice agreement with an employer, employers' association, employees' organization, or a joint committee representing both employees and employers. The term of an apprenticeship must be approved by the California Director of Industrial Relations acting as the Administrator of Apprenticeship (the Administrator) [Lab. Code § 3077]. Apprentice agreements must include the provisions listed below [Lab. Code §§ 3077, 3078].

[1] Introductory Matters

1. Set forth names of contracting parties [Lab. Code § 3078(a)].

2. Include apprentice's date of birth [Lab. Code § 3078(b)].

3. State the trade, craft, or business which apprentice is to be taught [Lab. Code § 3078(c)].

NOTE:

The apprentice agreement must provide for participation by the apprentice in an approved program of training through employment and through education in related and supplemental subjects [Lab. Code § 3077].

4. Specify time when apprenticeship will begin and end [Lab. Code § 3078(c)].

5. Include statement showing [Lab. Code § 3078(d)]:

a. Number of hours to be spent by apprentice in work.

NOTE:
An apprentice agreement must provide for not less than 2,000 hours of reasonably continuous employment [Lab. Code § 3077].

b. Learning objectives to be accomplished through related and supplemental instruction.

[2] Type of Employment, Wages, and Termination

1. Set forth schedule of [Lab. Code § 3078(e)]:

a. Those processes in trade or industry divisions in which apprentice is to be taught.

b. Approximate time to be spent in each process.

2. Include statement of graduated scale of wages to be paid [Lab. Code § 3078(f)].

3. Specify whether apprentice will be paid for attending school [Lab. Code § 3078(f)].

4. Provide for termination [Lab. Code § 3078(g)]:

a. By program sponsor at written request of either party during probationary period of not more than 1,000 hours of employment and not more than 72 hours of related instruction.

b. By Administrator upon mutual agreement of all parties.

c. Through cancellation by Administrator for good and sufficient reason.

5. Provide that all controversies or differences concerning the agreement that cannot be adjusted locally (or are not covered by collective-bargaining agreement) must be submitted to Administrator for determination under provisions of Lab. Code § 3081.

6. Provide that contract can be transferred to another employer if initial employer is unable to fulfill its obligation under apprenticeship agreement, and if [Lab. Code § 3078(i)]:

a. Approved by Administrator.

b. Apprentice consents.

c. Other employer agrees to assume obligations under apprentice agreement.

7. Include clause disclaiming liability on part of other contracting party for injury sustained by apprentice engaged in schoolwork after termination of apprentice's employment [Lab. Code § 3078(k)].

8. Include other terms that are approved or prescribed by California Apprenticeship Council [Lab. Code § 3078(j); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 200 et seq.].

§ 85.200 Contract for Employment of Chief Executive of Business Organization

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract that may be used to employ a chief executive of a business organization. It is drafted for use between a corporation and its president; however, it may be adapted for use by any type of business organization.

For an agreement to use in the employment of other senior executives, see § 85.201. Contracts for use in the employment of mid-level managerial personnel are set forth in §§ 85.210-85.213. For contracts that may be used in hiring non-executive personnel, see §§ 85.220-85.223. Agreements continuing previous employment are set forth in §§ 85.230-85.231.

[i] In General

Employment contracts for executive personnel differ generally in two respects from those typically used for non-executive employees. First, the provisions relating to duties are usually very general and brief, stating little more than the title of the office held by the employee involved. Second, the provisions dealing with compensation and other employee benefits are designed to give the executive incentive to exert the best possible efforts for the development and expansion of the business of the corporation and to remain with the firm, as well as to reduce the impact of income taxes on the executive to the extent that this is possible.

[ii] Using Additional or Alternative Provisions

The attorney should bear in mind that this form represents only one of the infinite number of ways such a contract might be drafted. The attorney preparing an agreement for the employment of an executive employee should carefully consider the needs of the firm and the desires of the prospective executive. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide set forth in § 85.120 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

The Drafting Guide describes the particular provisions included in this chapter and indicates their location, either in the other complete contracts or the particular additional or alternative contract provisions set forth in §§ 85.240-85.551. If individual provisions used in this form do not fit the particular factual problem confronting the attorney, the other forms referred to in the Drafting Guide may be more suitable. The comments to those forms discuss the various legal problems relevant to the provisions dealing with each particular subject.

[iii] Compliance With Organizational Formalities

Before an employment contract involving an officer of a corporation or other organization is executed, the attorney should make certain that all provisions of the articles of incorporation or partnership agreement, shareholders' agreement (if any), bylaws, and applicable statutes have been complied with. Counsel should also be sure that the board of directors or its equivalent has authorized the hiring and granted its representative authority to enter into the employment agreement. For a general discussion of this matter, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions . The usual procedure is for the board of directors or its equivalent to pass a resolution authorizing its chairman to execute a contract with the president and another authorizing the president to execute employment contracts on behalf of the firm with subsidiary officers [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions]. For a corporate shareholders' agreement providing for and authorizing the employment of all shareholders as officers, see Ch. 8C, Close Corporaation Shareholder Agreements, § 8C.200[2], Section 1.05.

[c] Term of Employment in Contract for Personal Services

[i] Specified Term

An employment contract that contains no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other. Employment for a specified term means employment for a period greater than one month [Lab. Code § 2922]. "Termination at will" generally means that the parties can terminate the employment for any reason or no reason at all; however, this rule is subject to a number of important limitations and exceptions [see § 85.24]. This agreement provides for employment for a specified term [see Section 1.01 of Form].

From the employer's point of view, if an employment period is stipulated in an employment contract, the period ordinarily should not exceed seven years because most contracts for personal services may not be enforced by the employer against the employee beyond seven years from the commencement of service under the agreement [Lab. Code § 2855 (apprenticeship contracts excluded)]. This seven-year period is measured from the time the employee commences service. Thus, if a contract calls for intermittent services to be rendered by the employee, it cannot be enforced against the employee after seven years from the commencement of service even though the amount of time that services were actually rendered by the employee total less than seven years [De Haviland v. Warner Bros. Pictures (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 225, 230-232, 153 P.2d 983] .

[ii] Lifetime Contract

If an employment contract states a term defined by the employee's lifetime, it binds the employee for only the first seven years of its duration. After that time the employee can discontinue services without any contractual liability [see Lab. Code § 2855]. On the other hand, the employer is bound by a lifetime contract. An agreement for services to be rendered during the entire lifetime of an employee has been held to be enforceable against the employer despite an attempted cancellation by the employer eight years after the commencement of the employment. The contract was not fatally defective merely because it did not provide a presently definite time for its termination because a contract having a duration that depends on an event that must inevitably occur, namely death, is definite and certain [Bradner v. Vasquez (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 338, 342, 344, 227 P.2d 559] . For an alternate contract clause providing for a lifetime term, see § 85.240.

[d] Duties of Employee

[i] In General

An employee must substantially comply with each direction of the employer concerning the services to be performed, unless obedience of the direction is impossible, unlawful, or would impose new and unreasonable burdens on the employee [Lab. Code § 2856]. The employee must perform in accordance with the methods and rules in force at the place of performance unless otherwise directed by the employer, it is impractical to do so, or it would be manifestly injurious to the employer for the employee to do so [see Lab. Code § 2857].

An employee must exercise a reasonable degree of skill unless, before employing him or her, the employer had notice of the employer's lack of skill [Lab. Code § 2858]. The employee must use all the skill that he or she possesses to the extent required to perform the service specified by the employer [Lab. Code § 2859].

If an employee has any business to transact on his or her own account similar to that entrusted by the employer, the employee must always give preference to the employer's business [Lab. Code § 2863]. Reflecting this requirement, and the duties of loyalty and fidelity [see § 85.11[4]], Section 2.03 of this form obligates the employee to devote his or her entire time and energy to the employer's business. That provision makes it clear that the employee's other obligations cannot interfere with the duties specified in the contract.

For further discussion of an employee's obligations to the employer in general, see § 85.11.

[ii] Drafting Considerations

Although the usual contract states the duties of the president in very general terms [see [2], Section 2.01, below], it is important to specify what actions, if any, cannot be taken by the president without the prior approval of the organization's governing body. Section 2.02 of this form specifies those actions requiring board approval and illustrates one possible way to handle this matter. It is suggested that the attorney discuss this problem with the organization's governing body or principals before drafting the contract.

For alternate or additional provisions relating to duties, see §§ 85.250-85.276.

[iii] Competitive Activities and Disclosure of Trade Secrets

This form contains a provision prohibiting the employee from engaging in any type of direct or indirect competition with the employer during the term of the employment contract, or from soliciting any fellow employees to engage in competitive activities [see [2], Sections 2.03(b), 2.04, below]. In a particular situation it may be desirable to include certain specified exceptions, such as ownership of a small amount of stock in a corporation that competes with the employer.

This form also contains a provision designed to protect the employer's trade secrets and prevent the employee from disclosing them during or after employment [see [2], Section 2.07, below]. It does this by characterizing any unauthorized disclosure as unfair competition and requiring the employee not to engage in any acts of unfair competition. For discussion of the use of such a provision, and its effects, see § 85.440[1].

[iv] Indemnification of Employee for Losses From Performing Duties

This form includes an indemnification provision requiring the employer to indemnify the employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by the employee as a direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties [see [2], Section 3.03, below]. Although this type of provision merely states an obligation imposed by statute [Lab. Code § 2802(a)], the attorney representing the employee may desire to have this provision included so that the client will be aware at all times of the employer's obligation in this respect. The attorney for the employer can hardly object to the inclusion of this provision, particularly since the statutory obligation cannot be waived by the parties [Lab. Code § 2804; see Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-481, 169 P.3d 889 (agreement between employer and employee for reimbursement by method that approximates employee's actual expenses does not relieve employer of statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement and does not preclude employee from suing to recover full reimbursement); see also Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 950-955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 292-296, 189 P.3d 285 (contract provision in which employee releases "any and all" claims against employer does not waive employee's right to indemnity under Lab. Code § 2802(a))].

The employer must indemnify an employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by the employee as a direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties or as a result of following the employer's directions. This obligation to indemnify applies even if the directions of the employer are unlawful, unless the employee believed them to be unlawful at the time he or she obeyed them [Lab. Code § 2802(a)].

This obligation applies only to losses incurred in direct consequence of the discharge of the duties of the employee and not to losses suffered incidentally to the employment. In other words, there must be a direct, unbroken connection between the loss and the discharge of the duties of the employee. Thus, for example, the statute has been held inapplicable to the loss of tools destroyed by fire after normal business hours. The tools were not then being used in the discharge of the duties of the employee or in obedience to the instructions of the employer, and the employee was not required to leave the tools at the place of employment [Earll v. McCoy (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 44, 46, 253 P.2d 86] .

Expenses subject to indemnification include attorneys' fees incurred by the employee not only in defending against claims arising from the employee's discharge of duties, but also in proceedings against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification [Lab. Code § 2802(c); O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local #856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1157, 1160-1161, 158 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2908] . For this purpose, a claim against an employee arises from the employee's discharge of duties if (1) the employee's actions giving rise to the claim are within the scope of employment; and (2) the claim is proven to be unfounded, that is, without merit [O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local No. 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158-1160 (third party's claim against employee is unfounded as matter of law if third party dismisses claim with prejudice; that dismissal was part of settlement did not mean claim had merit, since settlement did not include any admission of liability by employee)].

If the employee brings an action against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification, an award for the reimbursement of the employee's expenditures or losses must carry interest at the same rate as judgments in civil actions, accruing from the date on which the employee incurred the expenditures or losses [Lab. Code § 2802(b)].

For further discussion of the employer's duty to reimburse the employee's work-related expenses, including permissible methods of reimbursement of recurring expenses, see § 85.12[3].

[e] Compensation of Employee

[i] Contents of Form

Compensation includes periodic monetary earnings as well as all other benefits to which an employee is entitled under an employment agreement [see Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 600, 607, 83 Cal. Rptr. 202, 463 P.2d 426] . Thus, this form distinguishes or separates executive compensation into four separate categories: "regular" compensation, incentive compensation, employee benefits, and reimbursement of business expenses. Regular compensation includes annual salary with provisions for annual adjustments [see Section 4.01 of Form]. For an alternative form of payment--the hourly wage--see § 85.290. For a provision for overtime compensation to use in conjunction with the basic salary provision, see § 85.291. For provisions changing the rate of compensation, see §§ 85.300 to 85.303. For compensation based on sales or work produced, see §§ 85.310 to 85.304.

"Compensation" also includes deferred compensation, and this form provides for such compensation payable in monthly sums commencing upon retirement [see Section 4.02 of Form]. For other deferred compensation provisions, see §§ 85.320-85.326. For discussion of deferred compensation, see § 85.320[1].

Incentive compensation can include provisions for an annual cash profit-sharing bonus tied to productivity [see Section 5.01 of Form] and designed to give the employee additional incentives for productivity, induce him or her to remain with the firm, and lessen the impact of income taxes [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56 (deduction of employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of profit-sharing program does not run afoul of statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from salary [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as no unauthorized deductions are made from employee's regular salary)]. Incentive compensation can also include stock bonus [see Section 5.02 of Form] and stock option provisions [see Section 5.03 of Form]. The purpose of providing stock to a corporate executive is to make sure that the executive has an ownership interest and thus a further incentive to see that the corporation remains profitable.

For alternative or additional cash bonus and profit-sharing provisions, see §§ 85.360-85.372; other stock bonus and stock option provisions are set forth in §§ 85.380-85.386. Provisions granting the employee the right to purchase an interest in the employer's business are contained in §§ 85.400-85.401.

The employee benefits provided by this form are annual vacation [see Section 6.01 of the Form], sick leave [see Section 6.02 of the Form], use of a company-owned automobile [see Section 6.03 of the Form], death benefits [see Section 6.04 of the Form], medical coverage [see Section 6.05 of the Form], and company-purchased life insurance [see Section 6.06 of the Form]. Other vacation and sick pay, leave of absence, and severance pay provisions are set forth in §§ 85.340-85.343. Alternative fringe benefit provisions are contained in §§ 85.350-85.352.

The range of benefits included in this form may be greater than generally provided in the typical chief executive's employment contract. However, these provisions are included in order to illustrate the types of benefits that can be given such an employee. Again, it is suggested that the attorney discuss the benefits issue with the prospective chief executive as well as the governing body or principals before drafting the contract.

The provision in this form making a specified sum per annum available to the president for entertainment expenses [see Section 7.01 of Form] is unusual. Such a provision, if used at all, is generally only made applicable to a president or top executive of a large corporation. It is included in this form to illustrate the type of provision that can be used if authorized in advance by the board of directors.

A compensation provision is an essential element of the employment contract. It is always present, whether expressly or impliedly [McInerney v. Mack (1917) 34 Cal. App. 153, 157, 166 P. 867] . The attorney should take special care to be sure that the compensation package selected will meet the needs of the client and comply with any applicable federal or state laws governing the amount, manner, or time of payment [see § 85.12[1]].

[iii] Periodic Payment of Wages

The general rule is that wages are due and payable twice during each calendar month on days designated in advance by the employer as the regular paydays [Lab. Code § 204]. However, in general, executive, administrative, and professional personnel may be paid once a month within seven days of the close of their monthly payroll period [Lab. Code § 204, 204.2, 204c]. For discussion, see § 85.12[1]. In addition, wages earned and unpaid at the time of discharge of an employee are generally due and payable immediately [Lab. Code § 201; see Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 82-94, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218 (employee is "discharged" for purposes of Lab. Code § 201 not only when employee is involuntarily terminated from ongoing employment relationship, but also when employee is released after completing particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired); see also § 85.12[2][a]]. For further discussion of these matters, see § 85.290[1].

[iv] Reimbursement of Excessive Salary

This form includes a provision [see Section 3.06 of Form] that has the effect of limiting the employee's salary to the amount that the employer may legitimately deduct for income tax purposes. An employer may deduct reasonable salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1)]. Although the disallowance of excessive salaries generally arises in the case of a closely held corporation in which the shareholders are the key employees [see Treas. Reg. § 1.162-7(b)(1)], excessive salary may also arise with highly paid executives in publicly held organizations. This clause not only limits salary to an amount that is deductible by the employer, but also gives the employee a deduction for any amounts repaid by the employee [see Berger v. Commissioner (1962) 37 T.C. 1026 (voluntary repayment not deductible because not pursuant to preexisting contract)].

[v] Reimbursement of Disallowed Business Expense Deduction

This form includes a provision requiring the employee to repay the employer for business expenses incurred by and reimbursed to the employee and later disallowed as an income tax deduction [see Section 7.03 of Form]. Such a provision can benefit the employer beyond the simple repayment of the disallowed deduction for business expenses--by providing the employee with an incentive to insure that all business expenses claimed to have been incurred on behalf of the employer will be deductible.

If a business expense is disallowed as a tax deduction, the reason generally is either that there was no statutory basis for the deduction or that the deduction was not substantiated by adequate records and other sufficient evidence [see I.R.C. § 274]. For discussion of the deduction of business expense deductions, see § 85.410[1].

[i] Statutory Grounds

Willful breach or habitual neglect of duty by the employee, or continued incapacity to perform that duty, constitute grounds for termination of an employment contract for a specified term [Lab. Code § 2924]. Every employment contract is terminated by expiration of the term specified in the contract, extinction of the subject of the contract, the death of the employee, or the legal incapacity of the employee to act as an employee [Lab. Code § 2920]. If the employer lacks legal capacity to contract, and if the power of the employee is not coupled with an interest in its subject (e.g., the employee is not also a major shareholder in the employer), the employment is terminated by notice to the employee of the employer's lack of capacity [see Lab. Code § 2921]. A power coupled with an interest is referred to as a "power given as security" [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 138].

An employee can terminate an employment for a specified term whenever the employer commits a willful or permanent breach of its obligations to the employee [Lab. Code § 2925].

For further discussion of the law governing the termination of employment contracts, see §§ 85.24, 85.500[1][c], [d].

Separate and alternative termination provisions are contained in §§ 85.500-85.523.

[ii] Contents of Form

This form includes a standard provision terminating the contract for breach or neglect of duty on the part of the employee (two of the statutory grounds for termination [Lab. Code § 2924]) and designating the termination as "for cause" [see Section 8.01 of Form]. It also includes a provision giving the employer the option to terminate the employment of the president "for cause" if the corporate net profits are less than a specified sum [see Section 8.02 of Form] and a provision permitting termination of the agreement other than for cause [see Section 8.03 of Form].

This form includes a clause that specifies whether or not the contract is terminated by the merger, transfer of all of the assets, or dissolution of the employing corporation [see Section 8.04 of Form]. This provision is used because failure to deal with the issue can lead to a difficult problem of interpretation in determining whether the contract is terminated by the occurrence of any of those events. Because of the importance of this matter from the standpoint of the employee, the employer, any prospective merging corporation, and any prospective purchaser of the assets of the employing corporation, and in order to reduce the possibility of litigation, it is strongly suggested that every employment contract involving the president of a corporation include a provision specifically covering this point.

[2] FORM

Contract for Employment of Chief Executive of Business Organization

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT FOR CHIEF EXECUTIVE

_____[name of employer] ("Employer") [, a _____ (California corporation or partnership or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. TERM OF EMPLOYMENT

Specified Period

Section 1.01. Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment with Employer for a period of [specify term greater than one month and less than seven years, e.g., three years] beginning on_____[date] and terminating on_____[date].

Automatic Renewal

Section 1.02. This agreement shall be renewed automatically for succeeding terms of [specify period, e.g., three years each] unless either party gives notice to the other at least [specify notice period, e.g., 60] days prior to the expiration of any term of_____[his or her or its] intention not to renew [pursuant to Employer's bylaws].

"Employment Term" Defined

Section 1.03. "Employment term" refers to the entire period of employment of Employee by Employer, whether for the periods provided above, or whether terminated earlier as hereinafter provided or extended by mutual agreement between Employer and Employee.

ARTICLE 2. DUTIES AND OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEE

General Duties

Section 2.01. Employee shall serve as the President of_____[name of employer]. In_____[his or her] capacity as President of_____[name of employer], Employee shall do and perform all services, acts, or things necessary or advisable to manage and conduct the business of Employer, including the hiring and firing of all employees other than the officers of Employer, subject at all times to the policies set by Employer's Board of Directors, and to the consent of the Board when required by the terms of this contract.

Matters Requiring Consent of Board of Directors

Section 2.02. Employee shall not, without specific approval of Employer's Board of Directors, do or contract to do any of the following:

(1) Borrow on behalf of Employer during any one fiscal year an amount in excess of $_____.

(2) Permit any customer of Employer to become indebted to Employer in an amount in excess of $_____.

(3) Purchase capital equipment for amounts in excess of the amounts budgeted for expenditure by the Board of Directors.

(4) Sell any single capital asset of Employer having a market value in excess of $_____ or a total of capital assets during a fiscal year having a market value in excess of $_____.

(5) Terminate the services of any other officer of Employer or hire any replacement of any officer whose services have been terminated.

[(6) Commit Employer to the expenditure of more than $_____ in the development and sale of new _____ (products or services).]

Devotion to Employer's Business

Section 2.03. (a) Employee shall devote_____[his or her] entire productive time, ability, and attention to the business of Employer during the term of this contract.

(b) Employee shall not engage in any other business duties or pursuits whatsoever, or directly or indirectly render any services of a business, commercial, or professional nature to any other person or organization, whether for compensation or otherwise, without the prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors. [However, the expenditure of reasonable amounts of time for _____ (describe permissible outside activities, e.g., educational, charitable, or professional activities) shall not be deemed a breach of this agreement if those activities do not materially interfere with the services required under this agreement (Optional: and shall not require the prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors).]

(c) This agreement shall not prohibit Employee from making passive personal investments or conducting private business affairs if those activities do not materially interfere with the services required under this agreement. However, Employee shall not directly or indirectly acquire, hold, or retain any interest in any business competing with or similar in nature to the business of Employer.

Competitive Activities

Section 2.04. (a) During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of Employer.

(b) Employee agrees that during the term of this contract and for a period of [reasonable period, e.g., one year] after termination of this agreement, Employee shall not directly or indirectly solicit, hire, recruit, or encourage any other employee of Employer to leave Employer.

Uniqueness of Employee's Services

Section 2.05. Employee represents and agrees that the services to be performed under the terms of this contract are of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, and intellectual character that gives them a peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law. Employee therefore expressly agrees that Employer, in addition to any other rights or remedies that Employer may possess, shall be entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent or remedy a breach of this contract by Employee.

Indemnification for Negligence or Misconduct

Section 2.06. Employee shall indemnify and hold Employer harmless from all liability for loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Employee.

Trade Secrets

Section 2.07. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

Services as Consultant

Section 2.08. Following [the employment term or Employee's retirement], and if the employment term has not been terminated for cause, Employee shall make_____[his or her] advice and counsel available to Employer for [specify period, e.g., such a period as Employer may desire]. The parties agree that this advice and counsel shall not entail full time service and shall be consistent with Employee's retirement status.

Use of Employee's Name

Section 2.09. (a) Employer shall have the right to use the name of Employee as part of the trade name or trademark of Employer if it should be deemed advisable to do so. Any trade name or trademark, of which the name of Employee is a part, that is adopted by Employer during the employment of Employee may be used thereafter by Employer for as long as Employer deems advisable.

(b) Employee shall not, either during the term of this agreement or at any time thereafter, use or permit the use of_____[his or her] name in the trade name or trademark of any other enterprise if that other enterprise is engaged in a business similar in any respect to that conducted by Employer, unless that trade name or trademark clearly indicates that the other enterprise is a separate entity entirely distinct from and not to be confused with Employer and unless that trade name or trademark excludes any words or symbols stating or suggesting prior or current affiliation or connection by that other enterprise or its employees with Employer.

ARTICLE 3. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYER

General Description

Section 3.01. Employer shall provide Employee with the compensation, incentives, benefits, and business expense reimbursement specified elsewhere in this agreement.

Office and Staff

Section 3.02. Employer shall provide Employee with [list specific equipment, e.g., ISDN line, laptop, cellular telephone], office space, and administrative support suitable to Employee's position and adequate for the performance of_____[his or her] duties.

Indemnification of Losses of Employee

Section 3.03. Employer shall indemnify Employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by Employee in direct consequence of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties on Employer's behalf.

ARTICLE 4. COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEE

Annual Salary

Section 4.01. (a) As compensation for the services to be performed hereunder, Employee shall receive a salary at the rate of $_____ per annum, payable not less than [once each month, on or before the 26th day of each month or specify more frequent pay periods per month] during the employment term.

(b) Employee shall receive such annual increases in salary as may be determined by Employer's Board of Directors in its sole discretion at its [specify which meeting, e.g., annual December] meeting.

Deferred Compensation

Section 4.02. If Employee remains in the employ of Employer until age [specifiy, e.g., 65], or on earlier retirement on mutual written consent of both Employee and Employer, Employer agrees to pay to Employee additional compensation, commencing with_____[his or her] first full month of retirement, at the annual rate of _____ percent of the annual salary which_____[he or she] is receiving at age [specify, e.g., 65], payable in equal monthly installments on the last day of each month during Employee's entire lifetime.

Salary Continuation During Disability

Section 4.03. If Employee for any reason whatsoever becomes permanently disabled so that_____[he or she] is unable to perform the duties prescribed herein, Employer agrees to pay Employee [specify rate or amount, e.g., 50 percent of Employee's annual salary], payable [specify manner in which payable, e.g., in the same manner as provided for the payment of salary herein], for [specify period payable, e.g., the next ten fiscal years or the remainder of the employment term provided for herein].

Repayment of Disallowed Salary

Section 4.04. In the event that any portion of the compensation paid by Employer to Employee is disallowed as an income tax deduction on an income tax return of Employer, Employee agrees to immediately repay to Employer the full amount of that portion.

ARTICLE 5. EMPLOYEE INCENTIVES

Profit-Sharing Based on Performance

Section 5.01. (a) For each fiscal year of Employer in which [the net profits of Employer exceed $_____ or the net profits of Employer for that fiscal year exceed the net profits of Employer for the previous fiscal year by _____ percent], Employer agrees to pay Employee, within [specify reasonable time for determination of net profits, e.g., two and one-half months after the close of that fiscal year], an annual profit-sharing payment equal to _____ percent of that excess [, provided, however, that the total amount of this payment shall not exceed _____ ($_____ or specify a figure equal to all or a portion of employee's salary)].

(b) If the employment term is terminated by Employer for cause, Employee shall not be entitled to any portion of the annual profit-sharing payment for the fiscal year in which that termination occurs.However, if this contract should expire or be terminated for reasons other than cause, Employee shall be entitled to a percentage of the annual profit-sharing payment equal to the percentage of the fiscal year worked.

(c) For the purpose of determining the amount of the annual profit sharing bonus, the net profits of Employer shall be determined by the firm of independent certified accountants then employed by Employer.

Stock Bonus

Section 5.02. (a) Employer agrees to transfer to Employee each year during the employment term, within two and one-half months after the close of each fiscal year during all of which the Employee served as President of the Employer, the number of shares of Employer's stock equal in value to_____[$_____ or state an amount equal to specified portion of employee's annual salary].

(b) For the purpose of determining the number of shares to be transferred to Employee, the shares shall be valued, as of the close of each fiscal year, [at book value or set forth other manner of valuation].

Stock Option

Section 5.03. (a) Employer hereby grants Employee an option to purchase [number] shares of Employer's [common or other type of stock] stock at a purchase price of $_____ per share. This option may be exercised in whole or in part, but may only be exercised in lots of [number] shares or more. Employee shall not have any of the rights of, nor be treated as, a shareholder with respect to the shares subject to this option until_____[he or she] has exercised the option and has become the shareholder of record of those shares.

(b) This option is not assignable.

(c) This option may only be exercised by Employee during the term of_____[his or her] employment hereunder. However, in the event that the employment term is terminated by Employer for reasons other than cause, Employee shall retain the right to exercise any unused portion of the option until_____[date specified for end of term of employment].

ARTICLE 6. EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

Annual Vacation

Section 6.01. Employee shall be entitled to [specify, e.g., 30 days] vacation time each year with full pay. Employee may be absent from_____[his or her] employment for vacation only at such times as Employer's Board of Directors shall determine from time to time. If Employee is unable for any reason to take the total amount of authorized vacation time during any year,_____[he or she] [may accrue that time and add it to vacation time for any following year or may receive a cash payment in an amount equal to the amount of annual salary attributable to that period or will not earn vacation time in any subsequent year until the earned vacation time is used].

[For alternative vacation provisions, see § 85.340.]

Illness

Section 6.02. Employee shall be entitled to_____[specify, e.g., _____ (number) days] per year as sick leave with full pay. [Sick leave may be accumulated up to a total of _____ (number) days.]

Use of Automobile

Section 6.03. (a) Employer shall provide Employee with the use of a [make of automobile] or comparable automobile with optional equipment of Employee's selection. The automobile provided hereunder shall at no time be older than [e.g., two] years.

(b) Employer shall pay all operating expenses of the automobile.

(c) Employer shall procure and maintain an automobile liability insurance policy on the automobile, with coverage including Employee [and Employee's spouse and those of _____ (his or her) children who qualify as Employee's dependents under Section 152 of the Internal Revenue Code] in the minimum amounts of
$_____ for bodily injury or death to any one person in any one accident, and
$_____ for property damage in any one accident.

(d) If Employee is prohibited by order of any court from holding or using a driver's license, Employee will no longer be entitled to this benefit.

Death Benefits

Section 6.04. If Employee should die during the employment term or after_____[his or her] retirement and if Employee has a surviving spouse at that time, Employer agrees to pay the spouse the sum of $_____ per month for the remainder of the spouse's lifetime. If Employer does not have a surviving spouse at that time, Employer agrees to pay Employee's designee or estate the sum of $_____.

Medical Coverage

Section 6.05. Employer agrees to include Employee in the coverage of its [specify insurance coverage, e.g., medical, major medical, hospital, dental, and eye care] insurance. Employer further agrees to reimburse Employee for all medical and dental expenses incurred by Employee,_____[his or her] spouse, and those of_____[his or her] children who qualify as_____[his or her] dependents under Section 152 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; provided, however, that those reimbursements shall be limited to the expenses, or portions thereof, not covered by insurance.

Life Insurance

Section 6.06. (a) Employer agrees to obtain a life insurance policy on the life of Employee in the face amount of $_____. Employer further agrees to make that insurance policy payable to the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated by Employee. Employer agrees to pay all premiums on the policy during the term of employment provided herein.

(b) Employee agrees to submit to any physical examination that may be required for the purpose of Employer's obtaining life insurance on the life of Employee for the benefit of Employer; provided, however, that Employer shall bear the entire cost of that examination.

ARTICLE 7. BUSINESS EXPENSES

[First alternative; use if business and entertainment expenses are to be paid by credit card:]

Use of Credit Card

Section 7.01. All business expenses reasonably incurred by Employee in promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel, are to be paid for, insofar as possible, by the use of credit cards in the name of Employer which will be furnished to Employee.

[OR]

[Second alternative; use if executive is to pay entertainment costs out of pocket:]

Lump-Sum Entertainment Fund

Section 7.01. (a) It is understood and agreed by the parties that the services required by Employer will require Employee to incur entertainment expenses on behalf of Employer. Employer hereby agrees to and shall make available to Employee for this purpose the sum of $_____ per annum, payable in such amounts and at such times as Employee shall request.

(b) Employee shall, however, furnish to Employer adequate records and other documentary evidence required by federal and state statutes and regulations for the substantiation of each such expenditure as an income tax deduction.

[Continue with the following:]

Reimbursement of Other Business Expenses

Section 7.02. (a) Employer shall promptly reimburse Employee for all other reasonable business expenses incurred by Employee in connection with the business of Employer.

(b) Each such expenditure shall be reimbursable only if it is of a nature qualifying it as a proper deduction on the federal and state income tax return of Employer.

(c) Each such expenditure shall be reimbursable only if Employee furnishes to Employer adequate records and other documentary evidence required by federal and state statutes and regulations issued by the appropriate taxing authorities for the substantiation of each such expenditure as an income tax deduction.

Repayment of Disallowed Expenses

Section 7.03. In the event that any expenses paid for Employee or any reimbursement of expenses paid to Employee shall, on audit or other examination of Employer's income tax returns, be determined not to be allowable deductions from Employer's gross income, and in the further event that this determination shall be acceded to by the Employer or made final by the appropriate federal or state taxing authority or a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, and no appeal is taken from the judgment or the applicable period for filing notice of appeal has expired, Employee shall repay to Employer the full amount of the disallowed expenses.

ARTICLE 8. TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Termination for Cause

Section 8.01. (a) Employer reserves the right to terminate this agreement if Employee willfully breaches or habitually neglects the duties which_____[he or she] is required to perform under the terms of this agreement; or commits such acts of dishonesty, fraud, misrepresentation or other acts of moral turpitude as would prevent the effective performance of_____[his or her] duties.

(b) Employer may at its option terminate this agreement for the reasons stated in this Section by giving written notice of termination to Employee without prejudice to any other remedy to which Employer may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

(c) The notice of termination required by this section shall specify the ground for the termination and shall be supported by a statement of [all] relevant facts.

(d) Termination under this section shall be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

Failure to Meet Profit Standard

Section 8.02. (a) If the net operating profits of Employer for any [specify accounting period, e.g., annual or semi-annual or quarterly] accounting period of Employer [specify prior performance base or standard, e.g., shall be less than $_____ or in the previous fiscal year Employer exceeded the net operating profits of Employer for the current comparable period by _____percent], Employer at its option may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination to Employee.

(b) The term "net operating profits," as used herein, means the net operating profits after taxes as determined and certified by the independent certified public accountants regularly retained by Employer in accordance with sound accounting principles and in accordance with the past accounting practices of Employer.

(c) Termination under this section shall be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

Termination Without Cause

Section 8.03. (a) This agreement shall be terminated upon the death of Employee.

(b) Employer reserves the right to terminate this agreement_____[within or not less than _____ (number) months after] Employee suffers any physical or mental disability that would prevent the performance of_____[his or her] essential job duties under this agreement, unless reasonable accommodation can be made to allow Employee to continue working. Such a termination shall be effected by giving [specify period, e.g., 10 days'] written notice of termination to Employee. Termination pursuant to this provision shall not prejudice Employee's rights to continued compensation pursuant to Section 4.03 of this agreement.

(c) Termination under this section shall not be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

Effect of Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

Section 8.04. (a) This agreement shall [or shall not] be terminated by any voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer resulting from either a merger or consolidation in which Employer is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, or a transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of Employer.

[If agreement will not be terminated under preceding circumstances, add:]

(b) In the event of any such merger or consolidation or transfer of assets, Employer's rights, benefits, and obligations hereunder [shall or may] be assigned to the surviving or resulting corporation or the transferee of Employer's assets.

[Or, if agreement will be terminated, add:]

(b) Termination under this section shall not be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

[Continue with the following:]

Payment On Termination

[First alternative; use to provide "golden parachute" if insisted on by employee:]

Section 8.05. Notwithstanding any provision of this agreement, if Employer terminates this agreement, it shall pay Employee an amount equal to [number] years annual salary at the then current rate of compensation.

[OR]

[Second alternative; use to limit "golden parachute" to termination without cause:]

Section 8.05. Notwithstanding any provision of this agreement, if Employer terminates this agreement without cause, it shall pay Employee an amount equal to [number] years annual salary at the then current rate of compensation.

Termination by Employee

Section 8.06. Employee may terminate_____[his or her] obligations under this agreement by giving Employer at least [number] months notice in advance.

ARTICLE 9. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 9.01. Any notices to be given hereunder by either party to the other shall be in writing and may be transmitted by personal delivery or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change that address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Arbitration

Section 9.02. (a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this agreement shall on the written request of either party served on the other be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two persons so appointed are unable to agree, then those persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive upon both parties.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 9.03. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

Section 9.04. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties hereto with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representation, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding on either party.

Modifications

Section 9.05. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

Effect of Waiver

Section 9.06. The failure of either party to insist on strict compliance with any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement by the other party shall not be deemed a waiver of that term, covenant, or condition, nor shall any waiver or relinquishment of any right or power at any one time or times be deemed a waiver or relinquishment of that right or power for all or any other times.

[Use one of following provisions (see § 85.120[14], P 6):]

Section 9.07. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

[OR]

Section 9.07. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] of competent jurisdiction to be unreasonable, invalid, void, or unenforceable, then this agreement shall be deemed amended to provide for the modification of the unreasonable, invalid, void, or unenforceable provision to the extent that the court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] finds reasonable, and the remaining provisions of this agreement shall continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

[Continue:]

Law Governing Agreement

Section 9.08. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

Section 9.09. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of_____[his or her] employment, any sums that may be due [him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

A. Complete Employment Contracts
1. Executive Employment Agreements

28-85 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 85.201

AUTHOR: by Edward Baskauskas, J.D. Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., Practice Consultant

§ 85.201 Employment Contract for Senior Executive

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is designed as a complete employment contract for the vice president or secretary-treasurer of a corporation, although it may be adapted for use by any other type of entity or for any other senior management executive. This form represents just one of many methods for drafting such an employment contract.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1]. An attorney preparing an agreement for the employment of an executive employee should carefully consider the needs of the firm and the desires of the prospective executive. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide in § 85.120 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

[b] Compensation of Employee

In addition to a regular annual salary, this contract gives the executive an annual cash bonus of a specified amount each year that the corporate profits exceed a certain sum [see Section 5.01 of Form] and deferred compensation (provided the employee completes the term of employment specified in the agreement) in monthly installments commencing when the employee reaches a specified age [see Section 4.02 of Form]. The purpose of the annual cash bonus is to induce greater productivity and longevity of service with the employer [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56 (deduction of employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of profit-sharing program does not run afoul of statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from salary [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as no unauthorized deductions are made from employee's regular salary)]. Other cash bonus provisions are set forth in §§ 85.360-85.362. The purpose of deferred compensation is to influence the employee to complete the term of employment specified in the contract and to reduce the overall income taxes to be paid. Other deferred compensation, pension, and death benefit provisions are set forth in §§ 85.320-85.326.

This form also contains a provision relating to a restricted stock bonus [see Section 5.02 of Form]; for relevant discussion, see § 85.382[1]. Other stock bonus and stock option provisions are set forth in §§ 85.380-85.386.

[2] FORM

Employment Contract for Senior Executive

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT FOR SENIOR EXECUTIVE

_____[Name of employer] ("Employer")[, a _____ (partnership or California corporation or sole proprietorship)], located at _____ [address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"),_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. TERM OF EMPLOYMENT

Specified Term

Section 1.01. The Employer employs Employee, and Employee accepts employment with Employer, for a period of [any period more than one month and less than seven years] beginning on_____[date].

Earlier Termination

Section 1.02. This agreement may be terminated earlier as hereinafter provided.

ARTICLE 2. DUTIES AND OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEE

Title and Description of Duties

Section 2.01. Employee shall serve as [set forth title, e.g., Vice President for Sales or Secretary-Treasurer] of_____[name of employer]. In that capacity, Employee shall do and perform all services, acts, or things necessary or advisable to fulfill the duties of a [corporate] [specify job or occupation, e.g., secretary and treasurer]. However, Employee shall at all times be subject to the direction of the President, and to the policies established by the Board of Directors, of Employer.

Loyal and Conscientious Performance of Duties

Section 2.02. Employee agrees that to the best of_____[his or her] ability and experience_____[he or she] will at all times loyally and conscientiously perform all of the duties and obligations required of [him or her] either expressly or implicitly by the terms of this agreement.

Devotion of Entire Time to Employer's Business

Section 2.03. (a) Employee shall devote_____[his or her] entire productive time, ability, and attention to the business of Employer during the term of this contract.

(b) During the term of this agreement, Employee shall not engage in any other business duties or pursuits whatsoever. Furthermore, during the term of this agreement, Employee shall not, whether directly or indirectly, render any services of a commercial, or professional nature to any other person or organization, whether for compensation or otherwise, without the prior written consent of Employer's President. [However, the expenditure of reasonable amounts of time for _____ (describe permissible outside activities, e.g., educational, charitable, or professional activities) shall not be deemed a breach of this agreement if those activities do not materially interfere with the services required under this agreement (Optional: and shall not require the prior written consent of Employer's President).]

(c) This agreement shall not be interpreted to prohibit Employee from making passive personal investments or conducting private business affairs if those activities do not materially interfere with the services required under this agreement. However, Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, acquire, hold, or retain any interest in any business competing with or similar in nature to the business of Employer.

Competitive Activities

Section 2.04. During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of Employer.

Uniqueness of Employee's Services

Section 2.05. Employee represents and agrees that the services to be performed under the terms of this contract are of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, and intellectual character that gives them a peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law. Employee therefore expressly agrees that Employer, in addition to any other rights or remedies that Employer may possess, shall be entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent or remedy a breach of this contract by Employee.

Indemnification for Negligence or Misconduct

Section 2.06. Employee shall indemnify and hold Employer harmless from all liability for loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Employee.

Trade Secrets

Section 2.07. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

ARTICLE 3. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYER

General Description

Section 3.01. Employer shall provide Employee with the compensation, incentives, benefits, and business expense reimbursement specified elsewhere in this agreement.

Office and Staff

Section 3.02. Employer shall provide Employee with [list specific equipment, e.g., ISDN line, laptop, cellular telephone], office space, and administrative support suitable to Employee's position and adequate for the performance of_____[his or her] duties.

Indemnification of Losses of Employee

Section 3.03. Employer shall indemnify Employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by Employee in direct consequence of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties on Employer's behalf.

ARTICLE 4. COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEE

Annual Salary

Section 4.01. (a) As compensation for the services to be rendered by Employee hereunder, Employer shall pay Employee an annual salary at the rate per annum_____[specified in Schedule A is attached to and made part of this Agreement or of $_____], payable in equal semi-monthly installments of $_____ on the 15th and final days of each month during the period of employment, prorated for any partial employment period.

(b) Employee shall receive such annual increases in salary as may be determined by Employer's [specify person or body, e.g., president or Executive Compensation Committee or Board of Directors] in_____[his or her or its] sole discretion [specify when, e.g., at least annually on or about each anniversary of the execution of this contract or at the _____ (specify which meeting of the designated body)].

Deferred Compensation

Section 4.02. (a) If Employee fulfills all the obligations imposed on [him or her] under this agreement, Employer agrees to pay to Employee the sum of $_____, payable in equal monthly installments of $_____, on the last day of each month, commencing with the first full month after_____[he or she] attains the age of _____ for a period of [number] months, until that sum has been paid in full.

(b) In the event of Employee's death prior to the completion of the above payments, Employer shall continue those payments to Employee's surviving spouse, designee, or estate, until the entire sum is paid in full.

Salary Continuation During Disability

Section 4.03. If Employee for any reason whatsoever becomes permanently disabled so that_____[he or she] is unable to perform the duties prescribed herein, Employer agrees to pay Employee [specify rate or amount, e.g., 50 percent of Employee's annual salary], payable [specify manner in which payable, e.g., in the same manner as provided for the payment of salary herein], for [specify period payable, e.g., the next 10 fiscal years or the remainder of the employment term provided for herein].

Repayment of Disallowed Salary

Section 4.04. In the event that any portion of the compensation paid by Employer to Employee is disallowed as an income tax deduction on an income tax return of Employer, Employee agrees to immediately repay to Employer the full amount of that portion.

ARTICLE 5. EMPLOYEE INCENTIVES

Cash Bonus Based on Profitability

Section 5.01. (a) In any fiscal year in which the net profits of Employer equal or exceed $_____, Employee shall receive a bonus of $_____ for_____[his or her] services in addition to any other compensation which_____[he or she] is entitled to receive hereunder. This bonus shall be paid within two and one-half months after the close of Employer's fiscal year, but only if Employee's services hereunder have not been terminated prior to the end of that fiscal year.

(b) For the purposes of this provision, the net profits of Employer are defined as [set forth definition of net profit, e.g., net income after expenses but before taxes as determined by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer in accordance with sound accounting principles and consistent with the prior accounting practices of Employer].

Restricted Stock Bonus

5.02. (a) As additional compensation, Employer agrees to transfer to Employee each year during the employment term, within two and one-half months after the close of Employer's fiscal year, the number of shares of Employer's [type of stock, e.g., common] stock equal in value to $[specify amount equal to predetermined portion of annual salary].

(b) For the purpose of determining the number of shares to be transferred to Employee, the shares shall be valued [set forth manner of valuation, e.g., at the book value computed for outstanding shares of the same type of stock as of the close of the relevant fiscal year].

(c) All shares transferred to Employee pursuant to this section shall be subject to the restriction that they must be sold back to Employer at book value immediately if the employment term is terminated for any reason whatsoever, except the death of Employee, prior to the completion of the term of the employment specified herein.

ARTICLE 6. EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

Annual Vacation

Section 6.01. Employee shall be entitled to [specify, e.g., 30 days] vacation time each year with full pay. Employee may be absent from_____[his or her] employment for vacation only at such times as Employer's President shall determine from time to time. If Employee is unable for any reason to take the total amount of authorized vacation time during any year,_____[he or she] [may accrue that time and add it to vacation time for any following year or may receive a cash payment in an amount equal to the amount of annual salary attributable to that period or will not earn vacation time in any subsequent year until the earned vacation time is used].

Illness

Section 6.02. On completion of [specify time period, e.g., three months or one year] in the service of Employer, Employee shall be entitled to [specify number] days per year as sick leave with full pay. [Sick leave may be accumulated up a total of _____ (number) days].

Death Benefits

Section 6.03. If Employee should die during the term of_____[his or her] employment hereunder, Employer agrees to pay_____[his or her] surviving spouse, designee, or estate the sum of $_____ at the time of_____[his or her] death. If Employee remains in the employ of Employer until age _____ e.g., 65], or earlier retirement with the mutual written consent of both parties, Employer agrees to pay to_____[his or her] surviving spouse, designee, or estate the sum of $_____ at the time of_____[his or her] death.

Use of Employer-Supplied Automobile

Section 6.04. (a) During the term of employment hereunder, Employee shall be entitled to the full use of a [specify make] or comparable automobile of_____[his or her] own choice in the price range of $_____ to $_____.

(b) Every [specify, e.g., two] years, on return to Employer of Employer's automobile then being used by Employee, Employee shall be entitled to the full use of new automobile in the same price range.

(c) Employer also agrees to pay all operating expenses of any nature whatsoever with regard to the aforementioned automobile, and to procure and maintain in force an automobile liability insurance policy on the automobile, with coverage including Employee, in the minimum amounts of $_____ for bodily injury or death to one person in any one accident, and $_____ for property damage in any one accident.

(d) If Employee is prohibited by order of any court from holding or using a driver's license, Employee will no longer be entitled to this benefit.

Group Life Insurance

Section 6.05. Employer agrees to include Employee under Employer's group term life insurance coverage in an amount equal to [$_____ or _____ (number) percent of Employee's gross annual salary].

Group Medical Insurance

Section 6.06. Employer agrees to include Employee under Employer's group medical insurance coverage.

Dental Coverage

Section 6.07. The Employer agrees to provide Employee with dental coverage during the employment term by obtaining dental insurance covering Employee or by directly paying [all or _____ percent of the] dental costs incurred by Employee.

ARTICLE 7. BUSINESS EXPENSES

Business Expenses

Section 7.01. (a) Employer shall promptly reimburse Employee for all reasonable business expenses incurred by Employee in promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel.

(b) Each such expenditure shall be reimbursable only if it is of a nature qualifying it as a proper deduction on the federal and state income tax return of Employer.

(c) Each such expenditure shall be reimbursable only if Employee furnishes to Employer adequate records and other documentary evidence required by federal and state statutes and regulations issued by the appropriate taxing authorities for the substantiation of that expenditure as an income tax deduction.

Repayment by Employee of Disallowed Business Expenses

Section 7.02. In the event that any expenses paid for Employee or any reimbursement of expenses paid to Employee shall, on audit or other examination of Employer's income tax returns, be determined not to be allowable deductions from Employer's gross income, and in the further event that any such determination is acceded to by the Employer or made final by the appropriate federal or state taxing authority or a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, and no appeal is taken from the judgment or the applicable period for filing notice of appeal has expired, Employee shall repay to Employer the amount of the disallowed expenses.

ARTICLE 8. TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Termination for Cause

Section 8.01. (a) Employer reserves the right to terminate this agreement if employee (1) willfully breaches or habitually neglects the duties which_____[he or she] is required to perform under the terms of this agreement, or (2) commits acts of dishonesty, fraud, misrepresentation, or other acts of moral turpitude, that would prevent the effective performance of_____[his or her] duties.

(b) Employer may at its option terminate this agreement for the reasons stated in this section by giving written notice of termination to Employee without prejudice to any other remedy to which Employer may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

(c) The notice of termination required by this section shall specify the ground for the termination and shall be supported by a statement of [all] relevant facts.

(d) Termination under this section shall be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

Termination Without Cause

Section 8.02. (a) This agreement shall be terminated upon the death of Employee.

(b) Employer reserves the right to terminate this agreement_____[within or not less than _____ (number) months after] Employee suffers any physical or mental disability that would prevent the performance of _____[his or her] essential job duties under this agreement, unless reasonable accommodation can be made to allow Employee to continue working. Such a termination shall be effected by giving [specify period, e.g., 10 days'] written notice of termination to Employee.

(c) Termination under this section shall not be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

Effect of Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

Section 8.03. (a) This agreement shall [or shall not] be terminated by any voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer resulting from either a merger or consolidation in which Employer is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, or a transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of Employer.

[EITHER, if agreement will not be terminated under preceding circumstances:]

(b) In the event of any such merger or consolidation or transfer of assets, Employer's rights, benefits, and obligations hereunder [shall or may] be assigned to the surviving or resulting corporation or the transferee of Employer's assets.

[OR, if agreement will be terminated:]

(b) Termination under this section shall not be considered "for cause" for the purposes of this agreement.

[Continue with the following:]

Termination by Employee

Section 8.04. Employee may terminate_____[his or her] obligations under this agreement by giving Employer at least [number] months notice in advance or tendering to Employer a total amount aggregating [number] months of_____[his or her] annual salary.

Effect on Compensation

Section 8.05. In the event that this agreement is terminated prior to the completion of the term of employment specified herein, Employee shall be entitled to the compensation earned by and vested in [him or her] prior to the date of termination as provided for in this agreement, computed pro rata up to and including that date. Employee shall be entitled to no further compensation as of the date of termination.

ARTICLE 9. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 9.01. Any notices to be given by either party to the other shall be in writing and may be transmitted either by personal delivery or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change that address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Arbitration

Section 9.02. (a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this agreement shall on the written request of either party served on the other be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two persons so appointed are unable to agree, then those persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive upon both parties.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 9.03. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

Section 9.04. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties hereto with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer, and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding.

Modifications

Section 9.05. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing signed by the party to be charged.

Effect of Waiver

Section 9.06. The failure of either party to insist on strict compliance with any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement by the other party shall not be deemed a waiver of that term, covenant, or condition, nor shall any waiver or relinquishment of any right or power at any one time or times be deemed a waiver or relinquishment of that right or power for all or any other times.

Partial Invalidity

Section 9.07. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

Section 9.08. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

Section 9.09. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of_____[his or her] employment, any sums that may be due [him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.210 Contract for Employment of Mid-Level or Department Manager--Bonus Based on Sales or Operating Profit

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the employment of a mid-level manager; that is, a person employed as a general or department manager. This form is shorter and less formal than those set forth in this chapter for executive personnel because the general practice is to use less extensive contracts in the employment of "middle managers" (and often none at all in the employment of supervisory personnel).

Because mid-level managers are often subject to most of the same employment terms and conditions that apply to other employees, it is a common practice to have a mid-level manager's employment contract refer to an employee handbook for the details of many terms of employment. For example, this form refers to the employer's handbook for employees regarding details of the employee's vacation benefit.

For discussion of the matters to consider in drafting an employment agreement, see § 85.200[1]. The attorney preparing an agreement for the employment of a managerial employee should carefully consider the needs of the firm and the desires of the prospective employee. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide in § 85.120 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

[b] At-Will Provision

This form includes an optional "at-will" provision, allowing either party to terminate the contract at any time, with or without cause. The provision reaffirms the statutory presumption that an employment contract with no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other [see Lab. Code § 2922]. "Termination at will" generally means that either party can terminate the employment for any reason or no reason at all; however, this rule is subject to a number of important limitations and exceptions [see § 85.24[2]].

[c] Bonus Provisions

This form contains two alternative bonus provisions based on sales or operating profit and obviously designed as incentive provisions [see P 6 of Form]. The first alternative is for use if the contract will be used for sales-oriented managers and is tied to the amount of product sold; the second is for use in operations-oriented situations and expresses the bonus in terms of a percentage of operating profit [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56 (deduction of employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of profit-sharing program does not run afoul of statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from salary [*see Lab. Contract for Employment of Mid-Level or Department Manager--Bonus Based on Sales or Operating Profit

DEPARTMENT MANAGER
EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT

_____[Name of employer] ("Employer") [, a _____ (California corporation or partnership or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

Employment and Title

1. Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment as _____ [state job title, e.g., manager or general manager] in charge of_____[specify field, e.g., operations or sales or name of department] for Employer.

[Use following provision if contract is at will:]

Employment at Will

2. Either Employer or Employee may terminate this agreement at any time on notice to the other, with or without cause. Employer reserves the right to modify, add, or eliminate any term or condition of this employment at any time on notice to Employee, with or without cause. The rights and duties set forth in this paragraph may not be modified in any way except by written agreement between the parties.

[OR]

[Use following provision if contract is for specific term:]

Term

2. The term of employment under this agreement shall be for period of [any period more than one month and less than seven years], beginning on_____[date].

[Continue:]

Duties

3. Employee shall report to Employer's [specify, e.g., President or Vice President for Operations or Vice President for Sales]. Employee shall supervise and direct the [specify department by name or function, e.g., Pismo Beach area Operations Department or Book Sales Division] of Employer and in that capacity [perform all duties incidental thereto, including supervision of employees within that _____ (department or division) and such other work as may be required of _____ (him or her) in connection with the business of Employer or perform all of the duties specified in the attached and incorporated job description].

Trade Secrets

4. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

Annual Salary

5. Employer shall pay Employee an annual salary of $_____, payable in equal amounts on every other Friday.

Bonus

[Use or adapt following for sales-oriented managers:]

6. Employer shall pay Employee a bonus on each new_____[name or type of employer's product] above the first [number, e.g., 1,000] sold by Employee's department during any twelve-month period covered by this agreement, computed as follows: $_____ per item in excess of [number, e.g., 1,000] and less than [number, e.g., 5,000], and $_____ per item in excess of the latter number. This bonus shall be computed on the basis of final figures for each month and paid on the [specify day] of the following month.

[OR]

[Use or adapt following for operations-oriented employment situations:]

6. (a) Employer shall pay Employee a bonus of _____ percent of the operating profit derived by Employer from Employee's department.

(b) The term "operating profit" means all gross income from the operations specified above (other than capital gains) less all expenses, deductions, and credits of employer attributable to the operations specified. In computing operating profit, federal and state income taxes and payments made under this agreement or other bonus or incentive plans of Employer [shall or shall not] be taken into account. The operating profit shall be determined in accordance with sound principles of accounting by the certified public accountants regularly employed by Employer and their determination shall be binding and conclusive on the parties.

(c) Payment of this bonus shall be made no later than [specify, e.g., annually], [state reasonable period for determining operating profit, e.g., within two and one-half months after the close of Employer's previous fiscal year].

Annual Minimum Bonus

7. Employer shall pay Employee an annual minimum bonus of $_____, regardless of Employer's [sales or operating profit] no later than [specify reasonable period, e.g., within two and one-half months after the close of the previous fiscal year of Employer].

Vacation

8. Employee shall be entitled to [specify, e.g., 30 days] vacation time each year with full pay. Scheduling of vacation shall be at the complete discretion of Employee's immediate supervisor. If Employee is unable for any reason to take the total amount of authorized vacation time during any year, Employee [may accrue that time and add it to vacation time for any following year or may receive a cash payment in an amount equal to the amount of annual salary attributable to that period or will not earn vacation time in any subsequent year until the earned vacation time is used].

[OR]

8. Employee shall be entitled to a vacation each year with full pay in accordance with Employer's vacation policy as more specifically defined in Employer's "Handbook for Employees," a copy of which has been provided to Employee.

[For alternative vacation provisions, see § 85.340.]

Illness

[Use one of following provisions, as appropriate:]

9. Employee shall be entitled to_____[specify, e.g., _____ (number) days] per year as sick leave with full pay. [Sick leave may be accumulated up a total of _____ (number) days].

[OR]

9. Employee shall be entitled to sick leave with full pay in accordance with Employer's sick-leave policy as more specifically defined in Employer's "Handbook for Employees," a copy of which has been provided to Employee.

Business Expenses

10. Employee shall be entitled to receive, within [number] days after delivery to Employer of an itemized statement thereof, reimbursement for all justified and reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the performance of Employee's duties.

Outside Employment

11. Employee shall not engage in other employment that interferes with_____[his or her] performance of the duties under this contract.

Competitive Activities

12. During the term of this agreement, Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, own, manage, operate, join, control, be employed by, or participate in the ownership, management, operation, or control of, or be connected in any manner with, any business that is competitive to the business of Employer.

Termination for Disability

13. (a) If Employee is unable to perform_____[his or her] duties by reason of illness or disability for a continuous period of [number greater than 90] days, Employer may terminate this agreement and the employment under this agreement without further notice. Termination for this reason shall not be deemed "for cause" as that term is used in this section.

(b) In the event of termination under this section, Employer's obligations to Employee under this agreement shall cease except for annual salary accrued to the date on which termination becomes effective and, if termination is not for cause, Employer shall be obligated to pay Employee all bonuses due as of that date as well as severance pay in the amount of $_____.

Notices

14. Any notices to be given by either party to the other shall be in writing and may be transmitted by personal delivery or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to Employer at_____[address] and to Employee at_____[address], but each party may change that address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Arbitration

15. (a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this agreement shall on the written request of either party served on the other be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two persons so appointed are unable to agree, then those persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive upon both parties.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

16. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

17. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representation, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding on either party. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

Effect of Waiver

18. The failure of either party to insist on strict compliance with any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement by the other party shall not be deemed a waiver of that term, covenant, or condition, nor shall any waiver or relinquishment of any right or power at any one time or times be deemed a waiver or relinquishment of that right or power for all or any other times.

Partial Invalidity

19. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

20. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

21. If Employee dies prior to the termination or expiration of this employment, any sums that may be due [him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.211 Contract for Employment of Retail Store Branch Manager--Payment of Moving Costs

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract for the employment of the manager of a retail store operated by a chain organization. It can be adapted for use in employing a manager for any type of business branch operation.

[i] In General

This form represents only one of the many ways such a contract might be drafted. If used as the basis for a store manager employment agreement, the attorney should first determine how the particular type of store operates and the needs of the parties involved. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1].

[ii] Duties of Employee

The provision describing the duties of the employee simply provides that he or she is employed as manager of a specified branch and that, as manager, he or she will operate the store in accordance with the policies of the management [see § 85.211[2], Section 2.01]. The use of such general terms is generally better in this type of situation than attempting to spell out detailed duties. For discussion of the function of an employer's rules as part of an employment contract, see § 85.274[1][c].

The provision stating that the employee may be transferred to the managership of another store [see 85.211[2], Section 2.02] is most important because managers of stores of this type are frequently transferred. The provision regarding the uniqueness of the employee's services [see Section 2.05 of Form] is important because at a later date it may assist the employer in obtaining equitable relief to prevent a breach of the contract by the employee.

[iii] Profit-Sharing Provisions

This form gives the employee a prescribed percentage of the net profits in excess of a certain amount [see Section 3.02 of Form]. Although there are various methods by which a branch manager can be compensated, most branch managers are compensated in a manner that depends in some way on the results they achieve with regard to the particular store involved. The purpose of such a commission arrangement is to motivate the manager to make the store as productive as possible.

Different methods are used to permit a manager to share in profits. As noted above, this form gives the manager a percentage of the excess over a certain amount. Another approach would be to give the manager a percentage of all the profits. In this form the percentage of net profits given to the manager remains constant. Still another method is to change the percentage based on the amount of profit. Increasing the applicable percentage as profits go up can be a tremendous incentive, particularly since this will tend to counterbalance the increase in the manager's personal income tax rate as his or her income increases. For additional profit-sharing provisions, see §§ 85.370-85.372.

Since store managers are transferred frequently, the contract should specify how the amount of additional compensation due the manager from the profits of a store should be determined if the manager acted in that capacity for less than a year. The simplest solution would be to determine that amount on a straight pro rata basis depending on the fractional part of the year the store was managed by the employee in question. The difficulty with that method is that the business of most retail stores is subject to wide seasonal fluctuations. Instead, this form provides that the employer at its sole discretion may adjust the amount of the additional compensation to reflect the actual time each store in question was managed by the particular employee and the results accomplished by him or her during each such time. Although the employer is given discretion, it is in the employer's best interest to treat the manager fairly, particularly if previous performance demonstrates that he or she has been successful. The attorney should discuss this problem thoroughly with the client.

This form requires the employee to qualify for a surety bond [see Section 2.06 of Form] because the manager of a branch store is responsible for the receipt and disposition of large amounts of cash. For discussion, see § 85.481[1].

The employer may wish to add a "morality clause" to the contract, requiring the employee to conduct himself or herself with due regard to public conventions and morals. This type of provision may be reasonable and necessary to prevent harm to the employer's business, if it is likely that the manager of a branch store will have extensive visibility to the public and represent the employer in the community. For a form of morality clause, see § 85.491.

Contract for Employment of Retail Store Branch Manager--Payment of Moving Costs

BRANCH MANAGER
EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT

_____[name of employer], [a _____(California corporation or partnership or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], hereinafter referred to as Employer, and_____[name of employee],_____[address], hereinafter referred to as Employee, in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. TERM OF EMPLOYMENT

Employment

Section 1.01. Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment with the Employer [omit following provision if contract is at will: for a period of _____ (any period more than one month and less than seven years)], beginning on_____[date].

Earlier Termination

Section 1.02. This agreement may be terminated earlier as hereinafter provided.

ARTICLE 2. DUTIES AND OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEE

Description of Duties

Section 2.01. Employee is employed as Manager of Employer's branch store located at_____[location, e.g., The Mall, _____ (address)] and shall conduct the operation of that branch store in accordance with the policies established from time to time by the management of Employer.

Transfer of Employee

Section 2.02. Employee, at the sole discretion of Employer, may [upon _____ (number) days' notice] be transferred to and be employed as the manager of any other branch store operated by Employer.

Loyal and Conscientious Performance of Duties

Section 2.03. Employee agrees that to the best of_____[his or her] ability and experience_____[he or she] will at all times loyally and conscientiously perform all of the duties and obligations required either expressly or implicitly by the terms of this agreement.

Outside Employment

Section 2.04. Employee shall not engage in outside employment that interferes with_____[his or her] duties for Employer or competes with Employer's business. Employee shall not directly or indirectly render any services of a business, commercial, or professional nature to any other person or organization, whether for compensation or otherwise, without the prior written consent of Employer.

Uniqueness of Employee's Services

Section 2.05. Employee hereby represents that_____[his or her] services to be performed under this contract are of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, and intellectual character that gives them a peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law. Employee therefore expressly agrees that Employer, in addition to any other rights or remedies that Employer may possess, shall be entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent a breach of this contract by Employee.

Qualification for Surety Bond

Section 2.06. Employee agrees that_____[he or she] will furnish all information and take any other steps necessary to enable Employer to obtain a fidelity bond conditioned on the rendering of a true account by Employee of all moneys, goods, or other property that may come into the custody, charge, or possession of Employee during the term of this employment. The surety company issuing the bond and the amount of the bond must be acceptable to Employer in the sole discretion of Employer. All premiums on the bond are to be paid by Employer. Failure by Employee to qualify for that bond within [number] days from the date of this agreement will result in immediate termination of this contract.

ARTICLE 3. COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEE

Basic Salary

Section 3.01. As compensation for the services rendered by [him or her] under this agreement, Employee shall be entitled to an annual salary of $_____, payable in equal semi-monthly installments on the fifteenth and final days of each month during the period of employment, prorated for any partial employment period.

Profit-Sharing

Section 3.02. (a) As additional compensation in any year in which the net profits of the branch store managed by Employee exceed [$_____ or the net profits of that store for the previous fiscal year by _____ percent], Employee shall be entitled to receive an amount equal to _____ percent of the net profits in excess of $_____[, provided, however, that the total amount of this bonus shall not exceed _____ ($_____ or specify a figure equal to all or a portion of employee's salary)].

(b) This additional compensation shall be computed and paid to Employee within [specify reasonable period, e.g., 60 days] after the end of Employer's fiscal year.

(c) For any fiscal year in which Employee has not managed a branch store for a full twelve months,_____[state formula or other method of apportionment, e.g., Employer at its sole discretion may adjust the additional compensation payable, if any, regarding any branch store or stores managed during the fiscal year by Employee, to reflect the actual time worked at each store or stores by Employee during that fiscal period and the results accomplished].

(d) If the employment term is terminated by Employer for cause, Employee shall not be entitled to any portion of the additional compensation provided for in this section for the fiscal year in which that termination occurs. However, if this contract should expire or be terminated for reasons other than cause, Employee shall be entitled to that portion of the additional compensation that the number of months during the fiscal year that_____[he or she] was employed hereunder bears to 12 months.

(e) As used herein, "net profits" shall be defined as net income from operations after expenses but before taxes as determined according to sound accounting principles by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and consistent with the prior accounting practices of Employer.

ARTICLE 4. BUSINESS EXPENSES

Business Expense Payment and Accounting

Section 4.01. (a) All business expenses reasonably incurred by Employee in promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel, are to be paid for, insofar as possible, by the use of credit cards in the name of Employer, which will be furnished to Employee. Any reasonable business expenses that cannot be charged on a credit card shall be paid by Employee, and Employer shall reimburse Employee for those expenses upon substantiation as required by this section.

(b) Employee shall keep an account book listing all business expenditures, whether paid for by credit card or not, in which Employee shall record, at or near the time that each expenditure is made, the amount of the expenditure; the time and place of the entertainment, travel, or other expense, or the date and description of the gift; the business reason for the expenditure and the nature of the business benefit derived or expected to be derived as a result of the expenditure; and the names, occupations, addresses, and other information sufficient to establish a business relationship to Employer, concerning each person who was entertained or given a gift. Gifts made to any one individual shall not exceed a total of [specify limitation, e.g., $25 in any taxable year].

(c) Employee shall provide detailed receipts for each travel expenditure of $25 or more (except for transportation charges if not readily available). Each receipt must include the date the expense was incurred and a description of the expenditure.

(d) Employer may audit the account book at any time.

Initial Moving Expenses

Section 4.02. Employer shall pay to Employee the sum of $_____ for moving expenses incurred by Employee in moving from [place of employee's former residence] to [place where employee will initially work]. This sum is the total amount Employer will pay in conjunction with this move.

Subsequent Moving Expenses

Section 4.03. If Employee is transferred by Employer to a new principal place of work at a branch store at least [specify, e.g., 50; see I.R.C. § 217(c)(1)] miles away from the branch store that is then Employee's principal place of work, and accordingly Employee decides to move_____[his or her] residence, Employer will reimburse Employee for all reasonable expenses incurred for the following:

(a) Making a one-way trip, including lodging, by Employee and Employee's spouse and minor children from their existing residence to the new place of residence selected by Employee; and

(b) Moving the household goods and personal effects of Employee and Employee's spouse and minor children from their existing residence to the new place of residence selected by Employee.

Purchase of Employee's Home by Employer

Section 4.04. (a) If Employee is transferred to another principal place of work during the term of this agreement and that place is at least [specify distance, e.g., 500] miles from Employee's former principal place of work, Employee shall have the option of selling to Employer any residence owned and occupied by Employee at that time.

(b) The sales price shall be the fair market value of the residence as determined by an appraiser selected by Employer, less the amounts of any real estate broker's commission and other costs of sale customarily paid by the sellers of residences of like value in the area where the residence is located. The appraisal shall be made within [number] days after the date Employee is notified of the transfer.

(c) After Employee is notified of the sales price and the amounts to be deducted for commission and costs, Employee shall have [e.g., 1 0] days to decide whether to exercise this option to sell. The net sales price shall be paid to Employee in full in cash by Employer within [e.g., 30] days after Employer is notified that Employee is exercising this option to sell.

ARTICLE 5. TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Termination for Cause

Section 5.01. If Employee willfully breaches this agreement or habitually neglects the duties that_____[he o r she] is required to perform under the terms of this agreement, Employer may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination to Employee without prejudice to any other remedy to which Employer may be entitled at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

Effect of Employer's Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

Section 5.02. This agreement shall be terminated by any merger or consolidation in which either (1) Employer is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, (2) all or substantially all of the assets of Employer are transferred, or (3) there is a voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer.

Option to Terminate if Employee Becomes Permanently Disabled

Section 5.03. If Employee becomes permanently disabled because of sickness, physical or mental disability, or any other reason, so that it reasonably appears that_____[he or she] will be unable to complete the essential job duties prescribed by this agreement, Employer shall have the option to immediately terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination to Employee. Such a termination shall be without prejudice to any right or remedy to which Employer or Employee may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

Effect of Termination on Compensation

Section 5.04. Subject to Section 3.02(d) of this agreement, in the event of the termination of this agreement prior to the completion of the term of employment specified herein, Employee shall be entitled to any compensation earned by and vested in [him or her] prior to the date of termination as provided for in this agreement, computed pro rata up to and including that date. Employee shall be entitled to no further compensation as of the date of termination.

ARTICLE 6. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 6.01. Any notices to be given by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Entire Agreement

Section 6.02. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties hereto with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to such employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding.

Modifications

Section 6.03. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

Arbitration

Section 6.04. (a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this agreement shall be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two appointed persons are unable to agree, then those persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive upon both parties.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 6.05. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Partial Invalidity

Section 6.06. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

Section 6.07. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

Section 6.08. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of_____[his or her] employment, any sums that may be due _____[him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.212 Manager of Overseas Department

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an agreement for the employment of the manager of an overseas department of a United States-based organization. It is similar to the agreement for the employment of a department manager [see § 85.210], however, it contains numerous provisions that are specially applicable to foreign employment.

Before using this form, counsel should consult with local counsel in the country in which the employee will work. Although the form includes a provision that the contract be construed according to California law, the country in which the employee works may not recognize such a choice-of-law provision, and portions of the contract may be unenforceable under local law. This could cause problems if employer is sued or seeks to enforce the contract in the other country [cf. Olinick v. BMG Entertainment (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1286, 1296-1300, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268 (enforcing choice-of-law and forum-selection provisions subjecting all causes of action arising from employment agreement to New York law and jurisdiction of New York courts)].

_____[Name of employer] ("Employer") [, a _____ (California corporation or partnership or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

Employment and Title

1. Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment as _____ [state job title, e.g., manager or general manager] in charge of its _____ [specify foreign location and type of operation, e.g., London office or Singapore plant] [or any other place and (managerial) capacity in which Employer may hereafter direct].

[Omit following provision if contract is at will:]

Term

2. The term of employment shall be _____ [any period more than one month and less than seven years], beginning on_____[date].

Duties

3. (a) Employee shall report to and be under the supervision and control of Employer's Vice President for Foreign Operations.

(b) Employee shall supervise and direct the [plant or office] specified herein and in that capacity perform all duties incidental to that position, including supervision of employees within that [plant or office] and any other work that may be required of [him or her] in connection with the business of Employer.

Trade Secrets

4. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer [specify procedure, e.g., o nly with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

Annual Salary

5. Employer shall pay Employee an annual salary of $_____ in United States dollars, payable [directly to Employee or by deposit to Employee's credit in any bank designated by Employee] in equal amounts every other Friday. If Employee desires payment of all or part of_____[his or her] salary in the currency of the place of employment, Employer shall make payment at the rate of exchange prevailing at the end of the day preceding the date on which payment is due.

Transportation Expenses

6. (a) Employer shall reimburse the following expenses for the transportation of Employee and Employee's spouse and minor children to the place of employment:

(1) The costs and fees associated with the acquisition of the necessary passports and visas.

(2) The cost of required immunizations.

(3) All _____ [specify class] airline tickets and tickets on any connecting transportation required in connection with the transportation of Employee and Employee's spouse and minor children from _____ [specify place] to the city of employment specified herein.

(4) All associated transportation expenses, including the cost of transporting luggage [up to $_____ (specify maximum sum)], the cost of meals while in transit to the place of employment, expenses while in transit for hotels, transfers, and incidentals.

(5) All customs duties imposed by the country of destination on Employee's household goods and personal effects.

(b) Upon completion of the full term specified herein, or upon the termination of this agreement by Employer for any reason other than cause, Employer shall pay all expenses of the type indicated in Paragraph 6(a) necessarily incurred in the return of Employee and Employee's spouse and minor children from the place of employment to the place where this agreement was executed.

(c) In the event that Employee terminates this contract prior to the expiration of the term set forth above, Employee shall repay a share of the costs incurred under paragraph 6(a) proportional to the share of the term still remaining and will not be entitled to the benefits set forth in Paragraph 6(b).

Tax Liability

7. Employee is subject to and liable for the payment of all applicable taxes imposed by the United States. Employer shall deduct all income tax, social security, and other taxes required by law. [Employer or Employee] shall be responsible for and pay all taxes imposed by the government of [country where place of employment is located].

Workers' Compensation

8. Employer shall maintain workers' compensation insurance required under the laws of the State of California, in addition to any similar insurance required by law in the country of assignment, in full force and effect to cover Employee during the entire term of employment under this agreement.

Vacation

9. Employee shall be entitled to the greater of the minimum legally required vacation in the country of assignment or [specify, e.g., 30 days] vacation time each year with full pay. Scheduling of vacation is at the complete discretion of Employee's immediate supervisor. If Employee is unable for any reason to take the total amount of authorized vacation time during any year,_____[he or she] [may accrue that time and add it to vacation time for any following year or may receive a cash payment in an amount equal to the amount of annual salary attributable to that period or will not earn vacation time in any subsequent year until the earned vacation time is used or will accrue vacation as otherwise provided by the laws of the country of assignment].

[For alternate vacation provisions, see § 85.340.]

Illness

10. Employee shall be entitled to the greater of the minimum amount of sick leave mandated by the laws of the country of assignment or_____[specify, e.g., _____ (number) days] per year as sick leave with full pay.

Business Expenses

11. Employee shall be entitled to receive, within [number] days after delivery to Employer of an itemized statement thereof, reimbursement for all justified and reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the performance of Employee's duties. [All itemized expense statements shall be submitted to the _____(title of financial officer, e.g., Comptroller) of Employer's _____ (name of foreign location, plant, or office, e.g., London office) and reimbursed to Employee in _____ (specify whether United States dollars or local foreign currency)].

Entire Time and Efforts

[If allowed in the country of assignment:]

12. During the term of this agreement, Employee shall devote_____[his or her] entire time and efforts to the business and affairs of Employer and do_____[his or her] utmost to promote its interests.

Competitive Activities

13. During the term of this agreement, Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, own, manage, operate, join, control, be employed by, or participate in the ownership, management, operation, or control of, or be connected in any manner with, any business that is competitive to the business of Employer.

Termination

14. (a) Employer may terminate this agreement and the employment hereunder for cause at any time on [number] days written notice to Employee.

(b) If Employee should be prevented from performing_____[his or her] essential job duties by reason of illness or disability for a continuous period of [number, e.g., 180] days, Employer may terminate this agreement and the employment hereunder without further notice. Termination for this reason shall not be deemed for "cause" as that term is used in this contract.

(c) In the event of termination under this section, Employer's obligations to Employee under this agreement shall cease except for annual salary accrued to the date upon which termination becomes effective. [Optional; add if this form is modified to provide for profit-sharing, bonuses, deferred compensation, or other incentive pay: However, Employee shall be entitled to all _____ (profit-sharing or bonuses or deferred compensation or other incentive pay) vested in _____ (him or her) as of the date of termination hereunder.]

Notices

15. Any notices to be given by either party to the other shall be in writing and may be transmitted by personal delivery or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to Employer at_____[address] and to Employee at_____[address], but each party may change that address by written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Arbitration

16. (a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this agreement shall be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two appointed persons are unable to agree, then those persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive on both parties.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

17. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

18. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties hereto with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representation, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding on either party. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

Effect of Waiver

19. The failure of either party to insist on strict compliance with any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this agreement by the other party shall not be deemed a waiver of that term, covenant, or condition, and no waiver or relinquishment of any right or power at any one time or times shall be deemed a waiver or relinquishment of that right or power for all or any other times.

Partial Invalidity

20. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

21. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

22. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of_____[his or her] employment, any sums that may be due [him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.213 Letter Agreement for Employment of Manager

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter-style employment contract. Some employers prefer the personal tone of a letter as opposed to a formal contract style of agreement. This form contains all of the requirements for a valid employment contract: identification of the parties, term and place of employment, compensation to be paid, and description of the duties to be performed by the employee [see Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1967) 68 Cal. 2d 7, 17, 64 Cal. Rptr. 440, 434 P.2d 992] . For further discussion of the essential and typical elements for a valid employment contract, see § 85.21.

This form is designed to be executed by the employer and then mailed to the employee. Upon receipt, the employee should review the contract and, if the terms are acceptable, sign it and return the fully executed document to the employer. The employee should be provided with a copy of the contract for his or her records.

Generally, the attorney who drafts an employment agreement is retained by the employer. Most letter style agreements, like the one contained in this form, are relatively informal and do not contain much detail covering contingencies that may arise during the term of employment. Consequently, the attorney should consider including additional provisions for the protection of the employer.

It is always advisable to specify the conditions under which the employer may terminate the employment contract. This form provides for the employer's termination rights by combining the provision included in § 85.271 with the paragraph designating the term of employment. For further discussion, see § 85.271[1].

This form includes a provision conditioning the offer of employment on the employee's passing a drug and alcohol test. For discussion of restrictions on an employer's right to require medical and physical examinations, including drug testing, see § 85.490[1][c].

§ 85.220 Contract for Employment of Salesperson--Assigned Territory--Commission Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an employment contract for use in hiring a salesperson with an assigned territory who is to be compensated on a commission basis. This form represents only one of the many ways such a contract might be drafted. The attorney should carefully select the particular provisions that will best suit the needs and desires of the employer and the employee.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1][b].

[b] Drafting Considerations

[i] Duties of Employee

The provision outlining the duties of a salesperson should be specific enough to inform the employee of what is expected. If it is too vague, it may be difficult, if litigation becomes necessary, to prove that the employee breached the contract. On the other hand, the contract need not spell out in precise detail everything that the employee is expected to do since the employer has the right to issue any order to an employee that will not impose a new and unreasonable burden [see Lab. Code § 2856]. For discussion, see § 85.11[1].

[ii] Commission Compensation

This form provides for compensation in the form of a commission expressed as a fixed percentage of the "net sales" made in the assigned territory, whether made by the employee or others [see Section 3.01 of Form]. If sales to certain types of customers (e.g., designated chain stores or governmental agencies) are to be excluded, the contract should state that fact. "Net sales" is defined in this form as the dollar amount of gross sales for which commissions are payable, less any returns and allowances attributable to those gross sales [see Section 3.02 of Form]. The attorney should make certain that the definition used is clear and unambiguous in relation to the client's business practices. This form entitles the employee to a commission when payment for the goods sold is actually received by the employer from the respective customers [see Section 3.03 of Form]. For a provision specifying commissions as a percentage of gross sales, see § 85.311. Other provisions for commission compensation are set forth in §§ 85.312-85.314.

This form also gives the employee a drawing account [see Section 3.04 of Form]. When this is done, the contract should clearly indicate whether or not the employee, on termination of the agreement, is liable to the employer for drawing an amount in excess of earned commissions. For an alternate drawing account provision, and relevant comment, see § 85.312.

[c] Property Rights of Parties and Limitations on Competitive Activity After Termination of Employment

Section 5.01 of this form prohibits the employee from using or disclosing customer names and addresses insofar as they constitute trade secrets. Limitations on competitive activity generally are prohibited under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600. However, the California courts recognize a "trade secret exception" to the general rule, under which the courts will enforce a covenant not to compete to the extent necessary to protect an employer's trade secrets and confidential information [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1462, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 ; Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 ; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456] . The restrictions in Section 5.01 of this form are based on misuse and nondisclosure of confidential information and are intended to qualify for the trade secret exception as recognized by California courts.

The California Supreme Court has held that a noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless expressly authorized by statute [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5 (authorizing noncompetition agreement in connection with sale of goodwill of business or dissolution of partnership or limited liability company)]. However, the Court left open the question of the applicability of a "trade secret exception" to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 n.4, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 289 n.4, 189 P.3d 285 ("[W]e do not here address the applicability of the so-called trade secret exception to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600], as Edwards does not dispute that portion of his agreement or contend that the provision of the noncompetition agreement prohibiting him from recruiting Andersen's employees violated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600].")]. For more detailed discussion of the legal issues relating to limitations on competitive activity, noncompetition clauses, and protection of particular information as trade secrets, see §§ 85.440[d], 85.471.

[2] FORM

Contract for Employment of Salesperson--Assigned Territory--Commission Compensation

CONTRACT FOR EMPLOYMENT OF SALESPERSON

ARTICLE 1. EMPLOYMENT

Term

Section 1.01. Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment with Employer [omit following if employment is at will: for a period of _____ (any period more than one month and less than seven years),] beginning on_____[date].

Agreement Subject to Termination

Section 1.02. This agreement may be terminated earlier as hereinafter provided [notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1.01, above].

ARTICLE 2. DUTIES OF EMPLOYEE

Employment as Salesperson

Section 2.01. Employee is hired as a salesperson and in that capacity to sell_____[specify, e.g.: the goods and merchandise _____(manufactured or distributed)] by Employer in the territory described herein to _____ [describe customers, e.g.: the general public or dealers in _____ (describe goods or merchandise)] exclusively.

Assignment of Territory

Section 2.02. Employee shall perform Employee's duties as a salesperson in the territory described as follows: _____ [set forth description of territory or specify territorial boundaries]. Employee shall not make any sales outside of the assigned territory.

Change in Assigned Territory

Section 2.03. Employer may change the territory at any time in its sole discretion.

Outside Employment

Section 2.04. Employee shall not engage in outside employment that interferes with any of the duties under this contract.

Competitive Activities

Section 2.05. During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of the Employer.

Collections and Adjustments

Section 2.06. Employee shall assist in the collection of all sums due from persons to whom the goods and merchandise of Employer are sold and in the adjustment of any complaints or disputes that may arise in connection with any sales Employee makes.

Written Reports of Sales

Section 2.07. On the last working day of each _____ [specify reporting period, e.g.: week or month], Employee shall complete and submit to Employer a written report, on a form provided by Employer, stating _____ [specify, e.g., the names and addresses of each customer and prospective customer called on by Employee, the hour and day on which those calls were made, the quantity and description of all goods ordered by each customer, the nature of any complaints made by any customer, any suggestions made by any customer as to improvements that may be made in the goods and services provided by Employer, and any other information or data that may from time to time be requested by Employer].

Adherence to Rules

Section 2.08. Employee at all times during the performance of this contract shall strictly adhere to and obey all the rules and regulations now in effect or as subsequently modified governing the conduct of employees of Employer.

Satisfactory Performance of Duties

Section 2.09. The employment of Employee shall continue only as long as the services rendered by Employee are satisfactory to Employer, notwithstanding any other provision contained in this agreement. Employer shall be the sole judge as to whether the services of Employee are satisfactory.

ARTICLE 3. COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEE

Commissions

Section 3.01. As compensation for the services rendered by Employee under this agreement, Employee shall be entitled to a commission of _____ percent of the net sales of all goods and merchandise of Employer sold to customers in Employee's assigned territory _____ [by Employee or whether those sales were procured through the efforts of Employee, other employees of Employer, or Employer itself].

"Net Sales" Defined

Section 3.02. "Net sales," as used herein, shall mean the dollar amount of gross sales for which commissions are payable pursuant to Section 3.01, less any returns and allowances attributable to those gross sales.

Accrual of Commissions

Section 3.03. Commissions hereunder shall be deemed earned when payment for the goods and merchandise sold is received by Employer from the respective customers.

Payment of Commissions With Drawing Account

Section 3.04. (a) Employee shall be entitled to receive in advance the sum of $_____ per _____ [designate pay period, e.g.: week] as an advance on the commissions to be earned under this agreement, and the amount so advanced shall be deducted from commissions deemed to have been earned.

(b) Accrued commissions earned in excess of amounts advanced and/or advances shall be paid to Employee on _____ [specify when, e.g.: Friday of each week].

(c) If, upon termination of this agreement, the amount advanced exceeds the amount of commissions earned, Employee _____ [shall or shall not] retain the sum advanced and _____ [shall or shall not] be required to reimburse Employer for any amount by which those advances exceed commissions earned. [If employee will not retain amounts advanced, add: Employee agrees and consents that any amounts owed to Employer may be deducted from any amounts owed by Employer to Employee at termination, including commissions, expense reimbursements and accrued vacation.]

ARTICLE 4. BUSINESS EXPENSES

Travel, Entertainment, and Other Expenses

Section 4.01. It is recognized and agreed by the parties to this agreement that in connection with the services to be performed for Employer, Employee will be obliged to expend money for travel, entertainment of customers, gifts, and similar business expenses. Employee is authorized to incur reasonable business expenses for promoting the business of Employer.

Reimbursement

[First alternative; expense account reimbursement:]

Section 4.02. Employer shall reimburse Employee from time to time for all business expenses incurred by Employee, provided that Employee presents adequate contemporaneous documentation to Employer.

[OR]

[Second alternative; use following to provide for lump sum as total periodic expense payment without adjustments:]

Section 4.02. (a) In order to reimburse employee for all business expenses, Employer shall pay Employee the sum of $_____ per month in addition to the compensation provided for herein. This additional amount shall be paid on the last day of each month during the term of this agreement.

(b) Employer shall not be liable to Employee, except as herein provided, for the repayment of any business expenses incurred by Employee in any particular month in excess of the monthly amount paid by Employer.

(c) Employee shall present to Employer adequate contemporaneous documentation for all business expenses.

(d) If the actual business expenses incurred by Employee in any particular month are less than the sum herein agreed to be paid by Employer, Employee shall be entitled to retain that excess.

"Adequate Contemporaneous Documentation"

Section 4.03. (a) "Adequate contemporaneous documentation" includes an account book in which Employee recorded at or near the time each expenditure was made: the amount of the expenditure; the time, place, and designation of the type of the entertainment and travel or other expenses, or the date and description of the gift; the business reason for the expenditure and the nature of the business benefit derived or expected to be derived as a result of the expenditure; and the names, occupations, addresses, and other information, sufficient to establish a business relationship to Employer, concerning each person who was entertained or given a gift. Gifts made to any one individual shall not exceed a total value of $_____ [e.g., $25] in any taxable year.

(b) "Adequate contemporaneous documentation" also includes documentary evidence (such as a receipt or paid bill), which states sufficient information to establish the amount, date, place, and the essential character of the expenditure, for each expenditure: of $_____ [specify dollar amount] or more (except for transportation charges if not readily available); and for lodging while traveling away from home. It also includes any other documentation required in the future by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Business Expenses" Defined in Employer's Rules

Section 4.04. "Business expenses" means only those expenditures specified in the rules and regulations issued by Employer now in effect or as subsequently modified, notwithstanding anything else to the contrary in this agreement. Any subsequent modification of those rules and regulations with regard to business expenses shall not be effective until _____ [number] days after issuance by Employer.

ARTICLE 5. PROPERTY RIGHTS OF THE PARTIES

Protection of Trade Secrets

Section 5.01. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of Employee's duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees not to misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of Employee's employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of Employee's employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer _____ [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

(e) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the names and addresses of Employer's customers constitute trade secrets of Employer and that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during Employee's employment with Employer constitutes unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer.

Ownership of Customer Records

Section 5.02. (a) All records of the accounts of customers, route books, and any other records and books relating in any manner whatsoever to the customers of Employer, whether prepared by Employee or otherwise, shall be the exclusive property of Employer regardless of who actually purchased the original book or record.

(b) All such books and records shall be immediately returned to Employer by Employee on any termination of employment.

(c) If Employee purchases any record book, ledger, or similar item to be used for record keeping, Employee shall immediately notify Employer, and Employer shall then immediately reimburse Employee.

ARTICLE 6. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYER

Indemnification of Losses of Employee

Section 6.01. Employer shall indemnify Employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by Employee in direct consequence of the discharge of Employee's duties.

Examination of Books

Section 6.02. Employee shall have the right, either personally or by an accountant retained and paid by Employee, to examine the books and accounts of Employer, insofar as they relate to transactions affecting the amount of Employee's compensation. Employee's right to examine Employer's books and accounts shall be exercised at times mutually convenient to Employer and Employee and may be exercised at least once during each half of the calendar year.

ARTICLE 7. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEE

Employee Transportation

7.01. (a) Employee shall supply an automobile or other vehicle for use in traveling throughout Employee's designated territory and making calls on current and prospective customers. Employer shall reimburse Employee on a monthly _____ [or specify other period] basis at the rate of _____ cents per mile for all reasonable and necessary automobile travel expenses incurred by Employee in using Employee's automobile for travel in connection with sales calls and the discharge of Employee's other duties under this Agreement [or substitute other reimbursement provision].

(b) At all times during the term of this agreement, Employee shall hold and maintain in force a valid California driver's license.

Qualification for Surety Bond

Section 7.02. (a) Employee agrees to will furnish all information and take any other steps necessary to enable Employer to obtain a fidelity bond conditioned on the rendering of a true account by Employee of all moneys, goods, or other property that may come into the custody, charge, or possession of Employee during the term of employment.

(b) The surety company issuing the bond and the amount of the bond must be acceptable to Employer in the sole discretion of Employer.

(c) All premiums on the bond are to be paid by Employer.

(d) Failure by Employee to qualify for such a bond within _____ [number] days from the date of this agreement will result in immediate termination of this employment contract.

ARTICLE 8. TERMINATION

Events Causing Termination

Section 8.01. This agreement shall terminate immediately on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(a) The occurrence of circumstances that make it impossible or impracticable for the business of Employer to be continued.

(b) The death of Employee.

(c) The loss by Employee of legal capacity.

(d) The death of any partner in the business operated by Employer.

(e) The loss by Employer of legal capacity to contract.

(f) The willful breach of duty by Employee in the course of this employment, unless waived by Employer.

(g) The habitual neglect by Employee of Employee's employment duties, unless waived by Employer.

(h) The continued incapacity on the part of Employee to perform_____[his or her] duties in excess of 90 days, unless waived by Employer.

(i) The willful or permanent breach of the obligations of the Employer to Employee under this agreement, unless waived by Employee.

Effect of Garnishment

Section 8.02. The Employer shall not terminate this agreement by reason of the fact that garnishment of Employee's earnings of Employee have been threatened or by reason of the fact that Employee's earnings have been subjected to garnishment [if power to terminate is to be subjected only to statutory minimum, add: for one indebtedness].

Effect of Termination on Compensation

Section 8.03. Subject to any other provision of this Article, in the event of the termination of this agreement prior to the completion of the term of employment specified herein, Employee shall be entitled to the compensation earned prior to the date of termination as provided for in this agreement, computed pro rata up to and including that date. Employee shall be entitled to no further compensation as of the date of termination.

Limitation on Claims for Commissions After Termination

Section 8.04. All claims of Employee for commissions on sales, whether the sales are made by Employee or others, are waived by Employee if not made within _____ [specify time period sufficient to allow determination of commissions earned] from the date of the termination of Employee's employment with Employer.

[Optional; add if this form is modified to provide for profit-sharing, bonuses, deferred compensation, or other incentive pay:]

Effect of Termination on Particular Compensation

Section 8.05. In the event of the termination of this agreement prior to _____ [if contract is for specified term, use: the completion of the term of employment specified herein or, if contract is at will, specify, the accrual of any of the following rights], _____ [Employee shall be entitled to all _____ (profit-sharing or bonuses or deferred compensation or other incentive pay) vested in Employee as of the date of termination hereunder] or Employee shall automatically and completely forfeit any rights that Employee may have_____[specify, e.g., to a Christmas bonus or under the bonus plan established by Employer].

ARTICLE 9. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 9.01. Any notices to be given by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[e.g., the date of mailing].

Arbitration

Section 9.02. Any controversy or claim arising out of or relating to this agreement, or the breach thereof [optional:, except _____ (e.g., controversies involving less than $1,500)], shall be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association, and judgment on the award rendered may be entered in any court having jurisdiction.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 9.03. If any _____ [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

Section 9.04. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing signed by the party to be charged.

Partial Invalidity

Section 9.05. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

Section 9.06. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Payment of Sums Due Deceased Employee

Section 9.07. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of employment, any moneys that may be due Employee from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to such person or persons as Employee may designate in a written instrument delivered to Employer, or, in default of such a designation, to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

28-85 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 85.221

AUTHOR: by Edward Baskauskas, J.D. Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., Practice Consultant

§ 85.221 Contract for Employment of Technical Professional--Protection of Employer's Intellectual Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete employment contract for a technical professional person, specifically a research and development engineer. For an agreement between a professional corporation and one of the principals of the corporation (such as a lawyer, physician, or engineer), see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

[i] In General

This form illustrates only one of the many forms in which such a contract might be drafted. Before drafting such a contract, the attorney should be fully informed as to the general operation of the business of the employer and the nature of the work to be done by the employee. The attorney should also consider the matters the parties desire to cover in the contract so that he or she can draw up an agreement that will best suit the needs of the particular situation. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions in hand, the attorney should tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

The Drafting Guide describes the particular provisions included in this chapter and indicates their location, either in the other complete contracts or the separate contract provisions set forth in §§ 85.240-85.551. In any event, the comments to the latter discuss the various legal problems involved.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1].

[ii] Duties of Employee

The general duties of this type of employee should be described in broad terms. Because a technical person may also be working on his or her own time on problems unrelated to the employer's business, a provision permitting the employee to engage in certain specified other employment is included [see Section 2.02 of Form]. Many employment contracts provide that the employer alone can at any time change the duties to be performed by the employee; however, since technical employees have knowledge, experience, skills, and interests that are limited to particular areas, this form provides that such a change can be made only with the mutual consent of both parties [see Section 2.03 of Form].

For general discussion of the duties of an employee, see § 85.11.

[iii] Employee Benefits

The provisions in this form for annual bonuses after two years of service [see Section 5.01 of Form] and for severance pay [see Section 4.02 of Form] are unusual but are illustrative of the special inducements that may be required for this type of employee. This form makes pension rights a specific contractual obligation [see Section 5.02 of Form], in contrast to the usual situation in which the pension is provided as part of the usage of the workplace (the function of an employer's rules and usages of the workplace as contract obligations is discussed in § 85.274[1][c]). Again, it is made a contractual obligation because of the need to provide special inducements to technical personnel. For an alternative pension provision and relevant legal discussion, see § 85.323.

[c] Contracts to Assign Employee's Work Product

This form includes a provision governing the ownership of the employee's work product and assigning all rights therein to the employer [see Section 7.02 of Form]. It also includes a provision governing the distribution of the royalties received by the employer from others for the use of any inventions conceived by the employee or other employees working under his or her supervision [see Section 7.03 of Form]; for an alternate royalty provision, see § 85.201.

A provision for assignment of the rights to "inventions" developed by employees is enforceable only if the invention is made with the employer's assets, supplies, facilities, equipment, trade secret information, or time, relates to the employer's business including actual or anticipated research or development, or results from work performed for the employer by the employee [see Lab. Code § 2870].

If an employee uses only his or her own time, resources, and ideas, and the invention is completely unrelated to the employer's business, any provision in an employment contract requiring assignment of that invention is void [see Lab. Code § 2870] and may not be used [Lab. Code § 2871].

If an employment agreement contains a provision requiring the employee to assign or offer to assign any of his or her rights in any invention to the employer, the employer must also provide written notification to the employee that the agreement does not apply to inventions developed outside the scope defined above. The notification must be given at the time the employment agreement is made [Lab. Code § 2872]. Section 7.02(e) of this form states these matters in contract language. Since the statute does not expressly preclude giving the required notice in the employment contract itself, the statement in this form would appear to constitute adequate compliance with the notice requirement. However, a separate additional notice may be used if desired.

For discussion of this and other aspects of the assignment of an employee's inventions to the employer, and an alternate provision, see § 85.430[1].

[d] Competitive Activities and Disclosure of Trade Secrets

This form contains a provision prohibiting the employee from engaging in any type of direct or indirect competition with the employer during the term of the employment contract [see Section 7.09 of Form]. For discussion of the legal issues involved in such a provision, see § 85.470.

This form also contains a provision that specifies what information is considered to be the employer's trade secrets [see Section 7.04 of Form] and a provision designed to protect those trade secrets and prevent the employee from disclosing them during or after his or her employment [see Section 7.08 of Form]. It does this by describing any unauthorized disclosure as unfair competition and requiring the employee not to engage in any acts of unfair competition. For relevant discussion, see § 85.440[1].

[2] FORM

Contract for Employment of Technical Professional--Protection of Employer's Intellectual Property

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT

_____[name of employer] ("Employer") [, a _____ (California corporation or partnership or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. EMPLOYMENT

Term

Section 1.01. Employer employs Employee and Employee hereby accepts employment with Employer [omit following if employment is at will: for a period of _____ (any period more than one month and less than seven years),] beginning on_____[date].

Agreement Subject to Termination

Section 1.02. This agreement may be terminated earlier as provided below [notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1.01, above].

ARTICLE 2. EMPLOYEE'S DUTIES

General Description

Section 2.01. (a) Employee is hired by Employer as a [describe branch of profession, e.g., civil or mechanical or research and development] engineer to [describe duties, e.g., research and discover, invent, develop, or improve methods, formulas, machines, and devices relating in any manner whatsoever to _____ (specify, e.g., the manufacture of transistors and semiconductors or terminal access application systems for data processing)].

(b) Employee shall perform services at [specify place, e.g., any laboratory, research facility, or manufacturing plant operated or designated by Employer].

Other Employment

Section 2.02. Employee [may or may not]_____[specify nature of other employment, e.g., engage in any other professional activity or continue _____ (his or her) present work as a consultant for XYZ Corporation] [if employee may engage in other activity, add:, provided that none of it is done during normal working hours or at the place of business of Employer, and it does not interfere in any way with the performance of his duties under this contract].

Mutual Consent for Change of Duties

Section 2.03. The duties of Employee may be changed from time to time by the mutual consent of Employer and Employee without resulting in a rescission of this contract. Notwithstanding any such change, the employment of Employee shall be construed as continuing under this agreement as modified.

Indemnification for Negligence or Misconduct

Section 2.04. Employee shall indemnify and hold harmless Employer from all liability for loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Employee.

ARTICLE 3. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYER

Office and Equipment

Section 3.01. Employer shall provide Employee with [list specific equipment, e.g., ISDN line, laptop, cellular telephone], office space and administrative support suitable to Employee's position and adequate for the performance of_____[his or her] duties [specify any other prerequisites, e.g.,, and the use of an automobile, all the expenses of operation and maintenance of which are to be paid by Employer].

Indemnification of Losses of Employee

Section 3.02. Employer shall indemnify Employee for all necessary expenditures or losses incurred by Employee in direct consequence of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties on Employer's behalf.

ARTICLE 4. COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEE

Section 4.01. As compensation for services rendered under this contract, Employee shall be entitled to an annualized salary of $_____, payable in equal biweekly installments of $_____ on Friday of every other week during the period of employment, prorated for any partial employment period.

Severance Pay

Section 4.02. In the event that Employee's services under this contract are terminated by Employer [use following if contract states a specified term: prior to the end of the employment term specified herein] for reasons other than cause against Employee, Employee shall be entitled to, as severance pay, the sum of $_____ if_____[his or her] services are terminated without cause in the first year of employment, $_____ if_____[his or her] services are terminated without cause in the second year of employment, and $_____ if_____[his or her] services are terminated without cause in any year thereafter.

ARTICLE 5. EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

Bonus

Section 5.01. (a) After completion of [number] years of service under this contract, Employee shall be entitled to receive, in addition to_____[his or her] regular salary as provided above, an annual bonus in the amount of $_____, payable at the end of each employment year, for each full year thereafter that Employee remains employed with Employer under this contract.

(b) If the employment term is terminated for a reason other than cause against Employee, Employee shall be entitled to a prorated portion of_____[his or her] annual bonus equal to one-twelfth of the annual bonus for each month that_____[he or she] has been employed during the employment year (including the month in which the employment terminated).

(c) If the employment term is terminated for cause, Employee shall not be entitled to any portion of_____[his or her] annual bonus for that year.

Pension

Section 5.02. As additional compensation for services rendered under this agreement and after completion of [number] years of service to Employer, Employee shall be entitled to a pension in accordance with the pension plan and trust agreement established by Employer for the purpose of providing pensions for its employees. For this purpose, Employee shall execute, in the form provided by Employer, an agreement to enter into the pension plan.

ARTICLE 6. REIMBURSABLE EMPLOYEE EXPENSES

Moving Expenses

Section 6.01. In the event that during the term of this agreement Employee is transferred by Employer to a new principal place of work at least 50 miles farther from_____[his or her] residence at the time of the transfer ("current residence") than_____[his or her] principal place of work at the time of the transfer, Employer shall reimburse Employee for all reasonable expenses incurred for:

(1) Moving the household goods and personal effects of Employee [and Employee's spouse and minor children] from the current residence to the new place of residence.

(2) The expenses of a one-way trip, including lodging, by Employee [and Employee's spouse and minor children] from the current residence to the new place of residence.

Purchase of Employee's Home by Employer

Section 6.02. If Employee is transferred during the term of this agreement to another principal place of work that is at least [e.g., 100] miles from the previous principal place of work of Employee, Employee shall have the option of selling to Employer any residence owned and occupied by Employee at that time. The sales price shall be the fair market value of the residence as determined by an appraiser selected by Employer, less the amounts of a real estate broker's commission and other costs of sale customarily paid by sellers of residences of like value in the area where the residence is located. This appraisal shall be made within [e.g., 15 days] after the date Employee is notified of the transfer. After Employee is notified of the sales price and the amounts to be deducted for commission and costs, Employee shall have [e.g., 10 days] to decide whether to exercise this option to sell. The net sales price shall be paid to Employee in full in cash by Employer within [specify reasonable time to permit employer to obtain financing, e.g., 30 days] after Employer is notified that Employee is exercising this option to sell. Repayment in Event of Early Resignation

Section 6.03. If Employee resigns_____[his or her] employment prior to the end of the term of this contract, Employee shall be required to repay to Employer that amount of moving expenses equal to the percentage of the contract term remaining.

ARTICLE 7. PROPERTY RIGHTS OF THE PARTIES

Disclosure of Inventions and Discoveries

Section 7.01. (a) Employee promises and agrees that_____[he or she] will promptly and fully inform Employer of and disclose to Employer all inventions, designs, improvements, discoveries, developments, formulas, patterns, devices, processes, software programs, technical data, customer and supplier lists, and compilations of information, records, and specifications, and other matters constituting trade secrets as defined under California Civ. Code Section 3426.1, that_____[he or she] makes during the term of this agreement, whether individually or jointly in collaboration with others [, and that pertain or relate to the actual or potential business of Employer or to any experimental work carried on by Employer], whether or not conceived during regular working hours.

(b) Employee shall make full disclosure to Employer immediately after creating or making any of the items described in (a), above, and shall thereafter keep Employer fully informed at all times of all progress in connection therewith.

Ownership of Work Product

Section 7.02. (a) Employee agrees that any and all intellectual properties, including, but not limited to, all inventions, designs, improvements, discoveries, developments, formulas, patterns, devices, processes, software programs, technical data, customer and supplier lists, and compilations of information, records, and specifications, and other matters constituting trade secrets as defined under California Civ. Code § 3426.1, that are conceived, developed, or written by Employee, either individually or jointly in collaboration with others, pursuant to this agreement, shall belong to and be the sole and exclusive property of Employer.

(b) Employee further agrees to submit any dispute regarding whether any such intellectual property was conceived, developed, or written pursuant to this agreement to a review process pursuant to Employer's rules and policies.

(c) Employee agrees that all rights in all intellectual properties prepared by [him or her] pursuant to this agreement, including patent rights and copyrights applicable to any of the intellectual properties described in Section 7.02(a) above, shall belong exclusively to Employer, shall constitute "works made for hire," and shall be assigned promptly by Employee to Employer. Employee further agrees to assist Employer in obtaining patents on all such inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries that are patentable or copyright registration on all such works of creation that are copyrightable, and shall execute all documents and do all things necessary to obtain patent or copyright registration, vest Employer with full and exclusive title, and protect against infringement by others.

(d) This Section shall not apply to intellectual properties or rights therein derived from Employee's activities or employment prior to the time_____[he or she] entered into an employer-employee relationship with Employer ("preexisting rights"). Employer agrees that those preexisting rights are and shall continue to be the exclusive property of Employee and disclaims any claim of rights of any nature whatsoever thereto. [If appropriate, add: A schedule of these preexisting intellectual properties or rights is attached to this agreement.]

(e) This Section shall not apply to assign to Employer any of Employee's rights in any invention that Employee develops entirely on his or her own time without using Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information, except for inventions that either (1) relate, at the time that the invention is conceived or reduced to practice, to Employer's business or to actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of Employer; or (2) result from any work performed by Employee for Employer.

[Optional; use following provision if employee compensation is to include part of royalties on properties conceived by employee:]

Distribution of Royalties

Section 7.03. (a) If Employer licenses others to use any of the intellectual properties to which Section 7.02 is applicable, Employer shall pay to Employee a portion of the money royalties received as follows: [set forth schedule, e.g.: Of the first $2,000 or any part thereof received in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 40 percent); of the next $2,000 or any part thereof received in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 3 0 percent); and of all further sums collected in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 20 percent)].

(b) All questions of whether, when, how, and to whom licenses are to be granted shall be determined in the sole discretion of Employer.

Confidentiality of Trade Secret Data

Section 7.04. (a) Employee agrees that all information communicated to [him or her] with respect to the work conducted by or for Employer, whether or not that information was directly or intentionally communicated, is confidential. Employee also agrees that all information, conclusions, recommendations, reports, advice, or other documents generated by Employee pursuant to this agreement, whether maintained in hard copy or in an electronic medium, is confidential. Employee further acknowledges and agrees that all confidential data described herein is and constitutes trade secret information that belongs wholly to and is the exclusive property of Employer.

(b) Employee promises and agrees that_____[he or she] shall not disclose any confidential information of Employer or any third party, as long as that information is subject to a Confidential Disclosure Agreement, to any other person, orally, in writing or via electronic communication, unless specifically authorized in writing by Employer to do so. If Employer gives Employee written authorization to make any disclosures, Employee shall do so only within the limits and to the extent of that authorization.

(c) Employee shall use_____[his or her] best efforts to prevent inadvertent disclosure of any confidential information to any third party by using the same care and discretion that_____[he or she] uses with similar data_____[he or she] designates as confidential.

(d) Employee acknowledges and agrees that all information concerning the work conducted by Employer and any potential products of Employer is and constitutes an exceptionally valuable trade secret of Employer. That information includes, among other matters, the facts that any particular work or project is planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions of any existing, pending, or proposed work.

Use and Disclosure of Confidential Data

Section 7.05. Employee shall not use any confidential information or circulate it to any other person or persons, except when specifically authorized in advance by Employer and then only to the extent necessary for any of the following:

(a) Conducting negotiations, discussions, and/or consultations with designated Employer representatives.

(b) Supplying Employer with goods or services at its order.

(c) Preparing confidential estimates, bids or proposals, and invitations for bids or requests for proposals for submission to Employer.

(d) Accomplishing any purpose Employer may later specify in writing.

Copies of Confidential Information

Section 7.06. Employee agrees that copying of confidential information shall be done only in accordance with Employer's policy on handling and reproducing confidential information as set forth in Employer's "Employee Manual," a copy of which has been provided to Employee. Employee further agrees that copies of confidential information shall be treated with the same degree of confidentiality as the original information and shall be subject to the restrictions set forth in Section 7.05 of this agreement.

Return of Materials

Section 7.07. Employee shall return to Employer, promptly at Employer's request, all confidential materials. Any materials the return of which is specifically requested shall be returned promptly at the conclusion of the work on, or consideration of work on, the project to which the materials relate.

Unfair Competition

Section 7.08. Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure, orally, in writing, or via electronic medium, of any of Employer's confidential information obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's current or any future and proposed work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer at any time, whether during or following the completion of_____[his or her] employment with Employer.

Competitive Activities During Employment

Section 7.09. Employee promises and agrees that during the term of this Agreement,_____[he or she] shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any competitive activity relating to the subject matter of_____[his or her] employment with Employer.

ARTICLE 8. TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Termination by Employer

Section 8.01. This agreement may be terminated by Employer for cause by giving [specify number] days written notice of termination to Employee. Termination pursuant to this Section shall not prejudice any remedy that Employer may have either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

Effect of Employer's Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

Section 8.02. (a) This agreement shall not be terminated by any merger or consolidation in which Employer is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, by the transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of Employer, or by the voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer.

(b) In the event of any merger or consolidation or transfer of assets, the surviving or resulting corporation or the transferee of Employer's assets shall be bound by and shall have the benefit of the provisions of this agreement. Employer shall take all actions necessary to insure that such a corporation or transferee is bound by the provisions of this agreement.

Effect of Termination on Compensation

Section 8.03. In the event of the termination of this agreement [use following if contract states a specified term: prior to the completion of the term of employment specified herein], Employee shall be entitled to the compensation earned prior to the date of termination as provided for in this agreement computed pro rata up to and including that date. Employee shall also be entitled to the benefits provided for in Article Five of this agreement computed pro rata up to and including that date.

ARTICLE 9. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 9.01. Any notices to be given by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of_____[e.g., the date on which they are mailed].

Entire Agreement

Section 9.02. (a) This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer, and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever.

(b) Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, other than those set forth herein, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding.

(c) Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing signed by the party to be charged.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 9.03. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which_____[he or she] may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Partial Invalidity

Section 9.04. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

Section 9.05. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Payment of Moneys Due Deceased Employee

Section 9.06. If Employee dies prior to the expiration of the term of employment, any moneys that may be due from Employer under this agreement as of the date of Employee's death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.222 Employment Contract Between Computer Software Publisher and Programmer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a complete employment contract between a software publisher and a programmer. Computers, which are either sold or leased by the manufacturers, are referred to as "hardware." "Software" is the term used to describe the programs or electronic instructions that tell the hardware what to do or how to perform the tasks the software is designed to perform. For further discussion of these terms, see Ch. 57, Computer-Related Transactions .

A software publisher either provides systems analyses, programming, application design and development, installation evaluation, and the like to the owner or lessee of larger computers or publishes and "sells" (licenses) software to the general public for use on personal or professional computers. In the former case, the work involved may be performed at the offices of the publisher or the customer or both; in the latter, the work will be performed at the publisher's premises.

[b] Drafting Considerations in General

This form represents one of the many ways of drafting an agreement for the employment of a computer programmer. In preparing such an agreement, the attorney should carefully consider the needs of the firm or the desires of the programmer and the matters the parties desire to cover in the contract. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions in hand, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide set forth in § 85.120 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

The Drafting Guide describes the particular provisions included in this chapter and indicates their location, either in the other complete contracts or the separate contract provisions set forth in §§ 85.240-85.551. In any event, the comments to the latter discuss the various legal problems involved.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1]. For a software design study or consultation agreement, plus agreements between a software developer, acting as an independent contractor, and an end-user of the software to be produced, see Ch. 57, Computer-Related Transactions .

[c] Compensation of Employee

This agreement provides that the employee is salaried. This means that the employer is exempt from statutory requirements for higher overtime pay [for discussion, see § 85.290[1]]. If it is anticipated that a programmer, or any other type of employee who is salaried but not highly salaried, may have to work overtime, it is suggested, so that there will be no misunderstanding, that the employment contract provide whether overtime compensation will be paid and, if so, how much. This form specifically provides for an increased rate of compensation for overtime work [see Section 3.02 of Form]; however, it need be included only if the parties have agreed that the basic salary provision must be supplemented in this manner. Generally, this sort of employee is rewarded for extraordinary effort and long hours by the payment of completion and project bonuses. For relevant discussion, see § 85.291[1].

This form includes a provision adjusting the employee's compensation quarterly to reflect the increase, if any, of the cost of living [see Section 3.03 of Form]. It is a typical cost of living provision sometimes used in employment contracts. For relevant discussion, see § 85.301[1].

[d] Contracts to Assign Employee's Work Product

This form includes a provision governing the ownership of the employee's work product and assigning all rights therein to the employer [see Section 4.02 of Form]. It also includes a provision governing the distribution of the royalties received by the employer from others for the use of any inventions conceived by the employee or other employees working under his or her supervision [see Section 4.03 of Form]; for alternate royalties provisions, see § 85.431.

The Labor Code makes any provision for assignment of the rights to an "invention" developed by an employee enforceable only if the invention is made with the employer's assets, supplies, facilities, equipment, trade secret information, or time, relates to the employer's business including actual or anticipated research or development of the employer, or results from work performed for the employer by the employee [see Lab. Code § 2870]. While the work of a computer programmer may not result in an "invention," that term is subject to judicial interpretation and could be construed to include computer program designs or discoveries. Thus, Section 4.02 of this form is drafted to comply with the Labor Code restrictions, including the further limitation that if an employee uses only his or her own time, resources, and ideas, and the invention is completely unrelated to the employer's business, any provision in an employment contract requiring assignment of that invention is void [see Lab. Code § 2870] and may not be used [Lab. Code § 2871].

If an employment agreement contains a provision requiring the employee to assign or offer to assign any of his or her rights in any invention to the employer, the employer must also give the employee written notification that the agreement does not apply to inventions developed outside the scope defined above. The notification must be given at the time the employment agreement is made [Lab. Code § 2872]. The basic information that must be included in that notice appears in Section 4.02(e) of the form. Since the statute does not expressly preclude giving the required notice in the employment contract itself, Section 4.02(e) would appear to constitute adequate compliance with the notice requirement. However, a separate additional notice or schedule may be used if desired.

For discussion of this and other aspects of the assignment of an employee's inventions to the employer, and an alternate provision, see § 85.430[1].

[e] Competitive Activities and Disclosure of Trade Secrets

This form contains a provision prohibiting the employee from participating in any business that is in competition with the business of the employer [see Section 5.02 of Form]. For discussion of the legal issues involved in such a provision, see § 85.470.

This form also contains a provision designed to protect the employer's trade secrets and prevent the employee from disclosing them during or after the employment [see Section 5.01 of Form]. It does this by describing any unauthorized disclosure as unfair competition and requiring the employee not to engage in any acts of unfair competition. For relevant discussion, see § 85.440[1].

[2] FORM

Employment Contract Between Computer Software Publisher and Programmer

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT

AGREEMENT made this _____ day of_____[date] between [name of employer, e.g., Basic Data Processing Service, Inc., a California corporation] ("Employer"), having a principal place of business at_____[address], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address]:

ARTICLE 1. EMPLOYMENT

Term

Section 1.01. The Employer employs Employee and Employee accepts employment with Employer for a period of_____[omit following if employment is at will: for a period of _____ (any period more than one month and less than seven years),] beginning on_____[date].

Agreement Subject to Termination

Section 1.02. This agreement may be terminated earlier as hereinafter provided [notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1.01, above].

ARTICLE 2. DUTIES OF EMPLOYEE

Basic Duties

Section 2.01. (a) Employee is hired as a computer programmer. Acting in that capacity, Employee shall [describe duties, e.g., design and create source and application code versions of computer programs for use by Employer's customers]. [Add if employee is also to work directly with employer's clients: Employee shall also assist Employer's customers in conjunction with the installation and subsequent evaluation and any necessary modification of any computer programs _____ (he or she) has produced pursuant to this agreement].

(b) Employee shall also write or assist other employees in the writing of manuals and other documentation describing the use and/or function of any computer programs upon which_____[he or she] works under this agreement.

(c) In performing_____[his or her] basic duties, Employee shall work at_____[specify place, e.g., home or the main office of Employer located at _____ (address) or at the offices of customers of Employer, and at such other place or places as may be directed by Employer] under the supervision and control of Employer at all times.

Other Duties of Employee

Section 2.02. In addition to the foregoing duties, Employee shall do such other work as may be assigned to [him or her], subject to the instructions, directions, and control of Employer at all times.

Outside Employment

Section 2.03. Employee shall not directly or indirectly render any services of a business, commercial, or professional nature to any other person or organization, whether for compensation or otherwise, that interferes with the performance of the duties under this contract.

ARTICLE 3. COMPENSATION

Basic Salary

Section 3.01. Employee shall receive an annualized salary of $_____, payable in equal biweekly installments on every other Friday during the calendar year and prorated for any partial employment period.

Additional Compensation

Section 3.02. Whenever Employee is called upon to work more than forty hours during a workweek or on Saturday or Sunday in order to complete a project,_____[he or she] shall be entitled to additional compensation at the rate of $_____ per hour for hours in excess of forty or Saturdays, whether or not those hours exceed the 40, and $_____ per hour for time worked on Sundays and holidays.

Cost of Living Adjustment

Section 3.03. (a) The basic salary provided herein shall be adjusted annually to reflect the increase, if any, in the cost of living by adding to the then current basic salary an amount obtained by multiplying the then current basic salary by the percentage by which the level of the Consumer Price Index for the [specify statistical reporting area, e.g., San Francisco-Oakland Metropolitan Area], as reported for the last day of that quarterly period by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, has increased over its level on the date this agreement commenced for the first such adjustment or over its level as of the date of each subsequent adjustment.

(b) Following the end of each year, and within 10 days after the release by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the figures for that year, Employer shall pay to Employee the amount of additional compensation to which_____[he or she] is entitled on account of the adjustment made to_____[his or her] salary pursuant to this paragraph.

Vacation and Sick Pay

Section 3.04. After the completion of six months of service in the employ of Employer, Employee shall be entitled to an annual paid vacation of two weeks with full pay. Vacation shall be taken at a time selected by Employee and approved by Employer. In addition, Employee shall be entitled to six days per year as sick leave with pay. Neither vacation time nor sick leave may be accumulated, and, if not used during the year in which it is granted, it shall be deemed to have been waived by Employee.

ARTICLE 4. PROPERTY RIGHTS OF THE PARTIES

Disclosure of Creations, Designs, and Improvements

Section 4.01. Employee promises and agrees that_____[he or she] will promptly and fully inform and disclose to Employer all computer program designs, creations, improvements, and discoveries that_____[he or she] makes during the term of this agreement that pertain or relate to the business of Employer or to any experimental work carried on by Employer, whether conceived by Employee alone or with others and whether or not conceived during regular working hours.

Ownership of Work Product

Section 4.02. (a) Employee agrees that any and all intellectual properties, including, but not limited to, all ideas, concepts, themes, inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries conceived, developed, or written by Employee, either individually or jointly in collaboration with others, pursuant to this agreement, shall belong to and be the sole and exclusive property of Employer.

(b) Employee further agrees to submit any dispute as to whether any intellectual property was conceived, developed, or written pursuant to this agreement to a review process pursuant to Employer's rules and policies.

(c) Employee agrees that all rights in all intellectual properties prepared by [him or her] pursuant to this agreement, including patent rights and copyrights applicable to any of the intellectual properties described in Section 4.02(a) above, shall belong exclusively to Employer, shall constitute "works made for hire," and shall be assigned promptly by Employee to Employer.

(d) Employee further agrees to assist Employer in obtaining patents on all inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries that are patentable or copyright registration on all works of creation that are copyrightable, and to execute all documents and do all things necessary to vest Employer with full and exclusive title and protect against infringement by others.

(e) This section shall not apply to intellectual properties or rights therein derived from Employee's activities or employment prior to the time_____[he or she] entered into an employer-employee relationship with Employer ("preexisting rights"). Employer agrees that those preexisting rights are and shall continue to be the exclusive property of Employee and disclaims any claim of rights of any nature whatsoever thereto.

(f) This Section shall not apply to assign to Employer any of Employee's rights in any invention that Employee develops entirely on his or her own time without using Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information, except for inventions that either (1) relate, at the time that the invention is conceived or reduced to practice, to Employer's business or to actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of Employer; or (2) result from any work performed by Employee for Employer.

[Optional; use following provision if employee compensation is to include part of royalties on properties conceived by employee:]

Distribution of Royalties

Section 4.03. (a) If Employer licenses others to use any of the intellectual properties to which Section 4.02 is applicable, Employer shall pay to Employee a portion of the money royalties received as follows: [set forth schedule, e.g.: Of the first $2,000 or any part thereof received in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 40 percent); of the next $2,000 or any part thereof received in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 30 percent); and of all further sums collected in any one calendar year, _____ (e.g., 20 percent)].

(b) All questions of whether, when, how, and to whom licenses are to be granted shall be determined in the sole discretion of Employer.

Trade Secrets of Employer

Section 4.04. Employee during the term of employment under this agreement will have access to and become acquainted with various trade secrets, consisting of devices, secret inventions, computer programs, processes, and compilations of information, records, and specifications that are owned by Employer and that are regularly used in the operation of the business of Employer. Employee shall not disclose orally, in writing or via electronic medium, any of these trade secrets, directly or indirectly, or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any time thereafter, except as required in the course of this employment. All files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, and similar items relating to the business or potential business of Employer, whether prepared by Employee or otherwise coming into_____[his or her] possession, shall remain the exclusive property of Employer and shall not be removed physically or electronically from the premises where the work of Employer is being carried on without the prior written consent of Employer.

Confidential Data of Customers of Employer

Section 4.05. In the course of the duties described herein, Employee will be handling financial, accounting, statistical, and personnel data of customers of Employer. All such data is confidential and shall not be disclosed, directly or indirectly, or used by Employee in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any time thereafter, except as required in the course of this employment.

ARTICLE 5. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEE

Unfair Competition

Section 5.01. Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's current or any future and proposed work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, and information provided by third parties pursuant to any Confidential Disclosure Agreement, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer at any time, whether during or following the completion of_____[his or her] employment with Employer.

Competitive Activities During Employment

Section 5.02. During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of Employer.

Indemnification

Section 5.03. Employee shall indemnify and hold Employer harmless from all liability from loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Employee.

ARTICLE 6. TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Termination by Employer for Cause

Section 6.01. If Employee willfully breaches or habitually neglects the duties which_____[he or she] is required to perform under the terms of this agreement, Employer may at its option terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination to Employee without prejudice to any other remedy to which Employer may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

Termination of Agreement on Discontinuance of Business

Section 6.02. If Employer ceases the operation of all its business, this agreement shall terminate as of the effective date that operations cease.

Effect of Termination on Compensation

Section 6.03. In the event of the termination of this agreement [prior to the completion of the term of employment specified herein], Employee shall be entitled to the compensation earned by and vested in [him or her] prior to the date of termination as provided for in this agreement, computed pro rata up to and including that date. Employee shall be entitled to no further compensation as of the date of termination.

ARTICLE 7. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Notices

Section 7.01. Any notices to be given by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing, or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices shall be addressed to Employee at_____[address] or to Employer at_____[address], but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally shall be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices shall be deemed communicated as of the date of mailing.

Entire Agreement

Section 7.02. This agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between the parties with respect to the employment of Employee by Employer, and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that employment in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this agreement acknowledges that no representations, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party, which are not embodied herein, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this agreement shall be valid or binding. Any modification of this agreement will be effective only if it is in writing signed by the party to be charged.

Attorneys' Fees and Costs

Section 7.03. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which_____[he or she] may be entitled. This provision shall be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Partial Invalidity

Section 7.04. If any provision in this agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions shall nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

Law Governing Agreement

Section 7.05. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Sums Due Deceased Employee

Section 7.06. If Employee dies prior to expiration of the term of employment, any sums that may be due [him or her] from Employer under this agreement as of the date of death shall be paid to Employee's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

§ 85.223 Employment Contract Between Temporary Help Agency and Employee of Agency

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between a firm that specializes in furnishing temporary workers to others (that is, a "temporary help agency") and the temporary worker. Under this type of agreement, the temporary worker is the employee of the agency and it is the agency that receives the wage paid for the worker's efforts and pays the worker a lesser sum for those efforts.

A temporary help agency is an employment agency since it offers to (and does) procure employment for individuals [see Civ. Code § 1812.501(a)(1)]. Employment agencies must comply with the requirements of the Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services Act [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.500-1812.533]. An employment agency must give an employee or job seeker a written contract containing certain specified disclosures and, if applicable, a fee schedule [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.504, 1812.505]. The contract in this form complies with the minimum disclosure requirements. For further discussion of the Act and the required contract provisions contained in this form, see Ch. 92, Service Contracts .

This form represents one of the many methods by which this type of a contract might be drafted. Before drafting this contract, the attorney should be fully informed as to the matters the agency desires to cover in the contract so that he or she can draw up an agreement that will best suit the client's needs. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 85.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide contained § 85.120 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the particular situation. Except for the provisions required under the Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services

Act, the Drafting Guide describes the provisions included in this chapter and indicates their location, either in the other complete contracts or the separate contract provisions contained in §§ 85.240-85.551. In any event, the comments to the latter discuss the various legal problems involved.

When a temporary agency is providing workers into a high-tech environment, additional provisions regarding confidentiality, use of computer systems, security clearance, and building access may be required by the customer. Accordingly, the agency may need to modify its contract with its employees to reflect those requirements. In that case the agency should work with its customer to ensure that its contract adequately meets its client's needs.

For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1].

Employer engages in the business of furnishing temporary help in [specify types of occupations, e.g., industrial, office, health care, and domestic] occupations. As part of its business,_____[describe mode of operation, e.g., Employer shall assign Employee to work for one of its customers on a full-time basis, for a period of time not to exceed _____ [months], receive payment for that work from its customer and pay Employee for that work pursuant to the terms of this agreement].

Conditions of Employment

1. Employment of the type specified in Paragraph 3 is offered to Employee on the following conditions and for the specified compensation:

(a) Hours per day: _____.

(b) Rate of wages: $_____ per _____ [hour or day].

(c) Additional Benefits:
(1) Health benefits: _____ [describe benefits].

(2) Vacation time: _____ [specify].

(3) Other benefits: _____ [specify].

(d) (1) Fee required from Employee: $_____. If Employee is required to pay a fee for any employment accepted under the terms of this Agreement, on termination of employment that fee must not exceed Employee's gross earnings in that employment.

(2) Amount of fee, if any, paid by customer: $_____. Name of person paying fee: _____.

(3) Amount of fee, if any, advanced by customer: $_____. Name of person advancing fee: _____.

(e) Additional terms of employment: _____.

Job Order Information

2. The job order on which Employee's employment is based is as follows:

(a) Job order made by:_____[name of person requesting help] of_____[address].

(b) Number and date of order: _____.

(c) Method of transmission: [specify, e.g., phone, messenger, etc.].

Duties

3. Employee's duties shall include [describe duties] together with all other duties that are commonly associated with the position of [specify job title] or that may be assigned orally or in writing by [Employer or Customer]. Employee shall report to:_____[name of supervisor at customer's premises] at_____[address].

[Add, if appropriate (see Civ. Code § 1812.509(b)):]

A labor contract is in force at the customer's establishment and union membership [is or is not] required.

Outside Employment

4. Employee agrees not to engage in outside employment that interferes in any way with the performance of_____[his or her] duties under this contract.

Termination

5. (a) Employee understands and agrees that Employer may terminate this agreement and_____[his or her] employment for cause at any time without notice. "Cause" shall mean and include any request by the customer that the Employee be removed from the assignment, breach of this agreement, violation of any law, dishonesty, insubordination, gross misconduct, or aiding a competitor during the term of this agreement.

(b) Either party may terminate this agreement and the employment relationship between them: at any time without notice during the first [specify period, e.g., 60] days of the employment contemplated under this agreement; on [specify period, e.g., seven days] prior notice during the next [specify period, e.g., ten months]; and on [specify period, e.g., 14 days] prior notice after the first full year of employment.

(c) Employer may satisfy these notice requirements by distributing pay to Employee in lieu of notice, in which case the date of payment shall be the date on which termination of employment shall be effective.

(d) On termination of_____[his or her] employment by Employer for any reason, Employee shall only be entitled to any bonus, commission, or incentive earnings provided for herein that are due as of the date of Employer's notice of termination.

[If temporary help agency is any agency other than a domestic agency operating as a registry:]

(e) Unless terminated in accordance with the above provisions, this Agreement shall expire on [specify date not later than 180 days from referral or signing of contract, whichever is first (see Civ. Code § 1812.504(a)(9); see also Civ. Code § 1812.504(e) ("domestic agency operating as a registry" defined))].

[Or, if temporary help agency is a domestic agency operating as a registry:]

(e) Unless terminated in accordance with the above provisions, this Agreement shall be ongoing, subject to termination by written notice by either the Employee or the Employer.

[Continue with the following:]

Competitive Activities

6. (a) Employee agrees that during the term of this agreement_____[he or she] will not, either directly or indirectly, for [himself or herself] or any third party, divert or attempt to divert any existing business of Employer or any customer of Employer, or engage in any business or activity that is in competition with Employer's or its customers' business.

(b) Employee further agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets_____[he or she] obtains pursuant to this agreement, including lists containing the names or names and addresses of Employer's customers and employees, the contents or details of any written or oral contract or understanding between Employer and any third party, constitute unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer.

PRACTICE TIP

For technical employees or employees in a high-tech company, a more detailed confidentiality provision may be expected by the customer, as well as an assignment of intellectual property rights to the temporary agency with the understanding that those will be assigned to the customer; the temporary agency will need to consult with its customer to assure that its needs are met.

[Include the following four paragraphs with the caption in no less than 10-point boldface type in full capitals and the text of the paragraphs in italics or boldface type of a size similar to that used in the other parts of the contract (see Civ. Code § 1812.504(a)(11)):]

RIGHT TO REFUND

7. If you pay all or any portion of a fee and fail to accept employment, the employment agency shall, on your request, return the amount paid to you within 48 hours after your request for a refund.

If you leave employment for just cause or are discharged for reasons other than misconduct connected with your work within 90 days from the starting date of employment, the agency shall reduce your fee to that payable for temporary employment and shall refund any excess paid within 10 days of your request for a refund.

No fee larger than that for temporary employment may be charged to you for employment lasting 90 days or less unless the agency's fee schedules, contracts, and agreements provide for a further charge if you leave employment without just cause or are discharged for misconduct in connection with your work.

If any refund due is not made within the time limits set forth above, the employment agency shall pay you an additional sum equal to the amount of the refund.

[Add the following if labor trouble exists at the place of employment (see Civ. Code §§ 1812.504(a)(8), 1812.509(c)):]

§ 85.230 Agreement Continuing Previous Employment--Incorporation of Prior Contract With Agreed-Upon Modifications

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a short agreement that has the effect of continuing or extending an employee's employment under a prior contract with any amendments the parties may agree to make. It is intended to serve as a memorandum of the agreement of the parties to continue the employment under the terms of the prior agreement and thus comply with any requirement that the contract be in writing [see § 85.22].

[b] Enforcement of Long-Term Employment Contracts

This contract is written as a separate contract with a new term and new commencement date in order to permit its enforcement by the employer within the limits of the general statutory rule that a contract to render personal services (except with respect to certain recording industry contracts or apprenticeships) may not be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the time services commences under the contract [Lab. Code § 2855]. For discussion of the special rules governing exceptions with respect to certain recording industry contracts [see Lab. Code § 2855(b)(1)], see Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts . For further discussion of the enforceability of contracts that continue beyond a seven-year period, see generally § 85.240[1].

[c] Compensation Due Upon Continuation of Long-Term Contract

If an employee voluntarily continues service under an existing employment contract for more than seven years, the contract affords a presumptive measure of the compensation due the employee during the continuation period [see Lab. Code § 2855]. To avoid the presumption that could apply, any contract that continues a prior employment or has that effect should specifically state any new salary arrangement.

§ 85.231 Contract Employing Former Officer as Consultant-Employee

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a contract under which a retiring officer or an officer of a firm that has been sold is continued in employment with his or her former organization or the new organization, but in a new status as consultant. The employee-consultant arrangement is often used as a means of assuring continuity for the organization, and often serves as a method of compensating (or continuing the compensation of) the former executive. In this context the term "consultant" is used to describe the scope of duties and does not imply an independent contractor relationship: the officer remains an employee of the company.

[2] FORM

Contract Employing Former Officer as Consultant-Employee

EMPLOYMENT OF CONSULTANT

_____[Name of employer] ("Employer") [, a _____ (partnership or California corporation or sole proprietorship)], located at_____[address of principal place of business], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made herein, agree as follows:

Employment and Term

1. Employer hereby employs Employee and Employee accepts employment with Employer [omit following if employment is at will: for a period _____ (of _____ any period more than one month and less than seven years or consisting of the entire lifetime of Employee),] beginning on_____[date].

Duties of Consultant

2. Employee is hired to perform services as a [specify duties, e.g., consultant with respect to corporate policy in the areas of finance, sales, management, and customer relations]. In that capacity, Employee shall [to the extent permitted by _____ (his or her) mental and physical health and other business commitments] [and at _____ (his or her) convenience] provide advice and counsel to Employer's [specify parties whom employee should advise, e.g., Board of Directors or Executive Committee or President and other officers] on those or other general managerial matters.

Salary

3. (a) As compensation for the services to be performed hereunder, Employee shall receive a salary at the rate of $_____ per annum, payable in equal installments [on or before the 26th day of each month or specify more frequent pay periods per month] during the employment term.

(b) Employee shall receive such annual increases in salary as may be determined by Employer's Board of Directors in its sole discretion.

Competitive Activities

4. (a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of this agreement and in the course of the discharge of_____[his or her] duties hereunder, Employee shall have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Employer, actually or potentially used in the operation of Employer's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Employer's "trade secrets."

(b) Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

(c) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally or by electronic means, of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during the course of_____[his or her] employment under this agreement, including information concerning Employer's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitutes unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer, either during the term of this agreement or at any other time thereafter.

(d) Employee further agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items whether maintained in hard copy or on line relating to Employer's business, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and that they shall be removed from the premises or, if kept on-line, from the computer systems of Employer [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Employer's Board of Directors].

(e) Employee further promises and agrees that during the term of this agreement,_____[he or she] shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any competitive activity relating to the matters specified in Paragraph 4(a).

Effect of Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

5. (a) This agreement [shall or shall not] be terminated by any voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer resulting from any merger or consolidation in which Employer is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, or any transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of Employer.

[If agreement will not be terminated, add:]

(b) In the event of any such merger or consolidation or transfer of assets, Employer's rights hereunder [shall or may] be assigned to the surviving or resulting corporation or the transferee of Employer's assets, in which case the assignee shall have the benefit of the provisions of this agreement.

§ 85.240 Provision for Lifetime Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is designed for use when the period of employment is to be stated in terms of the employee's lifetime. A lifetime contract, although unusual, can be used if the employee has sufficient bargaining power to force its use or the employer demands it. Despite the "lifetime" language, however, a lifetime contract generally is enforceable by both parties only during the first seven years of the employment. Thereafter, only the employee can enforce it [Lab. Code § 2855].

[b] Enforcement of Long-Term Employment Contracts

[i] In General

The general rule is that a contract to render personal service (other than apprenticeship) may not be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the time service commences under the contract [Lab. Code § 2855]. Thus, if a contract calls for intermittent services to be rendered by the employee, it cannot be enforced against the employee after seven years, measured from the time service commences, even if the amount of time that services were actually rendered by the employee totals less than seven years [De Haviland v. Warner Bros. Pictures (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 225, 230-232, 153 P.2d 983] .

Enforcement by injunction is available if the contract is for the performance of services of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it peculiar value and the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages [Civ. Code § 2423; Lab. Code § 2855]. However, injunctive relief is available only if the contract is in writing, provides for annual compensation of $6,000 or more, and cannot be specifically enforced [Civ. Code § 2423].

A contract to render personal services may not be enforced by specific performance [Civ. Code § 3390(1)]. It follows that the breach of a contract for personal services may not be enjoined unless it is within the statutory exception discussed above [Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 235, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896] . The injunction would be negative in effect, that is, it would forbid the employee from accepting new employment [see Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 236, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896] .

If an employment contract states a term defined by the employee's lifetime, it binds the employee for only the first seven years of its duration (or until that person dies if that event occurs before the end of the seven-year period [Lab. Code § 2920(c)]). After that time the employee can discontinue services and the contract cannot be enforced against him or her [see Lab. Code § 2855].

On the other hand the employee can enforce a lifetime contract, even if enforcement is asserted later than seven years after his or her services commence. There are two reasons for this result: first, the statutes govern only enforcement against an employee [see Civ. Code § 2423; Lab. Code § 2855]; and second, such a contract is for a specific term rather than at will [Bradner v. Vasquez (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 338, 342, 344, 227 P.2d 559] .

A lifetime employment contract is not to be interpreted as one at will merely because it does not provide a time for its termination that is definite at the present moment. Words that specify an ascertainable event by which the term can be determined make the contract definite and certain with respect to its term, and if duration depends on an event that must inevitably occur in the course of nature it is definite and certain. Thus a lifetime contract can be and has been enforced by the employee against his or her employer, even after expiration of seven years after the commencement of the employment [Bradner v. Vasquez (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 338, 342, 344, 227 P.2d 559] .

If a lifetime contract is to be entered into between a corporation and an employee, counsel should check both the articles of incorporation and the by-laws to verify that the corporation has the actual or implied power to enter into such a contract. In addition, the board of directors should be advised to pass a resolution specifically authorizing the lifetime contract before its execution.

Because contracts for lifetime employment are so unusual, the authority of an executive officer of the corporation to enter into such a contract will not be implied. Plain language of the board of directors, clearly showing an intention to make the particular contract for the employee's lifetime, and actual or implied power vested in the corporation itself to enter into such a contract, must both be present to make a lifetime contract binding on the corporation [Bene v. LaGrande (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 512, 517, 71 P.2d 351 ; Mannion v. Campbell Soup Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 317, 323, 52 Cal. Rptr. 246] . See Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions and Resolutions , for a resolution authorizing execution of an employment contract with a corporate officer.

§ 85.241 Provisions Governing Seasonal Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is designed for use when the employment will only be for certain designated months during each year of the employment term. It contains three separate provisions that bear on the subject. The first specifies the season during each year and the years that the employee will be employed; the second specifically permits the employee to take employment elsewhere during the off season period; and the third states the salary to which the employee will be entitled while employed under the seasonal contract. Each of these provisions are designed to be inserted into a complete contract. These types of provisions are used in contracts for the employment of a manager of a seasonal resort, a harvest manager, or other type of employee whose services are required only on a seasonal basis.

[b] Drafting the Compensation Provision

When a provision for seasonal employment is used, particular care should be taken with the provision for compensation so as to make it very clear what payments are to be made. A provision that the seasonal employee is to be paid $1,000 a month without qualification could be interpreted to require 12 such payments each year.

[2] FORM

Provisions Governing Seasonal Employment

[Use following provision in place of a specified term provision:]

Term of Seasonal Employment

Employer employs Employee, and Employee accepts employment with Employer, for [number] months each year beginning with [e.g., the first day of May] and ending on [e.g., the last day of October] of each year during this year ([year, e.g., 2001]) and the next [number] years ([year, e.g., 2002] through [year, e.g., 2006]) [add if agreement provides for earlier termination under particular circumstances:, subject, however, to prior termination of this agreement as hereinafter provided].

[Add following to other provisions relating to term of contract if desired:]

Right to Be Employed Elsewhere

During the remainder of each of the years of employment covered by this contract, Employee shall not be in the employ of Employer; Employee shall have the right to take other employment with other employers; and Employee shall be exclusively entitled to all compensation received by [him or her] for such other employment.

[Use following provision in place of annual salary provision:]

As compensation for services rendered under this contract, Employee shall be entitled to a salary of $_____ per month for each month during which Employee is actually employed under this contract. This salary shall be payable in equal biweekly installments of $_____ on Friday of every other week during the period of employment, prorated for any partial employment period.

§ 85.250 Miscellaneous Alternative Duties Provisions--Various Types of Employees

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form sets forth numerous samples of employee duties provisions. These are, in the order of their appearance in the form, the duties of an appraiser, a bookkeeper, a consultant, an investigator, an inventor, a service manager, a person hired to recruit other employees or to establish a sales or service organization, and a traveling salesperson.

A provision stating the duties of the president of an organization is contained in § 85.200. For the duties of a vice president or secretary-treasurer, see § 85.201. The duties of a mid-level or department manager appear in § 85.210, and those of a retail store branch manager in § 85.211. For a provision stating the duties of a salesperson, see § 85.220. Duties of a technical person such as an engineer are stated in § 85.221 and those of a computer programmer are set forth in § 85.222.

These duties provisions may be inserted into a complete employment contract. Examples of complete contracts are set forth in §§ 85.200 through 85.223. For a discussion of the general matters to be considered before drafting any employment contract, see § 85.200[1].

[b] Referring to Job Description Maintained by Employer

Specific job duties vary from employer to employer, and counsel should refer to an employee manual or internal documentation, such as job descriptions prepared to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act [42 U.S.C. § 12001 et seq.], maintained by the employer to ascertain the precise duties for the position involved. The following form provisions should then be modified to fit the particular situation.

Instead of setting forth a full job description, the contract may simply incorporate by reference a job description contained in the employer's documents. This alternative gives the employer the flexibility to change the job duties without necessitating a change in the contract.

[2] FORM

Miscellaneous Alternative Duties Provisions--Various Types of Employees

[First alternative; use to specify duties of land or building appraiser:]

Duties of Appraiser

Employee shall be employed to inspect, appraise, and evaluate land or buildings when directed to do so by Employer and, in that capacity, to determine the highest and best use of the land or buildings involved, and the current market value thereof for income tax, real property tax, sales, purchase, loan, or other purpose directed by Employer.

[OR]

[Second alternative; duties of a bookkeeper or accountant:]

Duties of Bookkeeper

Employee is hired as a bookkeeper and shall work at_____[specify, e.g., the main office of Employer located at _____ (address) and at such other place or places as may be directed by Employer]. Employee shall_____[set forth duties, e.g., carefully and accurately prepare and keep books of account and balance sheets and perform all duties commonly discharged by bookkeepers and such other duties of a similar nature as may be required from time to time by Employer].

[OR]

[Third alternative; duties of an employee serving as a consultant:]

Provision for Duties of Employee as Consultant

(a) For a period of [months or years] following_____[his or her] retirement [, beginning on_____[date], Employee shall render services to Employer as a consultant and adviser. While acting in that capacity Employee shall be responsible only to the Board of Directors and shall not be required to follow a regular daily or weekly work schedule.

(b) Employee shall be available to provide consultation services to Employer's [specify, e.g., Board of Directors or Executive Committee or President and Vice Presidents] on all policy or technical questions within the scope of_____[his or her] training and experience by electronic mail, or at the office of Employer when necessary.

(c) The services rendered by Employee are not to exceed an average of [e.g., 20] hours per month.

[OR]

[Fourth alternative; duties of investigator:]

Duties of Investigator

Employee shall be employed to investigate [specify, e.g., insurance claims made by fire insurance claimants] and in that capacity shall make inspections, conduct audits and surveys, and do all things necessary to determine the facts needed by Employer as a basis for action.

[OR]

[Fifth alternative; duties of an employee serving as an inventor:]

Duties of Inventor

(a) Employee is hired and employed by Employer to invent, discover, develop, and improve methods, formulas, machines, and devices relating in any manner whatsoever to [specify, e.g., the manufacture of semiconductors or the manufacture of petroleum products or terminal access application systems for data processing].

(b) Employee shall devote_____[his or her] entire productive time, ability, and attention to the business of Employer during the term of this contract.

(c) The services of Employee shall be performed at any laboratory, research facility, or manufacturing plant operated by Employer as determined solely by Employer.

(d) Upon inventing, discovering, developing, or improving any of the aforesaid methods, formulas, machines, or devices, Employee shall immediately make a full disclosure to Employer and thereafter shall keep Employer fully informed at all times of all progress in that connection.

[OR]

[Sixth alternative; duties of repair service manager:]

Duties of Service Manager

Employee shall be employed as the service manager for Employer. In that capacity, Employer shall meet customers at Employer's place of business, diagnose the problem described by the customer, schedule the necessary repairs, assign the work to the necessary personnel, and be responsible for all communications between Employer and its customers.

[OR]

[Seventh alternative; duties of employee who recruits other employees:]

Recruiting Duties

Employee shall build and maintain a [sales or service] organization by recruiting other employees [who are trained, skilled, experienced, and qualified in _____ (describe field of experience) or and train them to perform duties as _____ (describe field of experience)]. In that capacity, Employee shall direct all such employees in the performance of their duties, including assigning those employees to their duties and supervising their performance, and shall perform all related administrative tasks with respect to their employment, including timekeeping and payroll reporting.

[OR]

[Eighth alternative; duties of a traveling salesperson:]

Duties of Traveling Salesperson

(a) Employee is hired as a salesperson to [describe sales method, e.g., sell or solicit and take orders for sales of] the merchandise of Employer in the States of_____[names of states]. In the course of_____[his or her] employment, Employee shall [travel or drive or specify other means of transportation] from place to place for the purpose of making sales presentations and demonstrations [describe customer relations functions, if desired, e.g., and maintaining positive relations with Employer's customers].

(b) Employee shall not make any sales in any States other than those named above._____[Set forth any exclusions from salesperson's territory, e.g., Furthermore, chain stores owned and operated by _____ (name of owner or chain) in any of the aforementioned States are specifically excluded from Employee's territory and Employee shall not sell the merchandise of Employer to those stores.]

(c) Employee shall forward all [sales agreements or orders] to Employer immediately after their execution by customers for acceptance or rejection by Employer.

(d) Employee shall devote all_____[his or her] time, attention, and energy as Employer's salesperson, subject to the direction and control of Employer, and shall to the best of_____[his or her] ability make every effort to sell the merchandise of Employer in the aforementioned territory.

(e) Employee shall make [weekly or other period] reports to Employer indicating:

(1) The calls _____ [he or she] made during the period concerned, including the name, address, and telephone number of the prospect.

(2) Current developments in Employee's assigned territory, including developments that bear on future marketing considerations, Chamber of Commerce, and other local civic and industrial group reports that may bear on future marketing conditions.

(3) All comments, questions, or complaints concerning Employer's _____ [goods or services].

(4) Copies of all orders given by, and copies of all correspondence between, Employee and _____ [his or her] customers.

(5) Credit data and other information on _____ [any customers determined by Employee or Employer to be a questionable credit risk or all customers].

(f) Employee shall assist in the collection of all sums due from persons to whom the [goods or services] of Employer are sold and in the adjustment of any complaints or disputes that may arise in connection with any sales made by Employee.

§ 85.260 Provision Permitting Employer to Specify Duties From Time to Time When Contract Does Not Specify Duties

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision that permits the employer to specify an employee's duties from time to time and is primarily for use in an employment agreement that does not initially specify the employee's duties. Although it is generally best to set forth in the employment contract the duties to be performed by the employee, this form is designed to serve on the occasions when the employer desires complete freedom in determining the duties to be performed by the employee. This can arise when the employer may desire to assign the employee to various departments to see how he or she fits into the organization before making a regular assignment.

This form provides for a later designation of duties rather than a change in duties previously enumerated. §§ 85.261-85.264 serve the latter purpose. § 85.261 permits the employer to require the employee to perform additional duties that may be prescribed from time to time. § 85.262 permits the employer to require the employee to perform completely different (rather than additional) duties at a later time. § 85.263 permits the employee some discretion by permitting a change of duties by mutual consent. For a provision covering changes in duties when an employee is disabled, see § 85.264.

§ 85.261 Provision Obligating Employee to Perform Additional Duties Assigned by Employer

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision obligating the employee to perform additional duties when assigned by the employer. It is designed for use when the employer desires to reserve the right to assign the employee additional duties (that is, duties other than those specified in the contract). For a provision to use when the contract does not initially assign the employee specific duties, see § 85.260. For a selection of provisions governing the right of an employer to change an employee's duties, see §§ 85.262-85.264.

This form includes a proviso that the additional duties are to be performed during the hours and at the place of employment specified elsewhere in the contract. Thus, when this provision is inserted into an employment agreement, care should be taken to insure that other provisions in the agreement specify the hours [see § 85.276] and the place of employment.

In addition to the foregoing duties, Employee shall perform any other duties that may be assigned to [him or her], subject to the instructions, directions, and control of Employer, [provided only that all such additional duties shall be during the hours and at the place of employment specified in this contract].

§ 85.262 Provision Permitting Employer to Change Employee's Duty Assignments

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision permitting the employer to assign the employee to perform completely different duties at any time. It is designed to assure that the employer will have the freedom to change duty assignments. It is an optional clause that should be used in a contract with a professional or other type of employee whose reputation would suffer if not allowed to practice his or her profession [see [b], below].

This form differs from the form in § 85.260 in that this form assumes that the contract contains a provision defining the employee's initial duties, while the orm in § 85.260 does not. This form differs from § 85.261 in that the latter form pertains to additional duties, while this form permits the assignment of completely different duties. For a provision for a change in duties by mutual consent, see § 85.263. A provision for change in duties if the employee becomes disabled is set forth in § 85.264.

[b] Employer's Right to Change Employee's Duty Assignments

In most cases, an employer can change an employee's duty assignments at will unless the contract provides otherwise. The common law general rule is that an employer may utilize the employee's services in any manner it chooses and has no duty to provide any particular type of work [see Colvig v. RKO General (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 66, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473] . An exception to this rule exists when the employee's reputation will suffer if he or she is not allowed to practice his or her profession. This exception rests on the rationale that the parties are deemed to have contracted with the assumption that the employee was to be given an opportunity to exercise his or her abilities during a reasonable portion of the contract period [Colvig v. RKO General (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 66-67, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473] . The Restatement of Agency states that if compensation does not depend on the amount of work done (i.e., if there is a fixed salary), a promise by the principal to furnish work is inferred from the promise to employ if the anticipated benefit to the agent from doing the work is a material part of the advantage to be received by the agent from the employment. This anticipated benefit may be the acquisition of (1) skill by the employee; (2) enhanced reputation by the employee; or (3) other subsidiary pecuniary advantages (as in the case of public performers whose reputation would be diminished by a failure to appear) [Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 433].

Employer shall have the right at any time during the term of this contract to assign Employee, in the sole discretion of Employer, to perform duties that differ [in any manner whatsoever] from the duties originally assigned and specified herein [add following in contracts with entertainers, sports figures, or professionals:; provided, however, that Employee shall be assigned only to duties consistent with _____ (his or her) professional skills and abilities].

§ 85.263 Provision for Change of Duties by Mutual Consent

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision permitting an employer to change an employee's duties with the latter's consent. The purpose of this form is to make it clear that such a mutually agreed change is only a modification, not a rescission, of the written contract. It is not uncommon for the parties to an employment contract at some point during the term of employment to mutually agree that the duties of the employee will be changed from those specified in the contract.

[b] Methods of Modifying a Written Contract

A written employment contract, like any other written contract, may be modified by either (1) another written contract; (2) an oral agreement, to the extent that the oral agreement is executed by the parties; or (3) unless the original contract provides otherwise, by an oral agreement satisfying the statute or frauds and supported by new consideration [Civ. Code § 1698(a)-(c); for discussion, see § 85.22[1]].

[2] FORM

Provision for Change of Duties by Mutual Consent

Change of Duties

The duties of Employee may be modified from time to time by the mutual consent of Employer and Employee without resulting in a rescission of this contract. The mutual consent of Employer and Employee shall constitute execution of that modification. Notwithstanding any such change, the employment of Employee shall be construed as continuing under this agreement as modified.

§ 85.264 Provision for Reasonable Accommodations If Employee Becomes Disabled

[1] Comment--Use of Form

The first part of this form is a provision that obligates the employer to make reasonable accommodations so that the employee can continue working if he or she becomes disabled under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) [42 U.S.C. § 12001 et seq.] or the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.]. This provision essentially restates the employer's obligations under those laws [see 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(5) (reasonable accommodation required unless it would cause employer undue hardship); Gov. Code § 12940(m) (reasonable accommodation required unless it would cause employer undue hardship)]. For detailed coverage of employers' obligations to make reasonable accommodations for disabled employees under the ADA and FEHA, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115 (Matthew Bender), and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

An employee with a disability covered under the ADA or FEHA is entitled to accommodation if he or she can, with reasonable accommodation, perform the essential functions of his or her job [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a); Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1); *see Green v. State (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 8910, at *9-18 (employee has burden of establishing his or her ability, with reasonable accommodation, to perform essential functions)].

The second part of this form addresses the situation in which either (1) the employee's disability prevents him or her from performing the essential duties of his or her position, even with reasonable accommodation, or (2) the employee's disability results from a condition or cause that is not covered by the ADA or FEHA. In such a case, the form provides that any modification of the employee's duties and compensation is in the employer's sole discretion. However, the employee is given the right to reject any proposed modification and thus terminate the contract either immediately or after a specified period of time.

[2] FORM

Provision for Reasonable Accommodations If Employee Becomes Disabled

Accommodation for Disability

(a) If Employee at any time during the term of this agreement should become disabled as defined under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) or the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Employer shall take affirmative steps to make reasonable accommodations so that Employee can continue working. Such accommodations may include, but are not limited to, making facilities readily accessible to and usable by Employee, allowing Employee to work on a part-time or modified work schedule, modifying equipment, and placing the employee in an existing vacant position that the employee is qualified for and able to perform. This provision shall not be construed to require Employer to make an accommodation that would impose an undue hardship on the operation of Employer's business.

(b) If Employee at any time during the term of this agreement should become unable to perform the duties required by this contract because of any condition or cause that does not render Employee a qualified worker with a disability for purposes of ADA or FEHA, Employer may in its sole discretion assign Employee to other duties, and the compensation to be paid thereafter to Employee shall be determined by Employer in its sole discretion. If Employee is unwilling to accept the modification in duties and compensation made by Employer, this contract shall terminate_____[immediately or within _____ (specify time period) thereafter].

§ 85.270 Provision That Duties Are to Be Performed Loyally and Conscientiously

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision stating that the employee will loyally and conscientiously perform all of his or her duties. A provision such as this is often included in employment contracts. One reason for its use is to make certain that the employee understands that loyal and conscientious performance is expected. Another reason is to provide a firm contractual basis both for termination of the contract in the event that the employee is found to be acting carelessly or disloyally (such as by giving information about the employer's operation to competitors), as well as for a suit for breach of contract. Still another reason is to provide a defense against a suit for wrongful termination if the employee is terminated for disloyalty or non-conscientious performance.

[b] Employee's Obligation to Employer

An employee, by the nature of the employer-employee relationship is required to use ordinary care and diligence [Lab. Code § 2854], exercise a reasonable degree of skill, unless the employer had prior notice of the employee's lack of skill [Lab. Code § 2858], and use the skill he or she possesses insofar as required by the work to be done [Lab. Code § 2859]. For further discussion of an employee's duties, see § 85.11.

§ 85.271 Provision That Duties Must Be Performed to Employer's Satisfaction

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision requiring that the employee's performance of his or her duties must meet the employer's satisfaction. It is intended for use when the employer desires to have the right to terminate the services of the employee at any time that those services are not satisfactory in the judgment of the employer [see § 85.502]. For discussion of an employee's duties, see § 85.11.

[b] Criteria for Employer's Satisfaction

The rule in California is that a contract requiring performance to the employer's satisfaction is breached by the employee when his or her performance is such that the employer is in good faith dissatisfied, regardless of whether a reasonable person would have been dissatisfied. The good faith determination of the employer that it is dissatisfied is conclusive on the employee [Crillo v. Curtola (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 263, 271, 204 P.2d 941] . A contract that requires one party to perform services to the satisfaction of the other party to the contract is not illusory and is binding since California imposes a duty of good faith on the party for whom the services are to be performed [Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 124, 330 P.2d 625] .

§ 85.272 Provision Permitting Employee to Engage in Other Specified Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision that specifies the conditions under which an employee may engage in other employment. It can be added to any employment agreement that requires the employee to devote his or her entire time and energy to the work of the employer to provide for and define the exceptions to that general type of provision. It should be used when the parties contemplate that the employee will engage in other employment during the contract term.

If this provision is used and the contract contains either the "entire time" provision referred to above or a provision that the employee will perform loyally and conscientiously [see § 85.270], it should include a clause indicating its effectiveness notwithstanding any other provision of the contract.

[b] Performance of Part-Time Work for Another Employer

Unless expressly prohibited in the employment contract, part-time work can properly be performed by an employee for another employer if it does not interfere with the employee's obligations to the full-time employer [see Hermann v. Littlefield (1895) 109 Cal. 430, 432] . However, the employee breaches the employment contract by engaging in competition with the employer, even when the contract contains no provision prohibiting such competition, unless the contract clearly permits it [see § 85.470[1]]. Therefore, if this form is to be used and the other employment authorized might be competitive in any way with the business of the principal employer, the fact that the other employment authorized is or might be competitive should be clearly stated in the contract and any noncompetition clause should be appropriately modified.

§ 85.273 Provision That Employee Cannot Bind Employer Without Employer's Written Consent

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision withholding from the employee any right or authority to make any contract or binding promise on behalf of the employer. It is intended to make it clear to the employee that he or she has no authority to make any legal commitments on behalf of the employer without the employer's express written consent.

When this form is used, the attorney for the employer should make it clear to the client that this provision is binding only as between the employer and the employee and is not necessarily binding between the employer and third persons. Regardless of any provision in the employment agreement, the employer can be bound by unauthorized commitments made by the employee if the employee had ostensible authority to do so [see [b], below].

[b] Actual and Ostensible Authority

An employee, while acting in the capacity of the employer's agent, has whatever authority is conferred on him or her by the employer either actually or ostensibly [Civ. Code § 2315]. Actual authority is conferred either intentionally (e.g., under the terms of an employment contract) or by allowing the employee, either intentionally or by want of ordinary care, to believe he or she possesses it [Civ. Code § 2316].

Ostensible authority, also referred to as apparent authority, is whatever authority an employer, either intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes or allows a third party to believe the employee to possess [Civ. Code § 2317]. Ostensible authority rests on the doctrine of estoppel. The essential elements of ostensible authority are: (1) representation by the employer; (2) justifiable reliance by the third party; and (3) change of position or injury resulting from that reliance [Freitas v. Marsh (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 711, 713, 161 P.2d 565] .

[c] Need for Written Authority to Enter Into Contracts

Under the "equal dignities" rule, the authority of an agent to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing [Civ. Code § 2309; for discussion of the effect of the rule, see § 85.22[4]].

[2] FORM

Provision That Employee Cannot Bind Employer Without Employer's Written Consent

Need for Employer's Written Consent to Contract

§ 85.274 Provision for Adherence to Employer's Rules

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision requiring adherence to the employer's rules and regulations. It includes an option subjecting the employee either to all of the employer's rules or limiting compliance to the rules governing clothing and grooming. This type of provision should be used at least in contracts under which non-executive personnel are employed, if not all employment agreements, in order to make it clear that there are rules to which the employee must adhere.

If the employee is to meet the public, it is suggested that the employer be consulted to determine whether it perceives a need for the clothing and grooming option contained in this form. In many cases, the employer has an interest in how its employees represent it to the public, and it is beneficial to specify this type of obligation in the contract so that the employee understands at the outset the fact that it is a requirement.

For a related provision specifying that business expenses for expense account purposes are limited to those specified in the employer's rules, see § 85.413.

[b] Duty to Comply With All Directions of Employer

The statutory general rule is that an employee is generally obligated to perform in conformance with the usage (i.e., rules) of the employer unless otherwise directed by the employer or unless it is impracticable or manifestly injurious to the employer to do so [see Lab. Code § 2857]. In addition, an employee must substantially comply with all of the employer's directions concerning the employment, unless that obedience is impossible, unlawful, or imposes new and unreasonable burdens on the employee [Lab. Code § 2856].

An employee has the duty to obey all reasonable orders of the employer that are not inconsistent with the employment contract [May v. New York Motion Picture Corp. (1920) 45 Cal. App. 396, 402-409, 187 P. 785] . It is particularly important that the clothing and grooming option be included, when appropriate, to preclude any later claim that a new rule requiring adherence to a particular standard is "new and unreasonable" [see Thornton v. Department of Human Resources Development (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 180, 185-186, 107 Cal. Rptr. 892] . In that case, the court stated that an order to shave would be reasonable if motivated by evidence that the beard was detrimental to the employer's business interests or was unsanitary but that it would be unreasonable if motivated solely by a personal distaste for the beard or if it were merely a ruse to fire the employee [see Thornton v. Department of Human Resources Development (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 180, 186, 107 Cal. Rptr. 892] . For a discussion of what orders are reasonable, see § 85.11[1].

[c] Function of Employer Rules as Part of Contract

An employer's policies or rules are enforceable by an employee as part of his or her contract when the employer issues them, the employee knows of them, relies on them as terms of his or her employment, and continues that employment [Hepp v. Lockheed-California Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 718-720, 150 Cal. Rptr. 408] . In the absence of a contract provision requiring adherence to the employer's rules, the obligation has been implied [Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] or treated as a contract created when the employer's offer of the rule is accepted by the employee's act of continuing in employment [Chinn v. China National Aviation Corp. (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 98, 99-100, 291 P.2d 91] .

(a) At all times during the performance of this contract, Employee shall strictly adhere to and obey all of Employer's policies, procedures, rules, and regulations governing the conduct of its employees now in effect or as subsequently modified.

§ 85.275 Provision That Duties Be Performed at Places Other Than Originally Designated

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision specifying that the duties detailed in the initial employment agreement may be performed at places other than the place originally designated. It is intended for use when it is contemplated that the employee will commence work at a particular location but may thereafter be assigned to any other location where the employer does business. This type of provision is commonly used by employers of salespersons or companies having various locations, such as chain stores, large banks, insurance companies, manufacturing companies with various plants, oil companies, and construction companies doing work at many different sites.

§ 85.276 Provision Specifying Length of Work Day and Week

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form specifies the number of hours per day and days per week to be worked by the employee. It should be included in the employment contract when the parties wish to guard against future misunderstandings by precisely defining the number of hours the employee must devote to the employer's business each week.

[b] Number of Hours Constituting a Work Day

For most adult employees, eight hours of labor constitutes a day's work unless the employment contract expressly provides otherwise. Time spent commuting to and from the first place at which the employer requires the employee's presence is not included as part of a day's work, even when the employee commutes in a vehicle owned, leased, or subsidized by the employer for ride-sharing purposes [Lab. Code § 510(b); see Veh. Code § 522]. However, an employee is entitled to compensation for the period that starts when the employee commences the principal activities of the job and ends when the employee ceases performance of the last principal activity of the job [29 U.S.C. § 254(a); 29 C.F.R. § 790.6(a)]. Thus, time spent walking to a production area after performing the first principal activity and before the end of the last principal activity is part of the compensable workday. "Principal activities" for this purpose include activities that are integral and indispensable to the employee's work, such as donning and doffing required protective gear) [IBP, Inc. v. Alvarez (2005) 546 U.S. 21, 126 S. Ct. 514, 523-525, 163 L. Ed. 2d 288, 299-302] .

The law limits the number of hours that a minor may be employed during a workday or workweek [see Lab. Code § 1391]. In addition, state or federal statutes and regulations may limit the number of hours of employment in certain occupations for safety reasons. Counsel should consider any special regulations applicable to the client's business when drafting a provision specifying hours of work. For a discussion of legal limitations on hours of work for minors and for adults, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Chs. 3, 6 (Matthew Bender).

Even when the law does not place an absolute limit on the number of hours that may be worked, the employer may be required to pay overtime premiums to employees who work more than a specified number of hours in a day or week, unless the employee is exempt from this requirement [see 29 U.S.C. § 207; Lab. Code § 510(a)]. For discussion, see § 85.290[1][b].

[c] Number of Days Constituting a Workweek

Forty hours of labor constitutes a regular workweek [see Lab. Code § 510(a)]. Every employee is entitled to one day of rest in seven [Lab. Code § 551]. Generally, no employer may require an employee to work more than six days in seven [Lab. Code § 552; but see Lab. Code §§ 554, 556 (exemptions from six-day limit)]. The failure to observe these requirements is a misdemeanor [see Lab. Code § 553].

§ 85.290 Provision for Payment of Hourly Wage

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an employment contract provision stating that the employee's compensation will be paid on the basis of a specified hourly rate rather than on a salary basis. It makes clear that payment will be made only for hours of service actually rendered by the employee. It may or may not contain a requirement that a minimum number of hours per week be worked by the employee. The inclusion of this additional provision may depend on whether the employee is hired on a part-time or full-time basis.

For provisions compensating the employee by means of an annual salary annual salary provisions, see §§ 85.200-85.211. For a discussion of common law considerations relating to compensation in general, see § 85.200[1][e].

[b] Minimum Wage and Overtime Requirements

[i] Generally

The federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq.] regulates the wages and hours of persons engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 206, 207]. Wages, hours, and working conditions are also regulated by California statutes and by wage orders issued by the California Industrial Welfare Commission (IWC) [see Lab. Code §§ 510-558; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq.]. Although the California Legislature has de-funded the IWC (effective July 1, 2004), the IWC wage orders remain in effect, and the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement will continue to enforce them [see Lab. Code § 61; see, e.g., Singh v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 387, 397-400, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348 (construing Wage Order No. 5-2001, 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11050, as providing that for healthcare workers on 3-day, 12-hour alternative workweek schedule, overtime pay begins only after 40 hours); but see Bearden v. U.S. Borax, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 429, 434-440, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 (Wage Order No. 16-2001, 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11160, P 10(E), exceeded IWC's authority because it created exemption from meal-period requirements for certain collective bargaining agreements that was inconsistent with exemptions expressly set forth in Lab. Code § 512)].

Both the FLSA and California law require employers to pay a minimum wage and overtime to nonexempt employees [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 206, 207; Lab. Code § 510(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq.]. Under California law, any work in excess of eight hours in one day or in excess of 40 hours in one week or any time worked on the seventh workday in a week must be compensated as overtime [Lab. Code § 510(a); see Advanced-Tech Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 700, 706-707, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 757 (premium holiday pay voluntarily offered by employer may be credited against amount due employee for overtime work); Huntington Mem'l Hosp. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 893, 902-911, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 373 (employer may not engage in subterfuge or artifice designed to evade overtime requirements, such as manipulation or reduction of pay for regular hours to make up for overtime rate that will have to be paid)].

Exempt from the FLSA overtime compensation requirements are a variety of workers, including the following:

- Executive, administrative, professional, computer, and outside sales employees [29 C.F.R. § 541.0 et seq.].
- Employees covered by a collective bargaining agreement [see 29 U.S.C. § 207(b)(1), (2)].
- Employees in the transportation industry [29 U.S.C. § 213(b)(1)-(3), (6)].

Many other FLSA exemptions exist [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(b)]. California statutory exemptions exist for employees who are on alternative workweek schedules [Lab. Code § 510(a); see Lab. Code §§ 511, 514, 554; see also Lab. Code § 515.5 (exemption for certain employees in computer software field)]. IWC wage orders also contain numerous exemptions from the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq.; see also Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co., Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 785, 796-798, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844, 978 P.2d 2 (California defines "outside salespersons" who are exempt from overtime pay in way that provides, at least in some cases, greater protection for employees than under FLSA; California definition depends on how much time employee spends on outside selling, whereas federal definition depends on employee's primary duty)].

In some areas an employer is subject to stricter standards under California law than under federal law; in such an instance the employer must follow California law [see 29 U.S.C. § 218(a)]. For example, an employer may use an "averaging" method to establish compliance with the minimum wage imposed by the FLSA. Under that method, an employer may compensate some hours at less than the minimum rate so long as the average compensation for the relevant pay period equals or exceeds the minimum rate [see Medrano v. D'Arrigo Bros. Co. of Cal. (N.D. Cal. 2004) 336 F. Supp. 2d 1053, 1057] . California's minimum wage law, in contrast, requires that an employee be paid at the statutory rate (or, if higher, the applicable contractual rate) for every hour worked [see Lab. Code §§ 221, 222, 223, 1194(a)]. Thus, an employer may not use the "averaging" method to establish compliance with California's minimum wage law, because it would effectively reduce employees' hourly rate and would contravene the clear legislative intent that every hour be paid at the statutory or contractual rate [Armenta v. Osmose, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 314, 321-324, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 460] .

For a detailed description of the minimum wage and overtime compensation requirements and the exemptions from those requirements, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Chs. 2, 3 (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Effect of Hourly Wage on Employee's Exempt Status

Although a detailed treatment of exemptions from wage and hour laws is beyond the scope of this comment, one issue concerning exemptions warrants special attention in connection with the drafting of a provision for an hourly wage. Under both the FLSA and the IWC wage orders, persons employed in a bona fide executive, administrative, or professional capacity are exempt from the minimum wage and overtime requirements [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq.]. However, federal regulations interpreting the executive, administrative, or professional exemption under the FLSA set forth detailed criteria for application of the exemption, one of which is that the exempt person must be employed on a "salary basis" or, unless the exempt person is an executive, on a "fee basis" [see 29 C.F.R. §§ 541.100(a)(1), 541.200(a)(1), 541.300(a)(1), 541.600(a)]:

- "Salary basis"--If the employee regularly receives, on a weekly or less-frequent basis, a predetermined amount constituting all or part of the employee's compensation, without regard to the number of days or hours worked, and with no reductions because of variations in the quality or quantity of the work performed, except as provided by the regulations [29 C.F.R. § 541.602], payment is on a salary basis.

- "Fee basis"--If an administrative or professional employee is paid an agreed sum for a single job regardless of the time required for its completion [29 C.F.R. § 541.605(a), payment if on a fee basis. (Fee payments to administrative or professional employees resemble piecework payments, but are made for jobs that are unique rather than for series of jobs repeated indefinite number of times with identical repeated payments)]. Payments based on the number of hours or days worked, and not on the accomplishment of a given single task, are not considered payments on a fee basis [29 C.F.R. § 541.605(a)].

A provision for payment of wages on an hourly basis would undoubtedly be regarded as inconsistent with payment on a salary basis or fee basis and should not be included in an employment contract for an individual whom the employer wishes to classify as an exempt executive, administrative, or professional employee, unless the employer is prepared to pay that individual overtime premiums in compliance with the FLSA.

[iii] Effect of Contract Provisions in Violation of FLSA

Since the provisions of the FLSA are mandatory for the employer, an employee will be able to bring an action for the minimum compensation even though paid the lesser amount provided in the contract and even if he or she made no claim for additional compensation at the time of payment [Travis v. Ray (D. Ky. 1941) 41 F. Supp. 6] . Furthermore, the employer may be liable for various civil and criminal penalties for a violation of the FLSA [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 215, 216]. In applying the FLSA, the courts have construed its provisions liberally in favor of the employee in order to accomplish the declared policy of Congress to correct conditions in industry detrimental to the maintenance of the minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency, and general well-being of workers [see 29 U.S.C. § 202; Coomer v. Durham (D. Va. 1950) 93 F. Supp. 526] . To further this objective, therefore, any claimed exemption will be given strict construction [Harrison v. Preston Trucking Co. (D. Md. 1962) 201 F. Supp. 654] .

For discussion of procedures for enforcing minimum wage and overtime requirements under both federal and California law, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under the Wage and Hour Laws (Matthew Bender).

[iv] Other Federal Minimum Wage and Maximum Hour Requirements

In addition to the wage and hour provisions of the FLSA, there are the more stringent wage and hour provisions contained in the Public Contracts Act, which apply to firms and businesses producing goods under contract with the federal government [see 41 U.S.C. §§ 35-45]. These requirements are spelled out in the invitation for bids or request for proposals given to prospective bidders on government contracts and generally apply to the types of employment or employment agreements not covered by this chapter. For coverage of federal government contract bidding procedures, see Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts .

[c] Semimonthly Payment of Wages

[i] Requirement

The general rule under California law is that wages are due and payable twice during each calendar month on days designated in advance by the employer as the regular paydays [Lab. Code § 204(a)]. However, the salaries of executive, administrative, and professional employees may generally be paid once a month within seven days of the close of their monthly payroll period. Executive, administrative, and professional employees who are exempt from the FLSA [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1)] may be paid once monthly on or before the 26th day of the month during which the work was performed [Lab. Code §§ 204(a), 204.2]. If an executive, administrative, or professional employee is not subject to the FLSA, not covered by a collective bargaining agreement, is paid monthly remuneration that does not include overtime pay, and is paid within seven days of the close of his or her monthly payroll period, there is no requirement for semimonthly payment or payment on or before the 26th day of the month during which the work was performed [Lab. Code § 204c].

For other employees, labor performed between the 1st and the 15th of the month must be paid for between the 16th and the 26th of that month, whereas labor performed between the 16th and last days of the month must be paid for between the 1st and 10th day of the following month [Lab. Code § 204(a)]. Exempted from the operation of this section are commission wages paid to persons employed by an employer licensed as a vehicle dealer by the Department of Motor Vehicles, which are due and payable once during each calendar month on a day designated in advance by the employer as the regular payday [Lab. Code § 204.1]; wages earned and unpaid at the time of discharge of an employee, which generally are payable immediately [Lab. Code § 201; see Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 82-94, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218 (employee is "discharged" for purposes of Lab. Code § 201 not only when employee is involuntarily terminated from ongoing employment relationship, but also when employee is released after completing particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired)]; and wages due to an employee not having a written contract for a definite period and who quits employment, which generally are due and payable not later than 72 hours thereafter [Lab. Code § 202].

Special requirements apply to the payment of wages to employees of a temporary service employer that provides workers for its clients or customers [see Lab. Code § 201.3]. For detailed discussion, see § 85.12[1].

[ii] Effect of Semimonthly Payment Requirement

The provision for the payment of wages on a semimonthly basis establishes the minimum frequency for payment of employees covered by the provision, but it does not in any way limit or prohibit the payment of wages at more frequent intervals than semimonthly, or in greater amounts than provided by statute, or in full when or before due [Lab. Code § 219(a)]. Since the provisions of the Labor Code concerning the payment of wages cannot in any way be contravened or set aside by private agreement, whether written, oral, or implied [Lab. Code § 219], the attorney who is drafting an employment contract should be certain that the compensation provisions comply with the statutory requirements, when applicable.

§ 85.291 Provisions for Overtime Work and Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains provisions under which an employee agrees to work overtime whenever required by the nature of the work or the needs of the employer, and setting forth the formula by which compensation for those overtime hours can be calculated for a given work week. The provision requiring the employee to work overtime is for use in a contract when the nature of the work is such that there is a likelihood that overtime will be required and the employer desires that the employee be contractually bound to render additional service when needed. The provision for the payment of overtime compensation may be included whether or not a provision binding the employee to work overtime is used.

Both the FLSA and California law require employers to pay overtime compensation to nonexempt employees, regardless of whether the employment contract provides for such overtime [29 U.S.C. § 207; Lab. Code § 510(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq. (IWC wage orders); see Lab. Code § 61 (despite de-funding of IWC, effective July 1, 2004, Wage Orders remain in effect and are enforced by Division of Labor Standards Enforcement); Advanced-Tech Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 700, 706-707, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 757 (premium holiday pay voluntarily offered by employer may be credited against amount due employee for overtime work); Huntington Mem'l Hosp. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 893, 902-911, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 373 (employer may not engage in subterfuge or artifice designed to evade overtime requirements, such as manipulation or reduction of pay for regular hours to make up for overtime rate that will have to be paid); see also § 85.290[1][b]]. If overtime provisions are included in the contract, counsel should be sure that they comply with both federal and state law.

Both the FLSA and California law contain numerous exemptions from the minimum wage and overtime compensation provisions [see 29 U.S.C. § 213; Lab. Code §§ 510(a), 511, 514, 554 (alternative workweek schedules); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq. (IWC wage orders); see also § 85.290[1][b]]. For a complete description of the minimum wage and overtime compensation requirements and the exemptions from those requirements, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Minimum Wages , and Ch. 3, Overtime Compensation and Regulation of Hours Worked (Matthew Bender).

When this form is used, the attorney should advise the client that all wages earned for labor in excess of the normal workweek must be paid no later than the payday for the payroll period [Lab. Code § 204(b)(1)].

[b] Compensating Time Off

This form includes an optional provision allowing the employee to receive time off from work in lieu of monetary compensation for overtime work. An employee may receive such compensating time off, at the rate of not less than one and a half hours for each hour of overtime worked, if all of the following conditions are met [Lab. Code § 204.3(a), (b)]:

- The compensating time off is provided pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement or a written agreement entered into between the employer and employee before the performance of the work.
- The employee has not accrued compensating time in excess of 240 hours [see Lab. Code § 204.3(c)].
- The employee has requested, in writing, compensating time off in lieu of overtime compensation.
- The employee is regularly scheduled to work no less than 40 hours in a workweek.

The foregoing provisions for compensating time off are not applicable to any employee who is exempt from overtime-pay requirements or to employees in certain industries specified by statute [Lab. Code § 204.3(h), (i); see § 85.290[1][b]].

If the employer and employee are covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) [29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq.], the following provision for compensating time off should not be used, because FLSA requires the payment of overtime compensation in monetary form [see 29 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1)].

[2] FORM

Provisions for Overtime Work and Compensation

Overtime Work Requirement

In addition to the regular _____ [number, e.g., eight] hours per day, Employee shall work as many hours in a single workday as is reasonably necessary to complete the work assigned by the Employer. Employee shall work the necessary additional hours whenever the nature of his/her work so requires or the Employer so requests. Under no circumstances shall Employee be required to work more than _____ [maximum number] hours in any single day.

Overtime Compensation

The compensation agreed upon herein is for a workweek of _____ [number, e.g., 40] hours. If Employee is required to work for more than _____ [number, e.g., 40] hours in any workweek_____[he or she] shall be compensated at the rate of 11/2 times_____[his or her] regular rate of pay for all hours actually devoted to that overtime employment. If Employee is required to work more than 8 hours on the seventh day of work in any one workweek,_____[he or she] shall be compensated at the rate of twice_____[his or her] regular rate of pay for the hours actually worked in excess of 8 hours on the seventh workday of that workweek.

[OR]

The compensation agreed upon herein is for a workweek of _____ [number, e.g., 40] hours and a workday of _____ [specify, e.g., eight] hours. If Employee is required to work for more than _____ [number, e.g., 40] hours in any workweek or _____ [specify, e.g., eight hours] in any workday,_____[he or she] shall be compensated at the premium rate established by state and federal law.

Compensating Time Off

In lieu of monetary compensation for overtime work, Employee may request to receive time off from work, at the rate of one and one-half hours for each hour of overtime worked, provided that Employee makes the request in a writing submitted to Employer, specifying the amount of compensating time to be taken. Employer will permit Employee to use the time within a reasonable period after receipt of the request, if the use of the compensating time will not unduly disrupt the operations of Employer, Employee may not receive compensating time during any week in which Employee is not regularly scheduled to work at least 40 hours, and Employee may not accumulate more than 240 hours of compensating time.

§ 85.300 Provision for Annual Increase in Salary

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides a schedule showing the annual salary increases agreed on in advance for each of the following years during the employment term. Such a provision assures the employee of annual increases in salary. If either party desires additional protection against inflation, a cost-of-living adjustment provision can be used [see § 85.301].

If the contract creates an at will employment [see § 85.510], a provision for future compensation increases might be viewed as conflicting with the employer's right to terminate the contract for any reason at any time [see Lab. Code § 2922; but see Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668 , (when employment contract expressly provides for "at will" employment terminable "at any time," any additional contractual provisions regarding probationary period and annual reviews do not expressly or impliedly create right to be terminated only for cause); Miller v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1554, 1559, 259 Cal. Rptr. 56 (salary increases should not change status of at will employee to one dischargeable only for good cause)]. Therefore, this form includes a provision clarifying that the references to future compensation increases are not to be construed as changing the at will nature of the employment [see Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1275-1277, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (positive performance reviews, commendations, salary increases, and vague assurances of future employment are insufficient to overcome statutory presumption of at will employment, supported by express statements of at will employment in employee handbook and in employee's signed job application)].

§ 85.301 Provision for Adjustment of Salary Based on Increase in Cost of Living Index

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form includes two alternative provisions for the periodic adjustment of an employee's basic salary to reflect increases in the cost of living as determined from changes in the Consumer Price Index published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor. The first alternative provides for cost of living salary increases to be added to regular salary payments, while the second alternative provides for a lump-sum cost of living increase payment.

If the contract creates an at will employment [see § 85.510], a provision for future salary adjustments might be viewed as conflicting with the employer's right to terminate the contract for any reason at any time [see Lab. Code § 2922; but see Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668 (when employment contract expressly provides for "at will" employment terminable "at any time," any additional contractual provisions regarding probationary period and annual reviews do not expressly or impliedly create right to be terminated only for cause); Miller v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1554, 1559, 259 Cal. Rptr. 56 (salary increases should not change status of at will employee to one dischargeable only for good cause)]. Therefore, this form includes a provision clarifying that the references to future salary adjustments are not to be construed as changing the at will nature of the employment [see Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1275-1277, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (positive performance reviews, commendations, salary increases, and vague assurances of future employment are insufficient to overcome statutory presumption of at will employment, supported by express statements of at-will employment in employee handbook and in employee's signed job application)].

[b] Consumer Price Index

The Consumer Price Index is computed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics and indicates the relative level of prices to the consumer of a typical sampling of goods and services as compared to the level of prices of the base year. In addition to a national figure, several regional figures are available. Current figures are contained in monthly publications available free of charge from either the national or any of the regional offices of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

[2] FORM

Provision for Adjustment of Salary Based on Increase in Cost of Living Index

COST OF LIVING INCREASE

[First alternative; cost of living salary increase.]

Salary Increase

(a) The basic salary provided herein shall be adjusted quarterly [or monthly or annually] to reflect the increase, if any, in the cost of living during the previous _____ [specify period, e.g., quarter] by adding to that basic salary an amount obtained by multiplying the basic salary by the percentage by which the level of the Consumer Price Index [for the _____ (e.g., San Francisco-Oakland) Metropolitan Area], as reported for the last day of that quarterly [or monthly or annual] period by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, has increased over its level as of_____[date] [or the date of the commencement of this agreement].

(b) Following the end of each quarter [or month or year] of this agreement, and within _____ [e.g., 10 days] after the release by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the figures for that quarter [or month or year], the Employer shall pay to Employee the amount of any additional compensation to which Employee is entitled by reason of the adjustment provided above.

[If employment is at will, add: (c) Nothing in the foregoing Paragraphs (a) and (b) shall be construed to restrict or limit the Employer's right to terminate this at will employment agreement as provided in Paragraph _____ of this agreement.]

[OR]

[Second alternative; cost of living lump sum payment.]

Cost of Living Lump Sum Payment

In addition to the salary herein provided, Employee shall be entitled to a cost of living lump sum payment which shall be computed quarterly [or monthly or annually] and which shall equal the amount obtained by multiplying that salary by the percentage by which the level of the Consumer Price Index, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor [for the _____ (e.g., San Francisco-Oakland Metropolitan Area)] as of the last day of that quarterly [or monthly or annual] period, has increased over its level as of_____[date of the agreement or other appropriate date]. The amount of that lump sum payment, if any, shall be paid to Employee within [e.g., ten days] after the release of the figures for a given quarter [or month or year] by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. [If employment is at will, add: Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to restrict or limit the Employer's right to terminate this at will employment agreement as provided in Paragraph _____ of this agreement.]

§ 85.302 Provision for Increase in Compensation at Employer's Discretion

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides that each year's increase in compensation, if any, will be determined by the employer in its discretion. This provision gives little, if anything, to the employee since an employee is entitled only to that compensation specified in the contract [see Hamilton v. Salopek (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 104, 106, 161 P.2d 955] . While a court will not remake a contract provision leaving compensation to the discretion to the employer [see Delafield v. Searle Aero Industries (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 862, 871, 174 P.2d 455] , it has been held that a provision for discretionary reduction in compensation required that the exercise of an employer's decision to reduce compensation be free from fraud or mistake [Wortman v. Mack Inter. Motor T. Corp. (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 445, 447, 51 P.2d 1101] .

§ 85.303 Provision for Compensation During Training Period

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision for the payment of a specified compensation during a preliminary instruction or training period, with the regular salary to commence on completion of the course of instruction in a manner satisfactory to the employer. For discussion of "satisfactory," see § 85.271[1][b].

This form is intended for use when it is necessary for the employee to complete preliminary instruction or training in order to be able to perform the services required under the employment contract.

This form is not intended for use in an apprenticeship contract; for coverage of the contents of such a contract, see § 85.122.

Compensation During Instruction

(a) It is understood by and between the parties that in order for Employee to be able to perform the work required under this agreement, it is necessary for Employee to complete a preliminary period of [instruction or training] which will continue for a period of [specify period, e.g., five weeks]. During this period of [instruction or training] Employee shall be entitled to and paid the sum of $_____ per week.

(b) In the event that after the completion of the period of [instruction or training], Employee does not, in the opinion of the Employer, show sufficient aptitude to enable him or her to perform the work required under this contract in a satisfactory manner, the Employer shall have the option of terminating this contract or requiring that Employee complete an additional period of [instruction or training].

(c) Upon the successful completion of [instruction or training] and upon the determination of the Employer that Employee is competent to perform the work required hereunder in a satisfactory manner, this contract shall take effect for the period specified and Employee shall be compensated for services rendered at the rate herein provided.

§ 85.310 Provision for Payment on Piecework Basis

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for payment on a piecework basis. It is for use in a contract when the amount of compensation is to be directly related to the output or productivity of the employee. Payment on a piecework basis is most useful when the employee is engaged in the production of identifiable units of work. Such a method of compensation is often a better measure of the value of the services rendered by the employee and has a tendency to encourage greater productivity than payment based on the time expended.

[b] Provision for Minimum Hourly Compensation

If a federal or state minimum wage law is applicable [see § 85.290[1][b]], it may be necessary to include a provision for a minimum hourly payment, as provided in the form. If no such law is applicable, the provision may be deleted. For purposes of calculating overtime, when applicable, the piece rate payment must first be reduced to an hourly rate by dividing the total earnings in the workweek by the number of hours worked [see 29 C.F.R. § 778.111]. Any hours worked in excess of 40 in the week must be compensated at one and one-half times the regular rate [29 U.S.C. § 207(a)].

That compensation shall be paid [specify period, e.g., weekly] on [specify payment date or dates, e.g., the last day of the week].

§ 85.311 Payment of Commission--Percentage of Gross Sales

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will be paid a commission, expressed as a percentage of gross sales, on all goods and merchandise he or she sells during the term of employment. It may also be used to provide for a commission based on a percentage of the receipts under contracts procured by the employee, and to specify whether the employee will be entitled to such a commission on sales made after termination of employment on contracts originally procured by the employee [see Nein v. HostPro, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 833, 850, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34 (terminated employee had no right to claim commission on transaction finalized after termination, because employment contract unambiguously provided that he would be eligible for commissions only while he remained employed by employer)]. Finally, it includes an optional provision, for use if the contract allows commissions on sales made after the termination of employment, stating that the employee will not be entitled to receive commission payments after severance of the employment relationship if he or she engages in any act that would injure the employer in its relationship with its customers or induces those customers to discontinue their business relationship with the employer. This optional provision has been drafted to comply with limitations against restraints of trade [see [d], below].

A provision for commissions based on net sales is set forth in § 85.220. A provision for commissions on all sales originating in the territory assigned to the employee, regardless of who is the procuring cause, is set forth in § 85.220 as well. For language governing payment of a commission based on purchases by customers originally procured by the employee, see § 85.313. For a provision for salary and commission combined, see § 85.314.

This form of compensation is most commonly used with sales personnel or brokers who are to be compensated in direct proportion to the amount of their sales. Such a provision is advantageous to the employer since there is no liability for compensation, except a minimum wage in some cases, until the sales are actually made, and compensation generally can be made out of the proceeds of the sales. From the employee's standpoint, such a provision is desirable since it rewards increased efforts expended to produce additional sales.

[b] Effect of Commission Provision

The right of a salesperson or other employee to receive a commission in a given circumstance will depend on the terms of the contract for compensation [Commeford v. Baker (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 111, 118, 273 P.2d 321] . It is therefore desirable, in order to avoid later disputes, that the terms of the commission provision clearly cover the situations that may be expected to arise. In the usual contract, which provides for the payment of a commission on sales made by an employee, the employee will be entitled to a commission on all sales of which he or she was the "procuring cause," regardless of the fact that the employer or some other person intervened to complete the sale [see Inglis v. Humphries (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 928, 930, 4 Cal. Rptr. 838] . The term "procuring cause" has been variously defined as the originating cause that ultimately led to the conclusion of the transaction [Willson v. Turner Resilient Floors, Inc. (1949) 201 P.2d 406] , and as the cause originating a series of events that, without break in their continuity, result in the accomplishment of the prime object of the employment [Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 319, 323, 317 P.2d 1027] .

[c] Applicability of Minimum Wage or Overtime Compensation Laws

For a general discussion of federal and California minimum wage and maximum hour laws, see § 85.290[1]. For purposes of applying the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act [29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219], it may be necessary to distinguish between inside and outside salespersons, since only outside salespersons are exempted outright from the minimum wage and maximum hour requirements of the Act [see 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1)].

An "outside" salesperson is any employee whose primary duty is making sales or obtaining orders or contracts for services or for the use of facilities for which a consideration will be paid by the client or customer, and who is customarily and regularly engaged away from the employer's place or places of business in performing that primary duty [29 C.F.R. § 541.500(a); see 29 C.F.R. § 541.700 ("primary duty" defined); but see Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co., Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 785, 796-798, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844, 978 P.2d 2 (California wage orders provide different definition of "outside salespersons" who are exempt from overtime pay; California definition depends on how much time employee spends on outside selling, whereas federal definition depends on employee's primary duty); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq. (wage orders)]. Work performed incidental to and in conjunction with the employee's own outside sales or solicitations is regarded as exempt outside sales work, including: incidental deliveries and collections, writing sales reports, updating or revising the employee's sales or display catalogue, planning itineraries, and attending sales conferences (i.e., work that furthers the employee's sales efforts) [29 C.F.R. § 541.500(b)]. Inside salespersons, that is, employees of retail or service establishments, who are paid on a commission basis, need not be paid overtime if their regular rate of pay is more than one and one-half times the minimum wage and more than half of their compensation represents commissions [29 C.F.R. § 779.412].

[d] Limitations on Competitive Activity

[i] In General

A contract by which anyone is restrained from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind generally is to that extent void [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; see D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 (discharging employee for refusing to sign employment agreement containing provision that violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 is violation of public policy). However, the general prohibition against noncompetition contracts is inapplicable to a contractual restraint that is incidental to (1) a sale of the goodwill of a business, or of an ownership interest in a business entity, when the sale of goodwill is involved [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601; see Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 901-908, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (noncompetition covenant is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 even if covenant is part of employee's sale of shares in corporate employer, unless corporate goodwill is component of sale price under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601)]; (2) the dissolution of a partnership [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602]; or (3) under specified circumstances, the dissolution of a limited liability company [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602.5]. If these exceptions apply, the promise not to compete must be limited to a specified county or counties, city or cities, or a part thereof, in which the business, corporation, or partnership conducted business, and for only as long as the buyer carries on a like business therein [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601,16602.5

In addition to the statutory exceptions noted above, the California courts recognize a "trade secret exception" to the general rule, under which the courts will enforce a covenant not to compete to the extent necessary to protect an employer's trade secrets and confidential information [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1462, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 ; Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 ; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456] . Thus, a covenant not to solicit the employer's customers may be enforceable if it is designed to protect the employer's confidential, proprietary, or trade-secret customer information, but not if the identity of the customers is not confidential and therefore not a trade secret [see Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1429-1430, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (complaint's allegation that customer lists were not confidential taken as true for purposes of judgment on the pleadings)].

The California Supreme Court has held that a noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless expressly authorized by statute [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5 (authorizing noncompetition agreement in connection with sale of business goodwill or corporate shares, or dissolution of partnership or limited liability company)]. However, the Court left open the question of the applicability of a "trade secret exception" to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 n.4, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 289 n.4, 189 P.3d 285 ("[W]e do not here address the applicability of the so-called trade secret exception to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600], as Edwards does not dispute that portion of his agreement or contend that the provision of the noncompetition agreement prohibiting him from recruiting Andersen's employees violated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600].")].

[ii] Legitimate Post-Employment Restraints

Paragraph (d) of this form is an optional provision denying post-employment payments to the salesperson if he or she engages in any act that would injure the employer in its relationship with its customers or induces those customers to discontinue their business relationship with the employer. On its face, this provision might appear to be an invalid restraint on the salesperson's future occupation under the general rule discussed above. However, that is not the case. A provision in an employment contract forfeiting an employee's future rights if he or she goes to work for a competitor after retirement restrains that employee from engaging in a lawful business and is therefore void [Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242-243, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 (rights to pension); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600]. However, it has been held that a provision in the employment contract of a life insurance agent, which conditioned the right of the agent to receive accrual commissions after severance of the employment relationship on the agent (1) refraining from any act that would injure the employer in its relationship with financial institution customers and (2) not inducing those customers to discontinue cooperation with the employer in the sale of insurance, was not in restraint of trade because the former employee was not thereby prevented from engaging in a trade, business, or profession [Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 522, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602] . The court commented that other provisions in the employment contract terminating the employee's right to renewal commissions if the employee obtained a license to represent another insurance company or became employed by another insurance company might be invalid under Business and Professions Code § 16600 [Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 523, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602] .

[iii] Restraints Imposed During Employment

A provision in an employment contract between a life insurance company and a salesman entitling the salesman to certain "service fees" only "so long as this contract remains in force" has been held not to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [Bach v. Curry (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 676, 681, 66 Cal. Rptr. 220] . This resulted from the fact that the contract did not purport to regulate the salesman's conduct after the termination of his employment and did not restrain him from working for a competitor or in any way overtly limit his freedom to seek other employment. The loss of the service fees came about on the lawful termination of the contract, not on the finding of competitive employment by the salesman. Therefore, the provision in question did not operate as a restraint on trade and was valid [Bach v. Curry (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 676, 681, 66 Cal. Rptr. 220] .

§ 85.312 Provision for Drawing Account in Connection With Commission Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for a drawing account. It is intended for use in conjunction with a general commission provision such as § 85.311 when it is desired that the employee who is paid on a commission basis be able to draw a specified amount in advance of earning a commission. This type of provision may require the employee to reimburse the employer for any amounts by which the sums drawn exceed the commissions subsequently earned, or may permit the employee to retain those sums as a minimum guaranteed payment. This latter alternative may be useful when the employee is of a type subject to the requirements of a minimum wage law.

For a general discussion of commission provisions, see § 85.311[1]. A discussion of minimum wage and maximum hours laws is set forth in § 85.290[1].

[b] Repayment of Amounts Advanced

A salesperson is required to repay the excess of advances made over commissions earned when he or she has expressly agreed to do so. However, when the employment contract provides for advances that are to be deducted from commissions earned, the employer cannot recover excess advances from the employee in the absence of an express or implied agreement or promise to repay any excess of advances over commissions. Thus, in the absence of an express requirement or convincing circumstances indicating a contrary arrangement, advances to an employee are presumed to constitute payment in lieu of salary and to fix the employee's minimum compensation [Agnew v. Cameron (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 619, 622-624, 55 Cal. Rptr. 733] . Accordingly, if it is desired that the employee reimburse the employer for amounts advanced but not earned, it is necessary to include an express provision to that effect in the agreement. Such a provision would not violate the statutory prohibition against an employer collecting from an employee any part of wages already paid [see Lab. Code § 221], because an amount advanced against commissions does not constitute a "wage" until the commission itself is earned [see Steinhebel v. Los Angeles Times Communications (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 696, 704-706, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 351 ; see also Koehl v. Verio, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1329-1337, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 749 (Lab. Code § 221 is not violated by employer's contract with its sales employees to pay commission on sale immediately, subject to chargeback if sale later falls through or does not generate agreed-upon level of revenue)].

[2] FORM

Drawings Against Commissions

(a) Employer agrees to pay in advance to Employee the sum of $_____ per week on account of the commissions to be earned by Employee under this agreement, and the amount so advanced shall be deducted from any amounts due to Employee in the form of commissions hereunder.

(b) In the event that in any one week the amount advanced exceeds the amount of commissions earned, Employee shall _____ repay to the Employer an amount equal to that excess or not be required to repay that excess but may retain the full amount of the advance as a guaranteed minimum compensation].

§ 85.313 Provision for Commission on Subsequent Sales

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for the payment of a commission to a salesperson on all sales made to customers who were originally procured by that salesperson. This form is primarily for use by employers whose business involves a substantial volume of repeat or continuing orders from customers once they have been secured by a salesperson. For a discussion of commission provisions in general, see § 85.311[1].

This form includes an optional provision terminating the right to a commission if, after severance of the employment relationship, the salesperson engages in activity injurious to the employer. For discussion of this type of provision, see § 85.311[1][d].

[b] Commissions on Sales Procured by Employee

When an employee is the procuring cause of the transaction for which commission compensation was payable, that person is entitled to the commission even if the employment terminates and other persons intervene and complete the transaction [Willson v. Turner Resilient Floors, Inc. (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 589, 595, 201 P.2d 406] .

[Insert the provisions of § 85.311 and add one or both of the following provisions:]

[Use following to provide for commissions on sales to customers procured by salesperson when sales are consummated after termination of employment.]

Employee shall [or shall not] be entitled to commissions on sales made under contracts procured by Employee that continue in force after the expiration of this agreement or termination of the employment relationship in any other manner.

[AND/OR]

[Use following to provide for payment of continuing commissions on sales to customers procured by salesperson.]

In the event that Employer sells its merchandise directly to customers whose business has been procured for the Employer by Employee, Employee shall be entitled to commissions at the rate specified herein [until _____ (specify any period to which this clause should be limited, if desired, e.g., for a period of five years after that customer's business was procured by Employee)]. [Optional: However, Employee shall not be entitled to receive payments under this provision after severance of the employment relationship if he or she engages in any act that would injure the employer in its relationship with its customers or induces those customers to discontinue their business relationship with Employer.]

§ 85.314 Provision for Commission in Addition to Salary

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form sets forth the two most common arrangements for the payment of a commission in addition to a basic salary. The first alternative provides for such a commission on all goods sold by the employee. The second is more commonly used and provides for the payment of a commission in addition to the basic salary only if sales exceed a predetermined level or sales quota. This latter type of compensation is frequently referred to as a "quota bonus."

For a general discussion of the subject of commission payments as a form of compensation, see § 85.311[1].

Commission and Salary Compensation

[First alternative; salary plus commission on goods sold by employee:]

Employee shall be entitled to an annual salary of $_____ payable at the rate of $_____ per [specify time interval, e.g., week or month] on_____ [specify payment date or dates], and in addition Employee shall receive a commission of _____ percent on all sales procured by _____ [him or her] for Employer during the term of this agreement. These commissions shall become due as payments are received from the respective customers and shall be paid to Employee monthly on the last day of each month.

[OR]

[Second alternative; commission in addition to basic salary if sales exceed predetermined quota:]

(a) Employee shall be entitled to an annual salary of $_____, payable in equal _____ [specify period, e.g., weekly or semimonthly or monthly] installments of $_____ on_____ [specify date or dates of payment].

(b) Employee shall also be entitled to a commission of _____ percent of the gross selling price of the goods sold by Employee to the extent that the gross selling price exceeds the sum of $_____ in any month. This commission shall become due upon receipt by Employer of payment for the goods and payable to Employee on_____ [specify date or dates of payment, which may or may not coincide with salary payment dates].

§ 85.320 Provision for Fixed Annuity if Employee Remains Until Retirement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for deferred compensation of a fixed amount to be paid to the employee after retirement for the remainder of the employee's life. It includes an optional provision for continuation of deferred compensation payments during the lifetime of the employee's surviving spouse. Another optional provision specifies that deferred compensation payments will be terminated if the employee engages in any act during retirement that would injure the employer. For discussion of the latter type of provision, see § 85.311[1][d].

A fixed sum annuity is not advantageous to the employee because it does not take inflation into account; thus, this type of deferred compensation is not used as often as the provision measuring deferred compensation as a percentage of the salary received at some future time [§ 85.321]. Another method for deferred compensation is to provide the payment of a predetermined sum to the employee in installments over a given number of years [§ 85.322]. For other types of deferred and long-term compensation provisions, see Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms, Ch. 12, Employment and Compensation , Forms 12.14-12.31 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Purpose of Deferred Compensation

The purpose of deferred compensation is to provide that a portion of the employee's compensation will be paid to the employee during retirement when he or she is not in a high tax bracket [see [c], below]. Deferred compensation is generally limited to highly paid executives, whereas pension plans are required to include almost all employees of the employer when the pension plan is a qualified pension plan [I.R.C. § 401]. There are limitations on the deductions an employer can take for federal income tax purposes for contributions to multiple benefit plans that include annuity plans [I.R.C. § 404(a)(7); see I.R.C. § 404(a)(1)-(3)]. Moreover, a benefit plan may not be "top-heavy" (i.e., may not discriminate in favor of key employees) [I.R.C. § 416(g)(1)(A)]. For further discussion of these issues and other rules related to employee pension, profit-sharing, and other deferred compensation plans, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits .

[c] Tax Consequences of Deferred Compensation

The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 [Pub. L. No. 108-357] enacted I.R.C. § 409A, which governs the tax treatment of deferred compensation under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan. Section 409A applies to income amounts deferred after December 31, 2004 [Pub. L. No. 108-357, § 885(b)]. Under Section 409A, a "nonqualified deferred compensation plan" is any plan that provides for the deferral of compensation, other than a qualified employer plan or a bona fide vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, disability pay, or death benefit plan [I.R.C. § 409A(d)(1)]. A "qualified employer plan" includes (1) any nongovernmental retirement plan, contract, pension, account, or trust described in I.R.C. § 219(g)(5)(A) or (B); (2) any eligible deferred compensation plan established by a employer that is a state governmental unit or a tax-exempt organization [see I.R.C. § 457(b)]; and (3) any qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement described in I.R.C. § 415(m) [I.R.C. § 409A(d)(2)]. An arrangement or agreement that includes only one employee constitutes a "plan" in this context [I.R.C. § 409A(d)(3)].

In general, compensation deferred under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan for the current taxable year and all preceding taxable years will be included in the employee's gross income for the current taxable year, to the extent that it has not previously been included in the employee's gross income and is not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture (i.e., if the employee's rights to the compensation are conditioned on the future performance of services [see I.R.C. § 409A(d)(4)]). However, this treatment will be avoided, and the compensation will be included in the employee's gross income in the year it is actually received [see I.R.C. § 404(a)(5)], if the nonqualified deferred compensation plan meets (and is operated in accordance with) the following three requirements specified by Section 409A(a) [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(1)(A)]:

- The plan must provide that compensation deferred under the plan may not be distributed earlier than the occurrence of one of the following [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(A)]:
  - Separation from service as determined by Treasury Regulations [see I.R.C. § 409A(e) (requiring issuance of regulations]. For a "specified employee," that is, a key employee [see I.R.C. § 416(i)] of a corporation whose stock is publicly traded, distribution must be deferred at least 6 months after separation from service [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(B)(i)];
  - The date the employee becomes disabled [see I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(C) (disability defined)];
  - The death of the employee;
  - A specified time (or pursuant to a fixed schedule) specified under the plan at the date of the deferral of the compensation;
  - To the extent provided by Treasury Regulations [see I.R.C. § 409A(e)(2) (requiring issuance of regulations)], a change in the ownership or effective control of the corporate employer, or in the ownership of a substantial portion of the assets of the corporation; or
  - An unforeseeable emergency [see I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(B)(ii) (unforeseeable emergency defined)].
- The plan must not permit the acceleration of the time or schedule of any payment under the plan, except as provided in Treasury Regulations [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(3); see also I.R.C. § 409A(e) (requiring issuance of regulations)].

- The plan must provide generally that compensation for services performed during a taxable year may be deferred at the participant's election only if the election to defer the compensation is made not later than the close of the preceding taxable year (or at such other time as provided in Treasury Regulations) [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(4)(B)(i); see also I.R.C. § 409A(e) (requiring issuance of regulations)]. The timing of the election is subject to the following qualifications:

    - In the case of the first year in which an employee becomes eligible to participate in the plan, the election may be made with respect to services to be performed subsequent to the election within 30 days after the date the employee becomes eligible to participate in the plan [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(4)(B)(ii)].

    - In the case of any performance-based compensation based on services performed over a period of at least 12 months, the election may be made no later than 6 months before the end of the period [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(4)(B)(iii)].

    - In the case of a plan that permits an employee to make a subsequent election to delay a payment or change the form of payment, the plan must require (1) that such an election may not take effect until at least 12 months after the date on which the election is made; (2) that the payment with respect to which such an election is made be deferred for a period of not less than 5 years from the date the payment would otherwise have been made, except in cases of the employee's death, disability, or unforeseeable emergency; and (3) that any election related to a payment whose date is specified or scheduled by the plan may not be made less than 12 months prior to the date of the first scheduled payment [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(4)(C)].

In addition to the foregoing, I.R.C. § 409A(b) provides that under certain circumstances compensation deferred under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan will be treated as a transfer of assets in connection with the performance of services, and therefore subject to I.R.C. § 83, whether or not the assets are available to satisfy claims of the employee's general creditors [I.R.C. § 409A(b)]. Under I.R.C. § 83, transferred assets are taxable to the employee to the extent of the excess of their fair market value (at the earlier of the time the employee's rights in the assets become transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture) over any amount the employee paid for the assets [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. For further discussion of the application of I.R.C. § 83 in the context of stock bonuses and stock options, see §§ 85.380[1][b], 85.382[1][b], and 85.384[1][b]. I.R.C. § 409A(b) provides that compensation deferred under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan will be treated as a transfer of assets within the meaning of I.R.C. § 83 when [I.R.C. § 409A(b)(1)-(3); see I.R.C. § 409A(e)(iv)("employer's financial health" to be defined by Treasury Regulations)]:

- The deferred compensation consists of assets set aside in an offshore trust;

- Assets are restricted, or the plan provides that assets will become restricted, to the provision of benefits under the plan in connection with a change in the employer's financial health; or

- (a) During a restricted period, assets with respect to a single-employer defined-benefit plan are set aside or placed in a trust for purposes of paying deferred compensation of an applicable covered employee [see I.R.C. § 409A(b)(3)(D)("applicable covered employee" defined)], or (b) a nonqualified deferred compensation plan of the sponsor of the defined-benefit plan provides that assets will become restricted to the provision of benefits to an applicable covered employee under the defined-benefit plan in connection with the restricted period. For this purpose, a "restricted period" is any period during which the plan is in at-risk status [see I.R.C. § 430(i)]; any period during which the plan sponsor is a debtor under federal bankruptcy law (or other similar federal or state law); and the 12-month period beginning 6 months before the termination date of the plan if, as of the termination date, the plan is not sufficient for benefit liabilities [I.R.C. § 409A(b)(3)(B); see 29 U.S.C. § 1341(d)(1)(single-employer plan is sufficient for benefit liabilities if there is no amount of unfunded benefit liabilities under plan)].

For each taxable year that assets treated as transferred remain set aside in a trust or other arrangement subject to I.R.C. § 409A(b), any increase in value in, or earnings with respect to, the assets will be treated as an additional transfer of property subject to these rules [I.R.C. § 409A(b)(4)].

If any deferred compensation is included in the employee's taxable income because of the plan's failure to meet the requirements of I.R.C. § 409A(a) or (b), the tax is increased by 20 percent of the amount included in gross income, plus interest (measured from the taxable year in which the compensation was first deferred or, if later, the first taxable year in which the amount is not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture) [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(1)(B), (b)(5)].

Other Internal Revenue Code provisions may be applied to require the inclusion of amounts in the employee's gross income earlier than the time provided by I.R.C. § 409A. However, any amount included in an employee's gross income under I.R.C. § 409A may not be required by any other provision or law to be included in gross income at a later time [I.R.C. § 409A(c)].

The employer generally can deduct the amount of deferred compensation in the year in which it is included in the employee's gross income [I.R.C. § 404(a)(5)]. For discussion of deferred compensation as it relates to employees of professional corporations, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations .

The form provided in [2], below, meets the requirements of a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, because it does not permit the payment of deferred compensation until after the employee retires [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(A)(i)].

§ 85.321 Provision for Payments Equal to Percentage of Salary at Predetermined Age if Employee Remains Until Retirement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides for deferred compensation to be paid at a rate equal to a percentage of the employee's salary at a given age. That age may be the retirement age, but in some cases an earlier age is used. The compensation may also be continued during the life of a surviving spouse. The form provides that the compensation is payable only if the employee remains with the employer until retirement.

This provision is more favorable to the employee than the predetermined payment provision in § 85.320, in which the deferred compensation payments are determined at the time of execution of the employment agreement. In the predetermined payment provision, the deferred compensation may seem attractive at the time the employment contract is executed, but subsequent inflation may cause the payments to be inadequate for the employee's retirement.

§ 85.322 Provision for Lump-Sum Deferred Compensation Payable Over Term of Years

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides for deferred compensation expressed as a lump sum, payable in installments over a given number of years either before or after retirement. The provision is often used when the employee will only be employed for a given number of years with the employer.

This kind of arrangement can be used in lieu of higher compensation in the years of employment, thereby reducing the employee's overall tax liability by stretching compensation out over a longer period (and conceivably into years when the employee will be in a lower tax bracket). However, to ensure that the deferred compensation will not be included in the employee's gross income before it is actually received, the deferred compensation arrangement must meet the requirements for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan [see I.R.C. § 409A]. The form provided in [2], below, meets the requirements of a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, because it does not permit the payment of deferred compensation earlier than a specified time (the employee's attainment of a specified age) or the termination of the employment [I.R.C. § 409A(a)(2)(A)(i), (iv)]. For further discussion of the tax treatment of nonqualified deferred compensation plans, see § 85.320[1][c].

(b) In the event of Employee's death prior to the completion of the above payments, Employer shall pay the balance of the remaining payments, in the manner provided above, to the surviving spouse of Employee, if any. § 85.323 Provision for Payment of Pension

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for payment of a pension. It is intended to be included in an employment contract when the parties desire to specify that the employee will be able to participate in a pension plan established by the employer.

This form does not create a pension plan; it merely incorporates the employer's existing plan and requires the employee to abide by the terms of the pension plan in order to participate. Conditions for qualification, such as the length of service required before the employee will be eligible for the pension and the age at which the pension payments will commence will be specified in the plan. For coverage of pension plans themselves, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits .

[b] Effect of Absence of Express Pension Provision

An express provision for participation in an employer's pension plan is not absolutely essential since an employee may enforce his or her right to a pension even without an express contractual provision if he or she can prove that the employer had a pension plan, that he or she knew of the plan, and that he or she continued in employment in the honest belief that he or she would be a beneficiary of the plan [see West v. Hunt Foods, Inc. (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 597, 603, 225 P.2d 978] . In addition, plans that fail to meet applicable eligibility requirements are subject to penalties under federal pension plan law [see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits].

[c] Validity of Noncompetition Covenants

A contract provision providing for the forfeiture of pension rights if the employee obtains employment with a competitor after leaving the services of the employer is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, which voids any contractual provision that restrains anyone from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business [see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 (noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless it falls within one of statutory exceptions provided by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5); Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 "invalidates provisions in employment contracts prohibiting an employee from working for a competitor after completion of his employment or imposing a penalty if he does so [citations], unless they are necessary to protect the employer's trade secrets [citation]"); D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 (discharging employee for refusing to sign employment agreement containing provision that violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 is violation of public policy); Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 901-908, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (noncompetition covenant is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 even if covenant is part of employee's sale of shares in corporate employer, unless corporate goodwill is component of sale price under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601); see also § 85.311[1][d][ii]].

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for the payment of a lump sum on the death of an employee to the employee's surviving spouse or a person designated by the employee. In the event of the spouse's death or failure to designate a beneficiary, the employee's estate will be the beneficiary. For a death benefit in the form of an annuity to the surviving spouse, see § 85.325. For a death benefit in the form of a continuing payment of all or part of the employee's salary to the surviving spouse for the balance of the employment term, see § 85.326.

[b] Federal Income Tax Consequences of Death Benefits

An employer is entitled to a federal income tax deduction for ordinary and necessary expenses, including a reasonable allowance for compensation for personal services actually rendered [I.R.C. § 162(a)(1)]. No deduction is allowable for gifts in excess of $25 [I.R.C. § 274(b)(1)]. However, a payment by an employer to a deceased employee's surviving spouse is not a gift to the extent that the payment constitutes an employee's death benefit excludable by the recipient [Treas. Reg. § 1.274-3(a)].

§ 85.325 Payment of Annuity to Surviving Spouse of Employee or Lump Sum to Estate

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides for a death benefit in the form of an annuity payable to and during the life of the employee's surviving spouse. It further provides that if the deceased employee is not survived by a spouse, a lump sum is payable to the employee's estate. For a form that provides for a lump sum to be payable to the surviving spouse or other person designated by the employee, with discussion of the federal income tax consequences of death benefit provisions, see § 85.324.

§ 85.326 Continuation of Salary to Surviving Spouse or Designee for Balance of Employment Term if Employee Dies During Employment

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides that if the employee dies during the term of employment, the employer will pay all or part of the employee's salary to his or her surviving spouse or other designee for the balance of the employment term specified in the contract. This type of death benefit is generally used only for highly paid executives in contracts that provide for payment of salary during the entire employment term even if the employee dies or becomes permanently disabled during that time. For a discussion of the federal income tax consequences of death benefits, see § 85.324[1][b].

[2] FORM

Continuation of Salary to Surviving Spouse or Designee for Balance of Employment Term if Employee Dies During Employment

Death Benefit in Form of Continued Salary

In the event of Employee's death during the employment term specified herein, Employer agrees to pay Employee's [surviving spouse or designee] $[set forth an amount equal to all or portion of annual salary] per annum, payable [state same manner of payment as that used to pay Employee's salary, e.g., in equal monthly installments on the last day of each month], from the date of Employee's death until_____[date specified for end of employment term]. If, at the time of death, [Employee does not have a surviving spouse or Employee's designee is deceased], Employer agrees to pay the amount specified above in a lump sum to [Employee's estate or the estate of the designee].

§ 85.340 Provision for Vacation Leave With Pay

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for paid vacation, with two alternative clauses governing when the vacation may be taken. The first alternative provides for a mutually agreed annual period of paid vacation that increases with the amount of time the employee has worked, while the second provides for a vacation to be taken only during a specified period. The provision continues with an optional clause that specifies whether vacation must be taken, or whether the employee may elect to receive payment instead. Finally, the provision includes an optional clause providing that vacation time is accrued in a new year only if substantially all the employee's vacation is used in the year when earned.

[b] Nature and Effect of Vacation Pay

Vacation pay falls within the statutory definition of "wages" provided by Lab. Code § 200 [Boothby v. Atlas Mechanical, Inc. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1601, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] . Vacation pay is similar to pension or retirement benefits as a form of deferred compensation. These benefits do not derive from the beneficence of the employer, but are properly part of the consideration earned by the employee [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 780, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] .

[c] Vested Rights in Vacation Pay

When an employment agreement or an employer's policy provides for paid vacations and employment is terminated before the employee has taken all vested vacation time, he or she is entitled to be paid for that time [Lab. Code § 227.3; see Owen v. Macy's, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 (Lab. Code § 227.3 does not require that employer provide its employees with any paid vacation at all; rather, statute imposes certain requirements

"whenever" employer provides vacation benefits)]. An employment contract cannot provide for forfeiture of vested vacation time on termination of employment. In resolving any dispute relating to vested vacation time, the Labor Commissioner must apply the principles of equity and fairness [Lab. Code § 227.3].

Because the consideration for an annual vacation is the labor performed throughout the year, an employee whose employment is terminated midyear has not earned a full vacation. Nevertheless, the employee has earned some vacation as soon as substantial services have been performed. The right to some share of vacation pay vests, like pension rights, on acceptance of employment [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 780, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] . A proportionate right to a paid vacation vests as the labor is rendered. Once vested, the right to vacation pay is protected from forfeiture by Lab. Code § 227.3 [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 784, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] . However, Lab. Code § 227.3 does not limit an employer's right to control the scheduling of its employees' vacations. Therefore, an employer may establish a policy of deducting from an employee's vacation-leave bank whenever the employee takes four hours off on a workday. Such a policy does not prevent the employer from treating a salaried employee as exempt from overtime compensation requirements [Conley v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 260, 269-270, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719] .

Nonperformance of a condition subsequent, such as an employer's requirement that the employee remain in employment for a specified period before being entitled to take the vacation, can, at most, result in forfeiture of the right to a vacation. However, it cannot prevent that right from vesting [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 780, 781, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] .

If vacation pay vests as it is earned, the employer's requirement that the employee be employed on some stated anniversary date in order to qualify for the vacation cannot prevent the right to pay from vesting. At most, the requirement is a condition subsequent that attempts to effect a forfeiture of vacation pay already vested. However, under Lab. Code § 227.3, such a forfeiture is forbidden [Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 774, 781, 183 Cal. Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122] .

A contract or an employer's policy that allows an employee to accumulate vacation time and take it whenever the employee chooses is not considered to exact a forfeiture, so long as the employer does not require the employee to "use or lose" accrued vacation [see [e], below]. However, a four-year statute of limitations applies to an action to recover vacation pay that has accrued under such a policy [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337]. Therefore, a terminated employee will be barred from suing to recover accrued vacation pay that vested more than four years prior to his or her termination [Sequeira v. Rincon-Vitova Insectaries, Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 632, 634-637, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264 (statute of limitations was not equitably tolled, because employer did not have "use it or lose it" policy)].

[d] Validity of "No Additional Accrual" Clause

An employer may expressly limit the vesting of vacation time by establishing a "no additional accrual" vacation policy. This type of policy prevents an employee from accruing vacation time over a designated limit. Once the employee has accrued vacation time to the limit, the employee cannot earn more time until he or she uses some of the accrued vacation time. This type of vacation policy is permissible, because it does not involve a forfeiture of vested vacation time, but merely limits the amount of time that vests. However, the policy must be explicitly provided in the employment agreement; in the absence of an express provision, vacation time will accumulate without limit [Boothby v. Atlas Mechanical, Inc. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1601-1602, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] . Accumulation of earned vacation time does not depend on an agreement that expressly permits accumulation. Rather, unused vacation time accumulates unless the employment agreement legally prevents it [Boothby v. Atlas Mechanical, Inc. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1598, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] .

The law does not prevent an employer from announcing a level beyond which additional vacation time will no longer accrue. However, once vacation time has vested, it cannot be divested [Boothby v. Atlas Mechanical, Inc. (1992) 6

Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1602, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] .

This form contains an optional "no additional accrual" clause.

[e] Invalidity of "Use It or Lose It" Clause

A "use it or lose it" vacation policy provides for forfeiture of vacation pay if vacation time is not used within a designated period. This type of clause is impermissible because it requires the forfeit of vacation pay in which the employee is already vested [Boothby v. Atlas Mechanical, Inc. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1601, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600] .

Provision for Vacation Leave With Pay

Vacation Leave With Pay

[Use to permit vacations at times mutually agreed by employee and employer:]

(a) After completing [specify length of time, e.g., one year] of employment, Employee will be entitled to an annual vacation leave of [specify length, e.g., two weeks] at full pay. After completing [specify length of time, e.g., three years] of employment, Employee will be entitled to an annual vacation leave of [specify length, e.g., three weeks] at full pay. Vacations are arranged in advance by mutual consent between Employee and Employer.

[OR]

[Use to prescribe vacation period:]

(a) If Employee is employed by Employer at the start of the vacation period, as defined herein, Employee will be entitled to a [specify length, e.g., two-week] vacation with full pay. All vacation must be taken during the vacation period. The vacation period will be between [specify dates, e.g., June 1 and September 15], and Employer may elect to stagger the vacations of individual employees during that period or to close the place of employment for a specified vacation period.

[Continue with the following:]

(b) Although vacations will be granted at times most desired by Employee, Employer reserves the right to determine or approve the vacation time in order to ensure its efficient and orderly operation.

[Use to provide for payment in lieu of vacation leave:]

(c) [In lieu of vacation leave, Employee may elect to receive payment for all or any part of the vacation time to which Employee is entitled, in which case the vacation time will be valued at the amount of salary earned by Employee during an equivalent period or Employee must used earned vacation time, and is not entitled to vacation pay in lieu of vacation].

[Use to prevent accrual of vacation time:]

(d) Employee is expected to use all vacation time in the year earned. Employee will not accrue vacation time in any subsequent year until the earned vacation time for the current year is used in full. However, Employer may allow vacation days to be accumulated without affecting future vacation accrual if work schedules do not permit taking full vacation time or if Employee receives consent to accumulate vacation days for personal reasons.

[OR]

[Use to limit accrual of vacation time:]

(d) Employee is ordinarily expected to use all vacation time in the year earned. However, Employee may accumulate and carry over up to [specify, e.g., five] days per year. Employee will not earn vacation time in a subsequent year if more than [specify, e.g., five] days are carried over. When the accumulated number of vacation days drops below [specify, e.g., five], Employee will again earn vacation time at the agreed rate. Employer may allow more than [specify, e.g., five] vacation days to be accumulated without affecting future vacation accrual if work schedules do not permit taking full vacation time or if Employee receives consent to accumulate excess vacation days for personal reasons.

§ 85.342 Provision for Military Training Leave

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for a paid leave of absence for employees who are members of military reserve or national guard units and who have a commitment to attend annual summer training camps. This type of provision may be desirable if the employer wishes to attract or retain the services of employees who have military obligations.

[b] Reemployment Rights of Employees Called to Active Military Duty

In the wake of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the Legislature acted to protect the rights of military reservists who are called to active duty. Among the protections enacted was an extension of reemployment rights to reservists who are called to active duty [2002 Stats., Ch. 60 (effective June 21, 2002)]. The California military leave law now provides that an officer or enlisted member of the California National Guard, or a member of the United States Military Reserve, who leaves a full- or part-time position in private employment to perform full-time active California or federal military service may obtain a certificate of satisfactory service, which entitles him or her to apply within 40 days after the completion of such service for reemployment with the same employer [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(a), (b); see Mil. & Vet. Code § 400; see also 86 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 12 (2003) (employment-related benefits granted in Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 389-395.8 are not available to employee who seeks leave of absence for service in militia of another state)].

The employer must restore the returning employee to the former position or to a position of similar seniority, status, and pay without loss of retirement or other benefits, unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(a), (b)]. The returning employee may not be terminated without cause within one year after being restored to the position [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(a), (b)]. In addition, any employee of the state called up during time of war or national emergency has the right "to return and reenter upon the office or position within six months after the termination of his or her active service with the armed forces" [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.1(a)].

If a private employer fails to provide reemployment benefits as required by the California military leave law, the person entitled to reemployment may obtain relief by filing a motion, petition, or similar pleading in the superior court for the county where the employer maintains a place of business. The court may specifically require the employer to comply with the reemployment law and compensate the person for any loss of wages or benefits caused by the employer's unlawful action [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(c) (superior court to order speedy hearing and advance matter on calendar)]. The district attorney or city prosecutor of the county or city in which the employer maintains a place of business may appear and act as attorney for the person entitled to reemployment benefits; and no fees or court costs are required to be paid by the person applying for those benefits [Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(c),(d)].

Similar benefits are mandated for a volunteer member of the California Wing of the Civil Air Patrol (the civilian auxiliary of the United States Air Force) who has been employed for at least 90 days by an employer that has more than 15 employees [Gov. Code § 1501 et seq.; see Gov. Code § 1501(a),(b),(d) ("Civil Air Patrol leave," "employee," and "employer" defined)]. The employer generally must provide not less than 10 days per calendar year of unpaid leave to an employee responding to an emergency operational mission of the Civil Air Patrol [Gov. Code § 1503(a)(1); see also Gov. Code § 1503(d) (employer may opt to provide paid leave); Gov. Code § 1504(b) (employer and employee may negotiate for employer to maintain employee's benefits at employer's expense during leave)]. Such leave for a single emergency operational mission must not exceed three days, unless an extension of time is granted by the governmental entity that authorized the emergency operational mission, and the extension of the leave is approved by the employer [Gov. Code § 1503(a)(1); but see Gov. Code § 1503(a)(2) (employer is not required to grant such leave to employee who is required to respond to same or simultaneous emergency operational mission as first responder or disaster-service worker for local, state, or federal agency)]. The employee must give the employer as much notice as possible of the intended dates on which the leave will begin and end, and the employer may require certification from the Civil Air Patrol to verify the employee's eligibility for leave [Gov. Code § 1503(b)]. The employer may not require the employee to exhaust accrued vacation leave, personal leave, compensatory leave, sick leave, disability leave, or any other leave that may be available to the employee in order to take Civil Air Patrol leave [Gov. Code § 1503(c)]. On the expiration of the leave, the employer must restore an employee to the position held by him or her when the leave began or to a position with equivalent seniority status, employee benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment [Gov. Code § 1504(a) (employer may decline to restore employee because of conditions unrelated to employee's exercise of leave rights)]. The employer must not discriminate against or discharge the employee because of his or her membership in the Civil Air Patrol and may not hinder or prevent the employee from performing service as part of the Civil Air Patrol during an emergency operational mission for which the employee is entitled to leave [Gov. Code § 1502; see Gov. Code § 1506; see also Gov. Code § 1505(a) (taking Civil Air Patrol leave must not result in loss of any employee benefit accrued before beginning of leave)].

Federal law provides similar reemployment benefits for service members. The Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 ("USERRA") [38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq.] requires employers to provide leaves of absence to employees serving in the uniformed services and grants reemployment and job protection rights to such employees [38 U.S.C. §§ 4304, 4312, 4313, 4316(c)]. Affected employees generally are entitled to reemployment if they comply with the following requisites [38 U.S.C. § 4312(a)(1)-(3)]:

- They must give proper advance verbal or written notice of such service to their employer;
- They are not on leave for more than five years, except under limited exceptions, such as when the service is required for a national emergency; and
- They apply for reemployment within the periods prescribed by USERRA. For detailed coverage of the USERRA.

Paetkau, Emerging Employment Law Considerations as a Result of the September 11th Terrorist Attacks, California Employment Law Reporter (Matthew Bender, Dec. 2001)].

§ 85.343 Provision for Severance Pay

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form sets forth two alternative provisions for severance pay if employment is terminated for reasons beyond the employee's control. The first alternative provides simply for a cash payment upon termination for reasons other than cause. The second alternative provides a lump sum retirement payment when the employee voluntarily terminates employment after a specified number of years.

[b] Nature of Severance Pay

Severance pay is not provided for by statute in California. However, an employer can provide for severance pay, either in its policies--whether written or established by practice--or expressly in employment contracts. Severance pay provisions are identically construed whether contained in employer policies or contracts [Chapin v. Fairchild Camera Camera & Instrument Corp. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 192, 197, 107 Cal. Rptr. 111] . Severance pay is a kind of accumulated compensation for past services and a material recognition of their past value. It concerns the past, not the future, and once earned, becomes payable thereafter [see Chapin v. Fairchild Camera Camera & Instrument Corp. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 192, 198, 199, 107 Cal. Rptr. 111] .

[2] FORM

Provision for Severance Pay

Severance Pay

[First alternative; severance pay upon dismissal without cause:]

Upon dismissal other than for cause, Employee shall receive a cash severance payment in the amount equal to [specify period, e.g., three months] salary. [Optional additional provision: Employee shall receive additional severance pay based upon length of service and computed at the rate of _____ (specify rate, e.g., one-half month's pay) for every year of service.]

[OR]

[Second alternative; lump sum severance pay at end of specified period, in the nature of retirement pay.]

Upon [specify conditions of entitlement, e.g., completion of _____ (e.g., 20) years of service or retirement because of illness or reaching age 65], Employee may, upon written application to Employer, terminate _____[his or her] employment and receive a cash lump sum severance payment based on _____[his or her] length of service. The payment shall be computed at the rate of [specify rate, e.g., one-half month's pay] for every year of service [and shall be in lieu of any other termination benefits provided elsewhere in this agreement].

§ 85.350 Health Care Benefits--Insured or Self-Insured Plans

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains two alternative provisions for employee health care benefits. "Health care" can include medical, dental, eye, surgical, hospital, and major medical coverage. It can be extended to the employee only or the employee's spouse and children. Dependent children are defined by incorporating the Internal Revenue Code definition of dependents, which requires that the parent provide over half of the support of the children for the calendar year in which the expenses arise [I.R.C. § 152(a), (c)]. Some employers extend coverage to same and opposite sex spouse-equivalents by requiring an Affidavit of Domestic Partnership. However, the benefits extended to these individuals are taxable income to the employee because the Internal Revenue Code does not recognize these individuals as legal dependents [see Ensminger v. C.I.R. (4th Cir. 1979) 610 F.2d 189, 191 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 941 (1980)] .

This form illustrates provisions for the two existing types of medical reimbursement plans. The first alternative in this form specifies the "insured plan," that is, it provides that the employer will include the employee in the medical reimbursement plan previously adopted by the employer. The second alternative is for use when the employer is self-insured and the terms of the coverage are to be specified in the employment contract itself. A "self-insured" plan is one under which reimbursements are not provided under a health and accident insurance policy. If the self-insured plan contains detailed terms and conditions comparable to those in insured plans, the first alternative can be modified to accommodate this situation by simply referring to the plan documents for a description of the terms and conditions of coverage.

[b] Taxation of Medical Benefits

An employee's gross income does not include amounts paid directly or indirectly by the employer to the employee for reimbursement of medical expenses incurred by the employee or his or her spouse or dependents [I.R.C. § 105(b)].

Accordingly, the employee is not taxed on those amounts. An employee who is provided benefits to a domestic partner will be taxed on those amounts [see Ensminger v. C.I.R. (4th Cir. 1979) 610 F.2d 189, 191 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 941 (1980)] .

However, any amounts received by an employee for personal injury or illness are included in gross income to the extent the amounts (1) are attributable to contributions by the employer that were not includible in the employee's gross income, or (2) are paid by the employer [I.R.C. § 105(a)].

[c] Requirement for Notice of Discontinuation of Coverage

If an employer provides coverage for medical, surgical, or hospital benefits for an employee, the employer may not discontinue coverage without notifying the employee at least 15 days in advance of the discontinuation. This applies to any discontinuation of coverage, including nonrenewal and cancellation, but it does not include employment termination or cases in which substitute coverage has been provided [Lab. Code § 2806(a)]. If coverage is provided by a third party, the employer's failure to give the necessary notice will not require the third party to continue coverage beyond the date on which it would otherwise terminate [Lab. Code § 2806(b)].

The foregoing provisions do not apply to any employee welfare benefit plan that is subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Lab. Code § 2806(c); see 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.].

[d] Discriminatory Use of Pregnancy Benefits

An employee health insurance plan that provides fewer pregnancy benefits for the wives of men who are employees than for married women who are employees violates the Pregnancy Discrimination Act [42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k)]. Any discrimination based on a woman's pregnancy is discrimination based on gender [*but see AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009), 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, at 13 ("Although adopting a service credit rule unfavorable to those out on pregnancy leave would violate Title VII today, a seniority system does not necessarily violate the statute when it gives current effect [in the calculation of pension benefits] to such rules that operated before the [Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which took effect on April 29, 1979].")]. The protection against discrimination in employment applies to men as well as to women. Thus, the discrimination in the coverage afforded to wives of men who are employees is also discrimination against those men [Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89] .

§ 85.351 Group-Term Life and Accidental Death and Dismemberment Insurance

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will be included in the employer's group-term life insurance policy. It also provides for accidental death and dismemberment coverage since that type of coverage is generally part of the insurance package offered by insurers. In most situations, the cost of group-term life insurance is not taxable to the employee [see [b], below].

[b] Taxation of Group-Term Life Insurance Costs

The cost of employer-paid group-term life insurance, up to $50,000, is not taxable to the employee. However, the proportionate cost of the premiums paid by the employer for coverage in excess of $50,000 is includible in the employee's income [I.R.C. § 79(a)]. The computation of the cost of the premiums for any such excess coverage is based on uniform premiums prescribed in the Treasury Regulations [I.R.C. § 79(c); see Treas. Reg. § 1.79-3]. These limitations do not apply to the cost of group-term life insurance on the life of an individual that is carried by the employer after the individual's employment has terminated [see I.R.C. § 79(b)(1)] or to the cost of group-term life insurance on the life of a current employee when the employer or a charity is named as beneficiary [I.R.C. § 79(b)(2)].

The income exclusion is not available to key employees if the insurance plan discriminates in favor of those employees either as to eligibility to participate or benefits provided [I.R.C. § 79(d)(1), (2)]. A plan will not be discriminatory if the insurance benefit bears a uniform relationship to compensation [I.R.C. § 79(d)(5)].

When a corporation's group-term life insurance plan is a "discriminatory employee benefit plan" [see I.R.C. § 89(c)-(j) (definition)], the employer-paid costs are partly or wholly includible in the gross incomes of all covered "highly compensated employees" [I.R.C. § 89]. This category includes every employee who at any time in the current or preceding year was a 5-percent owner of the corporation [I.R.C. § 414(q)(1)(A), (3)]. It also includes every employee who in the preceding year received more than $75,000 in compensation from the corporation, or received more than $50,000 in compensation from the corporation and was in the top 20 percent of all employees ranked by compensation, or received more than $45,000 in compensation from the corporation and was an officer, and who in the current year again satisfies one (not necessarily the same one) of these three criteria; and every employee who in the current year is one of the 100 highest-compensated employees (ranked by compensation from the corporation) and also satisfies one of those three compensation-status criteria [I.R.C. § 414(q)(1)(B)-(D), (2), (4); see I.R.C. § 414(q)(5)-(9) (maximum and minimum numbers of officers for purpose of this test, treatment of family-member employees, meaning of "compensation," exclusion of certain employees, and treatment of former-employee beneficiaries)].

§ 85.352 Insurance or Guaranteed Payment Upon Premature Death or Dissolution of Employer

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form contains two alternative provisions designed to induce an employee to accept employment by indemnifying the employee in the event of the premature death or dissolution of the employer. This form is for use when the employer is an individual and the business is solely dependent upon that person, or when the employer is a partnership or corporation.

The first alternative guarantees payment of a lump sum to the employee in the event of the employer's death or dissolution during the first few years of the employment term. The second alternative is for use only in the case of an individual employer, and gives the employer the option of obtaining term insurance or making his or her own estate liable for the face amount of the policy.

[2] FORM

Insurance or Guaranteed Payment Upon Premature Death or Dissolution of Employer

Payment Upon Premature Death or Dissolution of Employer

[First alternative; use to provide uninsured payment whether employer is an individual, a partnership, or a corporation:]

As an inducement to Employee to accept employment with Employer, Employer agrees that in the event of Employer's [death or dissolution] within _____ years from the commencement of Employee's employment, the sum of $_____ shall be payable to Employee from Employer's_____[estate or cash assets upon dissolution] at the time of Employer's [death or dissolution], but only if Employee has remained in the employ of Employer until that time [unless the employment has been terminated by Employer for reasons other than cause]. [Add if employer is an individual: Employer shall make adequate provision in _____ (his or her) personal estate plan or last will for the fulfillment of this provision.]

[OR]

[Second alternative; use to provide insured payment when employer is an individual:]

Employer agrees to obtain a term insurance policy on_____[his or her] own life for a term of _____ years in the face amount of $_____, payable to Employee. Employer shall pay all premiums on that policy. In the event that Employer dies within _____ years from the commencement of Employee's employment without having such an insurance policy then in effect, and if the employment term has not been terminated for cause, Employer's estate shall be liable to Employee for the above amount.

§ 85.360 Provision for Bonus Conditioned on Level of Profits--Payable After End of Fiscal Year

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for the payment of a lump sum bonus to an employee in addition to the stipulated salary. It is intended for use in conjunction with a general salary provision. It provides that the bonus is conditioned on the achievement of a specified level of sales or profits but it is not linked to or measured by sales or profits in any other way.

For a bonus provision making payment conditional upon completion of a specified length of service by the employee, see § 85.361. For a simple end-of-year bonus provision, see § 85.362.

Both this form and § 85.361 provide that the bonus will only be paid if the employee is employed at the end of the employment year or the fiscal year. § 85.362 provides for the payment of a pro rata portion of the bonus in the year of termination except when termination is for cause.

[b] Nature of Bonuses

Bonus plans, as incentives, are "wages" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 200 [see Lucian v. All States Trucking Co. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975, 171 Cal. Rptr. 262] . Bonus provisions differ from profit sharing provisions [see §§ 85.370-85.372] in that a bonus is expressed as a lump sum and is not measured by profits (although it might be conditioned upon the existence of profits as in this form), whereas the essence of profit sharing is both the existence of profits and expression of the payment formula in terms of a measure of profits. When a promise to give a bonus is made to a prospective employee to induce that person to become an employee, or to one who is already an employee to induce that person to remain as an employee, the promise is not one for a gift but one for which consideration is given if the employment or continuation of employment is accepted [Hunter v. Ryan (1930) 109 Cal. App. 736, 738, 293 P. 825 ; Sabatini v. Hensley (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 172, 175, 326 P.2d 622] .

This form provides an option to condition the payment of the bonus on the existence of net profits, which are defined as the net income after expenses (but before taxes) [see [2], P (c), below]. A bonus provision's requirement that the employer's expenses be deducted from gross receipts to determine the employer's net profits does not run afoul of the statutory and regulatory prohibitions against deducting or recapturing unauthorized amounts from salary [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as the employee's regular salary is not subject to any unauthorized deductions for the employer's operating expenses [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56] .

[c] Provision for Indeterminate Bonus

An employment contract could provide for the payment of a bonus without specifying the amount of the bonus or a formula by which the amount can be calculated. In such cases, the agreement to pay the bonus will be enforceable despite the omission. The amount of the bonus will be the excess, if any, of the reasonable value of the services rendered by the employee over the agreed salary [Sabatini v. Hensley (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 172, 175, 326 P.2d 622] . Obviously, however, the better practice is to specify clearly in the contract itself the amount of the bonus or the means by which it may be calculated.

[d] Effect of Requirement That Employee Be Employed at End of Year

An employment contract provision to the effect that the bonus will not be paid or that the employee will not be entitled to the bonus if he or she is not employed at the end of the employment year, as in this form, is not ambiguous. An employee who voluntarily leaves his or her employment before the bonus calculation date is not entitled to receive it [Lucian v. All States Trucking Co. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975, 976, 171 Cal. Rptr. 262] .

[e] Employer's Deduction for Payment to Shareholder-Employee

An employer who is on an accrual basis for tax purposes will be entitled to a deduction in the amount of the bonus for the year in which the amount is determined even though the bonus is not paid in that year. In this form, the bonus is determined as of the end of the fiscal year when the amount of the profit is known (or can be determined), but is not payable until a predetermined subsequent date (the delay in payment is to allow the employer's accountants to determine the exact amount of the profits). This type of bonus is deductible to the employer in the fiscal year when the profits were earned, rather than the next fiscal year when the bonus is paid [see I.R.C. § 267(a)(2)] except for certain employees who are also shareholders of the corporation [see I.R.C. § 267(b)(2)].

Bonus Conditioned on Profits

(a) For each of Employer's fiscal years in which the _____ [gross receipts or net profits] of _____ [Employer or the division of Employer's business managed by Employee] equal or exceed $_____, Employer shall pay a bonus of $_____ in addition to any other compensation to which Employee may be entitled under this agreement, but only if Employee has been employed during that entire fiscal year.

(b) The bonus shall be paid within _____ [specify number] days after the end of the fiscal year.

(c) As used in this section, the term _____ [set forth definition, e.g., "gross receipts" shall mean all sums received less all sums paid as adjustments for returns or damage or warranty claims or "net profits" shall mean net income from operations after expenses but before taxes, as determined according to sound accounting principles by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer].

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides for the payment of a lump sum bonus to an employee conditioned on the employee remaining with the employer for a given number of years. The bonus is payable at the end of the employment year rather than at the end of the calendar or fiscal year, as in §§ 85.360 and 85.362.

This form specifies that the employee will not be entitled to any portion of the bonus for an employment year in which the employment terminated prior to the end of the employment year. For a provision prorating the bonus for intra-year termination, see § 85.362.

For discussion of the law applicable to bonuses generally, see § 85.360[1].

This form provides for a bonus to be paid at the end of the calendar year and includes a clause prorating the bonus if termination occurs prior to the end of the year for reasons other than cause. This form may be used when the employer is on a calendar year tax basis and wants the wage expense deduction in the current year. If the employer is on a fiscal year, this form should be modified to provide that the bonus is to be paid at the end of the employer's fiscal year [see § 85.360], in which case the employer obtains a deduction in the current fiscal year but the employee does not have to include the bonus as income until the calendar year in which the bonus is paid [see I.R.C. § 267(a)(2)].

§ 85.370 Provision for Share of Profits as Sole Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for payment of a specified percentage of the net profits of a business or a branch of a business to an employee as his or her sole compensation for services under the employment agreement. It permits the employee to draw a weekly amount based on a quarterly estimate of net profits. It also provides for the payment of a minimum amount.

This form of compensation is for use as a means of inducing top level officers who have direct control over the operations of the employer's business to implement policies that will stimulate profits. This provision is inappropriate for "nonexempt" employees, that is, employees who are not exempt from federal and state laws imposing minimum wage and overtime compensation requirements [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 206, 207; Lab. Code §§ 510(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11000 et seq.].

The California Supreme Court has upheld an employer's supplementary profit-sharing program, even though the employer's profits for purposes of the program were determined by deducting the employer's expenses from its gross receipts. The Court held that such deductions in calculating profits for purposes of a supplemental compensation program do not run afoul of the statutory and regulatory prohibitions against deducting or recapturing unauthorized amounts from wages [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], at least so long as the employees' regular wages are not subject to any unauthorized deductions for the employer's operating expenses [*Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56] . The Court noted that it was clear from the program's inception that any compensation received by employees would depend on the extent to which the employer's revenues for the relevant period exceeded its operating expenses. Thus, the amounts calculated as a percentage of the employer's net profit were what constituted "wages" for purposes of the statutory and regulatory prohibitions against improper deductions or recapture [*Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *36-37 (no improper deductions were made by employer after calculating each employee's percentage of net profits)]. Similarly, this form makes it clear that the executive employee is not promised any specific amount, but that his or her profit-sharing amount will be determined only after the employer's net profit is ascertained. Further, this form provides that in any event, the employee will be entitled to a specified minimum amount that will not be reduced by the employer's expenses [see [2], P (a), below], a provision that is analogous to the "regular" wages received by employees in the case before the Supreme Court.

[b] Nature of Profit Sharing

Payments under incentive plans such as profit sharing plans are "wages" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 200 [see Lucian v. All States Trucking Co. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975, 171 Cal. Rptr. 262] . Profit sharing provisions differ from bonus provisions [see §§ 85.360-85.362] in that a bonus is expressed as a lump sum and is not measured by profits (although it might be conditioned upon the existence of profits as in this form), whereas the essence of profit sharing is both the existence of profits and expression of the payment formula in terms of a measure of profits.

[c] Definition of "Net Profits"

Special care should be given to the selection of a definition of "net profits" that will fit the needs of the parties. It is important to define in the contract itself which items are to be included in or excluded from net profits. Various definitions have been used for the term "net profits," but no one definition can encompass every situation or need that might arise. It has, for example, been defined as the clear gains of the business venture after the expenses incurred in its conduct and the losses sustained in its prosecution [Boradori v. Peterson (1927) 86 Cal. App. 753, 759-760, 261 P. 520] .

[2] FORM

Provision for Share of Profits as Sole Compensation

Profit Sharing to Be Sole Compensation

(a) As the sole compensation for services rendered hereunder, Employee shall be entitled to receive _____ percent of the net profits of the business of Employer derived from the operations of _____ [Employer or specify portion of business from which net profits are to be calculated, e.g., the branch managed by Employee]; provided, however, that Employee shall be entitled to a minimum compensation of $_____ per year.

(b) "Net profits" shall mean _____ [define net profits, including or excluding any particular items desired, e.g., net income from operations after expenses but before taxes, as determined according to sound accounting principles by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer].

(c) The amount of net profits shall be estimated quarterly, and a statement containing that estimate shall be given to Employee.

(d) Employee shall be entitled to draw a weekly amount on account of _____[his or her] share of net profits, up to a maximum of $_____ per week.

(e) Payments to Employee shall be adjusted on a quarterly basis, using the quarterly estimates and year-end statement to determine the amount of compensation due, all payments to be made within 10 days after the issuance of the estimate or year-end statement.

(f) Employee shall have the right to examine the books and records of Employer [but not Employer's income tax returns] upon _____ [specify period] days notice during reasonable business hours, and shall be entitled to an accounting to be accomplished by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer.

(g) Employee shall not be entitled to share in the profits for any quarter if Employee is not an Employee on the last day of that quarter, [if _____ (his or her) employment was terminated before the end of the quarter for cause, or if _____ (he or she) resigned before the end of that quarter].

§ 85.371 Provision for Share of Profits Exceeding Specified Level

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for the payment of a share of profits to an employee in any year in which the profits exceed a predetermined level. This share of profits is in addition to the regular salary, which represents the primary form of compensation [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. Lexis 8909, at *34-56 (deduction of employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of profit-sharing program does not run afoul of statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from salary [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as no unauthorized deductions are made from employee's regular salary)]. This type of provision is mainly used in employment contracts with employees in policy-making positions, and its main purpose is an incentive to the employee to use his or her best efforts to increase profits above the specified level.

[b] Tax Consequences of Profit-Sharing Plans

Employer contributions to a profit-sharing plan are deductible under I.R.C. § 404(a) to the extent that they are deductible under another section and are reasonable compensation for services actually rendered [I.R.C. § 404(a); see Treas. Reg. § 1.404(a)-1(b)]. Contributions may only be deducted up to either 25 percent (15 percent for tax years beginning before 2002) of the compensation paid or accrued during the taxable year to all beneficiaries under the plan or the amount the employer is required to contribute to the plan trust under I.R.C. § 401(k)(11), whichever is greater [I.R.C. § 404(a)(3)(A)]. For additional discussion, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits .

[2] FORM

Provision for Share of Profits Exceeding Specified Level

Percentage Share of Profits in Addition to Salary

(a) Employee also shall be entitled to receive from Employer, as additional compensation, in any fiscal year in which net profits exceed $_____, a sum equal to _____ percent of the net profits in excess of $_____.

(b) This additional compensation shall be computed and paid to Employee within _____ [e.g., 30] days after the end of Employer's fiscal year.

(c) For any fiscal year in which Employee is not employed for a full 12 months, _____ [specify adjustment, if any, e.g., Employer may at its discretion adjust the additional compensation payable to reflect the influence on net profits attributable to the efforts of Employee during the period actually worked]. However, Employee shall not be entitled to share in the profits for any fiscal year in which_____[his or her] employment has been terminated by Employer for cause or during which Employee resigned prior to the end of that period.

(d) "Net profits" shall be defined as _____ [e.g., net income from operations after expenses but before taxes, as determined according to sound accounting principles by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer].

(e) Employee shall have the right to examine the books and records of Employer [but not Employer's income tax returns] on _____ [specify period] days' notice during reasonable business hours, and shall be entitled to an accounting to be performed by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer.

§ 85.372 Provision for Decreasing Share of Higher Profits

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will receive specified percentages of the net profits of the employer's business under a formula in which the amount of the percentage decreases as the profits increase [*see Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407, 165 P.3d 133, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 8909, at *34-56 (deduction of employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of profit-sharing program does not run afoul of statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from salary [see Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as no unauthorized deductions are made from employee's regular salary)]. Although this form provides that the employee is to share in all of the profits, it can be revised to provide that the employee will only share in the profits above a certain level [see § 85.371] and that the percentage sharing will decrease in increments of profits above that level.

[2] FORM

Provision for Decreasing Share of Higher Profits

Percentage Share of Profits in Addition to Salary

(a) As additional compensation _____ [in each or beginning with the _____ (specify, e.g., second)] year of employment hereunder, Employer agrees to pay to Employee _____ [e.g., 5] percent of the net profits of Employer up to $_____, plus _____ [e.g., 3] percent of the net profits up to $_____, plus [e.g., 1] percent of the net profits exceeding $_____.

(b) "Net profits" in any fiscal year shall be determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles by the firm of independent certified public accountants then serving Employer. The computation as determined by that firm shall be final and conclusive on both Employer and Employee. In making the computation, net profits shall not be reduced by state and federal income taxes, payments to qualified pension and profit-sharing plans, and items of nonrecurring or other extraordinary loss which, in the complete discretion of the Board of Directors, did not arise in the ordinary course of business; but the net profits shall be decreased (to the extent they were included in the computation of net profits) by all items of capital gain and nonrecurring profit, less expenses attributable to that gain or profit.

(c) Employee shall have the right to examine the books and records of Employer [but not Employer's income tax returns] upon _____ [specify period] days notice during reasonable business hours, and shall be entitled to an accounting to be performed by the firm of certified public accountants retained by Employer and in conformity with the prior accounting practices of Employer.

(d) Employee shall not be entitled to share in the profits for any fiscal year, or any portion thereof, in which_____[his or her] employment has been terminated for _____ [cause or any reason whatsoever] [if desired, add: or during which _____ (he or she) has resigned] prior to the end of that period.

§ 85.380 Stock Bonus--Stock Valued at Fair Market Value

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The first alternative set forth in this form is a provision for an annual bonus payable in the employer's stock. It specifies that for purposes of determining the number of shares to be transferred to the employee, the value of the stock is the fair market value of the shares. However, in a closely-held corporation, it may be difficult to determine the fair market value of the shares. In this situation, shares can be valued at their book value for the purpose of determining the number of shares to transfer [see § 85.381].

The second alternative set forth in this form provides for participation by the employee in the employer's employee stock ownership plan, although such a provision is not necessary since the plan must meet the antidiscrimination requirements outlined under [c], below.

[b] Taxation of Stock Bonuses

In general, a stock bonus is taxable to the employee to the extent of the excess of its fair market value (at the earlier of the time the employee's rights in the stock become transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture) over any amount the employee paid for the stock [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. Fair market value is determined without regard to any restriction on the stock other than one which, by its terms, will never lapse [I.R.C. § 83(a)(1)]. The employee can elect to include the amount indicated above in his or her income in the year in which the transfer was made, but the drawback to this is that if the stock rights are later forfeited, no deduction will be allowed with respect to that forfeiture [I.R.C. § 83(b)].

An employee's rights in stock are transferable only if not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture [I.R.C. § 83(c)(2)].

Stock is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture if the employee's right to the stock is conditioned on his or her continued employment with the employer [see I.R.C. § 83(c)(1)]. Moreover, if the employee is subject to suit under the Securities and Exchange Act with respect to certain corporate insider stock transactions within a six-month period, his or her rights to the stock are subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture and are not transferable [I.R.C. § 83(c)(3)].

The employer is entitled to a deduction under I.R.C. § 162 for the value of the stock bonus that is taxable to the employee. The deduction is allowable in the taxable year in which the income is included in the employee's gross income [I.R.C. § 83(h)].

For a detailed discussion of the operation of I.R.C. § 83, see Field, Payments in Restricted Property: Recent Developments, 30 New York University Institute On Federal Taxation 385 (1972)(Matthew Bender).

[c] Employee Stock Ownership Plans

An employee stock ownership plan ("ESOP") is either a stock bonus plan or a combination stock bonus and money-purchase plan. They are "defined contribution plans," must be "qualified," and must be designed to invest primarily in securities issued by the employer [I.R.C. § 4975(e)(7)].

A defined contribution plan is one in which an individual account is set up for each covered employee and to which the employer's pre-defined contribution and any increase or decrease in value is contributed annually [I.R.C. § 414(i)]. A plan qualifies if it meets certain statutory antidiscrimination requirements, including minimum participation [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(3), 410], minimum coverage [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(4), 410], and does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees [I.R.C. § 401(a)(4); see I.R.C. § 414(q) (defined)]. Other aspects of qualification are requirements for minimum vesting [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(7), 411], minimum accrual of benefits [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(7), 411(b)], and avoidance of "top-heavy" plans that discriminate in favor of highly placed executives [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(10)(B), 416]. There are limitations on contributions and benefits [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(16), 415], on annual compensation of employee participants [I.R.C. §§ 401(a)(17)], and on the aggregation of plans [I.R.C. § 414(b), (c), (m), (n)]. Qualified plans also are required to make certain specific distributions [I.R.C. § 401(a)(9)]. Defined contribution plans and the requirements for qualification are discussed in C. Scudere, Pension and Profit Sharing Plans Compliance Guide(Matthew Bender); H. Frutkin, Pension and Profit Sharing Plans: Forms and Practice(Matthew Bender); and Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Ch. 13, Pension Plans and Other Exempt Employees' Plans (Matthew Bender).

§ 85.381 Stock Bonus Plus Cash Bonus--Stock Valued at Book Value

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form provides for an annual bonus to be paid in the employer's stock and a cash bonus from which any withholding tax on the stock and the cash bonus will be paid. It differs from § 85.380 in that it provides that the stock will be valued at book value for the purpose of determining the number of shares to be transferred. The reason for using book value rather than fair market value is that fair market value can often be difficult to determine, especially in the case of stock of closely-held corporations. However, even if book value is used to determine the number of shares to be transferred to the employee, the employer's deduction, and the amount included in the employee's income will be determined by the fair market value of the stock [see I.R.C. § 83(a); see also § 85.380[1][b]].

(b) For these purposes, the book value of those shares shall be their book value as of the end of that fiscal year, as shown on the balance sheet of Employer as prepared and certified by the firm of accountants then serving Employer, and no adjustments in that book value shall be made for operations of Employer subsequent to the preceding fiscal year.

(c) In addition, Employee shall be entitled to receive from Employer, at the time of the transfer of those shares to Employee, a cash bonus of $_____, from which the withholding taxes on the stock bonus and the cash bonus shall be withheld.

§ 85.382 Restricted Stock Bonus--Transfer Subject to Substantial Risk of Forfeiture

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for the annual payment of a restricted stock bonus to the employee. It includes a clause requiring that all shares transferred to the employee are subject to a restriction that they be immediately sold to the employer upon termination of the contract for any reason other than the employee's death.

The main reasons for use of a restricted bonus are to maintain control over the stock of a closely-held corporation and to induce the employee to remain employed for a specified number of years. The effect of these two restrictions is to delay the time when the value of the bonus is taxable to the employee and deductible by the employer [see [b], below].

[b] Taxation of Restricted Stock Bonuses

The general rule is that stock bonuses must be included in the employee's income on receipt unless the stock is subject to a restriction that is considered a "substantial risk of forfeiture" [I.R.C. § 83(a)]. Stock is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture if the employee's right to it is conditioned on his or her continuing to remain employed with the employer [see I.R.C. § 83(c)(1)].

The stock bonus provided in this form is subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture because it requires the employee to sell back to the employer all stock the employee has received from the employer within a predetermined number of years after the termination of employment, except termination caused by the employee's death.

The employee will be taxed on each stock bonus when the forfeiture restriction no longer applies, which will be the predetermined number of years after receipt of the stock. The amount included in his or her income at that time will be the fair market value of the stock at the time the restriction is removed or no longer applies [I.R.C. § 83(a), (c); Treas. Reg. § 1.83-5(a)]. The employer's ability to take a deduction for the bonus is also deferred until that time [I.R.C. § 83(h)]. This is contrasted with a non-restricted stock bonus, in which the employee's gross income includes the net value of the stock in excess of any amount he or she paid for it in the year of the transfer [I.R.C. § 83(a)] and the employer's deduction can be taken in the same year [I.R.C. § 83(h)].

[2] FORM

Restricted Stock Bonus--Transfer Subject to Substantial Risk of Forfeiture

Restricted Stock Bonus

(a) As additional compensation, Employer agrees to transfer to Employee each year during the employment term, within two and one-half months after the close of Employer's fiscal year, the number of shares of Employer's common stock having an aggregate book value equal to _____ percent of Employee's annual salary as of the end of that fiscal year. For purposes of the bonus, the book value of the shares shall be their book value as of the close of the fiscal year, as shown on Employer's balance sheet as prepared and certified by the firm of accountants then serving Employer.

(b) All shares that are transferred to Employee pursuant to this provision shall be subject to the restriction that they be immediately sold to Employer at book value (as defined below) if the employment term is terminated within _____ years from the date that the shares were transferred to Employee for any reason except the death of Employee.

(c) "Book value," for the purpose of the sale of the stock to Employer on termination of employment, is the book value of shares as of the close of Employer's fiscal year last ending prior to that termination, as shown on Employer's balance sheet prepared and certified by the firm of accountants then serving Employer.

§ 85.383 Incentive Stock Option Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an incentive stock option agreement in which an employer grants an employee the option to purchase a specified number of shares in the corporation. This statutory option [see I.R.C. § 422] allows a shareholder to defer taxation of any gain from the shares, which would normally occur at the time of receipt or exercise of the option, until disposition of the stock [see [b][i], below]. Nonstatutory stock options are set forth in §§ 85.384 and 85.385.

For an article provision authorizing the adoption of a stock option plan and agreement, see Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, § 3.262. For bylaws authorizing the adoption of an incentive stock option plan and agreement, see Ch. 4, Bylaws . For a discussion and example of an incentive stock option plan authorizing this incentive stock option agreement, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.240. For a board of directors resolution adopting an incentive stock option plan, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.241. For a shareholders' resolution approving an incentive stock option plan, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6I.242.

[b] Taxation of Incentive Stock Options

[i] In General

Incentive stock options are advantageous to employees because any gain received from the exercise of the option is deferred. When a share of stock is transferred to an employee pursuant to an incentive stock option [see I.R.C. § 422(b) (definition)], no taxable event occurs [I.R.C. § 422(a); see I.R.C. § 421(a)]. No income is received by the individual with respect to the difference between the option price and the share's value at exercise [I.R.C. § 421(a)(1)]; no deduction for a trade or business expense [see I.R.C. § 162] is allowable to the transferor corporation (or its parent, subsidiary, or successor) for the share of stock transferred [I.R.C. § 421(a)(2); see I.R.C. § 424(a) (successor in reorganization)]; and no amount other than the price paid under the option is received by the corporation for the share transferred [I.R.C. § 421(a)(3)]. Instead, any income realization is deferred until the employee disposes of the stock received from the option. Tax-free exercise of the option relieves the employee from financing a tax payment in addition to the exercise price [Colvin, Qualified "Incentive Stock Options" Under the New Law: Requirements and Advantages, 55 J. Tax'n 202 (1981)].

Furthermore, if holding period requirements are met, the difference between the exercise price of the option and the price of the stock upon disposition by the employee will be classified as long-term capital gain [see I.R.C. §§ 1221, 1222]. Another advantage of incentive stock options over nonstatutory options is that for the former, tax will be postponed until the stock is sold [see I.R.C. § 83 (nonstatutory options taxable upon exercise)].

For purposes of computing alternative minimum tax liability, the realization of income on the exercise of an incentive stock option is not deferred [I.R.C. § 56(b)(3); see I.R.C. § 421]. A taxpayer generally must report any excess of fair market value over option price as alternative minimum taxable income when the taxpayer's rights in the stock are freely transferable, or when those rights are not subject to a substantial risk or forfeiture [I.R.C. §§ 56(b)(3), 83(a); see also S. Rep. 100-445, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. 96, 97 (1988)]. For a discussion of the alternative minimum tax, see Ch. 53, Personal Property Leasing .

[ii] Holding Period

The first requirement for tax deferral is that the employee must not make a disposition of the stock for at least two years from the date the option was granted, and for one year after the transfer of the share to the employee [I.R.C. § 422(a)(1)]. If the employee disposes of the stock during that period, he or she will realize ordinary income in the year of disposition as to any gain, up to the stock's value on the date the option was exercised [I.R.C. § 421(b)].

A relief provision limits the employee's income on a disposition during the holding periods [see I.R.C. § 422(a)(1)] if the selling price of the stock is lower than its value at the time of exercise. The amount includible in his or her gross income and the amount deductible from the corporation's income as compensation attributable to the exercise of the option will be limited to the amount realized in the sale or exchange over the adjusted basis of the share (the option price) [I.R.C. § 422(c)(2); see Rabkin & Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, Ch. 14, Employer and Employee (Matthew Bender)].

If an insolvent individual holds a share of stock acquired by exercise of the option, and the share is subsequently transferred to a trustee, receiver, or any other similar fiduciary under a bankruptcy proceeding or similar insolvency proceeding, neither that transfer nor any other transfer of the share for the benefit of his or her creditors in that proceeding will constitute a "disposition" of the share for purposes of I.R.C. § 422(a)(1) [I.R.C. § 422(c)(3)].

[iii] Employee Status

The second requirement for tax deferral is that the individual must be an employee of the corporation (or its parent, subsidiary, or successor [see I.R.C. § 424(a)]) at all times during the period beginning on the date of the granting of the option, and ending on the day three months before the date the option is exercised [I.R.C. § 422(a)(2)]. If the employee is disabled [see I.R.C. § 22(e)(3) (definition)], that three-month post-employment period will be extended to one year [I.R.C. § 422(c)(6); see P 2 of form].

[iv] Exercise of Option After Death

If an employee holds an unexercised option at death, the exercise of that option by the employee's estate, or by a person who acquires the option by bequest, by inheritance, or by reason of the employee's death, is governed by the same rules that would have applied if the option had been exercised by the decedent, subject to certain exceptions [I.R.C. § 421(c)(1)]. First, the holding period requirement does not apply to stock acquired by an exercise after the employee's death [I.R.C. § 421(c)(1)(A); see I.R.C. §§ 422(a)(1), 423(a)(1)]. Second, the estate or person exercising the option need not do so within three months after the employee's death. Moreover, although the employee must have satisfied the employment requirement at the time of death or within three months before that time, the estate or person exercising the option is not subject to that requirement [I.R.C. § 421(c)(1)(A); see I.R.C. §§ 422(a)(2), 423(a)(2)].

If the option is exercised by a person other than the personal representative or one who acquires the option by bequest, inheritance, or the employee's death, the exercise does not qualify for tax deferral under these rules. For example, if the estate sells the option, the exercise of the option by the buyer does not qualify for tax deferral; if the option is distributed to an heir as a part of the estate, the heir's exercise of the option qualifies for that treatment [Treas. Reg. § 1.421-2(c)(1)]. For that reason, this form prohibits the transfer of the option other than by the laws of descent and distribution on the death of the employee [see P 6 of form].

[c] Requirements for "Incentive Stock Option"

[i] In General

In order to qualify as an "incentive stock option," an option must be for the purchase of stock of a corporation (or its parent or subsidiary), must be granted to an individual for any reason connected with his or her employment by the corporation (or its parent or subsidiary), and must meet all of the following requirements [I.R.C. § 422(b); see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities, § 6H.240 (incentive stock option plan)]:

- It is granted pursuant to a plan that states the aggregate number of shares that may be issued under options and the employees (or class of employees) eligible to receive options, and that is approved by the stockholders of the granting corporation within 12 months before or after the date the plan is adopted [I.R.C. § 422(b)(1)];

- It is granted within 10 years from the date the plan is adopted, or the date the plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier [I.R.C. § 422(b)(2)];

- By its terms it is not exercisable after the expiration of 10 years from the date it is granted [I.R.C. § 422(b)(3); see P 7 of form];

- The option price is not less than the fair market value of the stock [see I.R.C. § 422(c)(7) (determination of "fair market value")] at the time the option is granted [I.R.C. § 422(b)(4); see P 1 of form];

- By its terms it is not transferable by the employee other than by will or the laws of descent and distribution, and is exercisable during the employee's lifetime only by him or her [I.R.C. § 422(b)(5); see P 6 of form]; and

- At the time the option is granted, the employee does not own stock possessing more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the employer corporation (or of its parent or subsidiary) [I.R.C. § 422(b)(6)].

An option does not qualify as an incentive stock option if its terms provide that it will not be treated as an incentive stock option [I.R.C. § 422(b)]. In addition, an option is not treated as an incentive stock option if the aggregate fair market value of stock with respect to which the option is exercisable for the first time by any individual during any calendar year exceeds $100,000. This restriction applies to options exercisable by an individual under all plans of the individual's employer corporation and its parent and subsidiary corporations [I.R.C. § 422(d)(1)]. The fair market value of any stock must be determined as of the time the option to that stock is granted [I.R.C. § 422(d)(3)].

An option that meets all of these requirements will be treated as an incentive stock option even if the employee pays for the stock with stock of the corporation granting the option [I.R.C. § 422(c)(4)(A)], or if the option is subject to any condition that is not inconsistent with these requirements [I.R.C. § 422(c)(4)(C)]. Furthermore, an option meeting all of these requirements will be treated as an incentive stock option even if the employee has a right to receive property that is subject to inclusion in income under I.R.C. § 83 (as property received for performance of services) at the time of the exercise of the option [I.R.C. § 422(c)(4)(B)]. Thus, the corporation may pay an unlimited taxable cash or stock bonus at time of exercise [Colvin, Qualified "Incentive Stock Options" Under the New Law: Requirements and Advantages, 55 J. Tax'n 202, 205 (1981)].

For further discussion of incentive stock option requirements, see J. Rabkin & M. Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, Volume 3, Chapter 14, Employer and Employee, § 14.16 (incentive options).

[ii] Option Price

If a share of stock is transferred pursuant to an employee's exercise of an option that would fail to qualify as an incentive stock option because the option price is less than the fair market value of the stock [see I.R.C. § 422(b)(4) (price requirement); see also [i], above], the stock price requirement will be deemed to be satisfied if there was a good faith attempt to accurately value the stock [I.R.C. § 422(c)(1)]. Whether a good faith attempt has been made is a question of fact.

[iii] Stock Ownership

If, at the time the option is granted, the employee owns more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the employer corporation (or of its parent or subsidiary) [see I.R.C. § 422(b)(6) (ownership limitation); see also [i], above], the option must have a price of 110 percent of fair market value (instead of the usual 100 percent [see I.R.C. § 422(b)(4); P 1 of Form]) and by its own terms must be exercisable within 5 years (instead of the usual 10 years [see I.R.C. § 422(b)(3); P 7 of Form]) of the date of grant [I.R.C. § 422(c)(5); see J. Rabkin & M. Johnson, Federal Income, Gift and Estate Taxation, vol. 3, Ch. 14, Employer and Employee, § 14.16[10]]. An employee is considered to own any stock owned by his or her brothers, sisters, spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants, and to proportionately own any stock owned by a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust of which the employee is a shareholder, partner, or beneficiary [I.R.C. § 424(d)].

[iv] Aggregate Fair Market Value

If a share of stock is transferred pursuant to an employee's exercise of an option that would fail to qualify as an incentive stock option because, under the terms of the plan, the aggregate fair market value of the stock for which incentive stock options are exercisable for the first time by an individual in a calendar year exceeds $100,000 [see I.R.C. § 422(d) (value restriction); see also [i], above], the value requirement will be deemed satisfied if a good faith attempt was made to value the stock [I.R.C. § 422(c)(1); Temp. Treas. Reg. § 14a.422A-1].

[d] Securities Law Requirements

Because an incentive stock option agreement involves the sale of securities by an issuer, the offer and sale of the option must comply with federal and state securities laws. Under federal law, the offer or sale of a security must be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission [see 15 U.S.C. § 77f], unless the security or transaction is exempt [15 U.S.C. §§ 77c, 77d]. Under California law, the offer or sale of a security must be qualified with the Commissioner of Corporations, unless the security or the transaction is exempt from or not subject to qualification [Corp. Code §§ 25110, 25120, 25130]. Compliance is required at the time of the offer or sale of the stock option; neither the exercise of the right to purchase stock nor the issuance of the securities pursuant to the option falls within the definition of "offer" or "sale" requiring separate qualification or exemption [Corp. Code § 25017(e)]. A special exemption applies to incentive stock options when requirements regarding registration of the issuer, stock subject to options, and shareholder approval are met [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.105.8].

If no exemption is available and the offer or sale must be qualified by permit [see Corp. Code § 25113], the Commissioner may refuse to issue a permit unless he or she finds the proposed issuance of the securities to be fair, just, and equitable [Corp. Code § 25140(b)]. The standards relating to a presumption of fairness require a stock option plan to (1) meet criteria similar to the requirements of I.R.C. § 422(b) (definition of "incentive stock option") [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.41]; (2) provide financial statements to security holders at least annually [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.46; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.41(h)]; and (3) limit the shares called for by all outstanding options, under any stock purchase, stock bonus, or similar plan, to 30 percent of the then-outstanding shares of the issuer (excluding shares subject to promotional waivers) unless a percentage higher than 30 percent is approved by at least two thirds of the outstanding securities entitled to vote [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.140.45].

For further discussion of the qualification and exemption of incentive stock options, see Ch. 6I, Issuance of Equity Securities § 6I.240 et seq.

[e] Disclosure Requirements After Exercise of Option

A corporation must file a return for any calendar year in which it transfers to an employee a share of stock pursuant to the employee's exercise of an incentive stock option [I.R.C. § 6039(a)(1)]. In addition, the corporation must give the employee a written statement setting forth the information prescribed by regulations [I.R.C. § 6039(b); see Treas. Reg. § 1.6039-1(a)]. The written statement generally must be given on or before January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which the return is made [I.R.C. § 6039(b); see Treas. Reg. § 1.6039-1(c)(2) (extension available for good cause)]. The statement must include all of the following information [Treas. Reg. § 1.6039-1]:

- The name, address, and employer identification number of the corporation transferring the stock.
- The name, address, and identifying number of the person to whom the share or shares of stock were transferred.
- The name and address of the corporation the stock of which is the subject of the option (if other than the corporation transferring the stock).
- The date the option was granted.
- The date the shares were transferred to the person exercising the option.
- The fair market value of the stock at the time the option was exercised.
- The number of shares of stock transferred pursuant to the option.
- The type of option under which the transferred shares were acquired.
- The total cost of all the shares.

[2] FORM

Incentive Stock Option Agreement

INCENTIVE STOCK OPTION AGREEMENT

This AGREEMENT is made between_____[name of employer] ("Employer"), having a principal place of business at_____[address], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address].

Option Granted

1. Employer grants Employee an option to purchase _____ [number] shares of _____ [common or other type of stock in employer corporation, parent, or subsidiary corporation] at a purchase price of $_____ [specify at least fair market value of stock at time of grant, or 110 percent of fair market value if shareholder owns more than 10 percent of voting power] per share.

Time of Exercise of Option

2. Employee may exercise_____[his or her] option to purchase _____[number] shares at any time, and from time to time until termination of the option as provided in Paragraph 7, below, so long as at all times, beginning with the date of the grant of this option and ending 3 months prior to the date of exercise, or 12 months prior to the date of exercise if the employee is disabled within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 22(e)(3), Employee remains employed. For purposes of this agreement, "employment" means that Employee is employed by Employer, a parent or subsidiary corporation of Employer, or a corporation, or a parent or subsidiary corporation of such a corporation issuing or assuming a stock option in a transaction to which Internal Revenue Code Section 424(a) applies.

Method of Exercise

3. This option shall be exercised by written notice delivered to Employer at its principal place of business, stating the number of shares for which the option is being exercised. The notice must be accompanied by a check [or specify other acceptable methods of payment] for the amount of the purchase price.

Capital Adjustments

4.(a) The existence of this option shall not affect in any way the right or power of Employer or its stockholders to make or authorize any or all adjustments, recapitalizations, reorganizations, or other changes in Employer's capital structure or its business, or any merger or consolidation of Employer or any issue of bonds, debentures, preferred or prior preference stocks ahead of or affecting the common stock or the rights thereof, or the issuance of any securities convertible into any common stock or of any rights, options, or warrants to purchase any common stock, or the dissolution or liquidation of Employer, any sale or transfer of all or any part of its assets or business, or any other corporate act or proceedings of Employer, whether of a similar character or otherwise.

(b) The shares with respect to which this option is granted are shares of the _____ [common or other type of stock] of _____ [employer corporation, parent, or subsidiary corporation] as presently constituted, but if and whenever, prior to the delivery by Employer of all the shares of the stock with respect to which this option is granted, Employer shall effect a subdivision or consolidation of shares or other capital readjustment, the payment of a stock dividend, or other increase or reduction of the number of shares of the stock outstanding without receiving compensation therefor in money, services, or property, the number of shares of stock then remaining subject to this option shall (a) in the event of an increase in the number of outstanding shares, be proportionately increased, and the cash consideration payable per share shall be proportionately reduced; and (b) in the event of a reduction in the number of outstanding shares, be proportionately reduced, and the cash consideration payable per share shall be proportionately increased.

Merger and Consolidation

5.(a) Following the merger of one or more corporations into Employer or any consolidation of Employer and one or more corporations in which Employer is the surviving corporation, the exercise of this option shall apply to the shares of the surviving corporation.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this agreement, this option shall terminate on the dissolution or liquidation of Employer, or on any merger or consolidation in which Employer is not the surviving corporation.

Transfer of Option

6. During Employee's lifetime, this option shall be exercisable only by Employee. This option shall not be transferable by Employee other than by the laws of descent and distribution upon Employee's death. In the event of Employee's death during employment or during the applicable period after termination of employment specified in Paragraph 2, above, Employee's personal representatives may exercise any portion of this option that remains unexercised at the time of Employee's death, provided that any such exercise must be made, if at all, during the period within _____ [specify period set forth in plan, e.g., one year] after Employee's death, and subject to the option termination date specified in Paragraph 7(c).

Termination of Option

7. This option shall terminate on the earliest of the following dates:

(a) The expiration of three months from the date of Employee's termination of employment, as defined in Paragraph 2, above, except for termination due to death or permanent and total disability;

(b) The expiration of 12 months from the date on which Employee's employment, as defined in Paragraph 2, above, is terminated due to permanent and total disability, as defined in Internal Revenue Code Section 22(e)(3); or

(c) _____ [date within 10 years of grant of option, or 5 years if shareholder owns more than 10 percent of voting power].

Rights as Shareholder

8. Employee will not be deemed to be a holder of any shares pursuant to the exercise of this option until Employee pays the option price and a stock certificate is delivered to Employee for those shares. No adjustment shall be made for dividends or other rights for which the record date is prior to the date the stock certificate is delivered.

§ 85.384 Nonstatutory Stock Option--Options Granted at Commencement of Employment Term

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides an option to the employee to purchase a given number of shares of stock of the employer. The option may be exercised in whole or in part at any time during the employment term. For a form providing for the transfer of stock options to the employee every year during the employment term, see § 85.385.

[b] Taxation of Stock Options

The stock option provided in this form is referred to as a nonstatutory stock option because it does not meet the restrictive criteria for the advantageous tax treatment accorded to incentive stock options [see I.R.C. §§ 421-423; see also § 85.383[1][b]]. Nonstatutory stock options are taxed under I.R.C. § 83, which governs the tax treatment of property transferred for the performance of services. Section 83 generally provides that such property is taxable to the employee to the extent of the excess of its fair market value (at the earlier of the time when the employee's rights in the property become transferable or when they are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture) over any amount the employee paid for the property [I.R.C. § 83(a) (fair market value determined without regard to any restriction on property other than one that, by its terms, will never lapse)]. In this context, a person's rights in property are subject to a "substantial risk of forfeiture" if conditioned on the future performance of substantial services, and a person's property rights are transferable only if any transferee's rights in that property would not be subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture [I.R.C. § 83(c)(1), (2)].

Section 83 will apply to a nonstatutory stock option when it is granted, if the option has a readily ascertainable fair market value at that time; otherwise, Section 83 will apply when the option is exercised or otherwise disposed of, even though the fair market value of the option may have become readily ascertainable before that time [I.R.C. § 83(e)(3), (4)

; Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(a)]. In this context, a nonstatutory stock option has a "readily ascertainable value" if it is actively traded on an established market [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(b)(1)]. If the option is not actively traded on an established market, it does not have a readily ascertainable fair market value unless its fair market value can otherwise be measured with reasonable accuracy. Ordinarily, this means that an option not actively traded on an established market does not have a readily ascertainable fair market value when granted unless all of the following conditions exist [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(b)(2)]:

- The option is transferable by the optionee;
- The option is exercisable immediately in full by the optionee;
- The option or the property subject to the option is not subject to any restriction or condition (other than a lien or other condition to secure the payment of the purchase price) that has a significant effect on the fair market value of the option; and
- The fair market value of the option privilege is readily ascertainable.

The "option privilege" in the case of an option to buy stock is the opportunity to benefit during the option's exercise period from any increase in the value of the stock subject to the option during that period, without risking any capital [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(b)(3)]. Whether the value of the option privilege is readily ascertainable, and the amount of that value, are determined by considering (1) whether the value of the stock subject to the option can be ascertained, (2) the probability of any ascertainable value of the stock increasing or decreasing; and (3) the length of the period during which the option can be exercised [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(b)(3)].

Since the stock option provided in this form is not assignable, it does not have a readily ascertainable value at the time it is granted, and the employee therefore will not be taxed at that time [see Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(a), (b)(2)]. However, the employee will have an unconditional right to receive the stock when the option is exercised and will be taxed at that time on the difference between the fair market value of the stock at the time of exercise less the option price [see Treas. Reg. § 1.83-7(a)].

[2] FORM

Nonstatutory Stock Option--Options Granted at Commencement of Employment Term

Nonstatutory Stock Option

The Employer hereby grants Employee an option to purchase [number] shares of common stock [or other type of stock] of Employer at a purchase price of $_____ per share. The number of shares subject to this option shall be proportionately adjusted for any change in the stock structure of Employer because of share dividends, recapitalizations, reorganizations, mergers, or otherwise. The option is not assignable and may only be exercised by Employee during the term of employment under this agreement; provided, however, that in the event that the employment term is terminated by Employer for reasons other than cause against Employee, Employee shall retain the right to exercise any unused portion of the option until [date specified in contract for end of employment term]. The option may be exercised in whole or in part but may only be exercised in lots of [number] shares or more. Employee shall not have any of the rights of, nor be treated as, a shareholder with respect to the shares subject to this option until he has exercised that option and has become the shareholder of record of those shares.

§ 85.385 Nonstatutory Stock Option--Options Granted Each Year During Employment Term--Stock Subject to Restriction

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form grants an employee a nonstatutory stock option during each year of the employment term after the employee has completed a specified number of years of employment. The stock subject to the option contains a restriction requiring resale to the employer in the event of termination of the employment within a predetermined number of years after exercise of the option. For a provision granting a stock option for stock that is not restricted, see § 85.384.

[2] FORM

Nonstatutory Stock Option--Options Granted Each Year During Employment Term--Stock Subject to Restriction

Annual Stock Options

(a) After Employee has been employed with Employer under this agreement for a period of [e.g., two] complete years, Employer agrees to transfer to Employee, at the beginning of each employment year thereafter for as long as Employee remains employed with Employer under this agreement, an option to purchase [number] shares of the common stock of Employer.

(b) The options so transferred shall not be assignable. Each option may be exercised in whole or in part, but may only be exercised during the employment term.

(c) The number of shares subject to each option shall be proportionately adjusted for any change in the stock structure of Employer because of share dividends, recapitalizations, reorganizations, mergers, or otherwise.

(d) The price at which shares may be purchased under each option is the book value of the stock as of the end of the last fiscal year of Employer ending prior to the date that the option was granted, as shown on the balance sheet prepared and certified by the firm of accountants then servicing Employer, with no adjustments in book value for operations of Employer subsequent to that fiscal year.

(e) All shares acquired by exercise of these options shall be subject to the restriction that they be immediately resold to Employer at "book value" if the employment term is terminated for any reason, except for the death or retirement of Employee, within _____ years from the exercise of the option.

(f) For the purposes of resale to the corporation, "book value" is the book value of the shares as of the close of Employer's last fiscal year ending prior to the termination of employment, as shown on Employer's balance sheet as prepared and certified by the firm of accountants then servicing Employer.

§ 85.386 Provision for Continuation of Stock Options Granted Prior to Execution of Employment Agreement

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision stating that any stock options granted prior to execution of an employment agreement will continue in effect. Such options are generally granted under employee stock purchase plans [I.R.C. § 423] or incentive stock option plans [I.R.C. § 422].

Use of this provision may be desirable or necessary in a variety of situations. It may be useful, for example, in the case of an employee who originally was not employed under a written employment contract and who received stock options under the employer's plan, but who is subsequently promoted to a higher management position and given a written contract providing for a different compensation arrangement.

4. Employee's Right to Purchase Interest in Business

28-85 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 85.400

AUTHOR: by Edward Baskauskas, J.D. Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., Practice Consultant

§ 85.400 Provision Giving Employee Right to Purchase Interest in Business After Certain Number of Years With Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form, used in addition to the normal compensation provision, gives the employee the right to purchase an interest in the employer's business. Such a provision is most useful in a small enterprise when the owner agrees with an important employee that after the successful completion of a specified number of years of service the employee will be able to purchase an interest in the business. The offer of future ownership acts as an additional incentive for the employee.

[b] Tax Treatment

The grant of an option such as this form does not constitute the transfer of the property [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(a)(2)]. The interest that the employee will receive upon the exercise of this option will not be taxable income to the employee until it is actually transferred to and substantially vested in him or her, and then only the difference between the fair market value of the interest and the price paid will be so treated [I.R.C. § 83(a); Treas. Reg. § 1.83-1(a)(1)]. The transfer occurs when the employee acquires a beneficial ownership interest in the property [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(a)(1)]; substantial vesting occurs when it is transferable by the employee or not subject to any substantial risk of forfeiture [Treas. Reg. § 1.83-3(b)].

The rules of I.R.C. § 83 do not apply to the transfer of an interest in the business pursuant to the exercise of an option that states a readily ascertainable fair market value at the time the option is granted [I.R.C. § 83(e)(4)]. Although the Treasury Regulations do not provide any guidance to the rules that do apply to such transfers, it would appear that the ordinary income rules would apply and that the transferee would be subject to taxation on the difference between the stated fair market value and any lesser amount paid by the transferee.

[2] FORM

Provision Giving Employee Right to Purchase Interest in Business After Certain Number of Years With Employer

Option to Purchase Interest in Business

(a) After the completion of [e.g., five years] of service in the employ of Employer, Employee shall have the right to purchase a [specify interest, e.g., one-half or 20 percent] interest in the business of Employer for_____[state current fair market value as the price or specify method of determining price, e.g., $_____ or an amount to be agreed on by the parties, and, in the event they cannot agree, the fair market value of that interest as determined by an independent appraiser selected by the parties], payable_____[e.g., as follows: $_____ in cash, plus a promissory note for $_____ secured by _____ (security) or on such terms and conditions as are agreed on by the parties].

(b) Employee may exercise this right by giving notice in writing to Employer within [e.g., 30 days] after the date on which the right accrues.

§ 85.401 Agreement Giving Employee Option to Purchase Business on Employer's Death or Decision to Sell

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a separate agreement that gives an employee the option of purchasing the employer's entire business when the employer dies or desires to sell the business. Since the purchasing capacity of most employees is limited, this type of agreement normally would be used only for smaller businesses that can be owned by one person. If desired, this form can be inserted as a separate provision in an employment agreement.

For discussion of the tax treatment of a transfer of the business interest pursuant to the option contained in this form, see § 85.400[1][b].

[b] Tailoring the Payment Provision

If the employer retires from the business or dies, it is likely that the proceeds from sale of the business would be used primarily to support the employer during retirement or the employer's survivors after his or her death. In such a case an installment payment arrangement might be satisfactory for both parties, since payment of the purchase price of the business could be made over a period of time out of the profits of the business without the need for and additional cost of conventional financing. These considerations and the amount of any necessary down payment should be weighed in advising the client and drawing up a payment plan for the purchase of the business.

[2] FORM

Agreement Giving Employee Option to Purchase Business on Employer's Death or Decision to Sell

OPTION TO PURCHASE EMPLOYER'S BUSINESS

AGREEMENT made this _____ day of_____[date], between_____[name of employer] ("Employer"), having a principal place of business at_____[address], and_____[name of employee] ("Employee"), of_____[address].

Purchase Option

1.(a) In the event of the death or retirement of Employer, or if Employer should desire to sell the business or any substantial portion of its assets, Employee shall have the option of purchasing the business from Employer or Employer's estate, together with its trade name and good will for [if a predetermined cash price or formula for determining price based on net worth, inventory, accounts receivable, or other basis is to be used, specify cash price or formula, or, if amount is to be determined by mutual agreement, insert the following: an amount agreed upon by Employee and Employer or Employer's representative].

[If the employee is to be given a right of first refusal to purchase at the price offered by a prospective purchaser, add the following: (b) Employee shall have a further option to purchase the business of Employer for an amount equal to the amount of any bona fide offer received by Employer or Employer's representative from a third party, and Employee shall have _____ (time, e.g., 30 days) after receiving written notice of such a bona fide offer to exercise this option by giving written notice to Employer or Employer's representative].

Appraisal to Determine Price

2. In the event that the parties cannot agree, the purchase price shall be the fair market value of the business as determined by a panel of three appraisers, one each to be selected by the parties and the third to be selected by the first two. The decision of a majority of the panel shall be final and binding on the parties.

Time for Exercise of Option

3. Employee shall have [specify time, e.g., 30 days] after receiving notice of Employer's decision to retire or sell the business, or, in the event of Employer's death, [time, e.g., 30 days] after the appointment of an executor or administrator, in which to exercise this option by giving notice in writing to Employer or to Employer's executor or administrator.

Terms of Purchase

4. The terms of purchase shall be agreed upon by the parties, except that any portion of the purchase price not paid in cash shall be represented by a promissory note signed by Employee as maker and bearing a rate of interest and number and size of monthly installments as mutually agreed upon by the parties. The promissory note shall be secured by appropriate trust deeds and security agreements on the real and personal property of the business and shall contain a standard acceleration clause making the entire unpaid balance of the note due and payable at the option of the payee on a default of the maker.

Hold Harmless Agreement

5. In conjunction with the sale, Employee shall agree to indemnify and hold Employer or Employer's estate harmless from all claims arising from the conduct of the business by Employee.

Delivery of Bill of Sale

6. Upon the payment by Employee of the cash part of the purchase price and the delivery of a promissory note for the balance as provided herein, together with the indemnity agreement mentioned above, Employer or Employer's executor or administrator shall execute and deliver to Employee a bill of sale for the business and all of its tangible and intangible assets, including its good will and trade name. That bill of sale shall be effective as of the date of transfer if Employer is living or as of the date of Employer's death if not living.

Executed on_____[date] at_____[city], California.

G. Reimbursement of Expenses Incurred by Employee
1. Business Expenses of Employee

28-85 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 85.410

§ 85.410 Provision for Reimbursement of Business Expenses Incurred by Employee; Requirement for Substantiating Records

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employer will reimburse the employee for all reasonable business expenses paid or incurred by the employee. It specifies the type of information that must be entered by the employee in an account book at or near the time each expenditure is made, and the type of documentary evidence that must be obtained by the employee for certain expenditures. The requirements with regard to the account book and documentary evidence are those required by the Treasury Regulations [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T].

For a form providing for monthly lump-sum payments to reimburse the employee's business expenses, see § 85.412.

[b] Employee's Duty to Render Accounts to Employer

An employee's duty to render accounts of his or her business expenses derives not only from income tax law, which is discussed below, or contract provisions like the one set forth in this form, but also from the Labor Code, which requires that an employee must render just accounts of all transactions that arise in the course of the employment. These accountings must be made when demanded by the employer and as often as is reasonable. Moreover, the employee must give prompt notice of everything received for the employer's account without prior demand from the employer this would apply to receipts for business expenses [Lab. Code § 2861]. In addition, an employee who receives anything (such as a business expense receipt, for example) on behalf of the employer must deliver it upon demand [see Lab. Code § 2862].

[c] Employer's Duty to Indemnify Employee for Expenses in Discharging Duties

An employer must indemnify the employee for all that the employee necessarily expends in direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties [Lab. Code § 2802; see Automobile, Truck, Tractor and Implement Co. v. Salladay (1921) 55 Cal. App. 219, 224-227, 203 P. 163] . Any agreement, express or implied, made by an employee to waive the benefits of Lab. Code § 2802 is void [Lab. Code § 2804; see Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-481, 169 P.3d 889 (agreement between employer and employee for reimbursement by method that approximates employee's actual expenses does not relieve employer of statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement and does not preclude employee from suing to recover full reimbursement); see also Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 950-955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 292-296, 189 P.3d 285 (contract provision in which employee releases "any and all" claims against employer does not waive employee's right to indemnity under Lab. Code § 2802(a))].

For further discussion of the employer's duty to reimburse the employee's work-related expenses, including permissible methods of reimbursement of recurring expenses, see § 85.12[3].

[d] "Trade or Business" Expenses

[i] Deductible Expenses

All "ordinary and necessary expenses" that are "paid or incurred" by a business, whether it is a sole proprietorship, a partnership, or a corporation, during the taxable year in carrying on any "trade or business" are deductible [I.R.C. §§ 62, 162; Rev. & Tax. Code § 17201]. I.R.C. § 162 lists some types of trade and business expenses. These include a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including amounts expended for meals and lodging other than amounts which are lavish or extravagant under the circumstances) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made for the continued use, for trade or business purposes, of property in which the taxpayer has no ownership interest. However, the deduction is not limited to the foregoing expenses; any expense that is ordinary and necessary in carrying on any trade or business is deductible [I.R.C. § 162(a); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 17072(a), 17201(a)].

The reimbursement and reporting of business expenses and the federal documentation requirements are discussed in Rabkin & Johnson, Current Legal Forms with Tax Analysis, Ch. 12, Employment and Compensation (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Deductibility of Entertainment Expenses

An expenditure is generally not deductible as an entertainment expense unless the taxpayer establishes that (1) the expenditure was directly related to the active conduct of the taxpayer's trade or business; or (2) in the case of any expenditure preceding or following a substantial and bona fide business discussion (including business meetings at a convention or otherwise), the expenditure was associated with the active conduct of the taxpayer's trade or business [I.R.C. § 274(a)(1)(A); Treas. Reg. § 1.274-2(a)(1)].

The term "entertainment" means any activity of a type generally considered to constitute entertainment, amusement, or recreation, such as entertaining at night clubs, cocktail lounges, theaters, country clubs, golf and athletic clubs, sporting events, and on hunting, fishing, vacation, and similar trips, including any such activity relating solely to the taxpayer or the taxpayer's family [Treas. Reg. § 1.274-2(b)(1)(i)].

An expenditure incurred in regard to an entertainment, recreational, or amusement facility is not deductible unless actively used in the conduct of the taxpayer's trade or business or used by employees [I.R.C. § 274(a)(1)(B)]. The types of facilities involved are yachts, hunting lodges, fishing camps, swimming pools, tennis courts, bowling alleys, and dues or fees paid to any social, athletic, or sporting club or organization. Fees paid to clubs are deductible if the facility is used primarily for the furtherance of the taxpayer's trade or business and the expense is directly related to the active conduct of the trade or business [I.R.C. § 274(a)(2)(C)]. However, dues or other fees paid or incurred for membership in a club organized for business, pleasure, recreation, or other social purpose are not deductible [I.R.C. § 274(a)(3)]. There are also severe limitations on the deductions allowed for entertainment tickets and the cost of retaining a luxury box (for more than one event) at a stadium or sports arena, theater, or similar place of entertainment [see I.R.C. § 274(l)].

There is a general 50-percent limitation on specified entertainment and meal deductions, so that the taxpayer may claim only half of the deduction that could otherwise be claimed for the expenses in question [I.R.C. § 274(n); see I.R.C. § 274(n)(3) (higher percentage deductible by certain individuals who are subject to federal Department of Transportation hours-of-service limits)].

The following entertainment expenses are expressly deductible [I.R.C. § 274(e), (k); Treas. Reg. § 1.274-2(f)]:

- Business meals: food and beverages furnished under circumstances generally considered to be conducive to a business discussion.

- Food and beverages for employees: furnished on the business premises of the taxpayer primarily for his employees.

- Expenses treated as compensation: goods, services, and facilities which are furnished to employees and on which income tax is withheld.

- Reimbursed expenses: provided either that the expenses involve services performed for an employer who has not treated the expenses as wages subject to withholding or that the services are performed for a person other than the employer and the taxpayer receiving the reimbursed expense accounts to such person.

- Recreational, social, or similar activities for employees: other than employees who are officers, shareholders, or other owners or highly compensated employees; an individual owning less than a 10-percent interest in the trade or business is not considered a shareholder or other owner for this purpose. Membership dues for facilities providing these activities, however, are not deductible [see I.R.C. § 274(a)(3)].

- Certain business meetings: expenses directly related to business meetings of the taxpayer's employees, stockholders, agents, or directors.

- Meetings of tax-exempt organizations: expenses related and necessary to a business meeting or convention of a tax-exempt organization, such as a chamber of commerce, real estate board, or board of trade.

- Items available to the public: expenses for goods, services, and facilities made available by the taxpayer to the general public.

- Entertainment sold to customers: expenses for goods or services sold by the taxpayer in a bona fide transaction for adequate consideration.

[iii] Gifts

No deduction is allowed for business gifts made directly or indirectly to any individual if the expense of the gift (including expenditures for other gifts made to the same individual during the same taxable year) exceeds $25. For this purpose, a gift does not include an item that is clearly of an advertising nature and costs no more than $4, or a sign, rack, or promotional material used on the business premises of the recipient [I.R.C. § 274(b); Treas. Reg. § 1.274-3].

[iv] Awards to Employees

A deduction is allowed for employee achievement awards. The maximum allowable deduction is $400 annually per employee for awards other than qualified plan awards, with a cap of $1,600 annually per employee for all awards [I.R.C. § 274(j)(1), (2)].

An "employee achievement award" is an item of tangible personal property that (1) is given to an employee for length of service, after five years of service and not more often to a particular employee than once every succeeding five years [see I.R.C. § 274(j)(4)(B)], or to an employee other than a manager, administrator, clerical employee, or professional employee, for safety achievement (provided not more than 10 percent of eligible employees receive such an award in the taxable year in question) [I.R.C. § 274(j)(4)(C)], (2) is awarded as part of a meaningful presentation, and (3) is awarded under conditions and in circumstances not creating a significant likelihood of the payment of disguised compensation [I.R.C. § 274(j)(3)(A)]. A "qualified plan award" is an employee achievement award given pursuant to an established written plan or program of the employer that does not discriminate in favor of highly compensated employees [see I.R.C. § 414(q) (definition)], provided the average cost of an award (the total cost of awards given under the plan or program in the taxable year in question divided by the total number of recipients) does not exceed $400 [I.R.C. § 274(j)(3)(B)]. If the average cost of an award exceeds $400, the employer may not take any deduction for employee achievement awards.

[v] Travel Expenses

Traveling expenses include travel fares, meals, and lodging, and expenses incident to travel (such as expenses for sample rooms, telephone and telegraph, and public stenographers). Only those traveling expenses that are reasonable and necessary in the conduct of the taxpayer's business and directly attributable to the taxpayer's business are deductible [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(a)]. If a taxpayer travels to a destination and engages in both business and personal activities while there, traveling expenses to and from the destination are deductible only if the trip is "primarily related" to the taxpayer's trade or business. If the trip is primarily personal, the travel expenses to and from the destination are not deductible. However, expenses while at the destination which are properly allocable to the taxpayer's trade or business are deductible [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(b)(1)].

Whether a trip is related primarily to trade or business or is primarily personal in nature depends on the circumstances in each case. The relative amounts of time spent on business activities and on personal activities are important factors in making this determination [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(b)(2)]. When a spouse accompanies the taxpayer on a business trip, the expenses attributable to the spouse's travel are deductible only if it can be adequately shown that the spouse is an employee of the taxpayer, the spouse's travel is for a bona fide business purpose, and the expense would otherwise be deductible by the spouse. The same rules apply to the taxpayer's dependents and any other individuals accompanying the taxpayer [I.R.C. § 274(m)(3); Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(c)]. The deductible expense for travel on a cruise ship is limited to a multiple of the per diem allowance for federal employees (except when the taxpayer travels on the ship in order to attend a convention, seminar, or similar meeting held aboard the ship) [I.R.C. § 274(m)(1); see I.R.C. § 274(h)(2)], and no deduction is allowed for the expenses of travel as a form of education [I.R.C. § 274(m)(2)].

Expenses incurred by a taxpayer in attending a convention or other meeting can be deductible depending on the particular circumstances. The fact that an employee uses vacation or leave time or that attendance is voluntary does not necessarily prohibit allowance of the deduction. Deductibility depends on whether there is a sufficient relation between the taxpayer's trade or business and attendance at the convention or other meeting so that attendance there benefits or advances the interests of that trade or business. If the convention is for political, social, or other purposes unrelated to the taxpayer's trade or business, the expenses are not deductible [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(d)]. No deduction whatsoever is allowed for expenses incurred in attending more than two foreign conventions in any taxable year, and certain other limitations apply [see I.R.C. § 274(h)].

Commute fares are not considered as business expenses and are not deductible [Treas. Reg. § 1.162-2(e)].

[vi] Nondeductible Expenses

Illegal bribes and kickbacks paid to an official or employee of any government or of any agency or instrumentality of any government are not deductible [I.R.C. § 162(b)]. No deduction is allowable for a fine or penalty paid to a government for a violation of any law [I.R.C. § 162(f)]. Amounts paid either as a judgment for damages or in settlement of an alleged violation of the Clayton Act (antitrust laws) are not deductible [I.R.C. § 162(g)].

[e] Substantiation Required

[i] In General

No deduction is allowed for any entertainment, gift, or travel expense unless the taxpayer substantiates, by adequate records or by sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement, (1) the amount of the expenses; (2) the time and place involved, or the date and description of the gift; (3) the business purpose of the expense or other item; and (4) the business relationship to the taxpayer of the persons involved [I.R.C. § 274(d)]. The substantiation requirements are inapplicable to vehicles which, by reason of their nature, are not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes [I.R.C. § 274(d), (i)].

[ii] Substantiation by Adequate Records

In order to substantiate an expense by "adequate records," the taxpayer must maintain an account book, diary, statement of expense, or similar record and documentary evidence which in combination will establish each element required for an expenditure to be deductible. It is not necessary to record information in the account book if it duplicates information reflected on a receipt provided that the account book and receipt complement each other in an orderly manner [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(c)(2)(i)]. A contemporaneous log is not required, but a record of the elements of an expenditure or of a business use of listed property made at or near the time of the expenditure or use, supported by sufficient documentary evidence, has a high degree of credibility not present with respect to a statement prepared later, when there generally is a lack of accurate recall. Thus, the corroborative evidence required to support a statement not made at or near the time of the expenditure or use must have a high degree of probative value to elevate it to the level of credibility reflected by a record made at or near the time of the expenditure or use supported by sufficient documentary evidence. The substantiation requirements of I.R.C. § 274(d) are designed to encourage taxpayers to maintain such records [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(c)(1)].

[iii] Substantiation of Business Purpose

To constitute an adequate record of business purpose, a written statement of the purpose is generally required. However, what is required varies with the circumstances of each case. If the business purpose is evident from the circumstances, a written statement of purpose is not required. For example, a salesperson calling on customers on an established sales route ordinarily will not be required to furnish a written explanation of the business purpose of each expenditure. The same applies to a business meal if the business purpose is evident from the relationship of the participants at the meal and the surrounding circumstances [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(c)(2)(ii)(b)].

[iv] Supporting Documents for Expenses of Seventy-Five Dollars or More Documentary evidence, such as receipts or paid bills, is required for any expenditure for lodging while traveling away from home and any other expenditure of $75 or more (except that documentary evidence for transportation charges will not be required if not readily available). Documentary evidence ordinarily will be considered adequate if it includes sufficient evidence to establish the amount, date, place, and essential character of the expenditure [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(c)(2)(iii)].

[v] Substantiation by "Other Sufficient Evidence"

A taxpayer who fails to establish to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that he or she has substantially complied with the "adequate records" requirement with respect to an element of an expenditure or use must establish that element (1) by the taxpayer's own statement, whether written or oral, containing specific detailed information as to that element, and (2) by other corroborative evidence sufficient to establish that element. If the element to be established is the description of a gift or the cost, amount, time, place, or date of an expenditure or use, the corroborative evidence must be direct evidence, such as a written statement or oral testimony. If the element at issue is either the business relationship to the taxpayer of those entertained, or the business purpose of an expenditure, the corroborative evidence may be circumstantial evidence [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(c)(3)].

[vi] Reporting of Expenses

An employee need not report on his or her personal income tax return business expenses for entertainment, gifts, and travel incurred solely for the benefit of the employer if the employer directly or indirectly pays those business expenses, if the amount paid by the employee is equal to the business expenses, and if the employee is required to, and does, make an adequate accounting to the employer. Making an "adequate accounting" to the employer means that the employee must account for all amounts paid directly or indirectly by the employer and submit to the employer an account book or similar record and any supporting documentary evidence precisely the same as that discussed above [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(f)(2), (4)].

If the amount directly or indirectly paid by the employer for business expenses incurred by an employee is greater than the actual amount of those expenses, the employee must report the excess as income [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(f)(2)(ii)]. If the deductible business expenses incurred by the employee exceed the amount paid directly or indirectly by the employer, and the employee makes an adequate accounting to his or her employer, then the employee must be able to substantiate any deduction for the excess with records and supporting evidence that will substantiate each element of expenditure in the manner required by Temporary Treasury Regulation § 1.274-5T(c) [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(f)(2)(iii)]. If the employee is not required to account to the employer for these business expenses or, though required, has failed to do so, then the employee must complete and attach to his or her federal income tax return IRS Form 2106, "Statement of Employee Business Expenses." That form shows, among other items, the total expenses paid or incurred and a breakdown of the expenses into transportation, meals, lodging away from home, entertainment, gifts, and other business expenses and the portion of the total expenses paid directly or indirectly by the employer. The taxpayer must also maintain an account book or similar record and retain supporting documentary evidence precisely the same as that discussed above, sufficient to substantiate each element of each expenditure [Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T(f)(3)].

[vii] Per Diem and Mileage Allowances

A per diem allowance of the greater of $44 per day or 125 percent of the maximum per diem rate authorized by the federal government in the locality involved, and a mileage allowance of not more than 20.5 cents per mile will be considered as satisfying the substantiation requirements of the Treasury Regulations if the employer reasonably limits payments of travel expenses to those that are ordinary and necessary in the conduct of the trade or business and the elements of time, place, and business purpose of travel are substantiated. If the arrangement is for reimbursement of actual expenses the employer must maintain adequate internal controls, such as requiring the employee's expense account to be verified by a responsible person. If the arrangement is for a flat per diem, the employer's practice must be based on reasonably accurate estimates of travel costs, including the recognition that costs vary in different localities [

Rev. Rul. 80-62, 1980-1 C.B. 63 ; Rev. Rul. 80-203, 1980-2 C.B. 101 ; Rev. Rul. 84-51, 1984-1 C.B. 90].

[2] FORM

Provision for Reimbursement of Business Expenses Incurred by Employee; Requirement for Substantiating Records

Business Expenses

(a) Employee is authorized to incur reasonable business expenses for promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel. Employer will reimburse Employee from time to time for all such business expenses provided that Employee presents to Employer's Comptroller the account book and documents when and as required by this Section.

(b) Employee shall maintain an account book in which Employee shall record, at or near the time each expenditure is made, the amount of the expenditure, the time, place, and designation of the type of the entertainment and travel or other expense, or the date and description of the gift, the business reason for the expenditure and the nature of the business benefit derived or expected to be derived as a result of the expenditure, and the names, occupations, addresses, and other information, sufficient to establish the business relationship to Employer, concerning each person who was entertained or given a gift. Gifts made to any one individual are not to exceed a total of $25 in any taxable year. [If desired, add: Employee's records of expenditures shall be maintained in substantially the form illustrated in the Employer's "expense report form," a copy of which is attached to this agreement.]

(c) Employee shall also obtain and retain documentary evidence (such as receipts or paid bills), which state sufficient information to establish the amount, date, place, and the essential character of the expenditure, for each expenditure of $75 or more (except for transportation charges if not readily available) and for lodging while traveling away from home.

(d) The forgoing account book and documentary evidence shall be delivered to Employer whenever requested by Employer and thereafter shall be retained by Employer.

[OR]

Reimbursement of Business Expenses

Employer will promptly reimburse Employee for all reasonable business expenses incurred by Employee in promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel, provided that:

(1) Each such expenditure is of a nature qualifying it as a proper deduction on the federal and California income tax returns of Employer; and

(2) The Employee furnishes to Employer adequate records and other documentary evidence required by federal and California statutes and regulations issued by the appropriate taxing authorities for the substantiation of each such expenditure as an income tax deduction.

§ 85.411 Provision Specifying That Employee Use Employer's Credit Cards for Business Expenses

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form requires that, insofar as possible, the employee use credit cards to charge all expenses reasonably incurred in promoting the business of the employer. It further provides that any expenses that cannot be charged on credit cards are to be paid by the employee, who will then be reimbursed later by the employer.

Even when a credit card is used, the employer must be able to substantiate its business expense deduction with exactly the same account book entries and documentary evidence that would be necessary if the employee had made the payment with cash or a personal check [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T]. This form includes a requirement that the employee keep an account book and provide substantiating documentary evidence.

For general discussion of business expenses, see § 85.410[1].

[2] FORM

Provision Specifying That Employee Use Employer's Credit Cards for Business Expenses

Use of Credit Cards for Business Expenses

(a) All business expenses reasonably incurred by Employee in promoting the business of Employer, including expenditures for entertainment, gifts, and travel, are to be paid, insofar as possible, by the use of credit cards in the name of Employer which will be furnished to Employee.

(b) Any such reasonable business expenses that cannot be charged on a credit card may be paid by Employee, who will later be reimbursed by Employer.

(c) Employee shall keep an account book with regard to all expenses incurred on behalf of Employer, whether paid for by the use of a credit card or by Employee. Employee shall record in that account book, at or near the time that each expenditure is made, (1) the amount of the expenditure; (2) the time, place, and designation of the type of the entertainment and travel, or other expense, or the date and description of the gift; (3) the business reason for the expenditure and the nature of the business benefit derived or expected to be derived as a result of the expenditure; and (4) the name, occupation, address, and other information sufficient to establish a business relationship to Employer, concerning each person who was entertained or given a gift. Gifts made to any one individual shall not exceed a total of $25 in any taxable year.

(d) Employee shall also obtain documentary evidence (such as a receipt or paid bill), which states sufficient information to establish the amount, date, place, and the essential character of the expenditure, for each expenditure of $75 or more (except for transportation charges if not readily available) and for lodging while traveling away from home.

(e) The foregoing account book and documentary evidence shall be delivered to Employer whenever requested by Employer and shall thereafter be retained by Employer.

§ 85.412 Provision for Payment to Employee of Specified Amount Monthly to Cover Business Expenses

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will be provided with a specified amount of money each month as part of his or her compensation but specifically earmarked for business expenses. This method of expense reimbursement eliminates the need for the employee to document every expense or for the employer to verify that each expense is reasonably necessary.

An employer must indemnify its employees for expenses they necessarily incur in carrying out their employment duties [Lab. Code § 2802(a)]. Periodic lump-sum payments, as called for by this form, are a permissible method of reimbursement, so long as the amount paid is sufficient to provide full reimbursement for actual expenses necessarily incurred. Thus, if the employee can show that the lump sum is less than the actual expenses necessarily incurred, the employer must make up the difference [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 480-481, 169 P.3d 889] . The employer's obligation to reimburse the employee's business expenses is not subject to contractual waiver by the employee [Lab. Code § 2804]. Therefore, any agreement between the employer and employee for reimbursement by lump-sum payments, or by any other method that approximates the employee's actual expenses (e.g., a per diem or mileage reimbursement), does not relieve the employer of the statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement, and such an agreement does not preclude the employee from suing to recover full reimbursement [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-481, 169 P.3d 889] . Accordingly, this form provides that if the employee presents documentation that his or her reasonably necessary business expenses in a particular month exceed the lump-sum payment, the employer will reimburse the excess amount. Otherwise, no documentation of expenses is necessary, and the employee may retain the lump sum even if actual expenses in a particular month are less than the lump sum.

A lump-sum reimbursement of business expenses need not be segregated from the employee's other compensation and may take the form of an increase to the employee's base salary or commissions, so long as the employer provides a method or formula to identify what part of the combined compensation amount is intended to provide expense reimbursement [Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 481-484, 169 P.3d 889] .

For further discussion of the employer's duty to reimburse the employee's work-related expenses, including permissible methods of reimbursement of recurring expenses, see § 85.12[3].

[b] Reporting of Business Expenses When Employee Not Required to Make Adequate Accounting to Employer

This method, in which the employee makes no accounting to the employer with regard to business expenses, removes the burden of proving to the tax authorities that each expenditure was in fact a legitimate business expense from the employer and places it fully on the employee. The employee must submit, as part of his or her individual federal income tax return, Form 2106, "Statement of Employee Business Expenses" [see § 85.410[1][e][vi]].

In addition, the employee must maintain, for examination by the tax authorities, records and a supporting evidence sufficient to establish each element of each expenditure as a properly deductible business expense [see Temp. Treas. Reg. § 1.274-5T].

For a discussion of what records and supporting evidence are required, see § 85.410[1][e].

Provision for Payment to Employee of Specified Amount Monthly to Cover Business Expenses

BUSINESS EXPENSES

(a) It is recognized by the parties to this agreement that Employee, in connection with the services to be performed by Employee for Employer, will be obliged to expend moneys for travel, entertainment of customers, and similar business expenses. In order to reimburse Employee for all business expenses, and as part of Employee's compensation, Employer shall pay Employee the sum of $_____ per month in addition to the compensation herein provided. This additional amount shall be paid on the last day of each month during the term of this agreement.

(b) Employee shall not be required to refund to Employer any expense reimbursement for any month in which the reimbursement exceeds Employee's actual business expenses. Employee shall not be required to maintain records of business expenses in order to receive the reimbursement payments described in Paragraph (a), above.

(c) If Employee's reasonably necessary business expenses in any calendar month exceed the reimbursement payment described in Paragraph (a), above, Employer shall reimburse Employee for the excess amount within 30 days after receipt from Employee of documentation of all of Employee's business expenses for the affected month.

§ 85.413 Provision That "Business Expenses" Are Limited to Those Specified in Employer's Rules

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form limits the meaning of the term "business expenses," as it is used elsewhere in the employment contract, to expenses specified in the employer's rules, regulations, or published policies. It may be used if it is deemed impractical to specify in detail in the employment contract precisely what expenditures are to be considered business expenses. This form enables the employer to modify its rules after execution of the employment contract if changing conditions make it advisable to do so without having to amend the contract.

For discussion of business expenses generally, see § 85.410[1].

[b] Employee's Duty to Comply With Rules Concerning Expenses

In general, an employee has a statutory duty to deliver accountings and receipts for business receipts [see Lab. Code §§ 2861, 2862; see also § 85.410[1][b]]. When these or other duties are spelled out in the employer's rules or policies, the employee has a statutory obligation to substantially comply with those directions unless obedience is impossible, unlawful, or would impose new and unreasonable burdens on the employee [Lab. Code § 2856]. Moreover, an employee is generally obligated to perform in conformance with the usage (i.e., rules) of the employer unless otherwise directed by the employer or unless it is impracticable or manifestly injurious to the employer to do so [see Lab. Code § 2857].

§ 85.420 Provision for Payment by Employer of All Moving Expenses Deductible by Transferred Employee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employer will pay all deductible moving expenses incurred by a transferred employee. It is designed for use in an employment contract when the employer deems it necessary to provide in advance for the possibility that the employee might be transferred to another area and to provide an incentive for the employee to make the move. Therefore, this form is worded, to the extent practicable, in the language of I.R.C. § 217 [see [c], below].

[b] Contents of Form

This form provides that the employer is to pay for moving expenses incurred by the transferred employee and the employee's spouse and minor children. Expenses for which the employee is to be reimbursed are a one way trip to the new residence when the actual move is made, and the costs of moving the employee's household goods and personal effects [see I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)]. The form provides that the employer is to pay moving expenses only if the employee is transferred to a new principal place of work that is at least 50 miles farther from the employee's residence than was the employee's previous principal place of work [see I.R.C. § 217(c)]. If the parties agree that the employer should pay moving expenses when the new workplace is less than 50 miles farther away than the old one, this form can be modified accordingly. In the latter case, however, the employee will have to report the moving expense reimbursement as income without a deducting the moving expenses [see [c], below].

This form provides that only "reasonable" moving expenses are to be paid, because of the requirement of reasonableness imposed by the Internal Revenue Code [I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)].

[c] Employee's Deduction of Moving Expenses

An employee may deduct the moving expenses allowable under the Internal Revenue Code in connection with the commencement of work as an employee at a new principal place of work [I.R.C. § 217(a), (b)]. The expenses are deductible even if they are reimbursed to the employee[I.R.C. § 132(a)(6), (g)], and are not included in the employee's income [I.R.C. § 82].

To be deductible, moving expenses must be "reasonable" [I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)]. The types of moving expenses that are deductible, provided that they are "reasonable" are those incurred for the following:

- Moving household goods and personal effects. Expenses incurred in moving household goods and personal effects from the former residence to the new residence are deductible [I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)(A)]. The costs of packing, crating, and in-transit storage, and insurance for goods and effects are deductible. Expenses for moving goods and effects from a place other than the former residence are allowable only to the extent that they do not exceed the amount that it would have cost to move them from the former residence. The cost of moving the employee's automobile to the new residence is deductible [Rev. Rul. 65-309, 1965-2 C.B. 77].

- Traveling to the new residence. Traveling expenses, costs of lodging, from the former residence to the new place of residence are deductible [I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)(B)].

Other travel expenses that were deductible under former law are no longer deductible. These include house hunting expenses [see former I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)(C)], expenses for meals and lodging for 30 days while occupying temporary quarters in the general location of the new principal place of work [see former I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)(D)], and reasonable incidental expenses incurred in the sale of the former residence and the purchase of the new residence [see former I.R.C. § 217(b)(1)(E), (2)].

Expenses involving any member of the taxpayer's household are allowable provided that the member has both the former residence and the new residence as his or her principal place of abode [I.R.C. § 217(b)(2)].

[d] Minimum Distance of Move

No moving expenses are deductible unless the taxpayer's new principal place of work is (1) at least 50 miles farther from his or her former residence than was his or her former principal place of work; or (2) if the employee had no former principal place of work, at least 50 miles from his or her former residence [I.R.C. § 217(c)(1)]. For purposes of computing this minimum 50-mile distance, the distance used must be the "shortest of the more commonly traveled routes" between the two points involved [I.R.C. § 217(c)].

[e] Minimum Period of Employment After Move Is Made

To deduct moving expenses, the taxpayer must meet one of the following additional requirements: (1) during the 12-month period immediately following arrival in the general location of the new principal place of work, the taxpayer must be a full-time employee for at least 39 weeks [I.R.C. § 217(c)(2)(A)], or (2) during the 24-month period immediately following arrival in the general location of the new principal place of work, the taxpayer must be a full-time employee or must perform services as a self-employed individual on a full-time basis, in that location, for at least 78 weeks, of which at least 39 weeks are during the 12 months immediately following arrival in that location [I.R.C. § 217(c)(2)(B)]. If the minimum employment requirement has not been satisfied before the due date of the employee's income tax return but sufficient time remains so that the requirement can still be fulfilled, the moving expenses can be deducted. However, if the employee ultimately fails to satisfy this requirement, then the amount of the moving expenses taken as a deduction must be included in the employee's gross income on the tax return for the following year [I.R.C. § 217(d)(2)].

The 39-week requirement does not apply if the employee is unable to satisfy it because of death, disability, discharge from employment other than for willful misconduct, or transfer by the employer for the benefit of the employer. In order for the discharge or transfer exceptions to apply, the full-time employment originally obtained by the employee must have been such that the employee could reasonably have expected to satisfy the 39-week requirement [I.R.C. § 217(d)(1)].

Moving Expenses

In the event that Employee during the term of this agreement is transferred by Employer to a new principal place of work at least 50 miles farther from the residence of Employee than is_____[his or her] then principal place of work, Employer will reimburse Employee for all reasonable expenses incurred for the following:

(a) Moving the household goods and personal effects of Employee, Employee's spouse, and Employee's minor children from Employee's then residence to the new place of residence selected by Employee.

(b) Traveling, including lodging, for a single one-way trip by Employee, Employee's spouse, and Employee's minor children from Employee's prior residence to the new place of residence selected by Employee.

§ 85.421 Provision for Payment of Moving Expenses Only if Authorized in Advance by Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that a transferred employee's moving expenses will be paid only if authorized in advance by the employer. It is intended for use when the employer does not wish to specify in the employment contract what moving expenses will be paid if the employee is transferred, but instead wants it understood that the employer will pay only those moving expenses that it authorizes in writing in advance in accordance with its then current policy.

For discussion of the tax treatment of moving expenses, see § 85.420[1]. For discussion of the applicability of an employer's rules and policies, see § 85.274[1][c].

[b] Advantages of Form to Employer

From the employer's point of view, this type of provision has four advantages over one that specifies precisely what moving expenses are to be paid. First, the employer's policy regarding what moving expenses are to be paid by the employer can be readily changed from time to time. Second, employees transferred at the same time can each be paid the same relative amount of moving expenses; this would not be true if each had an employment contract with different provisions for moving expenses. Third, requiring advance written authorization for moving expenses enables the employer to keep a stricter control over the moving expenses that are to be paid. Finally, this provision avoids disputes between the employer and the employee as to what is "reasonable," since the employee can be informed in writing shortly before a particular move is to be made regarding exactly what the employer will pay in connection with that move.

In the event that during the term of this agreement Employee is transferred by Employer to a new principal place of work, and that Employee decides to move as a result of the transfer, Employer shall be liable only for those moving or traveling expenses that are duly authorized in advance in a writing given to Employee by Employer in accordance with the regular policy of Employer at that time.

§ 85.422 Provision for Payment of Specified Amount for Moving Expenses of New Employee Moving to Initial Place of Employment

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form specifies the exact amount that an employer will pay to cover the moving expenses incurred by a new employee who is moving to the initial place of employment. In determining the amount that should be specified in the form, consideration should be given to the types of moving expenses discussed in § 85.420[1].

Instead of specifying the exact amount of moving expenses that the employer will advance, the employer may desire to specify the categories of moving expenses that it will pay. In that case, § 85.420 may be modified to apply to a new employee. When this form is used in an employment contract, the parties should also consider whether to include another provision governing later moves caused by transfers made by the employer [see §§ 85.420, 85.421].

This form also includes a provision requiring the employee to repay a portion of the moving expenses if he or she resigns prior to the end of the contract.

For discussion of the tax treatment of moving expenses, see § 85.420[1].

§ 85.430 Provision Assigning Employee's Inventions and Intellectual Property to Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision specifying the circumstances under which an employee must assign to the employer the employee's rights to any inventions or intellectual property developed during the term of employment. The form is designed to conform to the requirements of Lab. Code § 2870 setting forth the limitations for a valid provision of this type [see discussion under "Contracts to Assign Inventions and Patents," below].

The form includes the notice required by Lab. Code § 2872 to the effect that the assignment provision does not apply to an invention that qualifies fully under the provisions of Lab. Code § 2870 [see [e], below]. Such a written notice is required to be given to the employee at the time the agreement is made [Lab. Code § 2872].

This form may be easily adapted for use as a stand-alone agreement assigning the rights to inventions and intellectual property developed by the employee. Many employers, especially in high-technology industries, routinely require such stand-alone assignments of all their employees, including employees who do not have written employment contracts.

[b] Rights of Employee-Inventor in Absence of Contract

In the absence of any agreement, a person employed to make an invention must assign to the employer any patent obtained [Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 658, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421] . The reason is that such an employee has only produced what he or she was hired to invent. However, this rule is limited strictly to one employed to invent [see [c], below].

An employer who conceives the general idea of the invention and then has an employee use manual dexterity and even inventive skill in working out the mechanical details of the invention is entitled to the patent, since the employee was the mere instrument through whom the employer realized the idea. To deprive the employer of the exclusive right in the perfected invention, the employee must contribute a new method or arrangement that in itself is a complete invention [Famous Players-Lasky Corp. v. Ewing (1920) 49 Cal. App. 676, 679, 680, 194 P. 65] .

[c] Rights of Employee Not Hired to Invent

Any employee, other than one hired to invent, is entitled to his or her own invention. The basis for this rule is the patent statute itself, which provides that "whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor" [35 U.S.C. § 101]. Public policy favors the exercise by an individual of his or her inventive powers and seeks to stimulate inventiveness by granting the inventor the enjoyment of the fruits of his or her endeavors. The law considers an invention to be the property of the one who conceived, developed, and perfected it. The inventor's rights in the invention will be fully protected unless they have been contracted away. Thus, for example, a company that employed a skilled worker to devise and make improvements in its manufacturing operations was not entitled to a conveyance of patents obtained for inventions made while the employee was thus employed without any express agreement to that effect [Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 658, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421] . This rule as it relates to inventions discovered on the job is limited by the "shop right" of the employer [see [d], below].

[d] "Shop Right" of Employer in Absence of Agreement

Although the existence of the employer-employee relationship is not by itself sufficient to entitle the employer to partake of the employee's inventive genius, when an employee during the hours of employment, working with the employer's tools and equipment, conceives and perfects an invention, he or she must give the employer a nonexclusive, royalty-free right to make use of the invention. Such a right is called a "shop right." The shop right arises out of equitable principles and is a license implied from the facts when the facts warrant the implication. When the employee used the employer's time, facilities, and materials, the employer is in equity entitled to use that which embodies its own property and to duplicate it royalty-free as often as it may desire in its own business [Treu v. Garrett Corp. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436, 70 Cal. Rptr. 284 ; Aero Bolt & Screw Co. v. Iaia (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 728, 736-737, 5 Cal. Rptr. 53] .

[e] Contracts to Assign Inventions and Patents

Since the shop right entitles the employer to only a nonexclusive right, it is advisable from the employer's point of view to provide for outright assignment of the employee's invention. In California, an employment contract may contain a provision requiring the employee to assign to the employer the rights to inventions developed by employees under certain circumstances. Specifically, an assignment provision is enforceable only if the invention is made with the employer's assets, supplies, facilities, equipment, trade secret information, or time, relates, at the time that it is conceived or reduced to practice, to the employer's business, including actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of the employer, or results from work performed for the employer by the employee. Thus, if an employee uses only his or her own time, resources, and ideas, and the invention is completely unrelated to the employer's business, any provision in an employment contract requiring assignment of the invention is void as applied to that invention [see Lab. Code § 2870].

Furthermore, an employer is prohibited from requiring, as a condition of employment, a contract provision that would be void under these circumstances [Lab. Code § 2871]. Finally, if an employment agreement contains a provision requiring the employee to assign or offer to assign any of his or her rights in any invention to the employer, the employer must also provide written notification to the employee that the agreement does not apply to inventions developed outside the scope defined above. The notification must be given at the time the employment agreement is made [Lab. Code § 2872].

[2] FORM

Provision Assigning Employee's Inventions and Intellectual Property to Employer

Inventions and Patents

(a) Employee agrees that any inventions made by Employee, solely or jointly with others, during the term of this contract, that are made with Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, trade secrets, or time; or that relate, at the time of conception or of reduction to practice, to the business of Employer or Employer's actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development; or that result from any work performed by Employee for Employer, shall belong to Employer, and promises to assign the rights to all such inventions to Employer.

(b) For purposes of this provision, "inventions" includes anything that may be patentable or copyrightable, as well as any discovery, development, design, formula, improvement, invention, software program, process, technique, trade secret, and any other form of information that derives independent economic value from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure, whether or not registrable or protectable under patent laws, copyright laws, or other laws. The "rights" to any such invention include patents, copyrights, trademarks, service marks, and any other proprietary rights associated with the invention.

(c) Employee also agrees that Employer shall have the right to keep any such inventions as trade secrets, if Employer chooses.

(d) Employee agrees to assign to Employer all rights in any other inventions if Employer is required to grant those rights to the United States Government or any agency thereof.

(e) This Section shall not apply to assign to Employer any of Employee's rights in any invention that Employee develops entirely on_____[his or her] own time without using Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information, except for inventions that either (1) relate, at the time that the invention is conceived or reduced to practice, to Employer's business or to actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of Employer; or (2) result from any work performed by Employee for Employer.

(f) In order to permit Employer to claim rights to which it may be entitled, Employee agrees to disclose to Employer in confidence all inventions that Employee makes during the course of_____[his or her] employment and all patent applications filed by Employee within a year after termination of_____[his or her] employment.

(g) Employee shall assist Employer in obtaining and enforcing patents and copyrights on all inventions, in the United States and in all foreign countries, and shall execute all documents and do all things necessary to obtain letters patent or copyright protection, to vest Employer with full and extensive titles thereto, and to protect the same against infringement by others. Employee's obligation to assist Employer in obtaining and enforcing such rights will continue after the termination of Employee's employment, and for such assistance rendered after the termination of employment Employer will compensate Employee at the rate of $_____ per [specify, e.g., hour or day] for time actually spent by Employee at Employer's request.

(h) For the purposes of this agreement, an invention is deemed to have been made during the period of Employee's employment if the invention was conceived or first actually reduced to practice during that period, and Employee agrees that any patent application filed within a year after termination of_____[his or her] employment hereunder shall be presumed to relate to an invention made during the term of Employee's employment unless Employee can provide evidence to the contrary.

§ 85.431 Provisions for Payment to Employee of Royalties Received

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form sets forth two alternative provisions for payment to an employee of royalties received on inventions made by the employee under an employment contract. It is designed to be used in conjunction with a provision (such as § 85.430) that gives the employer the exclusive property right in inventions conceived by the employee without providing for royalties. For discussion of the respective rights of the employer and the employee in inventions conceived by the employee, see § 85.430[1].

[2] FORM

Provisions for Payment to Employee of Royalties Received

Payment of Royalties

[First alternative; use to specify a percentage royalty:]

Employer agrees to share with Employee _____ percent of all royalties that Employer collects for licensing any patents assigned hereunder if those royalties are based on licensing of the patent itself without other patents or know-how. Employer shall have the rights, in its sole discretion, to grant licenses under the patent, such as cross-licenses or royalty-free licenses, and to refuse to grant licenses or sue infringers for infringement.

[OR]

[Second alternative; use to specify varying percentage royalties:]

(a) If Employer licenses others to use any inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries conceived by Employee, Employer shall pay to Employee a portion of the money royalties received as follows: [e.g., 40] percent of the first $[specify figure, e.g., $2,000] or any part thereof received in any one calendar year; [e.g., 30] percent of the next $[specify figure, e.g., $2,000] or any part thereof received in any one calendar year; and [e.g., 20] percent of all further sums collected in any one calendar year.

(b) All questions of whether, when, how, and to whom licenses shall be granted shall be determined in the sole discretion of Employer. If the invention was conceived by various employees of Employer or if the licenses granted involve other inventions in addition to that of Employee, the royalties received shall be apportioned according to the sole discretion of Employer. In either case, Employee shall receive the above percentages only on the proportion allocated to_____[his or her] invention or share of an invention.

§ 85.432 Provision Giving Employer Perpetual Royalty-Free License to Use Employee's Invention

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision giving the employer a perpetual royalty-free license to use the employee's invention while the employee retains actual ownership of the invention. It is designed to give the employer a "shop right" in any invention conceived by the employee.

This form should not be used when the employee is hired as an inventor. In that case, the employer has a shop right or non-exclusive license by operation of law [see § 85.430[1][d]], and the use of § 85.430 is suggested if outright assignment of patent rights is desired. Conversely, this form should be used when the employee is not hired as an inventor. In that case, the employee is entitled to his or her own invention and the grant of a license by such an employee would be appropriate [for discussion, see § 85.430[1][c]].

For a discussion of the employer's shop right and of the respective rights of the employer and the employee in inventions conceived by the employee, see § 85.430[1].

[2] FORM

Provision Giving Employer Perpetual Royalty-Free License to Use Employee's Invention

License of Invention by Employee to Employer

(a) All inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries conceived by Employee during the term of this agreement, which pertain or relate to the business of Employer or to any experimental work carried on by Employer, shall be the property of Employee. However, from time to time, Employee will promptly fully inform and disclose to Employer all such inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries.

(b) Employee hereby grants to Employer a perpetual royalty-free license to make, use, and sell products, processes, and services derived from all such inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries.

(c) This license shall be exclusive for the term of this agreement and for any additional period that Employee is employed by Employer or any subsidiary or successor of Employer; thereafter, this license shall be nonexclusive.

(d) Employer and Employee shall each execute all documents and do all things necessary to preserve their respective rights.

§ 85.433 Provision Excluding Specified Inventions From Coverage of Employment Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form contains two alternative provisions under which either specified inventions or specified types of inventions made by the employee are excluded from coverage under the employment agreement. It is designed for use when, for example, a prospective employee is the owner of an invention which he or she is developing or for which a patent is pending or has been granted and desires to ensure that the invention will be excluded from any terms of the agreement that might otherwise cloud the employee's rights to the invention. This form can be used in conjunction with either § 85.430 or 85.432.

For a discussion of the respective rights of the employer and the employee in inventions conceived by the employee, see § 85.430[1].

[b] Drafting Considerations

When this form is used, careful attention should be given to the description of the excluded inventions. This description should be clear, unambiguous, and as specific as possible. If a patent is not pending or has not been granted for the invention involved, it is generally best to use an attached schedule, as suggested in this form. The attached schedule can then include a complete description and detailed plans, drawings, or photographs.

[2] FORM

Exclusion of Specified Inventions

[First alternative; use to exclude specific inventions:]

(a)_____[describe invention, e.g., The invention by Employee of an improvement to aperture card mounting systems for commercial microfilming machines, for which an application for a United States patent was filed by Employee with the United States Patent Office on _____ [date], and bearing Serial No. _____, or The invention by Employee of an auxiliary transistor with variable power, for which Patent No. _____was granted to Employee on_____[date], or All inventions described in Schedule "A," which is attached to and made a part of this agreement] is [or are] specifically excluded from the terms of this contract.

(b) Any invention excluded hereunder is, and shall continue to be, the exclusive property of Employee, and Employer shall have no rights of any nature whatsoever therein.

[Second alternative; use to exclude specified types of inventions described generally:]

(a) All inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries made by Employee prior to this agreement or during the term of this agreement relating to [e.g., microfilm information retrieval systems or environmental and meteorological data systems] are specifically excluded from the terms of this contract.

(b) All excluded inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries shall be conclusively presumed by the parties to this contract to be the exclusive property of Employee, and Employer shall have no rights of any nature whatsoever regarding them.

§ 85.440 Provision Maintaining Confidentiality of Trade Secrets

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision restricting the employee's use of trade secrets owned by the employer. Specifically, it describes the employer's trade secrets in general terms and includes a promise on the part of the employee not to disclose, misuse, or misappropriate them. This type of provision is commonly used in conjunction with another provision prohibiting the employee from engaging in unfair competition with the proprietor of the trade secret, whether during or after the term of the contemplated employment [see § 85.471].

The restrictive covenant includes promises on the part of the employee not to disclose, misappropriate, or misuse the employer's trade secrets other than in the course of his or her employment, whether during the term of the employment agreement or at any time thereafter. The use of a restriction against disclosure, misappropriation, or misuse is recommended because, even though an employer can obtain injunctive and other relief against a former employee who uses trade secrets acquired during the employment relation to the employer's prejudice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17202-17209; Civ. Code §§ 3426.2, 3426.3], a restrictive covenant such as this one provides a firm written basis for traditional contract remedies [see [d][iii], below] and informs the employee of his or her obligation not to divulge the employer's trade secrets. The legality of this covenant as it applies to the employee's post-employment activities is discussed under [d][iv], below.

This form includes a clause stating that all books, files, records, and the like that the employee will use during the course of the employment are the exclusive property of the employer. For an analogous provision and pertinent comment, see § 85.442.

This form may be adapted for use as a stand-alone agreement to maintain the confidentiality of the employer's proprietary information. Such a stand-alone confidentiality agreement may be used for employees who do not have written employment contracts.

[b] Definition of "Trade Secret"

For common law purposes, California has adopted the broad definition of "trade secret" set forth in the Restatement of Torts [see Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)]. Under this definition, a trade secret may consist of any formula, pattern, device, or compilation of information that is used in the employer's business and that gives the employer an advantage over competitors who do not know it or use it [Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1963) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

For the purposes of an action for misappropriation under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], a "trade secret" is information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use and is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Civ. Code § 3426.1(d); see Penal Code § 499c(a)(9) (criminal law definition of trade secret)]. For further discussion of the application of the Act, see [d][i], below.

Secrecy is a necessary element of a trade secret; to qualify as a trade secret, the information involved must be difficult for an outsider to acquire. Matters of public or general knowledge in a particular industry cannot be trade secrets. Information that is completely disclosed by a manufactured product cannot be a trade secret. A trade secret generally is known only in the particular business in which it is used. Without losing trade secret protection, an employer can communicate the trade secret to employees or to others pledged to secrecy. Others may know it independently, however, such as another who has discovered the same process but is also keeping it secret [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-290, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)].

The mere agreement of the parties that something is a trade secret does not make it a protectable interest of the employer if it is not actually a trade secret [see Ingrassia v. Bailey (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123-124, 341 P.2d 370] . Moreover, the mere fact that skilled employees are persuaded to leave one employer to work for another does not necessarily provide proof that the use of their skills by the new employer constitutes use of any of their former employer's trade secrets [see Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 355-354, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921] .

Under certain circumstances, customer lists may be considered trade secrets. For discussion and a provision designed to protect employers from unfair competition resulting from the use of customer lists, see § 85.472.

[c] Factors Used in Determining Trade Secret Status

The factors to be considered in determining whether particular information is a trade secret of the employer are [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-290, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)]:

- The extent to which the information is known outside of the employer's business.
- The extent to which it is known by employees and others involved in the employer's business.
- The measures taken by the employer to guard the secrecy of the information.

- The value of the information to the employer and the employer's competitors.
- The effort and money expended in developing the information.
- The relative ease or difficulty with which the information could be properly acquired by others.

[d] Protection of Trade Secrets

[i] In General

The foundation of trade secret protection law is Justice Holmes's statement that a party has the right to keep the work it has done, or paid for doing, to itself and that others may not steal that work [see Board of Trade v. Christie Grain & Stock Co. (1905) 198 U.S. 236, 250, 25 S. Ct. 637, 49 L. Ed. 1031] . A trade secret is given legal protection if it is acquired and used under a contractual or fiduciary relationship between the proprietor and the user [see Irizarry y Puente v. President & Fellows of Harvard College (1st Cir. [Mass.] 1957) 248 F.2d 799, 802] . Contractually obligated secrecy is a key method of protecting a trade secret because it provides a remedy without the automatic public disclosure that is required to patent or copyright an invention or process.

Trade secret law protects the trade secret proprietor against any unauthorized disclosure of confidential information by the user to third parties whom the proprietor does not wish to know that information. However, if an individual discovers a trade secret either independently or by "reverse engineering" applied to a product or invention that has been disseminated to the public, that person has not breached any contractual or fiduciary relationship and would not be liable under trade secret law [see Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)]. The confidentiality aspect of trade secret protection is significantly different from the protection afforded by copyright. For discussion of copyright law generally, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights , Parts A and C.

[ii] California Action for Misappropriation

Under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], an actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret may be enjoined or otherwise limited [see Civ. Code § 3426.2] and damages can be recovered for the misappropriation [see Civ. Code § 3426.3]. The Act does not supersede any other statute relating to the misappropriation of a trade secret or any other statute regulating trade secrets [Civ. Code § 3426.7(a)], nor does it affect contractual, civil, or criminal remedies [see Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)]. For the definition of a "trade secret" for purposes of the Act, see [b], above.

"Misappropriation" includes improper acquisition and improper acquisition of a trade secret, by one who knows, or has reason to know, that the trade secret was acquired by improper means [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)]. The term also covers the improper disclosure or use of the trade secret. Thus, misappropriation is the disclosure or use of another person's trade secret without that person's consent by one who used improper means to acquire knowledge of the secret [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)(A)], or by one who knew (at the time of the disclosure) that his or her knowledge of the secret was derived by improper means or from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)(B)(i), (iii)] or was acquired in breach of a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)(B)(ii)]. "Misappropriation" also includes disclosure or use of a trade secret by a person who knew that it was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)(C)].

"Improper means" includes theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a duty to maintain secrecy. The term also includes electronic or other means of espionage. However, reverse engineering or independent derivation alone are not improper means [Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)].

An action for misappropriation under the Act must be brought within three years after the misappropriation is discovered or should have been discovered [see Civ. Code § 3426.6]. As a prerequisite to discovery in an action for misappropriation under the Act, the complaining party must identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity [Code Civ. Proc. § 2019(d) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210, operative July 1, 2005)]. However, the court is required to take reasonable measures to preserve its secrecy [see Civ. Code § 3426.5].

[iii] Contract Actions

The misappropriation or misuse of trade secrets that are protected by contract can also be remedied by means of traditional contract actions. The Uniform Trade Secrets Act specifically provides that it does not affect contractual remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(1)]. Under the common law definition, a "trade secret" is any formula, device, or compilation of information used in one's business which gives that person an opportunity to obtain an advantage over competitors who do not know or use it [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b)(1939)]. Since this definition is broader than that set forth in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act and since the plaintiff in a common law contract action may not have to make the type of disclosure required under the Act, a common law contract action may be more desirable.

[iv] Action for Unfair Competition From Unauthorized Use of Trade Secret

Trade secrets are the property of the employer and cannot be used by the employee for his or her own benefit [American Loan Corp. v. California Commercial Corp. (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 515, 522, 27 Cal. Rptr. 243] . The use by a former employee to the former employer's prejudice of trade secrets acquired during the prior employment is unfair competition [Peerless Oakland Laundry Co. v. Hickman (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 556, 559, 23 Cal. Rptr. 105] .

"Unfair competition" is any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. The criminal law definition of trade secret includes information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic benefit from its disclosure or use and is subject to the efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Penal Code § 499c(a)(9); see Civ. Code § 3426.1(d) ("trade secret" defined under Uniform Trade Secrets Act (Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.)].

A person who commits unfair competition by misusing or misappropriating a trade secret may be enjoined from continuing to do so [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204; Civ. Code § 3420 et seq.; see Peerless Oakland Laundry Co. v. Hickman (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 556, 559, 23 Cal. Rptr. 105 (restraining order issued)]. That person can also be made liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206]. The fact that the former employer is entitled to injunctive relief does not automatically give it the additional right to damages. However, the former employee will be ordered to account for the profits and it is generally held that damages will be awarded to the former employer both for the profits realized by the former employee and for any loss suffered by the former employer [Western Electro-Plating Co. v. Henness (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 564, 570, 16 Cal. Rptr. 691] .

For a provision under which the employee promises not to engage in acts of unfair competition after termination of his or her employment with respect to the employer's trade secrets, and discussion of the legality and effect of such a provision, see § 85.471. For a provision prohibiting solicitation of the employer's customers after termination of employment and relevant discussion, see § 85.472.

The former employee who misappropriates a former employer's trade secrets can also be subjected to any other remedies provided under California law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205]. The latter include damages for breach of any contractual provision against unauthorized use or disclosure of a trade secret [see [iii], above].

These remedies for unfair competition are available in addition to those available under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act since the Act does not affect other civil remedies that are not based upon misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(2)], or criminal remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(3)].

In the absence of an enforceable noncompetition agreement or any actual or threatened misappropriation of trade secrets, a California court will not apply the "doctrine of inevitable disclosure" to enjoin a former employee from working for a competing employer. As applied in some jurisdictions, the "doctrine of inevitable disclosure" allows a plaintiff to establish a claim of trade secret misappropriation by demonstrating that the defendant's new employment will inevitably lead him or her to rely on the plaintiff's trade secrets [see, e.g., PepsiCo, Inc. v. Redmond (7th Cir. 1995) 54 F.3d 1262, 1269] . In such a case, the result is not merely an injunction against the use of trade secrets, but an injunction restricting employment. However, the doctrine of inevitable disclosure has been rejected in California because it creates a de facto covenant not to compete and runs counter to the strong California public policy favoring employee mobility [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1458-1464, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 (general prohibition against noncompetition agreements)].

[2] FORM

Provision Maintaining Confidentiality of Trade Secrets

Restrictions on Use of Trade Secrets and Proprietary Information

(a) During the term of employment under this agreement, Employee will have access to and become acquainted with various proprietary information of Employer, including discoveries, developments, designs, formulas, patterns, devices, secret inventions, processes, software programs, technical data, customer and supplier lists, and compilations of information, records, and specifications, and other matters constituting trade secrets as defined under California Civil Code Section 3426.1, all of which are owned by Employer and regularly used in the operation of Employer's business. Employee may also have access to the confidential information of third parties that has been provided to Employer subject to a Confidential Disclosure Agreement. The information described in this section constitutes "Proprietary Information."

(b) All proprietary information and all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, computer files, computer records, computer programs, and similar items relating to the business of Employer, whether they are prepared by Employee or come into Employee's possession in any other way and whether or not they contain or constitute trade secrets owned by Employer, are and shall remain the exclusive property of Employer and shall not be removed from the premises of Employer, or reproduced or distributed in any manner, under any circumstances whatsoever without the prior written consent of Employer.

(c) Employee promises and agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose any proprietary information or trade secrets described herein, directly or indirectly, or use them in any way, either during the term of this agreement or at any time thereafter, except as required in the course of_____[his or her] employment.

§ 85.441 Provision Designating Particular Information as Trade Secret

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision designating certain and specifically described information as a trade secret. It includes a promise on the part of the employee not to disclose or misuse trade secrets. It is intended for inclusion in an employment agreement and may be used instead of the general provision restricting use of trade secrets set forth in § 85.440 if specificity in describing the trade secret will suffice.

For discussion of trade secrets generally, see § 85.440[1]. Although an express contractual provision regarding trade secrets is not necessary to enable the employer to obtain injunctive relief for wrongful use by a former employee of a trade secret [see § 85.440[1]], the inclusion in the employment contract of a specific provision stating that a certain process, formula, pattern, device, or other compilation of information of the employer is a trade secret can assist in any subsequent litigation. It can be used to prove that the particular compilation of information was in fact a trade secret, because one of the factors to be considered in determining whether particular information is a trade secret is the extent of the measures taken by the employer to guard the secrecy of the information [Restatement of Torts, § 757, Comment (b)(1939); see also Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 292, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198] . However, the agreement of the parties that something is a trade secret does not make it a protectable interest of the employer if it is not actually a trade secret [see Ingrassia v. Bailey (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123-124, 341 P.2d 370] .

[2] FORM

Provision Designating Particular Information as Trade Secret

Specification of Trade Secrets

(a) It is contemplated that during the course of_____[his or her] employment, Employee will be engaged in work involving Employer's [e.g., process for precision microfilming of engineering drawings], known as [e.g., Black Company's Process No. X-213], and will have access to and become acquainted with [e.g., experiments, developments, formulas, patterns, devices, secret inventions, processes, compilations of information, records, and specifications] relating to that [e.g., process].

(b) All of the data described in subsection (a), above, as well as the name and existence of [e.g., the process] are trade secrets that are wholly owned and controlled by Employer.

§ 85.442 Ownership of Customer Records

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision expressly stating that all records and books relating to customers of the employer and/or transactions encountered in the conduct of the employment are the exclusive property of the employer. Since this type of provision is likely to be part of the employer's attempt to forestall the employee from soliciting its customers after termination of the employer-employee relationship, this form should be used in conjunction with*§ 85.472*. For general discussion of solicitation of the employer's customers by an employee after termination of employment, see § 85.472[1][c].

The inclusion of this form can be helpful from the employer's point of view if the matter of customer solicitation after termination of the employment reaches the litigation stage. Because violation of an express contractual provision identifying tangible items as the property of the employer has a bearing on the ultimate court decision, it creates an extraordinary duty on the part of the employee not to misappropriate or misuse the employer's customer data [see Southern California Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 446, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 (failure to return customer list as required by contract called "trade secret larceny" and violation of extraordinary duty imposed by contract)]. For discussion of the remedies an employer has against an employee for "trade secret larceny," see § 85.440[1][d].

[b] Duty of Employee

Everything that an employee acquires by virtue of his or her employment (such as customer record books) belongs to the employer [Lab. Code § 2860]. An employee must account for all transactions made during the course of the employment [Lab. Code § 2861] and deliver anything received (such as signed receipts, orders, contracts, credit information, economic or demographic data, and the like) when the employer demands it [Lab. Code § 2862].

[c] Reimbursement for Employee-Purchased Record Supplies

Because an employee may purchase a notebook or similar item and enter customer information (or other information related to the transactions involved) in it, this provision specifically makes those items property of the employer even though they may have been purchased by the employee. In order to clearly establish the employer's exclusive ownership, and also to satisfy the statutory reimbursement requirement [see Lab. Code § 2802], the last sentence of the form provides that the employer will reimburse the employee for any such expenditures.

[2] FORM

Ownership of Customer Records

Ownership of Books, Records, and Papers

(a) All records of the accounts of customers, route books, and any records, books, and programs, whether maintained in physical or electronic media, relating in any manner to the customers of Employer [or the conduct of Employee's employment, including without limitation _____ (specify, e.g., credit reports or memoranda, reports of transactions made to Employer, demographic or economic data discovered by Employee during the term of this contract, or sourcing lists of potential employees developed by Employee)], whether prepared by Employee or otherwise coming into Employee's possession, shall be the exclusive property of Employer regardless of who actually purchased the original book or record.

(b) All such books, records, and computer files, programs, and records shall be immediately returned to Employer by Employee on any termination of employment.

(c) If Employee purchases any record book, ledger, computer software program, or similar item to be used for record keeping, Employee shall immediately notify Employer, who shall then immediately reimburse Employee.

§ 85.443 Provision Maintaining Confidentiality of Client or Patient Information

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is for use if an employee of a professional service provider (such as an attorney, accountant, or physician) will have access to confidential information pertaining to clients or patients of the employer. The form embodies an agreement by the employee to maintain the confidentiality of the client or patient information.

This form may be inserted in a complete employment agreement. Alternatively, if the employee will not have a complete written employment agreement, this form may easily be adapted for use as a stand-alone agreement to be signed by the employee.

Confidential _____ [Client or Patient] Information

(a) The parties acknowledge and agree that during the term of_____[his or her] employment, and in the course of discharging_____[his or her] duties, Employee shall have access to and possess personal, confidential information pertaining to the [professional clients or patients] of Employer. Employee acknowledges and agrees that the ability to maintain the confidentiality of [client or patient] information is an essential requirement of Employer's professional and business operations, and any unauthorized disclosure of confidential [client or patient] information would cause substantial damage to Employer's [clients or patients] as well as to Employer's professional and business standing.

(b) In consideration of being employed by Employer, Employee specifically agrees that_____[he or she] shall not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose any such [client or patient] information directly or indirectly, to any other person or use the information in any way, either during the term of employment or at any time thereafter, except as is required in the course of_____[his or her] employment with Employer.

(c) Employee further agrees that all Employer's client files, records, documents, and similar items relating to Employer's [clients or patients], including copies, reproductions, and facsimiles of such items, whether prepared by Employee or others, are and shall remain exclusively the property of Employer and shall not be removed or transmitted from the premises of Employer unless expressly and specifically authorized by [names or titles of principals of firm].

§ 85.450 Provision for Immediate Return of Employer's Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision requiring an employee to return to the employer all property belonging to the employer when requested by the employer or upon termination of the employment. The purpose of this form is to make clear to the employee that he or she is obligated to return all of the employer's property to the employer and to provide a contractual basis for recovery from the employee in case of noncompliance. It is suggested that this form be used when valuable property or property that embodies a trade secret is to be entrusted to the employee.

[b] Duty of Employee

Everything that an employee acquires by virtue of his or her employment (other than compensation) belongs to the employer, whether acquired lawfully or unlawfully, or during or after the term of employment [Lab. Code § 2860]. An employee must account for all transactions made during the course of the employment [Lab. Code § 2861] and deliver anything received when the employer demands it [Lab. Code § 2862]. If property entrusted to the employee is damaged as a result of the employee's negligence, he or she is liable to the employer [Lab. Code § 2865].

§ 85.451 Provision Giving Employer Right to Use Employee's Name as Part of Trade Name or Trademark

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision governing the use of the employee's name as part of a trade name or trademark. The first portion of the form grants the employer the right to use the employee's name in its trade name or trademark. The second portion limits the use of the employee's name in connection with another enterprise. This type of provision is commonly included in agreements between a professional corporation and one of the principals; however, it may be used by any employer whose trademark of trade name will include the name of the employee.

[b] Trade Name

Under federal law, a "trade name" is an individual or firm name used to identify a business or vocation [15 U.S.C. § 1127]. In California, a "trade name" is name used by a person to identify a business or vocation of that person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(d); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(e) ("person" includes natural person and juristic person, which is firm, partnership, corporation, union, association, or other organization capable of suing and being sued)].

[c] Trademark

Under federal and California law, a "trademark" includes any word, name, symbol, or device, or any combination thereof, used by a person to identify and distinguish the goods of that person, including a unique product, from those manufactured or sold by others, and to indicate the source of the goods, even if that source is unknown [15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(a)]. Also, federal law treats a word, name, symbol, or device, or combination thereof as a "trademark" if a person has a bona fide intention to use it for the foregoing purposes in commerce and applies to register it as a trademark with the United States Patent and Trademark Office [15 U.S.C. § 1127].

For this purpose, a "person" includes a natural person and a juristic person, which includes a firm, partnership, corporation, union, association, or other organization capable of suing and being sued [15 U.S.C. § 1127; Bus. & Prof. Code § 14202(e)]. The federal definition of "person" also includes the United States, any agency or instrumentality thereof, or any individual, firm, or corporation acting for the United States and with the authorization and consent of the United States [15 U.S.C. § 1127].

A person who uses a trademark may register it with the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14207] and with the United States Patent and Trademark Office [15 U.S.C. § 1051]. Registration of a trademark with the Secretary of State is effective for five years and may be renewed for successive five-year periods indefinitely [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14217(a),(b)]. Registration with the United States Patent and Trademark Office is effective for ten years and may be renewed for successive ten-year periods [15 U.S.C. § 1059(a)]. For detailed coverage of California trademark law, see Ch. 103B, Trademarks . For coverage of the federal law of trademarks, see LaLonde, Gilson on Trademarks (Matthew Bender).

[2] FORM

Provision Giving Employer Right to Use Employee's Name as Part of Trade Name or Trademark

Use of Employee's Name

(a) Employer shall have the right to use the name of Employee as part of the trade name or trademark of Employer if Employer deems it advisable to do so. Any trade name or trademark of which the name of Employee is a part adopted by Employer during the employment of Employee may be used thereafter by Employer for as long as Employer deems advisable.

(b) Employee shall not, either during the term of this agreement or at any time thereafter, use or permit the use of Employee's name in the trade name or trademark of any other enterprise engaged in a business similar in any respect to that conducted by Employer, unless that trade name or trademark clearly indicates that the other enterprise is a separate entity entirely distinct from and not to be confused with Employer, and unless the trade name or trademark does not contain any words or symbols stating or suggesting that the other enterprise or its employees have any prior or current affiliation with Employer.

§ 85.460 Provision That Employer Indemnify Losses of Employee in Discharging Duties

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a promise on the part of the employer to indemnify the employee for losses that occur as a direct consequence of the discharge of the employee's duties. An express provision to this effect is seldom used in employment contracts. It is necessarily embodied in every employment contract made in California because an employer has a statutory obligation to indemnify an employee for such losses [Lab. Code § 2802]. However, the employee's attorney may desire to include this provision so that the client will be aware of the employer's obligation.

[b] Employer's Obligation to Indemnify Employee for Losses in Discharging Duties

An employer must indemnify its employee for necessary expenditures or losses incurred by the employee in direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties or obedience to the directions of the employer. This obligation to indemnify applies even if the directions of the employer are unlawful, unless the employee at the time of obeying the directions believed them to be unlawful [Lab. Code § 2802(a)]. This statutory obligation cannot be waived by the parties [Lab. Code § 2804]; see Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 479-481, 169 P.3d 889 (holding that agreement between employer and employee for reimbursement by method that approximates employee's actual expenses does not relieve employer of statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement and does not preclude employee from suing to recover full reimbursement); see also Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 950-955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 292-296, 189 P.3d 285 (contract provision in which employee releases "any and all" claims against employer does not waive employee's right to indemnity under Lab. Code § 2802(a))].

This obligation applies only to losses incurred in the scope of the employment. That is, the losses must be in direct consequence of the discharge of the duties of the employee, as opposed to losses suffered incidentally to the employment. The test of whether a given activity that results in a loss to the employee is within the scope of employment is whether the activity is so unusual or startling that it would be unfair to include the loss as a cost of the employer's doing business [Devereaux v. Latham & Watkins (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1583-1584, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 (employee's expenses incurred while giving testimony adverse to employer's interests held not within scope of employment)]. Thus, for example, the indemnity statute has been held inapplicable to the loss of tools destroyed by fire after normal business hours, since the tools were not then being used in the discharge of the duties of the employee or in obedience to the instructions of the employer, and the employee was not required to leave the tools at the place of employment [Earll v. McCoy (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 44, 46, 253 P.2d 86] .

Expenses subject to indemnification include attorneys' fees incurred by the employee not only in defending against claims arising from the employee's discharge of duties, but also in proceedings against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification [Lab. Code § 2802(c); O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local No. 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1157, 1160-1161] . For this purpose, a claim against an employee arises from the employee's discharge of duties if (1) the employee's actions giving rise to the claim are within the scope of employment; and (2) the claim is proven to be unfounded, that is, without merit [O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local No. 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158-1160 (third party's claim against employee is unfounded as matter of law if third party dismisses claim with prejudice; that dismissal was part of settlement did not mean claim had merit, since settlement did not include any admission of liability by employee)].

If the employee brings an action against the employer to enforce the employee's right to indemnification, an award for the reimbursement of the employee's expenditures or losses must carry interest at the same rate as judgments in civil actions, accruing from the date on which the employee incurred the expenditures or losses [Lab. Code § 2802(b)].

For further discussion of the employer's duty to reimburse the employee's work-related expenses, including permissible methods of reimbursement of recurring expenses, see § 85.12[3].

§ 85.461 Provision Permitting Employee to Examine Books Relating to Compensation

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision granting the employee the right, either personally or by an accountant or other representative, to examine those books and accounts of the employer that relate to a determination of the amount of compensation due the employee. This type of provision is for use primarily in agreements with salespersons or others whose compensation depends in whole or in part on the success of the employee's endeavors or that of the employer's business generally. For example, a salesperson who is paid on a commission basis or an executive whose salary is determined in part by the amount of net profits earned by the employer's business.

[b] Right of Employee to an Accounting

Use of this form is necessary when the compensation to be received by the employee is contingent (a contract basing compensation on net profits, for example). The reason for this is that in those cases, the exact amount of compensation that should be received by the employee can only be determined by reference to the books and accounts of the employer. There is no reason not to use this type of provision because an employer has a duty to account to the employee when the contract permits the employee to share in profits [see Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 751, 177 P.2d 931] .

[2] FORM

Provision Permitting Employee to Examine Books Relating to Compensation

Examination of Books

The Employee shall have the right, either personally or by an accountant or other representative retained and paid by Employee, to examine the books and accounts of Employer as they relate to transactions affecting the amount of Employee's compensation. This right shall be exercised at times mutually convenient to Employee and Employer, but in any event, at least once during each half of the calendar year.

§ 85.470 Provision for Noncompetition by Employee During Term of Contract

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision forbidding the employee from competing directly or indirectly with the employer during the term of the agreement. Although competition by the employee with his or her employer during the term of the contract is a breach of contract even though the employment contract does not contain a provision to that effect [see [c], below], such a provision serves to more clearly establish or define that conduct as a breach of contract. Thus, for example, this form forbids both direct and indirect competition.

The inclusion of this form in the contract serves as a basis for a breach of contract action [see [c], below], if the need should arise. It also serves to inform the employee that any competitive activity during the term of the employment contract is a breach of contract. Since the employee might not otherwise be aware of this, use of this provision may prevent activity that otherwise would occur.

For a provision permitting the employee to engage in other specified employment, see § 85.272. For discussion of provisions that have the effect of limiting competition after termination of employment see [c], below.

[b] Drafting of Exclusions From This Provision

This form includes an optional clause excluding from the basic prohibition against competition any activities the parties may agree to exclude. The basic prohibition is very broad and prohibits the employee from engaging in any type of activity during the term of the contract that might conceivably result in any direct or indirect competition with the employer. A broad provision is generally very useful from the standpoint of the employer, since it is impossible to foresee the precise activity on the part of a prospective employee that may result in harmful competition to the employer. However, in particular circumstances it may operate too harshly by prohibiting activity that would be beneficial to the employee and/or would not be detrimental to the employer in any way.

[c] Competition Constituting Breach of Contract

An employee who has any business to transact on his or her own account similar to that entrusted to him or her by the employer must give preference to the employer's business [Lab. Code § 2863]. It is the duty of the employee to faithfully serve the employer during working hours and not to engage in a competing business even outside of working hours [Charles T. Powner Co. v. Smith (1928) 91 Cal. App. 101, 102, 266 P. 833] . When an employee engages in a business that makes him or her a competitor of the employer, no matter how much or how little time is devoted to it, there is an interest against this duty and therefore a violation of the employment contract, even though the agreement does not contain a noncompetition provision [Stokes v. Dole Nut Co. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 285, 295-296, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 ; Puritas Laundry Co. v. Green (1911) 15 Cal. App. 654, 660, 115 P. 660] . The Restatement of Agency rule is that an employee, unless otherwise agreed, cannot compete with the employer or act for persons whose interests are in conflict with those of the employer in matters with respect to which the employee is employed [Restatement (Second) of Agency, §§ 393, 394].

Noncompetition During Term of Employment Contract

(a) During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of Employer.

[Optional additional clause; use to exclude specified activities from basic noncompetition provision:]

(b) The foregoing obligation of Employee not to compete with Employer shall not prohibit Employee from _____ [e.g., owning or purchasing any corporate securities that are regularly traded on a recognized stock exchange or over-the-counter market or from continuing to own and manage the real property located at 907 South Main Street, Bakersfield, California.]

§ 85.471 Provision Prohibiting Unfair Competition After Termination of Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form prohibits an employee from engaging in any act of unfair competition with respect to an employer's trade secrets after termination of his or her employment. This type of provision may be used in any kind of employment contract pursuant to which an employee will gain access to the employer's trade secrets, including contracts for the employment of executives, managerial personnel, salespersons, technical personnel, or consultants. It is commonly used in conjunction with a provision that describes the employer's trade secrets in general terms and includes a promise on the part of the employee not to disclose or misuse them [see § 85.440].

[b] Purpose and Effect of Form

This form states the employee's acknowledgment and agreement that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets constitutes "unfair competition." Because unfair competition is a tort and its elements are a matter of law, a contract provision characterizing a given activity as unfair competition (like a contract provision characterizing a particular matter as a trade secret) may not be ultimately determinative in an action for unfair competition. Nevertheless, this form has the salutary effect of telling the employee specifically what acts are prohibited and exactly what he or she is promising not to do. Moreover, inclusion of this form can be helpful from the employer's point of view if the matter reaches the litigation stage. This is because violation of an express contract provision identifying an employer's trade secrets as such has a bearing on the ultimate court decision since it creates an extraordinary duty on the part of the employee not to misappropriate or misuse them [see Southern California Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 446, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 (failure to return customer list as required by contract called "trade secret larceny" and violation of extraordinary duty imposed by contract)]. For discussion of the employer's remedies against an employee for unfair competition, see § 85.440[1][d][iv].

For a provision prohibiting an employee from soliciting business from the employer's customers for a limited period after termination of employment and relevant discussion, see § 85.472.

[c] Validity of Provisions Limiting Competition After Termination of Employment

[i] In General

The general rule is that any contract by which anyone is restrained from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind is void [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; see D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 (discharging employee for refusing to sign employment agreement containing provision that violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 is violation of public policy)].

The general prohibition against noncompetition contracts is inapplicable when an agreement not to compete is made by a seller with a buyer in connection with a sale of the goodwill of a business, or in connection with the sale of an ownership interest in a business entity, when the sale of goodwill is involved [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601], by one partner with other partners when the dissolution of a partnership is involved [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602] or, under specified circumstances, in connection with the dissolution of a limited liability company [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602.5]. In most employer-employee situations these exceptions have no application, but a shareholder-employee may have an employment contract that provides for a corporate buyout of the employee's shares on the termination of employment. In such a case, a noncompetition agreement in the buyout provision will not be valid unless a valuation of corporate goodwill is a component of the sale price [Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 901-908, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779] .

Even when these exceptions do apply, the promise not to compete must be limited to a specified geographic area in which the business entity or partnership conducted business, and for only as long as the buyer carries on a like business therein [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602]. However, a covenant not to compete in connection with the sale of a business is not limited by state boundaries due to federal regulation of interstate commerce. Further, the statutory limitation on the scope of reasonable covenants not to compete to counties and cities does not limit the scope of the agreement to California [Fleming v. Ray-Suzuki, Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 574, 582-583, 275 Cal. Rptr. 150] .

[ii] Indirect Prohibitions

Certain indirect prohibitions are valid. For example, under the general rule of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, a provision in an employment contract forfeiting the employee's pension rights if he worked for a competitor restrained him from engaging in a lawful business and therefore was void [Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242-243, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147] . However, provisions in the employment contract of a life insurance agent, which made his right to receive accrual commissions after severance of the employment relationship contingent on him not injuring the employer in its relationship with financial institution customers and not inducing those customers to discontinue cooperation with the employer in the sale of insurance, were not provisions in restraint of trade under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600. This was because the ex-employee was not prevented from engaging in a trade, business, or profession [Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 522, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602] .

In addition, a provision in an employment contract between a life insurance company and a salesman entitling the salesman to certain "service fees" only "so long as this contract remains in force" has been held not to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600. This provision did not purport to regulate the employee's conduct after the termination of his employment and did not restrain him from working for a competitor or in any way overtly limit his freedom to seek other employment. The loss of the service fees occurred upon the lawful termination of the contract, not as in the Muggill case cited above, upon the finding of other employment. Therefore, the provision in question did not operate as a restraint on trade and was valid [Bach v. Curry (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 676, 681, 66 Cal. Rptr. 220] .

[iii] Trade Secret and Narrow Restraint Exception

In addition to the statutory exceptions noted in [i], above, the California courts recognize a "trade secret exception" to the general rule, under which the courts will enforce a covenant not to compete to the extent necessary to protect an employer's trade secrets and confidential information [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1462, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 ; Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 ; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456] . Thus, a covenant not to solicit the employer's customers may be enforceable if it is designed to protect the employer's confidential, proprietary, or trade-secret customer information, but not if the identity of the customers is not confidential and therefore not a trade secret [see Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1429-1430, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (complaint's allegation that customer lists were not confidential taken as true for purposes of judgment on the pleadings)]. The statutory privilege shielding statements made in judicial proceedings [see Civ. Code § 47(b)] does not apply in an action for breach of an employment contract containing an express agreement not to disclose trade secrets. Thus, if a former employee's testimony discloses an employer's trade secrets in a lawsuit between the employer and a third party, the judicial privilege will shield the former employee from tort liability for disclosing the trade secrets, but it does not protect the former employee from the employer's action based on breach of a covenant not to disclose the trade secret [ITT Telecom Prods. Corp. v. Dooley (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 307, 318-320, 262 Cal. Rptr. 773] .

A former employee has the right to enter into competition with his or her former employer, provided that competition is fairly and legally conducted [Continental Car-Na-Var Corp. v. Moseley (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 104, 110, 148 P.2d 9 ; Cal. Francisco Inv. Corp. v. Vrionis (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 318, 323, 92 Cal. Rptr. 201] . However, a former employee's use of confidential information obtained from the former employer is viewed as unfair competition [Rigging Int'l Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; Greenly v. Cooper (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 382, 391, 392, 143 Cal. Rptr. 514] .

The misuse of a former employer's trade secrets after termination of an employee's employment can be limited as a method of protecting a trade secret from unfair competition. For discussion of the remedies available to a former employer when a former employee commits an act of unfair competition after termination of employment, see § 85.440[1][d][iv].

The California Supreme Court has held that a noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless expressly authorized by statute [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5 (authorizing noncompetition agreement in connection with sale of business goodwill or corporate shares, or dissolution of partnership or limited liability company)]. However, the Court left open the question of the applicability of a "trade secret exception" to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 n.4, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 289 n.4, 189 P.3d 285 ("[W]e do not here address the applicability of the so-called trade secret exception to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600], as Edwards does not dispute that portion of his agreement or contend that the provision of the noncompetition agreement prohibiting him from recruiting Andersen's employees violated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600].")].

[iv] Severance of Void Provisions

If a provision in the contract is in restraint of trade and therefore invalid, it is the policy of the courts to sever the provision restraining trade, if possible, and to enforce the remainder of the contract that is not so tainted [Zajicek v. Koolvent Metal Awning Corp. of America (9th Cir. 1960) 283 F.2d 127, 133] . However, terminating an employee for refusing to sign an employment agreement that contains an illegal noncompetition covenant is a violation of public policy, even if the agreement includes a severability provision that would preserve the enforceability of the remainder of the agreement [D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 (except as provided by statute, any contract that restrains anyone from engaging in any lawful profession, trade, or business is to that extent void)].

[d] Hazards of Using Prohibition Against Post-Employment Competition

Many national publications containing forms for employment contracts include provisions prohibiting the employee from competing with the employer after the employment period. Such provisions are included in those publications because they are valid, with varying limitations, in most jurisdictions [see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 396; Restatement of Contracts, § 516; see also Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 697, 706-708, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172, 59 P.3d 231 (that noncompetition provision might be void in California ordinarily does not justify California court in issuing temporary restraining order against employer's action to enforce provision in another state's court); Biosense Webster, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 827, 835-839, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 759 (rule of Advanced Bionics applies whether employer's out-of-state enforcement action is pending or prospective, in state court or in federal court)]. However, it is dangerous for the California attorney to use this type of provision without first carefully confirming that the precise language in question is valid under California law. Terminating an employee for refusing to sign an employment agreement that contains an illegal noncompetition covenant is a violation of public policy even if the agreement includes a severability provision that would preserve the enforceability of the remainder of the agreement [D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 ; see discussion in [c][iv], above].

A related problem involves the use of standardized forms by nationwide employers with employees in California. In one case, although a noncompetition provision that both parties agreed was void in California was held severable in a federal court action, the attorneys for the former employee contended that the employer had included that provision in its contracts with California employees with the deliberate purpose of misleading them as to their legal rights and coercing them to refrain from competing later with the employer; therefore, they argued, the employer was guilty of "unclean hands" and should be barred from any equitable relief. However, because the same form of employment contract was used by the employer throughout its nationwide operation, the employer never sought to enforce the provision in California, and the employees involved were aware of the unenforceability of the provision in California and were not deterred by it, the court found that the employer was not guilty of "unclean hands" [see Winston Research Corp. v. Minnesota Min. & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1965) 350 F.2d 134, 142] . Nevertheless, if the case had involved a California corporation operating only in California, the court potentially could have found the employer guilty of "unclean hands" and therefore not entitled to equitable relief.

A California Court of Appeal has held that California's public policy against covenants not to compete made a restrictive covenant against an employee residing in Maryland unenforceable, even though both the former employer and the former employee were not California residents. It was sufficient in that case that the former employee was recruited to work for a California corporation [Application Group, Inc. v. Hunter Group, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 906-908, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73] .

§ 85.472 Provision Prohibiting Solicitation of Customers or Fellow Employees After Termination of Employment

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision prohibiting an employee from soliciting business from the employer's customers or employees for a limited period after termination of employment. It is designed for use in employment contracts for sales or other personnel who have access to information concerning the employer's customers and who are likely to engage in competitive activities after the termination of employment. The use of this form creates an extraordinary duty on the part of the employee not to misappropriate or misuse the employer's customer data [see Southern California Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 446, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 (failure to return customer list as required by contract called "trade secret larceny" and violation of extraordinary duty imposed by contract)].

For a provision having more general application in controlling the misuse or misappropriation of an employer's trade secret after termination of employment, see § 85.471.

[b] Drafting Considerations

In light of the generally restrictive interpretation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [see § 85.471[1] and [c]], below, careful consideration should be given to the use of this form. It should not be used in every employment contract because it is a partial restraint on the right of the employee to engage in a lawful profession, trade, or business and will be enforced by the courts only under limited circumstances [see [c][ii], below]. However, this form is patterned after a contract provision that has specifically been held valid and enforceable in two customer list cases, Gordon v. Wasserman (1957) [153 Cal. App. 2d 328, 314 P.2d 759] and Gordon v. Landau (1958) [49 Cal. 2d 690, 321 P.2d 456 (one-year restraint held valid and enforceable)].

The form contains a blank for insertion of the length of the period that the employee is to refrain from soliciting the employer's customers. This period should not be any longer than is reasonably required to protect the employer's interests. A one-year restraint was upheld without discussion in the two cases cited above.

For an optional provision that may be added regarding ownership of records relating to customers, see § 85.442.

[c] Restraining Solicitation of Former Employer's Customers

[i] Customer Lists Constitute Trade Secrets

When a customer list is accompanied by confidential information regarding the customers on the list, it is considered a trade secret [see Reid v. Mass. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 293, 318 P.2d 54] . The customer list of a telephone answering service [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16606] or an employment agency [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16607] is a trade secret.

[ii] Protection of Customer List From Unfair Competition

Contract provisions that restrain any person from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business are void [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 945-950, 955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 288-292, 296, 189 P.3d 285 (noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless it falls within one of statutory exceptions provided by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, 16602.5); D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 931-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 (discharging employee for refusing to sign employment agreement containing provision that violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 is violation of public policy)]. However, the California courts recognize a "trade secret exception" to the general rule, under which the courts will enforce a covenant not to compete to the extent necessary to protect an employer's trade secrets and confidential information [Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1462, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 ; Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 ; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456 ; see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946 n.4, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 289 n.4, 189 P.3d 285 ("[W]e do not here address the applicability of the so-called trade secret exception to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600], as Edwards does not dispute that portion of his agreement or contend that the provision of the noncompetition agreement prohibiting him from recruiting Andersen's employees violated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600].")]. Although a former employee may compete with a former employer, that competition must be fairly and legally conducted [Continental Car-Na-Var Corp. v. Moseley (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 104, 110, 148 P.2d 9 ; Cal. Francisco Inv. Corp. v. Vrionis (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 318, 323, 92 Cal. Rptr. 201] . Thus, a former employee's use of confidential information obtained from the former employer is viewed as unfair competition [Rigging Int'l Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; Greenly v. Cooper (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 382, 391, 392, 143 Cal. Rptr. 514] .

Agreements of the type set forth in this form have been held valid and enforceable in the face of arguments that they restrain the former employee from engaging in a trade or business when the restriction is carefully limited so that it does not prevent the former employee from engaging in the same type of business or any other business. The contract restriction is held to protect the customer list as a valuable trade secret on which the existence and survival of the business depends [see Gordon v. Wasserman (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 328, 330, 314 P.2d 759 ; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456] ; for additional discussion of the "trade secret exception" to the general rule of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, see § 85.471[1][c][iii].

[iii] Informing Former Customers of Change of Employment

Although there are remedies for solicitation of a former employer's customers [see [ii], above], it is possible for the former employee to receive business from those customers without any solicitation on his or her part. Merely informing those customers of a change of employment, and nothing more, or discussing business with them on their invitation does not constitute solicitation by the former employee and hence will not be enjoined [Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 204, 246 P.2d 11] .

[2] FORM

Provision Prohibiting Solicitation of Customers or Fellow Employees After Termination of Employment

Soliciting Customers and Employees After Termination of Employment

(a) Employee acknowledges and agrees that the names and addresses of Employer's customers constitute trade secrets of Employer and that the sale of unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during Employee's employment with Employer constitute unfair competition. Employee further acknowledges that Employer's employees are a valuable asset in the operation of Employer's business. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer.

(b) For a period of _____ [e.g., six months or one year] immediately following the termination of Employee's employment with Employer, Employee shall not directly or indirectly make known to any person, firm, or corporation the names or addresses of any of the customers of Employer or any other information pertaining to them, or call on, solicit, take away, or attempt to call on, solicit, or take away any of the customers of Employer on whom Employee called or with whom Employee became acquainted during Employee's employment with Employer, either for Employee or for any other person, firm, or corporation.

(c) For a period of _____ [e.g., six months or one year] immediately following the termination of Employee's employment with Employer, Employee shall not directly or indirectly solicit, hire, recruit, or encourage any other employee of Employer to leave the Employer or work for any person or entity that is in competition with Employer.

§ 85.473 Additional Provision for Liquidated Damages for Breach of Noncompetition Clause

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a liquidated damages provision designed for use when the parties to an employment contract desire to fix the amount to be paid by the employee to the employer in the event that the employee breaches the covenant not to compete. For a provision of this type relating to liquidated damages for breach of an employee's obligation to work for the employer, see § 85.540.

[b] Validity of Liquidated Damages Provision

A liquidated damages provision in an employment contract is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate the provision establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(b)]. Therefore, the attorney should bear in mind that the amount specified in a liquid damages provision should bear some reasonable relationship to the actual damages likely to be suffered by the employer if the employee breaches the contract. Use of an unreasonably high figure to deter or penalize the employee is likely to render the provision wholly unenforceable.

For a complete discussion of liquidated damages provisions in contracts generally, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[c] Disadvantages of Liquidated Damages Provision

Although a liquidated damages provision may seem attractive as a deterrent to the employee, it can have undesirable effects on the employer. Because the amount specified as damages must be reasonable in order to be enforceable [Civ.

Code § 1671(b)], the employer cannot arbitrarily use a high figure to protect itself. On the other hand, if the figure that is used is reasonable at the time the contract is made, but becomes unreasonably low by reason of subsequent events, it will still be enforceable against the employer. In such a case, the employer may find its recovery limited to considerably less than it would have been entitled to had it simply not included the liquidated damages clause.

Additional Provision for Liquidated Damages for Breach of Noncompetition Clause

Liquidated Damages

In the event that Employee breaches the foregoing obligation not to compete, Employee shall pay to Employer the sum of $[specify amount] per month as liquidated damages for the period during which Employee continues to be in breach of the forgoing obligation not to compete. Employer and Employee agree that the amount stated herein as liquidated damages is reasonable under the circumstances existing at the time of the execution of this agreement.

§ 85.480 Provision Indemnifying Employer From Loss Caused by Employee's Negligence or Misconduct

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will indemnify the employer for loss resulting from an employee's negligence or misconduct. In addition to making the employee responsible for indemnifying the employer, this provision serves to place the employee on notice of the fact that the employer may be liable to third parties for damages suffered by them as a result of the employee's negligence or misconduct. For a general explanation of indemnity clauses, see Ch. 79, Suretyship, Guaranty, and Indemnity .

Alternate provisions requiring a surety bond are set forth in § 85.481. For an alternative provision that requires the employee to post a security deposit to protect the employer against losses caused by an employee, see § 85.482. For a provision requiring the employee to insure his or her own automobile if that vehicle is to be used in the employer's service, see Section 7.02 of the form in § 85.220.

[b] Liability of Employee to Employer

Employees are required to use ordinary care and diligence during their term of employment [Lab. Code § 2854]. An employee who causes damage through culpable negligence is liable to the employer [Lab. Code § 2865]. An employee is bound to exercise a reasonable degree of skill in the absence of the employer's knowledge, at the time of employment, that the employee lacked skill [Lab. Code § 2858]; and in any case, the employee must exercise what skill he or she has to the extent required on the job [Lab. Code § 2859]. However, a contract provision making an employee liable for "all losses" that occur as a result of the employee's employment can be interpreted as making the employee a guarantor of the success of the business and would be illegal; therefore, it should not be used [see Liberio v. Vidal (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 49 Cal. Rptr. 520 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 2802, 2804].

[c] Liability of Employer for Torts of Employee

While an employee may be liable to the employer for his or her negligence [Lab. Code § 2865], an employer is liable to third parties for the torts of its employee committed while acting within the scope of his or her employment under the doctrine of respondeat superior [Civ. Code § 2338]. The principal justification for the application of the doctrine of respondeat superior in any case is the fact that the employer may spread the risk through insurance and carry the cost of the insurance as part of its costs of doing business [Johnston v. Long (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 54, 64, 181 P.2d 645] . Consequently, the employer should assure that its business is adequately insured.

[2] FORM

Provision Indemnifying Employer From Loss Caused by Employee's Negligence or Misconduct

Indemnification by Employee

Employee shall indemnify and save Employer harmless from all liability from loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Employee.

§ 85.481 Provision That Employee Be Covered by Surety Bond

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form contains two alternate provisions requiring an employee to qualify for a surety bond. The first alternative requires the employee to qualify for the bond and provides that the employer will pay for the bond premiums. The second alternative provides that the employee will both furnish the bond and pay the bond premiums. The form continues with a provision that failure of the employee to qualify for the bond within a specified period will result in termination of the employment contract.

This form should be used when an employee will handle substantial sums of money that belong either to the employer or to customers of the employer for the protection of the employer from any loss caused by wrongful acts of the employee.

For discussion of the liability of an employee, see § 85.480[1][b].

[2] FORM

Provision That Employee Be Covered by Surety Bond

Qualification for Surety Bond

[First alternative; use to require employee to qualify for bond and employer to pay premiums:]

(a) Employee agrees that_____[he or she] will furnish all information and take any other steps necessary to enable Employer to obtain a fidelity bond conditioned on the rendering of a true account by Employee of all moneys, goods, or other property that may come into the custody, charge, or possession of Employee during the term of_____[his or her] employment. The surety company issuing the bond and the amount of the bond shall be acceptable to and chosen by Employer in its sole discretion. All premiums on the bond shall be paid by Employer.

[OR]

[Second alternative; use to provide that employee will both furnish bond and pay bond premiums.]

(a) Within [e.g., 30 days] from the date of this agreement, Employee shall furnish to Employer a fidelity bond conditioned on the rendering of a true account by Employee of all moneys, goods or other property that may come into the custody, charge, or possession of Employee during the term of_____[his or her] employment. The surety company issuing the bond and the terms and amount of the bond must be acceptable to Employer in the sole discretion of Employer. All premiums on the bond shall be paid by Employee.

[Continue with the following:]

(b) Failure by Employee to qualify for such a bond within [e.g., 30 days] from the date of this agreement will result in immediate termination of this employment contract.

§ 85.482 Provision for Deposit as Security for Performance of Agreement by Employee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision requiring that the employee deposit cash with the employer as security for the faithful performance of his or her duties. This type of provision is generally used only where the employee will be collecting relatively small sums directly from the customers of the employer, as in the case of a salesperson/driver for a bakery. If the sums to be collected by the employee are substantial, it would be unrealistic to require the employee to deposit an amount sufficient to adequately protect the employer. In that situation, the employer can be protected by use of a surety bond [see § 85.481].

[b] Applicability of Security Deposit Provision

An employment contract provision that requires security for losses suffered as a result of any breach or violation of the contract can be enforced. However, a provision making an employee liable for "all losses" that occur as a result of the employee's employment can be interpreted as making the employee a guarantor of the success of the business, and would be illegal. Therefore, that type of terminology should not be used [see Liberio v. Vidal (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 49 Cal. Rptr. 520 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 2802, 2804].

[2] FORM

Provision for Deposit as Security for Performance of Agreement by Employee

Security Deposit

(a) Employee has deposited with Employer as security for [the performance or losses suffered as a result of any breach or violation] of this agreement the sum of $[e.g., $100], the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged by Employer. [Optional: Employee shall deposit with Employer the additional sum of $_____ (e.g., $10) each week (or each month) until the total deposit is $_____ (e.g., $300)].

(b) This deposit shall be returned to Employee, with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum, within one month after the termination of_____[his or her] employment if Employee has faithfully performed all of_____[his or her] duties under this agreement.

(c) In case of any violation of Employee's duties, this deposit shall be used to the extent necessary to indemnify Employer or the customers of Employer for any loss caused by Employee's wrongful acts, and any remaining balance, with interest thereon at the rate stated herein, shall be returned to Employee.

(d) The provision for this deposit shall not limit any rights or remedies otherwise accruing to Employer in the event of a breach of this agreement by Employee.

§ 85.490 Provision for Regular Physical Examinations of Employee

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision requiring the employee to submit to regular physical examinations. The intent of this type of provision is to enable both parties to detect problems sufficiently early so that they can be corrected and thus benefit the employer as well as the employee. This type of provision is primarily for use in agreements for the employment of top level executives and persons employed to operate equipment that entails high liability to the employer if death or disability were to occur during its operation (airplane pilots, for example). However, it can be included in any type of employment agreement.

[b] Payment of Examination Cost

This form provides that the employer will pay all examination costs. The employer rather than the employee is required by law to pay the cost of any pre-employment physical examination required as a condition of employment [Lab. Code § 222.5]. The same applies if a physical examination is required for the issuance of a driver's license and the license is required as a condition of employment [Lab. Code § 231].

[c] Restrictions on Employer's Right to Require Medical and Physical Examinations

[i] Constitutional Privacy Issues

As in the case of any other information-gathering procedure, an employer's requirement that an applicant or employee submit to a medical or physical examination as a condition of hiring or continued employment raises potential issues under the right to privacy contained in California Constitution, Article I, Section 1. In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn., the California Supreme Court adopted a "balancing test" approach for analyzing most state constitutional privacy claims [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . This standard is less stringent than the "compelling interest" standard, which under Hill only applies in limited circumstances, such as those that implicate obvious government action impacting freedom of expression [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . The precise scope of each of these standards is not entirely settled, nor is the extent of an employee's privacy rights in a workplace setting. The result may depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the employees' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 & n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] .

However, it is clear that a job applicant or employee claiming that an invasion of California constitutional privacy rights by reason of a medical examination must show (1) a legally protected privacy interest, (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances, and (3) conduct by the employer that amounts to a serious invasion of that interest. If these threshold elements are established, the court must then conduct a balancing test, weighing the employer's justification for the conduct in question against the intrusion on the applicant's privacy resulting from the conduct [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 712, 714 (citing Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 893, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200, 1230 ; Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633, 657)] .

The Court in Hill applied the balancing test to determine that collegiate athletes' privacy interest in the confidentiality of medical treatment and information was not violated by a private athletic association's drug-testing program because the types of medical questions answered were routine in the athletic context, and the medical procedures had sufficient safeguards to protect the confidentiality of medical information furnished by the athletes [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 52-54, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . In Pettus v. Cole, the court of appeal applied the Hill analysis to a case involving an employer who invaded an employee's autonomy privacy by requiring that the employee enter a 30-day inpatient rehabilitation program as a condition of continued employment [see Pettus v. Cole (1996) 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] . This required treatment was deemed an invasion of privacy because the employer offered no justification for that particular requirement, and it was clear from the record that there were far less intrusive alternatives [Pettus v. Cole (1996) 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] .

Further, several pre-Hill court of appeal decisions have held, in a number of different contexts, that the right to privacy under the California Constitution protects the information contained in an individual's medical records in the absence of a compelling interest justifying the disclosure of that information [see Cutter v. Brownbridge (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 836, 842-843, 228 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; Board of Medical Quality Assurance v. Hazel Hawkins Memorial Hospital (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 561, 565, 185 Cal. Rptr. 405 ; Jones v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 534, 548-550, 174 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; Board of Medical Quality Assurance v. Gherardini (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 669, 679, 156 Cal. Rptr. 55] . The Hill court offered no analysis on the continuing vitality of these cases.

Drug testing in the context of pre-employment medical examinations does not violate the California constitutional right to privacy, nor does it violate the Fourth Amendment [Ross v. RagingWire Telecomms., Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 927, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 388, 174 P.3d 200 ; Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 887-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 ; see Cal. Const. art. I, § 1]. Equal employment opportunity laws impose some limitations on employer-required physical and mental examinations [see [iii], below].

Given the protected nature of the information revealed by a medical examination and the fact that the examination itself is, necessarily, physically intrusive, an employer arguably may be required to demonstrate a legitimate need for requiring such an examination [see Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1268-1271 (mere collection of sensitive medical and genetic information, such as syphilis, sickle-cell trait, or pregnancy, may be actionable violation of employee's constitutional right of privacy, even if employer makes no use of this information)]. In some instances, an employer may be able to demonstrate safety or security concerns that outweigh the employee's right to be free from physical examinations. In such a case the scope and manner of the examination should be limited so as to minimize the invasion of the employee's privacy and to address only the employer's legitimate concerns. For example, a court of appeal has held random drug testing to be constitutionally permissible for an employee in a safety-sensitive construction and maintenance job. In that case, the employer's interest in reducing the substantial and real risk of injury to the employee's coworkers outweighed the employee's interest in privacy [Smith v. Fresno Irrigation Dist. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 147, 161-167, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775 (employee operated power tools and heavy equipment in close proximity to coworkers)]. In applying the Hill balancing test, the court noted that the employee's urine sample was taken at a medical clinic in a minimally intrusive manner, with no direct monitoring of the employee as he provided the sample, and that the employee's expectation of privacy regarding the substances he ingested had been diminished by the employer's six-month advance notice before testing began [Smith v. Fresno Irrigation Dist. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 147, 161-163, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775] .

Similarly, the drawing and testing of blood implicate a legally protected privacy interest. A job applicant who consents to preemployment blood testing has a reasonable expectation that the employer will not retrieve private medical information by performing blood tests outside the ordinary or accepted medical practice regarding general or preemployment medical examinations. An infringement of that reasonable expectation ordinarily would be a serious invasion of the applicant's privacy interest. Whether the testing violates the applicant's right to privacy usually depends on the reasonableness of the applicant's expectations, which requires a court to consider such matters as the customs, practices, and physical setting surrounding the blood tests, with particular emphasis on any notice provided or consent obtained [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 712-713] .

[ii] Contractual Waiver of Constitutional Privacy Rights

Even if a required medical or physical examination otherwise would be constitutionally prohibited, such examinations arguably may be permitted in cases in which the applicant or employee has voluntarily waived his or her privacy rights, such as in an employment contract.

The California Supreme Court has held that a public employer cannot require employees to waive their constitutional rights, including the right to privacy, as a condition of employment unless the public entity demonstrates a compelling interest justifying the waiver [Long Beach City Employees Ass'n v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 951-952, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 (privacy rights)]. Whether this rule applies to private employers has apparently never been addressed by any California appellate court. However, in the Hill case, the California Supreme Court drastically limited the continued application of the compelling interest standard [Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34-35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; § 85.490[1][c][i]].

[iii] Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

Apart from the constitutional privacy issues discussed in § 85.490[1][c][i], above, employer-required physical and medical examinations raise potential issues under equal employment opportunity laws, including the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [see 29 U.S.C. §§ 793, 794], the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) [42 U.S.C. § 100 et seq.], and the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12940]. Both federal and state laws prohibit discrimination against employees and applicants based on physical or mental disability, as defined by those laws. Thus, any requirement that an employee "pass" a physical examination or respond to questions about his or her physical or medical condition must comply with the requirements of state and federal equal employment opportunity laws [Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 862-866, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 ; see Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1271-1273 (employer's requirement that only black and female applicants undergo certain preemployment medical testing not required for other applicants constitutes actionable discrimination under Title VII of Federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., even if test results are not used to deprive any applicant of job)]. For example, the FEHA provides generally that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to require any medical or psychological examination of an applicant, to make any medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant, to make any inquiry whether an applicant has a mental disability or physical disability or medical condition, or to make any inquiry regarding the nature or severity of a physical disability, mental disability, or medical condition [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1); see Gov. Code § 12940(f) (employer may require existing employees to undergo job-related examinations that are consistent with business necessity)]. However, an employer may inquire into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions and may respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2); see Gov. Code § 12940(n)]. Moreover, an employer may require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry of a job applicant after an employment offer has been made but prior to the commencement of employment duties, provided that (1) the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and (2) all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry [Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3)]. In any event, the FEHA specifically prohibits an employer from directly or indirectly subjecting an employee or job applicant to a test for the presence of any genetic characteristic [Gov. Code § 12940(o)]. For detailed coverage of the FEHA, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

The ADA prohibits an employer with 15 or more employees from requiring a medical examination to determine the existence or extent of disabilities unless the examination is job-related and consistent with business necessity [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)]. A physical examination is permitted only after an offer of employment has been made and only if all applicants in the same category are examined. The results of the examination may be used only to evaluate the applicant's ability to perform job-related functions [see Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1273 (ADA imposes no restriction on scope of preemployment medical exam, but only guarantees confidentiality and restricts use to which information may be put)]. The offer of employment may not be withdrawn on the basis of the examination if the applicant is capable of performing the job functions with reasonable accommodations [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3)]. Medical information obtained in an examination must be kept in a separate, confidential file [42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)]. For detailed coverage of ADA, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

Both FEHA and the ADA prohibit medical examinations and inquiries until after the employer has made an offer of employment [see Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3); 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3)]. In effect, these provisions require an employer to complete its nonmedical investigation, including background checks, and make a conditional job offer before subjecting the job applicant to medical examinations and questioning. This mandated sequence serves in part to enable a job applicant to shield private medical information until he or she knows that, unless unable to meet medical requirements, he or she will be hired, and that if he or she is not hired, the true reason for the employer's decision will be transparent [Leonel v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 702, 708-711] .

An employer generally may take illegal drug use into consideration in making employment decisions [Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 882-883, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200] . The Compassionate Use Act of 1996 (Proposition 215) [Health & Safety Code § 11362.5] Compassionate Use Act does not require employers to accommodate medical marijuana use, and the Act does not establish a public policy against terminating employees who use marijuana for medical purposes. The Act does provide an exemption from criminal liability under two specific California statutes for a person who possesses or cultivates marijuana for medical purposes on the recommendation or approval of a physician [Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(d) (providing defense against prosecution under Health & Safety Code §§ 11357, 11358 for person who possesses or cultivates marijuana for medical purposes on recommendation or approval of physician)]. However, marijuana possession remains illegal under federal law, even for medical use [21 U.S.C. §§ 812, 844(a); Gonzales v. Raich (2005) 545 U.S. 1, 26-29, 125 S. Ct. 2195, 162 L. Ed. 2d 1] . Moreover, the Compassionate Use Act is limited in scope: it merely exempts medical users and their primary caregivers from criminal liability under two specified state statutes. Nothing in the Act's text or history indicates that the electorate intended the Act to articulate any policy concerning marijuana in the employment context, let alone a fundamental public policy requiring employers to accommodate marijuana use by employees [Ross v. RagingWire Telecomms., Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 931-933, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 391-393, 174 P.3d 200] .

§ 85.491 Provision for "Morality Clause"

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision intended to bind an employee to conduct that has due regard to public conventions and morals (i.e., a so-called "morality clause"). Morality clauses can be included in employment contracts for persons who will meet the public on behalf of an employer.

[b] Validity of Morality Clause

Morality clauses in employment contracts are generally considered valid and binding [Adams v. Southern Pacific Co. (1928) 204 Cal. 63, 67-68, 266 P. 541 ; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. v. Lardner (9th Cir. 1954) 216 F.2d 844, 850-851] . Moreover, every employment contract includes an implied promise on the part of the employee to conduct himself or herself with such decency and propriety as not to injure the employer in its business [Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. v. Lardner (9th Cir. 1954) 216 F.2d 844, 850-851 (citing Restatement of Agency § 380)]. Thus, "immoral" conduct by an employee in his or her relations with third persons will justify discharge of the employee even if the employment contract does not contain a morality clause, provided that the conduct in question affects the value of the performance that is due the employer [Adams v. Southern Pacific Co. (1928) 204 Cal. 63, 67-68, 266 P. 541 ; Corbin on Contracts § 681].

[c] Effect of Constitutional Right to Privacy

The California constitution expressly guarantees Californians a right of privacy [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1]. This provision was enacted after the decisions discussed under [b], above. It does not prohibit all infringement of individual privacy, but does prohibit any intrusion that (1) infringes a legally protected privacy interest, (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy, and (3) is a serious invasion of privacy, and that is not balanced by sufficient, countervailing interests [see Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . The extent, if any, to which this provision limits the right of private employers to restrict the conduct of their employees remains uncertain. This form attempts to minimize any such impact by stating that the limitation is imposed to protect the employer's goodwill and thus its ability to maintain profitable operations.

[d] Effect of Equal Employment Law

Equal employment statutes limit the power of employers to discharge or discipline employees for certain matters that might be viewed as within the scope of a morality clause. For example, an employee generally may not be discharged because of his or her sexual orientation or perceived sexual orientation [Gov. Code §§ 12926(m), 12940(a)]. In addition, an employer of 25 or more employees must make reasonable accommodations for an employee who wishes to voluntarily enter and participate in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program [see Lab. Code § 1025]. For detailed coverage of equal employment law, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

[2] FORM

Provision for "Morality Clause"

Morality Clause

(a) Employee agrees to conduct [himself or herself] at all times with due regard to public conventions and morals. Employee agrees not to do or commit any act that will reasonably tend to degrade [him or her] or bring [Employee or Employer or Employer and Employee] into public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or tend to shock or offend [society or the community in which Employee represents Employer], or to prejudice Employer or the [type of industry, e.g., motion picture or banking] industry in general.

(b) Employee acknowledges and agrees that this provision is necessary to protect Employer's goodwill in the community in which Employee represents it and thus to protect the profitability of Employer's business.

§ 85.492 Provision for Searches of Employee's Person and Effects

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision under which the employee consents in advance to allow the employer to search his or her person and effects on the job. It limits the searches to those necessary to control theft or drug addiction.

[b] Right of Privacy

The California constitution expressly guarantees Californians a right of privacy [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1]. This provision does not prohibit all infringement of individual privacy, but does prohibit any intrusion that (1) infringes a legally protected privacy interest, (2) where there is a reasonable expectation of privacy, and (3) is a serious invasion of privacy, and that is not balanced by sufficient, countervailing interests [see Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633] . It is not clear to what extent the provision set forth in this form may be considered a violation of the state constitutional right to privacy under this test, although the fact that the provision is limited to searches for evidence of illegal drugs or stolen property would seem likely to meet the requirement of a substantial countervailing interest.

For detailed discussion of the right of privacy, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, ch. 50 (Matthew Bender).

Searches

Employee agrees that_____[his or her] [specify what is to be subject to search, e.g., person, clothing, packages, locker, desk, office, computer, computer files, e-mail, voicemail, and personal effects of any nature] may be searched at any time by Employer during the term of employment for the purpose of determining whether Employee is in possession of stolen property or illegal drugs. Employee waives any and all claims for any damages on account of such searches. A refusal by the Employee to submit to any such search shall result in immediate dismissal of Employee and termination of this contract.

§ 85.500 Provision for Termination by Employer of Employment Contract for Breach or Neglect of Duty or Continued Incapacity to Perform

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision for the termination of an employment contract if the employer finds that the employee has willfully breached or habitually neglected his or her duties, or demonstrates continued incapacity to perform. This provision states all of the three grounds under which an employer may terminate an employment contract for a specified term [Lab. Code § 2924; see [c], below] and is therefore appropriate for inclusion in any such contract.

Any employment contract can be terminated for reasons other than the statutory grounds specified in this form [see [d], below]. If the contract is for a specified term employment, the parties may provide for termination prior to expiration for reasons other than those set forth in Lab. Code § 2924 [R. J. Cardinal Co. v. Ritchie (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 124, 143, 32 Cal. Rptr. 545] . Unless termination prior to expiration is based on the grounds stated in the contract, however, the only statutory grounds for terminating prior to expiration are those set forth in Lab. Code § 2924 [Ehlers v. Langley & Michaels Co. (1925) 72 Cal. App. 214, 221, 237 P. 55] .

For a provision specifying that the contract can be terminated by the employer for good cause only, and specifying that the good faith dissatisfaction of the employer constitutes "good cause," see § 85.502. For a provision permitting an employee to terminate the contract for breach of the employer's obligations [Lab. Code § 2925], see § 85.501.

[b] Drafting Considerations

When this form is included in the employment contract, the provision specifying the term of employment should clearly state that the term of employment is subject to prior termination. It is also important that the contract contain another provision stating how the notice is to be given to the other party.

[c] Grounds for Termination of Contract for Specified Term

[i] Willful Breach of Duty

An employer can terminate a contract for a specified term if the employee commits a willful breach of duty [Lab. Code § 2924]. In addition to any duties imposed by the employment contract, an employee must use ordinary care and diligence in performing his or her job [Lab. Code § 2854], must comply substantially with all directions of the employer regarding the work (unless obedience is impossible, unlawful, or would impose new and unreasonable burdens upon the employee) [Lab. Code § 2856]. An employee must perform in conformance with the customs of the workplace, unless doing so would be impracticable or injurious to the employer's interests [Lab. Code § 2857]. An employee also has the duty to exercise a reasonable degree of skill (unless the employer had notice of his or her lack of skill before hiring the employee) [Lab. Code § 2850], the duty to use such skill as he or she possesses whenever the work requires it [Lab. Code § 2859], and the duty to give preference to the business of the employer whenever engaging in personal business similar to that given to the employee by the employer [Lab. Code § 2863].

A "willful" breach of duty is one that is intentional. The term does not imply any malice or wrong toward the other party [May v. New York Motion Picture Corp. (1920) 45 Cal. App. 396, 404, 187 P. 785] . To justify termination, however, the willful disobedience must be of a rule or order that is reasonable, since an employee is not bound to follow a rule or order that is impossible or unlawful, or would impose new and unreasonable burdens upon the employee [see Mason v. Lyl Productions (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 79, 84, 69 Cal. Rptr. 769, 443 P.2d 193 ; see also Lab. Code § 2856].

"Willful breach of duty" is not involved when an employee uses his or her best efforts to serve the interests of the employer, even if those efforts are unsatisfactory [Goudal v. C. B. DeMille Pictures Corp. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 407, 413, 5 P.2d 432] . Reasonable defense of his or her performance, even if offensive to the employer, is not willful breach of duty [Holtzendorff v. Housing Authority (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 596, 609-610, 614-615, 58 Cal. Rptr. 886] . The term does include falsification of company records [Swaffield v. Universal Ecsco Corp. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 147, 167-168, 76 Cal. Rptr. 680] . It also includes taking kickbacks [Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Blade (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 580, 590, 294 P.2d 140 (employer's suit)].

[ii] Habitual Neglect of Duty

An employer can terminate a contract for a specified term if the employee habitually neglects his or her duty [Lab. Code § 2924]. For a listing of an employee's duties, see [i], above.

The law requires an employee to exercise reasonable care and diligence and reasonable skill or such skill has he or she possesses in performing his or her duties [Lab. Code §§ 2854, 2857-2859]. "Reasonable care" is that degree of care that a reasonably prudent person would exercise if he or she were the employee [Dahl-Beck Electric Co. v. Rogge (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 893, 906-907, 80 Cal. Rptr. 440] . The failure to exercise such care, that is, the neglect of duty, must be "habitual" to justify premature termination, if it does not otherwise constitute willful breach of duty [Lab. Code § 2924].

[iii] Continued Incapacity to Perform

An employer generally can terminate a contract for a specified term if the employee demonstrates continued incapacity to perform [Lab. Code § 2924]. A disability that is only temporarily prevents an employee from performing his or her duties does not justify termination under this provision [Rench v. Watsonville Meat Co. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 482, 488, 292 P.2d 85] . Moreover, the employer may have an obligation under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) [42 U.S.C. § 12001 et seq.] and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.] to make reasonable accommodations for an employee who has a disability covered under those laws [see 42 U.S.C. §

12102; Gov. Code § 12926(i), (k)]. If the employee can, with reasonable accommodation, perform the essential functions of his or her job, the employer must provide the accommodation unless doing so would cause an undue hardship to the employer's operation [42 U.S.C. § 12112(a), (b)(5); Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1), (m); see Green v. State (Aug. 23, 2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 8910 (employee has burden of establishing his or her ability, with reasonable accommodation, to perform essential functions)]. This form includes a provision reflecting that obligation [see also § 85.264]. For detailed coverage of employers' obligations to make reasonable accommodations for disabled employees under the ADA and FEHA, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115 (Matthew Bender), and Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Other Grounds for Termination of Employment Contracts

[i] Operation of Law

The Labor Code specifies four types of events that automatically terminate any employment contract. These are expiration of the term of employment specified in the contract, death of the employee, legal incapacity of the employee to act as an employee [Lab. Code § 2920(a), (c), (d)], and extinction of the subject of the contract [Lab. Code § 2920(b)]. For provisions stating specific types of conditions that constitute extinction of the subject of the contract, see §§ 85.520-85.523.

[ii] Employer's Death or Legal Incapacity

If the power of the employee is not coupled with an interest in its subject, any employment contract is terminated by notice to the employee of the employer's death or legal incapacity to contract [Lab. Code § 2921]. The ordinary employer-employee relationship is created for the benefit of the employer. The power of the employee is coupled with an interest in its subject only if the employer's power is created for the benefit of the employee or of a third person to protect some right or title, or to secure some performance. A power coupled with an interest is referred to in the Restatement of Agency as a "power given as security" [Restatement (Second) of Agency § 138]. A power coupled with an interest will occur only very rarely in an employment relationship.

[iii] Breach of Employer's Obligations to Employee

An employment contract for a specified term is subject to termination by the employee at any time the employer commits a willful or permanent breach of its obligations to the employee [Lab. Code § 2925]. For a provision specifying these grounds as a basis for termination of a contract for a specified term by the employee, see § 85.501.

[iv] Dissolution of Partnership

On the expiration of 90 days after a partner's dissociation by death, the appointment of a guardian or conservator for the partner, or a judicial determination that the partner has otherwise become unable to perform the partner's duties under the partnership agreement, the partnership is dissolved unless, before that time, the majority in interest of the partners [see Corp. Code § 16602(b)(2) (calculating majority in interest)] agree to continue the partnership [Corp. Code § 16801(2)(A); see 1996 Stats. ch. 1003 § 2; see also Ch. 15, General Partnerships].

The dissolution of a partnership has the effect of terminating a contract of employment between the partnership and an employee [Louis v. Elfelt (1891) 89 Cal. 547, 551, 26 P. 1095] .

[2] FORM

Provision for Termination by Employer of Employment Contract for Breach or Neglect of Duty or Continued Incapacity to Perform

Termination for Breach, Neglect, or Incapacity

If Employee willfully breaches or habitually neglects the duties that Employee is required to perform under the terms of this agreement, or demonstrates continued incapacity to perform those duties [after a period of _____ (specify number) _____ (days or months or years)], Employer may at its option terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination to Employee without prejudice to any other remedy to which Employer may be entitled either at law, in equity, or under this agreement. However, Employer shall not terminate this agreement if Employee's disability is covered under the Americans With Disabilities Act or the California Fair Employment and Housing Act and reasonable accommodations can be made to permit Employee to continue working without imposing an undue hardship on the operation of Employer's business.

§ 85.501 Provision for Termination on Statutory Grounds

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision that can be used to state all of the statutory grounds for termination of an employment contract as the grounds on which the contract can be terminated. It incorporates the grounds set forth in § 85.500 (willful breach or habitual neglect of duty or continued incapacity to perform) as well as the other grounds discussed in the Comment to that form.

Since a contract that has no specified term (a "specified term" is a period greater than one month [Lab. Code § 2922]) can be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other [Lab. Code § 2922], this provision is appropriate for inclusion in contracts at will. Any employment contract can be terminated for reasons other than the statutory grounds set forth in this form [R. J. Cardinal Co. v. Ritchie (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 124, 143, 32 Cal. Rptr. 545] .

[b] Drafting Considerations

One of the statutory grounds for termination of an employment contract is "extinction of its subject" [Lab. Code § 2920(b)]. This form substitutes the phrase "the occurrence of circumstances that make it impossible or impracticable for the business of the Employer to be continued" to avoid the ambiguity of the statutory phrase. For forms that provide for termination of an employment contract for specific types of extinction of the subject matter of the contract, see §§ 85.520-85.523.

The Labor Code also provides that an employment contract can be terminated by notice to the employee of the death of the employer or the loss by the employer of legal capacity to contract if the power of the employee is not coupled with an interest in its subject [Lab. Code § 2921]. This form does not limit termination for these reasons only to those contracts in which the power of the employee is coupled with an interest, because in virtually every employment contract, the power of the employee is not coupled with an interest in its subject [see § 85.500[1]].

[2] FORM

Provision for Termination on Statutory Grounds

Grounds for Termination

This agreement shall terminate immediately on the occurrence of any one of the following events:

(1) The occurrence of circumstances that make it impossible or impracticable for the business of Employer to be continued.

(2) The death of Employee.

(3) The loss by Employee of legal capacity.

(4) The loss by Employer of legal capacity to contract.

(5) The willful breach of duty by Employee in the course of_____[his or her] employment, unless waived by Employer.

(6) The habitual neglect by Employee of_____[his or her] employment duties, unless waived by Employer.

(7) The continued incapacity on the part of Employee to perform_____[his or her] essential job duties, unless waived by Employer.

(8) The willful or permanent breach of the obligations of Employer to Employee under this agreement, unless waived by Employee.

(9) The death or dissolution of Employer [or of any partner in the business operated by Employer].

§ 85.502 Provision for Termination of Employment Upon Good-Faith Dissatisfaction of Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides for termination of an employment contract upon the good faith dissatisfaction of the employer with the employee's performance of his or duties. The grounds for termination specified in this form differ from the statutory grounds (willful breach or habitual neglect of duty or continued incapacity) stated in § 85.500 in that this form is broader.

[b] Use of Grounds Other Than Statutory Grounds for Termination

An employer may use contract provisions for termination of an employment contract for a specified term that differ from those specified by statute [see Pecarovich v. Becker (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 309, 317-318, 248 P.2d 123 ; R.J. Cardinal v. Ritchie (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 124, 143, 32 Cal. Rptr. 545] . A contract for employment at will is terminable at the will of either party [Lab. Code § 2922] without any particular grounds being necessary as a prerequisite to the right to terminate [but see [c], below].

[c] Employment Terminable Upon Employer's Dissatisfaction With Performance

A provision that an employment contract is terminable when the employer decides that the employee's services are unsatisfactory is subject to the condition the employer's position must be a good faith dissatisfaction with the employee's performance. This rule applies regardless of whether a reasonable person would have been dissatisfied. The good faith determination of the employer that it is dissatisfied is conclusive on the employee [Tiffany v. Pacific Sewer Pipe Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 700, 703, 182 P. 428 ; Crillo v. Curtola (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 263, 271, 204 P.2d 941] . A contract that requires one party to perform services to the satisfaction of the other party to the contract is not illusory and is binding since the law imposes a duty of good faith on the employer [see Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 124, 330 P.2d 625 (requirement for leases satisfactory to purchaser)].

[d] Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

A covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied by law in employment contracts. The covenant obligates each party to a contract not to do anything that will prevent the other party from receiving the benefits of the contract [Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 751-754, 177 P.2d 931] .

§ 85.503 Provision Stating When Garnishment of Employee's Wages Constitutes Grounds for Termination by Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision specifying that any actual garnishment of the employee's wages in excess of a specified number constitutes grounds for termination of employment.

[b] Protection Against Discharge for Garnishment

An employer may not discharge any employee by reason of the fact that garnishment of his or her wages has been threatened. Moreover, no employer may discharge an employee because the employee's wages have been subjected to garnishment for the payment of one judgment. Any contravening provision of an employment contract is void as against public policy [Lab. Code § 2929(b)]. "Garnishment" refers to any judicial procedure through which the wages of an employee are required to be withheld for the payment of any debt [Lab. Code § 2929(a)(1)].

§ 85.510 Provision for Termination of Contract At Will of Either Party

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form may be used to expressly reaffirm the statutory presumption that an employment contract with no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other [see Lab. Code § 2922]. This form may be inserted into any employment contract that does not provide for a specific duration of employment.

The power to unilaterally terminate an at-will employment contract includes the power to modify the terms of the contract, for example, by demoting the employee or reducing the employee's wage. In effect, any such modification is a termination of the original contract and an offer of a new, unilateral employment contract under the modified terms [DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 634-639, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300] . This form includes an express statement of the employer's right to modify the contract. For further discussion of at-will employment, as well as statutory and public policy limitations on the termination of at-will contracts, see §§ 85.20[3][b] and 85.24[2].

The rights and duties set forth in this paragraph may not be modified in any way except by written agreement signed by _____ [designated person with authority to waive at-will provision].

§ 85.511 Acknowledgment of At Will Status

[1] Comment--Use of Form

In a typical situation, there is usually no need for rank-and-file employees to have complete individual written employment contracts. In such cases, a common procedure is for the employee to sign an acknowledgment of "at will" status. Although there is a statutory presumption that an employment contract with no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party [see Lab. Code § 2922], a written acknowledgment of at will status can serve to rebut any contention that the employer had impliedly agreed to exercise its right to terminate only for good cause [see Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-392, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668 (when employment contract expressly provides for "at will" employment terminable "at any time," any additional contractual provisions regarding probationary period and annual reviews do not expressly or impliedly create right to be terminated only for cause); Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1275-1277, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (positive performance reviews, commendations, salary increases, and vague assurances of future employment are insufficient to overcome statutory presumption of at-will employment, supported by express statements of at-will employment in employee handbook and in employee's signed job application); Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 324, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917] .

The power to unilaterally terminate an at will employment contract includes the power to modify the terms of the contract, for example, by demoting the employee or reducing the employee's wage. In effect, any such modification is a termination of the original contract and an offer of a new, unilateral employment contract under the modified terms [*DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. For further discussion of at will employment, as well as statutory and public policy limitations on the termination of at will contracts, see §§ 85.20[3][b] and 85.24[2].

§ 85.520 Provision for Termination on Discontinuance of Employer's Business

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision that enables the employer to terminate the contract in the event that it ceases its business operations. This form is particularly useful if the employer is a sole proprietorship. With this provision in the employment contract, the individual has greater freedom to cease business operations if health or any other personal problem makes it advisable to do so. This form is adaptable so that it can provide for termination if the operation of a particular office of the employer is discontinued, such as a branch office of which the employee is the manager.

[b] Termination Upon Extinction of Subject Matter

The extinction of the subject of the contract is a ground for automatic termination of an employment contract by operation of the Labor Code [Lab. Code § 2920(b)]. Since "extinction of the subject of the contract" is ambiguous, or at least, subject to interpretation, this form specifies one type of situation to which this provision ordinarily would apply.

[c] Statutory Requirements for Mass Layoffs

The federal Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act (WARN) requires certain large employers to give employees 60 days' advance notice of any plant closing or mass layoff [29 U.S.C. § 2102(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.]. The WARN Act applies to any nongovernmental employer that has 100 or more full-time employees, or that has 100 or more full-and part-time employees who, in the aggregate, work more than 4000 hours per week, excluding overtime [29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(1)].

Under California law, an employer generally may not order a mass layoff, relocation, or termination at a covered establishment unless, 60 days before the order takes effect, the employer gives written notice of the order to the affected employees and the California Employment Development Department [Lab. Code § 1401(a); see Lab. Code § 1400(g) (exception for employment that is seasonal or limited in time); see also Lab. Code § 1402.5 (notice not required if it would preclude employer from obtaining capital or business needed to forestall layoffs)].

The notice must comply with the federal WARN Act requirements [Lab. Code § 1401(b)]. For this purpose, a "mass layoff" is a layoff during any 30-day period of 50 or more employees at a covered establishment [Lab. Code § 1400(c), (d)]. A "layoff" is "a separation from a position for lack of funds or lack of work" [Lab. Code § 1400(c); MacIsaac v. Waste Management Collection & Recycling, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1086-1087, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 650 (no layoff occurs when employees are transferred from one employer to another for whom they perform same work at same rates of pay and with whom they retain same seniority and benefits, because such employees are not separated from their positions; rather, their positions were shifted to new employer)]. A "relocation" means the removal of all or substantially all of the industrial or commercial operations in a covered establishment to a different location 100 miles or more away [Lab. Code § 1400(e)]. A "termination" means the cessation or substantial cessation of industrial or commercial operations in a covered establishment [Lab. Code § 1400(f)]. A "covered establishment" is any industrial or commercial facility or part thereof that employs, or has employed within the preceding 12 months, 75 or more persons [Lab. Code § 1400(a)].

For further discussion of statutory requirements for mass layoffs, see Ch. 1C, Regulation of Employers .

§ 85.521 Provision for Termination at Option of Employer Upon Revocation or Suspension of Liquor License

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision permitting termination of an employment contract upon the revocation or suspension of any of the licenses granted to the employer by the State of California for the sale of alcoholic beverages. It is for use when the employer's business is the conduct of a bar, restaurant, night club, hotel, resort, or similar type of operation that requires such a license. This form is patterned after the contract provision considered by the court in Nattini v. Dewey [Nattini v. Dewey (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 545, 546, 216 P.2d 46] . For discussion of the automatic termination of an employment contract when its subject matter becomes extinct, see § 85.520[1][b].

[2] FORM

Termination Upon Loss of Liquor Licenses

If any of the licenses granted to Employer by the State of California for the sale of alcoholic beverages at the place where Employee's services are to be performed are revoked or suspended, the Employer may at its option terminate this agreement as of the effective date of the revocation or suspension by giving written notice of termination to the Employee. Termination shall not prejudice any right or remedy which the Employer may have either at law, in equity, or under this agreement.

§ 85.522 Provision Governing Termination Upon Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution of Corporate Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision stating whether an employment agreement will be terminated by a merger if the employer is not the surviving corporation, by a transfer of all or substantially all of the employer's assets, or by dissolution of the employer, whether voluntary or involuntary. It is desirable for the parties to an employment agreement to consider whether any of the three situations referred to above should result in termination of the contract and then to expressly state their decision in the agreement. Use of this form can avoid costly litigation [see, e.g., Prouty v. Gores Tech. Group (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1232-1237, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178 (corporate employees claimed benefits as third-party beneficiaries of purchase agreement between old and new parent companies)].

This form is intended for use when the employer is a corporation. However, it can be readily modified by the attorney to apply to any other type of legal entity.

For discussion of the automatic termination of an employment contract when its subject matter becomes extinct, see § 85.520[1][b].

[b] Merger of Corporations

When a merger occurs, the separate existence of the disappearing corporation ceases. Moreover, the surviving corporation succeeds, without other transfer, to all the rights and property of each of the disappearing corporations and is subject to all the debts and liabilities of each, in the same manner as if the surviving corporation had itself incurred them [Corp. Code § 1107(a); see Corp. Code § 1107.5 (surviving corporation assumes disappearing corporations' liability under Bank and Corporation Tax Law, Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.)].

[2] FORM

Effect of Employer's Merger, Transfer of Assets, or Dissolution

(a) This agreement shall [or shall not] be terminated by any merger where the Employer is not the surviving corporation, any transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of the Employer, or the voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Employer.

[If agreement will not be terminated, add:]

(b) In the event of any such merger or transfer of assets, the surviving corporation or the transferee of the Employer's assets shall be bound by and shall have the benefit of the provisions of this agreement, and Employer shall take allactions necessary to insure that any such corporation or transferee is bound by the provisions of this agreement].

§ 85.523 Provision Governing Termination in Event of Bankruptcy or Similar Proceeding Involving Other Party

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision governing the termination of an employment contract if one of the parties becomes bankrupt or insolvent. This form can be used to give such an option to terminate to one or both parties. For discussion of the automatic termination of an employment contract when its subject matter becomes extinct, see § 85.520[1][b].

§ 85.530 Provision That Employee's Right to Compensation Ends as of Date of Termination

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that if the employment agreement is terminated in accordance with its terms, the employee will receive compensation at the rate provided for in the agreement, prorated up to and including the date of termination. Use of this form is desirable because it clearly specifies the duties of the employer in this regard and thereby helps avoid misunderstanding on this point.

[b] Payment of Wages Due

On discharge, the wages earned and unpaid at the time of discharge generally are due and payable immediately [Lab. Code § 201; see Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 77, 82-94, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394, 137 P.3d 218 (employee is "discharged" for purposes of Lab. Code § 201 not only when employee is involuntarily terminated from ongoing employment relationship, but also when employee is released after completing particular job assignment or time duration for which he or she was hired)]. An employer who willfully fails to comply with this requirement, or who imposes an abatement or reduction, is liable for wages at the same rate until they are paid or the employee commences an action to collect them, up to a maximum of 30 days [Lab. Code § 203(a); Mamika v. Barca (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 487, 491-494, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 (penalty is computed by multiplying employee's daily wage rate by number of days of nonpayment, including nonworkdays as well as workdays; thus, although penalty is limited to 30 days, it can exceed one month's wages)]. For further discussion, see § 85.12[2][a].

§ 85.531 Provision Specifying Type of Compensation Forfeited Upon Termination

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a provision in which an employer can specify those types of compensation the employee will forfeit upon termination. An employer has a statutory duty to pay regular wages, such as weekly or monthly salary or payments on a commission basis paid weekly or monthly, and accrued vacation as of the date of termination [Lab. Code §§ 200, 201; see § 85.530]. However, there may be other forms of compensation that the employee could ordinarily expect, including annual or other bonuses, for example, that should be specifically cut off as of the date of termination through the use of this form.

The requirement that earned, unpaid wages be paid on termination or resignation [Lab. Code §§ 201, 202] is not violated by an employee incentive compensation plan under which employees can elect to receive, in lieu of a portion of their compensation, shares of company stock with restricted rights during a vesting period, with forfeiture of the restricted stock on an employee's resignation or termination for cause before the stock fully vests [Schachter v. Citigroup, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 610, 618-623, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 9-13, 218 P.3d 262, 268-271 (because restricted stock had value--immediately exercisable voting and dividend rights, and contingent rights of full ownership--employee's bargained-for wages had been paid in full, and forfeiture of unvested shares did not constitute denial of compensation)].

[b] Drafting Considerations

It is suggested that the attorney drafting the agreement discuss this matter with the client. If there are special payments of the nature discussed and if the parties agree that a terminated employee should have no right to them, this form can be used to so provide in the employment contract.

[c] Vested Vacation Pay Cannot Be Forfeited

If an employment contract provides for paid vacations and an employee's employment is terminated before he or she takes the vacation time that has vested to that date, all vested vacation pay must be paid at the final rate of pay pursuant to the contract or the employer's policy concerning eligibility or time served. Moreover, an employment contract or an employer's policy may not provide for forfeiture of vested vacation time upon termination [Lab. Code § 227.3; see Owen v. Macy's, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 462, 468, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 (Lab. Code § section 227.3 does not require that employer provide its employees with any paid vacation at all; rather, statute imposes certain requirements "whenever" employer provides vacation benefits)]. For this reason, vested vacation pay should not be included in this form, and may be specifically excluded from its coverage.

[d] Vesting of Retirement Benefits

Qualified pension and profit-sharing plans must provide that an employee's accrued benefit in the plan become fully vested on attainment of normal retirement age [I.R.C. § 411(a)] and that the employee's own contribution must at all times be vested and nonforfeitable [I.R.C. § 411(a)(1)]. They must also provide for nonforfeitable vesting of the employer's contributions [see I.R.C. § 411(a)(2)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 1D, Overview of Employee Benefits .

[This provision shall not apply to any vested right, including _____ (specify, e.g., vested pension rights or vested profit-sharing rights or vested commission rights or vested vacation pay).]

§ 85.540 Provision for Liquidated Damages for Breach of Employee's Obligation to Work for the Employer

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that the employee will be liable for liquidated damages if he or she refuses to work or continue to work for the employer as agreed. This form should be used only when loss of the employee's talents will be a serious problem for the employer or to restrain departures during a training period when the cost of training exceeds the value of the employee to the employer. Ordinarily, a provision for liquidated damages which determines in advance the amount of damages to be paid for a breach of the contract is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate the provision establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing when the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(b)].

The provision is not appropriate for use in a contract for at will employment. Because an at will agreement may be terminated by either party at any time, the employee's refusal to work would simply effect a termination of the agreement [see Lab. Code § 2922]. For further discussion of at will employment, see §§ 85.20[3][b] and 85.24[2].

[b] Disadvantages of Liquidated Damages Provision

Although a liquidated damages provision may seem attractive as a deterrent to the employee, it can have undesirable effects on the employer. Because the amount specified as damages must be reasonable in order to be enforceable [Civ. Code § 1671(b)], the employer cannot arbitrarily use a high figure to protect itself. On the other hand, if the figure that is used is reasonable at the time the contract is made, but becomes unreasonably low by reason of subsequent events, it will still be enforceable against the employer. In such a case, the employer may find its recovery limited to considerably less than it would have been entitled to had it simply not included the liquidated damages clause.

For a provision establishing liquidated damages for breach of a noncompetition clause, see § 85.473. For a discussion of liquidated damages provisions in contracts generally, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[2] FORM

Provision for Liquidated Damages for Breach of Employee's Obligation to Work for the Employer

Liquidated Damages

In the event that Employee should refuse to work or to continue to work for Employer, Employer will incur certain damages and costs which are not accurately determinable, and therefore Employee shall pay to Employer as liquidated damages the sum of $_____ [specify amount, such as sum equivalent to cost of training replacement employee or hiring another employee of similar talent]. Employer and Employee both agree that the amount established hereunder as liquidated damages is reasonable under the circumstances existing at the time of the execution of this Agreement.

§ 85.550 Provision for Arbitration of Matters in Controversy at Request of Either Party

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form provides that any controversy involving the construction or application of the employment contract must be submitted to arbitration if either party requests it. The form further provides that the arbitration is to be governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2.

If the arbitration provision in this form is presented to the employee as a discrete document, rather than as part of a fully integrated employment contract, the separate arbitration provision should be signed by the employer and employee. If an employment contract refers to a separate arbitration provision, but the arbitration provision is not signed by the parties, the arbitration provision may not be enforceable [see Romo v. Y-3 Holdings, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1158-1160, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 208 (employee's signing of "acknowledgment" at end of employee handbook did establish assent to "mutual agreement to arbitrate," which was presented as separate section of handbook, with separate signature lines that were never signed by employee)].

[b] Drafting Considerations

The attorney drafting an employment agreement should first consider whether it should include a provision for arbitration or some alternative method of resolving disputes. Arbitration is a faster and more private method of resolving disputes than the judicial process. Whether arbitration is better or less expensive is debatable. However, the mere inclusion of an arbitration clause in a contract sometimes has the effect of pushing the parties into a settlement of the controversy without resort to either arbitration or the courts.

If it is determined that the employment contract should provide for arbitration, the second question to be resolved is whether the contract should provide that arbitration will be automatic or whether it will be used only if a party to the contract requests it. This form provides for arbitration only if one party requests it. The form in § 85.551 makes arbitration mandatory.

The third question to be resolved is whether arbitration should apply to all controversies arising out of the contract or whether certain matters should be excluded from the operation of the arbitration provision. This form applies to all controversies over the construction or application of the employment contract; as such, it will encompass all claims rooted in the contractual relationship, including tort claims that arise from the employment relationship, whether based on conduct occurring before or after the termination of that relationship [see Buckhorn v. St. Jude Heritage Med. Group (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1406-1408, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215] . The form in § 85.551 provides that certain matters can be excluded from arbitration.

If the employer is a division or subsidiary of a larger entity, and there is a possibility that the employee might eventually be transferred to another division or subsidiary, counsel should consider drafting the arbitration provision so that it expressly encompasses any claims involving the larger entity or its divisions and subsidiaries [see Alliance Title Co. v. Boucher (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 262, 267-273, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 (after employee was transferred from one subsidiary to another subsidiary of parent corporation, equitable principles required employee's claims against transferee company to be submitted to arbitration, even though transferee company was not party to arbitration agreement between employee and transferor company)].

Arbitration may be conducted in accordance with the California Arbitration Act (CAA) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2] or the rules of the American Arbitration Association. This form provides for the former, while the form in § 85.551 provides for the latter. The California Supreme Court has ruled that the CAA is generally applicable to arbitration clauses in employment contracts, although the Legislature may selectively prohibit arbitration in certain areas [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 97-99, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] .

The United States Supreme Court has held that the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] applies to arbitration clauses in employment contracts, except contracts for the employment of transportation workers [Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234, 251-252 (overruling Craft v. Campbell Soup Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 177 F.3d 1083); see 9 U.S.C. § 1]. The FAA does not completely displace state regulation of arbitration, but state law is preempted to the extent that it actually stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress [Volt Information Sciences v. Board of Trustees (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 477, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488] . Thus, the parties may specify that the arbitration will be conducted in accordance with the CAA, and that Act will not be preempted unless enforcement of a particular provision of the CAA would undermine the goals and policies of the FAA [see Volt Information Sciences v. Board of Trustees (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 477-478, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 ; Garden Grove Community Church v. Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 191 Cal. Rptr. 15] . For example, the procedural provision of the CAA that authorizes a court to stay arbitration pending the outcome of related litigation [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c)] does not undermine or frustrate the FAA's substantive policy favoring arbitration. Accordingly, the FAA does not prevent a California court from applying that procedural provision in an arbitration that the parties have agreed to conduct under the CAA, even if the parties' agreement specifies that their designation of California law "shall not be deemed an election to preclude application of the [FAA], if it would be applicable" [Cronus Investments, Inc. v. Concierge Services (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 376, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 540, 545-554, 107 P.3d 217] .

Further, the FAA generally does not prevent a state from invalidating a given arbitration clause on such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract [9 U.S.C. § 2; see, e.g., Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99-127, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (refusing to enforce employment arbitration agreement that was unconscionable and violative of public policy)]. For example, the generally applicable rule that a party who breaches a contract cannot enforce it is available as a defense against an employer's attempt to enforce an arbitration agreement that the employer has materially breached [see Brown v. Dillard's, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005)

430 F.3d 1004, 1010 (employer breached agreement by refusing to participate in arbitration proceedings properly initiated by employee)].

For a detailed discussion of the considerations involved in the drafting of an arbitration provision for any type of contract, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

[c] Validity of Arbitration Agreement

In drafting an arbitration provision for inclusion in an employment contract, counsel should verify that neither the language of the contract nor the surrounding circumstances contain anything that will render the arbitration provision invalid. The California Supreme Court has held that a mandatory arbitration agreement in an employment contract that encompasses unwaivable statutory rights (such as the employee's rights under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.]), or that encompasses unwaivable claims of wrongful termination in violation of public policy, must effectively permit the employee to vindicate those rights or claims in the arbitral forum. Therefore, such an arbitration agreement is invalid unless it meets the following standards [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99-113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1076-1081, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 (Armendariz standards apply to arbitration of claims of wrongful termination in violation of public policy, as well as to unwaivable statutory claims); but see Giuliano v. Inland Empire Pers., Inc. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1288-1291, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 (Armendariz standards do not apply to arbitration of claim that is not based on FEHA or fundamental public policy tied to constitutional or statutory provision)]:

- The agreement must provide for neutral arbitrators.

- The agreement must provide for more than minimal discovery [see Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 715-719, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 (minimum standards of fairness not met by agreement restricting discovery to depositions of two individuals and of experts expected to testify, plus exchange of hearing exhibits and witness lists, and barring additional discovery unless arbitrator finds fair hearing would be impossible without it)].

- The agreement must require a written award that will reveal the essential findings and conclusions on which the award is based, so as to permit judicial review.

- The agreement provides for all of the types of relief that would otherwise be available in court.

- The agreement must not require the employee to pay, as a condition of access to the arbitration forum, unreasonable costs or any arbitrators' fees or expenses, or any expense that the employee would not be required to bear if he or she brought the action in court [see, e.g., Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1107-1108 (requirement that employee pay employer $75 filing fee to initiate arbitration, with waiver of fee available only at employer's discretion, is substantively unconscionable under California law); McManus v. CIBC World Mkts. Corp. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 76, 93, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 (employee required to pay $500 deposit plus $1,200 per arbitration hearing session)]. Therefore, a mandatory arbitration agreement that encompasses the arbitration of FEHA claims or claims of wrongful termination in violation of public policy is not subject to the California Arbitration Act's general cost-sharing provision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2], even if the agreement purports to incorporate the Act [Fittante v. Palm Springs Motors, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 708, 719, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659 ; but see O'Hare v. Municipal Res. Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 279-280, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 (agreement that incorporates American Arbitration Association cost-sharing rule is unconscionable)]. Rather, such an arbitration agreement impliedly obliges the employer to pay all types of costs that are unique to arbitration [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1081-1085, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 ; Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] .

The foregoing standards apply to any arbitration agreement that purports to encompass an employee's rights under any statute enacted "for a public reason," that is, for a public purpose. Thus, for example, these standards apply in determining the validity of an agreement to arbitrate claims arising under Lab. Code § 230.8 (which prohibits discrimination against an employee for taking time off to participate in his or her child's school activities) or Lab. Code § 970 (which prohibits employers from misrepresenting the terms and conditions of employment to induce a person to change residences to take the job) [Fittante v. Palm Springs Motors, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 708, 716, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659 ; Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 180, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

The California Supreme Court has further held that, even as to claims other than unwaivable causes of action, an arbitration provision is unconscionable and unenforceable if it is (1) procedurally unconscionable, and (2) substantively unconscionable [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-121, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] . The procedural aspect of unconscionability focuses on oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power, and it generally takes the form of a contract of adhesion, imposed as a condition of employment with no opportunity for the employee to negotiate [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1280-1281, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296] .

The substantive aspect of unconscionability focuses on the terms of the agreement and whether those terms are so one-sided as to lack basic fairness and mutuality [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1280-1281, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296] . For example, an arbitration provision lacks fairness and mutuality if it requires the employee, but not the employer, to arbitrate all claims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence. An arbitration agreement also is unconscionably one-sided if it restricts the full recovery of damages by the employee, while placing no such restriction on the employer [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113-121, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1539-1540, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138] . Also unconscionably one-sided in an employment context is a provision authorizing an appeal to a second arbitrator from an award of $50,000 or more. Even if the provision makes such appeals available to both parties, the $50,000 threshold inordinately favors the employer (who will usually be the defendant) by giving it an opportunity to overturn a sizable arbitration award [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1071-1074, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 ; but see Cummings v. Future Nissan (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 321, 329 n.9, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 10 (provision for second-level "appellate" arbitrator "is not invalid so long as there is no dollar-amount threshold for invoking it (which would make it almost exclusively an employer remedy)")]. Likewise, a provision for a vastly shortened limitations period for presenting the employee's claims is unconscionable [Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 1992-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P69877, 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 117-118, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (arbitration agreement imposing six-month period for asserting any statutory or common-law claim was unconscionable)]. Another unconscionable provision in a contract of adhesion is one that gives the arbitrator exclusive authority to decide questions of enforceability, including questions of unconscionability [Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 505, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 (when one party is "repeat player" in arbitration, arbitrator has self-interest in deciding that any given dispute is arbitrable)].

Procedural and substantive unconscionability must both be present for a court to exercise its discretion to refuse to enforce an arbitration provision because of unconscionability, but they need not be present in the same degree. In effect, a "sliding scale" applies: the more substantively oppressive the provision, the less evidence of procedural unconscionability is required to justify the conclusion that the provision is unenforceable. Conversely, a high degree of procedural unconscionability means that less evidence is necessary to support a holding of unenforceability [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669] . In one case, for example, a court of appeal held an arbitration provision unenforceable despite a low quantum of procedural unconscionability because there was a high degree of substantive unconscionability. In that case, the court conceded that the nonnegotiable nature of the arbitration provision yielded a low quantum of procedural unconscionability because the arbitration provision was conspicuously printed in all capital letters (alerting the reader that it might be significant) and the employee's attorney had reviewed the provision before the employee signed it. At the same time, there was a high degree of substantive unconscionability based on a complete lack of mutuality (only the employee's claims were required to be arbitrated), the provision's requirement of a prearbitration resolution dispute-procedure controlled by the employer, and a severe limitation on the time for the employee to assert claims. Under the sliding-scale approach, the court of appeal concluded that the agreement was unconscionable and unenforceable [Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1286-1288, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296] .

If an arbitration agreement is "permeated" by unconscionability--that is, if it contains more than one unlawful provision, or if there is no discrete unlawful provision that can be severed from the agreement--then the entire arbitration agreement is void and cannot be partially enforced [Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs., Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 121-127, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see, e.g., Franco v. Athens Disposal Co. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1277, 1304, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 539 (because arbitration agreement contained two unlawful provisions--class arbitration waiver, and provision precluding employee from seeking civil penalties on behalf of other employees under Lab. Code § 2698 et seq.--agreement as whole was tainted with illegality and was therefore unenforceable); Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enters., Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 181, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (arbitration agreement containing more than one unlawful provision--class arbitration waiver and unconscionable arbitrator-selection clause--was permeated by unlawful purpose and was therefore unenforceable)]. For example, if an arbitration agreement (1) addresses the kinds of claims that normally would be brought by the employee but not those that would be brought by the employer, (2) limits the employee's recovery to the amount of wages paid during the employee's last six months of work, (3) precludes recovery by employee for statutory claims, (4) specifies a venue for arbitration that is convenient for the employer but not necessarily so for the employee, and (5) requires that the employee initially pay all costs of arbitration, the agreement is unconscionable and so one-sided as to be unenforceable [Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 781, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (such arbitration agreement "is at least equally unconscionable to the one presented in Armendariz")]. Similarly, an arbitration agreement is "permeated by an unlawful purpose," and therefore unenforceable in its entirety, if the terms of the agreement and the surrounding circumstances indicate a systematic effort to impose arbitration on an employee as an inferior forum that works to the employer's advantage [Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 184-186, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (systematic effort to impose arbitration on employee as inferior forum was established by employer's threats and cajoling to get employee to sign agreement, lack of mutuality as to arbitrable claims, provision that unlawfully required employee to share burden of arbitrator's fee, and disadvantages to employee in using designated arbitrator); O'Hare v. Municipal Res. Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 282, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 (completely one-sided agreement compelling arbitration of all of employee's claims while allowing employer to file lawsuit on any claim it had against employee); see Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Indus., Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 778, 784-788 (following Mercuro, finding that lack of mutuality as to arbitrable claims, provision requiring employee to share arbitration costs after first day, and discovery limitations favoring employer so permeated agreement that severance was not possible)].

On the other hand, if there is only one unconscionable provision and it can be severed from the rest of the arbitration agreement, a court may delete the unconscionable provision and enforce the remainder of the agreement [Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1074-1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 ; Fittante v. Palm Springs Motors, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 708, 726-727, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659] . Thus, if an employment agreement requiring arbitration is not permeated by unconscionability, and the agreement contains a clause in which the parties expressly agree to allow the court or an arbitrator to sever or modify any unreasonable or unenforceable provisions, the arbitration provision as so modified may be enforceable [Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-746, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] . For samples of severability provisions, see § 85.200[2], § 9.07 [see also § 85.120[14], P 6]. For further discussion of severability provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

Federal courts have also ruled on the validity of arbitration agreements. Generally, an employer may require an employee to sign an agreement to arbitrate employment-related claims, including Title VII discrimination claims, as a condition of employment [EEOC v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton, & Scripps (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 742, 746-753 (en banc)]. However, the courts have found the following circumstances to be grounds for the invalidation of an arbitration agreement:

- The omission of an express waiver of statutory remedies, if the employee in signing the contract had been unaware that statutory claims would be subject to arbitration [Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1105-1108 (Title VII claim)]. To be enforceable, an agreement to arbitrate federal statutory employment discrimination claims must include a clear and unmistakable waiver of a judicial forum for such claims [see 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett (2009), 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 408-414 (collective bargaining agreement provision that clearly and unmistakably requires union members to arbitrate statutory antidiscrimination claims is enforceable)]. Thus, a provision for the arbitration of "matters under dispute," which could be understood to mean matters in dispute under the contract, is insufficient to waive the employee's right to a judicial forum for statutory employment discrimination claims [see Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 396-397, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (collective bargaining agreement did not contain clear, unmistakable waiver, so court did not reach question of whether collective bargaining agreement can ever waive employees' right to litigate employment discrimination claims); Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26, 35-43 (individual employee can make agreement that waives right to judicial forum for employment discrimination claim); see also Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1153, 1154-1156 (no waiver of judicial remedy when employee signed document acknowledging receipt of "information booklet" that included arbitration clause, but acknowledgement of receipt did not explicitly mention arbitration clause or waiver of right to sue)]. This form contains an optional provision expressly waiving the employee's right to a judicial forum for employment discrimination claims.

- A contractual provision calling for the splitting of arbitration costs between the employer and employee [see Cole v. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs. (D.C. Cir. 1997) 105 F.3d 1465, 1483-1484 ; but see Green Tree Fin. Corp.-Ala. v. Randolph (2000) 531 U.S. 79, 89-92, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 (agreement to arbitrate consumer's claim under Truth in Lending Act is not rendered invalid merely because agreement is silent as to costs)].

If the employer has afforded the employee a meaningful opportunity to opt out of the arbitration agreement without losing his or her job, the arbitration agreement will not be deemed unconscionable [Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Ahmed (9th Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 1198, 1199-1200 (agreement is not adhesive, and thus lacks procedural unconscionability, if employee is given opportunity to opt out of arbitration agreement); but see Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1106-1107 (arbitration agreement is procedurally unconscionable if employee's opportunity to opt out is not meaningful, such as if employer pressures employee and threatens employee's job if he or she does not accept arbitration agreement)]. This form includes an optional provision allowing the employee to opt out by rescinding the arbitration provisions of the employment agreement.

California Labor Code Section 229 provides that an individual's civil action to collect unpaid wages may be maintained without regard to the existence of any private agreement to arbitrate, unless the arbitration agreement is part of a collective bargaining agreement [Lab. Code § 229]. If the employment involves interstate commerce, however, Section 229 is preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act, which requires enforcement of the arbitration provision [9 U.S.C. § 2; Giuliano v. Inland Empire Pers., Inc. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1284-1288, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 (interstate nature of plaintiff's employee was undisputed, since defendant employer did business in two states, and plaintiff traveled to other states in course of employment)]. An arbitration agreement made between the employer and the employee will not bar the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission from pursuing judicial relief for the employee under the Americans With Disabilities Act [EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 286-298, 122 S. Ct. 754, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755, 763-770 (ADA grants EEOC exclusive authority over choice of forum and prayer for relief in its own enforcement action, and that authority is not affected by employee's signing of mandatory arbitration agreement); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101 et seq., 12117(a)(ADA)].

[2] FORM

Provision for Arbitration of Matters in Controversy at Request of Either Party

Arbitration at Request of One Party

(a) Any controversy between Employer and Employee involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions or conditions of this agreement shall be submitted to arbitration on the written request of either party served on the other. [Optional: This paragraph shall apply to any claim by Employee of employment discrimination under federal or state law, and on the written request of either party for arbitration of such a claim pursuant to this paragraph, Employer and Employee shall both be deemed to have waived the right to litigate the claim in any federal or state court.]

(b) Arbitration shall comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act, California Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1280 through 1294.2, which is incorporated herein by reference.

(c) Employer and Employee shall each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute and, if the two persons so selected are unable to agree, those two persons shall select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision shall be final and conclusive upon both parties.

(d) The result of arbitration hereunder shall be [binding or non-binding] upon the parties.

[If desired, add provision making arbitration clause applicable to parent company and its divisions and subsidiaries:]

(e) For purposes of the above arbitration provisions, the terms "Employer" and "party" shall include_____[name of parent company] and any of its divisions and subsidiaries for which Employee may be assigned to work from time to time.

[If desired, add provision allowing employee to opt out of arbitration, e.g.:]

(f) At any time within 30 days after executing this agreement, Employee may rescind the foregoing arbitration provisions. Rescission may be effected only by sending Employer written notice of Employee's election to rescind. On rescission by Employee, the foregoing arbitration provisions shall be of no force or effect, but the remaining provisions of this agreement shall continue in full force and effect.

§ 85.551 Provision for Compulsory Arbitration of Matters in Dispute

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a provision for compulsory arbitration of matters in dispute under an employment contract. It can be used if it has been decided that the employment agreement should include an arbitration clause providing that controversies involving the contract must be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association.

If the arbitration provision in this form is presented to the employee as a discrete document, rather than as part of a fully integrated employment contract, the separate arbitration provision should be signed by the employer and employee. If an employment contract refers to a separate arbitration provision, but the arbitration provision is not signed by the parties, the arbitration provision may not be enforceable [see Romo v. Y-3 Holdings, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1158-1160, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 208 (employee's signing of "acknowledgment" at end of employee handbook did establish assent to "mutual agreement to arbitrate," which was presented as separate section of handbook, with separate signature lines that were never signed by employee)].

This form has an optional provision that can be used to exclude certain matters from arbitration if that is the desire of the parties at the time of the execution of the agreement.

This form also contains an optional provision expressly waiving the employee's right to a judicial forum for statutory employment discrimination claims. To be enforceable, an agreement to arbitrate federal employment discrimination claims must include a clear and unmistakable waiver of a judicial forum [see 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett (2009), 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 408-414 (collective bargaining agreement provision that clearly and unmistakably requires union members to arbitrate statutory antidiscrimination claims is enforceable)]. Thus, a provision for the arbitration of "matters under dispute," which could be understood to mean matters in dispute under the contract, is insufficient to waive the employee's right to a judicial forum for statutory employment discrimination claims [see Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 396-397, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (collective bargaining agreement did not contain clear, unmistakable waiver, so court did not reach question of whether collective bargaining agreement can ever waive employees' right to litigate employment discrimination claims); Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26, 35-43 (individual employee can make agreement that waives right to judicial forum for employment discrimination claim); see also Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1153, 1154-1156 (no waiver of judicial remedy because employee signed document acknowledging receipt of "information booklet" that included arbitration clause, but acknowledgement of receipt did not explicitly mention arbitration clause or waiver of right to sue)]. For discussion of the validity of an agreement to arbitrate California statutory employment discrimination claims under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], see § 85.550[1][c].

For a provision stating that any disputed matter must be settled by arbitration only if either party requests it, and that the arbitration must be conducted in accordance with the California Arbitration Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2], see § 85.550. For a discussion of the general applicability of the California Arbitration Act and the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.], see § 85.550[1][b]. For a general discussion of the use of arbitration provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

Compulsory Arbitration

Any controversy or claim arising out of or relating to this agreement, or the breach thereof [optional:, except _____ (specify, e.g., controversies involving less than $1,500] shall be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association, and judgment on the award rendered may be entered in any court having jurisdiction. [Optional: This paragraph shall apply to any claim by Employee of employment discrimination under federal or state law, and both Employer and Employee hereby waive the right to litigate such claims in any federal or state court].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers agreements between professionals (consultants, advisors, analysts, and accountants) and their clients for services. The Legal Background discusses issues relevant to professional agreements in general, including the relationship between the parties, the form of the contract, and restrictions on competitive activity. The Legal Background also discusses the governing law, licensure, and regulation of various professionals, including investment advisers, financial consultants, life and disability insurance analysts, and accountants. The forms include formal written professional agreements and contract provisions for business consultants, including, for example, computer and statistical consultants, financial advisors, insurance analysts, and accountants. Also included is a contract between an author and publisher, and agreements for services by an insurance analyst, appraiser, auctioneer, private investigator, and an immigration consultant.

For coverage of the law governing independent contractors generally, and general forms for agreements with independent contractors, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors . Several other chapters cover specialized agreements with various types of independent contractors. Ch. 86A, Agreements for Legal Services, discusses professional agreements between attorneys and their clients. Ch. 87, Entertainment Contracts , contains agreements for entertainment-related services, including the services of entertainers, agents, and personal managers. Ch. 87A, Athlete Agents , contains forms relating to athlete agents. Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts , discusses home improvement and swimming pool contracting and home solicitation contracts. Ch. 90A, State Government Contracts , and Ch. 90B, Federal Government Contracts , cover federal, state, and local government contract practices and procedures. Ch. 91, Contracts With Sales Representatives , covers agreements with manufacturers' or suppliers' agents, distributors, consignees, and commission merchants. Ch. 92, Service Contracts , deals with contracts for product servicing and for personal services.

For coverage of the law governing employment contracts, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements . That chapter covers the elements and uses of written employment agreements other than collective bargaining agreements.

For an employment agreement between a professional corporation and a professional person such as an attorney or physician (typically used in connection with the incorporation of a professional practice), and related benefit provisions, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations . For detailed discussion of California and related federal employment laws, see California Employment Law(Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.10

§ 86.10 Employee and Independent Contractor Distinguished

An independent contractor generally is one who, in rendering services, exercises an independent occupation and deals with the "employer" only with respect to the results of the work, not the means by which it is to be accomplished. The chief common law factor in determining that one is an independent contractor is that the employer of an independent contractor has no right of control over the mode of performing the work involved [Green v. Soule (1904) 145 Cal. 96, 99, 78 P. 337] , while the key element of the employer-employee relationship is that the employer has the right to control and direct the activities of the employee [see Industrial Indem. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 130, 135, 156 P.2d 926] . In addition to the "control" factor, there are numerous other factors to be considered in determining whether a person is an employee or an independent contractor. These factors and related issues are discussed in detail in Ch. 84, Independent Contractors .

Whether a professional is classified as an employee or as an independent contractor has important consequences for both parties to the agreement. For example, an employer is required to withhold income tax and make unemployment insurance and Social Security contributions for employees, but not for independent contractors [see I.R.C. §§ 3102, 3111, 3401(a), 306(c); Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 135, 675, 976, 2602, 2652, 13005]. Further, under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer may be vicariously liable for torts committed by an employee against third parties, but a person who hires an independent contractor generally is not vicariously liable for the torts of the contractor [Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 250-252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 , overruled on other grounds, Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721] . Thus, the hirer of an independent contractor ordinarily is not liable to an employee of the contractor for injuries caused by the negligence of the contractor [Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1244-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617 (no liability under negligent hiring theory); Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 267, 955 P.2d 504 (no liability under "peculiar risk doctrine" even when hirer fails to require that special precautions be taken to avert peculiar risks of work); Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 (no liability under "peculiar risk doctrine")].

The forms in this chapter assume an independent contractor relationship between the contracting parties. For employment contracts, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.11

§ 86.11 Form of Contract

A contract engaging a consultant or adviser may be oral unless specifically required by statute to be in writing [Civ. Code § 1622]. However, if the agreement by its terms is not to be performed within a year from its making, it is invalid unless it is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624(a)]. For discussion of the statute of frauds and when a written contract is required, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.14[1]; see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds, § 530.12 (Matthew Bender), and California Points and Authorities, Ch. 216, Statute of Frauds (Matthew Bender).

Other than the basic requirements for the formation of any contract [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions], and the requirement of a writing, when applicable, under the statute of frauds, no special formalities are required in connection with the execution of an agreement with a consultant. In fact, in many cases, contracting parties do not use a written agreement. However, as a practical matter, setting out the parties' respective duties and obligations in writing may help prevent misunderstandings and unfulfilled expectations. A written document is also valuable in any litigation or arbitration proceeding arising from the engagement.

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.12

§ 86.12 Noncompetition Agreements

Contract provisions that restrain a person from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind are, to that extent void [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; see, e.g., Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407-408, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (covenant not to compete in sales representative agreement held void and unenforceable)]. California has a strong interest in protecting its workers from noncompetition agreements under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 [see Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 697, 706-708, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172, 59 P.3d 231 (despite state's strong interest, enjoining proceedings in another state requires exceptional circumstance that outweighs threat to judicial restraint and comity principles)].

However, certain restraints may be deemed reasonable and permissible. Whether an interference with the right to pursue a trade or occupation by otherwise lawful means lacks sufficient justification and is therefore illegal is determined in light of all the circumstances, by balancing the respective importance to society and the parties of protecting the activities interfered against permitting the inference [Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hosp. Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 810, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640 , overruled on other grounds, Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 ; Webb v. West Side Dist. Hosp. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 946, 952, 193 Cal. Rptr. 80 , overruled on other grounds, Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899] . Thus, for example, exclusive dealing contracts between hospitals and groups of physicians, if reasonable, have been upheld [see Centeno v. Roseville Community Hosp. (1979) 107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 69-70, 167 Cal. Rptr. 183] . Further, in another case, a provision in a contract between a hospital and a doctor for the recruitment and training of qualified emergency room doctors, under which the hospital agreed to pay the doctor a specified fee if it hired any doctor previously recruited by him did not restrain the employment of any professional person. The purpose of the contract was not to create a monopoly, but instead to allow the hospital to employ doctors originally recruited by the other party while protecting that party against unfair exploitation of his services [Webb v. West Side Dist. Hosp. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 946, 952-954, 193 Cal. Rptr. 80] .

For a sample noncompetition clause, see § 86.200[2]. Nondisclosure and consulting agreements are set forth in § 86.201[2] and § 86.202[2].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.13

§ 86.13 Investment Advisers

[1] Governing Law; Definition

Corp. Code §§ 25009, 25202, and 25230 et seq., together with implementing regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.231 et seq., (licensing and regulation; experts' liability); see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 260.240 et seq., 260.300 et seq. (general and miscellaneous provisions)], govern investment advisers. This law is administered by the Commissioner of Corporations.

"Investment adviser" means any person who, for compensation, engages in the business of advising others, either directly or through publications or writings, as to the value of securities or as to the advisability of investing in, purchasing or selling securities, or who, for compensation and as a part of a regular business, publishes, analyzes, or reports concerning securities. Certain financial institutions, attorneys and other professional people whose service is incidental to the practice of their profession, broker-dealers who receive no special compensation for their advice, and certain publishers are exempt from this definition [Corp. Code § 25009].

The adviser may not use the term "investment counsel" unless the adviser's principal business consists of acting as an investment adviser [Corp. Code § 25235(e)].

[2] License Required Unless Exempt

It is unlawful for any investment adviser to conduct business in California without a valid investment adviser's certificate issued by the Commissioner of Corporations, unless the investment adviser is exempt from licensing requirements [see Corp. Code § 25202] or is subject to Corp. Code § 25230.1 [Corp. Code § 25230(a); see Corp. Code § 25230(b) (rules relating to qualification and employment of investment adviser representatives), Corp. Code § 25230(c) (Commissioner's right to review investment advisor's disciplinary history)]. Corp. Code § 25230.1 exempts from licensing requirements persons registered under Section 203 of the federal Investment Advisors Act of 1940 [see 15 U.S.C. § 80b-3] and persons exempt from the definition of investment adviser under that Act [Corp. Code § 25230.1]. However, those persons may not conduct business in California unless they have fewer than six clients as specified in Corp. Code § 25202 or unless they comply with specified filing requirements [Corp. Code § 25230.1(a); see Corp. Code § 25230.1(b) (filing requirements)].

A person registered, licensed, or qualified (or exempt from registering, licensing, or qualifying) as an investment adviser by another state, who has not had any certificate denied or revoked under the California law regulating investment advisers or any predecessor statutes, is exempt from licensing requirements [see Corp. Code § 25230] if the investment adviser does not have a place of business in California and has had fewer than six clients who are California residents during the preceding 12 months [Corp. Code § 25202(a)].

[3] Application for Certificate

An applicant must file a prescribed application with the Commissioner [Corp. Code § 25231; see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.231 (form)]. The applicant must also pass a securities examination administered by one of the major stock exchange groups or pass the examination required to become a Chartered Financial Analyst, Chartered Investment Counselor, Certified Financial Planner, or Personal Financial Specialist. The examination must have been taken within two years prior to applying for the license [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.236]. The license is subject to suspension or revocation for certain specified violations [Corp. Code §§ 25232, 25232.1-25232.3; see [7][b], [c], below].

[4] Compensation

A contract between a licensed investment adviser and a client may not provide for the investment adviser to receive compensation based on a share of capital gains or appreciation earned by the client [Corp. Code § 25234(a)(1)]. However, the contract may provide for the adviser to be compensated on the basis of a percentage of the total value of the portfolio averaged over a specified period of time or taken as of a definite date [Corp. Code § 25234(b)].

[5] Regulations to Protect Clients' Funds

[a] Commissioner's Authority

The Commissioner is authorized to make appropriate rules to govern licensed investment advisers who have custody of their clients' funds or who have a power of attorney from their clients to execute transactions [Corp. Code § 25237]. An investment adviser may not do business in California unless he or she meets the standards of the Commissioner [Corp. Code § 25236]. Moreover, activities of investment advisers and persons associated with advisers must conform to the rules prescribed by the Commissioner to promote fair, equitable, and ethical principles [see Corp. Code § 25238].

[b] Trading for Advisor's Account

An investment advisor may not trade for the adviser's own account without full disclosure and the client's written consent [Corp. Code § 25235(c)].

[c] Client Trust Accounts; Limits on Aggregate Indebtedness

The client's funds must be segregated in trustee bank accounts containing only clients' funds, with separate records for each account. The advisor must notify the client of the manner in which these funds are maintained, and must send an itemized statement to the client at least every three months. At least once each year, an independent accountant must examine the records [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.237].

Regulations limit the aggregate indebtedness permitted an investment adviser and require specific levels of tangible net capital, depending on the adviser's degree of control over the client's funds [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.237.2 (minimum financial requirements); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.237.1 (alternate minimum financial requirements, operative until 1/1/05; see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.216.12 (minimum capital requirements for broker-dealers))].

[6] Agent for Service of Process; Filing Records and Reports

Every non-California applicant for an investment adviser's certificate and every investment adviser subject to Corp. Code § 25230.1 [see [2], above] must appoint the Commissioner as the applicant's agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 25240; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.240]. Every licensed investment adviser must make and keep all records and file all reports required by the Commissioner's rules, subject to the limitations of Section 222 of the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 [Corp. Code § 25241(a); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.241 et seq.; see also 15 U.S.C. § 80b-18a].

[7] Termination of Licensure

[a] Surrender

An investment adviser may apply to the Commissioner to surrender his or her adviser's certificate. The surrender will become effective within 30 days after the Commissioner receives the application, unless a revocation or suspension proceeding is pending when the application for surrender is filed, or a proceeding is instituted within 30 days thereafter. If a proceeding is pending or instituted, withdrawal becomes effective at a time and on any conditions determined by the Commissioner [Corp. Code § 25242(a); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.242 (application form be filed on Securities and Exchange Form BDW (Uniform Request for Broker-Dealer Withdrawal)); see also 17 C.F.R. 249.501a].

[b] Suspension

The Commissioner may suspend a certificate if an investment adviser fails to do any of the following [Corp. Code § 25242(c)]:

- Pay specified fees required by statute within 10 days after notice by the Commissioner that the fee is due and unpaid [see Corp. Code §§ 25217, 25218, 25236 (fees)].

- File any report required by statute within 10 days after notice by the commissioner that the report is due [see Corp. Code § Section 25241 (required reports)].

- Maintain any bond required statute [see Corp. Code §§ 25216(e), 25237].

- File an application, as required by statute, within the later of the time specified by statute or within 10 days after notice by the Commissioner that the application is required [see Corp. Code § 25211(a), (c)].

- Maintain any capital required by statute [see Corp. Code §§ 25216(c), 25237].

- Maintain records as required by statue [see Corp. Code § 25241].

[c] Revocation of Certificate

The Commissioner may revoke an investment adviser's certificate if the Commissioner finds that the investment adviser [Corp. Code § 25242(b)]:

- Is no longer in existence.

- Has ceased to do business as an investment adviser.

- Is subject to an adjudication of mental incompetence or to the control of a committee or conservator or guardian.

- Cannot be located after reasonable search.

The Commissioner may also revoke a certificate for the reasons enumerated in [b], above [see Corp. Code § 25242(c)].

Any person whose certificate is revoked must immediately surrender the certificate to the Commissioner [Corp. Code § 25244].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.14

§ 86.14 Financial Consultants (Proraters)

[1] Governing Law; Definition

Financial consultants acting as proraters are governed by the Check Sellers, Bill Payers, and Proraters Law [Fin. Code § 12000 et seq.] and the implementing regulations [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1775 et seq.].

A "prorater" is a person who receives money from a debtor for the purpose of distributing it among the debtor's creditors in full or partial payment, of the debtor's obligations [Fin. Code § 12002.1; see Nationwide Asset Servs., Inc. v. DuFauchard (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 (constructive receipt of debtor's funds is sufficient to bring person within statutory definition)]. The Commissioner of Corporations issues both general and special proraters licenses [see Fin. Code § 12200.5; see also [2], below]. The term "prorater" as used in this chapter refers to a general prorater, unless otherwise noted.

Licensed proraters are not "credit services organizations" [Civ. Code § 1789.12(a)] and therefore are not subject to the Credit Services Act [see Civ. Code § 1789.10 et seq.], which restricts the advertising and business practices of those organizations. (A credit services organization offers to provide or actually provides service designed to improve a person's credit rating or to obtain an extension of credit [Civ. Code § 1789.12(a)].)

Various persons and their authorized agents are exempt from the Check Sellers, Bill Payers, and Proraters Law. Exemptions include specified financial institutions, specified consumer finance lenders, attorneys in the course of their practice, creditors' associations, employment agencies providing services under Civ. Code § 1812.500 et seq., real estate licensees, transactions in which money or other property is paid to a "joint control agency," assignments for the benefit of creditors, or liquidation of a business or property, under supervision of a creditor's committee, public or certified public accountants in the course of their practice, persons receiving money for transmission to foreign countries when selling certain checks or drafts, and any group of foreign nation banks licensed to do business in California, when selling any foreign currency travelers' checks issued by the group [see Fin. Code § 12100]. In addition, nonprofit community service organizations that meet specified requirements are exempt for the requirements imposed on proraters [see Fin. Code § 12104].

[2] Licensure

A prorater must be licensed by the Commissioner [Fin. Code § 12200]. The only "person" eligible for a general proraters license is a corporation organized under California law for that purpose [Fin. Code § 12200.1]. However, a special proraters license may be issued to a qualified individual to engage in business as a business agent [Fin. Code § 12200.2]. A "business agent" is a person who engages in business as a prorater "as an incident to the business of advising, counseling, or directing persons in their investments, and in the organization and management of their affairs under an exclusive contract, the primary purpose of which is not the liquidation of existing indebtedness" [Fin. Code § 12002.2].

[3] Application for Licence

An application for a licence must be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the Commissioner [see Fin. Code § 12201; see also Fin. Code §§ 12202-12204 (information required in application)]. If, after investigating the background and experience of the applicant and the applicant's business plan, the Commissioner determines that the applicant has satisfied the requisite statutory requirements, the Commissioner will issue a license [see Fin Code § 12216; see also Fin. Code § 12214 (application fees and license fees)].

[4] Financial Requirements

Licensees must meet financial requirements and must maintain a surety bond or deposit with the Commissioner in a specified amount [Fin. Code § 12205; see Fin. Code §§ 12206-12213 (bond requirements)]. In addition to the surety bond, the Commissioner may require the licensee to obtain an adequate fidelity bond or deposit to cover each officer, employee, or agent, and every other person having access to or authority to draw against funds collected by or for the licensee. The bond or deposit is intended to protect the public from loss through embezzlement, mysterious disappearance, theft, holdup, or burglary [Fin. Code § 12223].

[5] Regulation of Proraters' Conduct

Fin. Code § 12300 et seq. contain an extensive list of rules concerning the conduct of proraters. The law regulates requirements for trust accounts [see Fin. Code § 12300.3 (creation of trust funds, handling, limitations and prohibitions)]; books, accounts, and records [see Fin. Code § 12303]; annual reports and financial statements [see Fin. Code § 12304]; place of business and branch offices [see Fin. Code § 12302]; maximum disbursement charges and origination fees [see Fin. Code §§ 12314, 13320]; advertising [see Fin. Code § 12311]; and prohibited conduct [see Fin. Code §§ 12314.1, 12317-12318, 12323-12329]. For further discussion, see § 86.220[1].

[6] Suspension or Revocation of License

The Commissioner may suspend or revoke a license, following a noticed hearing in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, based on [Fin. Code § 12400; see Fin. Code § 12402 (hearing)]:

- Any violation of the Check Sellers, Bill Payers, and Proraters Law or its implementing regulations.

- Failure to report within 10 days the establishment of a mobile unit, branch office, or agency location, or failure on demand of the Commissioner.

- Failure on demand of the commissioner to terminate and cancel any agency [see Fin. Code § 12301.4 (termination of agency)].

- Existence of any fact or condition that would have warranted the Commissioner's refusal to issue the license, if that fact or condition had existed at the time of the licensee's original application.

The Commissioner, on three days notice and a hearing, may suspend any license for a period not exceeding 30 days, pending investigation [Fin. Code § 12401]. The Commission may summarily suspend or revoke a license for failure to pay the required fee [Fin. Code § 12401.1; see Fin. Code § 12214 (fee)].

[7] Enjoining Certain Acts or Practices

Willful violation of the Check Sellers, Bill Payers, and Proraters Law is a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both [Fin. Code § 12102]. The Commissioner may investigate and bring an action to enjoin illegal acts or practices or to enforce compliance with the law [see Fin. Code §§ 12105(a), 12106(a)]. On a proper showing, a permanent or preliminary injunction, a regaining order, or a writ of mandate will be granted and a receiver or conservator may be appointed for the defendant's assets [see Fin. Code § 12105(a)]. The Commissioner, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, may levy administrative penalties against any person or licensee who violates the law or regulations [see Fin. Code §§ 12105(c), 12107].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.15

§ 86.15 Life and Disability Insurance Analysts

[1] Governing Law; Definition

Life and disability insurance analysts are governed by Ins. Code § 1831 et seq. A life and disability insurance analyst is a "person who, for a fee or compensation of any kind, paid by or derived from any person or source other than an insurer, advises, purports to advise, or offers to advise any person insured under, named as beneficiary of, or having any interest, in a life and disability insurance contract, in any manner concerning that contract or his or her rights in respect thereto" [Ins. Code § 32.5].

[2] Licensure

To qualify for a life and disability insurance analyst's license, a person may not be an officer or employee of an insurance company [Ins. Code § 1832] or a minor or nonresident of California [Ins. Code § 1833]. An eligible person must submit a written application to the Insurance Commissioner [Ins. Code § 1834]. The applicant must show his or her integrity, good reputation, knowledge of life or disability insurance, and generally that he or she is a fit or proper person to receive a license [see Ins. Code § 1836]. Further, the applicant must pass a written examination showing his or her qualifications to act as a life and disability insurance analyst [Ins. Code § 1839; see Ins. Code § 1840 (scope of examination)]. The applicant must file with the Insurance Commissioner, in writing, the applicant's true name and all fictitious names under which the applicant conducts or intends to conduct the business [Ins. Code § 1841] and must pay the required fees [Ins. Code § 1842].

No one is eligible to be licensed as a life and disability insurance analyst unless, for five years preceding the date of the examination, he or she has been licensed as both a life-only and accident and health licensee under Ins. Code § 1626(a)(1), (2) [Ins. Code § 1849]. A "life licensee" is a person authorized to act as a life agent. Licenses to act as a life agent include the following types [Ins. Code § 1626(a)(1), (2)]:

- Life only, which entitles the licensee to transact insurance coverage on human lives, including benefits of endowment and annuities, and may include benefits in the event of death or dismemberment by accident and benefits for disability income.

- Accident and health, which entitles the licensee to transact insurance coverage for sickness, bodily injury, or accident death, and may include benefits for disability income.

An accident and health agent licensee is also authorized to transact 24-hour care coverage [see Ins. Code § 1749.02 (definition)], in accordance with the requirements of Ins. Code § 1749(d) (prelicensing education) or 1749.33(d) (continuing education) [Ins. Code § 1626(b)].

An organization may hold a license to act as a life and disability insurance analyst, provided its organizational agreement (articles of incorporation or association or agreement of copartnership) do not forbid it to act in that capacity [Ins. Code § 1842.1(a)]. Only general partners or employees of partnerships, members, officers, or employees of associations, and corporate officers and employees are eligible to be named under an organizational license [Ins. Code § 1842.1(b)]. These individuals must also satisfy all the individual requirements applicable to life and disability insurance analysts [Ins. Code § 1842.1(c)].

[3] Exemptions from Licensure

Specified persons are exempt from the licensing requirement, including active members of the California state bar, qualified actuaries, bank or trust company officials, investment advisers, and certain employees who, on behalf of their employer or its employees, transact life or disability insurance with, but not on behalf of an insurer, or advise the employer or it employees concerning life or disability insurance [see Ins. Code § 1831].

[4] Acting Without License; Other Prohibited Acts

Any person who unlawfully acts or offers to act as a life and disability insurance analyst without a valid license is guilty of a misdemeanor [Ins. Code § 1844]. Further, any such activity may be enjoined as a public nuisance [Ins. Code § 1845].

A life and disability insurance analyst may not permit to be issued any statement that is known or should have been known to misrepresent the terms of a policy, the benefits and privileges promised, or any future dividend [see Ins. Code § 780]. In addition, an analyst may not make any statement that is known or should have been known to be a misrepresentation in order to induce a person to take out, refuse, change, or forfeit life or disability insurance [see Ins. Code § 781]. Any violation of these provisions is subject to a fine or imprisonment or both [see Ins. Code § 782; see also Ins. Code § 1737 et seq. (disciplinary actions)].

Insurance companies may not pay a commission to life and disability insurance analysts [Ins. Code § 1832]. Further, a life and disability insurance analyst may not charge a fee for any service that is customarily associated with soliciting insurance sales or servicing insurance contracts written by the analyst or contracts for which the analyst is receiving compensation from the insurer [Ins. Code § 1848]. Moreover, an analyst may not receive any fee unless that fee is based on a written agreement signed by the party to be charged [Ins. Code § 1848; see § 86.230].

Requirements for written agreements are covered in § 86.230[1].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.16

§ 86.16 Accountants--Types and Services

[1] In General

In discussing agreements for professional accounting services by accountants, it is important to differentiate between licensed and unlicensed accountants, and the services that each may provide. Some accounting services may be legally provided in California only by persons licensed by the State Board of Accountancy [see [5], below], while other accounting services may be provided by anyone, whether or not they are licensed [see [6], below].

[2] "Certified Public Accountants" and "Public Accountants"

"Certified public accountants" are persons and firms who have received from the Board a certified public accountant certificate and who hold valid permits to practice as such [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5033; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5072 (partnerships), 5150 (accountancy corporations)]. Such a person may be styled and known as a "certified public accountant" and may also use the abbreviation "C.P.A." No other person or firm is allowed to use that title, designation, or abbreviation, or any other title, designation, sign, card, or device tending to indicate that the person using it is a certified public accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5055]. In order to be licensed as a certified public accountant, a person must comply with education, examination, and experience requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5081, 5082, 5090; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5092, 5093, 5095 (experience requirements); Bus. & Prof. Code § 5094 (educational requirements); Bus. & Prof. Code § 5081.1 (additional requirements for registered public accountant)].

"Public accountants" are persons and firms who are registered with the State Board of Accountancy and who hold a valid permit for the practice of public accountancy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5034; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5072 (partnerships), 5150 (accountancy corporations)]. For a listing of the services constituting "public accountancy," see [3], below. Such a person may be styled and known as a "public accountant" and may also use the abbreviation "P.A." No other person or firm is allowed to use that title, designation, or abbreviation, or any other title, designation, sign, card, or device tending to indicate that the person using it is a public accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5056].

Certified public accountants and public accountants are both legally authorized to practice all aspects of public accountancy, and there is no practical distinction between the two classifications. The difference in terminology exists because those licensed as public accountants were originally "grandfathered" in under that classification when the Accountancy Act was revised in 1945. The Board does not license new public accountants.

[3] Unlicensed Individuals May Use Term "Accountant"

Unlicensed individuals are permitted by law to practice specified accounting services [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5051(f)-(i), 5052; see also [6], below]. Such persons are not allowed to use the title or designation "chartered accountant," "certified accountant," "enrolled accountant," "registered accountant," "licensed accountant," or any other title or designation likely to be confused with "certified public accountant" or "public accountant," or any of the abbreviations "C.A.," "E.A.," "R.A.," or "L.A.," or similar abbreviations likely to be confused with "C.P.A." or "P.A." [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5058 (limited exceptions for certain foreign titles and enrolled agents licensed to practice before IRS; see [4], below)]. Regulations of the State Board of Accountancy state that use of the term "accountant," when used either singly or collectively in conjunction with other titles, is likely to be confused with the titles "certified public accountant" and "public accountant" within the meaning the statute [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 2]. However, the California Supreme Court has held that unlicensed persons are constitutionally permitted to call themselves "accountants" as long as the use of that term does not stand to potentially mislead the public regarding the user's licensee or nonlicensee status [Moore v. California State Bd. of Accountancy (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 999, 1023, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358, 831 P.2d 798] . This usually means that the word "accountant" or similar generic term is used in conjunction with a modifier or modifiers that serve to dispel any possibility of confusion, such as an express disclaimer stating that the "accounting" services being offered do not require a state license [Moore v. California State Bd. of Accountancy (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 999, 1024, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358, 831 P.2d 798] .

For a discussion of accounting and related services that may lawfully be rendered by unlicensed individuals, see [6], below.

[4] Enrolled Agents

An enrolled agent is a person who is authorized by the Internal Revenue Service to represent taxpayers before the IRS [see 31 C.F.R. § 10 et seq. (Treasury Dept. Circular 230)]. Persons enrolled to practice before the Internal Service and recognized as enrolled agents may use the abbreviation "E.A." in California, regardless of whether or not they are licensed in California as certified public accountants or public accountants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5058]. Other persons and firms are prohibited from using those initials, whether or not they are certified public accounts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5058].

[5] Practice of Public Accountancy

Persons or firms generally must be licensed by the Board (in other words, be a CPA or public accountant) in order to practice "public accountancy" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5050(a)]. There are limited exceptions for persons licensed in another state or country [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5050(a)]:

- Practice that is temporary and incident to practice in another state, provided the person or firm does not solicit clients in California, does not assert or imply licensure in California, and does not develop, implement, of market to California consumers any abusive tax avoidance transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5050(b), repealed eff. January 1, 2011].

- Temporary practice in California incident to an engagement in the country in which the person who holds a valid, current license or other authority to practice public accountancy, provided the temporary practice is regulated by the foreign country and performed under the accounting or auditing standards of that country, and that the person does not hold himself or herself out as a holder of a California license or practice privilege [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5050(c)].

- Practice that is limited to preparing tax returns for natural persons who are California residents or estate tax returns for the estates of natural persons who were clients at the time of death, provided the person or firm holds a valid, current license or permit to practice public accountancy from another state [Bus & Prof. Code § 5054(a)].

- Practice of public accountancy through the holder of a California practice privilege by a certified public accounting firm authorized to practice in another state that does not have an office in California, provided the practice is limited to authorized practice by the holder of the practice privilege [see Bus & Prof. Code § 5096.12, repealed January 1, 2011].

Practicing public accountancy in California without being properly licensed is a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5120].

Except as discussed below, a person is considered to be engaged in the practice of public accountancy, and therefore must be licensed as a CPA or public accountant, if that person does any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5051]:

- Holds himself or herself out to the public as acting in that capacity.

- Maintains an office for that practice.

- Performs, or offers to perform, any services for a client for compensation that involve audit, examination, verification, investigation, certification, presentation, or review of financial transactions and accounting records.

- Prepares or certifies for clients reports on audits or examinations of books and records of account, balance sheets, and other financial, accounting, and related schedules, exhibits, statements, or reports that are to be used for publication or for the purpose of obtaining credit or for filing with a court or with any governmental agency, or for any other purpose.

- In general, or as an incident to that work, renders professional services to clients for compensation in any matters relating to accounting procedure and to the recording, presentation, or certification of financial information or data.

- Keeps books, makes trial balances, prepares statements, makes audits, or prepares reports, all as a part of bookkeeping operations for clients.

- Prepares, or signs as the tax preparer, tax returns for clients.

- Prepares personal financial or investment plans or provides clients products or services of others in implementation of personal financial or investment plans.

- Provides management consulting services to clients.

Note that an unlicensed person may provide the last four categories of services listed above as long as that person does not hold himself or herself out, solicit, or advertise for clients using the certified public accountant or public accountant title or abbreviation [see [6], below]. A person is not holding himself or herself out, or soliciting or advertising for clients solely by reason of displaying a C.P.A. or P.A. certificate in his or her office or identifying himself or herself as a C.P.A. or P.A. on other than signs, advertisements, letterhead, business cards, publications directed to clients or potential clients, or on financial or tax documents of a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5051].

After 2005, an individual whose principal place of business is not in California and who has a valid and current license, certificate, or permit to practice public accountancy from another state may practice public accountancy in California under a practice privilege, without obtaining a California certificate or license, if the individual satisfies one of the following requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5096(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5096(c),(e) (procedure to obtain practice privilege; obligations of practicing under privilege)]:

- The individual has continually practiced public accountancy as a certified public accountant under a valid license issued by any state for at least four of the last 10 years.

- The individual has a license, certificate, or permit from a state determined by the Board to have education, examination, and experience qualifications for licensure substantially equivalent to California's qualifications [see Bus & Prof. Code § 5093 (qualifications)].

- The individual possesses education, examination, and experience qualifications for licensure determined by the Board to be substantially equivalent to California's qualifications.

[6] Services for Which License Not Required

As noted in [5], above, persons not licensed as public accountants or certified public accountants may provide the following services as long as they do not hold themselves out to be licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5051]:

- Keeping books, making trial balances, preparing statements, making audits, or preparing reports, all as a part of bookkeeping operations for clients.

- Preparing or signing as the tax preparer, tax returns for clients.

- Preparing personal financial or investment plans or providing clients products or services of others in implementation of personal financial or investment plans.

- Providing management consulting services to clients.

In addition, the statutes regulating the practice of public accountancy are specifically made inapplicable to any person who, as an employee, independent contractor, or otherwise, contracts with one or more persons, organizations, or entities, for the purpose of keeping books, making trial balances, statements, making audits or preparing reports, all as a part of bookkeeping operations, provided that such trial balances, statements, or reports are not issued over the name of that person as having been prepared or examined by a certified public accountant or public accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5052].

[7] Exemption for Employees, Assistants, and Attorneys

Unlicenced employees and assistants of certified public accountants or public accountants may perform services constituting public accountancy, provided that they are under the control and supervision of a properly licensed person and they do not issue statements over their own names [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5053].

An attorney at law, acting in connection with his or her practice, is exempt from the accountancy law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5053].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.17

§ 86.17 Accountants--Regulation

[1] Regulatory Authority

The practice of public accountancy is regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq. and by 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 1 et seq. The regulatory authority is Department of Consumer Affairs, State Board of Accountancy ("Board") [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000, repealed January 1, 2006)]. The Board may receive and investigate complaints and conduct investigations or hearings with or without filing a complaint, and obtain evidence relating to and involving the conduct of licensees or any violation or alleged violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5103]. The Board may issue subpoenas in connection with an investigation or action authorized by Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5108].

[2] Rules of Professional Conduct

The Board, by regulation, may prescribe, amend or repeal rules of professional conduct appropriate to establish and maintain a high standard of integrity and dignity in the profession [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5018]. The rules of professional conduct applicable to public accountants are found in 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 50 et seq. All Board licensees, whether privately employed or engaged in public accountancy, are subject to Board's rules of professional conduct [35 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 120, 122 (1960)] .

[3] Discipline by State Board of Accountancy

After notice and hearing, the Board may revoke, suspend, or refuse to renew any permit or certificate, or censure the permit or certificate holder, for unprofessional conduct, including, but is not limited to, the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5100]:

- A conviction of any crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, and duties of a certified public accountant or a public accountant. For this purpose, a plea of nolo contendere is considered a conviction, and even if a person is permitted to withdraw a plea of guilty and enter a plea of not guilty or if a verdict against that person is set aside or the action is subsequently dismissed, that person is still considered to have been convicted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5106].

- A violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 478, 498, 499, dealing with false statements or omissions in the application for a license, in obtaining a certificate as a certified public accountant, in obtaining registration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq., or in obtaining a permit to practice public accountancy.

- Dishonesty, fraud, gross negligence or repeated negligent acts committed in the same or different engagements, for the same or different clients, or any combination of engagements or clients, each resulting in a violation of applicable professional standards indicating a lack of competency in the practice of public accountancy or in the performance of the bookkeeping operations described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 5052.

- Cancellation, revocation, or suspension of a certificate, other authority to practice or refusal to renew the certificate or other authority to practice as a certified public accountant or a public accountant, or any other discipline by any other state or foreign country.

- Violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097, relating to auditing documentation [see § 86.18[12]].

- Violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5120, relating to unauthorized practice of public accountancy [see [6], above].

- Willful violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq. or any rule or regulation promulgated by the Board.

- Suspension or revocation of the right to practice before any governmental body or agency [see Clare v. State Bd. of Accountancy (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 294, 302, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 481 (requiring substantial relationship between suspension or revocation and accountant's qualifications, functions, or duties)].

- Fiscal dishonesty or breach of fiduciary responsibility of any kind.

- Knowing preparation, publication, or dissemination of false, fraudulent, or materially misleading financial statements, reports, or information.

- Embezzlement, theft, misappropriation of funds or property, or obtaining money, property, or other valuable consideration by fraudulent means or false pretenses.

- The imposition of any discipline, penalty, or sanction on a registered public accounting firm or associated person of the firm, or both, or on any other holder of a permit, certificate, license, or other authority to practice in California, by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board or the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, or their designees under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 or other federal legislation.

- Unlawfully engaging in the practice of public accountancy in another state.

The Board may also issue subpoenas and conduct investigations and hearings in connection with any violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq., governing accountants [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5103, 5108, 5109].

Revocation of an accountancy license is not penal. The only purpose of such an action is to protect the public from incompetence and lack of integrity [Murrill v. Board (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 709, 712, 218 P.2d 569] .

Cause for discipline by the Board does not void or render nonexistent agreements made in contravention of the rules. For example, when an accounting firm was engaged in the practice of accountancy, and had as a partner a woman who was not a licensee in good standing in California (thus contravening the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5072), the Board could discipline her and her partners in the firm or revoke the firm's registration and permit to practice. However, the fact that the firm was in violation of the rules of professional conduct did not void or render nonexistent any agreement the firm had with her or with its insurance carrier [Montgomery v. Cal. Accountants Mutual Ins. Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 854, 859-860, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39] .

[4] Enjoining Acts or Practices Violating Accounting Statutes

Whenever in the judgment of the Board or, with its approval, the administrative committee, any person has engaged, or is about to engage, in any acts or practices that constitute, or will constitute, an offense against Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq. (provisions regulating practice of public accountancy), the Board may apply to the appropriate court for an order enjoining those acts or practices. On a showing by the Board that a person has engaged, or is about to engage, in any act or practice that constitutes an offense under Bus. & Prof. Code § 5000 et seq., the court must grant an injunction, restraining order, or other order that may be appropriate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5122].

[5] Advertising

A certified public accountant or a public accountant may not advertise in any manner that is false, fraudulent, or misleading in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 63].

CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.18

§ 86.18 Accountants--Accounting Firms

[1] Sole Proprietorship

An individual may engage in the practice of accountancy as a sole proprietorship if he or she holds the required certificate and has been issued a valid permit to practice [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5070].

[2] General Partnership

A partnership, other than a limited partnership, may be registered with the Board as certified public accountants, provided that it meets all of the following requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5072]:

- At least one general partner is a California certified public accountant, public accountant, or accountancy corporation [see [3], below], in good standing or has applied for a C.P.A. certificate.

- Each partner personally engaged in the practice of accounting in California is a California licensee in good standing or has applied for a C.P.A. certificate.

- Each partner not personally engaged in practice in California is a certified public accountant in good standing of some state.

- Each resident manager in charge of a firm office in California is a California licensee in good standing or has applied for a C.P.A. certificate.

[3] Accountancy Corporation

[a] Definition

An accountancy corporation is a corporation that is registered with the Board and has a current valid certificate of registration from the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5150; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5152.1 (permit to practice must be renewed biannually)]. Subject to all applicable statutes, rules, and regulations, an accountancy corporation is entitled to practice accountancy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5150; 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 75.5].

[b] Requirements

An accountancy corporation must be a domestic corporation, or a foreign corporation that is qualified to transact intrastate business under the General Corporation Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5151; see Corp. Code § 13404.5 (qualification of foreign professional corporations); see also Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations]. Each officer, director, shareholder, or employee of the corporation who will render professional services must be licensed either in California or in the jurisdictions in which that person practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5151; 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 75.5(b); see Corp. Code § 13401(d) ("licensed person" defined); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5053 (work of unlicenced employees), 5079 (nonlicensee owners)]. Further, each director, shareholder, and officer must be an accountant or a person licensed to render accounting services in the jurisdictions in which the person practices, with two exceptions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5154]. First, if the corporation has only one shareholder, this shareholder must be sole director, president, and treasurer, and the other corporate officers need not be licensed persons [Corp. Code § 13403]. Second, a corporation may have owners who are not licensed as certified public accountants or public accountants if the following conditions are met [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5154, 5079(a)(1)-(6)]:

- Nonlicensee owners must be natural persons or entities, such as partnerships or professional corporations. Each ultimate beneficial owner of an equity interest in that entity must be a natural person materially participating in the business conducted by the firm or an entity controlled by the firm.

- Nonlicensee owners must materially participate in the business of the firm, or an entity controlled by the firm, and their ownership interest must revert to the firm on the cessation of any material participation.

- Licensees must in the aggregate, directly or beneficially, comprise a majority of owners, except that firms with two owners may have one owner who is a nonlicensee.

- Licensees must in the aggregate, directly or beneficially, hold more than half of the equity capital and possess majority voting rights.

- Nonlicensee owners must not hold themselves out as certified public accountants or public accountants, and each licensed firm must disclose actual or potential involvement of nonlicensee owners in the services provided.

- There must be a certified public accountant or public accountant who has ultimate responsibility for each financial statement attestation and compilation service engagement.

However, except as permitted by the State Board of Accountancy in the exercise of its discretion, a person may not become a nonlicensee owner or remain a nonlicensee owner if the person has done either of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5079(a)(7); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5079(b) (obligation to report, in writing, occurrence of any of following events)]:

- Been convicted of any crime, an element of which is dishonesty or fraud, under the laws of any state, of the United States, or of any other jurisdiction.

- Had a professional license or the right to practice revoked or suspended for reasons other than nonpayment of dues or fees, or has voluntarily surrendered a license or right to practice with disciplinary charges or a disciplinary investigation pending, and has not been reinstated by a licensing or regulatory agency of any state or of the United States, including, but not limited to, the Securities and Exchange Commission or Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, or of any other jurisdiction.

Each office of an accountancy corporation engaged in the practice of public accountancy in California must be managed by a certified public accountant or public accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5158]. Further, all work in an office of a certified public accountant or public accountant in California which is not under the personal management of such an accountant must be supervised by a certified public accountant or public accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5078].

[c] Prohibition Against Unprofessional Conduct

An accountancy corporation may not do or fail to do any act, if the act or its omission would constitute unprofessional conduct under any statute, rule, or regulation. In the conduct of its practice, the corporation must observe and be bound by those statutes, rules, and regulations to the same extent as a person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5156].

[4] Limited Liability Partnerships

Public accountants may also form limited liability partnerships. For discussion of this form of entity, see Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.19

§ 86.19 Accountants--Rights and Duties

[1] Right to Practice Accountancy

An accountant does not acquire a vested right to practice accountancy by reason of his or her registration certificate. The general right to engage in a trade, profession, or business is subject to the power inherent in the state to make necessary rules and regulations respecting the use and enjoyment of property necessary for the preservation of the public health, morals, comfort, order, and safety. These regulations may not deprive owners of property without due process of law. Thus, no person can acquire a vested right to continue, even when licensed, in a business, trade, or occupation that is subject to legislative control under a state's police powers [Murrill v. Board (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 709, 711-712, 218 P.2d 569] .

[2] Duties to Clients; Malpractice

Accountants have been recognized as a skilled professional class subject generally to the same rules of liability for negligence in the practice of their profession as are members of other skilled professions [see, e.g., Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 820, 831-833, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (action for accounting malpractice based on allegedly negligent trial assistance)]. As members of a skilled profession, they are experts [Lindner v. Barlow, Davis & Wood (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 660, 665, 27 Cal. Rptr. 101] . The services of experts are sought because of their special skill. They have a duty to exercise the ordinary skill and competence of members of their profession, and a failure to discharge that duty will subject them to liability for negligence. Those who hire experts, however, are not justified in expecting infallibility; they can expect only reasonable care and competence [Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 489, 275 P.2d 15 (action by purchaser of land against defendant hired to make fill test); Lindner v. Barlow, Davis & Wood (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 660, 665, 27 Cal. Rptr. 101 (malpractice action against accountants)].

The elements of a cause of action in tort for accounting malpractice based on negligence are [Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 820, 833, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (applying trial-within-trial standard to accounting malpractice action based on allegedly negligent litigation support)]:

- The duty of the accountant to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of the profession commonly possess and exercise;

- Breach of the duty;
- Proximate causal connection between the negligent conduct and the resulting injury; and
- Actual loss or damage resulting from the accountant's negligence.

An action against an accountant for failure to perform his or her obligation to the person employing him or her may be based on breach of a contract. If an accountant contracts to do a specific thing, his or her obligation is not limited to the exercise of ordinary care but is a positive, specific duty [L. B. Laboratories, Inc. v. Mitchell (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 56, 63, 244 P.2d 385] . However, when the accountant is retained to conduct an independent audit report, the accountant's responsibility to the intended beneficiaries of that report may influence the accountant's relationship to his or her client. Indeed, the importance of the independent audit report and the credence with which it is viewed by third parties [see [4], below] are reflected in the standard to which the profession is held. The public reliance on the objectivity and integrity of certified public accountants to maintain the orderly function of commerce imposes a public interest responsibility on them [National Med. Transp. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 428, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720] . By certifying the public reports that collectively depict a corporation's financial status, the independent auditor assumes a public responsibility transcending any employment relationship with the client. Thus, an accounting firm may resign as independent auditor of a company without issuing an opinion [Nat'l Medical Transportation Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 428-432, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720 (firm presented evidence that resignation was justified by lack of cooperation from client's management, firm's loss of faith in client's integrity, and threats from client's chief executive officer compromising firm's independence as support for good cause)].

[3] Liability to Persons Not in Privity

In general, an accountant has no liability to third parties not in privity. The California Supreme Court has rejected the prior rule that accountants owe a duty of care to all persons who reasonably and foreseeably rely on the accountant's professional opinions [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 405-406 n.15, 416, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 (overruling Int'l Mortgage Co. v. John P. Butler Accountancy Corp. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 806, 223 Cal. Rptr. 218)]. There is now a strict privity rule, under which an auditor's liability for general negligence in the conduct of an audit of its client's financial statements is confined to the client--that is, the person who contracts for or engages the audit services. Other persons may not recover on a pure negligence theory [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] . This rule has been held to be retroactive in application [Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Touche Ross & Co. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1086, 1092, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29] .

Although parties who are not in a contractual relationship with an accountant may not sue for general negligence, intended beneficiaries of audit reports who are known to the auditor and for whose benefit the auditor renders the report may recover on a theory of negligent misrepresentation [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 ; see Civ. Code § 1710(2)]. This is because nonclients of the auditor are connected with the audit through receipt of and express reliance on the audit report. Therefore, the report, not the audit itself, is the foundation of the third person's claim [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 412-413, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .

In addition to negligent misrepresentation, an auditor may be liable to third parties for intentional fraud in the preparation of an audit report. In such a suit, it must be shown that the auditor had no belief in the truth of the statements made and that the auditor made them recklessly, even though the auditor may not have had actual knowledge of the false or baseless character of its opinion [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 414-415, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] .

For detailed discussion of malpractice issues and litigation forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 462, Public Accountants (Matthew Bender).

[4] Confidential Relationship Between Client and Accountant

A confidential relationship exists between a certified public accountant or public accountant and the accountant's client or former client. This relationship prevents the accountant from disclosing any information obtained from the client, unless the client consents or disclosure is required by a subpoena or summons enforceable by court order [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 54(a)]. However, this confidentiality requirement does not bar a licensee from responding [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 54(b)]:

- To an official inquiry from a federal or state government regulatory agency.
- To another licensee in connection with a proposed sale or merger of the licensee's professional practice.
- To another licensee to the extent necessary for purposes of professional consultation and to professional standards review, ethics or quality control peer review organizations.
- When specifically required by law.

[5] Use of Accountant's Name

A licensed accountant may not permit another person, other than a partner or an employee, to use the accountant's name in connection with an accountancy practice [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 55].

[6] Fees and Commissions

A certified public accountant or public accountant generally may not pay a fee [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(f) ("fee" defined)] or commission to obtain a client or accept a fee or commission for referring a client to the products and services of a third party [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(a)]. However, a public accountant who is not performing any of the services specified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(c) (listed below), and who complies with specified disclosure requirements, may accept a fee or commission for providing a client with products or services provided by a third party in conjunction with services provided by the accountant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(d) (disclosure of fact of commission required)].

A public accountant is prohibited from performing services for a client, or an officer or director of a client, or a client-sponsored retirement plan, for a commission, or receiving a commission from a third party for providing products or services of that third party to a client, or an officer or director of a client, or a client-sponsored retirement plan, during the period in which the accountant also performs for the client, or officer or director of the client, or client-sponsored retirement plan, any of the following services, and during the period covered by any historical financial statements involved in these services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(c)]:

- An audit or review of a financial statement.
- A compilation of a financial statement when the accountant reasonably expects that a third party will use the financial statement and the compilation report does not disclose a lack of independence.
- An examination of prospective financial information.

A public accountant who is not prohibited from performing services for a commission, or from receiving a commission, and who is paid or expects to be paid a commission, must disclose that fact to any client or entity to whom the accountant recommends or refers a product or service to which the commission relates [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(d)]. The Board is required by statute to adopt regulations implementing this requirement, including, at a minimum, that the disclosure satisfy the following conditions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5061(d)]:

- Be in writing and be clear and conspicuous.
- Be signed by the recipient of the product or service.
- State the amount of the commission or the basis on which it will be computed.
- Identify the source of the payment and the relationship between the source of the payment and the person receiving the payment.
- Be presented to the client at or before the time the recommendation of the product or service is made.

[7] Contingent Fees

A licensed accountant is prohibited from performing, for a contingent fee, any professional services for, or receiving a contingency fee from, a client for whom the licensee or the licensee's firm performs [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62(a)(1)]:

- An audit or review of a financial statement.
- A compilation of a financial statement when the licensee expects or reasonably should expect that a third party will use the financial statement and the licensee's compilation report does not disclose a lack of independence.
- An examination of prospective financial information.
- Any other attest engagement when the licensee accountant expects or reasonably should expect that a third party will use the related attestation report.
- Any other services requiring independence.

In addition, a licensed accountant may not charge a contingent fee to do any of the following [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62(a)(2)-(4)]:

- Prepare an original tax return for any client.
- Prepare an amended tax return, claim for tax refund, or perform other similar tax services for any client.
- Perform an engagement as a testifying expert.

For these purposes, a "contingency fee" is a fee established for the performance of any service under an arrangement in which no fee will be charged unless a specific finding or result is attained, or in which the amount of the fee is otherwise dependent on the finding or result of the service [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62(b)]. However, fees are not regarded as being contingent if fixed by courts or governmental entities acting in a judicial or regulatory capacity, or in tax matters if determined based on the results of judicial proceedings or the findings of governmental agencies in a judicial or regulatory capacity, or there is a reasonable expectation of substantive review by a taxing authority [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62(b)].

[8] Conflict of Interest

A licensee who is engaged in the practice of public accounting may not concurrently engage in any business or occupation that impairs his or her objectivity or creates a conflict of interest in rendering professional services [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 57]. In addition, a licensee (or a firm of which the licensee is a partner or shareholder) may not express an opinion on financial statements of an enterprise unless the licensee and his or her firm are independent from the enterprise being examined [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 65]. Independence must be determined by assessing the accountant's financial, promotional, managerial, and other relationships with the enterprise to determine whether, in the circumstances, his or her opinion would be considered independent, objective, and unbiased by one who had knowledge of all the facts [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 65].

A licensee may not accept employment with a publicly traded corporation or its affiliate within 12 months of the issuance of a financial statement report if both of the following are true [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5062.2]:

- The licensee has participated in an audit engagement for the corporation and held responsibility, with respect to the audit engagement, requiring the licensee to exercise significant judgment in the audit process. Responsibilities meeting these requirements include, but are not limited to, positions, however titled, in which the licensee was the person in charge of the fieldwork, up through positions in which the licensee was a partner on the engagement.

- The employment would permit the licensee to exercise significant authority over accounting or financial reporting, including authority over the controls related to those functions.

[9] Unauthorized Practice of Law

No person may practice law in California unless he or she is an active member of the State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6125]. Anyone advertising himself or herself as practicing or entitled to practice law or otherwise practicing law who is not an active member of the State Bar, or otherwise authorized pursuant to statute or court rule to practice law in California at the time of doing so, is guilty of a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6126(a)]. In addition, an accountant who has engaged in the illegal practice of law has no cause of action for fees for services rendered in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6126 [see Agran v. Shapiro (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 807, 826 , 273 P.2d 619] .

[10] Ownership of Papers

All statements, records, schedules, working papers, and memoranda made by a licensee or a partner, shareholder, officer, director, or employee of a licensed public accountant, incident to, or in the course of, rendering services to a client in the practice of public accountancy are and remain the property of the licensee, in the absence of an express agreement between the licensee and the client to the contrary, with the exception of [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5037(a)]:

- Reports submitted by that licensee to the client.

- Records that are part of the client's records.

None of these statements, records, schedules, working papers, or memoranda may be sold, transferred, or bequeathed, without the consent of the client or the client's personal representative or assignee, to anyone other than one or more surviving partners or stockholders or new partners or stockholders of the licensee, or any combined or merged firm successor in interest to the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5037(a)].

A licensed public accountant is required to furnish the following to his or her client or former client, on request and reasonable notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5037(b)]:

- A copy of the licensee's working papers, to the extent that those working papers include records that would ordinarily constitute part of the client's records and are not otherwise available to the client.

- Any accounting or other records belonging to, or obtained from or on behalf of, the client which the licensee removed from the client's premises or received for the client's account.

The licensee may make and retain copies of documents of the client when they form the basis for work done by the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5037(b)(2)].

[11] Audit Documentation

Audit documentation is an accountant's records of the procedures applied, tests performed, information obtained and pertinent conclusions reached in an audit engagement. Audit document must include, but is not limited to [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097(a)]:

- Programs.

- Analyses.

- Memoranda.

- Letters of confirmation and representation.

- Copies or abstracts of company documents.

- Schedules or commentaries prepared or obtained by the accountant.

Audit documentation must be sufficient to enable a reviewer with relevant knowledge and experience, but no previous connection to the audit engagement, to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the auditing or other procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and to determine the identity of the persons who performed and reviewed the work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097(b)]. Failure of the documentation to document procedures applied, tests performed, evidence obtained, and relevant conclusions reached raises a rebuttable presumption that the procedures were not applied, tests were not performed, information was not obtained, and relevant conclusions were not reached. This rebuttable presumption affects the burden of proof relative to the portions of the audit not documented. The burden may be met by a preponderance of the evidence [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097(c)].

Audit documentation must be maintained for the longer of a minimum period of seven years--which will be extended during any investigation, disciplinary action or legal action involving the accountant or the accountant's firm--or a period sufficient to satisfy professional standards and to comply with applicable laws and regulations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097(d), (e)]. Accountants must maintain a written documentation retention and destruction policy setting out the accountant's practices and procedures complying with the documentation requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5097(f)].

1. Name, address, and telephone number of professional to be engaged.

2. Name of person or entity ("client") for whom work will be performed, and address and telephone number of client's principal place of business.

3. Person authorized to enter into contracts on behalf of client:

a. Name.

b. Title.

c. Office address.

d. Source of authority, either:
(1) Resolution of board of directors or partners.

(2) Other.

4. Nature or description of client's business activities.

5. Nature or description of any trade secrets proprietary to client, to be protected under agreement for professional services, such as:

a. Customer lists or contracts.

b. Financial data.

c. Cost and sales data.

d. Formulae or processes.

e. Devices or models.

f. Drawings.

g. Plans or information that particular matters are being planned or discussed.

6. Duration of agreement, either:

a. Specified term, including:

(1) Length of initial term.

(2) Dates on which initial term is to begin and end.

(3) Length of renewal term or terms, if desired.

b. By project.

7. Any required licenses or permits required to perform professional services.

8. Description of duties professional will perform:

NOTE:

It is important that the description of duties be as detailed as reasonably possible. Misunderstanding between the parties as to what specific tasks are included within the overall project is probably the greatest single source of trouble in connection with the preparation of agreements for professional services. The description should include both a description of the overall project or service and a breakdown of what is included in each major component of the overall task.

As important as what services will be included in the agreement is the question of what related services will not be included. Both prospective parties to such an agreement should explore in detail what services are and are not included in the agreement.

a. As part of basic package of services specified in agreement.

b. At extra cost in addition to basic services.

9. Limitations on professional's authority, such as:

a. Matters that will require prior approval of client, if applicable.

b. Matters requiring exercise of professional's discretion.

10. Amount and nature of compensation:

a. Per hour.

b. Per job.

c. For each particular component of total project, if appropriate.

d. Frequency of payment.

11. Amount of contingency fee, if allowed, and frequency of payment.

NOTE:
Use of contingent fees by a licensed accountant ordinarily is impermissible [see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62; § 86.19[7]].

12. Amount of royalty and frequency of payment.

13. Ownership or disposition of professional's inventions, writings, or creations.

a. Assignment to client with or without royalties payable to professional; or

b. Title retained by professional.

14. Grounds or methods for terminating agreement:

a. Completion of task.

b. Termination by either or both parties on notice.

c. Death of professional or client.

d. Willful breach.

e. Habitual neglect of duties.

f. Dishonesty, fraud, misrepresentation, or other acts of moral turpitude.

15. Effect of merger, transfer of assets, or dissolution of client on agreement for professional services.

B. Preliminary Determinations
1. General Determinations for Professional Services Agreements

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.110

§ 86.110 Relationship Between the Parties

NOTE:

An attorney who is employed to draft an agreement for professional services should first consider what the relationship between the parties is or should be, and whether the professional will be classified as an independent contractor or employee. The forms in this chapter assume an independent contractor-relationship between the contracting parties. For forms suitable to use if an employment relationship exists, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements .

1. Determine whether potential engagement is more like independent contractor relationship than employer-employee relationship [see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors].

NOTE:

Even if both of the parties regard the professional as an independent contractor, circumstances can easily arise in which a professional may be classified as an employee for purposes of California wage and hours of work laws, workers' compensation and unemployment purposes, and federal income tax withholding. For a detailed discussion of the factors that are used to determine whether a person is an employee or an independent contractor, see Ch. 84, Independent Contractors .

2. If contemplated relationship is not that of independent contractor-client, determine whether it is that of employer and employee [see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements].

3. Consider whether partnership or joint venture would be more suitable relationship [see Ch. 15, Part A, Formation of General Partnerships].

4. Determine whether contemplated relationship is that of professional employed by his or her professional corporation [for employment contract, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations].

5. If professional is to act in representative capacity:

a. Consider whether granting that person power of attorney is necessary or appropriate to accomplish objectives [see Ch. 98, Powers of Attorney].

b. Consider whether individual should be given authority to act as client's agent.

6. Assess strength of client's negotiating position with respect to terms of contemplated services:

a. Importance of service to client.

b. Immediacy of client's need.

c. Whether services of comparable quality are available from other professionals at a similar price.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
B. Preliminary Determinations
1. General Determinations for Professional Services Agreements

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.111

§ 86.111 Need for Written Contract

1. Determine whether statute of frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] requires agreement for professional services to be in writing.

a. Determine whether contemplated contract will provide that it will not be performed within one year from the time of its making.

NOTE:
A contract that will expressly not be performed within a year of making is invalid unless it or a memorandum of the contract is in writing and signed by the party to be charged [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1)].

b. Consider whether contemplated contract will be such that it cannot possibly be performed within one year.

NOTE:
A contract is within the statute of frauds if, under its terms, the professional cannot possibly perform it completely within one year from the making of the contract [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 343, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345] . For discussion and references to other detailed discussions of statute of frauds issues, see § 86.11.

c. Determine whether contract will specify term of one year or less, with option for extension.

NOTE:
Such a contract is not invalid under the statute of frauds, even if oral [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1); Columbia Pictures Corp. v. DeToth (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 753, 759, 161 P.2d 217] .

2. Determine whether or not any other statute requires that contract be in writing [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(a) (immigration consultants), discussed in § 86.270[1]; Civ. Code § 1812.608(d) (auctioneers), discussed in § 86.243[1][b].

3. Even if contract need not be written, consider whether it would be advantageous to client, or to professional, to specify any of following in writing:

NOTE:
Some or all of the following should be in writing in order to make specific and memorialize the bargain of the parties and avoid the need for litigation that might arise in the absence of specificity. If only a few of the following items need to be memorialized in writing, counsel should consider using a simple, stand-alone document acknowledging or agreeing to each of the particular items. This can be done in a letter that requires the client's or the professional's written assent. For example, a letter might be used for a nondisclosure agreement to protect the client's confidential business information.

a. Term of agreement.

b. Professional's duties, and any limitations on those duties.

c. Compensation to be paid.

d. Property rights of the parties to:

(1) Patents or copyrights on works created by professional under agreement.

(2) Trademarks.

(3) Trade secrets, including:
(a) Customer lists.

(b) Processes or formulas.

(c) Business methods.

(d) Business plans.

(e) Unregistered patentable inventions.

(f) Unregistered copyrightable creations.

e. Protection of client from competitive activities of professional during term of agreement.

f. Protection of client from unfair competition by professional during or after term of engagement [see § 86.12].

g. Protection of professional not to be restrained from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business [see § 86.12].

h. Other obligations of parties.

i. Grounds and procedures for terminating contract.

4. Determine whether need for writing is outweighed by any of following disadvantages:

a. Time and expense of preparing written agreement.

b. Possibility that specificity of formal contract may unduly limit client, by taking away flexibility in dealing with professional.

5. Consider whether some document other than formal professional services agreement might serve client's purpose; for example:

a. Offer letter requiring professional's written assent.

b. Written agreement of nondisclosure of trade secrets.

c. Written assignment of intellectual property rights concerning projects worked on by professional in course of engagement.

Business consultants provide a myriad of services--in management, statistics, computers, information systems, marketing, personnel, research and development, and many others. Accordingly, in addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should to make additional determinations based on the type of professional engagement contemplated. § 86.121 Agreement With Accountant

NOTE:
In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For sample agreements, see §§ 86.210-86.215.

1. Determine nature of accounting services sought by client [see §§ 86.210-86.215].

2. Determine extent of professional services needed [see § 86.140[3]]:

a. Accounting and auditing, including:
(1) Auditing and certifying financial reports for management, stockholders, or creditors.

(2) Securities and Exchange Commission registrations and regulatory agency reporting.

(3) Expert testimony.

(4) Discussions with creditors.

(5) Bankruptcies.

b. Taxation, including:

(1) Preparation of income tax, estate tax and employer tax returns.

(2) Handling Internal Revenue Service audits.

(3) Obtaining advance rulings from the IRS.

(4) Income tax planning.

(5) Estate planning.

(6) Allocation of taxes and their effect on profit and loss statements.

c. Management advisory services.

(1) Systems and work flow.

(2) Budgeting.

3. Determine whether accounting services needed by client must be rendered by a certified public accountant or public accountant, or whether those services may be rendered by an unlicensed person [see § 86.16[5], [6]].

4. Determine whether accounting professional proposed to be engaged is properly licensed to provide all of those services.

NOTE:

Not all persons holding themselves out as "accountants" are licensed certified public accountants or public accountants [see § 86.16[5]]. Although unlicensed persons are legally permitted to perform some specific accounting services (such as bookkeeping and preparation of tax returns), other services constituting the "practice of public accountancy" may only be performed by CPAs or public accountants [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5051, 5052]. For detailed discussion, see § 86.16[5], [6].

§ 86.122 Agreement With Insurance Adjuster

NOTE:
In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For a sample agreement, see § 86.251.

1. Determine what type of insurance coverage and loss is involved; e.g., automobile accident, fire, death of insured, or loss by theft.

2. Determine extent of authority to be given analyst to [see § 86.251[2], PP 1, 2]:

a. Clarify insurance coverage.

b. Investigate accident or loss.

c. Determine liability question.

NOTE:
Agreements between insurance companies and insurance adjusters ordinarily restrict the adjuster's authority to admit liability on the insurer's behalf [see § 86.251[2], P 1].

d. Accept or reject proof of loss.

e. Engage in settlement negotiations.

f. Obtain releases from parties.

g. Aid in preparation of defense of claim in event that claim is not settled.

3. Consider whether any powers are to be reserved expressly to insurance company.

4. Consider whether insurance analyst should be required to post bond or other security.

§ 86.123 Agreement With Appraiser

NOTE:
In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For sample agreements, see §§ 86.240-86.242.

1. Determine basic facts relating to appraisal:

a. Whether real property, personal property, and/or business is to be appraised.

b. Underlying purpose of appraisal (e.g., condemnation, valuation for insurance purposes, financing, sale of business or property, estate valuation, or other purpose.

2. Determine whether appraiser has proper qualifications for particular type of appraisal.

a. Is appraiser member of professional society of appraisers?

b. Does appraiser have sufficient education, training, experience, and skill with particular kind of appraisal involved?

c. Is appraiser likely to be credible to insurer, court, lender, purchaser, or other party who will be examining appraisal?

3. Determine manner in which appraisal is to be rendered.

a. Will appraiser be required to prepare written report, documented by supporting charts, maps, and other data?

b. Will appraiser merely be asked to give appraiser's conclusions as to value of subject property?

4. Determine amount and method of compensation to be paid to appraiser.

a. Initial retainer fee?

b. Progress payments to be paid as work progresses?

c. Balance due, or single lump sum payment, on completion of appraisal report?

d. Additional compensation for court appearances and testimony?

e. Additional compensation for travel or other specified expenses?

5. Determine how much time will be required for completion of appraisal, and include provision specifying when final appraisal will be due.

§ 86.124 Agreement With Auctioneer

NOTE:
In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For a sample agreement, see § 86.243.

1. Determine what property will sold.

2. If property consists of more than one item:

a. Should it be sold in bulk (single lot) or in multiple lots?

b. For multi-lot sales:
(1) Threshold minimum value (based on presale value estimates) for any single lot.

(2) Auctioneer's discretion to combine individual items of property into lots to meet minimum value requirement specified in P (1), above [see § 86.243 P 4].

3. Determine auctioneer's duties with regard to presale activities [see § 86.243[2], P 2]:

a. Advertising sale in advance.

b. Preparing catalogs or brochures.

c. Arranging property for public inspection.

d. Whether auctioneer will be entitled to additional compensation in excess of basic compensation rate [see P 9, below] for doing any of the activities specified in PP a-c, above.

4. Determine whether auction is to be sealed bid or open bid [see, e.g., § 86.243[2], P 4 (public auction)].

5. Determine whether lots will be offered with or without reserve, and amount of reserve allocated to each lot, if any [see § 86.243[2], P 4].

6. Determine terms for payment of sale price by buyer [see § 86.243[2], P 4]:

a. Purchase price payable in full on conclusion of sale.

b. Deposit of percentage of purchase price on conclusion of sale, with balance due on or before subsequent specified date.

c. Which of following forms of payment will be acceptable:

(1) Cash.

(2) Certified check, money order, letter of credit, or other guaranteed form of payment.

(3) Personal check.

(4) Credit card.

7. Determine whether prospective bidders will be required to meet bidder qualification standards before being allowed to bid in auction:

a. Advance deposit of percentage of estimated value of item.

b. Valid credit card number on file with auctioneer before sale.

8. Determine whether bidding on behalf of seller will be permitted.

NOTE:
If this type of bidding is allowed, it must be an express term of the auction and all potential bidders must be made aware of the provision to avoid having the sale voided by a successful bidder [see Com. Code § 2328(4); § 86.243[1][i]].

9. Determine auctioneer's compensation [see § 86.243[2], P 5].

a. Flat or hourly rate.

b. Commission on items sold.

(1) How commission will be assessed:
(a) Added to amount of winning bid and charged to buyer ("buyer's premium").

(b) Deducted from winning bid and charged to seller.

(c) Combination of PP (a) and (b), above.

NOTE:
For example, the auctioneer might charge the buyer a 15 percent buyer's premium and also charge the seller a 10 percent commission on the sale, for a total of 25 percent commission for the auctioneer.

(2) Percentage rate(s) of commission charged to buyer and/or seller.

c. Whether auctioneer will charge any fee for unsold lots and, if so, how that fee will be determined.

(1) Determined as a specified percentage of seller's reserve price.

(2) Determined as a specified percentage of presale value estimate.

(3) Flat fee (e.g., $15 per unsold lot).

d. Reimbursement of auctioneer for specified expenses [see P 3, above].

e. Determine how auctioneer's fees will be paid.

(1) Deducted by auctioneer from net proceeds of sale prior to reimbursing seller following conclusion of auction.

(2) Paid directly by seller prior to or on conclusion of auction.

12. Determine terms for payment of auction proceeds by auctioneer to seller:

a. Manner of payment; usually check or certified check.

b. When payment will be made:

(1) Immediately on conclusion of sale.

(2) On verification that buyers' payments have cleared auctioneer's financial institution.

(3) Within specified period after auction, to allow for resolution of any issues with respect to auction items.

13. Determine whether to include agreement by seller to hold auctioneer harmless and to indemnify auctioneer from any subsequent liability if item is subsequently determined not to be authentic.

14. Determine whether or not auctioneer will make arrangements for shipment of property to out-of-area winning bidders prior to auction.

15. Determine what will be done with any unsold lots following conclusion of auction?

a. Returned to seller.

b. Sold or otherwise disposed of by auctioneer.

NOTE:
In some circumstances, such as the sale of tangible personal property in a decedent's estate, the seller may not want to have unsold items returned. In these circumstances, the auctioneer is sometimes given authority to sell unsold items at set sale, donate them to charity, or simply get rid of them.

c. Who will bear cost of return?

16. Determine whether auctioneer will be required to maintain insurance on property during period of time it is in auctioneer's custody.

17. Consider including standard warranty of owner that owner has merchantable title to property offered for sale and grants auctioneer right to auctioneer to convey merchantable title to successful bidder [see § 86.243[2], P 7].

18. Determine whether auction is subject to UCC bulk sale requirements [see Com. Code §§ 6101-6111].

NOTE:
An auction is a bulk sale if it is a sale or series of sales not in the ordinary course of the seller's business of more than half of the seller's inventory and equipment, as measured by a value on the date of the bulk-sale agreement [Com. Code § 6102(a)(3)(i)]. For additional coverage, see § 86.243 (form). The bulk sales laws are discussed in Ch. 17, Buying and Selling a Business or Professional Practice .

19. Determine whether auctioneer is subject to statutory requirements for secondhand dealers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21500 et seq.].

NOTE:
An auctioneer whose principal business is primarily that of accepting for auction or auctioning secondhand tangible personal property is also a secondhand dealer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21626(a)] with certain responsibilities under the law. However, "secondhand dealer" does ot include coin dealers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21626(a), (b)]. For detailed discussion and forms for use in bringing secondhand dealers, including auctioneers when applicable, into compliance with the applicable laws, see Ch. 102B, Pawnbrokers, Finance Lenders, and Secondhand Goods Dealers **.

20. Verify that auctioneer has bond on file with Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.600(c)(1); see § 18.243[1][c]], and include in agreement a statement that auctioneer has such a bond on file [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d); see § 18.243[2], P 16].

NOTE:

In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For a sample agreement, see § 86.250.

1. Determine nature of transaction for which services of investigator are needed, e.g., to investigate validity of plaintiff's claim of injuries in personal injury action.

2. Determine what services investigator will be required to render, including [see § 86.250[2]]:

a. Interviewing known witnesses.

b. Hunting or advertising for other witnesses.

c. Obtaining statements from parties and witnesses.

d. Investigating activities, habits, or other personal characteristics of parties or witnesses.

e. Tailing, shadowing, or keeping one or more persons under surveillance.

f. Obtaining photographs, movies, tape recordings, or other physical evidence relating to past or present activities of one or more persons.

g. Locating missing or stolen property.

3. Determine whether investigator will prepare report in connection with investigation and, if so, determine level of detail.

§ 86.126 Agreements Between Author and Publisher

NOTE:

In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For a sample agreement, see § 86.260.

1. Determine whether agreement will encompass writing of work or whether it is merely agreement to publish and distribute work.

2. For work not yet been written, consider provisions relating to [see § 86.260[2], P 4]:

a. Work's subject matter.

b. Title.

c. Approximate number of pages.

d. Due date of manuscript.

3. Determine matters relating to copyright [see § 86.260[2], P 2, 3].

a. Ownership of copyright.

b. Application for copyright.

c. Renewal of copyright.

4. Consider including standard warranty by author that work will not contain defamatory or unlawful matter and will not infringe copyright or violate any proprietary right [see § 86.260[2], P 6].

5. Consider additional warranty of author that work is original and unpublished composition of author.

6. Consider provisions relating to acceptance or rejection of manuscript, corrections, proofreading, and revision [see § 86.260[2], P 7].

a. Who will bear expenses relating to these items?

b. Will author be entitled to any additional compensation for these items?

7. Determine nature and amount of compensation to be paid to author [see § 86.260[2], P 8].

a. Royalty payments.
(1) Percentage.

(2) Method of calculation, for example:
(a) Gross sales revenues; or

(b) Net sales revenues after deduction of some or all of following charges:
(i) Returns.

(ii) Sales commissions, if applicable.

(iii) Publisher's editorial expenses.

(iv) Printing, disk duplication, and/or other manufacturing costs.

(v) Packaging and shipping expenses.

(3) Duration.

(4) Whether royalty will be paid on subsequent editions based on author's contributions to initial edition of work.

(5) When payable (for example, quarterly, semiannually, etc.)

b. Flat rate payment.

(1) Lump-sum or incremental payments.

(2) Amount(s).

(3) When payable.

(a) On submission and acceptance of all or specified increments of manuscript.

(b) On publication of work.

(c) Other payment schedule.

8. Consider whether provision should be made for payment of compensation for:

a. Reprints.

b. Inexpensive or paperback editions of work.

c. Subsidiary rights such as radio, television, or motion picture.

d. Reproduction via Internet, CD-ROM, or other electronic media.

9. Determine rights of parties with respect to termination.

a. Will publisher have right to terminate agreement if manuscript is unsatisfactory, or if requested editorial revisions are not made within a reasonable time?

b. Will publisher have right to terminate agreement if work does not sell or is not profitable after a specified trial period?

c. Will author have right to terminate agreement if work goes out of print, or if publisher becomes bankrupt?

d. Who will own copyright to work on termination of agreement?

e. Who will own stock on hand, plates, electronic master files, and other publishing equipment.

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.127

§ 86.127 Agreement With Immigration Consultant

NOTE:
In addition to making the determinations outlined in §§ 86.110-86.112, counsel should make the additional determinations listed in this section. For a sample agreement, see § 86.270.

1. Determine whether client must use standard immigration consultant's contract [see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(b)].

a. Determine whether client is engaging in business of or acting as immigration consultant.

NOTE:
A person engaging in the business of or acting as an immigration consultant who enters into a contract or agreement with a client to provide services must provide the client with a written contract, as specified by statute, before providing any services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(a); see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a); see also § 86.270[2]*]. For discussion of what constitutes engaging in the business of or acting as an immigration consultant, see § 86.270[1][b].

b. If client is engaging in business of or acting as immigration consultant, determine whether either of following exceptions applies:

(1) Is client authorized to practice law or authorized by federal law to represent clients before the Board of Immigration Appeals or the Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440]?

(2) Is client employee of nonprofit tax-exempt corporation that helps clients complete application forms in immigration matters [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(h)]?

NOTE:
The requirement of a written contract, and the content, language, and rescission requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442 do not apply to employees of nonprofit tax-exempt corporations who help clients complete application forms in an immigration matter. This exception applies whether or not the corporation charges a fee, as long as any fee is consistent with the fee authorized by the Board of Immigration Appeals for qualified designated entities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(h); see 8 C.F.R. § 292.2].

2. Determine services to be provided [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)].

NOTE:
The written contract must list the documents to be prepared by the immigration consultant, and must explain the purpose and process of each document [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(4)]. The written contract must also state the purpose for which the immigration consultant has been hired and the actions to be taken by him or her regarding each document. Required information includes the agency and office where each document will be filed and the approximate processing times according to the current published agency guidelines [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(5)].

The written contract must include a provision informing the client that he or she may report complaints relating to immigration consultants to the California Office of Immigrant Assistance of the Department of Justice. The written contract must also include a provision stating that complaints concerning the unauthorized practice of law may be reported to the California State Bar. These last two provisions must include the toll free telephone numbers and Internet Web sites of those entities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(6)].

3. Determine cost of those services [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)].

4. Avoid any guarantee or promise not based in fact, or any statement that consultant can or will get special favors from or has special influence with CIS [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(c)].

NOTE:
An immigration consultant also may not make these statements orally to a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(g)].

5. Include on face of contract in 10-point bold type statement that immigration consultant is not an attorney and may not perform legal services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)].

6. State contract provisions in both English and client's native language [Bus. & Prof. Code § 24442(d); 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a)], with translation placed on reverse side of document containing English version of contract [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a)].

NOTE:
A written contract is void if it is does not comply with this requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(e)].

7. Include statement that client may report complaints relating to immigration consultants to Office of Immigrant Assistance of Department of Justice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(6)].

NOTE:

This provisions must include the office's toll free telephone number and its Internet Web site [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(6)].

8. Include statement that complaints about unauthorized practice of law may be reported to California State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(6)].

NOTE:

This provisions must include California State Bar's toll free telephone number and its Internet Web site [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)(6)].

9. Conspicuously state in written contract in both English and client's native language right of client to rescind contract within 72 hours of signing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(f)].

C. Drafting Guide

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.140

§ 86.140 Drafting Guide for Professional Services Agreements

NOTE: In approaching the task of drafting an agreement for professional services, counsel should first ascertain the client's desires with respect to the basic subjects the agreement should cover. Sections 86.100 and 86.101 list the basic subjects common to most contract situations. For discussion of specific issues to consider in the drafting of particular agreements, see §§ 86.120-86.127, as well as the relevant forms.

[1] Introductory Matters

1. Specify date and place of agreement.

NOTE:
The date and place is commonly set forth either at the beginning of the agreement or immediately above the signature block as "Executed on _____ [date], at _____ [place]."

2. Include designation of parties and their addresses.

NOTE:
This information is commonly set forth in an introductory paragraph at the beginning of a contract [see § 86.200[2]].

a. Name of each party.

b. Address of each party.

c. Designation of parties as "client" or "corporation" and "consultant."

d. Description of client as corporation, partnership, or sole proprietor.

3. Consider including recitals of such matters as:

a. Client's trade or business.

b. Client's reasons for engaging professional.

c. Professional's special skill, background, or expertise.

4. State that client engages professional and professional accepts engagement [see § 86.200[2], § 2.01].

NOTE:
This type of statement is generally included in the provision specifying the term of the contract, but may be separately stated.

[2] Term of Contract

1. If contract is to be for a specified period:

a. State that client engages professional and that professional accepts engagement for specified period [see § 86.200[2], § 2.01].

b. Specify dates on which period of engagement begins and ends, if applicable [see § 86.200[2], § 2.01].

c. If contract is to be renewable for additional periods, specify method, length of renewal period, and conditions to which renewal is subject, e.g. [see § 86.200[2], § 2.02]:
(1) Automatically.

(2) For succeeding terms of stated length.

(3) Subject to specified condition (e.g., unless either party gives notice to the other within specified time before expiration of any term of intention not to renew).

d. Consider providing that contract is subject to earlier termination under other provisions [see § 86.200[2], Article 15].

2. If contract is to perform particular task or tasks, state that client agrees to engage professional and that professional accepts engagement, but do not specify any period [see, e.g., § 86.214[2] (accountant's preparation of tax returns)].

[3] Professional Services

1. Set forth title of professional [see § 86.200[2], § 1.01].

2. Describe professional's duties under contract:

a. In general terms; or

NOTE:
Describing professional services in general terms gives the client the flexibility to change the job duties without necessitating a change in the contract.

b. With greater particularity.

NOTE:
A detailed description of the services to be provided is especially important when the contract is on a flat fee basis, in order to reduce the possibility of confusion over what is or is not included in the flat fee.

3. Specify services not to be provided by professional, if appropriate.

NOTE:
A description of what is not included in the professional's services can be as important in some cases as what is included. For example, most engagement letters for income tax preparation state that handling an audit based on the tax return is not included in the preparation fee [see § 86.214[2]]. As in the case of the description of included services in P 2, above, specificity is particularly important when the professional will charge a flat fee.

4. Specify that professional's performance may be conditioned on receipt of certain information, approvals, and reports from the client on a scheduled basis [see 86.214[2] (accountant's preparation of tax returns)].

5. Set forth limitations on professional's exercise of duties:

a. Specify any matters requiring consent of board of directors, if applicable [see § 86.200[2], § 1.03].

b. Specify that professional's exercise of duties is subject to direction of officer and or board of directors, if applicable.

6. Consider stating name or title of person to whom professional reports.

7. State place where duties are to be performed, if applicable.

8. Consider including provision that professional is authorized to use the listed equipment, supplies, and/or facilities to the extent owned by another, e.g., a university [see § 86.202[2], P 2].

9. Consider including provision requiring professional not to engage in any competing or conflicting business pursuits or any business, commercial, or professional nature services of the type provided to client without client's prior consent [see § 86.200[2], § 7.01].

10. Consider use of provision requiring professional's performance to be rendered to client's satisfaction.

11. Consider including agreement that professional has neither right nor authority to contract on behalf of client without client's written consent.

[4] Licensure

1. If professional must be licensed or certified to perform his or her job, consider including provision requiring current licensing or certification as a condition of continued engagement.

2. Consider specifying that professional will pay licensing fees and costs of any mandatory continuing education associated in maintaining license.

[5] Compensation

1. Specify professional's compensation:

NOTE:
A periodic retainer fee may be agreed on, usually in connection with one of the following methods of compensation.

a. Per hour [see § 86.200[2], § 3.01].

NOTE:
When charges are per hour, an additional charge is normally made for the out-of-pocket expenses, including telephone and mailing or courier costs, and special reports and services received from third parties [see § 86.300[2], § 3.02].

b. Flat fee per job [see § 86.214[2] (accountant's preparation of tax returns)].

NOTE:
A maximum or minimum fee, or both, may included in the agreement to protect the client from excessive charges and to assure the professional that the project will be worth the effort to undertake.

c. On commission.

d. Contingency fee.

NOTE:
Use of contingent fees by a licensed accountant is not ordinarily permissible [see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 62; § 86.16[8]].

e. As a percentage of cost or dollar volume involved.

NOTE:
Financial counselors in connection with the amount of debts to be prorated often use this method. A stated maximum or minimum fee or both may be used in connection with this method of compensation.

2. Specify payment schedule.

[6] Reimbursement of Expenses Incurred by Professional

1. Consider including provision for reimbursement of business expenses:

NOTE:
If the agreement is for professional services outside the United States, the business expense clause should state whether reimbursement is to be made in United States dollars or local foreign currency.

a. Specify what expenses are reimbursable.
(1) Consider defining "business expenses" as those specified in agreement or as those that are deductible business expenses under the Internal Revenue Code [see § 86.200[2], § 3.03]; or

(2) Specifically define what constitutes reimbursable expenses [see § 86.202[2], § 3.02].

b. Require professional to maintain substantiating records and submit them to client [see § 86.200[2], § 3.03].

2. Consider provision for payment to professional of specified amount periodically to cover business expenses (as alternative to provisions for reimbursement of business expenses).

[7] Property Rights of Parties

1. If professional is hired to perform research and development work, include provision [see § 86.200[2], Article 4]:

a. Assigning inventions of professional to client; and/or

b. Excluding specified inventions from coverage of agreement for services.

2. If desired, include provision for payment of royalties to professional on inventions assigned to client:

NOTE:
This type of provision may be used in conjunction with a provision that gives the client the exclusive property right in inventions conceived by the consultant without providing for royalties. For an example of this type of provision in the employment context, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.431 **.

a. Percentage royalty; or

b. Varying percentage royalty.

3. If professional retains ownership of inventions, consider provision giving client perpetual royalty-free license to use those inventions.

NOTE:
For an example of this type of provision in the employment context, see Ch. 85, Employment Agreements, § 85.432.

4. If professional will have access to client's trade secrets, include provisions restricting professional's use of those secrets:

a. State that during course of engagement, professional will have access to and become acquainted with client's trade secrets, and include general description [see § 86.200[2], § 5.01].

b. Specify that all files, records, documents, and other items pertinent to the particular contract situation are and remain client's property and limit professional's ability to remove them from client's premises [see § 86.200[2], § 5.04].

c. Set forth professional's promise and agreement not to misuse, misappropriate, or disclose client's trade secrets [see § 86.200[2], § 5.02].

d. Include professional's agreement not to engage in unfair competition with respect to client's trade secrets [see § 86.200[2], § 5.03]:
(1) Professional's acknowledgment and agreement that sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of client's trade secrets constitute unfair competition.

(2) Professional's promise and agreement not to engage in any unfair competition with client either:
(a) During term of agreement; or

(b) At any time thereafter.

5. Prohibit competitive activities on part of professional against client during term of engagement [see § 86.200[2], § 7.01].

6. Include provision prohibiting professional from engaging in unfair competition after termination of engagement [see § 86.200[2], § 7.01].

[8] Termination of Agreement

1. Consider use of provision for termination on occurrence of stated event, such as [see § 86.200[2], § 15.02]:

a. Breach of duty.

b. Neglect of duty.

c. Continued incapacity to perform.

2. Consider use of provision for termination on default, such as [see § 86.200[2], § 15.03]:

a. Corporation's failure to pay professional any compensation due within 30 days after written demand for payment.

b. Consultant's failure to complete services specified in agreement.

c. Consultant's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in contract.

d. Corporation's material breach of any representation or agreement contained agreement.

3. Include provision for termination on notice from terminating party to other party [see § 86.200[2], § 15.01].

[9] Effect of Breach of Contract

1. Consider use of provision stating that [see § 86.200[2], § 11.04]:

a. Services to be performed are of special character that gives them peculiar value.

b. Loss of services cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in action at law.

c. Professional expressly agrees that client is entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent or remedy breach of contract by professional.

2. Specify consequences of client's breach.

[10] Arbitration or Other Resolution of Disputes

1. Consider use of provision under which either party may request arbitration of matters in controversy [see § 86.200[2], § 17.02].

2. Alternatively, consider use of provision for compulsory arbitration of matters in controversy.

3. Consider providing for other forms of alternative dispute resolution, such as mediation.

NOTE:
For detailed coverage of arbitration, mediation, and other types of alternative dispute resolution, including forms of contractual provisions for each type, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chs. 30- 38 (Matthew Bender).

[11] General Provisions

NOTE:
For more detailed discussion of standard contractual provisions of the type noted in this subsection, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions .

1. Specify manner of giving notice to other party [see § 86.200[2], § 17.01].

2. Provide for attorneys' fees and costs [see § 86.200[2], § 17.03].

3. State that contract contains entire agreement of parties [see § 86.200[2], § 17.04]

4. Provide for modification of contract only by subsequent written agreement [see § 86.200[2], § 17.05].

5. Specify effect of any waiver [see § 86.200[2], § 17.06].

6. Provide for event that part of contract is declared invalid, either [see § 86.200[2], § 17.07]:

a. Remaining provisions of contract to continue in full force and effect [see Civ. Code § 1670.5(a) (if contract contains unconscionable provision, court may sever or limit application of that provision, and enforce remainder of contract)].

b. Invalid provision to be deemed amended as court or arbitrator finds reasonable.

NOTE:
Generally, the courts lack the power to reform unenforceable contract provisions (as opposed to merely severing or limiting them). However, in the context of an employment agreement, one court of appeal held that if an agreement contains a clause in which the parties expressly agree to allow the court or an arbitrator to sever or modify any unreasonable or unenforceable provisions, the arbitration provision as so modified may be enforceable [Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 743-746, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] .

7. State that California law governs agreement [see § 86.200[2], § 17.08].

8. Include date and signature blocks.

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.200

§ 86.200 Nondisclosure and Business Consulting Agreement for Computer Services--Long Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between a business consultant and a client for whom the consultant will perform specified services. The example used in this form is for the services of a software consultant, who will provide computer consulting services, including analysis, systems design, programming, testing, documentation, and any other related services necessary to fulfill the client's computer consulting requirements. The form is drafted for use between a client corporation and an individual consultant, for full-time temporary work. However, it can adapted for use by any type of business organization to engage the services of almost any type of business consultant. Separate provisions for part-time work or for automatic renewal of succeeding terms are illustrated in alternate sections of the form.

Frequently, a vendor will fill a consulting position for a corporate client. In that case, the vendor will have an agreement with the consultant (a "vendor-to-vendor" agreement). For a sample "vendor-to-vendor" contract, see § 86.203[2].

Nondisclosure agreements for the protection of the client's confidential and proprietary information may be incorporated into the agreement for services, as they are in this form. However, nondisclosure issues are frequently covered in separate agreements. For a sample separate nondisclosure contract, see § 86.204[2].

[b] Using Additional or Alternative Provisions

This form represents only one of the virtually infinite number of ways such a professional services contract might be drafted. Counsel preparing an agreement for the services of a business consultant should carefully consider the needs of the firm or the desires of the prospective consultant. Some of these can be ascertained by asking the client the questions indicated in the Client Interview [see § 86.100]. With the answers to these questions, the attorney should consult the Drafting Guide set forth in § 86.140 and tailor the agreement so that it will best fit the circumstances of the particular situation.

The Drafting Guide describes the particular provisions included in this chapter and indicates their location. If individual provisions used in this form do not fit the particular factual problem confronting the attorney, the other forms referred to in the Drafting Guide may be more suitable.

[c] Compliance With Organizational Formalities

Before an consultant services contract is executed with a business entity client, the attorney should make certain that all provisions of the client's articles of incorporation or partnership agreement, shareholders' agreement (if any), bylaws, and applicable statutes have been complied with. Counsel should also be sure that the board of directors or its equivalent has authorized the engagement and granted its representative authority to enter into the agreement. For a general discussion of this matter, see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions . The usual procedure for a corporation is for the board of directors or its equivalent to pass a resolution authorizing the president to execute contracts on behalf of the firm [see Ch. 5, Directors' Meetings, Actions, and Resolutions].

[d] Term of Engagement

A business consultant contract may be full or part-time, usually for a limited time period, frequently six months or one year. Occasionally, the initial period of such a contract will be one year, which is automatically extended for successive year terms, but may be terminated by either party under specified conditions [see [2*], § 2.02, below* .]

[e] Competitive Activities

This form contains a provision prohibiting the consultant from engaging in any type of direct or indirect competition with the client during the term of the contract, or from soliciting client's employees to engage in competitive activities [see [2*], § 7.01, below*].

If the consultant is to be prohibited from hiring the client's employees for some future period, then the prohibition must be drafted narrowly, since a very broad prohibition could be unenforceable [see, e.g., VL Systems, Inc. v. Unisen, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 708, 718, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (no-hire provision in company's standard contract for buying various consultants' services, which bound consultant to pay damages if consultant hired any of company's employees within one year, was not enforceable because it was very a broad provision covering not only solicitation by consultant but also all hiring, it applied to all of company's employees regardless of whether they worked with consultant or were even employed at time consultant rendered services, it was not necessary to protect company's legitimate interests, and it was outweighed by public policy favoring freedom of mobility for employees)].

[f] Disclosure of Trade Secrets; Action for Unfair Competition

This form also contains a provision designed to protect the client's trade secrets and prevent the consultant from disclosing them during or after termination of the agreement [see [2], Article 5, below]. It does this by characterizing any unauthorized disclosure as unfair competition and requiring the consultant not to engage in any acts of unfair competition.

"Unfair competition" is any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. The criminal law definition of trade secret includes information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic benefit from its disclosure or use and is subject to the efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Penal Code § 499c(a)(9); see Civ. Code § 3426.1(d) ("trade secret" defined under Uniform Trade Secrets Act (Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.)].

A person who commits unfair competition by misusing or misappropriating a trade secret may be enjoined from continuing to do so [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204; Civ. Code § 3420 et seq.; see Peerless Oakland Laundry Co.

v. Hickman (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 556, 559, 23 Cal. Rptr. 105 (restraining order issued to prevent former employee's use, to former employer's prejudice, of trade secrets acquired during prior employment)]. Such a person can also be made liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206].

For further discussion of the law relating to trade secrets, see § 86.204[1].

[g] Indemnification for Losses From Performing Duties

This form includes an indemnification provision requiring the consultant to pay all federal and state taxes required by the consultant's status as a self-employed individual [see [2*], §§ 10.01*, 11.03, below]. Although this type of provision merely states an obligation imposed by statute [see I.R.C. § 1402], the attorney representing the client may desire to have this provision included so that the consultant is will be aware at all times of this obligation.

[h] Fees for Services Provided

A compensation provision is an essential element of the contract for services. Compensation for computer services consultants is generally based on an hourly amount [see [2], Article 3, below]. Some contracts specify a maximum amount that may be earned [see [2*], § 3.02, below* .]

[i] Reimbursement for Expenses

The contract provides for reimbursement for actual reasonable expenses authorized by the client, including travel, meals, and lodging. In addition, the agreement authorizes reimbursement of the cost of ancillary services, such as services by designers, modelmakers, or clerical help, when needed by the consultant and authorized in advance, in writing, by the client [see [2], §§ 3.02, 3.03]. The reimbursement provision should be tailored to reflect the types of reimbursable costs that the professional is likely to incur in performing the specific types of services contemplated by the parties.

[j] Periodic Payment of Fees

This contract provides for payment for all services and expenses (on presentation of receipts) within 10 days of presentation of monthly invoices [see [2*], § 3.04, below*].

[k] Termination of Agreement

Every agreement for services is terminated by expiration of the term specified in the contract. In addition, the agreement may be terminated on the occurrence of specific events, or by giving notice. Alternative termination provisions are contained in [2], Article 15, below.

[2] FORM

Nondisclosure and Business Consulting Agreement for Computer Services--Long Form

COMPUTER CONSULTANT SERVICE AGREEMENT

_____[name of client] ("Corporation"), a California corporation, located at _____[address of principal place of business], and _____[name of consultant] ("Consultant"), _____[address], in consideration of the mutual promises made in this Agreement, agree as follows:

ARTICLE 1. DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Section 1.01. Consultant, a [specify profession, e.g., Software Engineer], will provide [specify services, e.g., computer consulting services for Corporation, including analysis, systems design, programming, testing, documentation, and any other related services necessary to fulfill Corporation's computer consulting requirements].

Section 1.02. Corporation will provide Consultant with the compensation and business expense reimbursement specified elsewhere in this Agreement.

[If certain of Consultant's activities will require consent of board of directors, add:]

Section 1.03. Consultant will not, without specific approval of Corporation's Board of Directors, do or contract to do any of the following: [specify].

ARTICLE 2. TERM OF AGREEMENT

[If work will be full-time, use:]

Section 2.01. Corporation will retain Consultant to work full-time for as a consultant for Corporation in the field of [e.g., software engineering], beginning _____[date] and ending _____[date]. Consultant accepts this engagement.

[OR, if work will be part-time, use:]

Section 2.01. Corporation will retain Consultant to work part-time for as a consultant for Corporation in the field of [e.g., software engineering], beginning _____[date] and ending _____[date]. Consultant accepts this engagement. Consultant will devote the time called for in this Agreement only at the time or times and only at the place or places as may be mutually arranged between the Consultant and Corporation. Consultant will use Consultant's best efforts to accomplish the technical and commercial goals identified by Corporation during the term of this Agreement. Corporation acknowledges that Consultant may have other confidentiality commitments. Corporation will not require Consultant to perform tasks which might reasonably result in Consultant's breach of any confidentiality commitment. Consultant further acknowledges that Consultant has no existing obligations to any third party, as employee, consultant, or otherwise, that would conflict with, or restrict Consultant's ability to fulfill any of Consultant's commitments or obligations under this Agreement.

[Continue with the following:]

[If engagement may be automatically renewed, add:]

Section 2.02. This Agreement will be renewed automatically for succeeding terms of [specify period, e.g., one year each], unless either party gives notice to the other at least [specify notice period, e.g., 60] days before the expiration of any term of _____[his or her or its] intention not to renew [optional: pursuant to Corporation's bylaws].

[Continue with the following:]

ARTICLE 3. COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES

Section 3.01. For time actually spent rendering service, Corporation will pay Consultant at the rate of $_____ per hour. [Optional: The maximum amount payable under this Agreement is $_____.]

Section 3.02. In addition to the compensation specified in Section 3.01, Consultant will be paid for actual reasonable expenses authorized by Corporation, including travel, meals and lodging; and when needed by Consultant and authorized in advance and in writing by Corporation, the cost of ancillary services to others, such as designers, draftsmen, modelmakers, or clerical help. [Optional: Reimbursement of _____ (individual or aggregate) expenses in excess of $_____ (specify amount) will be made only if those expenses are approved by Corporation before being incurred, unless Corporation in its sole discretion elects to reimburse Consultant after the fact.]

Section 3.03. Each expenditure referred to in Section 3.02 will be reimbursable only if Consultant furnishes to Corporation adequate records and other documentary evidence required by federal and state statutes and regulations issued by the appropriate taxing authorities for the substantiation of each such expenditure as an income tax deduction.

Section 3.04. Payment of all services and expenses will be made within [e.g., 10] days of presentation of monthly invoices.

ARTICLE 4. PROPERTY RIGHTS

Section 4.01. Consultant agrees to make prompt and full disclosure to Corporation in writing the details of all inventions, discoveries, or improvements (whether patentable or not) made or conceived by Consultant, alone or with others, that arise out of, or relate to the subject matter of this Agreement.

Section 4.02. Consultant further agrees to keep necessary records, including notes, sketches, drawings, models and data supporting all inventions and discoveries made by the Consultant, alone or with others, during the course of performing the services required under this Agreement.

Section 4.03. Consultant further agrees to all records described in Section 4.02 to Corporation on expiration or termination of this Agreement.

Section 4.04. Consultant further agrees to assign to Corporation all inventions and discoveries made by the Consultant, alone or with others, that arise out of and pertain to the services rendered under this Agreement, together with patents as may be obtained on these inventions and discoveries.

Section 4.05. On request of Corporation, Consultant, alone or with others, will execute all proper papers and cooperate in the fullest degree with Corporation in securing, maintaining, and enforcing any patents that arise from the services rendered under this Agreement.

Section 4.06. Consultant, alone or with others, will be compensated for Consultant's reasonable time spent in fulfilling all obligations set forth in this Article 4, that arise subsequent to filing and assignment of patent applications. The compensation referred to in this paragraph will be based on Consultant's standard hourly rate stated in Section 3.01. Compensation will be due and payable by Corporation on receipt of the assignment of Consultant's entire right, title and interest in and to an invention or improvement, as provided in Section 4.04, and receipt of an itemized statement from Consultant of consultant's time and expenses reasonably incurred in fulfilling the obligations set forth in this Article 4 with respect to that invention or improvement.

Section 4.07. Consultant warrants that Consultant does not have any commitments to others under which Consultant is obligated to assign to them inventions or improvements, or rights on those inventions or improvements, in conflict with Consultant's obligations to Corporation under this Agreement.

Section 4.08. Consultant agrees that the payments to Consultant specified in Sections 3.01 and 4.06 will constitute full and complete compensation for all obligations assumed by Consultant under this Agreement, and for all inventions, improvements, and patent rights assigned under this Agreement.

Section 4.09. Consultant agrees that on the expiration or termination of this Agreement, all drawings, designs, computer programs and software, specifications, notebooks, tracing photographs, negatives, reports, findings, recommendations, data and memoranda of every description arising out of and relating to the services rendered under this Agreement, together with any copyright in these materials, are the confidential and proprietary property of Corporation or its assigns, and that Corporation will have the exclusive right to copyright and/or publish such material. Consultant agrees that Consultant will not claim any additional compensation arising out of the use of these materials in any manner by Corporation or its assigns.

ARTICLE 5. TRADE SECRETS

Section 5.01. Corporation is aware that Consultant may be now or may in the future perform consulting services or become an employee of others. The parties also acknowledge and agree that during the term of this Agreement and in the course of the discharge of Consultant's duties under the Agreement, Consultant will have access to and become acquainted with financial, personnel, sales, scientific, technical and other information regarding formulas, patterns, compilations, programs, devices, methods, techniques, operations, plans and processes that are owned by Corporation, actually or potentially used in the operation of Corporation's business, or obtained from third parties under an agreement of confidentiality, and that such information constitutes Corporation's "trade secrets."

Section 5.02. Consultant specifically agrees that Consultant will not misuse, misappropriate, or disclose in writing, orally, or by electronic means, any trade secrets, directly or indirectly, to any other person or use them in any way, either during the term of this Agreement or at any other time thereafter, except as is required in the course of Consultant's engagement.

Section 5.03. Consultant acknowledges and agrees that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure in writing, orally, or by electronic means, of any of Corporation's trade secrets obtained by Consultant during the course of Consultant's engagement under this Agreement, including information concerning Corporation's actual or potential work, services, or products, the facts that any such work, services, or products are planned, under consideration, or in production, as well as any descriptions thereof, constitute unfair competition. Consultant promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Corporation, either during the term of this Agreement or at any other time thereafter.

Section 5.04. Consultant agrees that all files, records, documents, drawings, specifications, equipment, software, and similar items, whether maintained in hard copy or in electronic form, relating to Corporation's business, whether prepared by Consultant or others, are and will remain exclusively the property of Corporation and that they will be removed from Corporation's premises or, if kept in electronic form, from Corporation's computer systems [specify procedure, e.g., only with the express prior written consent of Corporation's Board of Directors].

ARTICLE 6. CONFIDENTIAL BUSINESS INFORMATION

Section 6.01. Consultant agrees that all of the business information related specifically to Corporation developed by or communicated by or to Consultant in the performance of the services described in this Agreement is of a highly confidential nature, and that, unless the Consultant has the prior written approval of Corporation, no use or oral or written disclosure of that information by the Consultant will be made either during or after the term of this Agreement, except that Consultant may disclose that information to persons including the employees of Corporation or its subsidiaries or affiliated companies who may be designated to work with the Consultant.

Section 6.02. The restriction of Section 6.01 does not apply to information which the Consultant can demonstrate was at the time of the execution of this Agreement:

(a) In the public domain; or

(b) Part of Consultant's prior knowledge; or

(c) Learned from a third party without the breach of a confidential relationship with Corporation.

Section 6.03. Consultant acknowledges that Corporation regards its mere interest in the subject matter discussed with Consultant to be a matter of strict confidentiality. Consultant therefore agrees that Consultant will not disclose to any third party, at any time, any of the subject matter of this Agreement.

ARTICLE 7. COMPETITIVE ACTIVITIES

Section 7.01. Consultant agrees that during this Agreement and for a period of [number of months or years] thereafter, Consultant will not directly or indirectly, in any capacity, compete or attempt to compete with Corporation.

ARTICLE 8. CONTINUATION OF RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS

Section 8.01. Notwithstanding the expiration or termination of this Agreement for any reason whatsoever, the respective rights and obligations set forth in Articles 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 in this Agreement will continue in full force and effect for a period of [time frame, e.g., five years].

ARTICLE 9. AGENCY

Section 9.01. It is understood and agreed that the Consultant is an independent contractor in respect to Consultant's relationship to Corporation, and that Consultant is not and should not be considered an agent or employee of the Company for any purpose. Consultant agrees not to represent [himself or herself] as an agent or employee of the Company at any time.

Section 9.02. Nothing in this Agreement will be construed or implied to create a relationship of partners, agency, joint venturers, or of employer and employee between Consultant and Company.

ARTICLE 10. INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR STATUS

Section 10.01. Consultant will have full control and discretion as to the ways and means of performing any and all services to be provided under this Agreement. It is understood that in the performance of this Agreement Consultant is not in any way acting as an employee of Corporation, and Consultant will be responsible for all taxes, social security payments, and other similar payments or contributions due as a result of any payments made pursuant to the terms of this Agreement.

Section 10.02. As an independent contractor, Consultant agrees that Corporation has no obligation under the state or federal laws regarding employee liability, and that Corporation's total commitment and liability under this arrangement is the performance and the fees limited as described in Articles 2 and 4.

ARTICLE 11. INDEMNIFICATION; INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Section 11.01. Consultant will indemnify and hold Corporation harmless from all liability for loss, damage, or injury to persons or property resulting from the negligence or misconduct of Consultant, including any loss arising from breach of contract or improper performance by the Consultant and for damages and/or injuries which may be incurred by Corporation by virtue of defective design, material or workmanship in any goods or services furnished by Consultant under this Agreement.

Section 11.02. Consultant will not relieve Corporation from liability caused by the willful misconduct or sole negligence of Corporation, its offices, agents, or servants.

Section 11.03. Consultant agrees to indemnify Corporation against all federal, state, and local tax liability (including penalties and interest) which may result from any federal, state, or local tax audit (including, but not limited to, income, social security, disability, and unemployment taxes) that deems Consultant to be an employee rather than an independent contractor of Corporation.

Section 11.04. Consultant represents and agrees that the services to be performed under the terms of this contract are of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, and intellectual character that gives them a peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law. Consultant therefore expressly agrees that Corporation, in addition to any other rights or remedies that Corporation may possess, will be entitled to injunctive and other equitable relief to prevent or remedy a breach of this contract by Consultant.

ARTICLE 12. INSURANCE

Section 12.01. Consultant will maintain at all times during the performance of labor or service for Corporation under this Agreement, comprehensive public liability insurance, including automobile and contractual liability coverages with limits of [specify, e.g., $500,000/$1,000,000 bodily injury and unit of $1,000,000 per occurrence].

Section 12.02. Consultant will furnish an insurance certificate and/or state issued certificate evidencing the above coverages. Insurance certificates must be endorsed to provide that Corporation will be notified in writing 10 days before any substantial modification or termination of the subject policy.

ARTICLE 13. AUTHORITY FOR PRODUCT DESIGN

Section 13.01. Corporation has the authority for product design, and thus can accept or reject partial or complete designs or design concepts proposed by Consultant.

ARTICLE 14. ETHICAL CONDUCT; RECORDKEEPING

Article 14.01. Corporation's policy requires ethical conduct in all business activities and practices, including proper recording and reporting of all transactions and compliance with applicable laws. The adequacy and accuracy of Consultant's billings, supporting documentation, and other information rendered to Corporation become the basis for Corporation's further recording and reporting, both internally and externally. Consultant is not expected or authorized to take any action on Corporation's behalf that would result in inadequate or inaccurate recording or reporting of assets, liabilities, or any other transaction or that would violate any applicable laws, rules, or regulations.

ARTICLE 15. TERMINATION

[Choose among the following:]

Section 15.01. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this Agreement, this Agreement will continue in effect [specify length corresponding with that set forth in Article 2, e.g., for a period of _____ (number of months or years) or until the services provided for in this Agreement have been fully and completely performed] and will then terminate unless renewed in writing by both parties.

[AND/OR]

[Section 15.01.] Notwithstanding any other provision of this Agreement, either party may terminate this Agreement at any time by giving [specify reasonable notice based on type of services to be rendered by consultant, e.g., 30 days] written notice to the other party. Unless otherwise terminated as provided in this Agreement, this Agreement will continue in force [specify length corresponding with that set forth in Article 2, e.g., for a period of _____ (number of months or years) or until the services provided for in this Agreement have been fully and completely performed].

[Continue with the following:]

Section 15.02. This Agreement will terminate automatically on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(a) Bankruptcy or insolvency of either party.

(b) Sale of the business of either party.

(c) Death of either party.

(d) [specify other event on which agreement will terminate, e.g., Assignment of this Agreement by either party without the consent of the other party].

Section 15.03. If either party defaults in the performance of this Agreement or materially breaches any of its provisions, the non-breaching party may terminate this Agreement by giving written notification to the breaching party. Termination will take effect immediately on receipt of notice by the breaching party or five days after mailing of notice, whichever occurs first. For the purposes of this paragraph, material breach of this Agreement includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(a) Corporation's failure to pay Consultant any compensation due within 30 days after written demand for payment.

(b) Consultant's failure to complete the services specified in Article 1.

(c) Consultant's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in Section 4.07.

(d) Corporation's material breach of any representation or agreement contained in this Agreement.

(e) [specify any other situation constituting material breach].

ARTICLE 16. EFFECT OF MERGER, TRANSFER OF ASSETS, OR DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATION

Section 16.01. This Agreement [will or will not] be terminated by any voluntary or involuntary dissolution of Corporation resulting from either a merger or consolidation in which Corporation is not the consolidated or surviving corporation, or a transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of Corporation.

[If agreement will not be terminated under preceding circumstances, add:]

Section 16.02. In the event of any such merger or consolidation or transfer of assets, Corporation's rights, benefits, and obligations hereunder [will or may] be assigned to the surviving or resulting corporation or the transferee of Corporation's assets.

[Continue with the following:]

ARTICLE 17. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 17.01. Any notices to be given under the Agreement by either party to the other will be in writing and may be transmitted by personal delivery or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices will be addressed to the parties at the addresses appearing in the introductory paragraph of this Agreement, but each party may change that address by written notice in accordance with this section. Notices delivered personally will be deemed communicated as of the date of actual receipt; mailed notices will be deemed communicated as of _____[specify, e.g., the date of mailing].

Section 17.02. (a) Any controversy between Corporation and Consultant involving the construction or application of any of the terms, provisions, or conditions of this Agreement will on the written request of either party served on the other be submitted to arbitration. Arbitration will comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act.

(b) Corporation and Consultant will each appoint one person to hear and determine the dispute. If the two persons so appointed are unable to agree, then those persons will select a third impartial arbitrator whose decision will be final and conclusive upon both parties.

Section 17.03. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this Agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision will be construed as applicable to the entire contract.

Section 17.04. This instrument contains the entire Agreement of the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof and there are no other promised representations or warranties affecting it. This Agreement supersedes any and all other agreements, either oral or in writing, between Consultant and Corporation with respect to the engagement of Consultant by Corporation and contains all of the covenants and agreements between the parties with respect to that engagement in any manner whatsoever. Each party to this Agreement acknowledges that no representation, inducements, promises, or agreements, orally or otherwise, have been made by any party, or anyone acting on behalf of any party that are not embodied in the Agreement, and that no other agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this Agreement will be valid or binding on either party.

Section 17.05. Any modification of this Agreement will be effective only if it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

Section 17.06. The failure of either party to insist on strict compliance with any of the terms, covenants, or conditions of this Agreement by the other party will not be deemed a waiver of that term, covenant, or condition, nor will any waiver or relinquishment of any right or power at any one time or times be deemed a waiver or relinquishment of that right or power for all or any other times.

[Either (see § 86.140[11], P 6):]

Section 17.07. If any provision in this Agreement is held by a court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions of this Agreement will nevertheless continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

[OR]

Section 17.07. If any provision in this Agreement is held by a court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] of competent jurisdiction to be unreasonable, invalid, void, or unenforceable, then this Agreement will be deemed amended to provide for the modification of the unreasonable, invalid, void, or unenforceable provision to the extent that the court [if appropriate, add: or arbitrator] finds reasonable, and the remaining provisions of this Agreement will continue in full force without being impaired or invalidated in any way.

[Continue with the following:]

Section 17.08. This Agreement will be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Section 17.09. If Consultant dies before the expiration of the term of Consultant's engagement under this Agreement, any sums that may be due to Consultant from Corporation under this Agreement as of the date of death will be paid to Consultant's executors, administrators, heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Business Consultants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.201

§ 86.201 Nondisclosure and Business Consulting Agreement--Short Form

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is for use by a corporate client to engage the services of a business professional. In contrast to the form in § 86.200[2], this form is designed to be used for "smaller" consulting jobs--for example, jobs for which the total fees for services will be $ 5,000, or less. In practice, parties to smaller contacts often neglect to put their agreements in writing. Nevertheless, a written contract is recommended to help alleviate misunderstanding. This form is a basic written agreement.

This agreement states that the consultant will provide his or her services to the corporation on an as-needed basis. For provisions for full-time work for a specified period or for automatic renewal of succeeding terms, see the form in § 86.200[2]. This agreement also states that corporation will provide consultant with a laptop computer for his or her use during the duration of this agreement [see [2], Section 5, below].

For discussion of the clauses in this contract and other clauses, that may be relevant, see § 86.200.

[2] FORM

Nondisclosure and Business Consulting Agreement--Short Form

NONDISCLOSURE AND BUSINESS CONSULTING AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT is made on _____[date] between [client] ("Corporation"), a California corporation having it offices at _____[address], and [consultant] ("Consultant"), _____[address].

Recitals

1. Corporation seeks someone who has years of experience in the field of [e.g., Research Statistics].

2. Consultant maintains that [he or she] has the requisite years of experience in the field in the field of [e.g., Research Statistics].

3. Consultant is willing to make available to Corporation Consultant's knowledge and experience in that field and represents that Consultant is completely free to make that knowledge and experience available to Corporation.

4. Corporation desires to receive this knowledge and experience from Consultant on a fee basis by engaging Consultant in a working capacity in the field of [e.g., Research Statistics].

THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and of the mutual covenants and agreements contained in this Agreement, Corporation and Consultant, intending to be legally bound under this Agreement, agree as follows:

Consultant's Right to Perform Services

Section 1. Consultant represents that Consultant has the right to perform the work services for Corporation as provided in this Agreement. Corporation enters into this Agreement relying on this representation by Consultant.

Consultant's Availability and Services

Section 2. Consultant agrees that during the term of this Agreement (as defined in Section 6) Consultant will be available at Corporation's request to render working services to Corporation as Corporation may request on matters relating to, but not limited to: [e.g., data analysis, interpretation, and experimental design with respect to research and development programs in Specialty Chemical, Alkali and Derivatives, Discovery and Powder Coating areas]. Consultant's services will be rendered as required during the term of this Agreement.

Use of Consultant to Provide Services; Compensation

Section 3. Corporation agrees to utilize Consultant as needed during the term of this Agreement for working services to be rendered under this Agreement and agrees to pay Consultant a fee at the rate of $[specify hourly rate, flat rate, or other fee] for services rendered. This fee will cover only working services actually rendered and will be paid within [number of days, e.g., 10 days after receipt of invoice].

Independent Contractor Relationship

Section 4. Consultant, as an independent contractor, will not be eligible for any employee benefits, nor will any such benefits be made available to Consultant as a result of this Agreement.

Use of Computer

Section 5. Corporation agrees to authorize the consultant to use Lap Top Computer Serial No. _____, for the sole purpose of completing work for Corporation. Corporation reserves the right to request return of this computer at any time.

Confidential Information

Section 6. Consultant agrees to maintain in strict confidence all information and data including, but not limited to, confidential and or proprietary information that Consultant acquires from Corporation in the performance of Consultant's services under this Agreement and agrees not to disclose this information or data to others without Corporation's prior written authorization unless, and only to the extent that, the information will have been published. The obligations of confidentiality contained in this Agreement will terminate _____[e.g., five years after the date of the initial disclosure by Corporation to Consultant of the information].

Term of Agreement

Section 7. The term of this Agreement, beginning on _____[date], will be 180 calendar days unless extended by written notification from Corporation. This written notification will be forwarded (in accordance with Section 9) at least 10 days before the termination date and will state the exact length of the extension.

Hours of Service

Section 8. The Consultant will render working services under this Agreement during normal and customary business hours, unless otherwise directed by Corporation.

Insurance

Section 9 Consultant agrees to provide adequate insurance, while engaged in performing this Agreement, against bodily injury and/or property damage in adequate types and amounts and to hold Corporation harmless against all loss claims based on bodily injury to or by Consultant, personnel and/or property damage caused by Consultant.

Risk of Loss

Section 10. Consultant will assume the risk of loss from automotive liability caused by Consultant's personnel in the course of performing Consultant's services. Consultant will indemnify, defend, and hold Corporation harmless for personal injury and property damage to third parties (including employees of Corporation) occurring during Consultant's performance of the work and caused by the negligence of Consultant.

Payment of Taxes

Section 11. Consultant acknowledges that for purposes of this consulting arrangement, Consultant is solely responsible for paying all income related taxes, including Social Security, in a timely manner pursuant to federal, state, and local tax laws. Consultant agrees to indemnify, defend, and hold Corporation harmless from and against any claims by any taxing authority resulting from Consultant's failure to pay any tax imposed on income derived from Consultant's performance of services under this Agreement.

Termination of Agreement

Section 12. Either party may terminate this agreement prior to the 180 calendar days, (as stated in Section 7) by providing written notice at least ten working days prior to the termination date, given in accordance with Section 13.

Notice

Section 13. Any written notice to be given under this Agreement will be deemed sufficiently served when deposited in the United States mails in a sealed envelope with sufficient postage affixed, registered or certified, with return receipt requested and addressed to:

CORPORATION:
_____ [Corporation's designated contact] at: _____ [address]
CONSULTANT:
_____ [Consultant]
at: _____ [address]

Any party may change the address to which notice to it may be given by written notice to the other as provided in this Agreement.

Entire Agreement; Amendment

Section 14. This Agreement constitutes the entire understanding between the parties with respect to the subject of the Agreement, and may not be altered or amended in any manner except by a writing signed by the parties.

Governing Law

PART IV. FORMS
A. Business Consultants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.202

§ 86.202 Nondisclosure and Consulting Agreement--Letter Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a basic nondisclosure and consulting agreement in letter form. In contrast to the form in § 86.200[2], this form is designed to be used for "smaller" consulting jobs--for example, jobs for which the total fees for services will be $ 5,000 or less. For a similar form in a contract style, see § 86.201. In practice, parties to smaller contacts often neglect to put their agreements in writing. In such situations, a letter agreement, with its less formal appearance, may be more agreeable to the parties, while preserving the basic advantages of using a written agreement.

This agreement is drafted for the situation in which the consultant will be working for a corporation and the corporation rather than the consultant will prepare the letter agreement. The form can be adapted to the situation in which the consultant rather than the client prepares the agreement.

[b] Essential Elements of Contract for Consulting Services

The essential elements of an agreement for consulting services include:

- A description of the consulting services to be provided;
- The term during which the parties agree the consultant will perform the services; and
- The compensation to be paid to the consultant, or the method by which the amount of compensation is to be computed.

Other elements ordinarily addressed in an agreement for business consulting services include nondisclosure issues, including confidentiality and return of documents, and intellectual property rights. Also included in this form is the stipulation that during the term of the agreement, the consultant will not purchase or sell shares of or options for the company' stock for his or her own account or the account of any other person or entity.

For additional discussion and a more detailed consulting services agreement, including additional provisions relating to trade secrets and property rights, see § 86.200[2].

_____[date]
_____[name of consultant]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ [name of consultant] :

This letter contains our agreement regarding the terms and conditions under which you have agreed to provide consulting services to this company. If the terms as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided.

1. Beginning on _____[date], you agree to provide consulting services to the Company in the field of [e.g., statistical analysis]. These services are expected to specifically include the following activities: _____[describe with as much specificity as reasonably possible]. [Optional: Unless otherwise agreed, your services will not include any of the following: _____ (specify)].

2. You agree to provide, at your own expense, the following equipment, supplies, and facilities, as necessary: [specify]. You warrant that you are authorized to use the listed equipment, supplies, and facilities to the extent owned by another (for example, a college or university), and that such use will not prevent the you from carrying out the obligations of this agreement, particularly with regard to intellectual properly, as addressed in Paragraph 9.

3. You agree that the services provided under this agreement will be carried out to the best of your ability and in accordance with the standard of care customarily observed with regard to such services in your profession.

4. Your services will be performed at times and locations as are mutually agreed.

5. We will compensate you for the services described above at the rate of $_____ per hour (including reasonable travel time at our request), billable [e.g., monthly]. You agree to provide a detailed itemization of hours billed upon request.

6. We will reimburse you for reasonable travel and out-of-pocket expenses you incur while performing services for us under this agreement. These expenses include, but are not limited to, economy class airfare, accommodations, meals, mileage reimbursement at our standard rate for use of personal car, rental cars, courier expenses, telephone, and fax. Copies of all receipts for expenses greater than [specify, e.g., $25] will need to be submitted with billings. [Optional: Reimbursement of _____ (individual or aggregate) expenses in excess of $_____ (specify amount) will be made only if we approve those expenses in advance, unless we elect, in our sole discretion, to reimburse you after the fact.]

7. (a) We anticipate disclosing confidential information to you in connection with your services under this agreement. Confidential information includes trade secrets, proprietary information, of materials (whether or not patentable) including, but not limited to, [specify as appropriate to client's business, e.g., drug samples, compounds, protocols, investigator brochures, case report forms, methodology, equipment, data, reports, know-how, computer software, sources of supply, manufacturing processes, patent strategies, facilities, financial information, advertising campaigns and strategies, marketing and sales data, employees, consultants, and business plans], which are owned or controlled by us.

(b) You agree to use confidential information only for the purpose of providing consulting services and will not disclose or use confidential information for any other purpose. You may disclose confidential information to others who are legally bound to you to protect the confidentiality of confidential information, provided that we are informed of any such disclosure before it is made.

(c) Your obligation not to disclose confidential information will not be applicable to confidential information that either:

(1) Is or later becomes available to the public through no breach of this agreement on your part;

(2) You obtained from a third party having the legal right to disclose that information to you;

(3) Was already in your possession on the effective date of this agreement and was not confidential or subject to other restrictions on disclosure as of that date; or

(4) Is required to be disclosed by law, government regulation, or court order, as long as we are given advance notice of any such disclosure and an opportunity to seek a protective order or confidential treatment.

8. At our request, you will return to us any and all confidential items you receive under this agreement (and all copies and reproductions)[, except that you may retain a copy solely for archival purposes].

9. You hereby assign to us all right, title, and interest in and to all intellectual property (including trade secrets, inventions, works of authorship or ideas, or clinical trial results) made, conceived, reduced to practice, or otherwise developed by you, alone or jointly with others, in connection with services under this agreement, or during any retention discussion with us occurring [specify, e.g., not more than six months] before the effective date of this agreement. You hereby grant us an irrevocable power of attorney to execute on your behalf patent applications or any documents required to perfect our interest in any such intellectual property.

10. You warrant that to the best of your knowledge and belief, we are free to use, without any restriction, whatever advice and assistance you provide to us under this agreement. You further warrant that you will make no unauthorized disclosure to us of any information that is proprietary to a third party.

11. You warrant that you have not entered into, and will not enter into, any agreement in conflict with this agreement.

12. You are free to disclose to third parties data or information relating to us or your services to us, as long as the data or information does not contain or reveal confidential information, we have been given reasonable opportunity to review the planned disclosure, and have agreed to the disclosure.

13. (a) The initial term of this agreement will expire on _____[date]. This agreement will be renewable in writing for successive periods on the mutual consent of both parties.

(b) This agreement may be terminated by either party on [specify, e.g., 30 days written notice].

(c) The duties, rights, and obligations specified in Paragraphs 7, 8, 9 and 12 will survive termination or expiration of this agreement.

(d) If we continue or re-establish a business consulting relationship after expiration of this agreement, but without a subsequent written agreement, we agree that the terms and conditions of this agreement will be construed by our course of conduct to have been renewed or reinstated for an additional period equal to the length of the initial term.

14. Your relationship with us will be that of an independent contractor and not an employee. You agree that you will not be eligible for any employee benefits that we provide to our employees. You further understand and agree that we will not deduct taxes, social security, unemployment insurance, or any other similar contributions that are typically made for employees, from the compensation paid to you under this agreement, and that you are solely responsible for such taxes and similar contributions.

15. During the term of this agreement, you agree not to purchase or sell, whether for your own account or the account of any other person or entity, shares of or options for our stock, or recommend that others do so.

16. This agreement will be governed by the laws of the state of California.

17. Your obligations under this agreement are neither delegable nor assignable. We may assign this agreement at our discretion.

18. Any notice under this agreement will be sent to the addresses listed in this agreement, by certified or registered mail, and will be deemed given five days after the date of postmark.

19. This agreement supersedes all prior agreements, written or oral, between us relating to the subject matter of this agreement. This agreement may be modified, changed, or discharged, in whole or in part, only by an agreement in writing signed by both of us, except that a writing is not required for mutually agreed changes in the nature, frequency, or type of consulting services you will provide.

20. We will have the right to enforce any provision of this agreement by injunction, specific performance or other equitable relief without prejudice to other rights and remedies that we may have for a breach of this agreement.

21. If any part of this agreement is found unenforceable or void in a final judicial determination, you and we will reform this agreement so as to most closely approximate the original intent.

If this agreement meets with your approval, please sign and return the original and one copy of this agreement; you may retain the additional copy for your own records.

Sincerely,
_____ [name of client]

CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART IV. FORMS
A. Business Consultants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.203

§ 86.203 Vendor to Vendor Contract for Professional Services

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a "vendor-to-vendor" agreement, in which one firm retains a business consultant to provide consulting services to a another person or entity. The agreement establishes a contractor-subcontractor relationship. The agreement is drafted between two corporate entities, the vendor and the consultant. However, it may be adapted for use by any combination of entities or individuals.

This agreement prohibits the subcontractor from accepting a position with the vendor's client, unless the subcontractor pays a placement fee.

As a practical matter, a consultant working as a subcontractor on a vendor-to-vendor contract is often required to sign two nondisclosure and property rights agreements--one provided by the vendor, between the consultant and the company for whom the vendor retained the consultant's services [see [2], below], and the other, provided by the company for whom the services will be provided. For further discussion of nondisclosure agreements and property rights, see § 86.200. For a separate nondisclosure agreement, see § 86.204.

For additional discussion of consultant contract provisions, see § 86.200[1]. The form in § 86.200[2] also contains other general provisions that can be added to this form if desired [see, e.g., § 86.200[2], Article 17 (standard contract provisions)]. Copyright issues are discussed generally in § 86.260. For detailed discussion of those issues, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

[2] FORM

Vendor to Vendor Contract for Professional Services

VENDOR-TO-VENDOR CONTRACT AND NONDISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

This Agreement, dated _____, is between _____[name of vendor] ("Company")

_____[, a _____ (California corporation or limited liability company or partnership)], located at _____[address of principal place of business], and _____[name of consultant] ("Subcontractor") _____[, a _____ (identify state) corporation or partnership)], located at _____[address of principal place of business], with Federal Tax Identification Number _____.

1. This Agreement establishes a Vendor-to-Vendor, Contractor-Subcontractor relationship. Company presently has available a temporary position to provide consulting services to its client, _____[name of client] ("Client"), in the field of [specify, e.g., Internet marketing]. Company agrees[, subject to Client's approval,] to have Subcontractor provide those services to Client under the terms of this agreement.

2. Subcontractor accepts and agrees to provide services to Client in accordance with this Vendor-to-Vendor contract (subject to Paragraph 1 and 5), beginning on _____[date] and ending on _____[date]. Subcontractor agrees to devote time and efforts to the business and affairs of Company and Client, with such duties as may be assigned to Subcontractor by Company from time to time. The duration of this initial contract may be extended by mutual agreement of Subcontractor and Company.

3. As compensation for Subcontractor's services, Company will pay Subcontractor for all Client-approved hours spent by Subcontractor in rendering to Client the services described in Paragraphs 1 and 2, above, at a rate of $_____ per hour. Subcontractor will invoice the Company [term, e.g., weekly or bi-weekly or monthly] and provide Client-approved time sheets supporting each invoice. Company and Subcontractor agree that this rate of compensation is confidential. Subcontractor will not discuss Subcontractor's compensation with Client, other Company consultants, or anyone at Client's site.

4. Subcontractor agrees that in performing its duties and obligations under this agreement, and rendering services to Client, Subcontractor will be acting as an independent contractor of Company, and not as an employee of Company or Client. Accordingly, Subcontractor is responsible for filing all necessary and required tax filings, reports, payments, and similar obligations. Company is not responsible for any workers' compensation, Medicare, Medicaid, or other similar deductions or contributions, which shall be the sole responsibility of Subcontractor. Furthermore, Subcontractor is not entitled to any coverage for medical, dental, long term disability, life insurance benefits, or other benefits that Company may offer to its own employees. In addition, Subcontractor also waives any and all rights to employee-related benefits including, but not limited to, vacation, sick time, absences, holidays, educational assistance, and special employee savings plans and bonuses of any type, with the exception of, when applicable, of candidate referral bonuses.

5. Notwithstanding other provisions of this Agreement, Subcontractor may terminate this Agreement by giving the Company [specify, e.g., 10 working days] written notice. Company may terminate this Agreement for any reason on notice to Subcontractor.

6. Subcontractor agrees that during this contract and a period of _____ months thereafter, Subcontractor will not directly or indirectly, in any capacity, compete or attempt to compete with Company by providing [specify services, e.g., Internet marketing services] to Client, either directly, or indirectly through another consulting company, or by inducing any other individual or entity to do so. Should Subcontractor circumvent this provision in the time frame stated above, and accept a permanent position with Client, Subcontractor agrees to pay to Company a one-time permanent placement fee of [specify, e.g., $10,000 or five percent of Subcontractor's annualized compensation from Client]. This fee will be payable to Company in full within [specify, e.g., 30 days] after Subcontractor accepts a permanent position with Client and shall be due and payable without regard to how long Subcontractor remains in a permanent position with Client.

7. Subcontractor understands and agrees and that all information or data it may receive from Company or Client in connection the process of providing services to Client will be deemed confidential and may not be disclosed to anyone other than Company or Client without the prior written consent of Company or Client. Any violation of this paragraph shall be deemed to be material and shall be cause for immediate termination of this agreement. Subcontractor also agrees that as a condition of this Agreement, Subcontractor will execute the agreement relating to nondisclosure and intellectual property rights attached to this agreement as Attachment A.

8. This Agreement supersedes any and all prior understandings and undertakings between the parties with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN SUBCONTRACTOR AND CLIENT _____ [name] REGARDING NONDISCLOSURE AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

In consideration of payment for the performance of work or assignments on behalf of _____[name of company] ("Company") for _____[name of vendor's client] ("Client") or any of Client's affiliates, and other good and valuable consideration, including Subcontractor's use, on behalf of Client, of Client's materials, private or proprietary information, or facilities, Subcontractor agrees as follows:

1. Subcontractor assigns and agrees to assign to Client all Subcontractor's right, title, and interest in and to all inventions, discoveries, improvements, ideas, computer or other apparatus programs and related documentation, and other works of authorship ("Intellectual Property") whether or not patentable, copyrightable, or subject to other forms of protection, that are made, created, developed, written, or conceived by Subcontractor, during or outside of regular working hours, either solely or jointly with another, in whole or in part, either:

(a) In the course of Subcontractor's work or assignment, or

(b) That are suggested by or result from a task assigned to Subcontractor or work performed for on behalf of Client relating to Subcontractor's assignment, or

(c) With the use of Client's time, material, private or proprietary information, or facilities.

2. Subcontractor, without charge to Client, but at _____ Client's expense, will execute a specific assignment of title to Client and do anything else reasonably necessary to enable Client to secure a patent, copyright or other form of protection for the intellectual property described in Paragraph 1 anywhere in the world.

3. Subcontractor further agrees that it will keep in confidence and will not, except as required in the conduct of Client's business as authorized in writing on behalf of Client, publish, disclose, or use, during and after the period of my work or assignment, any private or proprietary information that Subcontractor may in any way acquire, learn, develop, or create by reason of my work or assignment performed for or on behalf of Client.

4. Subcontractor agrees that this Agreement does not constitute a contract of employment with Client, nor does it confer any rights by license or otherwise in any Intellectual Property to which Subcontractor may have access.

5. Subcontractor agrees that it will not disclose any information that Subcontractor considers to be proprietary or confidential to any of Subcontractor's contractors or customers, except with Client's express written consent. All specifications, drawings, sketches, models, samples, tools, computer or other apparatus programs, technical or business information or data, written, oral or otherwise, furnished by Client under this Agreement or in contemplation of this Agreement, will be treated by Subcontractor as confidential or proprietary.

6. In the event that Subcontractor has previously executed an agreement with Client relating to the work that Subcontractor is about to undertake, it is understood and agreed that any and provisions of this Agreement will supersede any conflicting terms and conditions of any previously executed agreement.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Business Consultants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.204

§ 86.204 Consultant Nondisclosure Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a separate agreement for nondisclosure of trade secrets and other confidential issues. Nondisclosure issues may be covered in the contract for services [see, e.g., § 86.200[2]] or in a separate agreement. The form describes the trade secrets of the party retaining the consultant in general terms, and includes a promise on the part of the consultant not to disclose, misuse, or misappropriate them during the term of the agreement or at any time thereafter. This type of agreement may be used in conjunction with a provision prohibiting the consultant from engaging in unfair competition with the proprietor of the trade secret, whether during or after the term of the contemplated engagement [see § 86.200[2], § 5.03; see also [g], below].

The use of an agreement against disclosure, misappropriation, or misuse is recommended because even though injunctive and other relief may be available against a person who uses trade secrets to the owner's prejudice [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17202-17209; see also Civ. Code §§ 3426.2, 3426.3], an agreement such as this one provides a firm written basis for traditional contract remedies [see [f], below], clearly informs the consultant of his or her obligation not to divulge the client's trade secrets, and emphasizes the client's position on disclosure.

Many companies, especially in high-technology industries, routinely require such a stand-alone agreement of all their consultants.

This form includes a clause stating that all books, files, records, and the like that the consultant will use during the course of the engagement are the exclusive property of the entity for whom consulting services are provided.

[b] Definition of "Trade Secret"

For common law purposes, California has adopted the broad definition of "trade secret" set forth in the Restatement of Torts [see Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b) (1939)]. Under this definition, a trade secret may consist of any formula, pattern, device, or compilation of information that is used in the client's business and that gives the client an advantage over competitors who do not know it or use it [see Rigging Int'l Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; see also Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1963) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

For the purposes of an action for misappropriation under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], a "trade secret" is information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use and is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Civ. Code § 3426.1(d); see Penal Code § 499c(a)(9) (criminal law definition of trade secret)]. For further discussion of the application of the Act, see [e], below.

Secrecy is a necessary element of a trade secret; to qualify as a trade secret, the information involved must be difficult for an outsider to acquire. Matters of public or general knowledge in a particular industry cannot be trade secrets. Information that is completely disclosed by a manufactured product cannot be a trade secret. A trade secret generally is known only in the particular business in which it is used. Without losing trade secret protection, the trade secret can be communicated to employees or to others pledged to secrecy. Others may know it independently, however, such as another who has discovered the same process but is also keeping it secret [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-290, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b) (1939)].

The mere agreement of the parties that something is a trade secret does not make it a protectable interest if it is not actually a trade secret [see Ingrassia v. Bailey (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 117, 123-124, 341 P.2d 370] .

[c] Factors Used in Determining Trade Secret Status

The factors to be considered in determining whether particular information is a trade secret are [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-290, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b) (1939)]:

- The extent to which the information is known outside of the business.
- The extent to which the information is known by employees and others involved in the business.
- The measures taken to guard the secrecy of the information.
- The value of the information to the owner and the owner's competitors.
- The effort and money expended in developing the information.
- The relative ease or difficulty with which the information could be properly acquired by others.

[d] Protection of Trade Secrets

The foundation of trade secret protection law is the statement that a party has the right to keep the work it has done, or paid for doing, to itself and that others may not steal that work [see Chicago Board of Trade v. Christie Grain & Stock Co. (1905) 198 U.S. 236, 250, 25 S. Ct. 637, 49 L. Ed. 1031] . A trade secret is given legal protection if it is acquired and used under a contractual or fiduciary relationship between the proprietor and the user [see J. Irizarry y Puente v. President & F. of Harvard Col. (1st Cir. [Mass.] 1957), 248 F.2d 799, 802] . Contractually obligated secrecy is a key method of protecting a trade secret because it provides a remedy without the automatic public disclosure that is required to patent or copyright an invention or process.

Trade secret law protects the trade secret proprietor against any unauthorized disclosure of confidential information by the user to third parties whom the proprietor does not wish to know that information. However, if an individual discovers a trade secret either independently or by "reverse engineering" applied to a product or invention that has been disseminated to the public, that person has not breached any contractual or fiduciary relationship and would not be liable under trade secret law [see Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)].

The confidentiality aspect of trade secret protection is significantly different from the protection afforded by copyright. For discussion of copyright law generally, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights . For more detailed discussion of actions involving the disclosure or misuse of trade secrets, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[e] California Action for Misappropriation

Under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, which has been adopted in California [Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.], an actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret may be enjoined or otherwise limited [see Civ. Code § 3426.2], and damages can be recovered for the misappropriation [see Civ. Code § 3426.3]. The Act does not supersede any other statute relating to the misappropriation of a trade secret or any other statute regulating trade secrets [Civ. Code § 3426.7(a)], nor does it affect contractual, civil, or criminal remedies [see Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)]. For the definition of a "trade secret" for purposes of the Act, see [b], above.

"Misappropriation," for purposes of the Act, includes improper acquisition of a trade secret, by one who knows, or has reason to know, that the trade secret was acquired by improper means [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(1)]. The term also covers the improper disclosure or use of the trade secret. Thus, misappropriation is the disclosure or use of another person's trade secret without that person's consent by one who used improper means to acquire knowledge of the secret [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(2)(A)], or by one who knew (at the time of the disclosure) that his or her knowledge of the secret was derived by improper means or from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(2)(B)(i), (iii)] or was acquired in breach of a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(2)(B)(ii)]. "Misappropriation" also includes disclosure or use of a trade secret by a person who knew that it was a trade secret and that its knowledge had been acquired by accident or mistake [Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(2)(C)].

"Improper means" includes theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a duty to maintain secrecy. The term also includes electronic or other means of espionage. However, reverse engineering or independent derivation alone are not improper means [Civ. Code § 3426.1(a)].

An action for misappropriation under the Act must be brought within three years after the misappropriation is discovered or should have been discovered [see Civ. Code § 3426.6]. As a prerequisite to discovery in an action for misappropriation under the Act, the complaining party must identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity [Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.201]. However, the court is required to take reasonable measures to preserve its secrecy [see Civ. Code § 3426.5].

[f] Contract Actions

The misappropriation or misuse of trade secrets that are protected by contract can also be remedied by means of traditional contract actions. The Uniform Trade Secrets Act specifically provides that it does not affect contractual remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(1)]. Under the common law definition, a "trade secret" is any formula, device, or compilation of information used in one's business which gives that person an opportunity to obtain an advantage over competitors who do not know or use it [Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288-289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 757, Comment (b) (1939)]. Since this definition is broader than that set forth in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act and since the plaintiff in a common law contract action may not have to make the type of disclosure required under the Act, a common law contract action may be more desirable.

[g] Action for Unfair Competition

"Unfair competition" is any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. The criminal law definition of trade secret includes information, including any formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic benefit from its disclosure or use, and is subject to the efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy [Penal Code § 499c(a)(9); see Civ. Code § 3426.1(d) ("trade secret" defined under Uniform Trade Secrets Act; Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.)].

A person who commits unfair competition by misusing or misappropriating a trade secret may be enjoined from continuing to do so [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204; Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.; see Peerless Oakland Laundry Co. v. Hickman (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 556, 559, 23 Cal. Rptr. 105 (restraining order issued to prevent former employee's use, to former employer's prejudice, of trade secrets acquired during prior employment)]. That person can also be held liable for civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206].

A consultant who misappropriates a former client's trade secrets can also be subjected to any other remedies provided under California law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205]. These remedies include damages for breach of any contractual provision against unauthorized use or disclosure of a trade secret [see [f], above]. These remedies for unfair competition are available in addition to those available under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, since the Act does not affect other civil remedies that are not based upon misappropriation of a trade secret [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(2)], or criminal remedies, whether or not they are based on misappropriation [Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(3)].

[2] FORM

Consultant Nondisclosure Agreement

CONSULTANT NONDISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

In consideration of my services as a consultant with [company] ("Company") and of the compensation I will receive in the course of performing those services, I agree as follows:

1. Except as Company may otherwise consent in writing, I will not directly or indirectly use (other than for Company), publish, or otherwise disclose at any time (except as my Company duties may require), either during or subsequent to the performance of my consulting services, any of Company's confidential information (whether or not conceived, originated, discovered, or developed in whole or in part by me) as defined below.

2. "Confidential information" as used in this Agreement means information or material that is not generally available to or used by others, or the utility or value of which is not generally known or recognized as standard practice whether or not the underlying details are in the public domain, including without limitation:

(a) Information or material that relates to Company's inventions, technological developments, "know-how", purchasing, accounting, merchandising or licensing

(b) Trade secrets.

(c) Software in various stages of development (source code, object code, documentation, diagrams, flow charts), designs, drawings, specifications, models; data and customer information; and

(d) Any information of the type described above that Company obtained from another party and that Company treats as proprietary or designates as confidential, whether or not owned or developed by Company.

3. The obligations of confidentiality imposed by this Agreement will not apply to confidential information that:

(a) Is or has been generally available to the public by any means, through no fault of my own, and without breach of this Agreement.

(b) Is or has been lawfully disclosed to me by a third party without an obligation of confidentiality being imposed on me.

(c) Has been disclosed without restriction by Company or by a third party owner of confidential information.

4. I agree to deliver to Company promptly on request, or on the date of termination of my consulting services, all documents, software, including any copies, and other materials in my possession pertaining to the business of Company and originating with Company that came into my possession.

5. For a period of [time period, e.g., two years] following termination of my consulting services with Company within a worldwide geographical area (it being understood and agreed that Company's industry is worldwide and that Company faces competition throughout the world and has customers throughout the world), I agree not to engage in or contribute my knowledge to any work that is then competitive with or similar to the product, process, apparatus or service on which I work or worked or with respect to which I have or had access to confidential information while at the Company at any time before that termination. However, I will be permitted to engage in such proposed work or activity, and Company will furnish me a written consent to that effect, if I furnish to Company clear and convincing written evidence including assurance from me and my employer, that the fulfillment of my duties in such proposed work or activity will not cause me to disclose, base judgment upon, or use any confidential information. The geographical area set forth in this paragraph is divisible so that if this clause is invalid or unenforceable in an included geographical area, that area is severable and this clause remains in effect for the remaining geographical areas in which the clause is valid.

§ 86.210 Basic Agreement for Accountancy Services--Letter Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a basic letter agreement between a client and a certified public accountant or a public accountant to provide public accountancy services to the client. Although a formal contract may be used [see § 86.211[2]], the usual practice for routine accounting services is to memorialize the engagement in letter form. Typically such letters are kept simple and informal.

For the sake of completeness, this sample agreement contains a number of standard contract provisions [see [d], below] that are appropriate in any contract but are not always included in letter contracts for accounting services. For ease of reference, the accountant letter agreements in this chapter use a numbered paragraph format. If a less formal appearance is desired, the paragraph numbers can be deleted and the provisions of the form set out in ordinary paragraphs.

For a general discussion of the practice of accountancy, see §§ 86.16, 86.19. For forms specifically related to audit, review, and compilation services, see § 86.212-86.214. For an agreement for the preparation of income or estate tax returns, see § 86.215.

[b] Accountant's Services

Paragraph 1 of this form specifies the services that the accountant will perform under the agreement. If the agreement contemplates a general arrangement under which the accountant will perform general accounting services as necessary or on request, the first alternative should be used.

If the arrangement is for a specific and limited task, the second alternative should be used. When the second alternative is used, the description of the services to be provided should be as specific and detailed as possible. This is especially important if the services are to be provided on a flat fee basis, since the more detailed the description of services, the lesser the likelihood of misunderstandings or disagreements over exactly what services were included in the flat fee. In addition, the accountant should specify any services that are not included in the basic package contemplated by the agreement. The second alternative contains an optional provision that may be used to limit the services to be rendered. The description of excluded services, like the description of included services, should be as specific and detailed as reasonably possible. The second alternative also contains language stating that any additional services will be billed at extra cost.

For more detailed descriptions of specific types of accounting services, see the forms in §§ 86.212-86.215. For a discussion of what services are included in the term "public accountancy services," what services must be rendered by a certified public accountant or public accountant, and what services may be rendered by other persons, see § 86.16[5], [6]. For a discussion of the distinction between a certified public accountant or public account and unlicensed individuals, see § 86.16[2], [3].

[c] Compensation

Paragraph 2 of the form contains two alternative methods of compensation. The first provides simply that all services will be charged on an hourly basis at the accountant's standard hourly rate. This is the most common method of compensation in agreements for accounting services, since it is usually difficult to determine at the time the agreement is entered into exactly how much time the accountant will have to spend to perform the necessary services.

The second alternative provision in Paragraph 2 provides for a flat fee for specific services [see [b], above]. Such a provision may be appropriate when the nature and scope of the accounting services can be accurately determined in advance. This alternative provides that if additional services are rendered, those services will be billed at the accountant's standard hourly rate.

In addition, this form also provides that the client will charge costs and expenses back to the client. These costs include photocopying, postage, filing fees, and similar expenses.

This agreement also provides for the payment of a retainer upon execution of the agreement, prior to the commencement of services [see Paragraph 3 of form]. Retainer provisions are common in accountant agreements. The retainer will be credited against amounts charged to the client for fees and expenses, and any unused balance refunded to the client on termination of the agreement.

[d] Termination of Agreement

Paragraph 4 of this agreement provides for termination by either party at any time on written notice to the other party. On termination, any amounts accrued but unpaid as of the date of the termination will be billed to the client. If compensation was to be in the form of a flat fee and the agreement is terminated before completion of the accountant's services, the form provides that the accountant is to be compensated for time actually spent, in lieu of the flat fee [see Paragraph 4 of Form].

In addition, Paragraph 3 provides that any portion of the accountant's retainer that has not been applied against amounts due for the accountant's fees and expenses will be refunded to the client on termination of the agreement.

For alternative provisions governing termination of the contract, see the form in § 86.211[2].

[e] Other Provisions

This contract contains other standard "boilerplate" provisions. These provisions are not always included in informal letter agreements, but are included here for the sake of completeness:

- A provision for arbitration of any disputes arising under the agreement [see Paragraph 5 of form; for discussion and alternative provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.250]. In practice, arbitration provisions are included in many accountant agreements.

- A provision allowing the prevailing party in any litigation or arbitration to recover attorneys' fees [Civ. Code § 1717; see Paragraph 6 of form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.252].

- A severability clause [see Paragraph 7 of form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.271].

- A choice of law clause specifying that the agreement will be governed by California law [see Paragraph 8 of form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.273].

- An "entire agreement" clause [see Paragraph 9 of form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.270].

- A provision governing the manner of notice under the contract [see Paragraph 10 of form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.294].

Basic Agreement for Accountancy Services--Letter Form

[Accountant's letterhead]
_____[date]
_____[name of client]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter contains our agreement regarding the terms and conditions under which we will provide public accountancy services to you. If the terms as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided.

[For a general statement of services to be rendered, include the following:]

1. We agree to perform such general tax and accounting services for you as you may request or authorize us to perform with respect to your business and/or personal affairs, under the terms and conditions set forth in this letter agreement [if desired, add listing of specific types of services:, including such matters as _____ (e.g., general bookkeeping services, preparation of monthly financial statements, tax reports, and returns)].

[Or, to limit services to one or more specifically described services, use the following:]

1. We agree to perform the following specific accounting services for you under the terms and conditions stated in this letter agreement: _____[describe services with specificity]. In addition, we may perform additional accounting services for you if you so request and we agree to do so. Any services that are not specifically described above will not be included in the basic compensation and will be billed separately as stated below. [Optional: Unless otherwise agreed, we will not _____ (specify any services specifically excluded from the basic services accountant will provide)].

[Continue with the following:]

[If compensation is to be based exclusively on an hourly rate:]

2. Our fees for the services specified above, and for any additional services, will be charged at our standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour.

[Or, if compensation is to be on a flat rate basis:]

2. Our fee for the services specified above will be $[state flat rate, e.g., $2,000]. Additional services not specified above will be charged at our standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour.

[Continue with the following:]

In addition, you also agree to reimburse us for any incidental costs and expenses relating to the services we provide. These costs and expenses may include, but are not limited to, such things as [secretarial and similar charges,] telephone calls, photocopying and related expenses, shipping and mailing charges, document filing fees, other government fees, notary fees, and similar expenses. Statements of the amount due will be sent to you on a periodic [or specify a more precise term, e.g., monthly or quarterly] basis and will be due and payable within _____ days thereafter.

[Optional retainer provision:]

3. You agree to pay us a retainer of $_____ upon signing this letter. This retainer will be credited against our fees, costs, and expenses as specified above. If this agreement is terminated, any portion of the retainer in excess of amounts credited against our fees, costs, and expenses, as of the time of termination, will be refunded to you promptly after termination of the agreement.

[Continue with the following:]

4. Either of us may terminate this agreement at any time, effective upon written notice to the other party. In the event that this agreement is terminated [for a flat fee agreement or similar arrangement, add: before we complete the services specified above, then in lieu of the fee specified above for our services], you agree to compensate us at our regular hourly rate for any time expended but not billed as of the termination date, as well as any costs or expenses as specified above incurred but not billed as of that date.

5. If any disagreement or controversy arises between us with respect to the terms of our agreement, it will be submitted to arbitration in accordance with California Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1280 through 1294.2.

6. If any party to this agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire agreement.

7. If any part of this agreement should be found to be invalid, the invalidity will not affect the remainder of this agreement, which will continue in effect as if this agreement had been executed without the invalid part.

8. This agreement will be governed by California law.

9. This letter agreement states our entire agreement with you with respect to the subject matter of the agreement, and supersedes any and all other agreements, whether oral or in writing, between us with respect to the subject of this agreement. No agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this letter agreement will be valid or binding between us with respect to the subject of this agreement.

10. Any notice required to be given under this contract may be given by personal delivery or by registered or certified mail, postage prepaid, return receipt requested, to the address of the party to whom notice is being given, as stated in this letter. Notice will be deemed communicated as of actual receipt by the other party.

We believe that this letter accurately summarizes the terms of the engagement. If you agree that this letter correctly sets forth our agreement, please sign and date, as indicated below and return this letter to us. A copy is enclosed for your files.

We appreciate the opportunity to be of service to you. If you have any questions or would like to discuss anything in this letter, please be sure to call us.

Sincerely,
_____ [name of accountant]

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.211

§ 86.211 Basic Agreement for Accountancy Services--Contract Form

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a contract between an accountant and client specifying the nature of the services to be performed by the accountant and the compensation for those services. It is similar in general scope to the letter agreement in § 86.210, but contains more formal and detailed provisions of the type that are typically included in a formal contract.

In practice, agreements for accounting services normally are memorialized in a less formal engagement letter. Formal written agreements with accountants are not commonly used. Nevertheless, circumstances may arise in which one or both parties believes that a formal contract is the most appropriate way to protect their respective interests.

This form can be used either when the accountant is engaged to perform a specific task, or when the accountant is engaged to perform all accounting services required or requested by the client on an ongoing open-ended basis or for a specified period of time [see Paragraph 2 of Form].

Compensation can be on either an hourly basis, a flat fee basis, or a periodic basis [see Paragraph 3 of Form]. Hourly fees are the most common form of compensation in accountant agreements. If a flat fee or periodic arrangement is used, it is especially important that the services be described with particularity, and that any excluded services also be specifically noted, in order to reduce the chances of subsequent disagreements over the scope of services included in the basic fee [see § 86.210[1][b] for additional discussion]. For descriptions of specific types of accounting services, see §§ 86.212-86.215. This agreement also provides for an advance retainer to be credited against the accountant's fees [see Paragraph 5 of Form].

An arbitration provision is also included [see Paragraph 7 of Form; see also Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.271].

For discussion of some of the other standard provisions in this agreement, see § 86.210[1][e]. For a general discussion of the practice of accountancy, see §§ 86.16, 86.19. For forms specifically related to audit, review, and compilation

Any services that are not specifically described in this section are not be included in the basic compensation rate specified in Paragraph 3 and will be billed separately to Client as stated below. [Optional: Unless otherwise agreed in writing, Accountant will not _____ (specify any services specifically excluded from the basic services accountant will provide)].

[Continue with the following:]

Accountant's Fees

[If compensation is to be based exclusively on an hourly rate:]

3. Accountant's fees for the services specified in Paragraph 2, above, and for any additional services, will be charged on an hourly basis at Accountant's standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour. Amounts due for Accountant's fees, costs, and expenses will be billed to Client on a [monthly or quarterly or specify other billing cycle] basis and will be due and payable within _____ days thereafter. [Amounts more than _____ days past due will accrue interest at the rate of _____ percent per _____ (e.g., month)].

[Or, if compensation is to be on a periodic basis:]

3. Accountant's fee for the services specified in Paragraph 2, above, will be $_____ per [time period, e.g., month]. Any additional services performed by Accountant for Client and not specified in Paragraph 2, above, will be charged on an hourly rate basis at Accountant's standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour. Amounts due for Accountant's fees, costs, and expenses will be billed to Client on a [monthly or quarterly or specify other billing cycle] basis and will be due and payable within _____ days thereafter. [Amounts more than _____ days past due will accrue interest at the rate of _____ percent per _____ (e.g., month)].

[Or, if compensation is to be on a flat rate basis:]

3. Accountant's total fee for the services specified in Paragraph 2, above, will be $_____, payable _____[on Accountant's completion of the services specified in Paragraph 2 or specify periodic payment schedule, e.g., in _____ equal monthly installments of $_____, beginning on _____ (date)]. Any additional services not specified in Paragraph 2, above, will be charged to Client on an hourly rate basis at Accountant's standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour. Amounts due for any additional fees and for Accountant's costs and expenses will be billed to Client on a [monthly or quarterly or specify other billing cycle] basis and will be due and payable within _____ days thereafter. [Amounts more than _____ days past due will accrue interest at the rate of _____ percent per _____ (e.g., month)].

[Continue with the following:]

Costs and Expenses

4. In addition to the fees specified above, Client will reimburse Accountant for any incidental costs and expenses Accountant incurs in performing services for Client under this agreement, including, but not limited to, [secretarial and similar charges,] telephone calls, photocopying and related expenses, shipping and mailing charges, document filing fees, other government fees, notary fees, and similar expenses. [Optional: Client further agrees to reimburse Accountant for reasonable travel and out-of-pocket expenses incurred while performing services for Client under this Agreement, including, but not limited to, economy class airfare, accommodations, meals, mileage reimbursement at Accountant's standard rate for use of a personal car, rental cars, courier expenses, telephone, and fax]. Costs and expenses will be billed to Client as specified in Paragraph 3, above. Copies of all receipts for expenses greater than [specify, e.g., $25] will be provided on request. [Optional: Reimbursement of _____ (individual or aggregate) expenses in excess of $_____ (specify amount) will be made only if Client approves those expenses in advance or elects, in Client's sole discretion, to reimburse Accountant after the fact.]

Retainer

[Optional retainer provision:]

5. Client agrees to pay Accountant a retainer of $_____ upon signing this Agreement. This retainer will be credited against Accountant's fees, costs, and expenses as specified above. If this agreement is terminated, any portion of the retainer in excess of amounts credited against Accountant's fees, costs, and expenses, as of the time of termination, will be refunded to Client promptly following termination of the agreement.

[Select one of the following alternatives:]

Termination on Notice

6. Either party may terminate this agreement at any time by giving [specify time requirement, if any, e.g., 30 days] written notice to the other party. In the event that this agreement is terminated [for a flat fee agreement or similar arrangement, add: before Accountant completes the services specified above, then in lieu of the fee specified above for Accountant's services], Client agrees to compensate Accountant at Accountant's regular hourly rate for any time expended but not billed as of the termination date, as well as any costs or expenses as specified above incurred but not billed as of that date.

[OR]

Termination

6. (a) This agreement will terminate on expiration of the term specified in Paragraph 1, above, unless that term is extended in writing by mutual agreement of the parties. In addition, the agreement may be terminated prior to the expiration of that term in accordance with (b) and (c), below.

(b) Accountant, at its option, may elect to terminate this Agreement immediately upon written notice to Client on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(1) Accountant [retires, becomes incapacitated, or for any other reason] ceases or withdraws from the practice of public accountancy.

(2) Client fails to cooperate in providing Accountant with access to all necessary records, data, and other materials that Accountant reasonably requests to enable Accountant to perform services for Client under the terms of this Agreement.

(3) Client declares bankruptcy, becomes insolvent, or reasonably appears to Accountant to be or be likely to become unable to meet its financial obligations to Accountant under the terms of this Agreement.

(4) Client engages in any illegal or fraudulent activity, misrepresentations, or similar activity involving or arising out of the work performed by Accountant under this agreement, or otherwise misuses balance sheets or other financial information prepared or reviewed by Accountant under this Agreement.

(5) Any amounts owed by Client to Accountant under the terms of this Agreement remain past due for more than _____ [specify period, e.g., 60 days].

(c) Client, at its option, may elect to terminate this Agreement immediately upon written notice to Client on the occurrence of any of the following events:

(1) Client [dies,] goes out of business, or changes Client's business activities in such a manner that Accountant's services are no longer reasonably necessary.

(2) Accountant or Client moves their principal place of business more than _____ miles outside

_____ [e.g., Orange County or specify other geographical limitation].

(3) Accountant fails to render services under this Agreement in a timely manner.

(4) Accountant's services under this Agreement at any time fail to reasonably meet the generally accepted standards for the practice of public accountancy.

(d) In the event this agreement is terminated under (b) or (c), above, [for a flat fee agreement or similar arrangement, add: then in lieu of the fee specified above for Accountant's services], Client agrees to compensate Accountant for at Accountant's regular hourly rate for any time expended but not billed as of the termination date, as well as any costs or expenses as specified above incurred but not billed as of that date.

Arbitration

7. Any controversy between the parties to this Agreement involving the construction or application of any of its terms, covenants, or conditions will be submitted to arbitration, on the written request of one party served on the other. The arbitration will comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act, California Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1280 through 1294.2.

Attorneys' Fees

8. If any party to this Agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this Agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire contract.

Client's Cooperation

9. Client agrees to cooperate fully and completely with Accountant and to provide Accountant with all the necessary data, information, records, and other materials requested by Accountant that are reasonably necessary to enable Accountant to render accounting services to Client under the terms of this Agreement.

Independent Contractor

10. In performing accounting services under this Agreement, Accountant at all times will be an independent contractor and not an employee of Client.

Entire Agreement

11. This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the parties relating to the rights granted and the obligations assumed. Any oral representations or modifications concerning this Agreement will be of no force or effect excepting a subsequent modification in writing, signed by the party to be charged.

Partial Invalidity

12. If any part of this contract is declared invalid for any reason, the remainder of the agreement shall be unaffected. The other parts of the agreement shall remain in effect as if the agreement had been executed without the invalid part. The parties declare that they intend and desire that the remaining parts of the agreement continue to be effective without any part or parts that have been declared invalid.

Governing Law

13. The validity of this Agreement and its terms or provisions, as well as the rights and duties of the parties, will be interpreted and construed pursuant to and in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Amendments and Waivers

14. Any term or provision of this Agreement may be amended and the observance of any term of this Agreement may be waived (either generally or in a particular instance and either retroactively or prospectively) only by a writing signed by the party to be bound thereby. The waiver by a party of any breach of this Agreement will not be deemed to constitute a waiver of any other default or succeeding breach or default.

Notices

15. Any notices to be given under this Agreement by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices must be addressed to the addresses of the parties as they appear in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally will be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices will be deemed communicated as of [e.g., one] day[s] after mailing.

[Optional provision when client is a business entity:]

Authority

16. Client's representatives who are signing this agreement on behalf of Client warrant that they are fully authorized by Client to engage Accountant to perform accounting services for Client, and that all necessary approvals required under Client's governing instruments in order to engage Accountant to provide these services have been obtained, and all necessary procedures followed.

CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART IV. FORMS
B. Accountants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.212

§ 86.212 Engagement Letter for Audit Services

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an engagement letter to be used by an accountant or accounting firm that will provide audit services to a person or group of persons, such as the board of directors or partnership audit committee. Although a formal contract may be used [see § 86.211[2]], most accountants prefer the informality of a letter agreement. For additional discussion of the format of the letter agreements in this chapter, see § 86.210[1][a].

This form carefully delineates the auditor's responsibility. The auditor will audit balance sheets, related statements of income and retained earnings, and financial statements to express an opinion [see Paragraph 1 of Form]. This form outlines the standard procedures used in conducting an audit, such as selective testing of accounting records and supporting documents, and explains that the auditors will not examine all transactions in detail [see Paragraphs 2, 4, 5, 6, of Form]. The client will provide the basic information used in the audit, and the client is responsible for its completeness and accuracy [see Paragraph 3 of Form].

This form emphasizes that management is responsible for the financial statements [see Paragraph 6 of Form]. If the auditor's opinion will be anything other than unqualified, the auditor will discuss its analysis with the client in advance [see Paragraph 1 of Form].

The form contains an optional paragraph stating that the auditors will request written representations from the client's attorneys, and advising the client that counsel may bill the client for counsel's response [see Paragraph 11 of Form]. This paragraph may avoid subsequent controversy if the client will be billed for responding to a legal representation letter.

The form sets forth the accountant's fees and provides for binding arbitration in the event of a fee dispute [see Paragraph 13 of Form]. For additional discussion of arbitration provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.250].

For additional discussion of some of the other provisions in this chapter, see § 86.210[1]. For a general discussion of the practice of accountancy, see §§ 86.16, 86.19. For forms specifically related to review and compilation services, see § 86.213, 86.214. For an agreement for the preparation of income or estate tax returns, see § 86.215.

[2] FORM

Engagement Letter for Audit Services

[Accountant's letterhead]
_____[date]
_____[name of client]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear [client]:

This letter is to confirm the terms of our agreement regarding our audit of the financial statements of _____[name of client] ("Client") for the taxable year ending _____. If the terms of the agreement as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided. [If agreement is for the first audit with the client, add: To perform our initial audit, we will need to review your previous auditor's work papers. You must authorize the previous auditors to release their work papers to us for the tax year(s) _____.]

1. We will audit the balance sheet of _____[name of client], as well as related statements of income, retained earnings, and cash flow for the relevant year and express our opinion of them. We will also express an opinion as to the financial statements, which are the responsibility of _____[name of client]'s management. If our opinion as to the financial statements will be anything other than unqualified, we will discuss the [basis or bases] for this conclusion in advance.

2. We will use our professional judgment when conducting the audit, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Whenever we are aware that applicable tax law may be unclear, or that there are conflicting interpretations of the law by authorities (for example, tax agencies and courts), with regard to a matter subject to audit, we will explain the possible alternatives. We will adopt whatever position you request during the audit, provided that it is consistent with the Internal Revenue Codes, regulations, case law, revenue rulings, and letter ruling interpretations. We assume no liability for any assessment of additional interest or penalties.

3. You agree to furnish all of the basic information necessary for the completion of the audit. You are responsible for the accuracy and completeness of this information. You represent that the written and oral information you provide is accurate and complete to the best of your knowledge. [Optional: Your employees will prepare all confirmations requested, including but not limited to accounts receivable and accounts payable, and provide copies of invoices on request.]

4. We will perform the audit to be reasonably assured that the financial statements are free of material misstatement. We will (1) examine the documentary evidence supporting the amounts, transactions, and disclosures in the financial statements on a test basis; (2) examine and assess the accounting principles used in the financial statements; (3) assess the estimates made by management in the financial statements; and (4) provide an overall analysis of the financial statements. We may also evaluate inventories in person, and we may directly confirm receivables, assets, or liabilities by contacting [specify, e.g., selected creditors, selected customers, financial institutions, and legal counsel].

5. An audit is based on selective testing of accounting records and supporting documentation. We will use our own judgment about the nature and scope of the testing. We will not independently verify the stated information, although we may ask for clarification on certain items. Because do not examine all transactions, the audit is inherently subject to the risk that material misstatements and irregularities will not be discovered. We do not guarantee that our audit will discover a material misstatement in the financial statement.

6. Further, we will advise about the appropriate accounting principles used in the preparation of the financial statements. Nevertheless, as stated above, the ultimate responsibility for the accuracy of the financial statements rests with your management.

7. We anticipate beginning the audit on or about _____[date], and completing the audit and issuing our report no later than _____[date]. [Optional: we will observe inventory counting on _____ (date).]

8. Fees for conducting this audit will be billed at our regular hourly rates, which range from $_____ per hour to $_____ per hour, depending on the experience of the person(s) assigned to the audit. You will also be charged for out-of-pocket expenses, such as overnight delivery, telephone charges, photocopying charges, and postage; these expenses will be itemized and billed to you. In addition, there will be a computer fee of $_____. [Optional: If this audit engagement continues beyond _____ (date), there may be a slight increase in our hourly rates; you will receive _____ days notice of any increase in our hourly rates.]

9. We require a retainer before starting work. This retainer is applied to the final billing. Any retainer in excess of the final billing will be refunded. A retainer of $_____ will be necessary to begin work on this audit engagement. A final bill will be sent to you on completion of the audit. This retainer will not accrue interest while held by this firm.

[Select one of the following alternatives:]

10. Payment is due within 30 days of the completion of our audit.

[OR]

10. We will send statements for our services on a [specify, e.g., monthly or bimonthly] basis. Payment is due within 30 days of the invoice date.

[Continue with the following:]

Bills become past due after _____. In the event that a bill becomes past due, we will [cease work on the audit until your account is made current or withdraw from the engagement].

11. We will retain the work papers related to this audit engagement for _____ years. Thereafter, it is your responsibility to retain these records in case of future examination by government or taxing authorities.

[Optional:]

12. We will seek written representations from your attorneys as part of this audit engagement. Your attorneys may bill you for the time to respond to our inquiry.

[Continue with the following:]

13. In the event of any dispute over fees, Client and Accountant mutually agree to make good faith efforts to resolve the dispute through mediation. If the dispute cannot be resolved through mediation, Client and Accountant mutually agree to submit the matter to arbitration pursuant to the rules of the American Arbitration Association ("AAA"). This arbitration will be binding and final.

IN AGREEING TO THIS ARBITRATION PROVISION, ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT SPECIFICALLY UNDERSTAND AND AGREE THAT ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT ARE FOREGOING:

- THE RIGHT TO TRIAL IN A COURT OR BY A JURY FOR ANY DISPUTE ARISING FROM OR RELATING TO THIS AGREEMENT OR TO ANY ASPECT OF THE PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP OR SERVICES RENDERED BY ACCOUNTANT TO CLIENT.

- ALL JUDICIAL RIGHTS, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO APPEAL FROM THE DECISION OF THE ARBITRATOR(S).

ACCOUNTANT _____ CLIENT _____

14. If any party to this agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire agreement.

15. If any part of this agreement should be found to be invalid, the invalidity will not affect the remainder of this agreement, which will continue in effect as if this agreement had been executed without the invalid part.

16. This agreement will be governed by California law.

17. This letter agreement states our entire agreement with you with respect to the subject matter of the agreement, and supersedes any and all other agreements, whether oral or in writing, between us with respect to the subject of this agreement. No agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this letter agreement will be valid or binding between us with respect to the subject of this agreement.

We believe that this letter accurately summarizes the terms of the engagement. If you agree that this letter correctly sets forth our agreement, please sign and date, as indicated below and return this letter to us. A copy is enclosed for your files.

We appreciate the opportunity to be of service to you. If you have any questions or would like to discuss anything in this letter, please be sure to call us.

§ 86.213 Engagement Letter for Review Services

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an engagement letter to be used by an accountant or accounting firm that will review the financial statements, balance sheets, and related documentation. Although a formal contract may be used [see § 86.211[2]], most accountants prefer the informality of a letter agreement. For additional discussion of the format of the letter agreements in this chapter, see § 86.210[1][a].

This form clarifies that a review is not an audit, which is a broader procedure designed to secure an overall opinion regarding a company's financial statements [see Paragraph 3 of Form; see also § 86.212]. This letter delineates the accountant's responsibility to conduct the review, which will consist primarily of analytical review of financial data and interviewing personnel [see Paragraphs 1, 2 of Form]. The client will provide the financial statements and other documentation, and management is responsible for ensuring that they have been prepared in accordance with generally acceptable accounting principles [see Paragraph 3 of Form].

The form sets forth the accountant's fees and provides for binding arbitration in the event of a fee dispute [see Paragraph 9 of Form]. For additional discussion of arbitration provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.250].

Dear [client]:

This letter is to confirm our understanding regarding our review of the financial statements of _____[name of client] ("Client") for the taxable year ending [specify]. If the terms of the agreement as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided.

1. We will review the balance sheet of _____[name of client], as well as related statements of income, retained earnings, and cash flow for the relevant year as of _____[date].

2. We will use our professional judgment when conducting our review, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. We will apply analytical procedures to financial information and interview personnel. A review does not involve analysis of the client's internal control structure, testing accounting records, and other audit procedures. We will not perform an audit, and will not express an overall opinion regarding the financial statements.

3. You agree to furnish all of the basic information necessary for the completion of the audit. You are responsible for the accuracy and completeness of this information. You represent that the written and oral information you provide is accurate and complete to the best of your knowledge. Your employees will provide specific information and documentation on request. These responses must be given in a timely manner so that we make complete our analysis and issue our report as stated below.

4. We anticipate beginning the review on or about _____[date], and completing the review and issuing our report no later than _____[date]. We currently expect our report to read along the following lines:

"We have reviewed the attached balance sheet of _____ [name of client], and related statements of income, retained earnings, and the like as of _____ [date] in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Based on this review, we have found no need for any material modifications to the attached financial statements in order to conform them to generally accepted accounting principles."

5. Fees for conducting this review will be billed at our regular hourly rates, which range from $_____ per hour to $_____ per hour, depending on the experience of the person(s) assigned to the audit. 28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.214

§ 86.214 Agreement for Compilation of Balance Sheets and Income Statements

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an engagement letter to be used by an accountant or accounting firm that will compile annual and interim balance sheets and other statements of income. Although a formal contract may be used [see § 86.211[2]], most accountants prefer the informality of a letter agreement. For additional discussion of the format of the letter agreements in this chapter, see § 86.210[1][a].

A compilation involves presenting management's representations in the form of financial statements. This form clarifies that a compilation engagement does not involve the audit or review of the client's financial statements [see §§ 86.212, 86.213]. This letter delineates the accountant's responsibility to compile annual and interim balance sheets and other statements of income [see Paragraph 1 of Form]. Because compilation does not involve audit or review, the accountants expressly disclaim any opinion as to the financial statements [see Paragraph 2 of Form]. Because no audit is involved, this type of engagement cannot be relied on to disclose errors, irregularities, or illegalities. The client will provide the information necessary to compile the financial statements. However, the client remains responsible for the content of these statements [see Paragraph 1 of Form].

The form sets forth the accountant's fees and provides for binding arbitration in the event of a fee dispute [see Paragraph 8 of Form]. For additional discussion of arbitration provisions, see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions, § 75.250].

For a general discussion of the practice of accountancy, see §§ 86.16, 86.19. For forms specifically related to audit and review services, see § 86.212, 86.213. For an agreement for the preparation of income or estate tax returns, see § 86.215.

_____[date]
_____[name of client]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear [client]:

This letter is to confirm our understanding regarding the scope and objectives of our compilations services for _____[name of client] ("Client") for the taxable year ending [specify]. If the terms of our agreement as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided.

1. We will compile, from the information you provide us, annual and interim balance sheets, as well as related statements of income, retained earnings, and cash flow for the relevant year as of _____[date]. You agree to furnish all of the basic information necessary for the completion of our compilation services. You are responsible for the accuracy and completeness of this information. If we are unable to complete the compilation for any reason, we will not issue a report on the financial statements.

2. We will not perform an audit or review of the financial statements. We will not express an opinion regarding the financial statements as a whole and expressly disclaim any opinion as to those financial statements. Because no audit is involved, this type of engagement cannot be relied on to disclose errors, irregularities, or illegalities.

3. We anticipate beginning compilation on or about _____[date], and completing the process and issuing our report no later than _____[date]. We currently expect our report to read along the following lines:

"We have compiled the attached balance sheet of _____ [name of client], and related statements of income, retained earnings, and the like as of _____ [date] in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. A compilation involves presenting management's representations in the form of financial statements."

4. Fees for conducting this compilation will be billed at our regular hourly rates, which range from $_____ per hour to $_____ per hour, depending on the experience of the person(s) assigned to the engagement. You will also be charged for out-of-pocket expenses, such as overnight delivery, telephone charges, photocopying charges, and postage; these expenses will be itemized and billed to you. In addition, there will be a computer fee of $_____. [Optional: If this engagement continues beyond _____ (date), there may be a slight increase in our hourly rates; you will receive _____ days' notice of any increase in our hourly rates.]

5. We require a retainer before starting work. This retainer is applied to the final billing. Any retainer in excess of the final billing will be refunded. A retainer of $_____ will be necessary to begin work on this engagement. A final bill will be sent to you on completion of the review. This retainer will not accrue interest while held by this firm.

6. Payment is due within 30 days of the completion of our review and issuance of our report.

[OR]

6. We will send statements for our services on a [specify, e.g., monthly or bimonthly] basis. Payment is due within 30 days of the invoice date.

[Continue with the following:]

Bills become past due after _____. In the event that a bill becomes past due, we will [cease work on the review until your account is made current or withdraw from the engagement].

7. We will retain the work papers related to this engagement for _____ years. Thereafter, it is your responsibility to retain these records in case of future examination by government or taxing authorities.

8. In the event of any dispute over fees, Client and Accountant mutually agree to make good faith efforts to resolve the dispute through mediation. If the dispute cannot be resolved through mediation, Client and Accountant mutually agree to submit the matter to arbitration pursuant to the rules of the American Arbitration Association ("AAA"). This arbitration will be binding and final.

IN AGREEING TO THIS ARBITRATION PROVISION, ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT SPECIFICALLY UNDERSTAND AND AGREE THAT ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT ARE FOREGOING:

- THE RIGHT TO TRIAL IN A COURT OR BY A JURY FOR ANY DISPUTE ARISING FROM OR RELATING TO THIS AGREEMENT OR TO ANY ASPECT OF THE PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP OR SERVICES RENDERED BY ACCOUNTANT TO CLIENT.

- ALL JUDICIAL RIGHTS, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO APPEAL FROM THE DECISION OF THE ARBITRATOR(S).

9. If any party to this agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire agreement.

10. If any part of this agreement should be found to be invalid, the invalidity will not affect the remainder of this agreement, which will continue in effect as if this agreement had been executed without the invalid part.

11. This agreement will be governed by California law.

12. This letter agreement states our entire agreement with you with respect to the subject matter of the agreement, and supersedes any and all other agreements, whether oral or in writing, between us with respect to the subject of this agreement. No agreement, statement, or promise not contained in this letter agreement will be valid or binding between us with respect to the subject of this agreement.

We believe that this letter accurately summarizes the terms of the engagement. If you agree that this letter correctly sets forth our agreement, please sign and date, as indicated below and return this letter to us. A copy is enclosed for your files.

We appreciate the opportunity to be of service to you. If you have any questions or would like to discuss anything in this letter, please be sure to call us.

§ 86.215 Engagement Letter for Preparation of Income or Estate Tax Returns

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an engagement letter to be used by an accountant for the preparation of income or estate tax returns. Although a formal contract may be used [see § 86.211[2], most accountants prefer an informal letter agreement, particularly for the preparation of income tax returns. For the sake of completeness and illustration, this form includes a number of standard contract provisions. Some accountants use even simpler engagement letters that omit most of those provisions. For additional discussion of the format of the letter agreements in this chapter, see § 86.210[1][a]].

This form sets forth the accountant's obligations and highlights the client's responsibilities to ensure the timely and accurate preparation of returns.

For a general discussion of the practice of accountancy, see §§ 86.16, 86.19. For forms specifically related to audit, review, and compilation services, see § 86.212-86.214.

[2] FORM

Engagement Letter for Preparation of Income or Estate Tax Returns

[Accountant's letterhead]
_____[date]
_____[name of client]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear [client]:

This letter is to confirm our understanding regarding our preparation of _____[your federal and state income tax returns or the estate tax return for the estate of _____ (name)]. If the terms of the agreement as set forth in this letter are agreeable to you, please sign and date this agreement at the end in the space provided.

[For preparation of income tax returns, use:]

1. We will prepare your [year] federal [individual and/or partnership and/or corporate] income tax return[s] and [individual and/or partnership and/or corporate] state income tax return[s] for the state[s] of [specify state or states, e.g., California or California and Delaware].

[Or, for preparation of estate tax returns, use:]

1. We will prepare the federal estate tax return, the decedent's final income tax return, and the fiduciary income tax returns and compiled summary of accounts and recapitulation of cash with supporting exhibits of cash receipts, cash disbursements, distributions, gain or loss on sales, and property on hand, for submission to the probated court. In preparing the estate tax returns, we will not independently determine values, except when values can be determined by reference to market quotations contained in the Wall Street Journal or similar source [optional: or by reference to the Kelly Blue Book]. All other valuations will be performed by outside parties.

[Continue with the following:]

2. You agree to furnish all of the information that is necessary for the preparation of these returns, and you represent that the written and oral information you supply me is accurate and complete to the best of your knowledge. By your signature below you agree that you have the necessary records, receipts, or other evidence to substantiate the items of income and deductions shown on your returns. We will not independently verify your information, although we may ask for clarification on certain items.

3. Tax returns are subject to audits and to adjustments by the taxing authorities, which may result in additional assessments of tax, interest, and penalties. You should retain the tax records related to your tax returns for at least three years after the date you file, since additional assessments will generally be made during that period. Generally, an assessment by the taxing authorities is presumed correct and must be rebutted by the taxpayer. You understand that we do not assume responsibility for such assessments and, if you would like us to assist you in connection with the audit of your return, there will be an additional fee for our services.

4. We will use our professional judgment in preparing your returns. Whenever we are aware that applicable tax law may be unclear or that there are conflicting interpretations of the law by authorities (for example, tax agencies and courts) we will explain the possible positions that may be taken on your return. We will adopt whatever position you request on your return so long as it is consistent with the Internal Revenue Codes, regulations, case law, revenue rulings, and letter ruling interpretations. If the Internal Revenue Service contests this position, it may assess additional tax, plus interest and penalties. We assume no liability for any such additional penalties or assessments.

5. You may choose to have us file your tax return electronically with the Internal Revenue Service. According to the Internal Revenue Service, taxpayers receive their refunds three to four weeks before those who file paper returns. You must review and sign the Internal Revenue Form before the electronic return can be submitted. Our fee for filing your return electronically is $_____. This fee is in addition our other fees, costs, and expenses.

6. Fees for the preparation of your tax returns will be $_____ per hour. In addition, there will be a computer fee of $_____. [If accountant will use an outside computer service, add: We will use a computer processing service located outside our office.] Payment is due on the completion of your returns. Fees may also include out-of-pocket expenses, such as overnight delivery. These fees will be itemized and billed to you.

7. We require a retainer before starting work. This retainer is applied to the final billing. Any retainer in excess of the final billing will be refunded. A retainer of $_____ will be necessary to begin work on this engagement. A final bill will be sent to you on completion of your tax returns.

8. We must receive your information by _____[date] in order to have your returns completed by _____[due date of tax returns]. If your information is not complete at that time, we may not be able to complete your returns before the filing date. Ultimately, you may be subject to filing penalties because of this delay.

9. If any party to this agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire agreement.

10. In the event of any dispute over fees, Client and Accountant mutually agree to make good faith efforts to resolve the dispute through mediation. If the dispute cannot be resolved through mediation, Client and Accountant mutually agree to submit the matter to arbitration pursuant to the rules of the American Arbitration Association ("AAA"). This arbitration will be binding and final.

IN AGREEING TO THIS ARBITRATION PROVISION, ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT SPECIFICALLY UNDERSTAND AND AGREE THAT ACCOUNTANT AND CLIENT ARE FOREGOING:

- THE RIGHT TO TRIAL IN A COURT OR BY A JURY FOR ANY DISPUTE ARISING FROM OR RELATING TO THIS AGREEMENT OR TO ANY ASPECT OF THE PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP OR SERVICES RENDERED BY ACCOUNTANT TO CLIENT.

- ALL JUDICIAL RIGHTS, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO APPEAL FROM THE DECISION OF THE ARBITRATOR(S).

11. If any part of this agreement should be found to be invalid, the invalidity will not affect the remainder of this agreement, which will continue in effect as if this agreement had been executed without the invalid part.

PART IV. FORMS
C. Financial Consultants

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.220

§ 86.220 Financial Consultant Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between a financial consultant ("prorater") and a client under which the prorater agrees to act as an intermediary between the client and the client's creditors in arranging a plan for the orderly payment of the client's debts. A "prorater" is one who is in the business of receiving cash from a debtor-client for the purpose of distributing it among the client's creditors in payment of the client's obligations [Fin. Code § 12002.1; see Nationwide Asset Servs., Inc. v. DuFauchard (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 (constructive receipt of debtor's funds is sufficient to bring person within statutory definition)]. Proraters must be licensed by the Commissioner of Corporations [see Fin. Code § 12200 et seq.] and are subject to regulation by the Commissioner [see Fin. Code § 12300 et seq.]. For further discussion, see § 86.14.

Typically, this type of agreement provides that the client will deliver a specified amount of money (usually the client's paycheck) to the prorater. The prorater will then devise a financial plan designed to help the client out of debt and a budget designed to help the client live on the net income after distributions to the creditors and payment of the prorater's fee.

A prorater may also provide money management advice to the client on a continuing basis. This form does not provide for this type of advice, but may be adapted accordingly.

The agreement must be executed by the prorater and the debtor, and an executed copy must be given immediately to the debtor. The agreement does not become effective until the debtor-client makes a payment to the prorater for distribution to the client's creditors [Fin. Code § 12320].

[b] Statutory Requirements for Agreement

A contract between a prorater and a debtor must contain the following information [Fin. Code § 12319]:

- A list of every debt to be prorated with the creditor's name and the total of all debts [see also Fin. Code § 12315.1].

- A provision for specific payments reasonably within the ability of the debtor to pay.

- The rate and amount of the prorater's charge in precise terms.

- The approximate number and amount of installments required to pay the debts in full.

- The name and address of both parties.

- Any other provisions or disclosures required by the Commissioner of Corporations for the protection of the debtor and the proper conduct of business by the prorater. The Commissioner requires that all contracts between a prorater and a debtor customer contain a notice referring the debtor to the Department of Corporations for further information [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1799]. This notice apparently is intended as a form of consumer protection.

[c] Disbursements

At least once each month, a prorater must make disbursements to the client's creditors. These disbursements may not aggregate less than 70 percent of all funds received from the client [Fin. Code § 12314].

[d] Maximum Disbursement Charges

The total charges that a prorater can receive for its services may not exceed the following percentages except for payments made on recurring obligations [Fin. Code § 12314]:

- 12 percent of the first $3,000 disbursed.

- 11 percent of the next $2,000.

- 10 percent of the remaining disbursements, except for payments made on recurring obligations.

"Recurring obligations" are rent, utility, telephone, spousal support, monthly insurance premium, and obligations secured by a first mortgage or first deed of trust on real property [Fin. Code § 12314].

The maximum fee applicable to disbursements consisting of rent or mortgage payments is $4 per disbursement [Fin. Code § 12314(b)]. A maximum of $1 may be charged on any other recurring disbursement [Fin. Code § 12314(c)].

[e] Origination Fee

An origination fee of not more than $50 may be charged if the prorater has given proper notice to the creditors [see Fin. Code § 12315.1; see also [f], below] and if the prorater has delivered an executed copy of this agreement to the debtor [see Fin. Code § 12320; see also [a], above], even if the prorater has not obtained the consent of the creditors [see Fin. Code § 12314(a); see also Fin. Code § 12315]. However, if the debtor does not cancel or default on the performance of his or her agreement with the prorater within 12 months after execution of the agreement, the origination fee must be refunded [Fin. Code § 12314].

[f] Notice to and Consent of Creditors

A prorater must give all creditors written notice of the client's desire to engage its service. This notice must be given within five days of the date on which the agreement becomes effective and must include notice of the proposed monthly disbursement [Fin. Code § 12315.1]. A sample notice is set forth in § 86.221[2].

A prorater may not accept a fee (other than an origination fee [see Fin. Code § 12314(a)]) unless the prorater has obtained the consent of at least 51 percent of the number of creditors listed in the agreement and of creditors representing at least 51 percent of the total amount of debt or unless that number of creditors have accepted a distribution of payment [Fin. Code § 12315].

[g] Prohibited Transactions

A prorater may not purchase any of its client's obligations from the client's creditors [Fin. Code § 12317]. Proraters may not accept blank instruments executed by their clients, negotiable instruments in payment for their charges, any note, wage assignment, or other security for their charges, any confession of judgment or power of attorney to confess judgment against their clients, or any power of attorney to appear for their clients in judicial proceedings [Fin. Code § 12318(a)-(d)]. Proraters are also prohibited from obtaining a release of any obligation to be performed by them [Fin. Code § 12318(e)].

If a prorater charges or receives fees in excess of the amounts permitted by law, except as a result of an accidental and good faith error, the agreement will be void and the prorater will be required to return to the client all amounts received [Fin. Code § 12316]. No cancellation fee or termination penalty may be charged by a prorater [Fin. Code § 12314.1].

Financial Consultant Agreement

FINANCIAL CONSULTANT AGREEMENT

Consultant's Services

1. _____[Name of client], _____[address] ("Client"), hereby engages the services of _____[name of financial consultant], _____[address] ("Counselors"), to attempt to arrange a plan of payment of all obligations submitted and to act as Trustee with respect to the payment of those obligations. Client has prepared a complete list of those obligations, attached as Exhibit A, which is incorporated by reference in this Agreement.

Agreement to Limit Further Indebtedness

2. Client agrees not to incur any further indebtedness without the written consent of Counselors while this plan is in effect, except for necessaries of life in the event of an emergency. Client authorizes Counselors to notify any and all credit reporting or credit extending agencies of this Agreement.

Payment Schedule

3. Client agrees to make approximately _____ payments of $_____ per month, on or before [specify, e.g., the fifth of every month]. These payments begin on _____[date]. These payments will be applied to the obligations listed in Exhibit A and will continue until all accounts listed in Exhibit A are paid in full.

Limited Power of Attorney

4. Client grants to Counselors a power of attorney with full authority to endorse and cash any and all checks made payable to Client and to be credited to Client's account. Client may revoke this power of attorney only on 30 days written notice to Counselors.

Basis for Payment Plan

5. Counselors agree to attempt to arrange a plan of payment of the obligations listed based on a reasonable and agreeable amount of money available from Client after analyzing Client's net income and living expenses as of the date of this agreement.

Distribution Agreement

6. Counselors agree to distribute the money that Client pays into their office to the creditors listed in Exhibit A, or creditors who may subsequently added, in the proportions that the Counselors deem proper, subject to Counselors' fees.

Fees and Charges

7. In consideration for the services to be provided by Counselors, Client agrees to pay Counselors a fee of [e.g., 12 percent of the first $3,000, 11 percent of the next $2,000, and 10 percent in excess of $5,000] of any moneys paid on the submitted obligations. Client further agrees to pay a fee of $_____ per disbursement of [current rent or first mortgage or first trust deed] payments and a fee of $_____ per disbursement to pay [other recurring obligations or specify, e.g., current utility bills, current telephone bills, current spousal support payments, and current monthly insurance payments)].

Expenses Incurred

8. Client agrees to repay any expense incurred by Counselors at Client's request that does not arise out of the ordinary negotiations with creditors in originally arranging this payment plan.

Accounting

9. Counselors agree to render to Client, at least once every six months, an accounting itemizing the total amount received, the total amount paid to each creditor, the total amount that any creditor has agreed to accept as payment in full on any debt owed, the amount of charges deducted, and any amount held in reserve. Counselors further agree to render that accounting within seven days after written demand.

Liability and Enforcement

10. Client agrees that Counselors will not be responsible or liable for any action on the part of Client's creditors. If Client breaches this agreement for any reason, Counselors may at their option be free to notify all creditors of Counselors' nonliability and will be relieved of any further obligation.

Attorneys' Fees

11. If any [legal action or specify more limited provision, e.g., legal action based in contract law] is necessary to enforce or interpret the terms of this agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and necessary disbursements in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled.

D. Insurance Analysts

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.230

§ 86.230 Life and Disability Insurance Analysis Agreement

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between a life and disability insurance analyst [see § 86.15] and a client providing that the insurance analyst will review the client's insurance needs and make recommendations as to the insurance policies and insurers most suitable to the client's situation, and as to any possible reductions in insurance premiums that might be available. A "life and disability insurance analyst" is a person who advises any insured under life and disability insurance policy, or anyone having any interest in such a policy, for compensation that is paid by or derived from any person or source other than an insurer [Ins. Code § 32.5]. Life and disability insurance analysts are required to be licensed by the Department of Insurance, and unauthorized persons who act as life and disability insurance analysts are guilty of a misdemeanor [Ins. Code § 1844; see Ins Code §§ 1831-1849 (licensing statutes); but see Ins. Code § 1831 (attorneys, licensed actuaries, bank and trust company employees, and employees procuring insurance on behalf of their employers are not required to be licensed)].

This agreement provides that the analyst will be compensated on a per diem basis [see Paragraph 2 of form]. The rate of compensation depends on the knowledge and experience of the person making the analysis. To protect the client, and to ensure the analyst that the insurance matters involved are of a substantial nature, the form establishes a minimum and maximum fee.

For an informal letter agreement for continuous insurance analysis services for other types of insurance, see § 86.231.

[b] Required Contents

A fee agreement with a life and disability insurance analyst must include the following information [Ins. Code § 1848]:

- A statement that information and services concerning insurance policies may be obtained directly from the insurer without cost.

- A statement outlining the services to be performed for which a fee is to be charged.
- The fee to be charged.

If the analyst is also licensed as an insurance agent under Ins. Code § 1621 et seq., the agreement must include a statement indicating that the analyst is so licensed and, as such, receives commissions for the sale of products [Ins. Code § 1848; see Ins. Code § 1621 ("insurance agent" is a person who transacts insurance, including 24-hour care coverage (see Ins. Code § 1749.02), other than life, disability, or health insurance, on behalf of an admitted insurance company)]. Life and disability insurance analysts are not required to be licensed as insurance agents unless they act in that capacity [see Ins. Code § 1634(d)].

[c] Recordkeeping

The analyst must retain a copy of the agreement for a minimum of three years after the services have been fully performed [Ins. Code § 1848].

Life and Disability Insurance Analysis Agreement

LIFE AND DISABILITY INSURANCE ANALYSIS AGREEMENT

This AGREEMENT is between _____[name of client], _____[address] ("Client"), and _____[name of insurance analysts], _____[address] ("Analysts").

1. Analysts agree to perform a thorough fact-finding analysis of Client's entire insurance situation with regard to Client's life and disability insurance requirements. Analysts will audit all insurance policies covering Client's direct interest. Analysts will furnish information and make recommendations, with particular attention to the terms and conditions of insurance contracts and the reduction of insurance premiums to a minimum consistent with Client's best interests. Analysts will serve as insurance analysts and advisers to Client for a period of [estimated number of months required to complete analysis] months from the inception date of this Agreement.

2. Client agrees to pay Analysts the following compensation for rendering services rendered under this Agreement:

(a) $_____ per diem for the services of a Senior Analyst, subject to a minimum fee of $_____ and a maximum fee of $_____.

(b) $_____ per diem for the services of a Junior Analyst, subject to a minimum fee of $_____ and a maximum fee of $_____.

(c) Total fees under this Agreement, exclusive of reimbursements for out-of-pocket expenses, will not exceed $_____.

3. In addition to the fees specified in Paragraph 2, above, Client agrees to reimburse Analysts for Analysts' costs and expenses in connection with Analysts' performance of the analysis specified in Paragraph 1, above. These costs and expenses may include, but are not limited to, such things as [secretarial and similar charges,] telephone calls, reasonable and necessary travel expenses, photocopying and related expenses, shipping and mailing charges, document filing fees, notary fees, and similar expenses.

§ 86.231 Letter Agreement for Continuous Insurance Analysis Service

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a letter agreement in which an insurance analyst confirms an oral agreement to provide continuous insurance analysis service. This type of arrangement is usually used by businesses to assure that their varying insurance needs are met on an ongoing basis. The letter agreement is informal, because the services to be provided have been determined in previous discussions. The form serves as a confirmation of the fee to be charged and the period of time that the agreement will remain in force. The client signifies acceptance of the agreement by signing a copy of the letter and returning it to the analyst.

This type of agreement is often used when the scope of the client's insurance needs require continuous review and consultation with an independent analyst. This form provides for a fixed fee per month on a retainer basis. The services provided under the agreement specifically excludes analysis of life and disability insurance.

For further discussion, see §§ 86.15, 86.230[1].

§ 86.240 Letter Agreement for Appraisal Services--Personal Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an appraiser and a client for appraisal of the client's personal property. By the use of a letter proposal, the appraiser can communicate to the prospective client the nature of the services that will be rendered and the anticipated cost of those services. The letter format of this agreement has the advantage of informality and brevity and can be readily adapted to fit the needs of a particular client.

Appraisals of personal property typically are required in connection with matters such as insurance claims, decedents' estates, sales of businesses, private sales of personal property, litigation involving personal property, and tax-related matters in which the value of property is important.

For a letter agreement for an appraisal of real property, see § 86.241.

[b] Qualifications of Appraiser

Because an appraisal is essentially nothing more than an expression of the appraiser's professional opinion of the value of the appraised property, it is important to select an appraiser with the necessary qualifications to determine the value of the type of property at issue. This is especially important if it is anticipated that the appraiser's opinion will have to "stand up" in court. The appraiser's expertise in valuing the specific type of property being appraised may be critical in this situation, and a recitation of the appraiser's professional qualifications and experience is likely to be essential, especially if the opposing party has engaged another appraiser to present an opposing point of view. In addition to the appraiser's qualifications as an expert, an evaluation of the appraiser's ability to testify as an expert witness may be crucial in such a situation. Similarly, insurance companies may be reluctant to accept an appraisal for insurance purposes if the appraiser's qualifications and experience cannot be firmly established.

Appraisers for most types of property other than real estate [see § 86.241] are not subject to any governmental licensing requirements. For appraisers of property other than real estate, professional societies exist that can supply information on the qualifications of individual members.

After a prospective client has made an initial contact with an appraiser or appraisal firm, it is ordinarily necessary for an appraiser to inspect the property or business that will be the subject of the appraisal to determine the complexity of the problem involved.

[c] Appraisal Report

An appraiser ordinarily presents his or her conclusions in an appraisal report. The length of the report and its complexity vary with the nature of the property being appraised. If it is necessary that the report include any specific matter, that requirement should be stated in the appraisal agreement.

The appraisal report should contain the facts relied on by the appraiser in reaching his or her conclusions, as well as any relevant supporting documents, photographs, maps, charts, or other data.

Dear _____ [name of client] :

As you requested, we are submitting our proposal for an appraisal of [specify, e.g, your antique silver service], currently located at _____.

We understand the purpose of this appraisal to be _____[e.g., to determine the _____ (fair market value or replacement value)], and we understand that you intend to use our appraisal in connection with _____[specify, e.g, insuring the property or your estate planning objectives]. In the preparation of this appraisal we will base our estimate of value on _____[specify, e.g, our expertise in this area and recent sales and auctions of comparable property].

Our fee for our appraisal services will be [specify; e.g., for a flat rate fee $_____ or, for an hourly rate fee, charged at our standard hourly rate of $_____ per hour or, for fee based on value of item appraised, _____ (e.g., 1) percent of the first $_____ (e.g., $10,000) of appraised value and _____ (e.g., 1/2) percent of any appraised value in excess of the first $_____ (e.g., $10,000)]. [Optional: A retainer fee of $_____ is due and payable on receipt of your authorization to proceed with the appraisal, and the balance of the fee will be due on delivery of the completed appraisal report to you].

Our fee includes preparation of a written appraisal report that we will submit to you. The fee specified above does not include a charge for court appearances to give testimony, if such testimony should be required. The fee for such testimony will be $_____ per day or $_____ per half day, plus travel and incidental expenses. For the purpose of computing the fee for court appearances, time amounting to one-half day or less will be treated as one-half day, and time in excess of one-half day will be treated as a full day. We require at least [specify, e.g, three days advance] notice of the cancellation of a scheduled court appearance. In lieu of this notice, we will charge an appearance fee of one-half day.

We may incur incidental costs and expenses in connection with the appraisal, including, but not limited to, such things as [secretarial and similar charges,] telephone calls, [reasonable and necessary travel expenses,] photocopying and related expenses, shipping and mailing charges, charges for obtaining documentation relevant to the appraisal, notary fees, and similar expenses. These costs will be billed to you in addition to our regular appraisal fee specified above.

We will keep this proposal open for a period of [specify, e.g, 30 days] for your acceptance. We anticipate that the preparation of the appraisal report will take approximately [e.g., 5 days] after the receipt of your authorization. Due to the need to schedule appraisal assignments in advance, this estimate is subject to revision on changes in our work load. By replying promptly, you will be assured that your project will receive our earliest attention.

[Optional: We will pick up the property for appraisal on _____ (date) or Please mail the property to us at the address below, carefully packed and fully insured for your protection.] Once the property is in our possession, it is insured under our policy for replacement value against theft, loss, or damage.

We thank you for your interest in our services and for giving us this opportunity to be of service to you. If this proposal meets with your approval, please so indicate by signing in the space provided below and return a signed copy of this letter to us [optional: with the required retainer fee].

§ 86.241 Letter Agreement for Appraisal Services--Real Property

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an appraiser and a client for appraisal of the client's real property. Real property appraisals typically are required in connection with the proposed purchase, sale, or refinancing of real property, or in matters involving a decedent's estate.

For discussion of matters pertaining to appraisers in general, see § 86.240.

[b] Licensing of Real Estate Appraisers

Unlike most other types of appraisers, real estate appraisers are required to be licensed by the State of California before performing real estate appraisals [Bus & Prof. Code §§ 11320 (federally regulated real estate appraisal activity), 11321 (California activity)]. Real estate appraisers are licensed and regulated under the Real Estate Appraisers Licensing and Certification Law [Bus & Prof. Code § 11300 et seq.] by the California Office of Real Estate Appraisers (OREA) [Bus & Prof. Code § 1130]. An appraiser must be licensed under that law in order to use that title or sign a real estate appraisal [Bus & Prof. Code § 11321(a), (b)].

Licensed real estate appraisers are prohibited from engaging in any appraisal activity in connection with the purchase, sale, transfer, financing, or development of real property if the appraiser's compensation is dependent on or affected by the value conclusion he or she generated [Bus & Prof. Code § 11323].

§ 86.242 Letter Agreement for Appraisal Services--Prepared by Attorney of Appraisal Client

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a letter agreement prepared by an attorney engaging an appraiser to appraise property owned by a client. The attorney assumes the tasks of selecting the appraiser and establishing the duties to be performed and the compensation to be paid. This situation may arise when the appraisal is needed in the context of legal matters being handled by the attorney, such as estate or tax planning or the sale or acquisition of a business.

For a general discussion of appraisal services, see § 86.240[1].

[2] FORM

Letter Agreement for Appraisal Services-Prepared by Attorney of Appraisal Client

[Attorney's letterhead]
_____[date]
_____[name of appraiser]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ [name of appraiser] :

As you know, I have been retained by _____[name of client] to represent [him or her or it] in connection with _____[specify, e.g., the liquidation of _____ (his or her or its) business located at _____] and have been authorized to engage the services of an appraiser on behalf of my client to prepare an appraisal in connection with that [e.g., liquidation]. This letter will confirm our agreement concerning the preparation of an appraisal of _____[e.g., the liquidation value of the tangible assets owned by _____ and located at _____], consisting of [e.g., office equipment, tools, furniture, inventory, and supplies].

You are to prepare an appraisal report that contains a summary of your conclusions, supported by any charts, diagrams, maps, photographs, documents, and data used in arriving at your result. In addition to an overall value figure, your report is to contain a separate listing and valuation for the following items: [e.g., machinery and equipment, inventory, and office equipment and supplies].

You will receive a fee for your services, calculated at your regular rate for appraisal services, subject to a maximum of $_____, plus any out-of-pocket expenses incurred in regard to this appraisal. This fee is to be billed directly to _____[name of client] and is to be paid by [him or her or it]. You will receive a retainer fee of $_____ on the commencement of the appraisal and the balance on delivery of a final appraisal report to me that meets with my approval.

Should we need you to appear and testify in court as an expert witness, you will receive $_____ per day for these services.

It is expressly understood that _____[name of client] is to be solely responsible for the payment of your fee and that you are to collect directly from [him or her or it]. You further understand that your compensation under this agreement is in no way contingent on the amount at which you value the assets appraised under this agreement and that asset value is not a consideration in setting your fee.

You agree that neither you nor any of your employees will divulge the contents of the appraisal report to any person or firm without first obtaining my written consent. Further, neither you nor any of your employees will divulge any confidential information obtained about the business of _____[name of client], or about any of the assets owned by [him or her or it], to anyone without the prior written consent of _____[name of client].

If these terms are acceptable to you, please indicate your acceptance by signing the copy enclosed, and return it to me no later than _____[date].

Sincerely,
_____ [signature of attorney]

CHAPTER 86 AGREEMENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
PART IV. FORMS
E. Appraisal and Auction Services

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.243

§ 86.243 Agreement for Auctioneer Services--Contract Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contract between a professional auctioneer and a property owner for the sale of personal property at auction. This is a relatively simple contract that contains the basic terms and conditions of the auctioneer's engagement and meets the minimum statutory requirements [see [b], below].

Major auction houses usually have their own standardized agreements for use when property is consigned for auction. In general, the terms of these standardized agreements, while similar in basic scope to this agreement, are considerably more detailed and complex than this form, and are highly favorable towards the auction house. The terms of these agreements may or may not be negotiable, depending on the nature of the terms in question, the value of the property involved, and the general policy of the auction house. For particularly valuable or unique items, it may be desirable or possible to use a custom-drafted agreement. Circumstances may also arise in which a party may engage an auctioneer to run a particular sale that is not part of a regularly scheduled auction, as in the case of an auction sale involving the liquidation of the assets of a business on its premises.

Civ. Code §§ 1812.600-1812.609 impose various obligations on auctioneers and auction houses relating to advertising and representations of property being auctioned, conduct of the auction, the auctioneer's liability for misrepresentation, and so on. Waiver of these provisions is contrary to public policy and void, and many of these provisions carry fines and other penalties as well [Civ. Code § 1812.609]. Other relevant statutes include Com. Code § 2328 and Civ. Code §§ 2262 and 2263, discussed elsewhere in this comment.

For further discussion of auctions and auctioneers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice(Matthew Bender), Ch. 77, Auctions and Auctioneers .

[b] Written Contract Required; Mandatory Terms

No one may sell goods at auction in California before the auctioneer or auction company involved has entered into a written contract with the owner or consignor of the goods. This contract must set forth the terms and conditions upon which the auctioneer or auction company accepts the goods for sale, and must include all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)]:

- The auctioneer's or auction company's name, trade or business name, business address, and business telephone number.

- An inventory of the item or items to be sold at auction [see Paragraph 1 and Schedule A of form].

- A description of the services to be provided [see Paragraphs 2, 4 of form] and the agreed consideration for the services [see Paragraph 5 of form]. The description must explicitly state which party is responsible for advertising and other expenses [see Paragraph 5(b) of form].

- The approximate date or dates when the item or items will be sold at auction [see Paragraph 3 of form].

- A statement as to which party will be responsible for insuring the item or items against loss by theft, fire, or other means [see Paragraph 6 of form].

- A disclosure that the auctioneer or auction company has a bond on file with the Secretary of State [see Paragraph 16 of form].

Failure to comply with the preceding requirement is an infraction punishable by a fine [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)], as is the failure of an auctioneer or auction house to abide by the terms of the written contract [Civ. Code § 1812.608(g)].

All amendments or addenda to any written contract with an owner or consignor or an auctioneer must also be reduced to writing. Failure to do so is also an infraction punishable by a fine [Civ. Code § 1812.608(f)].

Any provision waiving any of the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.600 et seq., which are discussed throughout this form comment, is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1812.609].

[c] Selection of Auctioneer

At one time, auctioneers were required to be licensed in California [see former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5700 et seq. (repealed 1993)]. Those provisions were repealed in 1993, and an auctioneer's license is no longer required. Auctioneers are required, however, to post a surety bond with the Secretary of State for the protection of anyone damaged by any fraud, dishonesty, misstatement, misrepresentation, deceit, unlawful acts or omissions, or failure to provide services [Civ. Code § 1812.600(a), (b)]. An auctioneer or auction company cannot legally conduct any business without having such a bond in force [Civ. Code § 1812.600(c)(1)], and must disclose the bond number, as well as his or her name, trade or business name, and telephone number, in all advertising that specifies an auction date [Civ. Code § 1812.607(a)]. Anyone selling property at auction must also have a valid and unrevoked seller's permit from the State Board of Equalization [Civ. Code § 1812.608(k)].

In order for an auction sale to be an effective marketing device, it is necessary that a sufficient number of interested bidders be attracted. An auctioneer should be selected who holds regular sales of the type of merchandise involved, or who will be able to advertise the sale sufficiently to bring the sale to the attention of the greatest number of potential buyers.

Prior to entering into a contract with an auctioneer, the prospective consignor should inquire regarding the usual terms and conditions under which the auctioneer conducts sales. Special consideration should be given to the following areas:

- The auctioneer's usual commission rates for both sellers and buyers.

- Whether or not the auctioneer assesses any charges for unsold lots, including storage and shipment charges.

- Whether or not the auctioneer charges back catalog expenses or other advertising expenses to the customer.

The last two categories of charges above can generate hidden expenses that will reduce the profitability of the auction, and generate a loss for the consignor if the item is not sold. Auctioneers' policies vary in this regard; these terms may be negotiable in some cases, but in others may be a matter of the auctioneer's strict policy and not a subject for negotiation.

[d] Duties of Auctioneer

In conducting the business of auctioneering, each auctioneer and auction company, and the company's owners, partners, officers, agents, and employees, are required by law to do all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.605]:

- Follow all lawful requests of the owner or consignor of the goods being sold at auction with regard to the sale of those goods.

- Perform his or her duties so that the highest or most favorable offer made by a member of his or her audience is accepted, except to the extent that any item or sale is offered with reserve or subject to confirmation.

- Truthfully represent the goods to be auctioned [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(i) (penalties and refund requirements for knowingly misrepresenting nature of any item or items to be sold at auction, including age, authenticity, value, condition, or origin)].

- Otherwise perform his or her duties in accordance with California law.

[e] Conditions of Sale

Auctioneers are required to post or distribute to the audience the audience the terms, conditions, restrictions, and procedures whereby goods will be sold at the auction, and announce any changes to those terms, conditions, restrictions, and procedures prior to the beginning of the auction sale. Failure to do so is an infraction subject to a fine [Civ. Code § 1812.607(c)]. Misrepresenting the terms, conditions, restrictions, or procedures under which goods will be sold at auction is also an infraction [Civ. Code § 1812.608(j)].

The existence and amount of any liens or other encumbrances on any items offered for sale must be disclosed immediately prior to the sale [Civ. Code § 1812.607(k)].

[f] Authority of Auctioneer

In the absence of special authorization or usage to the contrary, an auctioneer has authority from the seller to do all of the following [Civ. Code § 2362]:

- Sell by public auction to the highest bidder.

- Sell for cash only, except such articles as are usually sold on credit at auction.

- Warrant the title of the seller and the quality and quantity of the personal property sold [see Civ. Code § 2323].

- Prescribe reasonable rules and terms of sale.

- Deliver the thing sold, on payment of the price.

- Collect the price.

- Do whatever else is necessary, or proper and usual, in the ordinary course of business, for effecting these purposes.

Further, the auctioneer has the authority from both the seller and an auction bidder to act as agent and bind them by a memorandum of the sale contract that is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds [Civ. Code § 2363].

This form provides that the auctioneer has sole and complete authority over the conduct of the sale and that the auctioneer's decisions are final [see Paragraph 4 of form]. Auction agreements virtually always contain a similar provision, or a more complex variant detailing the auctioneer's specific authority.

This form also assumes that the auctioneer has a standard statement of the terms and condition of sale [see [e], above], and incorporates those provisions by reference, rather than restating them in full [see Paragraph 4 of form]. Virtually all established auctioneers have such a standard set of terms and conditions, and require that buyers agree to adhere to those conditions before being permitted to bid in the sale [see Paragraph 4 of form].

[g] Auctions With Reserve and Without Reserve

An auction sale may be either with reserve or without reserve. In an auction with reserve the auctioneer may withdraw the goods at any time before the auctioneer announces completion of the sale [see Com. Code § 2328(3)]. If the auction is without reserve, however, an article or lot cannot be withdrawn after the auctioneer calls for bids on that article or lot unless no bid is made within a reasonable time [Com. Code § 2328(3)]. Unless an auction sale is expressly agreed to be without reserve, it will be with reserve and the goods offered for sale may be withdrawn at any time before the completion of the sale [Com. Code § 2328(3)].

[h] Retraction of Bid by Bidder

Whether an auction is with or without reserve, a bidder may retract the bid at any time before the auctioneer's announcement of the completion of the sale. The retraction, however, does not revive any previous bids [Com. Code § 2328(3)].

[i] Receiving Bids on Behalf of Seller

If the auctioneer at any auction other than a forced sale knowingly receives a bid on the seller's behalf, or the seller makes or procures such a bid, and notice has not been given that liberty for bidding by the seller is reserved, the buyer may at his or her option void the sale, or take the goods at the price of the last good faith bid before the completion of the sale [Com. Code § 2328(4)]. Further, an auctioneer is prohibited from allowing the owner or consignor, or any of their agents, to bid on the item, without disclosing to the audience that the other, consignor, or agent has reserved the right to bid [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.608(h)(2)]. Because of these rules, auction houses commonly state in their conditions of sale that such bids are expressly permitted.

With the preceding exception, an auctioneer may not cause or allow any person to bid at a sale for the sole purpose of increasing the bid on any item or items being sold by the auctioneer ("shill bidding") [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.608(h)]. Stating any increased bid greater than that offered by the last highest bidder when, in fact, no person has made such a bid, is similarly prohibited [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.608(h)(1)]. Violation is an infraction subject to a fine [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.608(h)].

[j] Completion of Sale

In a sale by auction in which goods are offered in lots, each lot is the subject of a separate sale [Com. Code § 2328(1)]. The sale is complete when the auctioneer so announces by the fall of the hammer or in some other customary manner [Com. Code § 2328(2)]. If a bid is made while the hammer is falling in acceptance of a prior bid, the auctioneer may in his or her discretion reopen the bidding, or declare the goods sold under the bid on which the hammer was falling [Com. Code § 2328(2)].

[k] Handling and Distributing Consignor's Funds

Auctioneers and auction houses are required to maintain the funds of all owners, consignors, buyers, and other clients and customers separate from personal personal funds and accounts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.607(j)].

Within 30 working days after the sale transaction, the auctioneer or auction house is required to provide an account to the owner or consignor of all goods that are the subject of the auction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.607(h)]. The proceeds due to the seller or consignor must also be paid out within 30 days, unless a delay is compelled by legal proceedings or the inability of the auctioneer or auction company, through no fault of his or her own, to transfer title to the goods or to comply with any other legal requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.607(i); see Paragraph 5(e) of form]. Violation of either of these provisions is a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1812.607(h), (i)].

[l] Bulk Sale By Auction

A sale by auction (or a sale conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf) is a "bulk sale" if it is a sale or series of sales not in the ordinary course of the seller's business of more than half of the seller's inventory and equipment, as measured by the fair market value on the date of the bulk-sale agreement [Com. Code § 6102(a)(3)(i), (15)]. In a bulk sale, the auctioneer or liquidator must meet the requirements of the Bulk Sales Division of the Uniform Commercial as adopted in California [Com. Code § 6108(a)(1); see Com. Code §§ 6101 et seq.].

Under the Bulk Sales Division, the auctioneer or liquidator must obtain from the seller a list of all business names and addresses used by the seller within three years before the list is sent or delivered to the auctioneer [Com. Code §§ 6104(a), 6108(a)(1)]. In addition, the auctioneer or liquidator must comply with detailed notice requirements designed to protect the seller's creditors [Com. Code §§ 6104(b), 6108(a)(1); see Com. Code §§ 6105, 6108(a)(3) (notice requirements)].

The auctioneer or liquidator is also subject to the liabilities ordinarily imposed on buyers under the Bulk Sales Division [Com. Code § 6108(a); see Com. Code § 6107]. However, in a single bulk sale, the cumulative liability of the auctioneer or liquidator to comply with statutory requirements [see Com. Code § 6108] may not exceed the amount of the net proceeds of the sale allocable to inventory and equipment sold, less the amount of the portion of any part of the net proceeds paid to or applied for the benefit of a creditor that is allocable to the inventory and equipment [Com. Code § 6108(a)(4)]. A payment made by the auctioneer or liquidator to a person to whom the auctioneer or liquidator is liable, or believes himself or herself to be liable, reduces pro tanto the auctioneer's or liquidator's cumulative liability [Com. Code § 6108(b)].

Because the person who buys at a bulk sale conducted by an auctioneer or a liquidator is not the "buyer" for purposes of the Bulk Sales Division [see Com. Code § 6108(a)(1)], that person need not comply with bulk sales requirements imposed on buyers, and is not liable for the failure of an auctioneer or liquidator to comply with those requirements [Com. Code § 6108(c)].

If the contemplated transaction is a "sale conducted by a liquidator on the seller's behalf" rather than an auction [see Com. Code § 6102(a)(3)(i)], the following form should be modified accordingly.

For detailed coverage of requirements under the Bulk Sales Division, see Ch. 17, Buying and Selling a Business or Professional Practice .

[m] Auctioneers as Secondhand Dealers

An auctioneer whose principal business is primarily that of accepting for auction or auctioning secondhand tangible personal property is also a secondhand dealer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21626(a)], with specified responsibilities under the law. However, "secondhand dealer" does not include coin dealers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21626(a), (b)]. For detailed discussion and forms relating to secondhand dealers with respect to bringing the auctioneer, when necessary, into line with the applicable laws, see Ch. 102B, Pawnbrokers, Personal Property Brokers, and Secondhand Goods Dealers .

[2] FORM

Agreement for Auctioneer Services--Contract Form

AUCTIONEER SERVICES AGREEMENT

This AGREEMENT is made on _____[date], by and between _____[name] ("Owner") and _____[name] ("Auctioneer").

Auctioneer's Services

1. Owner hereby engages the services of Auctioneer, as Owner's sole and exclusive agent, to publicize and sell by auction personal property belonging to Owner [consisting of _____ (describe) or, if items are too numerous or detailed to itemize in the body of the agreement:, as itemized on Schedule A attached to this Agreement].

Obligation of Auctioneer

2. Auctioneer agrees to advertise and sell at public auction the property specified above agrees to use Auctioneer's best efforts to advertise and sell the property at the highest price obtainable. [Add if auction is bulk sale: Auctioneer also agrees to comply with all requirements of the Uniform Commercial Code-Bulk Sales relating to bulk sales by auction.] Advertising for the sale shall include [specify, e.g., preparation of an auction catalog, brochures and signs advertising the auction, and media advertisements that, in Auctioneer's best professional judgment, are most likely to attract potential bidders to the sale].

Time and Place of Auction

3. The auction will take place on or about _____[date] at _____[specify, e.g., the offices of the Auctioneer located at _____].

Terms of Auction

4. The items of personal property set forth above will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, and _____[specify payment terms, e.g., the successful bidder will be required to give a deposit of _____ percent of the sale price on the conclusion of the bidding, and to pay the balance of the purchase price within _____ days after the date of the auction or the terms of the auction are all cash, payable by the successful bidder on the conclusion of the bidding]. All items will remain in the possession of the Auctioneer until full payment has been received from the purchaser.

[Select one of the following alternatives:]

The auction will be conducted without reserve and all items placed for sale will be sold to the highest bidder unless no bids are received within a reasonable time.

[OR]

The auction will be an auction without reserve and any goods offered for sale may be withdrawn at any time before the completion of the sale. There will be no reserve price on any item offered for sale.

[OR]

The goods offered for sale will not be sold at less than the reserve price[s] _____[of $_____ or, for multiple lots of property: specified by the Owner in the attached Schedule A].

[Continue with the following:]

The auction will be conducted in accordance with California Commercial Code 2328 and California Civil Code Sections 2362 and 2363 [and Auctioneer's standard terms and conditions of bidding and sale, a copy of which is attached to this Agreement as Schedule B and incorporated into this Agreement by reference.] Auctioneer will have sole and complete Authority over the conduct of the auction and any decision of Auctioneer with respect to the conduct of the Auction and the acceptance of rejection of any bid shall be final. Auctioneer, at Auctioneer's discretion, may establish a threshold estimated minimum value requirement (based on pre-sale estimates) for any single lot and may combine individual items of Owner's property to meet that minimum lot value requirement.

Compensation

5. (a) As compensation for Auctioneer's services in conducting the auction, Auctioneer will receive a commission of _____ percent of the gross receipts from the sale of the personal property sold at auction under this agreement.

[EITHER:]

(b) In addition to Auctioneer's compensation as specified in (a), above, Owner will pay the following expenses: [specify in detail (see Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)(3)); e.g., a catalog descrption fee of $50 or costs and expenses for advertising the property for a period of two weeks before the auction in a general circulation newspaper of general circulation]. Except as otherwise specified in this agreement, any other expenses relating to the auction shall be borne by [Auctioneer or Owner].

[OR]

(b) Except as otherwise specified in this Agreement, Auctioneer shall bear all costs of advertising and other expenses connected with the Auction.

[Continue with the following:]

[Optional:]

(c) Auctioneer will charge a storage and processing fee of [specify, e.g., $15 or two percent of the owner's reserve price of the lot, if any] on each lot that remains unsold at the conclusion of the auction.

[Continue with the following:]

(d) Auctioneer will deduct Auctioneer's compensation from the receipts from the auction sales before remitting those receipts to the Owner, and will remit the balance to Owner, together with an accounting of Owner's property in the sale, within 30 days following conclusion of the sale, except in the event of delay due to legal proceedings or the inability of Auctioneer, through no fault of Auctioneer's own, to transfer title to the goods or comply with any other legal requirements.

Insurance

[Either:]

6. Auctioneer is responsible for maintaining adequate insurance on the property against loss from fire, theft, or other means, from the time Auctioneer actally receives the property from Owner until the time when the property is either delivered to the highest bidder following conclusion of the auction, or returned unsold to Owner.

[OR]

6. Auctioneer will not maintain fire, theft, or any other insurance on the property at any time. If Owner desires any such insurance, Owner must obtain it at Owner's own expense.

[Continue with the following:]

Warranties of Owner

7. Owner warrants that Owner is the legal owner of the items of personal property offered for sale under this Agreement, has full and merchantable title to the property, and that the property is free and clear of liens, encumbrances, and other claims to title or possession, including any pending claims or litigation, except as may be specified in this Agreement. Owner hereby grants to Auctioneer the right to convey a merchantable title to that property to the successful buyer or buyers at the auction. Owner further represents that to the best of Owner's knowledge and belief, the property is genuine and that any descriptions of the property that Owner has provided Auctioneer are correct and accurate.

Arbitration

8. Any controversy between the parties to this Agreement involving the construction or application of any of its terms, covenants, or conditions will be submitted to arbitration, on the written request of one party served on the other. The arbitration will comply with and be governed by the provisions of the California Arbitration Act, California Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1280 through 1294.2.

Attorneys' Fees

9. If any party to this Agreement resorts to litigation or arbitration to enforce or interpret any provision of this Agreement, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to any other relief to which that party may be entitled. This provision applies to the entire contract.

Entire Agreement

10. This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the parties relating to the rights granted and the obligations assumed. Any oral representations or modifications concerning this Agreement will be of no force or effect excepting a subsequent modification in writing, signed by the party to be charged.

Partial Invalidity

11. If any part of this contract is declared invalid for any reason, the remainder of the agreement shall be unaffected. The other parts of the agreement shall remain in effect as if the agreement had been executed without the invalid part. The parties declare that they intend and desire that the remaining parts of the agreement continue to be effective without any part or parts that have been declared invalid.

Governing Law

12. The validity of this Agreement and its terms or provisions, as well as the rights and duties of the parties, will be interpreted and construed pursuant to and in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

Amendments and Waivers

13. Any term or provision of this Agreement may be amended and the observance of any term of this Agreement may be waived (either generally or in a particular instance and either retroactively or prospectively) only by a writing signed by the party to be bound thereby. The waiver by a party of any breach of this Agreement will not be deemed to constitute a waiver of any other default or succeeding breach or default.

Assignment

14. This Agreement may not be assigned by either party without the prior written consent of the other party. Subject to this limitation, this Agreement will inure to the benefit of and be binding on the successors and assigns of the respective parties.

Notices

15. Any notices to be given under this Agreement by either party to the other may be effected either by personal delivery in writing or by mail, registered or certified, postage prepaid with return receipt requested. Mailed notices must be addressed to the addresses of the parties as they appear in the introductory paragraph of this agreement, but each party may change address by written notice in accordance with this paragraph. Notices delivered personally will be deemed communicated as of actual receipt; mailed notices will be deemed communicated as of [e.g., one] day[s] after mailing.

Auctioneer's Bond

16. Auctioneer maintains a bond on file with the California Secretary of State as required by California Civil Code Section 1812.600. Auctioneers Bond # _____.

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.250

§ 86.250 Letter Agreement for Services of Licensed Private Investigator

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter agreement from a defense attorney to a licensed private investigator engaging the services of the private investigator on behalf of the attorney's client in connection with a personal injury case. The investigator is retained to obtain information about an accident and about the activities of the plaintiff to verify the validity of the personal injury claim.

The situation illustrated in this form is one of the most common in which the need for the services of a private investigator arises. Other common situations include investigations in connection with divorce or dissolution of marriage actions, investigations of thefts or other business losses, and the investigation of employee activities on the job to determine efficiency. The description of services in the form can be modified to suit other types of situations.

For a list of the determinations in drafting a private investigator's service contract, see § 86.125.

[b] Regulation of Private Investigators

Private investigators are regulated by and licensed under the Private Investigator Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7512 et seq.].

The Private Investigator Act does not contain any specific requirements for contracts with private investigators. However, the Act does contain a number of important limitations and prohibitions on what private investigators may and may not do [see, e.g., Bus & Prof. Code §§ 7539(a) (confidentiality of client information), (d) (use of badge prohibited), (e) (use of uniform or insignia prohibited), (g) (limitations on right to enter private property), (j) (limitations on use of fictitious name), 7561.3(a) (misrepresentation as government employee), 7561.4(b) (manufacturing evidence defined as fraudulent activity)]. Contract provisions at odds with these limitations presumably would be void and unenforceable [see Civ. Code § 1667].

A private investigator may provide services to protect a person (but not property) when those services are incidental to an investigation that he or she has previously been hired to perform [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7521.5 (requirements)]. Private investigators, unless they are attorneys, are not authorized to engage in acts constituting the practice of law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7514].

[c] Persons Who Must Be Licensed as Private Investigators

All persons doing business as private investigators must be licensed in California [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7520, 7523; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7520.5 (limited 60-day exception for out-of-state investigators conducting investigations originating outside California)].

A "private investigator" for purposes of the Private Investigator Act is a person (individual, firm, company, association, organization, partnership, or corporation [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7512.3]), other than an insurance adjuster, who is paid to investigate and obtain information regarding any of the following [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7521(a)]:

- Crimes or other wrongs.
- The identity, habits, conduct, business or occupation, honesty or trustworthiness, reputation or character, movement or whereabouts, affiliations, or transactions of any person.
- The cause or responsibility for fires, libels, losses, accidents, or damage or injury to persons or property.
- Securing evidence to be used before any court, board, officer, or investigating committee.
- Employees' integrity, honesty, breach of rules, or other standards of job performance.

[d] Persons Exempt From Licensing Requirements

Numerous classes of persons who might otherwise fall within the preceding definition are specifically excluded from regulation by the Private Investigator Act, and are not required to be licensed under the Act in order to carry out their activities [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522 (exempt categories)]. Some of the more significant exceptions in the context of this chapter include the following:

- Persons engaged exclusively in the business of obtaining and furnishing information as to the financial rating of persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(c)].
- Persons engaged solely in the business of securing information about persons or property from public records [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(h)].
- Insurance companies, agents, and brokers licensed in California when performing duties in connection with insurance transacted by them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(f)].
- Attorneys and insurance adjusters in performing their duties in those respective capacities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(e), (j)].
- Employees performing services exclusively in connection with their employer's affairs, providing the employer does not provide contract security services for other entities or persons and the employees do not carry or use deadly weapons in performing their duties [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(a)].

- Banks and savings and loan associations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(g), (k)].

- Secured creditors engaged in the repossession of a creditor's collateral and lessors engaged in the repossession of leased property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(l)].

- Registered process servers when serving process [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(m); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22350].

- Persons or businesses conducting objective observations of consumer purchases of products or services in the public environments of a business establishment by the use of a preestablished questionnaire [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(n)].

- Charitable philanthropic societies or associations incorporated under California law and organized and maintained for the public good and not for private profit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7522(d)].

Dear _____ [name of investigator] :
RE: Investigation of _____ [name of plaintiff]

This letter will confirm our understanding and your authority to proceed with the investigation of the validity of the personal injury claim filed by _____[name of plaintiff] ("Subject") against my client, _____[name].

1. You will investigate the circumstances surrounding the accident that occurred on _____[date], and will obtain copies of any police reports, photographs of the accident scene, and statements of witnesses. You will obtain the names of all witnesses presently known and obtain statements from them and advertise for a reasonable time in a local paper for other persons who may have witnessed the accident. You will take photographs of the accident scene in its present condition, under circumstances resembling as closely as possible the conditions that existed at the time of the accident.

2. You will investigate the Subject's background and obtain any available information on _____[his or her] past medical history, including prior disabilities, accidents, or other physical conditions or impairments.

3. You will investigate the Subject's present activities and prepare a report on all activities since the above-mentioned accident, with special emphasis on activities that involve physical exertion or the movement of [specify, e.g., the arms and legs or the right shoulder].

4. You will keep the Subject under surveillance [specify, e.g., 24] hours per day for a period of [specify, e.g., a week] and take appropriate still photographs and movies of the Subject that show the Subject engaged in various types of physical activity.

5. On or before _____[date], you will submit a report containing the requested information as soon as that information is obtained and you will forward all documents, charts, statements, photographs, movies, and other matter as soon as available. You will give [daily or weekly] progress report of your activities and findings by telephone and promptly report any unusual or important findings.

6. Your fee for the services described in this letter will be $_____ per [hour or day]. As we have agreed, your total fee will not exceed $_____ without the prior written consent of _____[name of client].

7. In addition to your fee, you will be reimbursed for reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in the course of your investigation, including but not necessarily limited to, [secretarial and similar charges,] telephone calls, fax, computer charges, reasonable meal expenses while on surveillance, reasonable and necessary travel expenses, photocopying, film and film developing, shipping and mailing charges, charges and fees for obtaining documents and records, and similar expenses. You agree to provide itemized documentation and receipts for any costs and expenses for which you seek reimbursement. You further agree not to incur any individual costs and expenses in excess of $[specify, e.g., $500] or total costs and expenses in excess of $[specify, e.g., $2,500] without the prior written consent of _____[name of client].

8. Fees, costs, and expenses will be paid on _____[completion of your services or a _____ (weekly or monthly) basis]. All bills for your services should be sent directly to my client _____[name], at _____[address], with a copy to this office.

If the above instructions accurately reflect your understanding of our agreement, please indicate your assent to these terms by signing and returning a copy of this letter to me no later than _____[date]. You may then proceed immediately with your investigation.

Sincerely,

PART IV. FORMS
F. Investigative Services

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.251

§ 86.251 Agreement Between Insurance Adjuster and Insurance Company

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an insurance adjuster and an insurance company concerning the investigation and settlement of a specific claim made against the insurance company. This form uses the common examples of an auto accident or fire insurance claim. The form may be adapted to a variety of claims arising from accidents, fires, deaths, or other types of insured losses.

[b] "Insurance Adjuster" Defined

An insurance adjuster is a person (other than a private investigator [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7521; see also § 86.250[1]) who, for consideration, does any of the following [Ins. Code § 14021; see Ins. Code § 14022 (exceptions)]:

- Engages in business or accepts employment to make any investigation for the purpose of obtaining information in the course of adjusting or otherwise participating in the disposal of any claim under an insurance policy on behalf of an insurer.

- Engages in soliciting insurance adjustment business.

- Aids any insurer in any manner with reference to any of the following:

    - Crime or wrongs done or threatened against the United States or any state or territory of the United States.

    - The identity, habits, conduct, business, occupation, honesty, integrity, credibility, knowledge, trustworthiness, efficiency, loyalty, activity, movement, whereabouts, affiliations, associations, transactions, acts, reputation, or character of any person.

- The location, disposition, or recovery of lost or stolen property.

- The cause or responsibility for fires, libels, losses, accidents, or damage or injury to persons or to property.

- Securing evidence to be used before any court, board, officer, or investigating committee.

This definition is not intended to limit the ability of a duly licensed independent insurance adjuster to perform the duties of an independent insurance adjuster for any other entity [Ins. Code § 14021].

[c] License Requirement and Ethical Standards

Insurance adjusters falling within the above definition must be licensed by the Insurance Commissioner [Ins. Code § 14020] and may not do any of the following [Ins. Code § 14039]:

- Fail to disclose his or her full financial interest in a contract or agreement executed by him or her for the adjustment of a claim prior to the execution of the agreement.

- Use any misrepresentation to solicit a contract or agreement to adjust a claim.

- Solicit or accept remuneration from, or have a financial interest exceeding 3 percent in, any salvage, repair, or other firm, which obtains business in connection with any claim which he or she has a contract or agreement to adjust.

[2] FORM

Agreement Between Insurance Adjuster and Insurance Company

INSURANCE ADJUSTING AGREEMENT

This AGREEMENT is made this _____ day of [month and year], by and between _____[name of insurance company], a California corporation, ("Company"), and _____[name of adjuster] ("Adjuster").

Recitals

Company, an insurer licensed to do business in the State of California, issued a policy of [e.g., automobile liability or fire or other type] insurance on a [specify make, year, license, and identification number of insured automobile, or type and location of structure insured] to _____[name], _____[address] as named insured. As a result of [e.g., an accident or a fire] on _____[date], one or more claims have been or may be filed against Company under this policy.

Company desires to retain Adjuster to investigate the circumstances surrounding this [e.g., accident or fire], to determine the extent of its possible liability under the aforementioned policy, and to determine the merit of and help settle any claims that may be filed against Company as a result of this incident.

THEREFORE, Company retains the services of Adjuster and Adjuster agrees to render services for Company on the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

Authorization

1. Company authorizes Adjuster to act on behalf and in the name of Company to investigate any and all claims arising out of the [accident or fire] that occurred on or about _____[date], and involved [e.g., an automobile or a house and garage] owned by _____[name of insured], the name insured under policy number _____. Adjuster is further authorized on Company's behalf to determine whether and to what extent any claimed loss is covered by this policy and to negotiate with and enter into agreements with any and all persons with regard to the amount of loss or damage and to make payments and obtain releases in full settlement of any such claims of loss or damage. However, Adjuster does not have the authority to admit liability on Company's behalf for any claimed loss or damage or to waive any provision or condition of the policy.

Services

2. In conjunction with the investigation and negotiation of any claim covered by this Agreement, Adjuster will seek out witnesses and obtain statements from the parties, witnesses, and any officials who might have knowledge of facts concerning the incident. Adjuster will obtain any photographs, statements, reports, or other physical evidence that may be available and that will aid in the determination of liability for or amount of damage or loss sustained as a result of the incident. Adjuster will assist Company in the defense of any claim that cannot, after reasonable effort, be settled. Adjuster will procure evidence to be used in the presentation of a case before a court, arbitrator, or other tribunal.

Fee

3. For services rendered under this Agreement, Adjuster will receive _____[specify, e.g., $_____ per hour, plus costs and expenses]. Adjuster will send a [e.g., weekly] bill to Company itemizing the charges made. Adjuster's total fee, including costs and expenses, will not exceed $_____ without the prior written approval of Company. Adjuster will be paid within [e.g., 15] days after Company receives Adjuster's bill.

Termination

4. This Agreement may be terminated at any time by either party, with or without cause, by giving written notice to the other party. Termination will be effective _____[e.g., immediately upon receipt of that notice if personally delivered, or within _____ days after mailing that notice].

Notices

5. Any notices required under this Agreement may be sent by regular mail to Company at its main offices located at _____[address] or to Adjuster at _____[address], unless a different address has been subsequently selected and written notice has been properly given to the other party. Notices under this Agreement may be sent by certified mail or telegram, or hand-delivered.

Independent Contractor

6. In performing services under this Agreement, Adjuster at all times will be an independent contractor and not an employee of Company.

Assignment

7. This Agreement may not be assigned by either party without the prior written consent of the other party.

Governing Law

8. The validity and interpretation of any of the terms or provisions of this Agreement, or of the rights or duties of any of the parties under this Agreement, will be governed by the laws of the State of California.

Executed at _____, California, on the day and year first above written.

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.260

§ 86.260 Agreement Between Author and Publisher

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an agreement between an author and publisher in which the author agrees to write and the publisher agrees to publish a book on a given topic. It specifies that the author will be compensated on a royalty basis.

For a list of issues to consider before drafting a contract between an author and a publisher, see § 86.126. Copyright law is briefly discussed in [b], below. For more detailed discussion of the law and procedures relating to copyright and copyright registration, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

[b] Features of Form

This form is designed for an arrangement in which an author will produce a complete original work on a predetermined topic [see Paragraph 1 of Form], to be published exclusively by the publisher [see Paragraph 2 of Form]. The author is required to deliver manuscript of an approximate length to the publisher on or before a specified date [see Paragraph 4 of Form]. The publisher has the right to require revision of the manuscript [see Paragraph 5(a) of Form] and controls all the details of production and marketing, including the price, form of edition, and so on [see Paragraphs 5(b), 7 of Form].

The author will receive a royalty consisting of a specified percentage of the revenue from all copies sold, with specified adjustments and exclusions [see Paragraph 8 of Form]. The author will also receive an advance against royalties upon execution of the contract [see Paragraph 8(g) of Form].

The publisher is given the right to elect not to publish the book if that course of action seems best in light of changed economic or market conditions [see Paragraph 10 of Form]. If such a provision is not included, nonpublication for economic or market reasons may be a breach of contract by the publisher [see Chodos v. West Publishing Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 992, 998]. It has been held that a contract provision giving a publisher broad discretion not to publish a work does not make the contract illusory, because the publisher's rights are limited by its implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see Chodos v. West Publishing Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 992, 997]. This agreement provides that in the event the work is not published, ownership rights revert to the author [see Paragraph 10 of Form].

The author also agrees to refrain from writing or publishing competitive works [see Paragraph 11 of Form] and to cooperate in the preparation of subsequent editions [see Paragraph 12 of Form].

[c] Ownership of Copyrighted Works

A "copyright owner" is the owner of any of the exclusive rights comprised in a copyright [17 U.S.C. § 101]. The ownership of a copyright or any exclusive rights under it is distinct from ownership of any material object in which the work is embodied [17 U.S.C. § 202].

A copyright initially vests in the author or authors of the work [17 U.S.C. § 201(a)]. If two or more authors prepare a work with the intention that their contributions be merged into inseparable or interdependent parts of a unitary whole, it is referred to as a joint work [17 U.S.C. § 101], and the authors are co-owners of the copyright [17 U.S.C. § 201(a)].

[d] Transfer of Copyright

Ownership of a copyright may be transferred in whole or in part by any means of conveyance or by operation of law [17 U.S.C. § 201(d)(1)]. Any of the exclusive rights comprised in a copyright [see 17 U.S.C. § 106] may be transferred and owned separately [17 U.S.C. § 201(d)(2)].

Any transfer (other than by operation of law) must be made by an instrument of conveyance or a note or other memorandum signed by the owner or his or her duly authorized agent [see 17 U.S.C. § 204(a)]. A certificate of acknowledgment is not required but is, in certain cases, prima facie evidence of the execution of the transfer [see 17 U.S.C. § 204(b)]. Any transfer of copyright ownership or other document pertaining to a copyright may be recorded in the Copyright Office, which then serves as constructive notice of the facts stated in the document [see 17 U.S.C. § 205(c)].

The Copyright Law also establishes a priority between conflicting transfers [see 17 U.S.C. § 205(d)]. For transfers executed within the United States, the one executed first prevails if duly recorded [see 17 U.S.C. § 205(c)] within one month after its execution, or within two months after its execution outside the United States. Otherwise, the transfer last executed prevails, provided it was recorded first, taken in good faith for a valuable consideration or on the basis of a binding promise to pay royalties, and without notice of the earlier transfer [17 U.S.C. § 205(d)].

A nonexclusive license, whether recorded or not, will prevail over a conflicting transfer of copyright ownership if the license is evidenced by a written instrument signed by the owner of the rights licensed or the owner's duly authorized agent. However, for the above rule to apply, the license must either have been taken before execution of the transfer, or in good faith before recordation of the transfer and without notice of it [17 U.S.C. § 205(e)].

[e] Duration of Copyright

For works created on or after January 1, 1978, copyright protection automatically begins at the time of its creation [17 U.S.C. §§ 101, 302(a)]. The copyright normally endures for the life of the author plus 70 years [see 17 U.S.C. § 302; see also 17 U.S.C. § 304(a), (b) (duration of subsisting copyrights)].

[f] Termination of Transfers and Licenses

The nontestamentary transfer or license of a copyright of a work not made for hire, or of any right under a copyright is subject to termination within a period of five years beginning at the end of 35 years from the date the grant was executed [see 17 U.S.C. § 203(a)]. If the grant covers the right of publication, the period begins at the end of the shorter of the following periods [17 U.S.C. § 203(a)(3)]:

- 35 years from the publication date of the work under the grant; or
- 40 years from the date of execution of the grant.

On the date of termination, all rights covered by the terminated grant revert to the author or other persons entitled to exercise termination rights, subject to specified limitations [see 17 U.S.C. § 203(b); see 17 U.S.C. §§ 203(a)(1), (2)]. Future rights that will revert on termination of the grant become vested on the date the notice of termination is served [see 17 U.S.C. § 203(b)(2); see also 17 U.S.C. § 203(a)(4)].

If the rights under an existing copyright were transferred prior to the effective date of the Copyright Act, the Act permits the author or other specified persons to terminate those rights for the extended term, except in the case of a copyright in a work made for hire [see 17 U.S.C. § 304(c)]. For additional discussion of this right, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

[g] Preemption of State Law

All legal or equitable rights that are equivalent to any of the exclusive rights granted under a copyright [see 17 U.S.C. § 106] in works of authorship that are fixed in a tangible medium of expression, and come within the subject matter of copyright [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 102, 103], regardless of when created and whether published or not, are governed exclusively by the federal Copyright Law. No one is entitled to any copyright under the common law or the statutes of any state [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(a)]. Thus, state statutes such as Civ. Code §§ 980-982, to the extent that they grant any rights similar to a copyright, have been preempted by the federal Copyright Law. For discussion of matters not preempted by the federal Copyright Law, see Ch. 103A, Copyrights .

[2] FORM

Agreement Between Author and Publisher

AGREEMENT BETWEEN AUTHOR AND PUBLISHER

This agreement is made on _____[date], between _____[name of publisher], [specify status, a California corporation] ("Publisher") and _____[name of author], _____[address] ("Author").

Creation of Work

1. Author will prepare and supply a work ("Work") tentatively titled "_____". This title is a working title and may be changed by mutual agreement. The work will consist of [specify subject matter of work, e.g., a romantic novel set in the Alaska gold rush or a scholarly historical analysis of the evolution of land tenure in medieval England or a children's story about a family of whales, designed to appeal to children aged five to seven years and, if more detailed description of contents of work is desired, add detailed description here.]

Rights and Licenses

2. Author grants and assigns to Publisher during the whole world term of its copyright and all renewals and any extensions the following rights in the Work:

(a) The sole and exclusive right to print, publish, and sell the Work in book and in all digital electronic forms in the English language throughout the world and the right to license others to do so.

(b) The sole and exclusive right to grant licenses for translations into foreign languages, and for publication of those translations, and for exercise by foreign publishers of any of the other rights enumerated in this Agreement in any foreign country.

(c) The sole and exclusive right to publish book club and microform editions, to publish in other languages, to grant permissions to publish material from the Work in other works including sound and video recordings, information storage, processing, transmission and retrieval systems, multimedia renditions, to display and transmit electronically and through on-line information services, including the Internet, and to publish all derivative work in all media.

Copyright

3. Publisher will register the copyright of the Work at its own expense as an administrative convenience, in the name of _____[publisher's imprint], and will preserve and record the copyright in compliance with Title 17 of the United States Code and with any foreign statutes, treaties, and conventions as it, in its sole discretion, considers necessary and appropriate. Publisher will include in each copy of the Work published by it or under its authority a copyright notice in conformity to U.S. law and the Universal Copyright Convention. In the event the Work contains parts written by persons other than Author, those persons will assign their copyrights to Author, who will in turn license Publisher as stated in this Agreement.

The Manuscript

4. (a) Author agrees to deliver on or before _____[date], a manuscript on disk, in a word processing format compatible with Publisher's software, and a hard copy of approximately _____ pages, on 81/2 " x 11" paper, of approximately 200 words per page [, with approximately _____ camera-ready line art illustrations, _____ black and white and _____ color photographs that will result in a published book of approximately _____ published pages in a [e.g., 6 x 9] trim size.

(b) Author will retain a copy of the Work including both text and illustrations.

(c) Author agrees to provide complete and final photographs, drawings, charts, maps or other illustrative material ("Illustrations") and a preface and/or foreword, table of contents, or other aids if necessary for the Work. Author agrees to provide an index. If Author fails to supply any of the foregoing, or if any of the foregoing as submitted is unsatisfactory to Publisher, Publisher is entitled to provide them and charge their cost against Author's royalties.

(d) If the manuscript is not delivered in content and form satisfactory to Publisher within the specified time, for any reason including without limitation by reason of Author's death or otherwise, unless the time is extended in writing by Publisher, Publisher is entitled to terminate this Agreement. Beyond the extension(s) agreed upon by Publisher in writing, Publisher has the right to negotiate a reduced royalty if the manuscript is further delayed.

(e) With regard to any and all material obtained from other copyrighted works, or the incorporation of illustrations, Author will obtain, at Author's own expense, and file with Publisher at the time of manuscript delivery, written consents of the owner of those copyrighted materials for use of those materials, or written permissions or releases from models used in those illustrations, granting Publisher the right to publish those materials or images in the Publisher's English-language and any foreign language editions of the Work. If Author fails to obtain the required permissions, Publisher will deduct all fees, royalties and other charges for obtaining permissions and for use of those copyrighted materials from Author's royalties.

(f) It is understood and agreed that Publisher is not the insurer of the manuscript for the Work or any other materials placed in its possession by the Author, and Publisher will not be liable for any loss.

(g) If the Agreement is terminated for any reason set forth in Paragraph 4(d), any advance and grant monies paid to Author must be returned to Publisher. Until those monies have been returned, Author may not cause publication of the Work elsewhere without the written permission of Publisher.

Revision and Acceptance of Manuscript

5. (a) It is understood and agreed that it is Publisher's policy and practice to selectively obtain reviews of an Author's manuscript in order to assess the suitability of the manuscript for the purpose intended and tailoring the manuscript to the specific market aimed at. Author agrees to make all revisions reasonably required by the Publisher in the interest of the widest acceptance of the Work in the market.

(b) When Publisher, in its sole discretion, has determined that the manuscript is satisfactory in form and content for its publishing program, and Author has furnished any marketing information that Publisher may deem helpful to the sale of the Work, the manuscript will be published at Publisher's expense in the style and manner, under Publisher's imprint, and at the price that Publisher deems suitable.

Indemnities and Warranties

6. Author warrants that Author and any contributors are the originators of the work; that Author is the sole proprietor of the Work and has the full power and authority to copyright the Work and make this Agreement; and that the Work will not infringe on any copyright, right of publicity or privacy or any other proprietary right of any third party or contain any libelous matter. Author will indemnify and hold Publisher harmless against all claims, suits, costs, damages, losses, and expenses (including reasonable attorneys' fees) that Publisher may incur by reason of any infringement of the Work on any copyright or proprietary right, and/or by inclusion of material found to be libelous or injurious to the user. Publisher will also have the exclusive right to sue or defend against those actions, through counsel of its own choosing. Until any claim or suit has been settled or withdrawn, Publisher may withhold reasonable sums due Author under this Agreement. Further, the warranties and indemnities contained in this Agreement survive its termination and extend to licensees, distributors and assigns of Publisher.

Processing the Manuscript

7.(a) Publisher has the right, in its sole discretion, to edit and design the format of the Work, including size, typography, paper, method of printing, type of binding, and jacketing; to determine and set the price, including any special prices; and to use all customary means of advertising and marketing the Work.

(b) Author will read the copyedited proofs, responsibly incorporate the copyedited changes, and submit final manuscript within _____ days of receipt, and be responsible for the accuracy of the proof and corrections.

Author's Compensation

8. Publisher will royalties to Author on the net amount actually received on the sale of regular editions of the Work in book form in the English language, as specified below:

(a) [specify, e.g., 12 percent] on all copies sold. The parties agree that the same rates will be paid as royalty for electronic editions if, in the sole judgment of Publisher, such editions are deemed mutually beneficial.

(b) No royalty will be paid on returned copies; complimentary copies to Author; copies given to others, including review copies, for the purpose of aiding the sale of the Work; traveler's samples; or damaged copies. Publisher may authorize limited use of quotations from the Work by others without remuneration to Author if, in Publisher's sole discretion, that use benefits the sale of the Work.

(c) On all copies of overstock, which the Publisher deems it expedient to sell at remainder prices, a royalty of [specify, e.g., 10 percent] of the amount received by Publisher will be paid to Author, except when those copies are sold at or below cost, in which case no royalty will be payable.

(d) Author will receive [specify, e.g., 50 percent] of the amount received by Publisher after Publisher's manufacturing costs have been deducted on royalty inclusive special sales of the Work in book form in the English language, such as to a book club. However, on special sales for which royalties are paid by the purchaser, Author will receive [specify, e.g., 50 percent] of the royalties paid to Publisher.

(e) Author will receive [specify, e.g., 50 percent] of the amount received by Publisher from the sale to third parties, such as to publishers of foreign translations.

(f) Publisher will furnish a total of [e.g., six] copies of the Work to Author without charge. Additional copies for Author's use will be supplied at a discount of [specify, e.g., 30 percent] from the standard list price. Author may also purchase for personal use, and not for resale, single copies of any book published by Publisher at a [specify, e.g., 30 percent] discount from the standard list price.

(g) Publisher will prepare a statement of royalties [specify term, e.g., annually or quarterly] within [specify, e.g., 90] days following the end of the [specify period, e.g., fiscal year or calendar quarter]. Remittance of the amount due to Author will accompany the statement. No royalty payment will be issued if the amount due Author is less than [specify, e.g., $50]. Payment will be delayed until the next usual reporting period when that amount has accumulated.

(h) Publisher will pay Author a $_____ advance against royalties upon execution of this Agreement. The amount of this advance will be repaid from the royalties earned by Author under this Paragraph, and no royalties will be paid out to Author until this advance has been repaid to Publisher in full. Until such time as this advance has been repaid from royalties earned by Author on the Work, Publisher will prepare and submit royalty statements to Author as provided in (g), above, indicating royalties earned by Author, crediting those amount against this advance, and showing any remaining balance of this advance as of the end of the royalty period.

Publication Date

9. The parties contemplate that the finished Work will be first published and available for public purchase _____[specify, e.g., on or about _____ (specify approximate date) or in time for sale during the _____ (year) Christmas shopping season]. Author and Publisher agree to use reasonable good-faith efforts to assure that the Work is ready for publication at that time. However, Publisher shall not incur any liability for delay in publication due to circumstances beyond Publisher's control, including but not limited to war, insurrection, terrorist acts, riot, storms, earthquakes, floods, or other natural disaster, labor disputes, strikes, or problems with suppliers.

Nonpublication

10. Author and Publisher have entered into this Agreement in view of the economic and market conditions existing at the time of execution of this Agreement. If Publisher, in the reasonable exercise of its professional judgment, determines that as a result of changes in the general economic conditions or the market for the Work, the publication of the Work would no longer be economically advantageous or would expose Publisher to a significantly increased risk of financial loss, Publisher may elect not to publish the Work. In the event Publisher should make such an election, Publisher will return to Author any manuscript and other materials submitted by Publisher and thereafter shall retain no right or interest in the work, which shall revert to Author. In the event of nonpublication under this paragraph, Author [shall or shall not] be required to return any sums advanced by Publisher under Paragraph 6(h) of this Agreement.

Competitive Books by the Author

11. Author agrees that during the term of this Agreement, Author will not publish or furnish to any other publisher for sale, trade or otherwise, any other edition of the Work revised, corrected, enlarged, abridged, or otherwise, or any book of a character that would compete with or injure the sale of the Work. [Author may use portions of the material from the Work in Author's classroom or business during the manuscript development of the Work or for inclusion in scholarly papers for scientific journals if the Work and Publisher are cited.]

Future Editions

12. Author agrees to revise the first and subsequent editions of the Work, when requested to do so by Publisher, under the same terms and conditions as set out in the Agreement, as though it were being published for the first time, including the computation of royalties, but excepting first edition advances or grants. A new schedule for manuscript delivery will be determined by Publisher. If Author fails to revise the Work in accordance with the standards reasonably required by Publisher, for any reason, Publisher may engage some competent person or persons to prepare the revised editions, and will have the right to cause that fact to be evident in the new edition, and charge the cost of the services of that person or those persons against the royalties accruing to Author or Author's estate. Publisher will have the sole right to determine the amount of the fee or royalty percentage to revise the royalty rates in this Agreement as it deems equitable. Publisher will be entitled to continue to use Author's name in all editions of the Work and in all advertisements of the work, whether or not those editions are prepared by Author. Publisher also will be entitled to adjust the names of Author and revising party or parties in its sole discretion.

Termination and Reversion of Rights

13. (a) When, in Publisher's judgment, the demand for the Work is no longer sufficient to warrant its revision or its continued manufacture or maintenance in inventory, Publisher may discontinue its manufacture, sale, and distribution or elect to offer the Work on a single copy, on-demand basis, those copies to be produced by a third party at the request of a customer. The royalty to the Author on such a single-copy reproduction sales will be [specify, e.g., 10 percent] of the Net Receipts over the remaining life of the Work. When Publisher decides to discontinue the sale and distribution of the Work, it will notify Author in writing, addressed to Author's last known address and deposited in the United States mails. This Agreement terminate will at that time all rights granted to Publisher in this Agreement will revert to Author (except as to artwork and illustrations prepared or obtained at Publisher's expense, which will remain the property of Publisher).

(b) Author will have the option to buy from Publisher any or all copies of the Work on hand at the cost of manufacture and shipment. Publisher may offer its plates, film, or artwork, if available, to Author at Publisher's cost plus freight. At that point, Publisher will be privileged to dispose of the copies destroyed or disposed of at or below cost. Termination will not affect existing third party licenses or proceeds to Author or Publisher from those licenses.

Interpretation

14. This Agreement will be interpreted according to California law, without regard to principles of conflicts of law.

Severability

15. If any provision of this Agreement is held unenforceable, in whole or in part, the remainder of the provision and the entire Agreement is severable and remains in effect.

Modification of Agreement

16. Any revisions or modifications of this Agreement must be made in writing and signed by both parties.

Heirs and Assigns

17. This Agreement will be binding up the parties, their heirs, successors, administrators, assigns, and personal representatives. References to Author and Publisher include their heirs, successors, administrators, assigns, and personal representatives.

[Optional:]

Multiple Authorship

18. If two or more authors are a party to this Agreement, the word Author, as used in this Agreement, will be deemed to include, jointly and severally, all collaborators, authors, or owners who are signatories to this Agreement. Unless otherwise provided in this Agreement or in written instructions to the Publisher signed by or on behalf of all the collaborators, authors or owners, all sums payable to the Author will be divided equally between or among them and the Publisher will render separate accounts and make separate payments to each of them. The Author may direct the Publisher in writing to advance sums from Author's royalty account to pay contributors who are not signatories to this Agreement.

28-86 California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86.270

§ 86.270 Immigration Consultant's Contract for Services

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is the standard immigration consultant's contract for services prescribed by the Department of Consumer Affairs in 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840 and required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.

Every person engaging in the business of or acting as an immigration consultant [see [b], below] who enters into a contract or agreement with a client to provide services must provide the client with a written contract like this form before providing any services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(a); 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a)].

Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq. do not apply to person authorized to practice law or authorized by federal law to represent clients before the Board of Immigration Appeals or the Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440].

[b] Definitions

A person engages in the business of or acts as an immigration consultant when he or she gives nonlegal assistance or advice [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22441(d) (legal advice by immigration consultant is violation); see also [g], below] on an immigration matter. This advice or assistance includes, but is not limited to, the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 24441(a)]:

- Completing a form provided by a state or federal agency, but not giving advice on how to answer form questions.
- Translating a client's answers to form questions.
- Securing for a client supporting documents necessary to complete the forms.

- Submitting completed forms on a client's behalf and at the client's request to the CIS.

- Making referrals for legal representation in an immigration matter.

An "immigration matter" is any proceeding, filing, or action affecting the immigration or citizenship status of any person that arises under immigration and naturalization law, executive order or presidential proclamation, or an action of the CIS, State Department, or Labor Department [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22441(b)].

[c] Required Notice and Written Disclosures

An immigration consultant must display in his or her office a 12-by-20 inch notice in English and the native language of the consultant's clientele stating the consultant's name and address, evidence of compliance with applicable bonding requirements [see [h], below], that the consultant is not an attorney, the services the immigration consultant provides, the current and total fee for each service, and the name of each consultant employed at each location [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.2(a)]. Before performing any services, the consultant must give the client written disclosure, in the client's native language, of his or her name, address, telephone number, agent for service of process, the legal name of the employee who consulted with the client, if different from the immigration consultant, and evidence of compliance with applicable bonding requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.2(b)].

[d] Contents of Contract

The written contract must include the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b)]:

- The services to be performed.

- Costs of the services to be performed.

- A printed statement on the face of the contract, in 10-point bold type, that the immigration consultant is not an attorney and may not perform the legal services that an attorney performs.

- The documents to be prepared by the immigration consultant, and an explanation of the purpose and process of each document.

- A statement of the purpose for which the immigration consultant has been hired and the actions to be taken by the immigration consultant regarding each document, including the agency and office where each document will be filed and the approximate processing times according to current published agency guidelines.

- A statement that client may report complaints relating to immigration consultants to the Office of Immigrant Assistance of the Department of Justice, including the office's telephone number and Internet web site.

- A statement that complaints about the unauthorized practice of law may be reported to the California State Bar, including the Bar's telephone number and Internet web site.

The contract may not include any guarantee or promise not based in fact, or any statement that the consultant can or will get special favors from or has special influence with the CIS [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(c)]. Moreover, an immigration consultant may not make such statements orally to a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(g)].

The face of the contract must contain a statement, in 10-point bold type, that the immigration consultant is not an attorney and may not perform legal services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(b); see [g], below]. This statement is in item (2) of the form under the heading "NOTICE" [see [2], below].

[e] Language and Translations

The contract must be in both English and the client's native language [Bus. & Prof. Code § 24442(d); 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a)]. A written contract is void if it is does not comply with this requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(e)]. The immigration consultant is responsible for translating the contract into the client's native language. This translation must appear on the reverse side of the document containing the English version of the contract [16 Cal. Code Reg. § 3840(a)].

An immigration consultant may not, with the intent to mislead, literally translate words and titles that imply that the consultant is an attorney, including, but not limited to, "notary public," "notary," "licensed," "attorney," or "lawyer" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.3(a)].

[f] Rescission of Contract

A client has the right to rescind the contract within 72 hours of signing. This right must be conspicuously set forth in the written contract in both English and the client's language [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(f)]. This right is stated in Part III of the contract under the heading "CANCELLATION" [see [2], below].

[g] Prohibited Acts and Practices

The following acts by an immigration consultant constitute violations of the governing statutes:

- Giving legal advice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22441(d)].

- Violating the notice, written disclosure, content, language, translation or rescission requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22442, 22442.2, 22442.3 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(f); see also [c]-[f], above].

- Violating the bonding requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1 [see [h], below].

- Failing to provide the required written contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(a), (d)].

- Failing to provide copies of required forms and documents to clients, or to maintain records for three years from the date of last service to a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443(a), (b)].

- Acting as an immigration consultant other than as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq., unless authorized to practice law or authorized by federal law to represent clients before the Board of Immigration Appeals or the CIS [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440].

- The consultant is prohibited from retaining the original documents of a client in his or her possession [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443(c)].

- Making false or misleading statements to a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22444(a)].

- Making any guarantee or promise to a client, unless the guarantee or promise is in writing and has some basis in fact [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22444(b)].

- Making any statement that the immigration consultant can or will obtain any special favors from or has any special influence with the CIS or any other governmental agency, employee, or official, that may have a bearing on the client's immigration matter [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22444(c)].

- Charging the client a fee for referral of the client to another for services that the immigration consultant cannot or will not provide to the client. This prohibition must be set forth on a conspicuously displayed sign in the consultant's office [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22444(d)].

[h] Bonding and Disclosure Requirements

An immigration consultant must file a bond of $50,000, or a deposit in that amount, with the Secretary of State as a prerequisite to doing business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(a)]. Employees of nonprofit, tax-exempt corporations are exempt from these requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(j); see [j], below].

An immigration consultant who is required to file a surety bond with the Secretary of State must also file a disclosure form [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(c)]. The disclosure form must contain all of the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(c)]:

- The consultant's name, date of birth, residence address, business address, residence telephone number, and business telephone number.

- The name and address of the consultant's agent for service of process, if one is required to be or has been appointed.

- Whether the consultant has ever been convicted of a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq. (governing immigration consultants) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 6126 (unlawful practice of law).

- Whether the consultant has ever been arrested or convicted of a crime.

- The name, business address, business telephone number, and agent for service of process of any corporation or partnership employing the consultant.

Along with the disclosure form, the consultant must also submit:

- A copy of current photo identification [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(g)(1)].

- A photo of the consultant that meets the requirements for U.S. passport photos [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(g)(2)].

- The consultant's fingerprints and related information required by the Department of Justice to obtain information about any state or federal arrests or convictions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.4(a)].

The consultant must also pass a background check by the Secretary of State [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22441.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22441.1(b) (disqualifications)].

An immigration consultant must notify the Secretary of State in writing within 30 days of renewal of the surety bond or any change of name, address, telephone number, or agent for service of process [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22443.1(d)].

A person awarded damages against the consultant can recover those damages from the bond or deposit, which then must be reinstated before the consultant conduct further business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22447(a); In an action brought by the Attorney General, a district attorney, or a city attorney [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(a)(1); see also [i], below], the court may order relief for the injured parties to be paid from the bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22447(a)].

[i] Criminal Penalties and Civil Remedies

Any violation of the statutes regulating immigration consultants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq.] is subject to a civil penalty to be assessed and collected in a civil action brought by any person injured by the violation, or in a civil action brought by the Attorney General, a district attorney, or a city attorney [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(a)(1)]. An action brought on behalf of the state does not preclude the injured party from also bringing an action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(a)(1)]. The Attorney General, a district attorney, or a city attorney that brings a civil action for a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq. must also seek injunctive relief, restitution, or other equitable relief [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(a)(3); Bus. & Prof. Code § 22446.5(c)]. In addition, a violation is a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(b)]. A second or subsequent violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22442.2 or 22442.3 constitutes a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(a), (b) (penalties)]. A second or subsequent violation of any other provision of the statutes regulating immigration consultants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq.] is a felony [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(c)].

Civil actions are also available for violations, and payment of restitution to client takes precedence over payment of a fine [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22445(b)]. Any person aggrieved by an immigration consultant's violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq. may bring a civil action for an injunction, damages, or both. A prevailing plaintiff is entitled to actual damages plus an amount equal to the greater of triple actual damages or $1,000 per violation, in addition to reasonable attorneys' fees and costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22446.5(a)]. Anyone claiming a violation by a consultant may bring a civil action for an injunction on behalf of the general public and, if successful, is entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees and costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22446.5(b)]. In addition, the Attorney General, district attorney, or city attorney may bring a civil action for injunctive relief, restitution, or other equitable relief against immigration consultants for a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22440 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22446.5(c)].

[j] Exception for Nonprofit Tax-Exempt Corporations

The requirement of a written contract [see [c], above], content [see [d], above], language translation [see [e], above], and rescission [see [f], above] requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442 do not apply to employees of nonprofit tax-exempt corporations who help clients complete application forms in an immigration matter [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(h)]. This exception applies whether or not the corporation charges a fee, as long as that fee, which may include reasonable costs, is consistent with the fee authorized by the Board of Immigration Appeals for qualified designated entities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442(h); see 8 C.F.R. § 292.2].

[k] Statement of Account

An immigration consultant must provide a signed receipt to the client for each payment made by the client. The receipt must be typed or computer generated on the immigration consultant's letterhead [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.1(a)]. A statement of accounting for services rendered and payments made must be provided to the client every two months, must be typed or computer generated on the consultant's letterhead, and must display the individual charges and total charges for services, and the client's offsetting payments. The immigration consultant must provide the client with a written translation of the statement in the client's native language [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22442.1(b)].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide Scope

Scope

Scope

This chapter covers agreements for professional services between attorneys and clients. It focuses on the creation and termination of the attorney-client relationship. The chapter discusses the duration of that relationship in the context of limits on the attorney's authority to act for his or her client. The chapter briefly covers the control and regulation of the legal profession by the state bar, legislature, and judiciary, and discusses the ethical considerations attending the attorney-client relationship.

The Transaction Guide contains checklists of substantive considerations and procedures to follow in accepting employment and drafting agreements for legal services. The forms include complete representative agreements for a variety of legal services, including retention and contingency fee agreements. They include both informal letters confirming retention and formal contracts.

This chapter does not cover admission to practice, advertising and solicitation, how to perform legal services, the attorney-client privilege, attorney-client relationships arising from court appointments, the practice of criminal law, the attorney's relationship to third parties, conduct in court, nondiscrimination requirements, or the operation and management of a law office.

For a discussion of the procedures involved in forming a law corporation, see Ch. 12A, Professional Corporations . For an analysis of the steps involved in forming a law partnership, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships . To form a limited liability law partnership, see Ch. 16C, Limited liability Partnerships. Agreements for professional services other than legal services are covered in Ch. 86, Agreements for Professional Services . For further discussion of conflicts of interest, see Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting a New Business .

CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.10

§ 86A.10 Regulation of Legal Profession

The State Bar Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.] governs the practice of law. The Act creates the State Bar of California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6001], which consists of all persons admitted and licensed to practice law in California, except for judges of courts of record while they are in office [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6002]. The Bar is controlled and managed by members of the legal profession and is an administrative arm of the California Supreme Court for purposes of assisting in matters of admission and discipline of attorneys [see Chronicle Pub. Co. v. Superior Court (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 548, 566, 7 Cal. Rptr. 109, 354 P.2d 637] .

The State Bar Act also establishes the Board of Governors of the State Bar [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6010]. The Board of Governors is elected by active bar members [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6018] and is primarily responsible for promulgating rules and regulations necessary or expedient for carrying out the purposes of the Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6010, 6025]. The Board is authorized to implement and enforce those regulations to the extent they concern the Rules of Professional Conduct and attendant disciplinary matters [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6076, 6077]. However, in all other respects the Board functions in a strictly advisory capacity [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6064, 6078]. The Board's decisions regarding certification for admission, reproval, reinstatement, suspension, or disbarment are subject to review by the California Supreme Court, or by a California Court of Appeal in accordance with the procedure prescribed by the California Supreme Court [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6066, 6082, 6083].

The right to practice law involves the exercise of a personal privilege similar in nature to a public trust. The granting of this privilege is determined by the judiciary rather than the legislature. However, the courts follow rules and regulations prescribed by the legislature in making that determination [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6060-6069]. These legislative rules and regulations are minimum standards, and the courts may demand more than the legislature for admission to practice [see In re Lavine (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 324, 328, 41 P.2d 161] .

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.11

§ 86A.11 Formation of Attorney-Client Relationship

[1] Agreement Forms Basis of Relationship

Attorney-client relationships arise from express or implied contracts between attorneys and persons who retain them to perform legal services [see Neblett v. Getty (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 65, 68-69, 66 P.2d 473] . An attorney-client relationship may exist even though the parties do not reduce their agreement to a formal writing. The existence of an attorney-client relationship is a question of fact to be determined by an analysis of the parties' conduct [see Quaglino v. Quaglino (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 542, 547-548, 152 Cal. Rptr. 47] .

Although a contract implied by the parties' conduct can establish an attorney-client relationship, it is always preferable from both a business and professional standpoint to document all agreements for legal services in writing. In addition, a written agreement is required by law in many cases [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6147, 6148; see also [2], [4], below].

Before accepting employment, the attorney should arrive at an understanding with the client regarding the precise scope of that employment and should clearly explain the basis of all legal fees. As soon as possible after accepting employment, the attorney should confirm these matters in writing. The writing may be a formal contract or an informal letter. Legal services ordinarily are provided on flat fee or hourly rate bases [see [2], below], under retainer arrangements [see [3], below], and under contingency fee contracts [see [4], below].

[2] When Written Agreement Is Required

[a] Contents of Agreement; Execution Requirements

Contingency fee contracts are subject to special writing and content requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147; see [4], below]. All other agreements for attorneys' fees must be in writing if it is reasonably foreseeable that the total expense to the client, including attorneys' fees, will exceed $1,000 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(e), (f) (rule applicable to fee agreements executed after January 1, 2000)]. Written contracts must contain all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)]:

- The basis of compensation including, but not limited to, hourly rates, statutory fees or flat fees, and other standard rates, fees, and charges applicable to the case.

- The general nature of the legal services to be provided to the client.

- The respective responsibilities of the attorney and the client as to the performance of the contract.

When the parties enter into the contract, the attorney must provide a duplicate copy of the contract signed by both the attorney and the client, or the client's guardian or representative, to the client or to the client's guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Because an attorney-client relationship may be created informally or by an implied contract, prudence requires that counsel be aware of potential liability arising from casual conversations. Even when a written agreement is not required by statute, counsel should consider memorializing the representation in writing. If an attorney believes that he or she may have given a potential client the impression that counsel might take the case, counsel should draft a letter clarifying that he or she has not agreed to represent the potential client.

[b] Billing Requirements

All bills sent by an attorney to a client must clearly state the basis of the billing. Bills for the attorneys' fees portion of the bill must include the amount, rate, basis for calculation, or other method of determination of the attorneys' fees and costs. Bills for costs and expenses portion of the bill must clearly identify the costs and expenses incurred and the amount of the costs and expenses [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(b)].

On request by the client, the attorney must provide a bill to the client no later than 10 days following the request unless the attorney has provided a bill to the client within the preceding 31 days. In the latter situation, the attorney may provide a bill to the client within 31 days after the most recent bill was provided. The client may make billing requests at intervals of no less than 30 days following the initial request. An attorney responding to a client's request for billing information, the attorney may use billing data that is currently effective on the date of the request. Fees or costs that cannot be accurately determined must be described and estimated to the client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(b)].

[c] Exceptions to Writing and Content Requirements

The writing and content requirements discussed in [a] and [b], above, do not apply in the following situations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)]:

- Services rendered in an emergency to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the rights or interests of the client, or when a writing is otherwise impractical.

- A fee arrangement implied by the fact that the attorney's services are of the same general kind as previously rendered to and paid for by the client.

- If the client knowingly states in writing, after full disclosure of the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148, that a writing concerning fees is not required.

- If the client is a corporation.

These writing and content requirements also are inapplicable to contingency fee contracts for the recovery of claims between merchants [see Com. Code § 2104] arising from the sale or lease of goods or services rendered, or money loaned for use, in the conduct of a business or profession if the merchant contracting for legal services employs 10 or more individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Even when not required, counsel is advised to send an engagement letter limiting the scope of the representation to the obligations intended to be assumed. The letter should state that counsel makes no guarantees or representations regarding the outcome of the case. Further, it is advisable to state clearly the obligations of the parties under the agreement, including a clause requiring the client's cooperation.

[d] Effect of Noncompliance

The failure to comply with any of the above writing or execution requirements set forth in [a] and [b], above, renders the fee agreement voidable at the option of the client. However, if the agreement is voided, the attorney is still entitled to collect a reasonable fee for his or her services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(c)].

[3] Retainer Fee Agreements

A "retainer fee arrangement" exists when a client pays an attorney a specific sum of money to secure that attorney's availability over a given period of time. The attorney earns the retainer as soon as it is paid, since he or she is entitled to the money regardless of whether or not any legal services are actually performed for the client [Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 164 n.4, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] . Retainer fee arrangements are commonly used by attorneys with tax and/or business planning practices whose clients often call with brief questions that are easily handled over the telephone and for which the attorneys prefer not to bill directly.

Retainer fee agreements are distinct from advance fee payments. An "advance fee payment" is usually made to cover costs, expenses, or services in connection with a particular case or undertaking (such as the incorporation of a business). The money advanced under this type of arrangement is not earned until the legal service involved is actually performed. As a matter of practice, an attorney must deposit an advance fee payment in an interest bearing trust account [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A); see also Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 159, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] .

[4] Contingency Fee Contracts

[a] "Contingency Fee Contract" Defined

A "contingency fee contract" is an agreement for legal services under which the attorney is paid only if he or she attains a specified result for the client (such as securing a money judgment in the trial of a personal injury action). A contingent fee is generally paid out of the client's recovery in the action for which the attorney was retained. Contingency fee contracts are most frequently used by plaintiffs' attorneys who are able to analyze prospective clients' cases and evaluate the amount of work that will be involved, as well as the likelihood and extent of eventual recovery.

[b] Required Contents; Execution Requirements

All contingency fee contracts, other than those for the recovery of workers compensation benefits and the recovery of claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)], must be in writing and contain the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a), (c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(d) (effective January 1, 2000)]:

- The contingency fee rate on which the parties agreed.

- An explanation of the manner in which costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting or settling the claim will affect the contingency fee and the client's recovery.

- A statement to what extent, if any, the client may be required to compensate the attorney for related matters arising out of their relationship but not covered by the contingency fee contract. This statement may include any amounts collected for the plaintiff by the attorney.

- A statement that the fee is negotiable and not set by law, unless the action is for malpractice against a health care provider [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 (limitations on fees)].

- A statement that the rates set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 are the maximum limits for the contingency fee contract and that the parties may negotiate a lower rate if the action is for malpractice against a health care provider [see § 86A.202[2]].

An attorney who contracts to represent a client on a contingency fee basis must provide, at the time the contract is entered into, a duplicate copy of the contract, signed by both the attorney and the client, or the client's guardian or representative, to the plaintiff, or to the client's guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)].

[c] Exceptions to Writing and Content Requirements

The writing and content requirements discussed in this section do not apply to contingency fee contracts for the recovery of workers' compensation benefits [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(c)].

Further, these writing and content requirements do not apply to contingency fee contracts for the recovery of claims between merchants [see Com. Code § 2104] arising from the sale or lease of goods or services rendered, or money loaned for use, in the conduct of a business or profession if the merchant contracting for legal services employs 10 or more individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)]. When no written contract for legal services exists in this context, statutory ceilings limit the amount of contingency fees that may be contracted for and collected [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(b)].

[d] Limitations on Enforceability of Contingency Fee Contracts

Courts will not enforce an unreasonable contingency fee contract. The reasonableness of a contingent fee is determined in light of circumstances as they appeared to the parties at the time the contract was executed [Setzer v. Robinson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 213, 218, 18 Cal. Rptr. 524, 368 P.2d 124] . A 35-percent contingent fee ordinarily is considered reasonable, but a 70-percent contingent fee is excessive and a contract providing for a fee of that size will not be enforced [see Jackson v. Campbell (1932) 215 Cal. 103, 106, 8 P.2d 845] .

Certain statutory and public policy restrictions apply to contingency fee contracts and may affect their enforceability. For example, a contingency fee contract between an attorney and the petitioner in a marital dissolution proceeding is generally void as against the public policy favoring the preservation of marriages [see Coons v. Kary (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 650, 652-653, 69 Cal. Rptr. 712] . However, a contingency fee contract between an attorney and a respondent may be enforceable if it was executed after the dissolution action was instituted and an analysis of the circumstances (such as the existence of any possibility of a reconciliation) indicates that upholding the contract would not frustrate applicable public policy [see Krieger v. Bulpitt (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 97, 100-101, 251 P.2d 673] .

A provision in a contingency fee agreement barring the client from settling the case without the attorney's consent probably is void as against public policy. A lawsuit belongs to the client, not the attorney, and the client therefore has the right to discharge it at will. In an early case, the court held that provisions in a contingency fee agreement that prohibited the client or the attorney from settling the case without the consent and knowledge of the other, and that imposed a penalty for dismissing the suit without the attorney's consent, were void as against public policy [Hall v. Orloff (1920) 49 Cal. App. 745, 749 (attorney's measure of recovery after client abandons case is reasonable value of services rendered)]. However, another court upheld a provision that did not prevent the client from settling the case at any time, but instead provided for payment of an agreed amount to the attorney on the client's settlement [Klein v. Lange (1928) 91 Cal. App. 400, 405, 267 P. 130 (parties attempted to deprive attorney of contractual fees)]. The reasonableness of the contractual fees was not at issue in the latter case, and a contrary holding could result if a contractual fee provision operated to require an unreasonable or unconscionable fee under the circumstances of a settlement [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(A) (prohibition against charging unconscionable fees); see also § 86A.16[1]]. Subsequently, the California Supreme Court declined to decide whether a contract provision requiring the attorney's approval of settlement was void because of the fact that no settlement had been attempted in the case. However, the court stated that an invalid approval provision would not necessarily invalidate the compensation features of the contract if they were otherwise lawful, and that the approval provision could be challenged only when the attorney sued on it [Calvert v. Stoner (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 97, 104-105, 199 P.2d 297] . Because of the questionable validity of attorney approval provisions, the contingency fee agreements in this chapter do not require counsel's approval for settlement.

When representing the plaintiff in a malpractice action against a health care provider, an attorney is limited to the recovery of specified amounts as contingent fees [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146; see also §§ 86A.16[4], 86A.130]. The recovery of contingency fees may also be limited in claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5; see also §§ 86A.16[5], 86A.130].

[e] Effect of Noncompliance

The failure to comply with any of the writing requirements set forth in [a] and [b], above, renders the contingent fee agreement voidable at the option of the client. However, if the agreement is voided, the attorney is still entitled to collect a reasonable fee for his or her services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(b)].

[5] Other Types of Retention Agreements

Attorneys may combine selected features of retainers, advance fee payments, and contingency fee contracts to form hybrid retention agreements. For example, attorneys commonly agree to agree to represent a client for an advance fee payment to cover costs with any additional compensation contingent on the attorney's achieving a specified result for the client. When creating a hybrid type of contract for legal services it is important to keep accurate records of all sums received from the client and to separately identify amounts that constitute fees already earned by the attorney and amounts that constitute the client's property. After identifying these funds, the attorney must deposit them in appropriate separate accounts [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)].

Some attorneys charge hourly fees or flat rates (such as a specified amount for drafting a will) for all services they perform. These types of agreements afford simplicity from administrative and bookkeeping standpoints. However, if an attorney does not vary the rates charged, he or she might be criticized for failing to weigh the considerations for setting reasonable fees set forth in the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(B); see also § 86A.16[1]].

[6] Translation of Contract

Any attorney who negotiates a contract for legal services primarily in a language other than English may have to provide the client with a translation of the contract in that other language. For contracts entered into prior to July 1, 2004, this requirement applied only to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish. On and after July 1, 2004, it is applicable to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, or Korean [see Civ. Code § 1632]. Contracts containing a statement of fees or charges for legal services are specifically subject to these requirements [Civ. Code § 1632 (b)(6)]. The translation, when required, must be delivered prior to execution of the agreement [Civ. Code § 1632 (b)]. The translation must include a translation of every term and condition in the agreement [Civ. Code § 1632 (b)].

The translation requirement does not apply if the person purchasing the attorney's services has participated in the negotiations through his or her own interpreter [Civ. Code § 1632(h) ("interpreter"defined)]. Failure to comply with these requirements gives the aggrieved party the right to rescind the contract [Civ. Code § 1632(k)].

The terms of the contract or agreement that is executed in the English language will determine the rights and obligations of the parties. However, the Spanish-language translation of the contract is admissible in evidence, but only to show that no contract was entered into because of a substantial difference in the material terms and conditions of the contract and the translation [Civ. Code § 1632(j)].

For a more detailed discussion of these translation requirements, and related requirements, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.64.

[7] Fee Agreement Is Confidential

A written fee agreement between counsel and client is deemed to be a confidential communication within the meaning of Evid. Code § 952 and an attorney's duty to keep client matters confidential [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6149; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.12

§ 86A.12 Nature of Attorney-Client Relationship

[1] Attorney-Client Relationship Likened to That of Principal and Agent

The attorney-client relationship is most often characterized as an agent-principal arrangement [see Yanchor v. Kagan (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 544, 549, 99 Cal. Rptr. 367] . Any person who has the capacity to enter into contracts with others may appoint an agent [Civ. Code § 2296] and, accordingly, may employ an attorney [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions , for information regarding capacity to contract]. However, in limited situations, usually involving insurance defense counsel, attorneys are independent contractors responsible for their own conduct and are not subject to their employers' control or direction over the detail and manner of their performance [see Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 880, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511 (trial counsel); but see Casselman v. Hartford A. and I. Co. (1940) 36 Cal. App. 2d 700, 711-714, 98 P.2d 539 (counsel conducting investigation for insurance company)].

[2] Attorney as Fiduciary

An attorney owes a fiduciary obligation to the client, who under the law of agency is generally bound by the attorney's actions on his or her behalf [Houston General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904 ; see Civ. Code § 2305]. Because the nature of the attorney-client relationship is inherently confidential, the Rules of Professional Conduct limit an attorney's ability to accept certain employment [see [3], below].

No fiduciary duties are owed to a prospective client before entering into an attorney-client relationship, although counsel owes the prospective client the duty of confidentiality concerning any communication necessary to locating and selecting the attorney. Thus, attorneys may negotiate compensation and thestructure of the attorney-client relationship with clients in an arm's-length transaction, except when statutes and rules specifically provide to the contrary [see Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 913 (in general, negotiation of fee agreement is arm's-length transaction)]. Once the attorney-client relationship begins, however, counsel owes the client fiduciary duties of the highest character [see Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 189-190, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837 ; Clancy v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 140, 146-148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 657, 454 P.2d 329] . The critical nature of a fiduciary or confidential relationship is that the parties do not deal on equal terms: the person in whom the trust and confidence is reposed and who accepts that trust and confidence is in a superior position to exert unique influence over the dependent party [see Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 383, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422] .

[3] Prohibition Against Representing Conflicting Interests

[a] Disclosure of Existence of Adverse Interest

An attorney is not permitted to accept or continue representation of a client without first providing written disclosure to the client when any of the following situations exist [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B)]:

- Counsel has a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a party or witness in the same matter;

- Counsel knows or reasonably should know that counsel previously had a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a party or witness in the same matter and that previous relationship would substantially affect the member's representation;

- Counsel has or had a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with another person or entity that counsel knows or reasonably should know would be affected substantially by resolution of the matter; or

- Counsel has or had a legal, business, financial, or professional interest in the subject matter of the representation.

The written disclosure must inform the client or former client of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences to the client or former client as a result of the attorney's representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(A)(1)]. The foregoing requirements are intended to apply only to the attorney's own relationships or interests, unless the attorney knows that a partner or associate in his or her firm has or had a relationship with another party or witness or has or had an interest in the subject matter of the representation [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, Discussion].

[b] Obtaining Informed Consent to Representation

In addition to disclosing the existence and nature of any adverse interest [see [a], above], the attorney must also obtain the informed consent of the client or former client to the representation. "Informed consent," for this purpose, means the client's or former client's written agreement to the representation following written disclosure [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(A)(2)].

Absent the informed written consent of each client, an attorney may not do any of the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)]:

- Accept representation of more than one client in a matter in which the interests of the clients potentially conflict;

- Accept or continue representation of more than one client in a matter in which the interests of the clients actually conflict; or

- Represent a client in a matter, and at the same time in a separate matter accept as a client a person or entity whose interest in the first matter is adverse to the client in the first matter. This restriction applies to representation s of clients in both litigation and transactional matters [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, Discussion].

The first two limitations above apply to all types of legal employment, including the concurrent representation of multiple parties in litigation or in a single transaction, or in some other common enterprise or legal relationship. Examples of the latter include the formation of a partnership for several partners or a corporation for several shareholders, the preparation of an antenuptial agreement, or joint or reciprocal wills for a husband and wife [see § 86A.211 (estate planning letter explaining dual representation of spouses)], or the resolution of an "uncontested" marital dissolution [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, Discussion].

An attorney who represents two or more clients may not enter into an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against the clients, without the informed written consent of each client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(D)].

Absent the client's informed written consent, an attorney or law firm may not represent an interest adverse to a client or former client if that interest relates to a matter regarding which the attorney or firm obtained confidential information in the course of his or her employment [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)].

Otherwise, neither the disclosure of the new engagement to a former client or the consent of the former client to the new engagement is required [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, Discussion].

Finally, an attorney cannot represent parties with conflicting interests if litigation is commenced or contemplated, regardless of whether the parties consent [see American Box & Drum Co. v. Harron (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 370, 373, 112 P.2d 332] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Potential clients may be unaware of the extent to which their interests conflict and may seek representation by a single attorney to save legal fees. For example, parties to a marital dissolution often agree between themselves regarding property division, support, and related matters and wish to retain an attorney only to reduce their agreement to writing and obtain a court order. The parties may be unaware of the tax or other consequences of their agreement and an attorney who advises them on these matters risks violating the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B)].

[4] Attorney's Duty to Communicate With Client

Once the attorney-client relationship is formed, attorneys are obligated to communicate with their clients in the following respects:

- Communicate all facts and circumstances necessary to enable the client to make free and intelligent decisions regarding the subject matter of the representation [Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406] .

- Communicate all information the attorney has or may acquire in relation to the subject matter of the transaction [see Beery v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 802, 812-813] .

- Advise the client of significant developments in the client's case and respond to client status inquiries [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500].

- Convey to the client the terms and conditions of any settlement offer [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.13

§ 86A.13 Scope of Attorney's Authority

[1] Authority to Bind Client Governed by Agency Principles

An attorney has the authority to bind his or her client in all matters (for example, filing pleadings and compromising cases) regarding the regular conduct of a case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 283(1)]. Unless the client files a revocation of authority, an attorney may receive money claimed by the client either during the pendency of an action or after judgment is entered and then may discharge the client's claim or acknowledge satisfaction of a judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 283(2)].

The authority of an attorney to bind a client by agreement or stipulation is governed by the principles of agency, and the client is bound by the acts of the attorney-agent within the scope of his or her actual, express or implied, or ostensible authority. The client is also bound by unauthorized acts that he or she ratifies [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 403-404 , & n.2, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

A rebuttable presumption arises that an attorney who appears for a litigant has authority to perform all acts incidental to the conduct of the case [Clark Equip. Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 523, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874] . Accordingly, it is possible for an attorney's fraudulent or malicious acts in conducting litigation to be imputed to the client [see Clark Equipment Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 523, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 ; see also Tool Research & Engineering v. Henigson (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 675, 120 Cal. Rptr. 291 , overruled on other grounds, Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 877-878, 254 Cal. Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] .

Merely by virtue of his or her employment, an attorney is authorized to bind the client in procedural matters. Thus, stipulations that are necessary or incidental to tactical matters--the management of the case--that affect only the procedure or remedy, as distinguished from the cause of action itself and the essential rights of the client, are binding on the client [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 403-404, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] . An attorney must be able to make tactical decisions, such as whether to call a particular witness, and the court and opposing counsel must be able to rely on these decisions, even when the client voices opposition in open court [see Nahhas v. Pacific Greyhound Lines, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 145, 146, 13 Cal. Rptr. 299] .

[2] Impairment of Client's Rights or Cause of Action

An attorney is not authorized to impair a client's substantial rights or the cause of action itself. These are matters that differ from routine and tactical or procedural decisions in the degree to which they affect the client's interest, and involve matters of judgment that extend beyond the technical so that any client would be expected to share in them. For example, the attorney must be specifically authorized to settle and compromise a claim because the employment relationship gives no implied or ostensible authority to do so. Similarly, an attorney may not stipulate to a matter that would eliminate an essential defense, agree to the entry of a default judgment, stipulate that only nominal damages may be awarded, or agree to an increase in the amount of a judgment against the client, or waive findings so that no appeal can be made [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 404-405, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; see, e.g., Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 277, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 (attorney exceeds his or her authority by waiving client's substantial right, such as right to testify, contrary to client's instructions)].

[3] Contracting on Behalf of Client

Absent express authority, an attorney does not have implied plenary authority to contract on behalf of the client. That authority is not enlarged because the contract is entered into in conjunction with pending litigation. Thus, for example, an attorney does not have apparent authority to bind the client to an agreement for arbitration merely by virtue of the attorney-client relationship. When a client engages an attorney to litigate in a judicial forum, the client has a right to be consulted, and his or her consent must be obtained before the dispute can be transferred to another and quite different forum [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 407-408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; see, e.g., Nellis v. Massey (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 724, 728, 239 P. 2d 509 (attorney, retained as advisor or negotiator, lacks power to enter into contracts on client's behalf, absent specific written authority)].

[4] Settlement Authority

An attorney must promptly communicate to his or her client any written settlement offer. This communication is discoverable by either party in any action in which the existence or communication of the settlement offer is an issue before the trier of fact [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103.5].

An attorney who settles a client's case without specific authority from the client may be disciplined, even if the settlement was fair and the client suffered no damage. These considerations do not excuse the attorney's wrongful conduct [Trousil v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 337, 342, 211 Cal. Rptr. 525, 695 P.2d 1066] .

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.14

§ 86A.14 Business Transactions With Clients

An attorney may not enter into a business transaction with a client, or knowingly acquire an ownership, possessory, security, or other pecuniary interest adverse to a client, unless each of the following requirements has been satisfied [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300]:

- The transaction or acquisition and its terms are fair and reasonable to the client and are fully disclosed and transmitted in writing to the client in a manner that should reasonably have been understood by the client;

- The client is advised in writing that he or she may seek the advice of an independent lawyer of the client's choice and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek that advice; and

- The client thereafter consents in writing to the terms of the transaction or the terms of the acquisition.

Rule 3-300 is intended to apply when an attorney wishes to obtain an interest in client's property in order to secure the amount of the member's past due or future fees. This rule is not intended to apply to the agreement by which an attorney is retained by the client, unless the agreement confers on the attorney an ownership, possessory, security, or other pecuniary interest adverse to the client, which is subject in part, to Rule 4-200 [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300 (discussion); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200]. Further, Rule 3-300 is not intended to apply when counsel and client each make an investment on terms offered to the general public or a significant portion of the public. For example, Rule 3-300 is not intended to apply when an attorney invests in a limited partnership syndicated by a third party and the counsel's client makes the same investment. Although both attorney and client are investing in the same business, counsel has not entered into the transaction "with" the client for the purposes of the rule [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300 (discussion)].

All dealings between an attorney and his or her client are subject to strict judicial scrutiny when they benefit the attorney. When this type of transaction is challenged, the attorney has the burden of proving that it was fair and that the client fully knew and understood its terms [see Clancy v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 140, 146-147, 77 Cal. Rptr. 657, 454 P.2d 329] .

PRACTICE TIP:

By its terms, Rule 3-300 does not apply to a new prospective client with whom the attorney has not formed a relationship [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300]. If a dissatisfied client attempts to void a transaction with his or her attorney, the attorney's burden of proving the client's subjective understanding is very difficult.

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.15

§ 86A.15 Sexual Relations With Clients

In a relationship with a client, an attorney is subject to discipline for doing any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.9(a); see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-120(B)]:

- Require or demand sexual relations with a client incident to or as a condition of any professional representation;

- Using coercion, intimidation, or undue influence in entering into sexual relations with a client; or

- Continuing to represent a client with whom the attorney has sexual relations if the sexual relations cause the attorney to perform legal services incompetently [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110].

These prohibitions do not apply to sexual relations between attorneys and their spouses, or to ongoing consensual relationships that predate the initiation of the attorney-client relationship [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.9(b); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-120(C)]. Although this exception excludes representation of certain clients from the scope of Rule 3-120, this exclusion is not intended to preclude the applicability of other Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rule 3-110 [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-120 (discussion); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110]. Further, if a lawyer in a firm has sexual relations with a client but does not participate in the representation of that client, the lawyers in the firm are not subject to discipline under this rule solely because of the occurrence of those sexual relations.

"Sexual relations" means sexual intercourse or the touching of an intimate part of another person for the purpose of sexual arousal, gratification, or abuse [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.9(d); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-120(A)].

Rule 3-120 is intended to prohibit sexual exploitation by a lawyer in the course of a professional representation. In all client matters, attorneys are advised to keep clients' interests paramount in the course of the representation. Often, based on the nature of the underlying representation, a client exhibits great emotional vulnerability and dependence on the advice and guidance of counsel. Because attorneys owe the utmost duty of good faith and fidelity to clients [see, e.g., Greenbaum v. State Bar (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 893, 903, 126 Cal. Rptr. 785, 544 P.2d 921] , and the relationship between an attorney and client is a fiduciary relationship of the very highest character, all dealings between an attorney and client that are beneficial to the attorney will be closely scrutinized with the utmost strictness for unfairness [see, e.g., Giovanazzi v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 465, 472, 169 Cal. Rptr. 581, 619 P.2d 1005 ; Benson v. State Bar (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 581, 586, 119 Cal. Rptr 297, 531 P.2d 1081] . When attorneys exercise undue influence over clients or take unfair advantage of clients, discipline is appropriate [see, e.g., Magee v. State Bar (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 423, 24 Cal. Rptr. 839, 374 P.2d 807] .

For purposes Rule 3-120, if the client is an organization, any individual overseeing the representation is deemed to be the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-120 (discussion); see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-600]. Any complaint made to the State Bar alleging a violation of the bar against sexual relations with a client must be verified under oath by the person making the complaint [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.9(e)].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.16

§ 86A.16 Fees

[1] Unconscionable Fees Prohibited

Attorneys are prohibited from charging or collecting illegal or unconscionable fees for their services [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(A)]. The unconscionability of a fee agreement is determined on the basis of all the facts and circumstances existing when the agreement is entered into, except when the parties contemplate that the fee will be affected by later events. When appropriate, the following factors are among those to be considered in determining the conscionability of a fee [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(B); see Cline v. Zappettini (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 723, 728, 281 P.2d 35] :

- The amount of the fee in proportion to the value of the services performed.
- The relative sophistication of the attorney and the client.
- The novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill required to properly perform the legal service.
- The likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the attorney will be precluded from other employment by representing the client.
- The amount involved and the results obtained.
- The time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances.
- The nature and length of the professional relationship with the client.
- The experience, reputation, and ability of the attorney or attorneys performing the services.
- Whether the fee is fixed or contingent.

- The time and labor required to perform the service.
- The informed consent of the client to the fee agreement.

An attorney cannot unilaterally determine his or her own fee and withhold funds held in trust for a client in order to satisfy it [Most v. State Bar (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 589, 597, 63 Cal. Rptr. 265, 432 P.2d 953] . Counsel should ensure that the client is aware, at the outset of their relationship, of exactly what the legal fees will be, or on what factors they will be based. The parties may modify the fee arrangement in a written contract. However, absent modification, the arrangement remains binding even if the attorney made a bad bargain and the legal services are reasonably worth more than the agreed price [see Reynolds v. Sorosis Fruit Co. (1901) 133 Cal. 625, 629, 66 P. 21] .

If the parties enter into a contract for compensation at the time the attorney-client relationship is established, the contract is enforceable without a showing by the attorney that the contract is fair and openly made [Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 637, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144] . However, fee contracts made after the creation of the attorney-client relationship are presumed to be entered into under undue influence [Carlson, Collins, Gordon & Bold v. Banducci (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 212, 226-227, 64 Cal. Rptr. 915] . A court scrutinizing the agreement will require the attorney to offer clear and satisfactory evidence that the client was fully informed of all pertinent facts so that the client was able to act understandingly with the attorney [Cline v. Zappettini (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 281 P.2d 35] .

PRACTICE TIP:

If the parties fail to include a fee provision in the retention contract, a court may award the attorney reasonable fees based on an implied contract theory [see Cowen v. Calabrese (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 870, 872, 41 Cal. Rptr. 441] . Special rules limit the maximum permissible contingent fee in a medical malpractice action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146]. For discussion of these rules, see § 86A.16[4].

[2] Contracting With Minors

Contracts to perform legal services for or on behalf of minors are subject to the general rules governing minors' contracts. For discussion of minors' contracts generally, see Ch. 100B, Contracts and Employment of Minors . In addition, Fam. Code § 6602 provides that a contract for attorneys' fees for services in litigation, made by or on behalf of a minor, is void unless the contract is approved, on petition by an interested person, by the court in which the litigation is pending or by the court having jurisdiction of the guardianship estate of the minor. If the contract is not approved and a judgment is recovered by or on behalf of the minor, the attorneys' fees chargeable against the minor will be fixed by the court rendering the judgment [Fam. Code § 6602]. For further discussion and forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem (Matthew Bender).

[3] Written Consent of Client Required for Fee Sharing Agreements

The Rules of Professional Conduct require written client consent to fee sharing between attorneys [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200; see also Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 162 n.163, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536, 56 P. 3d 645 (Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 barred plaintiff attorney from sharing in fees due to noncompliance with written client consent requirement); Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 903, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502 (attorney who made case referral to another attorney had no viable contract for fee-sharing when contract did not comply with Rule 2-200)]. Specifically, an attorney may not divide a fee for legal services with a lawyer who is not a partner of, associate of, or shareholder of that attorney unless (1) the client has consented in writing to the arrangement after a full disclosure has been made in writing that a division of fees will be made and the terms of that division; and (2) the total fee charged by all lawyers is not increased solely by reason of the fee sharing and is not unconscionable as that term [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A); see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200; see also [1], above].

However, in the absence of written client consent to an agreement between law firms to divide fees, a law firm that is barred from dividing fees under Rule 2-200 may nevertheless recover from the other law firm in quantum meruit for the reasonable value of services it rendered on the client's behalf [Huskinson & Brown, LLP v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 464, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379 (court emphasized holding did not increase attorney fees paid or owed by client)].

With the exception of proper fee sharing arrangements and purchases of law practices [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-300], an attorney may not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any lawyer for the purpose of recommending or securing employment of the attorney or the attorney's law firm by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the attorney or the attorney's law firm. An attorney who offers or gives a gift or gratuity to any lawyer who has made a recommendation resulting in the employment of that attorney or his or her firm does not constitute a per se violation of this rule, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming, or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(B)].

[4] Monetary Limitations Applicable to Malpractice Suits Against Health Care Providers

Contingency fees for representing plaintiffs in malpractice actions against health care providers are limited to the following maximum amounts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a)]:

- 40 percent of the first $50,000 recovered;
- 331/3 percent of the next $50,000 recovered;
- 25 percent of the next $500,000 recovered; and
- 15 percent of any amount by which the recovery exceeds $600,000.

These limitations apply regardless of whether the amounts are recovered by settlement, arbitration, or judgment, or whether the person for whom the recovery is made is a responsible adult, an infant, or a person of unsound mind [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a)]. "Recovered" means the net sum recovered after deducting any disbursements or costs incurred in connection with prosecution or settlement of the claim. However, costs of medical care incurred by the plaintiff and the attorney's office-overhead costs or charges are not deductible disbursements or costs for this purpose [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(1)].

If the plaintiff receives periodic payments, for example, under a structured settlement/annuity arrangement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667.7], the court will place a total value on the payments based on the plaintiff's life expectancy and will include that amount in computing the attorneys' fees [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(b)]. For a contingent fee contract to be used in medical malpractice actions, see § 86A.202.

The term "health care providers" includes doctors, dentists, lab technicians, chiropractors, osteopaths, speech pathologists, audiologists, nurses, veterinarians, and licensed clinics, health dispensaries, or health facilities [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(2); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 500 et seq.]. The term also encompasses the legal representatives of a health care provider [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(2)]. The term "professional negligence" refers to a negligent act or omission to act by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services that is the proximate cause of personal injury or wrongful death, provided that the services are (1) within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed and (2) outside any restriction imposed by the licensing agency or licensed hospital [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(3)].

[5] Monetary Limitations Applicable to Recovery of Claims Between Merchants

Bus. & Prof Code §§ 6147 and 6148, discussed in § 86A.11[2] and [4], do not apply to contingency fee contracts for the recovery of claims between merchants [see Com. Code § 2104], arising from the sale or lease of goods or services rendered, or money loaned for use, in the conduct of a business or profession if the merchant contracting for legal services employs 10 or more individuals [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)]. If no written contract for legal services exists, an attorney may not contract for or collect a contingency fee in excess of the following limits [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(b)]:

- 20 percent of the first $300 collected.
- 18 percent of the next $1,700 collected.
- 13 percent of sums collected in excess of $2,000.

An attorney is permitted to charge and collect the following minimum fees [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(b)]:

- $25 in collections of $75 to $125.
- 331/3 percent of collections less than $75.

[6] Attorneys' Liens

An attorney may establish a lien to secure his or her fees on the judgment or property obtained as a result of the attorney's services. If a contingent fee contract does not contain express language creating an attorney's lien, whether or not a lien exists is a question of fact involving a determination of the parties' intentions [Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v. Shivener (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 364, 370, 105 Cal. Rptr. 445] . The parties need not use the word "lien" in their contract to create a lien. An implied equitable lien exists if the parties agree that the attorney is to look to the judgment as security for fees [see Wagner v. Sariotti (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 693, 697, 133 P.2d 430] .

An attorney may enforce a contractual lien in an independent action against the client, but a discharged attorney may not intervene in the main action to enforce the lien [Bandy v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 126 Cal. Rptr. 890] . However, no independent action is necessary to divide attorney fees between former and current counsel. In Curtis v. Estate of Fagan, a minor's current attorney filed a petition for compromise, seeking attorneys' fees and costs, and former counsel filed a lien claiming fees under a theory of quantum meruit. Current counsel argued that the court had no jurisdiction to divide fees. The trial court divided fees between the two attorneys. The appellate court affirmed, concluding that attorney fees could be divided in the main action, eliminating the need for a separate action [Curtis v. Estate of Fagan (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 270, 279, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84] .

A party to a family law action may encumber his or her interest in community real property to pay reasonable attorneys' fees. This encumbrance is known as a "family law attorney's real property lien" [Fam. Code § 2033(a)]. The lien may be limited for good cause, or may be denied if the encumbrance would likely result in an unequal division of property [Fam. Code § 2034(a)]. For a detailed discussion of the family law attorney's real property lien, see Ch. 125, Provisions for Payment of Income Taxes, Attorneys' Fees, and Costs .

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.17

§ 86A.17 Handling Client's Funds

[1] Use of Trust Accounts

An attorney must deposit all funds that he or she receives for a client's benefit, including advances for costs and expenses, in a bank account designated as "Trust Account," "Client's Fund Account," or other similar title. These trust accounts must be maintained in California unless there is a substantial relationship between the client and another jurisdiction and the client consents in writing to the establishment of a trust account in that jurisdiction [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(A)].

An attorney is prohibited from commingling his or her own funds with those of the client except to the extent reasonably necessary to pay bank charges, or to the extent that both the client and attorney have an interest in those funds. In the latter case, the attorney must withdraw his or her portion of the funds from the trust account as soon as the respective interests become fixed. However, if the client disputes the attorney's interest in the funds, they may not be withdrawn from the trust account until the dispute is resolved [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(A)].

An attorney must promptly notify a client when he or she receives property on the client's behalf [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(B)(1)]. If the attorney receives securities or other property, the attorney must label that property and place it in a safe deposit box as soon as practicable [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(B)(2)]. An attorney must maintain complete records of all funds, securities, and other properties of a client coming into the possession of the attorney or law firm and render appropriate accounts to the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(B)(3); see [3], below]. Counsel must promptly pay or deliver, as requested by the client, any funds, securities, or other properties in the attorney's possession that the client is entitled to receive [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(B)(4)].

[2] Use of Demand Trust Accounts

An attorney or law firm that receives or disburses trust funds must establish and maintain an Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts (IOLTA). The attorney or law firm must deposit or invest in this account all client deposits or funds that are nominal in amount or invested for a short time period [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211(a)]. Interest and dividends earned on these accounts are paid to the State Bar of California to fund legal services programs for the indigent [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211(a); see generally Bus. & Prof. Code § 6210 et seq.].

Financial institutions that are depositories for attorney trust accounts under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211 must report to the State Bar if any properly payable instrument is presented against an attorney trust account containing insufficient funds, whether or not the instrument is honored [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.2(a) ("financial institution" defined)]. If the payment instrument is honored, the report must include specific information regarding the parties to the transaction, the date and amount of payment presented, and the amount of the overdraft [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1(b)(2)]. If the instrument is dishonored, the report must be identical to the overdraft notice customarily forwarded to the customer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1(b)(1)].

[3] Recordkeeping Requirements

An attorney must maintain complete records of all funds, securities, and other properties of a client coming into the possession of the attorney or law firm and render appropriate accounts to the client. The attorney must preserve these records for a period of no less than five years after final appropriate distribution of the funds or properties, and comply with any order for an audit issued pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(B)(3)].

Specifically, an attorney must maintain all of the following from the date of receipt of client funds through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of the funds [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(C)(1)]:

- A written ledger for each client on whose behalf funds are held stating:
    - The client's name;
    - The date, amount, and source of all funds received on behalf of the client;
    - The date, amount, payee and purpose of each disbursement made on behalf of the client; and
    - The current balance for the client.
- A written journal for each bank account setting forth:
    - The name of the account;
    - The date, amount, and client affected by each debit and credit; and
    - The current balance in the account.
- All bank statements and canceled checks for each bank account.
- Each monthly reconciliation (balancing) of the three preceding materials.

An attorney must maintain, from the date of receipt of all securities and other properties held for the benefit of client through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of the securities or properties, a written journal specifying the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(C)(2)]:

- Each item of security and property held.
- The name of the person on whose behalf the security or property is held.

- The date of receipt of the security or property.
- The date of distribution of the security or property.
- The name of the person to whom the security or property was distributed.

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.18

§ 86A.18 Termination of Attorney-Client Relationship

[1] Mandatory Withdrawal of Counsel

The Rules of Professional Conduct specify the factual circumstances under which an attorney must withdraw from representing a client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B)]. Whether withdrawal is mandatory or permissive [see [2], below], an attorney may not withdraw from employment before taking reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, including giving due notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, returning property and unearned fees, and complying with applicable laws and rules [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2), (D); see Read v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 394, 279 Cal. Rptr. 818, 807 P.2d 1047 , as modified, 53 Cal. 3d 1009A (withdrawal without client consent or court approval without taking reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to client violates disciplinary rules); see also [5], below].

An attorney representing a client before a tribunal must withdraw from employment with the permission of the tribunal, if required by its rules, and an attorney representing a client in other matters must withdraw from employment, if [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B)]:

- Counsel knows or should know that the client is bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a litigation position, or taking an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person;

- Counsel knows or should know that continued employment will result in violation of these rules or of the State Bar Act; or

- Counsel's mental or physical condition renders it unreasonably difficult to carry out the employment effectively.

[2] Permissive Withdrawal of Counsel

[a] In General

When an attorney is acting for a client in a lawsuit or special proceeding, he or she may withdraw and another attorney may substitute in either with the consent of both attorney and client, or on a court order made pursuant to the application of either attorney or client [see Code Civ. Proc. § 284]. An attorney of record for a party to a domestic relations case may withdraw by serving appropriate notice on the client and adverse party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 285.1].

[b] Rules of Professional Conduct

The Rules of Professional Conduct outlining the factual circumstances under which an attorney may withdraw from representing a client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(c)]. Whether permissive or mandatory [see [1], above], an attorney may not withdraw from employment before taking reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, including giving due notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, returning property and unearned fees, and complying with applicable laws and rules [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2); see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D); see also [5], below].

If counsel is not mandated to withdraw [see [1], above], an attorney may not request permission to withdraw in matters pending before a tribunal, and may not withdraw in other matters, unless the request or withdrawal is based on one of the following circumstances [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(3)]:

- The client does one of the following:
    - Insists on presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.
    - Seeks to pursue an illegal course of conduct.
    - Insists that counsel pursue a course of conduct that is illegal or that is prohibited under these rules or the State Bar Act.
    - By other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for counsel to carry out the employment effectively.
    - Insists, in a matter not pending before a tribunal, that counsel engage in conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the counsel but not prohibited under the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act.
    - Breaches an agreement or obligation to the counsel as to expenses or fees.
- The continued employment is likely to result in a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or of the State Bar Act.
- The inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the best interests of the client likely will be served by withdrawal.
- Counsel's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for counsel to carry out the employment effectively.
- The client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the employment.
- Counsel believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.

[c] Entitlement to Fees

Unlike a discharged attorney [see [3], below], an attorney who voluntarily withdraws from a contingency fee arrangement is not entitled to recover for the reasonable value of his or her services, unless the withdrawal is a justified withdrawal [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1012-1014, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Hensel v. Cohen (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 563, 567-569, 202 Cal. Rptr. 85] . A withdrawal to comply with the ethics of professional conduct constitutes a justified withdrawal. However, the attorney has the burden of proving the following [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1016, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] :

- The withdrawal was mandatory, not merely permissive, under statute or state bar rules;
- The overwhelming and primary motivation for the withdrawal was the obligation to comply with ethical requirements;
- Counsel began the action in good faith;
- The client recovered on the claim after counsel withdrew; and
- Counsel's work contributed in some measurable degree to the client's ultimate recovery.

Although a client's exercise of the right to reject a settlement offer is not cause for a justified withdrawal, a client may be required to make restitution to the attorney under a theory of unjust enrichment if the client later accepts a settlement substantially similar to that negotiated by the attorney before his or her withdrawal [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1019, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] .

[3] Discharge of Counsel

A client may terminate the attorney-client relationship by discharging the attorney at will either with or without cause [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . An attorney who breaches the Rules of Professional Conduct and who, because of that breach, is rightfully discharged by his or her client, is entitled to compensation for services provided before the breach [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 12, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373 ; see also Pringle v. La Chapelle (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1005-1007, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 90 (although attorney failed to follow Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-600(E) regarding waiver of conflict, violation of rule does not automatically preclude attorney from obtaining fees)]. An attorney who is discharged without cause is similarly entitled to reasonable fees for services rendered until the time of discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 298, 304, 273 P.2d 15 (in contracts employing attorney for fixed fee, attorney may recover reasonable value of services performed to time of discharge when client wrongfully discharges attorney before completing contract)].

A discharged attorney's cause of action to recover compensation for services under a contingent fee contract does not accrue until the stated contingency (such as recovery of damages) occurs [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] .

PRACTICE TIP:

The amount of fees to which a discharged attorney is entitled does not depend on whether the client acted wrongfully or with cause in terminating the relationship [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] .

[4] Attorney-Client Relationship Otherwise Terminates When Services Completed

In most instances, the type of legal services involved and the scope of the employment determine when an attorney-client relationship terminates [see Kalmus v. Kalmus (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 405, 425, 230 P.2d 57 , cert. denied, 342 U.S. 903 (1952)] . For example, if an attorney is retained to litigate an action, the relationship ordinarily terminates when a judgment is entered. However, the terms of employment may provide otherwise, such as by requiring the attorney to take any action necessary to enforce the judgment [see Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676-677, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680] .

It may be difficult to identify the exact point at which an undertaking is accomplished. For example, a client may not believe that the attorney has fully performed unless the judgment is collected, while the attorney may believe that obtaining the judgment satisfies his or her obligation to the client and that he or she should be separately compensated for any collection efforts that are necessary. Accordingly, the retention agreement should clearly specify what services the attorney will perform.

Occurrences other than the resolution of a case or accomplishment of an undertaking can terminate the attorney-client relationship. In general, when a client dies, the attorney's authority to act on his or her behalf ends. An exception to this rule exists when the parties entered into a special contract of employment, such as a specific contract to conduct a suit to final judgment or an agreement on a fee for an entire case [Estate of Lanza (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724, 40 Cal. Rptr. 528] . When the attorney dies, the client may be required to either appoint another attorney or represent himself or herself [see Code Civ. Proc. § 286].

[5] Return of Property and Unearned Fees

An attorney whose employment has terminated must promptly release to the client, at the request of the client, all the client papers and property, subject to any protective order or non-disclosure agreement. "Client papers and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, exhibits, physical evidence, expert's reports, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)]. In addition, counsel must promptly refund any part of a fee paid in advance that has not been earned. However, this refund provision does not apply to a true retainer fee that is paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the member for the matter [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)].

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.19

§ 86A.19 Dispute Resolution Mechanisms

[1] Contractual Provision Permitted

Attorneys who prefer to resolve any dispute with a client in a forum other than the courts may wish to include a mediation or arbitration clause in the fee agreement or engagement letter. No statute, rule, or other provision of California law bars a lawyer and client from agreeing to mediate future disputes. However, ethical considerations may affect the enforceability of a mediation or arbitration agreement.

[2] Mediation

[a] Mediation Is Voluntary

The Board of Governors of the State Bar is authorized to establish, maintain, and administer a system and procedure for the mediation of fee and/or cost disputes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200]. Mediation, unlike arbitration, is voluntary for both clients and attorneys [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c); see [3], below]. The mediation process is based on direct negotiations between the attorney and his or her client, and is an extension of the negotiated settlement process. All discussions and offers of settlement are confidential and may not be disclosed in subsequent arbitration or other proceedings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(h)].

PRACTICE TIP:
Attorneys should check with their local bar associations to see if they have sponsored mediation systems.

[b] Advantages of Mediation

Mediation offers attorneys and clients an opportunity to resolve disputes in a confidential setting [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(h)]. Typically, mediation is the most flexible method to resolve conflicts between the parties, allowing for creative and specifically tailored methods. Further, mediation is ordinarily less expensive and faster than arbitration [see [3], below] or litigation.

[c] Disadvantages of Mediation

Because mediation is ordinarily a voluntary and non-binding process, a fee agreement or engagement letter may suggest that client and attorney agree to consensual mediation as a first means of dispute resolution. However, the parties should be cognizant of the fact that counsel will probably not be able to compel client mediation involuntarily if it would affect the client's rights to arbitrate a fee dispute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq.; see [3], below].

[d] Mediation Provisions

A lawyer or law firm may include a provision in a fee agreement or engagement letter by which client and lawyer agree to mediate their disputes before pursuing other dispute resolution procedures. For example, a fee agreement may provide that the client and lawyer agree to mediate future disputes about claims against the lawyer (such as attorney malpractice) or fees and costs. The agreement may also specify that the mediation will be conducted by a neutral mediator provided by a designated mediation service, specify a particular location, and specify the applicable mediation procedure. Further, the agreement may provide that the designated mediation service will select the mediator only if the parties fail to do so. Finally, the mediation provision may allocate the costs of mediation, such as by providing that each party will bear his or her own expenses.

[3] Arbitration

[a] State Bar Arbitration Program

The Board of Governors of the State Bar administers a fee and/or cost arbitration program [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(a)]. Under the program, the arbitrator may do take and hear evidence pertaining to the proceeding, administer oaths and affirmations, and compel, by subpoena, the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents pertaining to the proceeding [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(g)].

The arbitration program does not apply to any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a)]:

- Attorneys who are admitted to practice but do not maintain an office in California.
- Disputes in which the client charges the attorney with malpractice or professional misconduct.
- Disputes in which the attorneys' fees are determined by statute or court order.

Unless a client has agreed in writing to arbitration of all disputes concerning fees, costs, or both, arbitration is voluntary for a client. Arbitration is mandatory for an attorney, however, if arbitration is commenced by a client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c)]. With respect to fee and/or cost disputes involving allegations of malpractice or professional misconduct, evidence relating to those claims is admissible only to the extent that those claims bear on the fees and/or costs to which the attorney may be entitled. The arbitrators may not award affirmative relief, either in the form of damages, offset, or otherwise for injuries underlying those claims. However, they may award a refund of unearned prepaid fees [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a)].

[b] Advantages of Arbitration

The arbitration process has significant advantages for both attorney and client. In general, arbitration permits confidentiality, some flexibility and, in most cases, cost-effectiveness and speed, while avoiding the expense and stress of litigation. Advantages for attorneys include the following:

- Arbitration of professional liability issues can increase the likelihood of a more reasonable damage award against the attorney if liability is conceded or found by limiting the risk of a runaway jury award.

- In fee arbitrations, state or local bar fee arbitrators are precluded from considering any counterclaims or offsets for malpractice or other performance issues in any fee dispute. Thus, an attorney can resolve a fee dispute with a client in the fee arbitration forum while the client must independently initiate a legal malpractice or related claim in another forum.

[c] Strong Policy Favoring Enforcement of Arbitration Clauses

California has a strong policy favoring arbitration even when the decision causes substantial injustice and is contrary to public policy [see, e.g., Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 ; Beynon v. Garden Grove Medical Group (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 704, 161 Cal. Rptr. 146 (arbitration agreement must have been openly and fairly entered into to be enforceable)]. However, case law has consistently held that this strong policy favoring arbitration does not extend to issues beyond the scope of the arbitration agreement. The California Supreme Court has held that although a strong policy favors enforcing agreements to arbitrate, there is no policy compelling persons to accept arbitration of controversies that they have not agreed to arbitrate [Freeman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 473, 481, 121 Cal. Rptr. 477, 535 P.2d 341] .

When the scope of arbitration is in doubt and the case involves an issue in which there is a constitutional right to a jury trial, doubt should be resolved in favor of a trial by jury and against arbitration [Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies v. Younesi (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 451, 458-459 ; see Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1371-1372, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27] . The right to pursue claims in a judicial forum is a substantial right and one not lightly to be deemed waived. Because the parties to an arbitration clause surrender this substantial right, the general policy favoring arbitration cannot replace an agreement to arbitrate [Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1371-1372, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 (lawyers cannot be permitted to create presumption of arbitrability through all-purpose arbitration clauses in engagement agreements)].

[d] Arbitration Provisions

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c) provides that arbitration is voluntary for a client unless the client has agreed in writing to arbitration of all disputes concerning fees, costs, or both. Before its amendment, effective January 1, 1997, the fee arbitration statute expressly stated that fee arbitrations were voluntary for the client. The amendment thus permits an attorney and client to agree in a fee agreement or engagement letter to mandatory fee arbitration.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(a) provides that counsel and client may agree in writing to be bound by the award of the arbitrators at any time after a dispute over fees, costs, or both has arisen. Therefore, a fee agreement or engagement letter should not contain an agreement to binding arbitration.

PRACTICE TIP:

The language of an arbitration clause must clearly state what disputes are subject to arbitration. For example, in a family law matter, a court refused to compel arbitration of a client's legal malpractice claims, holding that the fee agreement was not clear enough to apprise the client that a legal malpractice claim was covered. The fee agreement required arbitration of disputes "regarding fees, costs or any other aspect of our attorney-client relationship." The court held that the agreement did not clearly put the client on notice that legal malpractice claims would be arbitrated [see Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1506-1508, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

1. Name, address, and telephone and fax numbers of client.

2. If client is business:

a. Form of business organization:

NOTE:
When business entities are involved, it is critical to identify who the actual client is, in order to help avoid conflicts of interest.

(1) Corporation or S corporation.

(2) General or limited partnership.

(3) Limited liability company.

(4) Limited liability partnership.

(5) Sole proprietorship.

b. Name, address, and telephone and fax numbers of business and principals.

3. If client is individual:

a. Age of client.

b. Marital status.

c. Number, age, names, and addresses of children.

4. Purpose of consultation, including all information about the work to be done.

NOTE:

Counsel should make an initial assessment as to any potential conflicts of interest at the early stages of the client interview before he or she elicits much substantive information from the prospective client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-100 et seq. (professional relationship with clients)].

5. Timing of consultation:

a. Status of transaction.

b. Whether contracting parties are already in agreement over proposed transaction.

6. Information as to client's experience with type of proposed transaction.

7. Information relating to other parties to proposed transaction or litigation.

a. Name, address, and telephone and fax numbers of parties.

b. If prospective client is party to pending civil action:

(1) Court and action number.

(2) If client is defendant, date on which he or she was served and how service was effected (e.g., mail or personal delivery).

c. If attorney will act as negotiator and/or advisor, whether other party to transaction is represented by counsel.

NOTE:

Parties to an apparently simple business transaction (e.g., the sale of a small business or the lease of a building) will sometimes consult an attorney to draft their agreement and obtain necessary licenses and permits. Typically, the parties will have negotiated the terms of the transaction before consulting an attorney. Attorneys should be cautious when in accepting this type of employment because, if the parties subsequently have a dispute regarding the terms of the transaction, the attorney may be charged by one or both with representing an adverse interest [see § 86A.12[3]].

1. If conservator, guardian, or other personal representative wants to retain attorney to perform legal services for conservatee or other charge, obtain documentary verification of person's capacity (e.g., letters of appointment).

2. If client is defendant in civil suit, obtain:

a. Copy of summons and proof of service.

b. Copy of original complaint and all amended complaints.

c. If substituting in or associating with present attorney of record:
(1) Substitution or association papers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 284].

(2) Entire court file and copy of prior attorney's or co-counsel's file.

d. Copies of all client's insurance policies and endorsements.

NOTE:

Regardless of whether or not an attorney believes an insurance policy would afford coverage for a specific action, he or she should always review the client's policies. Even if the client ultimately is not entitled to indemnity for an adverse judgment, he or she might still be entitled to a defense from the carrier [see *Gray v. 4. If client wants to pursue claim for property damage arising from automobile accident, accident and witness reports [see § 86A.204].

5. If client seeks representation with respect to real property matter:

a. Documentary proof of ownership (e.g., deed or other conveyance).

b. Title insurance report.

c. Any other documents necessary for particular matter (e.g., abstract of title).

6. If client seeks representation on matter affecting existing partnership:

a. Copy of partnership agreement, including all amendments.

b. Copies of any available and relevant financial documentation.

NOTE:

For analysis and forms regarding actions affecting partnerships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chs. 400-406 (Matthew Bender). For analysis and forms relating to general partnership formation and dissolution, see Ch. 15, General Partnerships . For analysis and forms relating to limited partnership formation and dissolution, see Ch. 15A, Limited Partnerships . For analysis and forms relating to limited liability partnership formation and dissolution, see Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships .

7. If client seeks representation on matter affecting existing corporation:

a. Copies of organizational documents.

b. Balance sheet.

c. Any other documents, such as permit for stock offering, appropriate to particular type of action.

NOTE:

For analysis and forms regarding actions affecting corporations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity , through Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender). For an analysis of the law and forms relating to corporate formation and dissolution, see Ch. 2, Formation of Corporations , and Ch. 12, Winding Up and Dissolution .

8. If client seeks advice regarding personal bankruptcy, list of client's assets and obligations [see Ch. 77, Discharge of Obligations].

9. If client wants to change form of existing business:

a. Copies of organizational documents.

b. Balance sheets from previous years.

NOTE:

The choice of business organization is often determined by tax considerations. Accordingly, an attorney should review an existing business' balance sheets for several years to determine whether a change in form would be beneficial [see Ch. 1B, Selecting Form of Business Entity , and Ch. 1E, Taxation of Businesses].

c. Any other documents, such as buy-sell agreement, that could be affected by change.

10. If client seeks advice regarding probate, will contest, or other estate matter:

a. Copy of will.

b. Copies of any applicable trust instruments.

b. Copy of any probate documents.

c. Copies of any appraisals.

11. If client seeks advice regarding marital dissolution, see Ch. 110, Marital Settlement Agreements , for a checklist of documents and information.

12. Copies of any other outstanding contracts that might affect transaction or litigation at issue.

B. Preliminary Determinations

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.110

§ 86A.110 Accepting Employment

1. If potential client seeks representation in matter involving litigation, determine whether:

a. Potential client has viable cause of action;

b. Suit would be premature; or

c. No evidence supports complaint.

2. If potential client seeks representation in business or other non-litigation matter, determine whether it is possible to perform desired services [see P 8, below].

3. Determine whether potential client has capacity to enter into contracts [see Ch. 75, Formation of Contracts and Standard Contractual Provisions].

NOTE:

If prospective clients are seeking to form a partnership and seek representation for the partnership, counsel must review whether there are sufficient indicia of an ostensible or oral partnership to permit counsel to represent the partnership in formation as an entity [see, e.g., Buehler v. Sbardellati (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1527] . If there is insufficient agreement among the partners as to the form of organization and their respective obligations and liabilities to each other, counsel may need to represent the individuals.

4. Ascertain whether potential client has interest adverse to [see § 86A.12[3]]:

a. Interest of present or former client regarding matter on which attorney obtained confidential information by reason of his or her employment [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(D)].

b. Interest of attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300].

5. Determine whether potential client or clients have conflicting interests [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B)].

NOTE:

An attorney must be scrupulous in identifying potentially conflicting interests. For example, a firm violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-102 if it undertakes the representation of a third person in suing a current client on a completely unrelated matter [see Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 10, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373] .

Counsel can check the office index to determine whether firm is representing an adverse party in the same or another action. This assessment should be completed early in the interview or negotiating process. Counsel should be careful about acquiring confidential information from a prospective client that might affect another case, even when the parties will agree to waive any conflict of interest [see § 86A.12[3]].

6. If potential client consults attorney on a tort matter:

a. Evaluate his or her demeanor and determine:
(1) Whether or not client control problems are likely to arise.

NOTE:

If an attorney has problems controlling his or her client, the attorney's ability to plan and carry out an effective litigation strategy can be seriously impaired.

(2) What kind of witness person would make on his or her own behalf (e.g., whether the person would be credible in testimony or would engender jury sympathy).

NOTE:

Until parties have been deposed it is difficult to evaluate their witness potential. However, if an attorney feels that the potential client clearly could not be brought in front of a jury, he or she should carefully weigh countervailing factors in deciding whether to accept employment.

b. Determine whether cause of action is barred by applicable statute of limitations.

7. If potential client was served with summons, determine:

a. Whether service was effective.

b. When response is required and, if time has expired, whether default has been taken.

c. Whether he or she is entitled to defense and/or indemnity under any of client's insurance policies.

8. Determine whether attorney is capable of handling potential client's case, or whether:

a. Case should be referred to expert counsel;

NOTE:

An attorney engaged in general practice must refer a client to an expert or associate an expert if, under the circumstances, a reasonably careful and skillful attorney would do so. An attorney who fails to refer a case to an expert when necessary will be held to the higher standard of care applicable to attorneys who hold themselves out as experts [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 , disapproved on other grounds*, ITT Small Business Finance Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 256-257, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965] .*

b. Other counsel should be associated.

9. Assess need for additional non-legal professional advisors:

a. Accountant.

b. Financial advisor.

c. Broker.

d. Experts.

B. Preliminary Determinations

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.111

§ 86A.111 Retention Agreement

1. Determine client's goals and ascertain exactly what client wants done.

NOTE:

Failure to reach a common understanding regarding what legal services the attorney will provide and how much the client will pay for those services can lead to future discord between the attorney and client and a disruption of their relationship.

2. Determine scope of representation.

3. Determine type of retention agreement to use [see § 86A.11; see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6146-6149 (fee agreements)].

a. Contingent fee agreement [see §§ 86A.200-86A.202, 86A.212-86A.214, 86A.220-86A.222].

NOTE:

An attorney should be cautious in entering into a contingent fee contract to represent a person with whom he or she already has a professional relationship. There is a rebuttable presumption that a contingency fee contract entered into during the existence of the attorney-client relationship was executed without adequate consideration and that the attorney exerted undue influence on the client [see Thomson v. Casaudoumecq (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553, 23 Cal. Rptr. 189 ; see also Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 244, 249-250, 18 Cal. Rptr. 736, 368 P.2d 360] . Accordingly, an attorney must carefully document all circumstances and negotiations leading up to the execution of a contingent fee contract with a current client.

b. Retainer fee arrangement [see §§ 86A.230-86A.233].

c. Flat fee arrangement for specific service [see §§ 86A.230-86A.233].

d. Hourly rate fee arrangement [see §§ 86A.234].

4. Determine whether fees are regulated by law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 (medical malpractice actions); see also 28 U.S.C. § 2678 (tort actions against branches of federal government)] or determined by court [see Prob. Code §§ 1081, 1120, 2640-2644].

5. If fees are not regulated by law or awarded by court, evaluate following factors in order to determine appropriate fees to charge [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(B)]:

a. Amount of fee in proportion to value of services performed.

b. Relative sophistication of attorney and client.

c. Novelty and difficulty of questions involved and skill required to properly perform legal service.

d. Likelihood, if not apparent to client, that attorney will be precluded from other employment by representing client.

NOTE:
If the attorney will be precluded from accepting other employment due to the representation of the client, he or she should disclose this to the client.

e. Amount involved and results obtained.

f. Time limitations imposed by client or by circumstances.

g. Nature and length of professional relationship with client.

h. Experience, reputation, and ability of attorney or attorneys performing services.

i. Whether fee is fixed or contingent.

j. Time and labor required to perform service.

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.120

§ 86A.120 Accepting Employment

1. If attorney has identified conflicting interest [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310; see also §§ 86A.12[3], 86A.247 (disclosure for joint representation)]:

a. Disclose and explain conflict to potential client.

b. Obtain client's written consent to representation under disclosed terms.

2. If potential client has interest adverse to interest of current or former client and regarding matter on which attorney obtained confidential information [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(D)]:

a. Disclose and explain matter to client or former client, and

b. Obtain client's or former client's written consent to proposed employment by client with adverse interest.

3. If substituting into pending action, file substitution papers with clerk of court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 284].

NOTE:
Generally the attorney who is substituting out will prepare substitution papers to be executed by the attorney and the client.

4 If client is defendant, place all client's insurance carriers on notice of suit.

5. Draft retention agreement [see § 86A.130] and:

a. Go over all terms of agreement with client.

b. Explain basis for fees and billing method.

c. Deliver unexecuted translation of agreement to client if attorney negotiates primarily in Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, or Korean [see Civ. Code § 1632].

NOTE:

An attorney who negotiates a contract for legal services primarily in a language other than English may have to provide the client with a translation of the contract in that other language prior to execution of the contract. For contracts entered into prior to July 1, 2004, this requirement applied only to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish. On and after July 1, 2004, it is applicable to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, or Korean [see Civ. Code § 1632]. This requirement does not apply if the person purchasing the attorney's services has participated in the negotiations through his or her own interpreter [Civ. Code § 1632((h) ("interpreter"defined)]. Failure to comply with these requirements gives the aggrieved party the right to rescind the contract [Civ. Code § 1632(k)]. For a detailed discussion of these translation requirements, and related requirements, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.64.

d. Have client execute agreement.

e. Provide client with copy of agreement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147].

6. Establish office file on new client and, if appropriate, place case on office calendar or docketing system.

7. If attorney has accepted advance fee payment, deposit in interest bearing trust account for client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Cond., Rule 4-100(A); see also § 86A.17].

8. If contract is for services in litigation and is made by or on behalf of a minor, obtain approval of court in which litigation is pending or that has jurisdiction over minor's estate [Fam. Code § 660].

NOTE:

A contract for attorneys' fees for services in litigation, made by or on behalf of a minor, is void unless the contract is approved, on petition by an interested person, by the court in which the litigation is pending or by the court having jurisdiction of the guardianship estate of the minor. If the contract is not approved and a judgment is recovered by or on behalf of the minor, the attorneys' fees chargeable against the minor will be fixed by the court rendering the judgment [Fam. Code § 6602]. For discussion and forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem (Matthew Bender).

    b. Place note in file documenting date, time, and manner of oral notice.

2. Promptly return all documents provided for review.

3. Draft letter to rejected party [see § 86A.249]:

    a. Specifying matter in which attorney is declining to represent party.

    b. Confirming conversation of specified date in which attorney orally advised party that he or she was declining employment.

    c. If appropriate, advising party that statute of limitations on his or her action will expire on a specified date and that any action that party may have must be filed by that date.

    d. Advising party to consult other counsel on matter if he or she desires.

    e. Confirming return of documents.

PART III. TRANSACTION GUIDE
D. Drafting Guide

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.130

§ 86A.130 Legal Services Contract

NOTE:

A properly drafted legal services agreement sets the parameters of the attorney-client relationship, structuring the terms and conditions of the attorney-client relationship. A typical agreement provides for dispute resolution and allocates the risk of loss or the burden of costs. Fee agreements should be reviewed annually to conform to any changes in law or practice.

1. Specify parties to agreement:

NOTE:

Particularly when multiple clients are involved, or when some form of entity is a prospective party, it is critical for counsel to determine the identity of the client. For example if partners in a in a general partnership consult counsel, will counsel represent the partners individually, the partnership, or both. Similarly, if a corporation is involved, counsel must determine whether he or she will represent the corporation, its shareholders or members, or both. A properly drafted legal services agreement should memorialize this determination. In addition to specifying whom the attorney is representing in such situations, it may be advisable to expressly note that the attorney is not representing specific parties.

a. Names of parties.

b. If civil action, identify client's status:
(1) Client is plaintiff in civil action.

(2) Client is petitioner or respondent in marital dissolution proceeding.

(3) Capacity in which counsel is representing client.

NOTE:
If the client is an officer, director, or CEO of a corporation, counsel must determine, and the agreement should state, whether counsel is representing the individual in a representative or individual capacity. If the client is a trustee or executor of an estate, counsel must similarly determine the nature of the representation. This determination may affect the nature of the duties under the agreement, including whether counsel may disclose confidential information to a successor in interest [see Moeller v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1124, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 317, 947 P.2d 279] .

c. Capacity of client to enter contract.

d. If business, partnership, or corporate undertaking:

(1) Form of organization and location of principal place of business.

(2) Any doing business as names.

(3) State of organization.

e. If law firm is large and client has not met with all attorneys who will work directly with client, identify:

(1) Attorney primarily responsible for handling client's case or undertaking.

(2) Other attorneys likely to work on case.

NOTE:
If one attorney in a firm has a reputation for expertise in the area of law in which the client seeks representation, the agreement should specify to what extent that attorney will be involved in the client's case. The client may become dissatisfied if the specific attorney he or she expected to provide services does not do so.

2. Identify scope of services under agreement:

a. Specify type of case (e.g., medical malpractice) in which attorney will represent client, or nature of services attorney will provide (e.g., incorporation of business) [see §§ 86A.202[2], 86.231[2]].

(1) If matter consists of personal injury claim, specify date and location of occurrence giving rise to claim [see § 86A.200[2]].

(2) If appropriate, specify governing statute.

(3) If attorney is employed to negotiate or advise regarding business matter, include provision specifically authorizing him or her to enter into contracts on client's behalf if desired.

NOTE:

Absent specific written authority, attorneys lack authority to enter into binding contracts for their clients [Nellis v. Massey (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 724, 728, 239 P.2d 509] **.

b. If matter involves pending civil action, specify [see, e.g., § 86A.234[2], P 2]:

(1) County and court where filed.

(2) Action number.

(3) Caption.

c. Extent of services covered by agreement, including, as appropriate:

NOTE:

A legal services contract may be drafted to cover representation in stages, and may include a provision that the parties will first reach a new fee agreement before extending the representation beyond the stated stage.

(1) Informal resolution or settlement negotiations.

(2) Formal settlement negotiations.

NOTE:

A contingent fee contract should not require the attorney's consent to any settlement of a case as such a provision is probably void as against public policy [see Hall v. Orloff (1920) 49 Cal. App. 745, 749] . For further discussion, see § 86A.11[4][d]].

(3) Formal alternative dispute resolution:

(a) Mediation.

(b) Arbitration.

(4) Filing lawsuit.

(5) Seeking extraordinary relief, such as temporary restraining order or permanent injunction.

(6) Enforcing judgment or obtaining final order in marital dissolution case.

NOTE:

Actions necessary to collect a judgment, as well as obtaining a final order in a marital dissolution case are typically beyond the ordinary limits of representation.

(7) Appellate services.

NOTE:

Appellate services, both during a case and after final judgment, typically are beyond the ordinary limits of representation, due to the extraordinary nature of an appeal and the substantial additional expense it entails. Appeals and related services typically are covered under separate fee agreements.

d. If desired, limit purpose for which attorney is retained (e.g., to secure continuance in specified civil action).

NOTE:

If the client wants the attorney to perform only a very limited service, this limitation should be clearly stated in the retention agreement so that the extent of the attorney's duty will be similarly limited if he or she and the client engage in any subsequent disputes regarding the attorney's performance.

e. Any limits on attorney's authority to act, such as:

NOTE:

An attorney has the authority to bind his or her client in all matters regarding the regular conduct of the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 283(1)]. Unless the client files a revocation of authority, an attorney may receive money claimed by the client either during the pendency of an action or after judgment is entered and may discharge the client's claim or acknowledge satisfaction of a judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 283(2)].

(1) Prohibiting attorney from entering into stipulations without client's prior consent.

(2) Prohibiting attorney from joining particular defendant(s) without client's prior consent.

(3) Prohibiting attorney from settling action without client's prior consent [see, e.g., §§ 86A.200[2], 86A.201[2], P 8].

NOTE:

An attorney is presumed to have authority to compromise his or her client's case [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 277, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760] . An attorney must convey the amounts, terms, and conditions of all written settlement offers to the client regardless of whether or not the attorney recommends accepting the offers [see Rule 5-105, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct].

3. Require client to cooperate with attorney by [see, e.g., §§ 86A.200[2], 86A.201[2], P 2]:

a. Keeping current contact information on file withe counsel, including notifying attorney of any change of address.

b. Notifying attorney of any extended absence.

c. Appearing on reasonable notice for all matters at which client's presence is required.

d. Reasonably considering attorney's recommendations regarding settlement.

4. If attorney believes associate counsel may be necessary, include provision allowing association on reasonable notice to client [see §§ 86A.200[2], 86A.202[2], P 8].

5. If attorney has had opportunity to review facts or documents, specify that:

a. On basis of review, attorney believes client has cause of action in specific matter [see, e.g., § 86A.213].

b. Attorney makes no representation as to merits or outcome of case [see, e.g., § 86A.201[2], P 6].

6. State amount of fees and responsibility for payment of fees and costs.

a. Specify whether client will pay advance on fee [see, e.g., §§ 86A.11[3], 86A.210[2]].

b. If attorney will advance costs for case or undertaking [see § 86A.202[2], P 2]:

(1) State that attorney will make cost advances.

(2) Describe types of costs anticipated (e.g., private investigators, preparation of evidence, court costs).

NOTE:
Provisions for paralegal services are usually addressed with counsel's hourly fees [see §§ 86A.233[2], P 4, 86A.234[2], P 4].

(3) Consider providing reasonable estimate of these costs, absent extraordinary developments in case.

(4) Require client to reimburse attorney for all cost advances.

NOTE:
The client must always remain responsible for costs of the action or undertaking [see Rule 4-210, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct]. However, a plaintiff's attorney who unsuccessfully pursues an action for damages under a contingent fee agreement will sometimes decide not to press his or her claim for reimbursement from the client.

c. If fee is contingent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147; see § 86A.11[4]; see also §§ 86A.200-86A.202, 86A.212-86A.214, 86A.220-86A.222]:

NOTE:
The number of stages referred to in a contingency fee agreement should relate to the apparent complexity of the case and the amount of time the attorney expects will be necessary either to place the case in a settlement posture or to bring it to trial.

In general, a contract to represent an individual in a marital dissolution proceeding should not be made on a contingent fee basis as such an agreement is ordinarily void as against the public policy favoring the preservation of marriages [see Coons v. Kary (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 650, 652-653, 69 Cal. Rptr. 712] . However, a contingency fee contract between counsel and a respondent may be enforceable if it was executed after the dissolution action was instituted and an analysis of the circumstances (such as the existence of any possibility of a reconciliation) indicates that upholding the contract would not frustrate applicable public policy [see Krieger v. Bulpitt (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 97, 100-101, 251 P.2d 673] . For further discussion, see 86A.11[4][d]].

Note that Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147 does not apply in actions for recovery of claims between merchants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a); see §§ 86A.11[2], [4], 86A.16[5]]. For these purposes, a "merchant" is a person who deals in goods of the kind or otherwise by his occupation holds himself or herself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved in the transaction, or to whom such knowledge or skill may be attributed by the person's employment of an agent or broker or other intermediary who by that person's occupation holds himself or herself out as having such knowledge or skill. "Between merchants" means any transaction with respect to which both parties are chargeable with the knowledge or skill of merchants [Com. Code § 2104]. Although the requirements below are inapplicable to such contracts, statutory limitations are imposed on the amount of recovery in this situation when no written agreement for legal services exists [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(b)*].

(1) State agreed contingency fee rate(s) (that is, percentage of recovery to which attorney will be entitled depending on stage of proceeding when matter is resolved).

(2) Explain manner in which costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting or settling claim will affect contingency fee and client's recovery [see, e.g., § 86A.201[2]].

(3) State to what extent, if any, client may be required to compensate attorney for related matters arising out of relationship but not covered by contract.

(4) State that fee is negotiable and not set by law unless action is for malpractice against health care provider [see P (5), below].

(5) If action is for malpractice against health care provider [see §§ 86A.16[4], 86A.202]:

(a) State that rates set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 are maximum limits for contingency fee contracts and that parties may negotiate lower rate.

(b) State that attorney will receive as maximum fee [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a)]:
(i) 40 percent of first $50,000 recovered.

(ii) 331/3 percent of next $50,000 recovered.

(iii) 25 percent of next $500,000 recovered.

(iv) 15 percent of any amount by which recovery exceeds $600,000.

d. If fee is retainer [see § 86A.11[3]; see also § 86A.230-86A.234]:

(1) Specify amount of retainer, and

(2) That retainer has been paid, or date on which it will be paid.

(3) Specify amount of time for which retainer will secure attorney's availability.

(4) Specify what services attorney will perform for retainer fee.

(5) Specify extraordinary services for which attorney will be available at his or her regular rates.

(6) If applicable, specify rate at which paralegal services (or any other special services outside retainer agreement) will be charged.

(7) If desired, provide that interest will be charged on overdue accounts for extraordinary services [see § 86A.240[2]].

e. If fee is flat rate for particular service [see § 86A.231[2]]:

(1) Specify extent of service that attorney will perform for stated fee.

(2) Specify related services that may need to be performed but that are not included within the flat fee agreement, whether attorney will be available to perform those related services, and that client will be charged at regular rate for extraordinary services.

(3) If applicable, specify rate at which paralegal services (or any other special services outside retainer agreement) will be charged.

(4) If desired, specify that client will be charged interest on overdue accounts for extraordinary services [see § 86A.240[2]].

f. If reasonably foreseeable that total expense to client, including attorneys' fees, will exceed $1,000, state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a); see § 86A.234[2]]:

NOTE:

Use of a written contract is mandatory when it is reasonably foreseeable that total expense will exceed $1,000 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)]. The following requirements apply to all attorneys' fee agreements that meet the $1,000 limit, except for contingent fee agreements and certain special situations for which statutory exceptions are provided [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(d)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.11[2].

Note that Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148 does not apply in actions for recovery of claims between merchants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a); see the NOTE to P c, above].

(1) Basis of compensation including, but not limited to, hourly rates, statutory fees or flat fees, and other standard rates, fees, and charges applicable to the case.

(2) General nature of legal services to be provided to client.

(3) Respective responsibilities of attorney and client as to performance of contract.

g. Specify that court will determine attorneys' fees if action is:

(1) Ordinary probate proceeding [see Prob. Code § 10810].

(2) Guardianship proceeding [see Prob. Code § 2640(a)(3)].

(3) Conservatorship proceeding [see Prob. Code § 2640(a)(3)].

(4) Action under Federal Tort Claims Act [see 28 U.S.C. § 2678].

7. If desired, specify that attorney will have lien for fees and costs on client's recovery.

NOTE:

An attorney will have an implied lien for fees in most contingency fee situations [see § 86A.16[6]]. However, it is better practice to include a specific lien provision in the retention contract [see § 86A.16[6], 86A.200[1][c], [2]].

8. If desired, specify that disputes under agreement will be resolved pursuant to mediation or arbitration [see §§ 86A.19, 86A.201[2], P 12].

9. Provide space for both parties to sign.

10. Provide space for client to acknowledge receipt of copy of contract.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Damage Claims

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.200

§ 86A.200 Contingent Fee Agreement for Damage Claim--Letter Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a letter-style contingent fee agreement under which an attorney agrees to represent a client in a specific claim for damages. The form is designed for use in the context of an accident, and contains blanks near the top for the date and location of the accident. Plaintiffs' attorneys who practice primarily in the areas of personal injury and property damage most frequently use this type of contingent fee agreement. However, this form can be adapted for any kind of tort claim except malpractice actions against health care providers. For an appropriate form to use in medical malpractice actions, see § 86A.202.

Under a contingency fee agreement, the attorney's fee is generally a specified percentage of any net recovery [see [2], below; see also § 86A.201[2], P 3]. That percentage varies depending on the stage at which the recovery is made (e.g., before filing an action or after commencement of trial). This form specifies different percentages for three different litigation stages. Some contingency fee agreements specify only two stages and some specify as many as five. The number of stages referred to in the agreement should depend on the apparent complexity of the case and the amount of time the attorney expects will be necessary either to place the case in a settlement posture or to bring it to trial. If the attorney prefers more or fewer than three, this form can be modified accordingly.

This form is designed so that the attorney can have it photocopied or printed in advance on his or her letterhead. On the client's first office visit the parties can complete the blanks and execute the agreement. Counsel must provide the client with a signed copy of the agreement at the time of execution [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)]. If the client does not execute the agreement in the attorney's office, counsel should request the client to countersign the letter and return it to the attorney as soon as possible.

Many attorneys prefer that retention agreements be in letter form, so that the attorney-client relationship will commence in an informal and friendly manner. However, if the attorney prefers a more formal contract style, § 86A.201 may be used.

[b] Statutory Requirements

All contingency fee contracts, other than those for the recovery of workers compensation benefits and the recovery of claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)], must be in writing and contain the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a), (c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(d)]:

- The contingency fee rate on which the parties agreed.

- An explanation of the manner in which costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting or settling the claim will affect the contingency fee and the client's recovery.

- A statement to what extent, if any, the client may be required to compensate the attorney for related matters arising out of their relationship but not covered by the contingency fee contract. This statement may include any amounts collected for the plaintiff by the attorney.

- A statement that the fee is negotiable and not set by law, unless the action is for malpractice against a health care provider [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 (limitations on fees)].

- A statement that the rates set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 are the maximum limits for the contingency fee contract and that the parties may negotiate a lower rate unless the action is for malpractice against a health care provider [see [2], below; see also § 86A.201[2], P 13].

[c] Lien Against Recovery

An attorney may establish a lien to secure his or her fees on the judgment or property obtained as a result of the attorney's services. If a contingent fee contract does not contain express language creating an attorney's lien, whether or not a lien exists is a question of fact involving a determination of the parties' intentions [Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v. Shivener (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 364, 370, 105 Cal. Rptr. 445] . The parties need not use the word "lien" in their contract in order to create a lien. An implied equitable lien exists if the parties agree that the attorney is to look to the judgment as security for fees [see Wagner v. Sariotti (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 693, 697, 133 P.2d 430] .

An attorney may enforce a contractual lien in an independent action against the client. However, if the attorney has been discharged, he or she may not intervene in the main action to enforce the lien [Bandy v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 126 Cal. Rptr. 890] .

[d] Translation Requirements

Any attorney who negotiates a contract for legal services primarily in a language other than English may have to provide the client with a translation of the contract in that other language. For contracts entered into prior to July 1, 2004, this requirement is applicable only to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish. On and after July 1, 2004, it is applicable to contracts negotiated primarily in Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese, or Korean [see Civ. Code § 1632]. For further discussion, see § 86A.111[6]. For a detailed discussion of these translation requirements, and related requirements, see Ch. 45, Consumer Installment Loans and Credit Sales, § 45.64.

[e] Execution Requirements

All contingency fee contracts, other than those for the recovery of workers compensation benefits and the recovery of claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)], must be in writing and signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a), (c)]. An attorney who contracts to represent a client on a contingency fee basis must provide, at the time the contract is entered into, a duplicate copy of the contract, signed by both the attorney and the client, or the client's guardian or representative, to the plaintiff, or to the client's guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)].

If the contract does not satisfy the writing [see [b], above] or these execution requirements, the agreement is voidable at the option of the client. However, if the agreement is voided, the attorney is still entitled to collect a reasonable fee for his or her services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(c); see § 86A.11[4][e]].

Re: _____ [date] Date of Accident
[site] Site of Accident
Dear _____ [name of client] :

This letter will confirm the terms on which this office has been retained by you to represent you in the prosecution of any and all claims that you have for personal injury and property damage arising out of the above-captioned accident.

The attorney's fee will be a percentage of the net amount obtained for you. If nothing is recovered, this office will receive nothing for its services. This office will advance all legal, investigative, and trial costs necessary for the prosecution of your claims. You will reimburse this office for those costs regardless of whether or not any amount is recovered on your behalf.

From the amount recovered for you, this office will first be repaid for all costs advanced on your behalf. The attorney's fee will be a percentage of the remaining balance depending on the stage at which the recovery is received. The following fees have been negotiated by you and this office and are not set by law:

_____ [e.g., 331/3] percent if recovery is received before _____ [the filing of an action or the pretrial conference or the commencement of trial].

_____ [e.g., 331/3 or 40] percent if recovery is received after _____ [the filing of an action or the pretrial conference or the commencement of trial].

_____ [e.g., 45 or 50] percent if recovery is received after either the commencement of a second trial or the filing of an appeal by either party.

You will not be obligated to compensate this office for any matter related to but not specifically covered in this agreement, such as the collection of any recovery obtained on your behalf.

This office will not settle your claims without your complete approval. This office may associate any other attorney at its discretion and expense [optional: and may withdraw at any time after giving you reasonable notice]. You agree to give an equitable lien on your claims and recovery to this office for its services and costs advanced. You will keep this office advised of your whereabouts at all times, appear on reasonable notice at any depositions and court appearances, and comply with all reasonable requests made by this office in connection with the preparation and presentation of your claims.

Please review this letter and, if it meets with your approval, sign and date the enclosed copy of this letter and return it to us in the envelope provided. The additional copy is for your records. We look forward to a long and pleasant professional relationship with you. If you ever have any questions regarding your estate planning matters, or anything addressed in this letter, please do not hesitate to contact me.

DIVISION VI: PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES
CHAPTER 86A AGREEMENTS FOR LEGAL SERVICES
PART IV. FORMS
A. Damage Claims

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.201

§ 86A.201 Contingent Fee Agreement for Damage Claim--Contract Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is an attorney-client contingent fee agreement in contract form. This form is similar to the letter agreement in § 86A.200, but more formal and detailed. Many attorneys prefer that retention agreements be in letter form, so that the attorney-client relationship will commence in an informal and friendly manner. If counsel prefers a more informal letter style agreement, § 86A.200 may be used.

This form defines the scope of representation. It provides that counsel will represent the client until a settlement or judgment is reached through arbitration or trial, and includes defense against counterclaims. Counsel agrees to represent client through any appeal, but under the provisions of a separate contract [see [2], P 1, below].

The form provides that counsel will be paid the greater of the negotiated contingent fee (from the amount recovered through prosecution of the client's claims, whether by settlement or judgment) or the amount of any attorneys' fees awarded as a result of counsel's prosecution of the claims [see [2], P 3, below; see also § 86A.11[5]]. The client is responsible for all costs of litigation [see [2], PP 6, 7, below]. The form grants counsel a lien to secure payment [see [2], P 12, below; see also § 86A.16[6]].

The form provides that either party may withdraw from the representation [see [2], P 13, below].

This form is not appropriate for use in malpractice actions against health care providers. For an appropriate form to use in medical malpractice actions, consult § 86A.202.

[b] Arbitration Provision

An arbitration agreement must clearly and explicitly put the client on notice that legal malpractice claims are subject to arbitration. Any ambiguity in an arbitration clause will be construed against the drafter of the agreement, especially when drafted by an attorney [see Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1371-1372, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 (counsel is responsible for drafting clear and explicit agreement stating that arbitration clause applied to both legal services and unrelated business dealings; counsel should have advised client in writing of right to consult independent lawyer on arbitration clause)].

This form provides that any and all claims or disputes arising from or relating to the agreement, or to the professional services rendered by counsel, will be resolved by arbitration [see [2], P 14, below]. The form provides that the arbitrability of any dispute will be determined by either California or federal law, and that the agreement will be construed, to the maximum extent allowable under California or federal law, in favor of arbitration. The prevailing party in any arbitration will be entitled to recover all costs incurred, including reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses. However, the form bars the arbitrator from awarding punitive, exemplary, or enhanced damages, and the parties waive any right to seek or recover any such damages in arbitration.

PRACTICE TIP:

Although not required in the context of legal malpractice (as opposed to medical malpractice), the arbitration clause should be printed in at least 10-point type [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Caution should be exercised when negotiating an arbitration clause with an existing client as Rule 3-300 applies to the negotiations [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300]. Failure to comply with Rule 3-300 could invalidate the arbitration clause in a new agreement with an existing client. Further, because arbitration language must be clear and explicit, counsel should note that a properly negotiated arbitration clause in a second agreement will not necessarily affect the arbitrability of matters arising from the earlier representation [see Mayhew v. Benninghoff (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1371-1372, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 (attorney who failed to comply with Rule 3-300 required disclosures and consent relating to attorney-client business transactions could not rely on arbitration clause)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Contractual arbitration clauses that are perceived as unfair or one-sided may be held unconscionable and invalid under general contract principles. For general discussion of unconscionability and its application to arbitration clauses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration , § 32.21[3] , and Ch. 140, Contracts , § 140.25 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Modification of Agreement

This form provides that the parties may modify the agreement. Any modification must be in writing and signed by both attorney(s) and client [see [2], P 17, below]. Counsel should bear in mind that Rule 3-300 applies to the modification of an existing fee agreement with an existing client [see State Bar of California Formal Ethics Opinion 1989-116; Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300 (avoidance of adverse interest with client); see also § 86A.14]. Existing clients should be given sufficient notice of any proposed change to fee agreements and engagement letters [see Severson, Werson, Berke & Melchior v. Bolinger (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1569, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531] .

[d] Execution Requirements

All contingency fee contracts, other than those for the recovery of workers compensation benefits and the recovery of claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)], must be in writing and signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a), (c)]. An attorney who contracts to represent a client on a contingency fee basis must, at the time the contract is entered into, provide a duplicate copy of the contract, signed by both the attorney and the client, or the client's guardian or representative, to the plaintiff, or to the client's guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.200[1][e].

If an attorney negotiates primarily in Spanish, the attorney must deliver an unexecuted Spanish language translation of any contract or agreement that contains a statement of fees or charges for legal services before the parties execute the retention agreement [Civ. Code § 1632(a)(5)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.200[1][d].

[2] FORM

Contingent Fee Agreement for Damage Claim--Contract Form

ATTORNEY/CLIENT CONTINGENT FEE AGREEMENT

This is an agreement between _____[name of client] ("Client") and [specify name of attorney or firm and structure, e.g., Legal Advisers, a Professional Law Corporation] ("Attorneys").

Subject of Representation and Scope of Services

1. Client retains Attorneys to represent Client in pursuing claims ("Client's Claims") against [identify opponent], and any other appropriate parties, including without limitation _____, arising from the actions of _____ as officers, directors and/or shareholders of _____.

Attorneys are currently in the process of evaluating Client's claims against [opponent]. If Attorneys conclude after performing this evaluation, or at any point in time, that Client's Claims do not justify the risk for Attorneys in proceeding on a contingent fee basis, Attorneys will withdraw from Client's representation as allowed under Paragraph 13 of this agreement.

Attorneys will provide those legal services reasonably required to represent Client. Attorneys will take reasonable steps to keep Client informed of the progress of the matter, and respond to Client's inquiries. In doing so, Attorneys will provide Client with monthly reports summarizing the services performed and hours spent on the matter during the prior month.

If an action is commenced, Attorneys will represent Client until a settlement or judgment is reached through arbitration or trial. Attorneys will oppose any motion for a new trial or any other post-trial motions filed by an opposing party, or will make any appropriate post-trial or post-arbitration motions on Client's behalf. After judgment, Attorneys will represent Client on any appeal, or in any proceedings designed to execute on the judgment, with such additional compensation as Attorneys and Client may agree in a separate agreement.

In the event of any counterclaims or cross-claims filed against Client by [opponent], Attorneys will defend Client as part of this Agreement.

Client's Duties

2. Client agrees to be truthful with Attorneys, to assist and cooperate with Attorneys in the prosecution of Client's Claims, to abide by this Agreement, to pay Attorneys' bills on time, and to keep Attorneys advised of any changes in Client's address or telephone number.

Fees

3. Attorneys will only be compensated for legal services if a recovery is obtained for Client. If no recovery is obtained, Client will only be obligated to pay for costs, disbursements, and expenses, as described in Paragraphs 6 and 7. In the event a recover is obtained, attorneys will be paid the greater of:

(1) A contingent fee from the proceeds of any amount recovered through prosecution of Client's Claims, either by settlement or judgment; or

(2) The amount of any attorneys' fees awarded as a result of Attorneys' prosecution of Client's Claims.

Contingent Fee Percentages

4. The amount of the contingent fee will be calculated as a percentage of the Net Recovery to Client as follows:

(1) Thirty-three and one-third percent of any Net Recovery before the commencement of trial; and

(2) Forty percent of any Net Recovery after commencement of trial.

As used in this Agreement, the "commencement of trial" means the appearance of Attorneys in court or arbitration on the first date when any lawsuit or arbitration involving Client's Claims is scheduled for trial or arbitration hearing, even if the trial or arbitration hearing is continued to a later date for reasons beyond Attorneys' control.

Net Recovery Determination

5. The term "Net Recovery" includes all monies or other things of value awarded to Client as a result of Client's Claims, less the total amount of costs, disbursements and expenses paid by Client in connection with Attorneys' prosecution of Client's Claims. If Client is awarded costs or attorneys' fees in connection with any judgment on Client's Claims, all such amounts will be included in the calculation of Net Recovery for purposes of this Agreement.

If the Net Recovery consists of payments to be made over a period of time, or of property not entirely cash or cash equivalent, the contingency fee will be based on the present cash value of the recovery as determined by generally recognized accounting and appraisal standards. The contingency fee will be paid out of the first funds or property paid by any party in connection with resolution of Client's Claims.

Litigation Costs and Expenses

6. All costs incurred or disbursements made by Attorneys in connection with their representation of Client are to be paid by Client within _____[specify, e.g., 30 days after receipt of Attorneys' statement or invoice]. These costs or disbursements include but are not limited to, [broadly specify costs, e.g., investigation expenses; long distance telephone or facsimile charges; reproduction costs; travel expenses (by coach or tourist class); charges for deposition or trial transcripts; charges for delivery of documents by mail or messenger services; court filing, witness fees, and jury fees; computerized legal or factual research charges; fees and costs for preparation of trial exhibits; videotape supplies and services; and all similar costs or expenses incurred by Attorneys, except for legal services].

Each calendar quarter beginning with the filing of a complaint in this matter, Attorneys will provide Client with their best estimate of the costs likely to be incurred during the following quarter. Attorneys will also obtain Client's prior approval before incurring any costs (other than deposition costs) that are reasonably likely to exceed [e.g., $3,000 during a 30-day period].

Employment of Consultants, Experts and Investigators

7. Attorneys may employ consultants, experts and investigators to assist Attorneys in preparation for trial and/or to testify as witnesses at trial. All fees and expenses charged by these persons will be paid by Client, in the same manner as other litigation costs and expenses. Attorneys will consult with Client and obtain Client's approval before employing each and any consultant, expert, or investigator. All consultants, experts, or investigators will be employed directly by Attorneys and will report exclusively to Attorneys.

Favorable Outcome Not Guaranteed

8. Attorneys make no representations or warranties concerning the successful prosecution of Client's Claims. Client understands that there are risks and other uncertainties in all litigation and knowingly accepts those risks and uncertainties with respect to this matter. All statements of Attorneys with respect to these risks and uncertainties are statements of opinion only.

Power of Attorney

9. Client gives Attorneys full power of attorney to execute all documents connected with the prosecution of Client's Claims, including pleadings, settlement agreements, stipulations, releases, verifications, dismissals, and all other documents that Client could properly execute.

Settlement

10. Any decision to settle some or all of Client's claims must be approved by both Client and Attorneys. Neither Client nor Attorneys may unreasonably withhold approval. Client expressly agrees that Client will not waive any entitlement to an award of attorneys' fees and expenses without Attorneys' prior consent, for example, by accepting a settlement that precludes Attorneys from obtaining reimbursement of Attorneys' fees and expenses.

Publicity

11. Attorneys and Client will agree in advance on the content and nature of any press releases or other publicity concerning a settlement or any other aspect of the litigation involving Client's claims.

Attorneys' Lien

12. To secure payment to Attorneys of all sums due under this Agreement for services rendered or costs advanced, Client grants Attorneys a lien on Client's right to recover any amounts from prosecution of Client's Claims.

Termination of Attorney-Client Relationship

13. Attorneys may withdraw from representation of Client at any time on reasonable notice to Client. In the event of voluntary withdrawal, Attorneys will be entitled to reimbursement for all costs, disbursements, and expenses incurred by Attorneys in connection with their representation of Client, but not to any contingent fee.

Client may discharge Attorneys at any time on reasonable notice. If Attorneys are discharged, or if Attorneys are otherwise unable to continue representing Client due to circumstances beyond Attorneys' control, Attorneys will be entitled to be paid the greater of: (1) a reasonable contingent fee from any net recovery; or (2) compensation for all hours worked by Attorneys at Attorneys' usual hourly rates. The amount of this reasonable fee will be based on the value of Attorneys' contribution to the net recovery ultimately obtained.

[Present in at least 10-point type (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a)):]

Arbitration

14. By initialing this arbitration provision below, the parties agree that any and all claims or disputes, of any type, nature, or description whatsoever, arising from or relating to this Agreement or the professional services rendered by Attorneys, will be resolved by arbitration, pursuant to the rules of the American Arbitration Association ("AAA"), except as those rules may conflict with any part or provision of this Paragraph 14, in which case the terms of this Paragraph 14 control. The parties agree that the place of arbitration will be the AAA office in or closest to [specify, e.g., San Francisco, California], unless otherwise agreed by the parties. Notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 13, below, the arbitrability of any dispute will be determined by [California or federal] law and this Agreement will be construed, to the maximum extent allowable under [California or federal] law, in favor of arbitration.

[Select one of the following alternatives:]

[To memorialize both parties' understanding, use:]

IN AGREEING TO THIS ARBITRATION PROVISION, ATTORNEY AND CLIENT SPECIFICALLY UNDERSTAND AND AGREE THAT BY ENTERING THIS AGREEMENT ATTORNEY AND CLIENT ARE FOREGOING:

- THE RIGHT TO TRIAL IN A COURT OR BY A JURY FOR ANY DISPUTE ARISING FROM OR RELATING TO THIS AGREEMENT OR TO ANY ASPECT OF THE PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP OR SERVICES RENDERED BY ATTORNEYS TO CLIENT.

- ALL JUDICIAL RIGHTS, INCLUDING THE RIGHT TO APPEAL FROM THE DECISION OF THE ARBITRATOR(S).

[Or, to memorialize the client's understanding, use:]

IN AGREEING TO THIS ARBITRATION PROVISION, CLIENT SPECIFICALLY UNDERSTANDS AND AGREES THAT BY ENTERING THIS AGREEMENT CLIENT IS FOREGOING THE RIGHT TO TRIAL IN A COURT OR BY A JURY FOR ANY DISPUTE ARISING FROM OR RELATING TO THIS AGREEMENT OR TO ANY ASPECT OF THE PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIP OR SERVICES RENDERED BY ATTORNEYS TO CLIENT, INCLUDING WITHOUT LIMITATION, THE FOLLOWING:

- ANY DISPUTE OVER WHAT CONSTITUTES A REASONABLE CONTINGENT FEE IN THE EVENT ATTORNEYS ARE DISCHARGED, DISQUALIFIED, OR FOR ANY OTHER REASON DO NOT CONTINUE REPRESENTING CLIENT THROUGH JUDGMENT IN THE ACTION;

- ANY DISPUTE REGARDING THE PROFESSIONAL SERVICES RENDERED BY ATTORNEYS, INCLUDING ANY CLAIM OF PROFESSIONAL ERRORS, OMISSIONS, NEGLIGENCE, OR MALPRACTICE;

- ANY AND EVERY OTHER CLAIM OR DISPUTE WHATSOEVER, WHETHER BASED IN CONTRACT, IN TORT, OR ON THE ALLEGED BREACH OF ANY DUTY IMPOSED BY ANY STATUTE, RULE, OR REGULATION.

[Continue with the following:]

The parties further agree that the prevailing party in any arbitration will recover all costs incurred, including reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses. These costs will include the reasonable value of all time spent by Attorneys or Client in connection with the arbitration. However, the arbitrator will have no authority to award punitive, exemplary or enhanced damages, and the parties hereby waive any right to seek or recover any such damages. By initialing the space provided below, the parties represent and agree that they have read and understood the terms of this Paragraph 14, that they have had a full and adequate opportunity to seek counsel regarding the terms of this Paragraph 14, and that they knowingly, expressly and voluntarily agree to resolve any dispute between them by arbitration as provided in this Paragraph 14. If either Attorneys or Client should refuse to submit to arbitration, either Attorneys or Client may be compelled to arbitrate under [California or federal] law. Attorneys and Client acknowledge the above, and that this mutual agreement for binding arbitration is voluntary.

Applicable Law

15. Except as specifically provided in Paragraph 14, above, the laws of the State of California govern the construction and interpretation of this Agreement and any dispute between the parties, including without limitation, disputes arising out of or relating to this Agreement, the professional relationship between the parties, and the professional services rendered by Attorneys to Client.

Client understands and acknowledges that the terms of a contingent fee arrangement for the types of claims covered by this Agreement are not set by law in California, but are instead left to negotiation and agreement between attorneys and their clients.

Entire Agreement

16. This document sets forth and constitutes the entire agreement between Attorneys and Client and supersedes any previous discussions, negotiations, or agreements on the same subject.

Severability

17. If any provision of this Agreement is held unenforceable, in whole or in part, the remainder of the provision and the entire Agreement is severable and remains in effect.

Modification of Agreement

18. Any revisions or modifications of this Agreement must be made in writing and signed by both Attorneys and Client.

Client's Receipt of Agreement and Knowledge of Terms

19. Client acknowledges that Client has read and fully understood all of the terms and conditions of this Agreement before signing it; that the undersigned is authorized to enter into this Agreement on behalf of Client; [optional: that Client has consulted with counsel other than Attorneys for advice with respect to this Agreement;] and that Client has received an executed copy of this Agreement.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Damage Claims

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.202

§ 86A.202 Contingent Fee Agreement for Malpractice Action Against Health Care Provider--Contract Form

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a contingent fee contract to be used by an attorney representing the plaintiff in a medical malpractice action. Contingent fees in the context of medical malpractice actions are subject to statutory limitations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146]. This form complies with these limits [see [b], below]. A contingency fee contract must be signed by both the attorney and the plaintiff (or the plaintiff's guardian or representative) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)].

For an analysis of the law relating to contingent fee contracts for actions other than medical malpractice suits, see § 86A.11[4].

[b] Fee Limits in Medical Malpractice Actions

Contingency fees for representing plaintiffs in malpractice actions against health care providers are limited to the following maximum amounts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a); see § 86A.16[4]]:

- 40 percent of the first $50,000 recovered;
- 331/3 percent of the next $50,000 recovered;
- 25 percent of the next $500,000 recovered; and
- 15 percent of any amount by which the recovery exceeds $600,000.

If the plaintiff receives periodic payments, for example, under a structured settlement/annuity arrangement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667.7], the court will place a total value on the payments based on the plaintiff's life expectancy and will include that amount in computing the attorneys' fees [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(b)].

The statutory limitations on contingent fees in medical malpractice actions apply regardless of whether the recovery is by settlement, arbitration, or judgment. Further, the limitation apply to agreements with clients that are infants or persons of unsound mind, as well as to those who are responsible adults [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a)].

The term "recovered" means the net sum recovered after deducting any disbursements or costs incurred in connection with prosecution or settlement of the claim. However, costs of medical care incurred by the plaintiff and the attorney's office overhead costs or charges are not deductible disbursements or costs for this purpose [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(1)]. The term "health care providers" includes doctors, dentists, lab technicians, chiropractors, osteopaths, speech pathologists, audiologists, nurses, veterinarians, and licensed clinics, health dispensaries, or health facilities, as well as their legal representatives [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(2); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 500 et seq.]. The term "professional negligence" refers to a negligent act or omission to act by a health care provider in the rendering of professional services that is the proximate cause of personal injury or wrongful death, provided that the services are (1) within the scope of services for which the provider is licensed and (2) outside any restriction imposed by the licensing agency or licensed hospital [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(c)(3)].

[c] Withdrawal Provision

This form provides that counsel may withdraw within a reasonable time after giving the Client notice of the withdrawal. The Rules of Professional Conduct limit an attorney's right to voluntarily withdraw from a case [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(C)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.18[2].

[d] Execution Requirements

All contingency fee contracts, other than those for the recovery of workers compensation benefits and the recovery of claims between merchants [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5(a)], must be in writing and signed by both parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a), (c)]. An attorney who contracts to represent a client on a contingency fee basis must provide, at the time the contract is entered into, a duplicate copy of the contract, signed by both the attorney and the client, or the client's guardian or representative, to the plaintiff, or to the client's guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.200[1][e].

If an attorney negotiates primarily in Spanish, the attorney must deliver an unexecuted Spanish language translation of any contract or agreement that contains a statement of fees or charges for legal services before the parties execute the retention agreement [Civ. Code § 1632(a)(5)]. For further discussion, see § 86A.200[1][d].

[2] FORM

Contingent Fee Agreement for Malpractice Action Against Health Care Provider--Contract Form

CONTINGENT FEE AGREEMENT

_____[name of client], "Client," and _____[name of attorney, partnership, or law corporation], "Attorney," agree as follows:

Purpose of Representation

1. Client employs Attorney to represent Client in the prosecution of any and all claims for personal injury that the client may have arising out of _____[describe occurrence, e.g., treatment that Client received from January 1, 1983, through January 15, 1983, at XYZ Hospital located at _____ (city and state)].

Advancement of Litigation Expenses

2. Attorney will advance all expenses that _____[he or she] believes are reasonably necessary for the prosecution of Client's claims (including but not limited to court costs, expenses of investigation, expenses of medical examination, and the costs of obtaining and presenting evidence).

Reimbursement of Amounts Advanced

3. Client will reimburse the Attorney for all costs advanced on Client's behalf regardless of whether or not any recovery is obtained on Client's claims.

Attorney's Fee

4. Attorney will be compensated for services rendered only if Attorney obtains a recovery for Client. From any recovery received, Attorney will first be repaid for all litigation expenses advanced on behalf of Client under Paragraph 3 of this Agreement. The fee to be paid Attorney will be a percentage of the remaining balance of the recovery, depending on the stage at which the recovery is received:

40 percent of the first $50,000 recovered.

331/3 percent of the next $50,000 recovered.

25 percent of the next one $500,000 recovered.

15 percent of any amount by which the recovery exceeds $600,000.

Negotiation of Rates

5. The contingency fee rates set forth in Paragraph 4 are the maximum limits allowed under Business and Professions Code Section 6146. The parties understand and acknowledge that they may negotiate lower rates.

No Additional Compensation

6. Client shall not be obligated to compensate Attorney for any matter related to, but not specifically covered in, this Agreement including, but not limited to, the collection of any recovery.

Approval Necessary for Settlement

7. Attorney will not make any settlement of any nature for any of Client's claims without Client's complete approval.

Association of Other Attorneys

8. Attorney, at Attorney's sole discretion and expense, may associate any other attorney in representing Client's claims.

Withdrawal of Attorney

9. Attorney may withdraw from the representation of Client with regard to the claims covered by this Agreement within a reasonable time after giving Client notice of the withdrawal.

Attorney's Lien

10. Attorney will have a lien for services rendered and costs advanced on any sums recovered, whether by settlement or judgment, on account of Client's claims.

Cooperation of Client

11. Client will keep Attorney advised of Client's address at all times, appear on reasonable notice at any and all depositions and court appearances, and comply with all reasonable requests of Attorney in connection with the preparation and presentation of Client's claims.

Attorney's Authority

12. Client gives Attorney the power and authority to execute any and all pleadings, claims, settlements, drafts, checks, compromises, releases, dismissals, deposits, orders, and other papers that Client could properly execute, and to receive on Client's behalf any moneys or other things of value to which Client may be entitled because of any judgment recovered or any settlement agreed on in connection with the claims covered by this Agreement.

Applicable Law

13. The laws of the State of California govern the construction and interpretation of this Agreement and any dispute between the parties, including, without limitation, disputes arising out of or relating to this Agreement, the professional relationship between the parties, and the professional services rendered by Attorney to Client.

Entire Agreement

14. This document sets forth and constitutes the entire agreement between Attorney and Client and supersedes any previous discussions, negotiations, or agreements on the same subject.

Severability

15. If any provision of this Agreement is held unenforceable, in whole or in part, the remainder of the provision and the entire Agreement is severable and remains in effect.

Modification of Agreement

16. Any revisions or modifications of this Agreement must be made in writing and signed by both Attorney and Client.

Client's Receipt of Agreement and Knowledge of Terms

17. Client acknowledges that Client has read and fully understood all of the terms and conditions of this Agreement before signing it; that the undersigned is authorized to enter into this Agreement on behalf of Client; and that Client has received an executed copy of this Agreement.

PART IV. FORMS
A. Damage Claims

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.203

§ 86A.203 Authorization for Release of Medical Records

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

This form is a medical authorization. It will enable an attorney to obtain all of his or her client's medical and dental records. An attorney who accepts a personal injury case should have his or her client execute several of these forms at the same time that the client executes the retention agreement [see § 86A.202]. Use of this form will facilitate the gathering of medical and/or dental information as the attorney develops the case. The attorney should complete the name and date on each form as needed for particular addressees.

[b] Confidentiality of Medical Records

Medical and dental information is confidential and will be released to an attorney only with his or her client's express written consent [see Civ. Code § 56.11]. An attorney who receives information under a medical authorization from his or her client may not further disclose that information unless authorized to do so [Civ. Code § 56.13].

[c] Statutory Requirements

An authorization for the release of medical information by a provider of health care, health care service plan, pharmaceutical company, or contractor will be valid if drafted in a typeface no smaller than 14-point type or handwritten, and the authorization is clearly separate from any other language that appears on the page [Civ. Code § 56.11(a), (b)]. The authorization must state all of the following [Civ. Code § 56.11(d)-(i)]:

- The specific uses and limitations on the types of medical information to be disclosed.

- The name or functions of the health care provider, health care service plan, pharmaceutical company, or contractor authorized to disclose the information.

- The name or functions of the person or entity entitled to receive the information.
- The specific uses and limitations on the use of the information by the authorized recipient.
- A specific date after which the health care provider, health care service plan, pharmaceutical company, or contractor is no longer authorized to release the information.
- That the signatory has the right to receive a copy of the authorization.

The authorization must be executed by a signature that serves no other purpose than to execute the authorization [Civ. Code § 56.11(b)]. It must be signed and dated by the patient to whom the information relates, by an appropriate legal representative of the patient, or by the beneficiary or personal representative of a deceased patient [see Civ. Code § 56.11(c)].

§ 86A.210 Estate Planning Informational Letter

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is an informational letter to be sent to prospective clients after the initial interview and conflicts check. The form is drafted from the perspective of a partnership or corporation, but can be easily adapted for use by a sole practitioner.

The letter explains the calculation of fees, as well as billing and payment requirements. The letter also explains that ancillary fees advanced by counsel will be billed separately. The letter further notes that either party may terminate the legal representation.

The letter also includes an optional paragraph for use when the attorney has accepted a retainer, clarifying that the retainer does not represent the total amount of fees for the representation.

The form contains a signature blank for the client to sign and date and return to counsel. Two copies of the letter should be sent to the client, one for the client's records.

[2] FORM

Estate Planning Informational Letter

[Letterhead of attorney, partnership, limited liability partnership, or law corporation]
_____[date]
_____[name of client]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ [name of client] :

We are delighted to assist you with your estate planning. A successful professional relationship should begin with a mutual understanding of expectations regarding the legal services to be performed by us and the basis of our charges. Accordingly, our procedure for new estate planning clients is to review these matters briefly in writing.

Professional Undertaking. First and foremost, we will do our utmost to meet your estate planning goals in the most prompt and efficient manner possible. If at any time you have questions or concerns about any aspects of the planning process or your estate planning documents, please contact me at once. For your information, we maintain errors and omissions insurance coverage applicable to the legal services we will be providing to you.

Fees. Our legal fees for estate planning services are primarily based on the time required for your matters. However, in certain cases, our fees may be increased or decreased to reflect special difficulties involved in your estate plan, the degree of expertise required, extraordinary time demands, savings or other benefits to you that are disproportionate to the time expended or other unusual circumstances. We will review carefully all statements before they are issued to ensure that the amount charged is fair and appropriate.

Our attorney time for estate planning is currently billed [specify, e.g., at rates ranging from $185 to $300 per hour, depending on the experience and specialty of the attorney involved]. We occasionally use legal assistants in the estate planning process to prepare initial drafts of simple documents. Paralegal time is currently billed at $_____ per hour and law clerk time is currently billed at $_____ per hour.

[Optional:]

We have found it necessary periodically to increase billing rates for attorneys and legal assistants. If such an increase occurs, you will be promptly informed by at least 30 days' written notice. All increased billing rates are prospective. If you refuse to pay the increased rates, counsel may withdraw as counsel in this matter.

[Continue with the following:]

Costs Advanced For Your Account. Some estate planning matters require substantial amounts of costly ancillary services, such as long distance telephone calls, photocopying, computerized legal research, travel, lodging, meals, filing fees, deposition transcripts, postage, and staff overtime. To allocate these expenses fairly and keep legal fees as low as possible for those matters that do not involve such expenditures, these items are separately itemized on our statements as "costs advanced."

[Optional: When we anticipate unusually large expenses or in other cases when we deem it appropriate, we will forward to you bills from third parties and request that you promptly pay these costs directly.]

[Optional: It may become necessary for us, with your consent, to retain expert witnesses or other consultants to aid us in representing you. You will be responsible for the costs of any experts and consultants so retained.]

Billings. Our billing statements ordinarily are prepared monthly. Our responsibility is to ensure that you receive a complete, accurate, and fair statement. We strongly encourage you to raise promptly any questions or comments you may have regarding any statement with us.

In return, we expect payment of our statements within [specify, e.g., 30 days after receipt]. By this letter, you authorize us to add a late payment charge at the rate of [specify, e.g., one and one half percent per month] to each statement that is not paid within [e.g., 30 days after receipt]. Payments received are first credited to any disbursements advanced by us, and the balance to fees. Any advance payment or retainer made to the firm will be credited to your account against fees and disbursements.

Failure to pay your bill promptly and regularly on receipt may result in suspension or termination of our legal services for you, in the absence of some other agreement regarding timely payment. [Optional: If we are involved in litigation on your behalf, you must understand that we may withdraw as counsel of record if our fees are overdue. Moreover, we will have a lien for payment of our unpaid fees and costs on any judgment, settlement, or other recovery you receive as a result of this litigation.] If legal action is instituted for collection of legal fees, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover its legal fees and costs incurred in connection with that action.

Termination. You have the right to terminate our professional relationship at any time. We have the same right, subject to an obligation to give you reasonable time to arrange alternative representation if you choose.

[Optional, for use when retainer has been accepted:]

Retainer. Before commencing this representation, we requested and you agreed to pay us a retainer of $_____. This sum is an advance against fees for our services and disbursements; it is not an estimate of our total fees. It is often difficult to forecast accurately the amount of legal attention a particular estate planning matter will require. At any time we may request you to replenish a retainer that has been consumed, or to increase the amount of your retainer. We will hold any retainers or advance payments received in a trust account until the various fees and costs are actually earned or incurred. The amount of any unused retainer will be returned to you without interest when your estate planning is completed.

[Continue with the following:]

Please review this letter and, if it meets with your approval, sign and date the enclosed copy of this letter and return it to us in the envelope provided. We look forward to a long and pleasant professional relationship with you. If you ever have any questions regarding your estate planning matters, or anything addressed in this letter, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

PART IV. FORMS
B. Estate Planning and Decedent's Estates

28-86A California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide § 86A.211

§ 86A.211 Estate Planning Letter Explaining Dual Representation of Spouses

[1] Comment--Use of Form

This form is a letter to be sent to prospective married clients who are jointly seeking estate planning services. The letter can be adapted for use in other contexts, including situations involving estate planning for unmarried couples.

The letter explains that although spouses customarily employ the same counsel for estate planning services, the Rules of Professional Conduct require that counsel explain the ramifications of dual representation and secure the clients' consent to this representation [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, discussed in § 86A.12[3][a], [b]]. The letter states that both spouses are clients and that spouses can have divergent and conflicting interests and objectives regarding their estate planning. The letter explains that if each spouse retained separate counsel, each would have an advocate for their own position, each would receive totally independent advice, and information given to separate counsel would be confidential and barred from disclosure without consent.

The letter then explains that if single counsel is retained jointly, counsel's obligation is to assist in developing a coordinated overall plan and to encourage the resolution of differing interests in an equitable manner and in the best interests of the marriage. Counsel will not be able to serve as an advocate for one spouse against the other.

The letter further advises the clients that if a conflict arises between the spouses, such that it is impossible for counsel to properly represent both spouses, counsel would be forced to withdraw as joint attorney. Counsel would then advise one or both of the spouses to obtain independent counsel.

Finally, the form contains an acknowledgement for each spouse to sign.

Because of the frequency with which estate planners represent couples in preparation of their estate plans, numerous variations of this type of disclosure document exist. For an illustration of another type of disclosure form for use in this situation, see Ch. 60, Estate Planning, § 60.201. For a more general type of conflict of interest disclosure that is adaptable to a wide variety of dual representation situations, see § 86A.247.

For discussion of the general rules governing representation of clients with potentially adverse interests, see § 86A.12. For detailed discussion of conflict of interest issues that can arise in the estate planning context, see California Wills & Trusts, Ch. 4, Ethical Considerations and Professional Responsibility, § 4.04 (Matthew Bender).

[2] FORM

Estate Planning Letter Explaining Dual Representation of Spouses

[Letterhead of attorney, partnership, limited liability partnership, or law corporation]
_____[date]
_____[name of clients]
_____[street address]
_____[city, state, zip]

Dear _____ and _____ [name of clients] :

You have asked us to perform legal services for you relating to your estate planning needs. It is customary for a husband and wife to employ the same law firm to assist them in planning their estates. However, it is important for both of you to understand that since we would be representing both of you, each of you would be our client. Under these circumstances, it is our ethical obligation under the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California to fully advise you of the considerations involved in such a "dual representation" and to obtain your consent to this representation.

Spouses can have differing, and sometimes conflicting, interests and objectives regarding their estate planning. For example, they may have different views on how property should pass after the death of one or both of them. In addition, we may recommend in some cases that property holdings be restructured to take advantage of available tax benefits, which may involve gifts from one spouse to the other, or a recharacterization of your separate or community property. A marital property agreement may even be desirable. These types of actions will have an effect on control over and rights in present and future property by each of you, possibly including how your property would be divided in the event of a divorce. These are just a few examples. Each couple's situation is unique.

If each of you retained separate counsel, you would each have an advocate for your position and receive totally independent advice. Information given to your separate lawyer would be confidential and could not be disclosed to your spouse without your consent.
